A Cappella Choir Sings for Rotary

Members of the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club heard the high school a cappella choir at their regular meeting Monday at the Whittier hotel.

The choir presented a program of varied selections ranging from Negro spirituals to humorous airs. Soloists included Edith Walther who sang the French air, "By the Moon's If you wish, you may send in your sang the French air, by the Moon's Pale Light," and Elizabeth Pratt who carried the solo part in a chor-15224 East Jefferson Avenue.

Entries for this big mitt meet are now available at the CYO office on the fifth floor of the Chancery building, 1234 Washington boulevard, at the Detroit headquarters of the Michigan A.A.U., 131 Adams avenue, West, in the Tuller hotel building, or from any of the leading amateur fight centers in Detroit and vicinity. All entries must be properly filled out and returned to the CYO office not later than midnight Saturday, Dec. 20.

Eligible for the tourney are all Catholic boys in the archdiocese between the ages of 16 and 25. Youngsters who wish to compete but have no place in which to train, are asked to notify the CYO office (CH. 3367) immediately. Arrangements will be made for all unattached scrappers to work out at the nearest big amateur fight center where they will have the advantage of complete equipment and expert coaching. According to present plans, seven oreliminary shows will be staged at parish centers to cut the big starting field down to the 34 championship contenders for the fistic finale-on Jan, 23. The tournament this year will be guided by the same code that has made the CYO clout carnival the model amateur fight tournament of the midwest. Chief of these regulations is that which recognizes three classes of competitors.

Class A will embrace all amateur scrappers who have competed in the open class in previous sanctioned tournaments, or who have advanced to the semi-finals of the novice class in any previous sanctioned tournament (except the Class C bracket of the CYO). Any mittster who has won two previous CYO open titles will be barred from further competition.

Class B will be open to ring warriors who have competed in a previous sanctioned tournament or exhibition but who have not advanced to the semi-finals (again, except in the Class C level of the CYO). Class C will include all mittsters who have never competed in any previous sanctioned tournaments or exhibitions. The Class C bracket was introduced by the CYO several years ago in an effort to level competition, and to give the greenestnovice an equal chance with the most experienced veterans. Whether a boy has ever fought before or not, he has a real chance for a cham, pionship in the CYO meet.

Blue Devil Cagers To Face Roseville High

Roseville high school will provide the basketball opposition for the Blue Devil cagers when they inaugurate a new season tomorrow night, Dec. 5 on the home court. The game will start at 8:15.

Five veterans will be back to provide the nucleus of this year's team, who will be out to better last season's bright record of 11 wins and five losses. These lettermen are Guards Mike Ware and Tom Ireland; Forwards Glen Holt and Charles Lee and Center Louis Charvat.

Ireland, Lee and Charvat will graduate at the end of the first semester.

Three other squad members saw varsity service last year although not enough to receive varsity awards. These are Doug Mackenzie, Doug Graham and Gene Lamont.

Making up the rest of the squad are Bob Brown, Joe Beyer. Bob Everett, Pat Wallace, Bob Beck, Fred Gallagher, Don Jiruka, Bill Hanson, and Robert Harrison. The first six saw experience last season; Preceding the varsity tilt will be a reserve game between the reserve squads of both schools, starting at 7:15.

The squad will again be coached by Harvey Christenson, who will carry a large squad of 25 boys. This large squad is necessitated by the Border Cities League rule, started last year, that says boys cannot play in consecutive quarters.

Returning from last year's successful reserve team, which won 10 and dropped but three are Dave Walton, Bob Bridge, Stu Fraser, Gordon Lichtward, Elmer Jacobson, and Dick Lowmaster,

THE TOY CLUB

Working quietly, without fanfare or personal publicity, the little Christmas charitable organization known as The Toy Club has been doing a splendid job for Grosse Pointers who have year after year enrolled their names on its membership list.

Organized in 1933, The Toy Club has furnished toys and candy to thousands of underprivileged children at Christmas time. Some of these children were in families, who were temporarily in straitened circumstances. Many others were or phans, or crippled children in institutions. Geographical limits are not recognized by the club and never has a request for a toy for a poor child been refused, regardless of where the child lived.

This year plans have been made to remember a number of elderly persons, who because of having no relatives, might be forgotten at Christmas time. A growing plant will be sent to them. Patients at the Marine hospital will also be remembered. Books and games to while away the weary hours will be sent to them.

