

W. O. N. P. R., Crusaders Stage Rally

Local Republicans Organize: Plan Rally for Hoover, Brucker

A new political club known as the Grosse Pointe Republican Club has been formed for Grosse Pointe Township, and expects to conduct a huge political rally, before election day in behalf of President Hoover, and the Republican State and National ticket.

It is hoped and expected at the rally which will be announced later that many candidates on the Republican ticket will speak, including Governor Brucker, Senator Fred W. Harding, Alexander J. Polk and others.

The formation of a Republican Club has been considered for some time for Grosse Pointe Township for the promotion of Republican principles of good government, and supporting those candidates for office locally which measure up to those standards of good government, now and in the future.

The Grosse Pointe Republican Club believes that it is of the best interest of all of the people to keep President Hoover on the job, and to assure him whole-hearted support, and co-operation in his well advanced program of recovery, by the election of a full Republican ticket, both National and State.

Clarence E. Carlon, a prominent attorney, and resident of Grosse Pointe, has been named temporary chairman of the Club whose membership consists of many prominent Grosse Pointe residents including Mr. R. D. Patterson, lawyer; Senator Fred W. Harding, Alexander J. Polk and many others.

The Grosse Pointe Republican Club welcomes and invites the support of all the residents of Grosse Pointe Township in its aim and efforts.

Hoover's Detroit Speech Failed of Purpose: Clothed in Hypocrisy

Former assistant City Editor of the WASHINGTON NEWS, WASHINGTON, D. C.

By JAMES G. CROWLEY

(Special to the Grosse Pointe Review)

A grim faced President Hoover, stripped, at last, of his martyr's hair shirt, has made his bid for the 19 electoral votes allotted to the State of Michigan. In the past week he came and went, heartened, no doubt, by the seeming enthusiasm of his dwindling legions, and serene, perhaps, in the belief that a death blow has been dealt, at last, to the rising Democracy in this erstwhile Republican stronghold.

His speech at Olympia, marking a new high in his oratorical endeavors to date, has the semblance of merit and frank sincerity which we have a right to expect from the President of the United States. And yet, we wonder. Pondering his words, in the silence after the tumult, we are uncertain. Now that the cheers of his minions, roused for mleturgy by the Gargantuan Governor Brucker, have subsided; now that the contagious and artificial hysteria of the radio announcer has lost its effect; now that the thrilling strains of martial music no longer ring in our ears and send our hot blood racing; now that all again is peace—we wonder.

Application for these ballots should be made through the coming week, if possible well in advance of Saturday the fifth. Dancing Eliminates the Awkward Age and Promotes Health Little tots as young as three years are taking up ballet dancing at Craves Studios in Grosse Pointe Village. At this age a desire to dance enters into their little lives, and instruction in dancing as depicted by Viola Grae, ballet instructor for Mr. Craves, satisfies their incentive to interpret music and at the same time acquire grace and poise.

Acrobatic and tap dancing instruction under Mr. Craves enables children who are not strong physically to build up their bodies and ward off any illness that may attack them.

Parents will find money spent in dancing lessons for their children well invested as many physical and mental benefits are derived from the right kind of dancing instruction.

Taxation Amendments To Be Voted On

At the election on November 8th, two amendments to the State Constitution are to be submitted to the voters; one is to limit the total tax assessed in any year to one and one-half per cent of the valuation of property except taxes levied for the payment of interest and other obligations previously assessed. The other proposed amendment is the so-called Homestead Exemption Amendment and contemplates exempting from all taxation, personal and household furnishings up to $1,000.00 in value, and the home occupied by any householder to the extent of $3,000.00 except for public debt or obligations previously incurred.

Each of these proposed amendments may, without serious thought, make a great popular appeal. However, if an analysis of the very probable results of their adoption is made it will be apparent that great injustice and harm is very possible and without doubt will result.

In the next issue of the Grosse Pointe Review a complete report and analysis of these amendments with recommendations will be made and our readers are urged to study the same carefully.

Community Fund

The existence of your local community center depends on your support of the Community Fund.

In 1932, the Neighborhood Club has received $16,750.00 for support. The total disbursements are $20,960.00. The difference of $4,210.00 is what was taken in through memberships and rentals.

President Hoover Bids for Michigan's Votes in Olympia Address

Every county in Michigan but one was represented at the Olympia last Saturday night when President Hoover outlined in detail what his administration has done to aid the farmer and laboring man; then turned the full force of his verbal attack upon the Democratic candidate, whose conclusions, President Hoover declared were "amazingly far from the truth."

Never in Michigan's history have the citizens of the state made such efforts to hear an address by the nation's chief executive. Motor cavalcades from near-by counties started to arrive in Detroit shortly after noon. At 3:00 o'clock a crowd of 500 persons was waiting outside the huge arena.

And those who were successful in securing seats after hours of waiting heard President Hoover in a new role. Instead of a prosaic reading of a prepared address, he lashed vigorously at his opponents who have hindered the nation's efforts toward reconstruction and departed frequently from his written text to give his hearers a new insight into the terrific task of again restoring jobs to the unemployed, to again starting the wheels of industry and to restore adequate farm prices.

