V. F. W. Scholarship to Be Given High Pupil

A $100 scholarship is to be awarded annually beginning June, 1939, by the local post of Veterans of Foreign Wars to the member of either the January or June graduating class of the Grosse Pointe High school who excels in the qualities of Americanism.

This award is open to both boys and girls.

In a letter of acceptance to Mr. Bernard Besso, commander Post No. 995 V. F. W., Dr. E. R. Van Kleec, superintendent, said: "I hope you will convey to the members of the post our profound gratitude for this further evidence of their interest in the development of Americanism in our community. In such times as these I cannot conceive of a more worthy object for which a scholarship could be offered and you can be sure we shall do everything in our power to make the awards effective."

Old Newberry House Makes History Anew

Dark old Newberry House, on East Jefferson near Russell, has embarked upon another phase of its interesting history. When this house was occupied by the Newberry family in 1876 it was a center of socialite Detroit of that era. The senior John S. Newberry was a descendant of an English family which settled in Massachusetts in 1625. Born with a silver spoon in his mouth, his own genius and personality rapidly turned it into gold. Interested in transportation and commerce, founder of Grace Hospital and a power in industrial Detroit, he left his impress upon the city. His wife, mother of Mrs. Henry B. Joy and the late John Stoughton and Truman Handy Newberry, was a woman of radiant charm. To be invited to the affairs at her home in Victorian Detroit was to be accorded social recognition. But while the life of the household was cast in the mould of elegance typical of that period, Mrs. Newberry believed wholeheartedly in church and community service, and in the simplicity of family life. Friends of that time recall how the children romped in snow fresh enough to be made into occasional dishes of "snow ice cream" for a special treat. And they remember the tiny brides, swathed in lace curtains, who played at mock weddings on the wide stair-landing of the old house. At that time Russell and East Jefferson was a secluded community of neighbors who walked to church down tree-shaded streets.

During the hectic days of the World War, Newberry House was loaned by the family as Red Cross headquarters. Friends who had often been guests in its gold brocade drawing room then sewed elbow to elbow with foreign born women with work-clumsy fingers, who held in their hearts sorrow for an old, and love for a new country. When the last bandage was rolled, Red Cross had outgrown the old house, but ideas of community service which had arisen within its walls were nationally adopted. From the sorrows of the war, a new work, called occupational therapy, had come into being. Newberry House was again loaned, this time to the Junior League for their work with the handicapped. Cripples shuffled in and out a place that had once been a center of gaiety. The blind were taught to weave there, and books of Braille transcribed. Once more the good which originated there outgrew its walls and needed larger headquarters.

Still in the tradition of service, but with a gayer note, Mrs. Joy and the Newberry estate last year gave the use of the house to the Louise St. Clair chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, as chapter headquarters. Laughter and parties and the dancing of young feet returned to Newberry House, but carried with them also the ideals of community service and patriotic ideals for which the society is known. So many gifts came in for the house, and such active work of rehabilitation was done by the house committee, that it was decided recently, with the consent of Mrs. Joy, to extend the use of Newberry House as a patriotic center to other appropriate organizations. The U. S. Daughters of 1812 have taken an upper suite as state headquarters, and main floors are already booked for receptions, teas and meetings by the Dames of the Loyal Legion and similar patriotic and historical groups. Over the hall mantel an old clock with its Latin motto, "Carpe Diem," which has not run for twenty-five years, now ticks merrily on, as this house, which has been a landmark through six decades of Detroit history, now enters another significant phase.

Student Court to Keep Order at High School

All appointments were approved by the Senate, upper house of the student legislative body, and the Student Affairs Committee, an executive body composed of student and faculty leaders.

News Notes from the Grosse Pointe Schools

John R. Barnes, director of instruction in the Grosse Pointe public schools, was the speaker at last week's meeting of the Parent-Teacher association of the Mason school...

Teachers of the George Defer school and Fred Kerby, principal of the school, entertained at an informal reception for Dr. and Mrs. E. R. Van Kleeck recently.

Nearly 30 excursions to points of interest in connection with their school work have been made this fall by groups of children from the Richard school.

One group has taken a trip through a cemetery to see how butter is made. Another has made an excursion to a real farm. Pupils studying transportation have inspected and ridden on a ferry boat and a street car...

In learning about fire prevention one grade visited the fire station. The public library, the Zoological Park, a concert store, the airport, Alger House, and an automobile plant have been destinations of children seeking first-hand information.

Frequently the arrangements for visiting places of interest have been made by parents of Richard children. Likewise, parents have frequently provided the transportation of the class.

Such "field trips" are followed by reading, writing, and talking in the classroom concerning all that was seen and heard.

For the past five weeks the fifth and sixth grade reading classes of Trombly school have been studying about Holland, Mexico, and Russia. They have read books from their library and the Grosse-Pointe Public Library.