The Toy Club raises funds through sale of memberships. The sum of 50 cents entitles any Grosse Pointer to a share in the wonderful work of helping others less fortunate than themselves have a happy Christmas.

Think this over, because you will probably be approached by a police officer or fireman with an invitation to join the ranks of this little local charitable club. If you join up, your Lewis - Enemy Christmas this year will be a happier one.

APPLICATION BLANKS

Application blanks are the bane of many people's existence.

It would be interesting to know how many men and women have decided against a government career because of mental rebellion against filling in answers to quantities of complicated questions, but undoubtedly, if the Civil Service Commission checked up, it would find records of millions of blanks which were sent out on request, and never heard from again.

Even in large industrial concerns, where questionnaires are simple compared with a government questionnaire, there is a high rate of applicants for jobs who never are heard from again after they are given an application blank.

The personnel manager of a large industrial concern whose department sees several thousand girls each month who ice award for the American who has are seeking jobs, said that when he first began that work he done most for Hitler. became greatly embarrassed over the number of girls who never came back. He thought it must be something he did or said which made them decide. "I'll never work for that company!"

For, he explained, he would interview one girl after another who seemed to be a likely prospect for his company, she would seem to want a job and he would then give her an application-blank to take home and fill out. That's the last he would not want to be tied up with a revoever hear from her. Later, he found this was the experience lutionist who writes to the President of all personnel men. Application blanks, they agree, are one of the biggest hurdles a job hunter must get over. Part of the reason for that probably is physical laziness. But there's more to it than that. There is a feeling of rebellion on the part of most people toward being classified or catalogued, or regimented. We don't like being little frogs in big puddles or small cogs in a big machine.

Among the large anti-Lewis group in congress it is felt that Mr. Lewis and John Johnson. Margaret Veraccepted the arbitration plan only because he felt certain that the board would vote in favor of the closed shop - the only issue in the coal strike which was responsible directed by Miss Gertrude Hunt. for a loss in steel production equal to the amount used in building 30 destrovers.

The members named to the board by the President, which was acceptable to Mr. Lewis, were Mr. Lewis himself, Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the United States Steel corporation, and Dr. John R. Steelman, director of the United States conciliation service. It was more or less taken for granted that the actual decision on the closed shop would rest entirely in Doctor Steelman's hands - since Mr. Fairless would vote against a closed shop and Mr. Lewis Lewis, of course, would be for it. Since the President had said that the government will never order a closed shop, Doctor Steelman disassociated himself from the government while serving on the board. To many in Washington this seemed a rather flimsy technicality for making it possible for a closed shop to be approved. It was feared that the President was using this as a means of saving his face while giving in to Mr. Lewis.

For it was generally believed Mr. Lewis considered himself the victor when a man of Doctor Steelman's reputation of sympathy for coal miners was named to the board.

To draw attention away from his apparent yielding to Mr. Lewis, the President gave a partial "go ahead" signal for congress to work on legislation for curbing strikes. Following conference with the President, Rep. Mary Norton of the house labor committee, said the President had not suggested specific legislation but had left it up to the committee. Saying that it was unfortunate that labor had forced the need for legislation, Mrs. Norton stated that comething has to be done about it and expressed the hope that the committee would frame a bill that will not destroy labor's gains made during the past eight years, but that ported to be with the British army will compel labor to understand that

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR

When no one in this town squabbles with anyone else in town for the period of a year, I think it is safe to predict that the world can from then on look forward to lasting peace.

For most of the causes of war, if reduced to simplest terms, grow out of the same kind of ill-temper, poor sportsmanship, misunderstanding, greediness and bullying which make neighbors stop speaking, wives and husbands seek divorces, and boys start swinging at one another's jaw.

Nations have the same characteristics as the people who make up those nations. So long as people are impatient, easily the lot of coal miners. He is priangered, quick to jump at wrong conclusions and anxious to get revenge, nations will continue to play those same roles.

Ignoring for the moment the issues of this war or any other war, there is little doubt that the permanent end of war awaits the time when all people will live according to the commandment, "Love thy neighbor."

How can we expect nations to remain at peace as long as many of us are unable to solve the petty problems of keeping peace in our homes, our towns and among rival groups in our own nation?

