Grosse Exaggerations

The plush trains that travel Southward are NOT out of Detroit. The one that we were on was still sporting those under-stuffed green seats with Prussian hair-cuts. Maybe we're spoiled after last year's trip to the Coast on the Chief. We hope that last statement will make up (to the California Royces and the Shropshire Kinicks), for all we hope to say about Florida sun.

When we arrived at Palm Beach, a forlorn looking 'darky' orchestra was at the station playing "Florida The Moon and You". As we buttoned our fur coat tighter about our neck, we remarked to the porter that we thought it was darned nice of them. He allowed as how "day been doin'."

But for years and when trains leaves beach, day plays "Happy days is Here Again. He cast a critical eye at our 1910 trunk, hoisted it onto his back and said, "Miss Babba Hutton, she have thirty false trunks". We thought it quite immaterial and irrelevant.

We didn't waste any time covering ground. After we got settled in our house whose rear end faces the Lake and whose front stoop is practically in the Ocean, we took ourselves to Worth Avenue. For those of you who speak old Floridaian, Worth Ave. boasts some of the swank shops that are found on New York's Fifth Avenue. And this brings us to the

Ladies Department
In spite of the fact that the Hair Stylists continue the struggle to "up" lady's hair, every woman here wades forty, wears it down and we MEAN down! The young have even forsaken garments for straight, shoulder-length tresses held back from the fringe with beads, combs, or four years ago, women had to wear stockings with their bathing suits or go to the Palm house. Today, the only sight that attracts attention is a woman wearing a dress and hat. Another of Florida chic—ery, is the dog craze. Everyone who IS someone, totes a dog under one arm or on a leash. Anything goes—from those easy hairless jobs to grand dances. Society photographers are another familiar sight on Worth Avenue. Yesterday, we saw three of them 'snapping' Mrs. Alfred Gwyn Vanderbilt (and dog) as she strode into Saks Fifth Avenue wearing printed silk pajamas, white sweater, yellow shoes and dark glasses.

The Scene
Water, water, everywhere, many drops to drink and many places in which to drink them; People, people, all hours of the day night, unharmed, casual, gay and festive; stark white Jamaican houses dotting the landscape and fast replacing the heavy, old, Spanish type of house that used to be so popular; coconut palms as tall as the Buhl Building; flame vines crawling over gates and walls; hibiscus, oleander and poinsettias growing all over the place; snappy looking cars with license plates from Maine to Cal—oops! we mean Oregon; basket chairs, bicycled by Amoses and Andys; wide, palm lined boulevards; jungle trails along the Lake; sailboats, yachts and the fishing fleet; the Atlantic Ocean, blue, green, beautiful and treacherous; miles of pearly white beach, sprinkled with people, cabanas, colorful umbrellas and NO paper bags OR banana skins; the same moon that hangs in the sky over Detroit—but somehow, much more romantic, the tang of salt air mixed with the haunting fragrance of night-blooming jasmine—a typical, tropical Paradise.

Vocational Possibilities Of Police Work Told By Chief Drysdale

Cooperating with the Grosse Pointe High School vocational program, reports from various field trips to students last Tuesday morning. The field covered were law enforcement, automotive and sanitary engineering, insurance, secretarial work, law enforcement, and dentistry.

James C. Drysdale, chief of police of Grosse Pointe Park, spoke to a large group of students on the vocational Drysdale emphasized the importance of learning and gaining knowledge in the service of the police. The requirements for becoming a police officer he named as being a high school graduate and a near perfect physique. "The education you get, the more adapted you become to the public's method of work," stated Mr. T. E. Kirshner, automotive body engineer from the Budd Manufacturing Company. He believes the other great asset other than education is the knack of knowing how to "cultivate a winning personality." "With this year classes are practically doubled in the engineering field," stated Mr. Kirshner.

