TRUE "PROFIT CONTROL"

There has been a lot of talk about how much profit retailers should be allowed to make and just what formulae should be applied by OPS to take care of increases in wholesale prices, overhead expense, and other costs. OPS has, on several occasions. made changes in orders which proved to be unworkable, and which would have squeezed profits so thin that retailers would have had to sharply cut their purchasing of stooks.

Entirely aside from these rather technical matters, the fact is that the best form of "profit control" ever devised by man does not lie in rules and orders and laws. It lies, instead, in free, open competition - along with the public's idea of what this item or that is worth. As an example, many commodities are now selling at prices below the legal OPS-established level. The reason for that is that people just wouldn't buy at the higher price and when that happens, competitive business seeks a price that the customers will

Many people seem to thing that retailers customarily keen, as profit, twenty cents and perhaps more out of each dollar that goes through the cash register. This is a highly fallacious assumption. Depending on the kind of goods sold, and the rate of turnover, typical stores actually earn a profit of one to five cents out of that dollar. All the rest of the money goes to buy stock, to pay wages, taxes and rents. and to meet other unavoidable expenses.

Whether prices go up or down in the future, competition will be the big restraining factor on profits. Consumers are abnormally price-conscious today, and retailers, of sheer necessity, are doing everything they can think of to hold prices

IF VARIETY IS THE SPICE of life, then these artillerymen of the 69th AA gun battalion stationed at Fort Tilden, New York, must have a whale of a time. Their various hobbies run the gamut, as illustrated, from weight lifting to watch repairing.

COCKTAIL gown in gray satin by Paris designer Madeleine Vramant has skirt formed entirely of satin flower petals.

BEFORE BEING INSTALLED in some of the II S. Navy's newest and fastest carrier-borne fighters and interceptors, needle-tailed jet engines get finishing touches in Kansas City, Mo. .

ENJOYING THE SUNSHINE near Hollywood are three portions of pulchritude for whom a studio has big plans, Yvette Dugay tosses a line to Judith Braun (center) and Cindy Garner.

Ore mined in the Bomi hills of Liberia is high grade, assaying nearly 70 per cent iron. Found in huge masses, ore is blasted to this size for furnaces.

IBERIA, founded with the aid of American colonization L in Interest in 1822, societies by ex-slaves from the southern states in 1822, now aids this nation's defense effort by producing vital iron ore for America's hungry steel mills. Most of the ore comes from the Bomi hills area, about 45 miles northeast of the seaport of Monrovia, capital of the West African country. The valuable ore deposits were discovered during World War II, when Liberia was a valuable Allied base. After the war, pro-

RHUBARB, the alley cat star of a recent Hollywood movie, poses for sculptor Albert Silva. A full-fledged member of the American Feline Society, Inc., Rhubarb is appointed "honorary chairman" of the society-sponsored National Cat week, 1951, which runs from Nov. 4 to 10.

Before shipment to U. S., iron ore is stackpiled at Monrovia. The are is loaded by conveyor belt into holds of carriers, goes mostly to mills in Midwest. King Peatures Syndicate
