Police Radio Busy; Proves to be of Great Aid

Police Radio Gives 415 "Orders" in the Month of December

Activity of the various police departments throughout the Grosse Pointe district and the efficiency and utility of the Grosse Pointe Police radio station, WRDR, is readily seen in the monthly report of Wm. A. Neff, radio station superintendent, which shows 415 runs were made by police scout cars in the month of December on orders broadcast from the radio station.

Superintendent Neff's report, which was made to the Grosse Pointe Police Radio commission, of which James C. Drysdale, chief of Police of Grosse Pointe Park is chairman, points out in brief form the scope of police work in the community and the variety of matters that come to the attention of the police departments.

The report shows the number of runs made by police scout cars and the purpose of the runs. They are tabulated as follows for the month of December:

- Runs Reason
- 1 Holdup
 - 22 Prowlers
 - 4 Fires
 - 26 Dogs
 - 34 Accidents
 - 1 Live wires fallen

CONSIDER RETAINING INSURANCE COUNSELOR FOR SCHOOL DISTRICT

Serious consideration is being given by the Grosse Pointe School Board to the matter of selecting an insurance counselor for the School District. The matter was raised at the Board's regular meeting last Monday evening and several trustees commented favorably on such a step. It was pointed out that the duties of the insurance counselor would be to advise the board on insurance matters.

The reason prompting the Board to consider such an appointment was given to be the tremendous savings that would result from the advice from an insurance expert in the matter of adequate coverage on school properties.

It was estimated that the approximate fees of the insurance counselor would be $365 annually, or an average

Building operations with a total value of $102,135 were authorized in the Grosse Pointe villages in December, according to reports of village clerks. Six permits for construction of homes valued at $58,200 were approved by Theodore Beaupre, building inspector of Grosse Pointe Farms, during the same period.

Five permits for construction and alteration of residence property worth $20,735 were issued by Norbert P. Neff, clerk of Grosse Pointe village.

Officiating at the wedding ceremony was Rev. Sykes, former pastor of the Grosse Pointe Memorial church, who returned to his former pastorate for the occasion. Immediate members of the families of the bridal couple were in attendance only, at the services.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Howard, in their home on St. Clair avenue. Two hundred guests were in attendance.

Public Hearing

The Grosse Pointe Village council passed a resolution, December 19, Norbert Neff, clerk, informed the School Board last Monday evening, providing for the vacating of the streets and alleys in the elementary school site at Cadieux road and Kercheval avenue.

The resolution was passed, Neff pointed out, following a petition from the School Board to the Village Council to take such action in order to permit the construction of the proposed $300,000 elementary school there.

A public hearing will be held on the Village Council's resolution, January 23, at the Village office. The resolution does not become effective until the public hearing, when objections to the action of vacating the streets and alleys are to be heard.

School Authorities Differ Over Wayburn Avenue Boys, Girls

The Grosse Pointe School Board contemplating launching a legal battle with the Board of Education of the city of Detroit, it was indicated at the Board's regular meeting held last Monday evening.

It has come about in this way. Numerous children of school age reside on the west side of Wayburn avenue and for the most part are attending Grosse Pointe schools because of their own choice or the choice of their parents.

It happens that the homes in which these children reside are partly located in the city of Detroit and partly located in Grosse Pointe Park. By reason of their location in the Park, it is claimed they are within the Grosse Pointe School district boundaries. As a result of this, they have a right to enter the Grosse Pointe schools without being charged a tuition, the same as any other school children residing in the School district, it is contended.

But the trouble arises as follows: Because of the greater part of their respective homes being located in the city of Detroit and only a small part, such as the front porch, being situated in Grosse Pointe, the Detroit Board of Education includes them in their enumeration of the total

"Dogs Life" is led by terriers in as "Bow Wows" are Groc

The Sealyham terriers at the Rensal kennels, Mack and Fisher roads, lead dogs' lives. If it isn't one thing, it's another. Right now they are being groomed for the New York show, to be held February 10 to 12.

They are washed, combed, plucked, powdered and manicured. If they are overweight they are put on a diet; if underweight, they are kept confined in quarters and fed the best of food to produce weight. If the coat has been rubbed off in spots, a little oil is rubbed on daily to stimulate the growth of hair.

Charles Powlesland, who manages the kennel for the owner, Mrs. Russell A. Alger, 32 Lake Shore road, Grosse Pointe Farms, is an expert on raising and showing terriers. Since the Rensal kennels were established in 1927 by the late Russell A. Alger and Mrs. Alger, it has become recognized as one of the most outstanding Sealyham terrier kennels in the world.