The children have brought in so many things that the reading room looks like a bit of old Mexico. Articles made in Russia and Holland are on exhibit, too. Some of the most interesting pieces from Holland and Mexico were put in the display case in the corridor.

Interesting scenes from library books they have read this fall were recently dramatized by members of the 4A class of Defer school for the benefit of the 4B class.

As a background for their skits the 4A's used a huge landscape in which were brownies carrying books. The pupils painted the backdrop themselves. "The Adventures of Reddy Fox" was presented by Jack Harrison, Bobby Busby, Billy Pappas, and David Logan.

Rita Gazarata gave a selection from the "Brownie Health Book."

Mary Ruth Kirsch and Clemenine Peleman contributed a skit from "Old Mr. Toad" to the program.

"Black Beauty" was represented in a scene presented by Wilfred Hope, Dale Ranse and Billy Pappas. David Skinner and Clark Stevenson enacted an episode from "Buffalo Bill," while Ronnie Williams had the responsibility of giving the audience an idea of what the book "Fluffy" is like.

"Old My Coyote" was presented by Tommy Alvarez and Edwin Schaub. Four girls, Joyce Newhall, Beverly Dale, Elizabeth Jones, and Kathryn French, gave a scene from "Noddy Goes a-Flowing." The last three of these girls also dramatized a portion of "Danny's Country Store."

A skit based on "Saucy Betsy" in which Joan Ferney and Edith Marko appeared, completed the program.

It was "activity period" in the 2B room at Trombly school. The new little boy watched Sally as she began to work.

"Would you like to finger-paint?" asked Sally politely.

The little boy nodded and then drew back. "I don't know how," he told her shyly.

"Oh, it's easy, Billy," Sally told him. "Watch and I'll show you." Sally took a large sheet of paper and dampened it thoroughly with a sponge.

"Now, see," she pointed out. "I press it down smoothly so there isn't a wrinkle anywhere. Then I take some finger-paint. It's just like easel paint only it's thicker. That's because there's cornstarch in it."

Sally frowned a little, thinking. "I guess I'll make an Indian picture," she decided at last. "Red will be nice for that."

She put a spoonful of red paint on the center of her paper and began to spread it quickly back and forth until the whole sheet was covered with an evenly blended coat of red. Billy stared at it, absorbed.

"Now, I'll make the picture," she told him.

In the middle of the paper she sketched a large triangle with her forefinger.

"There's the tepee, and here—" she made a spiral to the upper corner, "here is the smoke from the Indian's fire. There's a warrior—see the feathers in his bonnet—coming from behind this tree." She sketched a tree in quickly, and then another near the foreground of the picture.

"Now, Billy, see if you can tell what time of year this picture tells about," said Sally.

Billy studied the paper a moment. "I know, I know," he cried. "It's fall. I can see the leaves falling off the trees."

Sally smiled. "That's right," she said, "and now I'm going to tack it up carefully so the edges won't curl when it dries."

Billy reached for a piece of paper and the sponge.

"I'm going to make a picture too!" he shouted. "A green one with a fish in the river and maybe some reeds growing by the shore."

He set to work happily. "I like finger-painting," he said to himself as he rubbed the green paint over his dampened paper. "Finger-painting is fun!"

All of Billy's small friends in the 1B, 1A, and 2B rooms at Trombly school agree with him. Finger-painting is fun. Was there ever a child anywhere who could resist the lure of bright colored paint, especially paint that he could put his fingers in? Finger-painting is easy to do and satisfying too, for there are no failures as there sometimes are with brush painting. If you make a mistake or change your mind, you simply rub out what you've done and start over again!

Billy's teacher is glad that Billy thinks finger-painting is fun, for she knows that while he sketches contentedly he is acquiring the foundation for many splendid art techniques. He is learning to blend colors, to use large rhythmic arm movements, to work quickly and easily. He is being stimulated to the enjoyment of creative work and, best of all, he is gaining confidence in his own ability to use art as a medium of expression.

In the audience gathered at the Children's Theater for the dramatization of "The Little Princess" on October 24 presented by Clare Tree Major were 24 pupils from the Defer school. Thus it was that Defer children heard a full report of the charming play.

Sara, the richest girl in the boarding school, was called "the little princess" because she was so generous with her dolls and her candy. But one day came the news that Sara's father was dead and her fortune gone. Sara was deprived of her beautiful dolls and made to sleep in an attic. Finally, with the turn of fortune's wheel Sara again became a rich little girl.