And during the speech of slightly more than an hour, President Hoover was interrupted 86 times by applause.

Among the notables on the platform as the President began his address were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford, Mr. and

Prohibition Repeal Forces Plan Gigantic Rally on Saturday

Prohibition Repeal headquarters, 35 East Grand River avenue is today seething with mysterious plans for a novel and gigantic anti-prohibition rally. Leaders of the wet movement refuse to reveal the exact character of the demonstration.

Mrs. Fred M. Alger simply said, "Wait." Lewis L. Bredin, Commander of the Crusaders, stated it would be the biggest thing yet staged by the wet organizations. Mrs. James S. Holden and Mrs. C. A. Dean, Jr., executive campaigners for the W. O. N. P. R., were equally reticent. Col. Fred M. Alger says the big, wet show will bring to Detroit proof that the leaders of thought in both major political parties fully support prohibition reform.

Sidney T. Miller, Sr., chairman of the Michigan Repeal Fund, revealed that the major demonstration of the wets will occur Saturday, October 29, one week after President Hoover's Declaration. "I can be said," said Mr. Miller, "is that the wet rally will be strictly non-political and non-partisan. It, I assure you, will be the most unusual kind of meeting ever held at the height of a presidential campaign. Plans will be completed and full announcements ready by the first of the coming week."

"One thing will be clearly demonstrated by our plans: The wet movement in Michigan is not confined to any group class or party. Throughout the state, we are united for the repeal of Michigan's obsolete dry law and the substitution of a constitutional amendment which will allow Michigan to exercise her independent and unfettered suffrage."

The Naval Reserve Armory on East Jefferson avenue has been reserved by the wet organizations for their repeal demonstration.

Grosse Pointe Post

By EARLE O. CRAMER

Now that election, installation of officers and all the heavy work has been so nicely taken care of we can turn our attention to the replenishing of our Post treasury.

Armistice Day—the day of all days to the Veteran is almost here again, so get set, Comrades, for a big stampee.

Commander Butts reports that St. Matthews Parish Hall, Buckingham and Harper, has very generously been donated to our Post for a Military Ball Armistice night, November 11th. We sure all will step out somewhere on that night, so why not make our money do double duty, buy ourselves an evening of incomparable enjoyment and at the same time put dollars in our Post treasury. Plan now to attend this party. You could not find a more enjoyable place to go. Give yourself, friend wife and your Post a break. Watch for the advertising. The entertainment committee promises special entertainment that will long be remembered. Let's start our second year with that old get-together, fraternal spirit that is so necessary to the success of any Post. Don't forget. It all depends on you.

The stirring notes of the Bugle and the roll of the Drum can again be heard in our streets, but this time it means peace and good will for everyone. Our drum and bugle corps has passed the "experimental" stage and is a real unit. We are sorry to report that three of the boys have found it impossible to continue. This leaves one drum and two bugles vacant. Get application blanks from the Quartermaster and sign up. Its great fun. Don't forget. The Corps will be out and going places on Armistice Day. Get in line.

Mrs. Edsel Ford, Senator Couzens, Senator and Mrs. Vandenberg, Secretary of Commerce Roy D. Chapin and Mrs. Chapin, Postmaster General Walter F. Brown, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Perry K. Heath of Grand Rapids; former Governor Fred D. Green, who was in charge of arrangements, and Mrs. Green, National Committeewoman Mrs. Jacob Steketee, National Committeeman James E. Davison and State Treasurer Howard C. Lawrence, chairman of the state central committee, who presided at the meeting and who introduced Gov. Brucker. The invocation was given by the Rev. Joseph A. Vance.

At the start of his address, the President said that "what our people need is the restoration of their normal jobs, recovery of agricultural prices and business; and they need help in the meantime to tide them over until these things are accomplished, that they may not go hungry nor lose their farms or homes."

He then launched into an analysis of his opponent's claims that governmental costs could be reduced. President Hoover showed by citing statistics that the economy being preached by his opponent has already been put into practice.

"His promised saving of a billion dollars has already been accomplished, even though we are still struggling with expenditures forced upon us by the Democratic house," the President said, adding that the Democratic solons had prevented further savings.

Later in his address President Hoover quoted from a letter signed by Roosevelt in which he promised "to provide employment for all surplus or at all times."

"There can be only one conclusion from this statement," the President said. "It is a hope held out to the 10,000,000 men and women now unemployed and suffering that they will be given jobs by the government. It is a promise no government could fulfill. It is utterly wrong to delude suffering men and women with such assurances."

And when the President asked if "such frivolous promises and dreams should be held out to suffering unemployed people?" thousands shouted an answering chant of "no, no, no, no."

President Hoover then pointed out that prosperity must be restored by orderly processes and that jobs and higher farm prices cannot be returned by the magic of fine sounding phrases, designed solely for the purpose of vote-catching. He then reviewed the 18 steps which his administration has taken toward reconstruction and declared that these steps have produced results by an actual "increase in employment and upward trend of prices of agricultural products."