Bacteriology was the subject on which Mr. J. H. Schriever, in charge of the hospital biological animal industry division at Parke Davis, spoke. He said that all those who don't care for sciences or mathematics should keep out of this field. The modern drug store was described as a "second class hardware department."

"I am talking journalism today; you will be journalism tomorrow," said Mr. Joyce-Hovos of the Detroit Free Press staff in his talk in which he discussed qualifications for modern journalism and opportunities in it as a career. "Experience plus continuity and imagination are one's best assets in becoming a reporter," he said. Mr. Hovos believes that a good liberal arts education is of more value than technical specialization.

Miss Eleanor Demster, member of the high school office staff, spoke to those who were interested in secretarial work. Miss Demster stressed the importance of a good education in this field.

The subject of insurance was explained by Mr. H. K. Schoch of the Aetna Life Insurance Company. Mr. Schoch showed the wide scope of business and the range of opportunities for men of intellect, of different races, of various creeds, and from any walk of life. The greatest factor in success in this industry, concluded Mr. Schoch, "Cultivate a smile, think right, be good-tempered, and train yourself for your work," he advised.

TREND OF EVENTS

The Canadian do not know what they owe the good old United States. Few of them, it may be said, attribute the blame of German raids on the Canadian coast to Germany's desire to refrain from any action which could rouse the wrath of Uncle Sam. Yet, this is quite true.

President Roosevelt has already stated that "we would not stand idly by if Canadian territory were violated by a foreign power."

Premier Neville Chamberlain is reported to have admonished Sir John Simon, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, for having announced that Britain is spending $1,000,000 per hour so far, in this war. Not that the Treasurer of the Empire gave the wrong figures, but because the Laborites exploited this announcement to their advantage. It appears that the British government is encountering no trouble finding 24 million dollars a day for war purposes, whereas it could discover no means to help to the poverty-stricken areas, especially that of Wales, in peacetime.

The government that argued that it had no money. Yet, today it has all the money it can spend. Strange enough, isn't it?

It is an error to consider this war as a direct result of the Treaty of Versailles since the Treaty of Locarno became the revised basis of British, French and German relations after 1925. This agreement was not imposed upon Germany. And, Germany's delegates only signed the pact because it corrected what injustices the Versailles Treaty may have caused to the Reich.

This is one thing we should not forget. Newsweek says the Allies plan to extend the French frontier to the Rhine at Coblenz. The same publication further affirms there will be no demilitarized Rhine zone.

French sources contend there will be no demilitarized Rhine zone. It will be remembered that the scrapping of the German pocket-battleship Graf Spee, closely followed by the self-destruction of the luxury liner Columbus, has been interpreted in this column as a sign that Hitler did not (Continued on Page Three) Motion pictures which Sir Hubert will show next Sunday include natural color shots in the Antarctic, scenes of grinding ice, Eskimo life in the Arctic caribou polar bears, walrus, whales and penguins. His motion pictures from the air show icebergs crashing into the sea.

Why Corrective Legislation Is Needed

Here are the figures for all to see and consider: The State's payroll reached an all-time high in 1939, totaling $25,623,000 or more than 17,000 persons. This was $329,719 more than the previous year. The number of employes was more than 5,100 above the level of 1935.

The State's deficit was at least $30,051,000 last July 1 and will be about $2,246,000 greater next July 1. There can be little question that Michigan needs, and that the taxpayers will force, the adoption of laws to provide: (1) centralized and tighter collection of revenue from existing sources; (2) improved budgetary control of all expenditures; and (3) uniform reporting by local units to the State before grants-in-aid, the present source of the great rise in cost of government, are determined.

There is nothing and should be nothing of a partisan political nature in connection with drafting and passing such legislation. Such desirable reforms in state and county government too often become entangled with political ambitions or purposes. Abolition of useless or overlapping public jobs is a fitting example.

But the people are tired of waste and mounting costs and they know that expenditures can be controlled if the actual facts as to income and outgo are reported accurately and clearly from month to month.

Grosse Exaggerations?