Before the establishment of the kennel, there were few Sealyhams in the middle west. Even today there are comparatively few in this part of the country. Many do not know the breed. At first glance, they resemble a Scotch terrier, but they are white, either entirely or with marks. They are the embodiment of power and determination, of extraordinary substance for their size, yet free from clumsiness. The legs are short and heavily boned.

In England, where the breed was originated by Captain Edwards on the estate of Sealyham in South Wales, they are used for hunting badgers and foxes in their holes. It is said that Captain Edwards used to test the courage of his dogs by running a drag up to a pit containing the dog went straight

This time Lloyd has done it in talking pictures.

Llama Faithful Friend to Indians of Bolivia

The llama is an animal which stands from 3 1/2 to 4 feet in height, with a long neck, which makes her seem much taller. She is covered with a very fine wool—black, white, gray or brown in color. She is a graceful animal, with the step of a woman and having the timidity of the gazelle and the arrogance of the camel, says a traveler.

The llama is the faithful companion of the Aymara, or Bolivian Indian. Everything she has is for him; he eats the meat of the llama; he uses the wool to make ponchos (blankets) or cloaks, hats and stockings; he makes horns and flutes from her bones and ropes and sandals from her hide. The llama understands, recognizes and likes her master, running instantly at the sound of his voice and obeying his commands like a child, for she has no reins nor halter. For any one else, a stranger or enemy of the Indian, she does not conceal her dislike and will have nothing to do with him, often spitting in his face. She is an economical animal, for her master never has to worry about her food. She takes it when she wants it from the wayside, eating straw and vegetation. Like the camel, she, too, can go many days without water. The llama is used more for transportation than anything else. She carries from 50 to 60 pounds. Some carry 80, or even 100 pounds, but she knows her capacity and refuses an extra ounce. She is dear to the hearts of all Bolivians.

Sometimes Folding Bed Surprised Its Occupant

One of the earliest manifestations of a congested population in New York was the folding bed, writes Henry Collins Brown in Valentine's Manual. This ingenious piece of furniture was designed to camouflage its real purpose by assuming during the daytime various alien shapes, such as that of a wardrobe, desk or chiffonier. But the only one who dwelt in a state of illusion was its owner. Everybody else knew it was a folding bed, but the etiquette of the times forbade discussion of the subject.

It was perfectly obvious that the bookcase in the library of an overcrowded apartment that had the capacity of Doctor Elliot's five-foot book shelf was a folding bed. Likewise that the large cheval glass in front of an apparent cupboard concealed another of the genus, but these innocent fictions were taken as a matter of course.

There was one type of folding bed, however, constructed with weights, that had a disconcerting habit when its equilibrium was disturbed of folding up like a jackknife, to the intense amazement of the occupant. For a stout gentleman to find himself suddenly awakened and standing on his head in bed was only a small inconvenience compared with the imminent danger of asphyxiation that the situation afforded.

Many Theories About National Flag Design

There are various theories regarding the origin of the design of our national flag, and most historians do not consider the Betsy Ross legend as trustworthy. It is true that Washington's family coat-of-arms contained both stars and stripes, but these had been used in other flags before 1776. The Grand Union flag, the first to float over the navy, consisted of 13 stripes, alternately red and white, with a union bearing the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew, signifying the mother country. Some historians believe that the stripes were taken from the flag and the stars from the colonial banner of Rhode Island. Others maintain that the idea of the flag came from the Netherlands, as Franklin and Adams, who were sent to that country to borrow money for aid, told the Dutch that America had borrowed much from them, including the ideas represented in the flag. Another claim is that the stars were taken from the 13-starred constellation Lyra and signified "harmony."

education costs or permit Grosse Pointe to collect the Primary money allowed for the children.

But Detroit won't do either. Recently a statement was forwarded to the Detroit Board of Education from the Grosse Pointe School Board, for the tuition fees of these children. The statement was in the amount of $7,400.

In a reply, the Detroit school authorities acknowledged receipt of the statement but gracefully pointed out the freedom of liability for the amount, calling attention to the fact that they are ready, willing and able to educate the children in question. They further disclaimed ever authorizing the Grosse Pointe school authorities to proceed with the education of the children and to charge them for it.

As Grosse Pointe does not receive the "Primary" money from the state, and where the contention of the children's parents seems to be well taken that, they, partially residing in Grosse Pointe, and paying taxes there, have a right to have their children educated in Grosse Pointe educational institutions without charge, the School Board here can do little else but air the matters in the court. And this they proceed to do so, unless, as it is planned, they succeed in having the State redistribute the "Primary" fund.

The problem facing the Grosse Pointe School Board involves many legal entanglements and has been placed in the hands of the School Board's attorney for action. One of these legal entanglements is whether the Grosse Pointe School Board can compel these children to attend Detroit schools by refusing them admittance to Grosse Pointe schools unless they pay a tuition fee.