In contrast to this he pointed to nine specific proposals of the Democratic house of representatives at the last congress which showed the complete lack of any desire for economy on the part of the leaders of that party and the lack of any constructive plan for recovery of our economic life.

"Improvement would have begun four months earlier but for the fear of the destructive Democratic program," President Hoover asserted convincingly.

The fact that aid to distressed farmers is uppermost in his mind was disclosed by the President's statement that "we have other measures to propose at our next congress, especially for the further relief of farm mortgages. Our program has conformed with American practice, American experience and American common sense. It prevented national chaos. It is today producing national recovery."

Chapter I

THE air in the room was tense. From the speaker of the radio poured a strong, dominating voice, arguing, urging. In the pauses there was silence—the interpretative comment of the announcer. Then the hollow roar of a crowd, angry, menacing, rolled into the silent room.

Before the beautifully carved machine sat the Baroness Valerie von Sturm and Karl Kranz. They were members of the aristocracy of Sylvania, a small principality located in a central position among the great European powers and had come to Geneva with the deputation from their land to attend the International Peace Conference.

Through the long days of conference upon ways and means to achieve worldwide disarmament there had been much wrangling, but steady progress had been made toward an understanding. So clear were the issues that a vote could be taken. Now on the last day of the conference that ballot was being cast. The strong, virile voice that flowed from the radio was that of Captain Paul Onslow, head of the Sylvanian delegation, explaining his vote against peace.

"Silence in the room for a moment. The lovely young Baroness, sat utterly still, her long white fingers clasped in her lap. Her large, lustrous eyes were troubled as she raised them to Kranz who leaned, smoking, against the radio. Then, the excited voice of the announcer:

"Sylvania's vote means the treaty is defeated—for a unanimous vote is needed." Smothering his words came the ominous growl of the multitude. "Just listen to that crowd outside," commented the announcer. "Captain Onslow will need all his courage to face it."

With a swift movement, Valerie snapped off the radio. She rose. Karl was surprised.

"Let's keep it on, Valerie."

"No," agitatedly, "I'm afraid for him."

"When a man fights the world," Karl smiled, "he doesn't look for a Sunday school picnic."

"I know, but he's in real danger now." Her hand sought the bell rope hanging near the window.

"Paul's always been in danger," soothed Karl. "He thrives on it. Why are you so worried about him Valerie?"

"I'm Sylvania too," her voice was unsteady. "And you know Captain Onslow is our guest here."

"I haven't been able to know anything else for the last two weeks."

"What do you mean?"

"I've hardly seen you since he arrived and you don't sit at that radio all day because you're patriotic."

Sturges, the butler, had entered softly in response to Valerie's ring. She turned to him.

"Tell my chauffeur I'm going with him to the Palace."

When Sturges had departed Karl voiced his alarm.

"You're not calling for Paul today, are you?"

"Of course."

"But you shouldn't. It's dangerous. Public feeling is against him. It's not safe for you to be with him."

"It's safer for him."

"I see." He looked for a long moment at her strained face. "Valerie, do care for me, don't you?"

"Certainly."

"But not as you once did. Oh, I'm not blind. You've been different ever since Paul came into this house. The glamour of his personality has swept you off your feet."

"I thought you were his friend."

"I am—but also in love with you. You can't disappoint me now. You have to marry me."

"I don't know my own mind," she temporized. "You'd want me to be sure, wouldn't you?"

"Of course."

"Then be a little patient." He smiled into her eyes. "That's better. And now I must run along."

On the lower floor near the stairway was the laboratory of her father, Baron von Sturm though an aristocrat was not a militaristic junker. He was a scientist of international repute. When Valerie told him of her intention he begged her to reconsider, yet his fondness was such that he could not restrain her when she insisted.

As the great car purred through the city, the Baroness was surprised to find the streets deserted. However as she neared the Peace Palace, she noticed groups assembling, gathering for some demonstration. Finally rounding a corner she saw a mob approaching. The leader carried a rude banner. It bore a skull and crossbones under which was printed "Onslow."

Directing the driver to keep to the curb, Valerie alighted when the car drew abreast of the standard bearer. White with fury she tore the banner from its staff and flung it into the face of the man who had carried it.

The mob stood silently waiting to see what its leader would do. For a thought, murder leaped in his eyes. Then he controlled himself. With mock politeness he held open the car door for Valerie and sneered:

"The pretty lady doesn't like my paper doll—but wait! Wait till we hang up Onslow's real carcass!"

Frightened Valerie sank back into the cushion and the car proceeded toward the Palace. There a huge crowd was waiting for the appearance of the delegates. Onslow's veto had halted the conference. Reports spread through the mob that an emergency session would be held at eleven that night to reach a final verdict.

One by one the national representatives emerged. At last Onslow appeared, a tall, dark, handsome man, a thin black line of mustache above his firm lips. The crowd surged toward him. Reporters questioned him. He passed them with a curt word, oblivious to the menacing temper of the mob which made his secretary Kellner tremble and pale.

