Grosse Pointe Health Department Notes

Scarlet Fever has been causing considerable anxiety the past two months. Grosse Pointe has been more fortunate than many places, there being but 18 cases reported at this time, which is the greatest number at any one time this winter, and most of these have developed since January 5th, and with a school census of about 6,500 in the Township this cannot be termed as epidemic. But, as a measure of precaution we suggest to all parents that a child showing any indisposition should be kept from school, put in bed, and the family physician called, as mild cases of scarlet fever might be overlooked with serious consequences, because of complications that may develop in the mildest cases.

The splendid co-operation of the parents, teachers, medical profession, and all of those in authority is a very vital factor in maintaining our quite satisfactory health conditions, and for which all of those connected with the Health Department have a very keen appreciation.

Lochmoor Insurance Rates Lower Through Adding New Equipment

In view of the fact that Lochmoor residents can now secure lower insurance rates we are publishing again this week an article by Mr. Stock outlining the procedure to follow in obtaining lower insurance rates on property in Lochmoor, which is now available due to the addition of the new fire-fighting unit. The article follows:

On account of increase in fire protection, the National Board of Fire Underwriters has changed the classification of Lochmoor from class 10 to class 7 for rating purposes.

The class 10 rate for a one family frame or brick veneer with a wood shingle roof is 95c per $100 for three years. The class 7 rate is 65c per $100 for three years, a reduction of about 30%, which will help pay the increased taxes for the cost and maintenance of the new facilities.

In order to get the benefit of the new rates at once, dwelling policies have to be cancelled and rewritten for at least the same amount and same term of the cancelled policies. The new policies must be with the same company and agent.

Business properties, schools churches and clubs will have to have their buildings reroated individually and should request their agents to take the necessary steps and precautions.

Washington's Colonial Home

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S colonial home, Mount Vernon, has not been a residence for many years, nor has it been owned by a member of the Washington family for three quarters of a century, says the Washington Star.

Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, daughter of John Augustine Washington, the illustrious Washington's great-grandnephew, was the last private owner of the estate. She first saw the world from the most historic home in America in 1866.

Though General Washington's slaves, numbering more than 150, were freed by his will, his nephew, Bushrod Washington, who inherited Mount Vernon, John Augustine Washington Bushrod's nephew, and his son, John Augustine Washington, Jr., who in turn fell heirs to the estate, were slave owners.

Today, survivors of the last generation of negro folk born in the slave quarters of the old manor are proud that their slave parents served in the ancestral home of the Washingtons. Somehow, they give realism to the farm which George Washington owned and which they helped to care for, as young men. These white-haired men declare there never was any depression at the old farm where the nights were festivals with the singing of "Roll, Jordan, Roll," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," and "Steal Away to Jesus."

George Washington, who is said to have been worth several hundred thousand dollars in today's values, had a salary of $25,000 a year during his presidency and added resources brought to him by his marriage with the rich Martha Custis. With such wealth he was able to keep his estate of 8,000 acres in fine condition. This was despite the fact that he was constantly entertaining visitors.

By the time the property was inherited by John Augustine Washington, his nephew, in 1829, the plantation had been reduced to 1,225 acres, only about 100 acres of which were suitable for farming. When his son, John Augustine Washington Jr., came into possession of the estate in 1860, after his mother's death, he realized that such wealth as his great-uncle George had possessed was required to restore Mount Vernon and maintain it in its former splendor.

According to tradition a Miss Ann Pamela Cunningham of South Carolina, who was a Potomac boat passenger about the time when John A. Washington wished to sell Mount Vernon, became so impressed with the tolling of the bell and the historical importance of George Washington's home that she became active in working for the purchase of the estate.

In 1858 the organization she had formed as the Mount Vernon Ladies' association of the Union contracted to buy the mansion and the patriotic appeal of the women and the efforts of Senator Edward Everett of Massachusetts, who toured the country and raised $68,294.58, Mount Vernon was actually purchased in 1860 for a shrine. Then the Washington family left the estate.