Defer children who attended the play were: Kendall Wickman, Joyce Newhall, Jeanne Quall, Phyllis Collins, Newhall, Jeanne Quall, Phyllis Collins, Ruth Stickle, Milton Henkel, Lois Phillips, Dorothy Comerford, Patricia Slowin, Joan Heise, Ann Shenefeld, Patricia Sibbert, Katherine French, Patricia Shenefeld, Edith Marko, Elizabeth Jones, Joan Ferney, Helen Zissis, Marilyn Kaiser, Doris Duncan, Ruth Engel, Marjorie Moeschell, and Mary Ellen Jenks.

The Border Cities League debate season will open for Grosse Pointe High school when the varsity affirmative debate squad meets Mt. Clemens Thursday in the high school auditorium at 3:30 o'clock.

The debate question is: "Resolved: that the United States should establish an alliance with Great Britain."

Returning veterans on the debate squad are George Bosch, Fred Huffman, and Madeline Smith. The new debaters are Carl Gruhitz, Marilyn Bell, and Olga Gruhitz.

The team has been working hard since September 20 in order to improve upon the showing of last year's squad which finished the season in third place with a percentage of .667.

On November 17, Grosse Pointe will go to Fordson to debate a strong Fordson team. November 22 will see the Blue Devils take on Mt. Clemens there. Fordson will come here on December 9 to close the league season.

A run-off debate will be held on January 9 to determine the winning team in the league.

Mr. Leroy Selmeier, coach, has high hopes for this year's squad, but would like to have more ninth and tenth grade students on the team to gain for experience for future years.

Dainty little tea aprons, cookies, and fruit cakes will soon be offered for sale by the girls of the high school home-making class.

The materials for the aprons will be dimity and broadcloth. The broadcloth has little Mexican figures in it, and the dimity has a small dot. As soon as the materials arrive, the girls will begin working on them and orders will be taken. Anyone may buy these aprons.

Fancy fruit cakes and cookies will be made and sold around Thanksgiving and Christmas. These also may be bought by anyone who wishes to buy them.

The money received from these sales will be used to purchase new equipment for the apartment. The intended purchases include table and floor lamps, a good grade of crockery, and a few other things which are badly needed.

Report cards will be marked for the first time this semester at Grosse Pointe High school on Friday, November 11, announces Paul A. Rehms, principal.

On that day each pupil will be given a blank report in his home room, to which he reports the first thing in the morning. He will present this card to each of his teachers as he goes to classes during the day. The teachers will record the mark of the student together with their signatures on the report cards.

Pupils are then asked to take their cards home and show them to their parents or guardians, one of whom must sign the card in the space provided. Report cards are to be returned to the home room teacher by the pupils the first of the following week.

No citizenship marks will be given on the report cards to be marked next week. The marks appearing on that card are based on scholarship only. In December, however, high school teachers will issue the new "personality report" to parents, in which they indicate their estimate of the student's status in eleven traits of character and personality.

Kerby school playground has a new piece of equipment—a horizontal ladder. This is one of the most useful devices for swinging and stretching exercises and developing the abdominal and chest muscles. The girls and boys are being instructed in the proper use of the ladder and are observing the following points:

- 1. Mounting with knees together, toes straight, elbows straight by side, chin in, head up, bend the knees, spring from toes.
2. Dismounting—to stop swing of body by a short pull up of body, release the grasp, land on the toes with the knees bent.
3. Grasps — front grasp, reverse, combination.

Lilian T. Mowrer to Be Town Hall Speaker

Lillian T. Mowrer, author of the recent best-seller, "Journalist's Wife," now in its eighth printing, will be the Detroit Town Hall speaker in the Fisher Theatre, Wednesday morning, November 16, at 11 o'clock. With 20 years' experience in the political arenas of Europe—years packed with danger, excitement and drama, Mrs. Mowrer came to this country direct from the scene of the recent European crisis for a month's lecture tour which opened brilliantly in Chicago October 21 before the Council of Foreign Relations.

In her talk, "Where Is Europe Going?" Mrs. Mowrer brings the keen political insight and experience gained in 20 years at the news fronts of Italy, Germany and France with her famous husband, Edgar Ansel Mowrer, American foreign correspondent and Pulitzer Prize winner. In Italy during the Black Shirt uprisings, the Mowrers saw the march on Rome by the Fascists. Years later, in Germany, they saw the Nazis begin their struggle for power. When Edgar Mowrer wrote his book, "Germany Turns the Clock Back," they were forced out of Germany by Hitler. Mowrer would not submit to the gag of censorship.

Assigned to France, the Mowrers saw the tide of fascism rise for the third time, saw it stemmed by the Front Populaire with Leon Blum at the helm. An English girl with a background of stage experience, a brilliant and witty mind and a keen interest in and knowledge of politics, Mrs. Mowrer has achieved tremendous popularity in America through her book, "Journalist's Wife," which has established her as a foremost commentator on world affairs. Tickets for her lecture are on sale now at Grinnell's box office, Randolph 1124.