An old woman sprang at Onslow, her fingers reaching for his eyes.

"War, you want war," she screamed. "You killed my son."

Guards dragged her away. Outwardly calm, Onslow passed through the crowd which watched him undecided but dangerous.

A block from the palace, a pretty girl came up. Although inattentive, Onslow sized her up as a woman of the town. As she passed she smiled provocatively. He drew away. When a policeman who saw the incident took her in charge, Onslow made no move in her behalf. Lost in thought he walked on. Suddenly he felt a tug at his coat. He looked down. A little girl was standing there beside him in Swiss country dress. She had a basket of flowers from which she offered him a bouquet of carnations.

"Won't you please sir? They're just five centimes."

"I have nothing that small," he smiled.

"I'll trust you—until tomorrow."

"Splendid," he replied, "that's a bargain."

He took the flowers from her confiding fingers, as a car slid up to the curb beside him. Valerie smiled from the shadowy interior as he entered.

"I'm sorry I kept you waiting," he apologized.

"I didn't mind," replied Valerie. She took his flowers. "How lovely." Then, smiling, "Is thoughtfulness one of your virtues?"

He rose to her humor. "Occasionally. This time it was thrust upon me."

Then it came, the sharp, startling report of a pistol shot. Valerie screamed. Dragging her with him Onslow crouched on the floor as a bullet shattered the limousine's rear glass.

Floor Treatment

Hard composition floors may be waxed and polished. Those, however, that have a base of some soft composition, such as asphalt, mineral rubber or mineral bitumen are soluble in gasoline, in oils and in carbon tetrachloride. They cannot, therefore, be waxed or treated with any preparation containing those solvents.

Woodchuck Good Eating

In pioneer days, the groundhog or woodchuck was considered the makings of a toothsome dish, says the American Game association. Nowadays they are not generally eaten, but since woodchucks are strictly vegetable feeders, there is no reason why farmers who kill woodchucks should not follow the example of pioneers and eat the 'chucks.

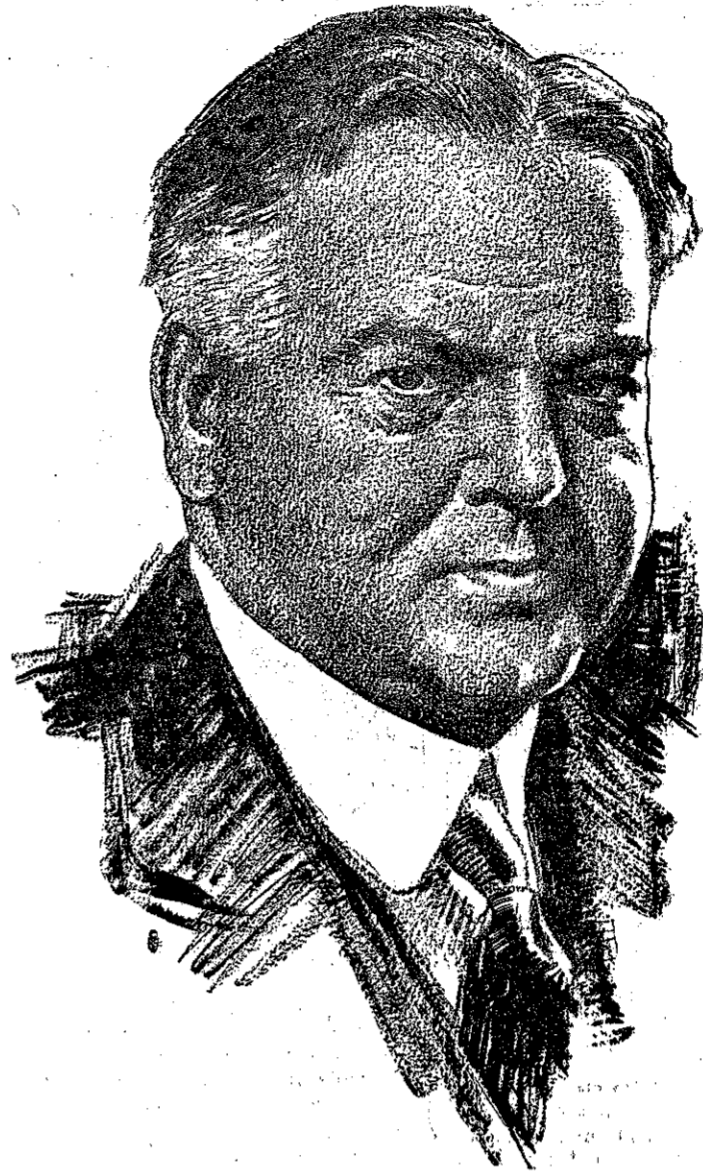

Purposes of Doctors

The primary duty of a doctor is to prolong life. His second purpose is to assuage pain; another is to prevent a warped personality from growing out of mental suffering. These three duties of the doctor are sufficient evidence to justify his existence, Dr. Bernard Fantus maintains in Hygeia Magazine.