With breaking out of the Civil war, Miss Cunningham appealed to the commanders of both armies to preserve Mount Vernon. As both General Scott and General Lee gave orders that no armed man should enter the estate, the shrine was self-protected, the only neutral spot in the United States.

For several years members of at least four families of the Mt. Vernon slaves remained to care for the place, in the employ of the association. Some of the children grew up there and a few of the adults stayed long enough to gain the title of "aunt" or "uncle," which was a typical Southern respect for an aged negro.

For a while after the war visitors to Mount Vernon are said to have practiced such vandalism that they wrote their names over its walls and ceilings. Plaster was removed by those who cut pieces of laths as souvenirs, and even glass was broken in the cupola by those who wished to take away pieces of the famous home.

Today Mount Vernon, a national shrine, is a perfectly preserved plantation with mansion, greenhouse, kitchen, servant's quarters, coach house, smoke house, dairy, spinning house, carpenter's house, gardener's house and plantation office.

Perhaps the estate's closest touch with Washington are the beautiful trees in the grounds near the mansion which were planted either by General Washington or by his direction. If the ancient ashes, beeches, buckeyes, hemlocks, coffee beans, elms, lindens, mulberry and the many venerable holly trees could speak, they would tell much about George Washington's life as a country gentleman.

America's most famous home, Mount Vernon, underwent not one but two major enlargements during the ownership of the First American who believed apparently, that the first duty of an American citizen to his family was to provide a comfortable home, according to a writer in the Washington Post.

When first built, about 1743, the Virginia home was an unpretentious plantation house of one and one-half stories, comprising the central section of the present mansion. Just before his marriage to Martha Custis in 1759, Washington "renovated" the dwelling into a house of two and one-half stories by adding one complete story, but did not increase the floor area.

TROOP 131

Troop 131 held a Court of Honor at the home of Mrs. Phelps Newberry, on Cloverly road, last Saturday morning, February 13. No secrets were divulged but it was understood that this meeting was held to make plans for an exciting time on February 23. Those who attended were Patrol Leaders Marian Bishop, Marian Sherman, Betty Dare, Winifred La Mee, Mary Gillies, and Christy Newberry; Patrol seconds Gabriel Piezik, Cynthia Wilbur, Mary Malow, Carlisle Frost, Elsie Cosgrove, and Ann Fletcher; Troop Scribe, Mary K. Mateer, and Troop Treasurer, Kitten Thompson.

Mrs. Albert C. Dickson will open her home on Washington road on February 23 for a meeting of the troop committee, whose members are Mrs. Edwin R. Stroh, Mrs. Charles R. Bishop, Mrs. Robert E. McKean, Mrs. Owen C. Frost, and Mrs. C. L. Nevens. Troop 131 has donated $6 to the American Red Cross Flood Relief and is working on a further relief project, the details of which will be told next week. M. K. M.

TROOP 139

The following members of Troop 139 were sent out from the Grosse Pointe police station to shopping districts to take contributions for the flood refugees: Christeen Ramsay, Betty Schradler, Virginia Leithauer, Martha Chopp, Margaret Hubener, Marilyn Rupp, Catherine Hauke, Maureen Kaess, and Jean Nagel.

The Girl Scout Mariners of the same troop visited Chief Wawatem, a ship at River Rouge last Saturday. The expedition proved to be very interesting as well as educational. J. E. N.

TROOP 141

The members of Troop 141 will meet at the Convent of the Sacred Heart on Monday, February 15, at 3:30 o'clock for their regular weekly meeting.

From this day on the meetings will be held on Monday instead of Thursday.

At the meeting on Monday the scouts will continue their study of nature. For their three nature subjects they have chosen: birds, animals and insects. It was decided at the previous meeting that the scouts should bring any books of nature they might have at home or any stuffed birds or animals.

A party has been planned, to be given on March 11, for all those who have successfully finished their three nature groups at that time.