(Continued from Page One) The butler poured the champagne, he announced to each guest in turn, that it was Peiper Heidsieck— (we don't guarantee the spelling).

When he left the dining room, the hostess said, "I'm going to fire that man! I've told him once, I've told him a dozen times to mention the YEAR. I believe this is 1921." We all drank a loud toast to the hostess and her champagne and silently congratulated the butler on his forthcoming dismissal.

In case you've missed it, Walter Winchell has suggested the following as his epitaph: "Here lies Winchell in the dirt he loved so well." Overheard on the beach: Two women about sixty years old were talking about St. Petersburg. One said, "You know it used to be a great matrimonial centre. I remember years ago when I was there, I was sitting in the park one day, when suddenly a real old man came up to me and said, 'Are you seeking?' I gave him one haughty look and said, 'Yes. But not anyone as old as you.'"

And now for a quick dip in the Ocean before the sun wears out.

TRUE FACT

PEOPLE sometimes seem to feel that tact means insincerity and dishonesty, or that it is an unimportant quality. Refusing to cultivate it, they sometimes cause others hurt feelings or embarrassment, which might have been avoided.

A dictionary defines tact as "wise discernment of what is appropriate to do or say in dealing with others; peculiar ability to deal with others without giving offense, or so as to win good will, especially in difficult situations. . . . delicate and sympathetic perception of what is to be done in a given circumstance." A certain surface politeness may be simply the result of intelligent control and breeding, but the love that is unfeeling and truly graceful and commensurate at all times is based on the understanding of God.

Tact is consideration, thoughtfulness of others, and it is closely related to loving-kindness. It approaches the viewpoint of the other person and tries to apply the Golden Rule (Matthew 7:12), "Whatever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

Tact may sometimes be shown in simply refusing to do or say anything which, if said or done, would accomplish no good. It may be shown in speaking an encouraging word to one who is facing a difficult situation. It may be evidenced in an interesting observation which will turn someone's attention from himself and put him at his ease. It avoids unnecessary controversy, chooses a tactful rather than a combative attitude towards those with whom one comes in contact.

How true, did Jesus' life exemplify the prophet's word (Isaiah 42:1, 2): "Behold my servant. . . . a bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench." The "bruised reed," that which has already been hurt, even if by its own fault, may sometimes be won back to wisdom and courage, activity and strength, by gentle kindness. "Here blunt condemnation of the fault would fail. The 'smoking flax'—that meekness which is the finally best, most tender and wise encouragement. One of the lovely qualities that aids our work with others is graciousness. Well may we pray in the words of a loved hymn (Christian Science Hymnal, No. 88): "Gracious Spirit, dwell with me: I myself would gracious be." Tact does not tell all it knows; it knows its own business. It is greatly needed in all our organization work. The business official or a committee or church worker who uses tactful methods in dealing with others, succeeds in inspiring all to better service than does the inconsiderate or the unwisely outspoken individual, whose intention may be praiseworthy. People occasionally believe that they are tactless, and that there is nothing they can do about it but regret the fact. There is no reality in crude or brusque or thoughtless words or deeds. . . . One should claim for himself the ability to express every good and strong and lovely characteristic which reflects God. Sometimes it takes much work and prayer to demonstrate them. It may take patience and persistence and steadfast effort to do so, but as impatience, thoughtlessness, selfishness, and narrowness of vision are replaced by their opposites, man in God's likeness becomes ever clearer. Every earnest person wants his thinking and acting to bless others. He can always be sure that they will if he is reflecting God. Not to condemn evil but not to condemn persons; not to think of self but to think of others; not to be afraid, repressed, or self-conscious, but sympathetically alert to the problems of others and quick to help to meet them—earnest desire such as this will be expressed with the graciousness of love. As we turn to Jesus' life and words for examples, we see what tact he used in illustrating his teaching by parables on subjects with which his particular audience was especially familiar. . . . "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy states (pp. 476, 477): "Jesus believed in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortals appear to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick." With such a view of man, one could not be other than loving, gracious, and considerate. And with these qualities in our consciousness, one's tender, thoughtful consideration, and intelligent helpfulness will be inspired, true helpfulness.—The Christian Science Monitor.

expect to win the war.