Congressional Bills

Bills and resolutions in congress are numbered by congresses, the first introduced at the beginning of a new congress bearing the mark No. 1, and so on. Sessions of the same congress continue numbering from the last session.

"Your Future is Safe with HOOVER"

THE PRESIDENT'S PLAN

"This Republican program has not come of its natural self. It has been wrought out of the fiery ordeal of hard and honest thought, the facing of facts when loose thinking of frightened men offered every temptation of specious panaceas.

"It was wrought against the heartbreaking obstruction and delays of the Democratic House.

"But it has in the main been established.

"It is working every minute.

"Nothing has ever been devised in our history which has done more for those whom Mr. Coolidge has aptly called the common run of men and women

"If he be unemployed it is making hundreds of thousands of jobs.

"If he be in distress it enables his state or city to secure the money which assures him that he will not suffer hunger and cold. Those who are in distress in this city are today receiving their bread and their rent from the result of these measures."

Nature Lesson.
Mrs. Martin is an ardent Sunday school teacher.
"Just think," she coos, "of putting beautiful thoughts into the heads of those little seven-year-olds, thoughts that will influence their whole lives."
And so, on Nature Study Sunday, she read Joyce Kilmer's "Trees" to the class, explaining each line, and dwelling on the fact that "only God can make a tree."
At the close of the lesson period she smiled on the entire class and asked, "Now, dears, what have you learned today?"
An audible titter went around the table. The children looked at each other and all grinned. Then one small boy replied:
"We've learned that poems are made by fools!"—Kansas City Times.

Liked "First Number"
The story is told of an entertainment once given a one-time shah. The grand concert was fairly long and at its end the shah was asked if he would like any of the numbers repeated. Yes, he would, the very first. So they played the first selection again for him, the sonata. But that wasn't what royalty had wanted: "His highness says it came before that." So they went through again—the tuning-up of the violins, 'cellos and bass fiddles.—Kansas City Star.

Highly Recommends Himself
Jobs are scarce in China, the same as everywhere else, as this application for a stenographic position attests: "Sir—I am Wong. I can drive a typewriter with great noise and my English is great. My last job has left itself from me for the good reason that the large man has died. It was no fault of mine, so, honorable sir, what about it? If I can be of big use to you I will arrive at some date that you should guess."—Boston Transcript.

Artificial Jewels
Rhinestones are artificial colorless gems of high luster and cut to imitate diamonds. They are used in the manufacture of cheap jewelry and are made of a paste known as strass. The name arose from the fact that such artificial gems were first made along the Rhine.

Damage Done by Rats
It is estimated that property amounting to $200,000,000 is destroyed by rats annually. According to the United States public health service, there is one rat for every human being in the United States and each one does a half cent's worth of damage a day.

Plain Everyday Sunshine
Sunshine is the cheeriest comrade, the best killer of germs, the easiest light on the eyes and in all a good thing to have around the house. Open wide the windows and let the sun shine in and every one and everything will be benefited.

Forgery Costs Millions
Losses from forgeries in the world now total more than $250,000,000 annually.

Canary Leaf
Five-year-old Jacqueline was displaying a small, bright yellow feather. When asked what it was, she replied: "Oh, that's a leaf of our canary."

Governor Roosevelt Says:
"Let us have the courage to stop borrowing to meet continuing deficits. Stop the deficits. Let us have equal courage to reverse the policy of the Republican leaders and insist on a sound currency."

"The only hope for improving present conditions, restoring employment, affording permanent relief to the people and bringing the nation back to its former proud position of domestic happiness and of financial, industrial, agricultural and commercial leadership in the world lies in a drastic change in economic and governmental policies."

"There will be many in this nation during the coming months who will implore you not to swap horses crossing a stream; there will be others who will laughingly tell you that the appeal should have been worded 'do not swap toboggans while you are sliding down hill.' But it seems to me that the more truthful, the more accurate plea to the people of the nation should be this: 'If the old car in spite of frequent emergency repairs, has been bumping along downhill on only two cylinders for three long years, it is time to get another car that will uphill on all four.'"

"That a great fear has swept the country few can doubt. Normal times lull us into complacency. We become lazy and contented. Then with the coming of economic stress we feel the disturbing hand of fear. This fear spreads to the entire country and with more or less unity we turn to our common government at Washington."

Ethiopian Tombs Yield Treasures of the Past
Remarkable discoveries were made by an archeological expedition which excavated the mounds of Goha in the Nubian desert to the south of the great temple of Abu-Simbel, 40 miles north of Wady Halfa. The mounds proved to be great tumuli, erected in the late Roman period by the Ethiopians over subterranean tombs. In one of the tombs were the skeletons of horses, camels, and dogs, slaughtered to accompany the dead owner on his voyage to the other world. Nearby was a heap of the bones of four young men, strangled at the time of the death of their master. Pieces of rope were still knotted around their necks. The trappings of the animals presented a gorgeous display of silver work and gaily colored cloths. The horses' saddles were mounted in solid silver, delicately embossed with Greek and Egyptian designs. With them were found massive silver pendants suspended from heavy silver chains, which were apparently hung from the horse's neck and body. The harness was set with semiprecious stones. The burial chambers had evidently been plundered, but still contained great wire jars and piles of dried dates intended as sustenance for the dead in the after life.