The following have kindly volunteered their services as the troop's committee:

- Mrs. Charles A. Belanger
- Mrs. Leslie Moll
- Mrs. Miles O'Brien
- Mrs. Thomas Petzold
- Mrs. Edward DuBois.

The first service they will render the troop will be to supply the American and troop flags. B. CHENE.

GENERAL

With all the snow and ice of the past week, it seems difficult to picture an all-day camp reunion, but one is coming and committees are already planning on April 3, and the place is Grosse Pointe Park. All scouts who have gone to the camp and all those who hope to go next summer are invited. Three Grosse Pointe girl scouts are on committees: Shirley Sickels, Troop 124, Mary Jane MacKenzie, Troop 140, and Barbara Fitch, Troop 138. Barbara is chairman of the registration committee.

It is rumored that Troop 140 is planning a Court of Awards in March.

The scribes of Troops 124, 140, and 156 will please call Mrs. Henry Hubbard, Niagara 8574, as soon as possible.

At the training school last Monday morning, the following made plans to visit various troop meetings and serve as leader apprentices: Mrs. Matthew Carey and Mrs. Theodore G. Osius will attend the regular meeting of Troop 131 next Tuesday; Mrs. Ben Young and Mrs. Earl B. Breuk will visit Troop 156 on Thursday; and Mrs. Edward C. Smith and Mrs. James F. Graves will go to the meeting of Troop 129 on Friday.

Prominent Catholic writers, editors, educators, historians, philosophers, and sociologists from the mid-west and several eastern states will take part in a general discussion of the Catholic Press and the modern problems. C., and author of "Fire on Earth"; Dr. Ross Hoffman, professor of history at New York University, and the Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S. J., national director of the Sodality of Our Lady.

Spring Flower Show to Surpass Former Events: Opens Mar. 13

The annual spring Flower Show, again sponsored by the Michigan Horticultural Society, will open in Convention Hall, March 13.

Gardens and assemblies of flowering plants from the commercial and private greenhouses will be a spectacular part of the exhibition, and will include a large tropical garden with bright plumaged birds flying among the exotic foliage.

The finest material in years is available this season. Prolific flower and fruit buds and excellent root growth, thanks to the fall rains, promise unusually fresh and well-conditioned entries. More and larger reservations have been made. In the opinion of Thomas L. Berry, exhibition director, and Earl D. Burke, president of the Michigan Horticultural Society, the 1937 Flower and Garden Exhibition will be superior to all those within recent years, in regard to plant specimens.

A number of prominent Grosse Pointe gardens will be duplicated in miniature.

Spinning and Weaving Demonstration Feb. 20

At the third of the series of Detroit Historical Museum talks open to the public, Saturday, February 20, at 2 o'clock, Mrs. Nellie Sargent Johnson, national authority on weaving, editor of a monthly magazine on the subject, and teacher of weaving in Wayne University, two high schools, and two elementary schools in Detroit, will illustrate a talk by using some of her looms (notably a "four-harness" type), and by displaying 40 or 50 examples of ancient and modern weaving.

The actual spinning of wool will be demonstrated by Miss Catherine A. MacKinnon on a 1790 spinning wheel formerly owned and used by Louisa St. Clair, daughter of Gen. Arthur St. Clair, Governor of the Northwest Territory.

The Museum has a complete collection of appliances for preparation of wool and flax from the field to the loom. Textile students are particularly invited to this talk, which is open to the public without charge. The Museum is open week-days from one to five; Saturdays from nine to five.

New England Women Luncheon February 24

Detroit Colony, National Society of New England Women, will meet Wednesday, February 24, at the Central Branch, Y. W. C. A., for a 12:30 o'clock luncheon, followed by a meeting at 1:30, over which the president, Mrs. W. Scott Hobbs, will preside. Members will respond to roll call with "Superstitions I Have Encountered."

As program speaker, Mrs. H. M. Booth will present a paper on "Antiques."

Friday night the team travels to take on St. Vincent, who occupy last place in the third division. Sunday St. Paul plays its last game of the league schedule against Rosary at home to determine the East Side third division title.