For the past year, while there has been growing demand for curbs on strikes, it has been generally conceded by congress that no legislation could be put through withbut the approval of the President. Now that he has approved the "framing of legislation" it is expected that this will be attended to quickly, but there are many congressmen who believe there will be further delays in actual passage unless the President urges such legislation in stronger terms than he has used so far. The final decision in the threatened railroad employes' strike is expected to determine the President's next move.

It is felt possible that labor difficulties will add to the public demand for a ceiling on wages, a subject which most congressmen would like to avoid, but which has been proposed in conjunction with the price control bill on which they are being forced to act. It is held improbable that a wage ceiling will be included in price legislation, although many congressmen admit privately' that they favor such a curb. But, as in so many measures of this kind, congress fears the repercussions from purpose of explaining to you things voters who consider themselves hurt by legislation.

Mental freedom, continuity 0 health and happiness are conditions that every human being instinctively desires but has seldom seemed to attain in any satisfactory measure. For centuries men have worked and struggled for freedom. They have sought in many directions for health and they have tried devious ways to find happiness, but the evidence before us today would indicate that no degree of success has attended humanity's search for these legitimate and altogether desirable states of

It must be apparent to anyone who thoughtfully considers the subject that, if the race had demonstrated the necessary intelligence and understanding, it would have long since attained its goal, and that what is needed is obviously more light-enlightenment. The progress of humanity seems to be slow, but it is inevitable; and it appears in direct proportion to its acquirement of greater spirituality. In other words, the progress of the race is really dependent on its increased spiritual understanding and its abandonment of false religious concepts. Therefore in coming before you tonight, with the message of Christian Science, it is encouraging and reassuring to recall the words of Isaiah: "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined." Today there are thousands of people who for years have stumbled and walked in mental darkness, and who, figuratively and literally, have lived in the shadow and dread of death, but who are now emerging into light through a rational and intelligent understanding of God, and of what being really means.

It is clear that great discoveries and light along any line come to those most mentally prepared to receive them. An inventor receives the unfoldment of progressive mechanical ideas because his thought has been turned in the specific direction to receive them. So it is with spiritual revelation. That state of consciousness most devoid of ma-. teriality will be the one most naturally receptive to the spiritual impartations of God to man. Mary Baker Eddy, the revered Discoverer of Christian Science, had from childwhood been a seeker after God. Her thought inclined naturally towards the things of Spirit; in other words, she was a spiritually-minded woman. It is not surprising, there-fore, that the great facts of God and divine Being, as set forth in the teachings of Christian Science, should have appeared to her. They ally ready to receive them, and in our own study they will appear to you and me in proportion to our readiness to take them in. The Revelator, describing this call of the Christ at the door of consciousness. wrote, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." Frior to her discovery, Mrs. Eddy had for twenty years or more been endeavoring to trace all of what might be termed physical effects back to a mental cause. In 1866. however, culminating in her recovery from a severe injury and at a time when she was not expected to she perceived the great and live, irrefutable fact that God. or causation, is Mind-that divine Mind is the source of all existence or being: that God is self-existent Cause, and that, therefore, all real or actual being is in and of God, and that all true being or existence must be an expression or evidence of one infi-nite Mind or intelligence. The revelation of the Science of Being did not annear at once in its entirety to Mrs. Eddy. It came more or less gradually, but she was continuously conscious that back of the unfolding ideas was divine power. I is important also to note that the appearing to her of these great spiritual facts was supported by reason and demonstration. That Mrs. Eddy perceived that her concept of God was intelligent. rational, and logical, and most important of all, that it was usable. practical, and could be demonstrated in the ordinary affairs of human life. In a certain sense, it may be said that everyone who takes up the study of Christian Science follows the same course. First, there is a perception of its truth; second, its reasonableness appears; and then inevitably we discover and demonstrate its practicality. A tree is known by its fruit, and the fruitage of Mrs. Eddy's great life of service to the race is witnessed in the grateful testimony of the thousands who have been healed and regenerated through the study and application of Christian Science As far as you and I are concerned. any so-called science remains a slosed book if we do not understand it, and no science can be said to be really understood unless it is studied, applied, and in some measure demonstrated. The science of chemistry would remain entirely abstract if experiments were not made in the laboratory, and only those who go into the laboratory and actually demonstrate their knowledge of chemistry may be called practical chemists. This leads me to say something to you regarding Christian Science which I hope may be helpful, and it is this: If you really expect to grow and unfold spiritually and to get out of this Science al. the blessings that are there for you, you will have to be a student and not a mere reader of Science and Health, the textbook of Christian Science. Mrs. Eddy called it a textbook, and that means that its contents need to be pondered and quietly assimilated through reason and spiritual unfoldment. A real Christian Scientist assimilates and appropriates the inspired contents of the textbook, and then, like the chemist, he goes out into the laboratory of human experience, into his business, his home; and his social life, and there he applies it. Indeed, it can be said that Christian Science, or the under-standing of being, is not primarily something about which you and I think, but that sooner or later we have got to actually approximate that understanding. We have got to live it and make it a part of our daily experience. Many, no doubt, have come to