Many Square Miles of "Liquid" United States
The firm land area of the United States is about 3,000,000 square miles; its water area, not counting the Great Lakes, amounts to more than 50,000 square miles—better than one mile of surface would have to swim across for every 80 you could walk over.
Some of our states have far more water area than Delaware or Rhode Island has land area. The District of Columbia has one square mile of water for every eight of land. Connecticut has nearly 100,000 acres of water to beautify its 3,000,000 of land.
Minnesota, with 2,500,000 acres of water, leads all the states in water area, while if you count the 40,000 square miles of Great Lakes surface, over which Michigan claims sovereignty, she has almost as much water as land area.—W. B. Courtney in Collier's.

Ancient Greek Furniture
While there are but few actual examples of early Greek furniture, we know something about it from the colorful illustrations contained on vases and walls which have been unearthed from that dim and distant past. There are on the market today many charming copies of Greek furniture, particularly in the dining room and living room lines. Being pure in both architecture and enrichment they present a freshness by the most modern designer or builder of furniture. In fact, the L'Art Moderne is of Greek inspiration. The reason for that is, no matter where we turn, we can find nothing more inspiring, more correct or more comfortable to the eye than the classic proportions laid down by this wonderful race. They come back in all times, in all periods and in all styles of furniture.—Exchange.

"Bumping Off" Trainmen
Some years ago a practice known as "bumping off" was common among train workers. Under the rules of seniority, any engineer, for instance, could bid in the run of any other engineer of fewer years' service than he. Now and then, if an unpopular man, or one incurring the enmity of the others, obtained a run he might be permitted to keep it until he became well established, perhaps even moving his family to the end of the run, after which an older engineer would "bump him off," or bid in his run. This sort of treatment could be carried on indefinitely, engineers sometimes giving up passenger runs for freight cars in order to punish a man believed in need of discipline by his fellows.

Jasmine Origin Unknown
Jasmine, often considered the perfume most pleasing to men in general, is obtained from a shrub of that name common in Asia and Europe. The origin of the jasmine is unknown, but it is known to have been brought to Europe and Asia, where it met instant approval and the plant is to be found almost anywhere in the two continents where the winter is not too severe.
At maturity the shrub grows to a height of from 8 to 10 feet and is covered with evergreen leaves and bears a white, waxy flower.

"K. C. M. G." Translated
When Sir George Reid, a man prominent in Australian politics, was made knight commander of St. Michael and St. George, he was rather embarrassed by his new dignity, for he liked to be referred to as plain George Reid. At one of his meetings some one called out: "Say, Sir George, what does K. C. M. G. mean?"
Without a moment's hesitation the new knight answered, "Keep calling me George."—Melbourne Mail.

Lignite or Brown Coal
Brown coal, as it is often known, lignite is vegetable matter in the early stages of coal formation. From a geological standpoint it occupies a position between peat and sub-bituminous coal. Lignite breaks and crumbles easily in handling and for this reason it is often difficult to burn. It ignites readily but yields only a moderate amount of heat.

High School News Briefs

Grosse Pointe Chapter of the National Honor Society has announced its officers for the present semester. They are: Edward Vase, president; Carol Windisch, vice-president; Grace Kerr, secretary; and Janet Moffat, treasurer.

Stressing the importance of a complete understanding of graduation requirements, Mr. John R. Barnes, principal, spoke to seniors last week in home room 215. He illustrated his points with specific examples.

Mr. Barnes urged the candidates for graduation to seek personal interviews with him concerning the possibilities of receiving a college recommendation. In order to obtain admission to a large university, the student must rank in the upper third of his class. "Come early and avoid disappointments," was his advice.

Rows of wheat, oats, barley, rye, corn, peas, beans and even coffee, all leaning anxiously to one side are growing in plots of ground in biology room 126. Students are becoming industrious farmers in what seems to be a "back to the farm" movement. But it is only another biology experiment and the plots of ground are in boxes.

The students planted the different grains to study monocotyledons and dicotyledons, the manner in which they get their food, and their reaction to light, heat, and water.

A three-fourth ounce can of food was passed around the biology class and came back nearly full. The can contained "Truffles," a delicacy found in France and England.

Truffles are a small black tuber of warty appearance. They are dug up by educated pigs, who are rewarded with acorns for their troubles. Truffles are rare and bring fourteen dollars a pound being used in salads and fine cookery. The truffles were presented to the class by Edward Barnes, 11B as an illustration of his report.

Taxidermy has been selected by 12 biology students as a term project. Guinea pigs, fish, and small rodents are the intended victims.

Formerly, few students attempted projects of this nature. One of the few mountings was a white rat but through a lack of understanding of the principles of taxidermy, the hide became stretched so much that the mounting resembled more closely a weasel. Pupils interested in observing this elongated specimen may do so in Room 124.