The third of a series of six special Lenten services will take place next Wednesday, February 24, at 7:45 p. m. The theme to be treated in the sermon will be: "The Sorrows of the Man of Sorrows in Pilate's Court."

The Young People's Society will give a musicale next Sunday, February 21, at 7:30 p. m., the affair taking place in the church basement. The members and friends of the congregation are invited to come. No admission fee will be charged.

Call Grosse Pointe Printing Co., For Job Printing of the Better Kind

THE girl who was to become the mother of George Washington was something of a belle in her native colony, Virginia. Mary Ball, descended from a good English family, was called "the rose of Epping Forest" in her girlhood, Epping Forest being the name of the Ball homestead. Orphaned early, she had as her guardian George Eskridge, a wealthy Virginia planter.

At twenty-two, Mary Ball married (on March 6, 1780) Augustine Washington, then a widower with two little boys. Her first child she named George after her old family friend. Five other children were born of this marriage, four of whom survived. When Augustine Washington died, she was left with a brood of youngsters to care for. George was then only eleven. Fortunately, however, states a writer in the Indianapolis News, the husband had provided for them amply.

George Washington was still a young boy when he became possessed of a great desire to be a midshipman. His mother had been half-hearted about this plan at all times, but finally (so the story goes) when his sea-chest was being carried down to the wharf by a porter, she refused to let him go. He accepted her decision with good grace, and devoted himself to surveying instead. His activities in the next years often took him far away from her and gradually prepared him for the great role he was to play in American history.

Mary Ball Washington was sixty-eight when the revolution began. Since communication was then so primitive, she often did not know for months at a time whether her son was alive or dead. Yet she maintained outward calm and courage. One of her sayings was, "The mothers and wives of brave men must be brave women." The members of her household knew, though, that every day she went off by herself with her Bible to a quiet spot called Meditation Rock.

At last Cornwallis surrendered in 1781 and the revolution was won. Ever mindful of his mother's anxiety for him, Washington sent off a courier at once to bear her the news.

Mary Ball Washington lived to be over eighty, mentally keen and unfailingly cheerful. She died in 1789, the year her son was elected first President of the United States.

Washington at 25

WHEN George Washington sat for this rare miniature, he was only twenty-five but he was already well on the way toward becoming Virginia's first citizen. His marriage to Martha, the wealthy widow of Daniel Custis, in 1759 and the death of his half brother, Lawrence, made George at twenty-nine perhaps the richest man in Virginia and certainly one of the richest in America. But before that—in his early twenties—he had made his mark as a soldier who could combine reckless courage with thoughtful purpose.

"Contraband of War" The term "contraband of war" was first used in the treaty between England and Spain in 1625. Actually it is applied to arms and ammunition, and materials from which they can be made, carried by neutral vessels to either parties engaged in war.

Here starting out on a skiing lesson are a group of youngsters. Judging from the smiles on their faces and their enthusiasm, this is one class they thoroughly enjoy.

On and Off the Records

by Lee Montgomery
The strike has temporarily blockaded the road prosperity. The small business man and the small home owner was not quite on his feet. Building gets its impetus in the spring and by that time the strike situation may be cleared. For these and similar reasons the mortgage moratorium should be extended if not two years at least one. A bill to extend this moratorium is before the legislature at Lansing. In the interest of prosperity, in the interests of Roosevelt's policies, and in the interests of real estate itself, this bill should be passed. This is the conclusion of Harold E. Stoll, Register of Deeds, and Casper J. Lingeman, County Clerk. Both of these men are students of real estate, they are the keepers of records which show in no uncertain terms that the people as a whole need an extension of time on mortgages. The failure to give it will act as a death hold on prosperity. The small American business man will not survive. He is the backbone of all human existence.