of God, and this lecture with something in the nature of a problem. Possibly it is Christ:" lack or poverty. Possibly it is sickness or sin, and the struggle to be free. If such be the case, what, my friends, do you think is the source of much of your trouble? In the light of Christian Science, we see ful that it is the belief that man is separated from God. No matter what condition or situation any one of you may be facing, the belief that you are separated from God is the root of the difficulty. Unwittingly perhaps, we hold to the traditional concepts of Deity, and certainly if a check on that bank at any time God is regarded as a personal, reand it will never be protested. More-mote entity, we have no definite assurance of present protection or safety. Christian Science declares that God is Mind, but that does not mean a distant Mind. It does not mean that the ideas or thoughts of the one infinite Mind come to man from some remote or faraway place. You and I cannot conceive of infinite Mind other than as omnipresence. Omnipresent Mind necessarily means all-inclusive consciousness. Indeed, the fact that you are conscious, that you can think, that you express that divine power to reason and know, is the evidence that Mind is ever present. We even hear it expressed in the phrase, "He had resence of mind." We see, then, that in Christian Science the infinity and omnipresence of God or Mind is not accepted as a theory, but absolute fact, a fact that may be intelligently and practically applied in meeting the difficulties and problems of human life. We apply the absolute fact of God's omnipresence to the relative or mistaken belief which says that He is absent or far away. Then it may be asked: Where is the practical connection between divine Mind and man? Christian cience declares that, since divine Mind is the one intelligent cause. all true thought necessarily finds its origin there and only there—that all is infinite Mind and its infinite ideas or manifestation, and that man, declared i., the first chapter of Genesis to be the image and likeness of God, must be the mental image or embodiment of Mind. Indeed, the Icelandic translation of Genesis puts it in just that way. "And God said. Let us make man after our mind and our likeness; and God shaped man after His mind; after God's mind shaped He him."