As a corollary, well-informed sources abroad confirm a news story dated from Lausanne, Switzerland, and carried lately by one of the big New York dailies.

Nazi bigwigs are at present very un-manny's war with the Allies. Their wives certain of the final outcome of Ger-have already been evacuated to safety in neutral lands.

Peaceful Switzerland is the country the Nazi leaders have chosen as the ideal haven of refuge for their families. Except for Frau von Ribbentrop, who is believed to be in South America, the topflight hostesses of Nazi official-dom are under cover somewhere along the shores of Lake Geneva.

Some day the German people will be "too hot to handle" and those of their husbands who will be fortunate enough to slip across the Swiss border in time, will join them there.

The liberty-loving Swiss beam at reports of this exodus, for, so long as these Frauen take refuge in their country, there is little danger of any Ger-man aggression. Unless some day, as they themselves say with a significant wink, the Nazi leaders in person make a dash into Switzerland.

But again, that day the Swiss people will have nothing to fear. The war will be over. And, the Germans will be so busy figuring out the cost of Hitler's dictatorship that they won't have time for new aggressions.

Screen Door Grilles
The possibilities of decorative effects of ornamental grilles used in connection with screen doors are frequently overlooked by home owners. In front doors having leaded glass side lights, a grille simulating a leaded effect in the screen door would carry out the general character of the entrance. Aside from their ornamental qualities, the grilles also serve to protect and strengthen the screening.

King 'Killed' Into Westminster
King George V of England used to tell this story on himself. Once when, as a lad, he was serving on a naval training ship, the captain handed him the sextant and asked him to find the ship's position in latitude and longitude. When, after quite a mathematical struggle, the future king turned in his reckoning, the captain glanced at it a moment and then said gravely: "Your Royal Highness, please remove your cap!" In answer to the young sailor's look of astonishment, the captain explained: "According to your figures we are about to sail into Westminster Abbey!"

Moderating With Glass
Many home owners, in modernizing their houses, are making provisions for larger glass areas which bring life to a dull or slightly outmoded building. The free entry of sunlight and air into the home, from attic to the basement, is being accomplished in many homes through the increasing use of corner windows, glassed-in dining alcoves, french doors, and even room-length walls of glass.

Wonder Windows
Winter egg production was stepped up 75 per cent in a New Jersey egg-laying contest, by the installation of cellulose glass windows in the poultry house, which allows all the healthgiving violet rays from the sun to pass through, reports the Country Home Magazine. Such glass is now being widely used on poultry houses, porches, dairy barns, dog kennels, hog houses, and hothouses. It is made with a strong, wire-mesh base, and can be purchased from any hardware dealer. It is easily installed and not expensive.

Grosse Pointe Library

Here are some recent additions to the Grosse Pointe Public Library: Caribbean Treasurer, by Ivan T. Sanderson. Along with his pencil drawings and his fascinating descriptions Mr. Sanderson, a British zoologist, tells the story of his travels in Jamaica, Trinidad, Haiti, and Dutch Guiana. Science, Today and Tomorrow, by Waldeman Kaempfert. Mr. Kaempfert discusses the social aspects of science, life in the solar system, the mystery of the atom, electricity, etc. This makes interesting reading for students of science as well as laymen. Music as a Profession, by Howard Taubman. This book should appeal to those who intend to become composers, conductors, teachers, or students of music. It has many practical suggestions, and discusses the problems and opportunities in the present day musical world. No Arms, No Armor, by Robert Henriques. A novel which deals with life in the English army. No Wind of Blame, by Georgette Heyer. This is one of the best of the new detective stories. Bride of a Thousand Cedars, by Bruce Lancaster. A pleasantly romantic tale which is a story of Bermuda in the Civil War days.