Harold Stoll points out that redemptions have jumped a thousand per cent in the past year. This means that people have been paying off that mortgage as soon as they get money. They do not wait a day; they do not buy luxuries, they immediately think of saving their home or their business. Sheriff sales have dropped off proportionately. Stoll says that before the depression a sheriff sale on property was a rare exception. During the first five years of depression, these sales were countless. The moratorium gave the public new hope and another chance to have something out of the wreckage. They need just a little more time.

Casper Lingeman supports this view and adds that the spring will bring new business for the small contractor who can then see his way clear to pay off mortgages. The strike has stopped the flow of money. As soon as this money begins circulating again the dangers of mortgage foreclosures will be passed. Until that time a moratorium is a necessity. He shows where real estate was in the first stages of a boom. People had acquired a new faith and were building a substantial foundation for a good many prosperous years. If these people who have hundreds of dollars in property lose it because they don't happen to have the ready cash, through no fault of their own, then they will lose faith in real estate as a good investment. This would ruin all hopes of prosperity as real estate is the basic layer of all American life. The real estate business needs a moratorium, the factory worker and the small business man needs a moratorium, in fact there is only one person who thrives on other people's misfortune. This in brief is the conclusion of two astute real estate experts who are on the inside as holders of our records, who see all arguments from an objective viewpoint and who have only the interests of the people as a whole at heart.

And if you think that this strike has not hurt all business, then walk into one of Detroit's smart restaurants and ask the waiter what he thinks about it. Roy Moredock, chief deputy Register of Deeds, was lunching in the Statler Hotel. The head waiter mentioned that the dining room was empty because of the strike and he wished it would be settled in short order. Roy was astounded and concluded that if this type dining room felt the effects then there were few people who weren't affected by the strike. The workingman's dollar finds its way into all businesses, into all amusement places.

Zig Mioskoski, who is handling former Common Pleas Judge Wroblewski campaign, astounded political friends this week by appearing around the county building without a white carnation. Zig had spent years making the white carnation famous. No hangover could be so bad, no business so pressing, that would make Zig forget the carnation in his lapel. He has only one reason to offer for discarding his favorite flower. "The purity of the carnation would not stand the gaff in another political campaign," said Zig. "I still buy the carnations, but I send them to my daughters who are in school at Monroe."

Stellanova Osborn, daughter of Michigan's endeared Chas. S. Osborn, writes a brilliant public letter concerning the state seal. She favors changing the wording on the seal to include both upper and lower peninsula is an important part of our State. She mentions that one can stand on Mackinac Island and look about them and see two beautiful peninsulas.

She is right. Jean Nicolet, first white man to step on what is now Michigan soil, saw both peninsulas from that same vantage point. He went from Mackinac Island not south to the lower peninsula, but North, to the sight that is now Saulte Ste Marie. Miss Osborn could tell our legislature how important that upper region is not only in beauty but in minerals, industry and commerce. She could show them why "Hiawatha Land" is really important as part of Michigan and why I wish I were up there right now taking a dip in cold Lake Superior or fishing in the beautiful Ste. Mary's River.

Declaration Regarding United States Supreme Court and Constitution

The Chicago Association of Commerce, through its Executive Committee, hereby expresses its disapproval of the proposal to reorganize the judiciary insofar as it would permit the appointment of additional judges to the Supreme Court of the United States when there are judges of that Court over seventy years of age who do not resign within six months.

Under existing laws as required by our Constitution, when a justice of the Supreme Court dies or resigns, the President appoints his successor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The President now seeks a drastic change. After having had a number of important laws, many of which have been the subject of political controversy, declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, the President proposes to invite the retirement of the six members of the Supreme Court now over the age of seventy years. He asks Congress to authorize him, in the event all or any of these judges fail to resign, to enlarge the Court by adding new members, not exceeding six in all.

The number of judges of the Supreme Court has been changed several times in our history but at no time has any President thereby been empowered to appoint more than two new judges. Even changes of this kind have been rare and they have always been the subject of criticism in subsequent years.