What enables you or me to say, I am, I exist? What enables us to is a complete success, finished, and very good. In demonstrating Christian Sciknow that fact? Mind. When thinkence, it is important to understand that we are not two kinds of man. ing ceases, does not consciousness also cease? What is man without Mind or ideas? A nonentity or nonyou have perceived your true existence. As 7 man "thinketh . . so is he," and Mrs. Eddy says on identity as an individual spiritual consciousness, then stick to it. We page 42 of Science and Health, "The cannot work successfully from two belief that man has existence or opposite standpoints. There is no mind separate from God is a dying duality in divine metaphysics, and Divine ideas do not leave error." all successful demonstration is from Mind; that is, they are not separate the standpoint of absolute truth. or separated from the Mind in which If you are a divine being, and you are, then you are not really a human they exist. They are forever one with Mind and partake of the charbeing becoming divine, or a sick man acter and substance of Mind. So we ecoming well, even if the testimony understand in Christian Science that of the senses declares that to be the man, being the compound idea or case. Spiritual thinking is not based full representation of Mind, is forever one with Mind. facts. It was his understanding of God as the only Mind that enabled Christ Jesus to prove his sonship with God. He perceived that undeniable, absolute fact, the inseparability of God and man. Never at any time did he disassociate himself from his divine source. He constantly declared his unity with God, his unity with Life and Love. He said, "I and my Father are one." To him oheness with divine Being was not a theory. It was a fact to be lived and demonstrated. He recognized quite naturally that God was actually his Mind. and he acted on that spiritual fact. Referring to this, Mrs. Eddy says in Science and Health (p. 136), Jesus "claimed no intelligence, action, nor life separate fron. God." Naturally, if we live, move, and have our very being in God, as Paul declared, the oneness and eternal unity of God and man is established forever. This being the case, let us see how this divine oneness operates tinuously casting your net? Every in human experience. Sometimes people seem to be afraid to declare their sonship with God. Are you afraid to claim inseparability from your Father-Mother God? What did Paul mean when he said, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus"? If infinite Mind is not your Mind, upon what are you relying for your intelligence and thinking ca-pacity? The belief that man is separated from the source and origin o his intelother words, sickness, sin, or discord of any nature appear, and can only appear, as false mental picligence. Through Christian Science we see how failure or lack of success may be scientifically and spirittures in what is termed human conually overcome. It does not tell a sciousness. We call sickness a claim, man or woman suffering with the belief or fear of failure, "Just say, 'I can, I can succeed, I am a sucbut it is a false claim to reality. If it had actual entity, it would be eternal, and all that we call scientific cess,' or something of that kind." thinking would have no basis. All That is not the process of Christian sickness is, of course, the belief that Science at all; instead it explains man is separated from God, the the true nature of God and His source of his well-being and harcreation. The unreality of sickness emanate from the divine Mind. God and lisease is based on the scientific and logical knowledge that a never made a failure, could not make self-existent and wholly good cause a failure, never knew a failure, because His universe, including man, could not possibly be their origin, and that therefore they have no existence in God or in man. His perfect creation. In order to demonstrate the truth of these statements you are asked to turn away from the material picture and physical symptoms. You are asked to maintain. both audibly and mentally, what you perceive must be the spiritual fact about yoursel, and all being your inseparability from Love, from Life and all that means perfection. You are asked to cast your net on the right side, on the side of Truth instead of error. Develop the habit of thinking correctly about your-self. You say, "I am ill." Now what is this I, that talks for you and me when it says, "I have a headache; I have a pain in my side: I have rheumatism"? Mortal mind or false personal sense. And what is personal sense? It is the mesmeric suggestion that you and I are corporeal entities, instead of divine spiritual ideas of Mind. Corporeal sense is the belief that you have a material existence separate from God. I realize that it takes a certain amount of courage, perception, and even character, to reject the suggestion of corporeality and to refuse to let personal sense speak for us and say, "I am this, or I am that." But as a matter of fact, what is the I that you or I am? In Science and Health (p. 281) Mrs. Eddy gives this definition of the Ego. "The Ego-man is the reflection of the Ego-God: the Ego-man is the image and likeness of perfect Mind, Spirit, divine Principle." Then the I or Ego that you are and the I that I am, is the individual reflection or manifestation of the one and only Ego, and on that basis we can and must declare: "I am perfectly well, because I am the of omniactive divine expression Mind. I am the embodiment of perfect Being or Spirit.' Suppose someone were to ask you the question, "How do you know that you are alive?" What would you answer? You would probably say: "Why, I know I an alive, because I am conscious. I exist. I know I exist. It is through consciousness that I arrive at my perception of being. I am conscious of life. I am positively aware of being. I think, therefore I am." Then does it not follow that your awareness of life is mental? Life, as revealed by Christian Science, is not something that is here today and gone tomorrow, something from which you and I can be separated. Life is at infinite and allinclusive as Mind, indeed Life is Mind. And if you and I have no life but God, does it not follow that God is our very life and being? Naturally, a distant God might imply a distant, separated source of life, but a present God means for us a very present, unending Life-an eternal continuity of being. Now in the same way that we learn to claim our inseparability from Mind, so we perceive that we can and must posi tively assert and maintain our oneness with the infinity of Life. If Life is infinite, how much have you got? All. Then claim it, insist upon it. And it is everyone's Life, just because it is infinite. We are the very expression of Life, Life in evidence. Even humanly our consciousness of one another is the indis-