The term projects promise to prove a great addition to the museum which has been started. It now contains a gila monster, the only poisonous lizard found in the United States, a horned toad, three alligators of various ages, an owl, bat, flicker, squirrel, and a sparrow.

Detroit's next game is with Georgetown on Friday evening of this week and in spite of the Hilltoppers poor record this season, Dorais is looking for a hard battle. He points out the tough time his team had beating West Virginia to sustain this idea.

"West Virginia came here with a record of three defeats in four starts," said Dorais, "yet we had to use all we had in the bag to win. The Mountaineers outgained us both on the ground and in the air and for a good part of the game were outplaying us. Only the fact that our passes worked in the pinches enabled us to come out on top."

"Georgetown is somewhat similar to West Virginia in that it is using a lot of green material and consequently has been slow to start. It may find itself any time now and we can be sure that it will play better football against us than it has played against any other team this fall. Last year, after our victory over State, our players thought that Georgetown was going to a set up but we only managed to win by a score of 6 to 0."

Furthermore, Georgetown always manages to put on its best show against the Titans. We have played the Blue and Gray six times in the seven years I have coached at Detroit and we've never had a walkover yet. I'm always afraid of any team that has been getting licked. Sooner or later the worm turns."

Detroit will have the weight advantage over Georgetown, instead of giving away pounds as it did to Washington and Jefferson, Holy Cross and West Virginia. The Hilltoppers are light, both in the line and backfield. The team uses a Notre Dame shift very much like Detroit's. It will be the first time this season that Dorais' men have had to combat their own system of offensive play.

WHAT EDITORS ARE SAYING

"If President Hoover would call the five-day week a 'noble experiment' the vagueness with which he has handled its application to the government departments would be perfect. Instead of saying definitely 'yes' or 'no,' the President makes public a letter to him from Governor Thomas E. Campbell, for the Council on Personnel Administration, recommending the five-day week 'in principle,' but leaving the final decision to department heads. Out where Campbell comes from they call that 'passing the buck.'"
—Washington, D. C. News (Ind.).

"The Democrats cannot secure great gifts from the privilege seeking corporations, because the Democratic party has no privileges to offer in return for the cash. The Republican party has been able to raise huge campaign funds in the past by trading tariff favors to special interests in the north and east. Prospective campaign contributors did not miss Hoover's defense of the Hawley-Smoot tariff act in his acceptance speech."

Brickbat for Browning
When Browning's English translation of Aeschylus' "Agamemnon" appeared, one unkind reader remarked that now all the perplexing lines of Aeschylus had been endowed with perfect unintelligibility; and the Greek scholar Jowett declared: "I have been able to understand Browning's English only with the aid of the Greek original."—Golden Book Magazine.

Hoover's Detroit Speech Failed of Purpose

Proceeding to what we believe is a fair analysis of the President's speech, we find that part one is of little importance, and we pass it by lightly. It is confined almost exclusively to studied sarcasm and ridicule, which, although wide of the mark, serves well to whet the appetite of a partisan audience, for the piece de resistance soon to follow. In the second division, he seeks to shoulder onto a Democratic House of Representatives the full responsibility for all that should or might have been done, and was not; and for all that was not and should or might have been. In this, we believe the President is at least unfair, if not actually insincere. We believe he is lacking in candor. When he suggests, with astounding arrogance, that all virtue is confined to the White House and all evil is contained within the walls of Congress; when he refuses to concede that which is obvious, that a Democratic House may conceivably, have the best interests of the country at heart, that it may conceivably, be in the right on at least one debatable public question—we believe he weakens his own vain claim to infallibility.

We hold no particular brief for the Congress; but we believe it is ridiculous to insinuate that the Congress is at all times in error, is at all times acting in bad faith, or is at all times insensible or callous to the good of the country and the well-being of its citizens. We believe there are incompetent Congressmen, just as there have been incompetent Presidents; but we also believe that there are many capable men, men of vision, unselfish men in the Congress. We do not believe that the Congress is composed wholly of unscrupulous obstructionists whose every waking moment is devoted to planning new schemes for planting cockle burrs under the Presidential saddle. We do not believe that this is the President's belief. In his brazen attempt to shoulder all of his responsibilities, all of his inadequacies, all of his floundering, all of his inexcusable delays onto the broad back of a Democratic House, we sense his acute consciousness of his own guilt. We see him shrinking from the just deserts of his own negligence. We believe, that he seeks once more to find a likely looking red herring.

The third part of his speech is devoted to a criticism of the Democratic Party for a measure which Mr. Hoover chooses to call the Garner Pork Bill. We do not intend to discuss either the merits or demerits of the bill. We wish only to point out that, a few paragraphs removed from his censure of Mr. Garner, Mr. Hoover asks that he himself be extolled for proposing an almost identical measure. We believe that a rose, by any other name, would smell as sweet.