Under the President's proposed plan, if the six judges resign, he would appoint six successors who would constitute a two-thirds majority of the Court. If none of them resign, he then could appoint six additional judges, or two-fifths of the new Court of fifteen. If less than six resign, he could in any event appoint more than one-third and up to two-thirds of the new Court.

An independent judiciary has been the safeguard of the liberty of our people. Our Constitution requires that the three branches of our government—legislative, executive and judicial—each shall be independent within its sphere. The Supreme Court is vested with the duty of preserving our Constitution. It is the duty of the Supreme Court to declare invalid any act of Congress which is not authorized by the Constitution. This constitutional duty and power of the Supreme Court has been supported by the unquestioned approval of our entire people.

Confidence in the Supreme Court is vital to the preservation of the democratic form of government in which we believe. No court can continue to deserve or receive public confidence if any suspicion exists that it is subject to the control or influence of any other branch of our government. The President's proposal has raised a storm of criticism because its adoption will undermine the Supreme Court and the confidence of our people in it.

Gold Diggers Face Ohio Cage Champs Sunday Afternoon

The Gold Diggers, newest of the girl cage teams being organized in Detroit, will make their debut before out-of-town competition Sunday afternoon, February 21, at Light Guard Armory, Brush and Larned. They will face the Ohio champion Fisher Food team, composed of some of the nation's outstanding girl cagers, in the feature game at 3 p. m.

The contest will be played according to boys' rules. The Gold Diggers until recently were members of Florence Wolff's Tigerettes but after a dispute they broke away and formed their own club. Nick Sullo, prominent Detroit sportsman, is their new coach and he promises that following three practice sessions this week, his team will be ready for any competition. That Sullo has a task on his hands there is no doubt. The champion Cleveland squad only last week defeated the Tulsa Stenos, A. A. U. champions, 24-18. On top of that the invaders have won 18 of their 21 games to date.

Sullo will start Wilma Marlatt, Irene Ward and Frances Kurrell at forward posts and Ruth Hill and "Red" Burkhardt as guards. Beth and Rose Ortman, twins, will fill utility positions.

Coach Barkey Sanders, with a record of 17 champion teams in seven years, has a strong squad centered around Frances Sobczak, six foot, one inch center. She is an outstanding athlete and will participate in the Poland Olympics this summer. Other players are Lila Blue, Margaret Fischlin, Flora Graham, Bernice Koree, Gladys Lommel, Florence Nothstine, Margaret Teachout and Dioris Travers.

Another game at 2 p. m. with girls rules prevailing, will be played between Detroit's Hudson Motors Girls and Battle Creek.

INSURANCE TIPS

By H. THOMPSON STOCK Just what is meant by "loss or damage by fire" is not explained in the fire insurance policy. It has been defined, however, by numerous court decisions. One of the most famous decisions is known as "Austin and Another vs. Drewe" which was decided in England in 1816. In this case the court held that loss or damage by a "friendly fire" was not covered. A friendly fire is a fire intentionally kindled kept within the bounds intended for it.

In this English case the plaintiffs refined sugar on each floor of an eight-story building. Heat from a very wide chimney was used to process the sugar. At night a register on the top of the chimney was closed to keep the heat in the building. One morning the janitor neglected to open the register when he built the fire. As a result, smoke entered the rooms and the walls were slightly blistered and the sugars discolored by the heat. Plaintiffs contended that this loss was the result of fire and that it was covered by their fire insurance policy.

Court held that there was no fire in the building that ought not to be there, that nothing was on fire that ought not to be on fire, that the loss was caused entirely by smoke and heat taking the wrong direction as a result of the register not being opened and that, therefore, the plaintiff could not collect.

Hence loss or damage must be from a "hostile" fire. A friendly fire can become a hostile fire when it goes beyond the bounds intended for it such as when flames from a grate fire go outside the hearth and chimney and burn the mantle or burn furniture placed too near the fire.