conceptions and to replace them with putable evidence of Life. Our oneness vith Life is not theoretical; it is practical; nor is our eternality or continuity of being to be accepted reflect the divine Mind, which is the only as a theory. Eternity is not Mind of every man. something you will experience some years from now. If we are ever to encing it right now Eternity is not something that begins and ends It has nothing to d. with time. We are in eternity right now, because here and now we are the exemplification of unending Life. Melchisedec, every man's true being is "without fatham, without mother, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; ... made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life.' As you continue in the study of Christian Science, you will find that the emphasis of its teaching is very definitely laid on the demonstration of life, right here and now We are concerned very much with living-more abundant living, right We are concerned with provhere. ing that God is our Life right now. and we are learning in a measure how to express the Life that is God. Naturally, therefore, we do not find it profitable nor expedient to speculate on death, on a futureworld salvation, nor even on a future life. On the contrary, we see the wisdom of beginning the demonstration of unending Life, right where we are today. It may also be said that Christian Science does not prepare you and me for death, but it opens up the continuity of Life in such a way that we may begin to exemplify it, in better health, vigor, and longevity. The belief of death is not truth, but error; and therefore we can never think correctly from the standpoint of death. The probability or inevitability of death could not possibly have any place in Christianly scientific thinking. Henry Drummond, for whose spiritual thought Mrs. Eddy had great respect, said one day to a group of students in Yale University: "We come not to save your souls, but to save your lives. We want you to be Christians, not because you might die tonight, but because you are going to live tomorrow." Speaking to these students, he changed the entire emphasis from death to life. It is perfectly obvious, then, that there can be no legitimate expectancy of death, but, on the contrary, the joyous anticipation of unending life.

Everyone instinctively wants to be happy, and yet if you were to ask the average person, "Are you happy? Are you completely satisfied and contented?" in a large majority of cases the answer would not be affirmative, but negative. Look at the faces of those whom you meet and pass in the crowded streets of the city. Do we see there the evidence of joy and serenity? Not very often. As long as man believes he is separated from God, it is also clear that he is separated from happiness.

Everyone is entitled to be scientifically happy, scientifically well, and scientifically prosperous. But if we study the experiences of human beings, almost everywhere there appears to be a sense of incompleteness-something missing, something necessar; that appears to be lacking. What is poverty but the belief that man is incomplete, that God has not provided him with the sense of complete supply and substance? The cry of humanity today seems to be: "I lack; I desire; I want; give me give me peace: ccess: satisfaction; give me companionship." Even with little children, we sometimes see this manifestation of incompleteness expressing itself in fretfulness and discontent. Every evidence of lust, longing, or false appetite may be traced to the belief that man is reaching out for completeness, for something of which he believes he has been deprived and which he greatly desires. In his true being, the natural state of man the complete expression of as Father-Mother God is possession. He possesses, and he knows he possesses, all good. He is not a state of longing or desire. No one can be lonesome or alone when he perceives his proper relationship to, and unity with, God. No one can be homeless homesick, or friendless, if he has demonstrated spiritually his completeness as an expression of God. So, if any of you find yourself in a mental state of longing, of desire, or of restlessness, cast your net on the right side. Declare gratefully what you know to be the fact about yourself. Man is not a state of longing or of incompleteness, but is the natura and eternal possession of all good. If Life is God, it certainly has no dark side—only joy and anticipa-tion of good. Ask yourself: If God is one and infinite good, is there any logical basis for the expectancy of evil? What can come to us from God, good, but good? What must we expect today? Good. What tomorrow? Good. Next week, next month, next year? Good, more good; good in infinite measure. It should be noted here, too, that we have a legitimate expectancy of good, not because we simply believe, but be-cause we know that God is good. Now, where is this good coming from? As a matter of fact, it isn't coming from any place; it is already here. If it came to us from some place, again we would be thinking from the standpoint of a distant God, and there might be some uncertainty as to whether good could reach us. Christian Science shows us that, since good is omnipresent, this good is appearing and constantly appearing right where you and I are thinking. It appears as spiritual, healing, helpful ideas unfolding in and as your consciousness-the evidence of your inseparable unity with omnipresent Mind. This question of disposition reminds me that, as long as we are on that subject, it might perhaps be just as well to say a word about what s known as temperament. I wonder if any of you have a temperament in your family, o. perhaps you yourself are upholding the honor of the family in that respect. The phrase "artistic temperament" has a fine sound, but it does not work out so well in practice We have discovered that prima donnas and leading ladies are not the only ones upon whom mortal mind has conferred the artistic temperament. It is a strange thing, too, how people frequently imagine that the artistic temperament is a badge of distinc<sub>7</sub> tion