And The Bridegroom Wore . . .

THE bride can wear practically any kind of wedding dress—but the bridegroom's outfit is ruled by a strict convention. For the informal ceremony, he may wear a white shirt and stiff collar with a dark business suit, but for the formal wedding he must really dress up with every detail of his attire dictated by the uncompromising fashion authorities. For 1940, his choice is limited to the following attire for the formal winter afternoon wedding: A well cut morning coat and dark gray striped trousers are the initial musts. Absolutely nothing else will do.

White pique waistcoats are gaining favor, the decided contrast of light with the dark suit being both neat and flattering. A white boutonniere adds another white accent. In selecting the black silk necktie for his wing collar, the bridegroom is permitted a broken or unbroken single white stripe, or some unobtrusive pattern. Once again, he may choose gloves of white buckskin or gray suede in a light shade, but no other color or material. If spats are worn, they must be the same color as the gloves. Low black calfskin shoes are always correct, and the extra-soft soles for a nicely groomed appearance when kneeling at the altar. Best highway boots, a black silk hat, is required with a suit-way coat. In case is the final accent that completes the costume.

WINTER WEDDING ETIQUETTE. John Raby and Mary Highy pose in appropriate formal wedding clothes as "Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davis" of the romantic CBS radio show, "When A Girl Marries."

Gas From Coal

Gas made from Welsh anthracite is used to operate a motorbus which has completed successful tests in Stockport, England. The necessary plant imported from France takes up five back rows in a 31-seater single-deck bus. On the trial run in the hilly country around Marple and Mellor the bus traveled at the normal speed of a bus using petroleum, except that it was slightly slower on the exceptionally steep grades. The tests have been particularly encouraging because they promise a new source of consumption for Welsh coal and because, with a war to fight, Britain will have unlimited supplies of power for home service.

Armed Wood A tree, intended for use as posts, poles, sills and other frame construction work, can be rendered rotproof and insectproof, if it is "unleached" while still alive. Saw a notch entirely around the tree, place a rubber collar below the notch and fill it with a solution containing six pounds of copper sulphate or zinc chloride dissolved in three gallons of water. The upward movement of the sap will carry the preservative from the notch to the topmost branches within two weeks. When the tree is cut, it is thoroughly saturated with the preservative. Considerable time is required during the year except during frost-free weather, but are best preserved during the active growing season.

Debt To Birds Is Demonstrated

From nature's wings of flight, the herings of the birds, man has learned many of the principles embraced in modern aviation. This will be graphically shown in the new traveling air show "From Magic Carpet to Rocket Ships," of the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, Penn., which will be presented here on Saturday, Jan. 27, 1940, at Pierce Junior High School, under the auspices of Parent-Teachers.

Among the birds, as among man-made aircraft, are different types of fliers, including weight-carriers, endurance fliers, the speed type, and the acrobats. These different types, as exemplified in certain birds, will be shown with the aid of slides and ultra-high speed motion pictures, and the corresponding types of aircraft will be demonstrated by flying models.

In a rapid-fire sequence of 30 demonstrations and experiments, the history of man's conquest of the air from the early attempts to fly with balloons and gliders to the modern accomplishments of powered planes will be reviewed. Aerodynamic demonstrations made with the aid of a wind-tunnel will reveal the principles of streamlining as applied to geometrical shapes as well as to modern vehicles of land and air transportation.

Go East Young Man! At the age of 14, Horace Greeley became an apprentice in the printing office of the Northern Spectator at Putney, Vt. He later went to New York and secured a job on the Spirit of the Times. In December, 1822, he and Francis Bray, former editor of the office, left it and established a printing business under the name of Greeley & Stacy. After Stacy's death, Greeley and the former's brother-in-law, James Winchester, were partners and in March, 1824, they began a weekly literary newspaper which they named the New Yorker.