More scorching or charring of the furniture, however, is not sufficient. There must be an actual glow or flame. In the case of Sun Insurance Office of London, England, vs. Western Woolen Mill Company, a Kansas court held that "no degree of heat, short of ignition, producing an actual burning, is covered by the policy" that there must be a fire and that fire may be in the form of flame or merely smoldering. Hence it is obvious that a black mark left on a table by an electric iron is not covered. However, if the heat became so intense that it started a fire, the resultant loss would be covered.

Some losses not covered: smudge from faulty operation of oil burner, flames confined to furnace and chimney (losses of this type can be covered by means of smoke damage endorsement, by the supplemental contract or by smoke damage policies), cracking of cast iron sections of a heating boiler caused by heat (losses of this type can be covered by the cracking and fracturing endorsement attached to boiler insurance policies), scorch on rug or table from cigarette stub (losses of this type are covered only when size of mark is greater than that of the stub), damage by heat to bread or other articles kept too long in ovens, or losses caused by carelessly or negligently throwing into a bonfire or furnace fire packages containing things of value.

It is perfectly permissible to burn up one's own property intentionally when property or life of others is not endangered such as burning an obsolete boat. But one can not collect insurance thereon. That would be fraud and would constitute arson. Losses by arson are not collectible on grounds of fraud, friendly fire and public policy. Public policy does not permit one to burn his property when property or life of others is endangered thereby.

Synovial Fluid The synovial fluid, or synovia, is joint oil, a clear viscid fluid secreted by a synovial membrane, the function of which is to lubricate the joint or the surface of an inclosed tendon.

Now Fish Is the Fashion

The next forty days on the church calendars are peppered those little, finny symbols which mean a meatless day, and a special problem in meal-planning. But to homemakers who are rightly zealous for their family's health and well-being, Lent is more a season of opportunity than a season of penance! For in seeking to balance the meals on meatless days, they are bound to depend for body-upbuilding protein upon an increased use of eggs, cheese, fish and milk.

Planning such meals, of course, requires more thought, more managing. One can't automatically decide upon chops or steak or a roast, and then build the dinner menu around the single item of meat. In Lenten meals, the chief protein values are apt to find themselves in the seafood salad or in the cheese sauce that mantles the hot vegetable, or in the poached egg that garnishes the vegetable plate! But they are somewhere around, and since the only complete substitutes for the protein in meat are eggs, fish, cheese and milk, the health rating of the daily meals is bound to rise, and we are encouraged to reconcile the family, too, by an ingenious selection tempting main dishes and salad combinations in lieu of meat.

The savory casserole dish whose recipe is just the kind of a dish we will be looking for to serve perhaps once a week, during the Lenten season. It combines eggs, nippy cheese and milk. It is most attractive when removed from the oven and placed on the table in its own glass or earthen baking dish, for it is topped by a tempting crust of golden brown, and the flavory cheese sauce oozes out when the spoon breaks through it, and there is a mouth-watering aroma of melted cheese and crusty crumbs and green beans slowly baked. A dish to reassure your family that the table won't wear sackcloth during Lent!

Cheese Custard (Six Servings)

- 3 cups milk (heated) 3 tablespoons flour 1 onion 2 tablespoons butter 2 1/2 cups cubed bread (stale, but not dry)

- 1/4 lb snappy cheese 4 eggs 1 cup green beans Pimento 1 teaspoon sugar Salt and pepper.

Melt butter, add chopped onion and cook in butter until onion is yellow, but not browned. Add flour and blend thoroughly. Add hot milk and cook until slightly thickened. Add grated or chopped cheese and allow to melt, but do not cook sauce after adding cheese.

Pour hot sauce over cubed bread. Allow to stand until partially cooked. Add green beans, pimento, sugar, salt and pepper. Fold in beaten eggs. Pour into baking dish. Bake very slowly for one-half hour or until set. Best results are obtained by placing baking dish in a pan of hot water for baking.

Serve the above main dish with a fresh leafy salad or with a chilled salad of grapefruit, orange and green pepper marinated in French dressing. The second salad is prettier if served on or garnished with watercress.
