While this is the regular monthly lunch, it should prove unusual interest to members and their friends because at this time Mrs. Harold Wardwell and Mrs. Frederick C. Kidner, past president and secretary, respectively, of the Needlework Guild in Detroit, will speak upon the aims and accomplishments of this organization. The Rev. R. O. Randall of the Mariners Church, will also give an informal talk upon Page House and some experiences as a hospital chaplain. The articles collected by the Saint Columba Branch of the Needlework Guild will be exhibited. Reservations for the luncheon should be made through the Saint Columba church office.

Mind's Relaxation Well

Understood by Apostle 1.242 'That the partridge, one of the most fimid and least confiding of birds, may be tamed is shown by a story told of the Apostle St. John the Divine, who in his old age was the bishop of Ephesus in succession to Timothy. Although generally active in the prosecution of his Divine Master's business he was amusing himself by playing with a tamed and petted partridge, when a huntsman passed by. How could so holy and privileged a man so waste the precious time? he queried. "What is that in your hand?" inquired the apostle. "By profession I am a hunter, and that is the bow I use with my arrows in the chase," he made reply. "But if that is a bow, it is all unstrung, and unfit for use," said St. John. "Yes it is unstrung," returned the sportsman, "for if it was always strung it would lose power and become useless. To be in good order, it must ever be unstrung, when not actually being used." "Just so," quietly remarked the wise old man, "and in like manner must the mind of man be released and unstrung sometimes if it is to be always fit for my Master's use." And as the huntsman thoughtfully pursued his way, St. John turned again to amuse himself, and rest his mind, by playing with his partridge.-Montreal Family Herald.

Hotels Long Centers of

Public Life in America After the Revolution that made us a nation, the life of American cities was for more than a century and a quarter publicly centered and vividly reflected in the essentially democratic institution called the hotel. The club, an Eighteenth-century aristocratic outgrowth of exclusive use by superior persons of the private parlor of the tavern, smacking, therefore, of privilege, had to wait till the 1830s or so for a serious revival. The hotelwhich succeeded the tavern-became every citizen's club.

In a little city there was one hotel, says a writer in the New York Times. Every visitor must come to it and every really live inhabitant must drop around to look the stranger over. In a bigger city there might be several hotels. But usually one hotel was the hub of community activity in any city. From decade to decade it was apt to be a different hotel as progress, fashion and favor determined. Nevertheless, at any given period, when you said Boston or Baltimore or New Or leans, or, later, Chicago, St. Louis or San Francisco, the name of a particular hotel popped into the mind of every traveler or informed person.

Eskimo History

The Eskimos seldom are thought of today as a people who once dwelt in the interior, far from the sea. Yet that was their earlier history. They were, as archeological investigation seems to have established, part of the offshoot of the earlier migration from Asia; and they established themselves in the forests north of Lake Superior where they dwelt, apparently for a considerable period.

For some reason-whether because of pressure from more vigorous tribes to southward or because of an incurable nomadic instinct-the Eskimos began at last to push northward till they reached the verge of the Arctic. They spread over the coasts and the adjacent islands. Some of them fil-

Probably the oldest mines still producing ores are the tin and lead lodes of Cornwall, England, which date from the days when there was no recorded history. The ancient duchy, with its "stannaries," or tin mines, has been famous in mining history for hundreds of years. Near the tin mines are bodies of lead ore which have been worked nearly as long as those of tin. The latter were first opened in or before the Age of Bronze, have never been shut down complete ly and are, therefore, the world's oldest mines in continuous operation. A few years ago there was a revival of business at the Cornish mines, accompanied by the sinking of new shafts and the discovery of new lodes .-- New York Times.

No Absolute Stillness While Life Is in Body

Can you keep sull? You will say, "Of course." But try to keep absolutely still for a moment, and you will discover how difficult it is. While there is breath in the body, we can never be completely still. Some part of us is always on the move. At least the heart is beating, there is movement in the pulse, the evelids twitch.

When you come to think of it, this is rather remarkable. But some of us are more still than others. Those who have learned the art of relaxing are better able to keep still than those who cannot in other words, those who are always fidgeting. Usually it is the more nervous type of individual who cannot be still. And if we do not practice it, we shall never learn the art.

It is a great art-this keeping still. Stillness of body comes from stillness of mind. When happiness is yours, there will be a lovely stillness in your life.-Exchange.

Egyptian Writing

The Egyptian system of writing, after being forgotten for over fifteen hundred years, was rediscovered by scholars in the Nineteenth century. The chief key was the Rosetta stone, found by the French when Napoleon invaded Egypt. This contained an inscription written in the old Egyptian characters and also in Greek. Patient study showed which Egyptian signs corre-sponded with the known Greek letters in certain proper names. From this the sound of some of the Egyptian words was revealed. Then it was found that Coptic, a language still understood by the Christian Egyptians, was a direct descendant of the ancient Egyptian tongue, and thus the meanings of many words could be guessed. Since then progress thas been steady.

Progress and Family Life

A great many things have affected family life during the last 100 years. Among these are the invention of the automobile and the improvement of our roads, the moving picture, the telephone, the radio, the fact that many wives earn an independent income, the establishment of good nursery schools, the development of hotels, restaurants and apartment houses.

English Church Laws

There is an ecclesiastical court in England to which are submitted all matters pertaining to church law, also matters in which the church might be either a plaintiff or defendant. This court also regulates the issuance of marriage licenses and other matters of church discipline. Actually the ecclesiastical law of England is dependent upon the authority of the state, and ecclesiastical courts for the most part are officered by laymen, whose subordination to archbishops and bishops is purely formal. The final court of appeal on ecclesiastical matters is the

Vermillion Production Vermillion is the product of an ore known as cinabar, which is a compound of sulphur and mercury. In the manufacture of the pigment, the ore is thrown into earthen pots which are kept red hot in the lower part. The substance volatizes and coats the sides of the jars with cinabar. The jars are then broken and the material, which is a bright red, is scraped off the sides and ground fine, the powder being the common commercial product. There are mines producing vermil-

In 1833 in New York some evening schools were opened which were free in one sense, but not exactly public. For this reason the credit is given to Louisville.

Sexual Labor Division

That May Have Defects "Men may be satisfied with their own superiority, but machines are not They prefer girls." Thus spoke Sir Herbert Austin to a London (England) audience in the course of an address wherein it was lightly suggested that the ultimate division of labor might present the spectacle of more and more men making machines while more and more women were engaged to work them. The Manchester Guardian remarks that in some ways this suggests an arrangement as convenient as the one mentioned in the nursery rhyme-Jack Sprattican make the machines while Mrs. Jack Sprat works and watches them, and between them the