Next, Mr. Hoover proceeds to enumerate what he chooses to call the accomplishments of his administration. His accomplishments are not without merit. We do not seek to deprive him of the credit that is his just due. But we do not believe what he asks us to accept with a blind faith. We do not believe he is deserving of a new mandate from the people simply because he performed some of the duties of his high office. Because he was not altogether derelict, he asks to be continued in office. He is blind to the fact that a chief executive is expected to be of some service in a time of national calamity; and still seems ignorant that he is charged, not with being wholly incompetent and completely inadequate but with being too long blinded to the obvious facts, vacillating and blundering when he was at length made to see, and that the inadequate measures he finally proposed for allowed to be put into action, came when the country had been wallowing in disaster for nearly three years. We admit that he has endeavored to speed the recovery of normal business activities—although there is no great evidence that recovery has actually begun—but we believe that he failed dismally and culpably in retarding that from which we are now struggling to recover. We believe he locked the barn door after the horse was stolen.

The President next attempts to reply to Roosevelt's charge of extravagance in governmental affairs. The most we can say for his reply is that it is excellent politics—from one who has been represented as unskilled in political machinations—but specious argumentation. For his failure to coordinate governmental bureaus, and to eliminate useless departments of government, he again seeks to lay the blame on the Democratic House, and charges insincerely, we believe, that the Democrats wilfully and maliciously refused to place the proper tools at his disposal. The facts are, that through the members of his cabinet, who are at the heads of all government departments, and through the medium of the budget, over which he has final and almost dictatorial control, the proper tools are now and always have been at his disposal, did he only wish to use them. Replying to Roosevelt's stand on the bonus, in one breath Mr. Hoover tries to make it appear that the Governor has not yet had the courage to declare himself in this issue, and in the next he deliberately misquotes the Governor and tries to make it appear he is an advocate of the immediate payment of

Lafayette Theatre

"Little Accident," the sparkling comedy, which the Penman Players will bring to the Lafayette theatre this week beginning Monday, October 31, was heralded as a triumph of hilarity and amusement during its unusually successful run on Broadway. It grips the interest of an audience, from the very rise of the first curtain and holds it unfailingly until the finale. It is literally truthful to describe it as a continuous gale of laughter.

Accidents are bound to happen in the best regulated families, but this one upsets the applecart as to the future of nearly all the characters in this sophisticated, smart tale of modern love and marriage. The "little accident," in the role of a bouncing baby, is the out-come of a secret marriage which was annulled. The news of the "accident" reaches the ears of its father, Norman Overbeck, played by William Post on the eve of his wedding. Hastily forsaking his bride-to-be, Norman learns at the hospital that his offspring is to be let out for adoption by its mother, played by Doris Dalton.

Swift's Familiar Saying
The verse about the fleas having smaller fleas to bite them is frequently quoted. Dean Swift wrote the following: "So, naturalists observe, a flea has smaller fleas that on him prey; And these have smaller still to bite him; And so proceed ad infinitum."

Earliest "Gold Standard"
When Philip of Macedon started a great gold currency, it was then that sufficient fluid capital could be wielded to attack Persia. The union of that great kingdom, the mightiest known in the world till then, from the Balkans to Lahore, rested upon a vast gold basis, the central store being 200 tons of gold, worth $150,000,000.

No Arguments
Passionate expressions and vehement assertions are not arguments, unless it be of weakness of the cause that is defended by them, or of the man that defends it.—Chillingworth.

Jefferson Avenue Baptist Church

The Jefferson Avenue Baptist church corner Lakeview and Jefferson. Rev. Wayland Zwyer, pastor.
The pastor's subject for the morning worship Sunday will be "Not Without Sacrifice." At the evening worship the Biblical drama "St. Claudia" will be presented by the Olmsted Players. The name "St. Claudia" is one not overly familiar to Bible students, as it is the name tradition has given for the wife of Pilate, who was sainted as such by the Greek Orthodox church, for her intercession in behalf of our Saviour. "St. Claudia" was awarded first prize in 1924 by the Drama League of America. It is written in sonorous blank verse and is very similar to Shakespeare's masterpiece except that it is written around the sacred text of Matthew 27:15-26 and is historically and Biblically correct. The drama is presented in four scenes. It deals with the last week in the life of our Lord. His trial before Pilate, the Crucifixion, and the Resurrection. All denominations are invited to attend this presentation. There is no admission charge.
The School of Missions and Religious Education is conducted each Wednesday evening. Reservations for supper, 20c, may be made through the church office. The Friendly and Judson Young People have adopted a new type of program that is creating a growing interest. You will enjoy these meetings held at 6:15 each Sunday. Are you and your children enrolled in Sunday school? You are invited to visit the school departments 9:45 Sunday. Classes are organized for all ages.

Cellophane Production
Cellophane is a form of viscose made by treating purified cellulose (cotton linters, etc.) with caustic soda solution and carbon disulphide. This mixture dissolves the cellulose as sodium cellulosexanthate. By treatment with suitable reagents the cellulose, somewhat modified chemically, is precipitated from the solution.

Too Much Harmony
I know many cases where the very harmony and devotion of the family to each other are the chief factors underlying the failure of the children to gain the feeling of scrutiny within themselves.—Beatrice M. Hinkle.