Mortal mind, in its pretense to be a creator, appears to confer upon some human beings a certain amount of artistic ability, and then at the same time loads them down with a lot of afflictive and unlovely qualities, under the name of disposition or temperament. It tries to make us accept the belief that, because a man or woman is inspirational or gifted artistically, he must also be the victim of moods, tantrums, and mercurial emotions. Indeed, false human thinking has saddled upon many great and talented individuals some of the most afflictive beliefs of disposition. The understanding of man's inseparability from God naturally does away with all of this. It shows us that there could not possibly be such a thing as an afflictive inheritance, a temper or temperament conceivable that the divine Mind could at any time be in a state of up or down? Is depression a characteristic that man reflects from God? Why, my friends, if it were possible for you or me to walk through the corridors of infinite Being, we would never find depression or unhappiness. Joy is the very nature of God's being, and it is forever yours and mine by reflection. Man has no underived capacity. There is not a single quality or characteristic that he does not possess through divine inheritance; therefore, we see how everyone may legitimately express all the artistic qualities of God, the art side of God. and at the same time manifest the purity, peace, and harmony that should logically be allied with spiritual and inspirational unfoldment. One may be artistic, spontaneous, and inspirational, and still be poised. Poise is a wonderful quality under any circumstances, but it is particularly so as understood in Christian Science. It is that expression of ity and the majesty of calmness. V hen you are expressing spiritual poise, it indicates that you have you are maintaining and claiming the one Mind as your Mind by reflection. Poise is the indication that you are recognizing one governing divine Principle and law, and that you are letting Principle assert itself as your consciousness. As long as men believe that they have private minds and private intellects, and permit themselves to be governed by the uncontrolled force of human impulse and will, it is not surprising that this kind of to be truthful and honest; to prac-thinking externalizes itself in evil tice and perpetuate the wise surface and arbitrary form of government. The Psalmist wrote, "The wicked, through the pride of his counte-nance, will not seek after God: God is not in all his thoughts." And so today, as we contemplate the entire world in a state of fear and discord, we realize that men seem to be learning through affliction and suffering, as did the king of Babylon that human will and evil mental manipulation cannot set aside the divine fact that the one Mind alone rules in the kingdom of men and that, whether they acknowledge it or not, God alone is the governor among the nations. Through the discipline of human experience, they considerate of animals. are being forced to bring God into their thinking. Even if human beings attempt to outlaw God and what they call religion, they cannot on sense testimony, but on divine It is important, therefore, to understand the value of spiritual affirmation. The Apostle John tells us that one night, shortly following the resurrection of Jesus, Peter and several of the other disciples had taken a fishing boat out on the Sea of Tiberias and, although they had labored the entire night, their toil had been fruitless. John relates that in the morning Jesus appeared on the shore and questioned them regarding their catch. They replied that they had caught nothing. The Bible then tells us the Master's re-ply. "Cast the net," he said, "on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes." Mrs. Eddy says (Science and Health, p. 149), "We need to understand the affirmations of divine Science, ... and demonstrate truth according to Christ." So we see in Christian Science that the whole spirit of its teaching is affirmative, that is, we assert and establish that which is true. As we learn to be ever conscious of good, of God, we are making right thinking habitual. We are learning to cast our net on the affirmative side, on the side of Truth, instead of error. It is, of course, the experience of everyone that the negative, discordant argument tries to present itself. But let us not be discouraged. God has endowed us with divine power to reject that which is untrue and affirm that which is the fact abcut our-"We must realas Mrs. Eddy says in Science and Health (p. 428), "the ability of annul the inescapable government of divine Principle.

Christian Science reveals the fact that government, if it is to be right, must find its source and expression in the consciousness of the individual, and that as man recognizes himself as the reflection or manifestation of Principle he will be properly self-governed.

What is government? Is it matter or mind? Without mind there would be no government, either good or bad. It is the aggregate thinking of the citizens which determines the kind of government we have humanly, but we must remember that this is only a belief of government. God's government is going on, regardless of what the material senses are attempting to affirm. Right thinking, and that, of course, means thinking that has its basis in divine Mind, constitutes today the actual government of the world. Therefore, in the measure that our thinking approximates the divine standard, it is aligned with the power, and government of God. Regardless of what appears as government or man-made law, true spirit-
