Police, Firemen Join Lions Club as Goodfellows

For the tenth consecutive year the Grosse Pointe Lions Club are on the streets and corners of Grosse Pointe this morning seeking your financial aid to raise a sufficient fund to take care of the needy families in the Pointe. The Goodfellows made up of the members of the Grosse Pointe Lions Club and the Fireman and Policeman of Grosse Pointe will be on the street from daylight until every man and woman in the Pointe have bought a paper, so they can realize their ambition that every kiddie have a Merry Christmas.

Norbert F. Denk, Supervisor of Grosse Pointe Township, is this year's Chairman of the Goodfellow drive, ably assisted by his committee, Alfred J. Garska, Nelson L. Korte, Carl Schweikart, Vince Leach, Charles Nightingale "Due to the increased demand for help we are hoping to raise $5000.00," says Mr. Denk. As in former years many baskets of food, clothing, etc., will be distributed among the underprivileged in the district of Grosse Pointe, and all excess moneys will be set up in a Goodfellow fund to be used the year around. The Neighborhood Club in Grosse Pointe is the distributing agency for all relief work of the Grosse Pointe Lions Club.

George Elworthy, welfare director of Grosse Pointe Township, is chairman of the welfare Committee of the Lions Club, and through him the Grosse Pointe Lions Club takes care of much of the relief work of the Township throughout the year. Many hours of misery have been prevented by helping when the emergency was presented. In the past year with layoffs, strikes, slowdowns, etc., many families have been kept in dire circumstances, and the Grosse Pointe Goodfellows have been a blessing to them. In addition to their welfare help, the Grosse Pointe Lions Club supplied a trained worker throughout the year to lead and instruct the unemployed youths in constructive activities. Many gangs of youths were diverted into organized clubs and through the facilities of the Neighborhood Club much of their idle time is put to good use.

The following members of the Lions Club will be on the streets today selling Goodfellow papers: Jules Berns, Dr. Brownell, R. J. Barrett, Victor DeBaeke, Louis DeHayes, Norbert F. Denk, Lorne Ayling, Waldo Beaupre, George Elworthy, Alfred J. Garska, Jack Gagnon, Hugo Glaser, Willard Hoskings, Victor Graff, Arthur Gnich, William Bantin, George Ingram, Dr. J. P. Jaxtimer, Lawrence W. Korte, Nelson L. Korte, George Kretzchmar, Dr. Werner Kersten, Ty Krentler, Rudolph Kamischke, Herman Kramer, Phil Kahn, John Kressbach, William Ludwig, Vincent Leach, Harold Lyndrup, Dallas Metcalf, Leo MacEachin, Ted Hammer, Jules Nagel, Arthur O'Connor.

Well . . . What's Holdin' Him Up?

All ready for bed, these inquisitive young men don't believe what most boys and girls know—that Santa Claus is not only a very busy fellow but that he usually comes when nobody's watching.

Will Toy Satisfy His Majesty? She Asks Him—and Finds Out

A PRETTY toy—but does it have educational value? Don't ask the nearest child expert, but hand it to a youngster, who'll probably think up more instructive ways to use it than its inventor ever imagined. And that's the theory on which the Tested Toy Laboratory of New York has helped manufacturers select the toys you buy for the children this Christmas.

The "laboratory" is really Miss Lillian Rifkin, who takes a toy to a school, recreational center or park and records children's reactions to it while they play. Then she fills in an elaborate questionnaire, commenting on the toy's durability, fitness at various age levels and value in stimulating mental, artistic, physical or scientific activity.

She doesn't question parents very often except regarding the toy's desirability for indoor or outdoor play. But the child is the final authority.

Little rubber automobiles, says Miss Rifkin, are second in popularity to blocks. She's astounded by the elaborate kinds of dramatic play

DRESSMAKING—This dress designing "game" is being tried out by two youngsters at the elementary demonstration school Miss Rifkin runs under sponsorship of New York university and the Child Study association of America.

PROVING GROUND—Miss Rifkin watches a boy putting a new toy to its practical testing paces. Among her conclusions: (1) Children may be unpredictable in their likes and dislikes, but they're notably consistent in their reactions; (2) play appeal of a toy is paramount; any education value it may have is secondary in the child's mind.

that children build around the cars: "Sometimes a child travels all around the world with them. Often he will recreate a trip he's taken in the family car. Sometimes he'll play detective and chase gangsters and sometimes he's a taxicab driver."

Miss Rifkin finds that toy automobiles, like toy soldiers, help a child get the surplus energy out of his system. And both appeal to his instinct for collecting.

One mother, she says, believed militant tendencies would be fostered if her child were allowed to play with toy soldiers. So she forbade them, but instead the child collected bottle tops, lined them up in military formation and shot them down by cocking his finger.

Miss Rifkin says it's all "pretend" anyway. "Even a child old enough to know war means cruelty realizes his soldiers are just toys, and it's only a game."

Another year . . . another Christmas . . . May it be your happiest and most joyous.

Christmas Dinner

By Katherine Edelman

AS SOON as Darrel Thorpe got a chance to use the phone, he dialed his home. He must tell Edna, how sorry, how terribly sorry he was for what had happened this morning. All the way down on the car he had reproached himself for the hasty words he had said. He couldn't understand how he had spoken to Edna like that, and on Christmas eve.

He drummed impatiently on the desk as he waited. Edna was always punctual about answering the phone and doorbell. It was a way she had, going right through with things.

Which really was the cause of his flash of temper this morning. In her quick, decisive way, she had swept aside his idea of having old Mrs. Darby for Christmas dinner. The little lady, now down on her luck, had befriended Darrel when he had come to the city.

"I'm not going to have her!" Edna had declared emphatically. "We're going to skip Christmas as much as possible—go out and eat somewhere—and miss all the rush and bother."

The big man did not seem to hear him. His eyes were glued on a closely-typed statement.

"I think that's a darn selfish way of doing," Darrel shot back. "Christmas is a home day, with a turkey, and a tree, and gifts, and above all, someone to share them with us."

Then, without waiting to see the effect of his words, Darrel rushed from the house, banging the door.

Now, he dialed the number three times, but there was no answer. Panic seized him. Had Edna believed that he meant what he had said? He had heard of young wives who had packed up and left for much less reason. What a brute he had been to flare up as he did!

THE morning was unbearably long. Inwardly fuming, he hung up the receiver, to answer an imperative buzzer from the inner office. It was about the tenth this morning. If it hadn't been for Wheatley, keeping him running around in circles, he might have been able to reach Edna long ago. And if the old man hadn't been in the same ugly mood yesterday, Darrel knew that he himself wouldn't have been on edge this morning, that he wouldn't have spoken to Edna as he had done. He blamed Wheatley as much as himself.

"You sent for me," he said stiffly, as he waited beside the desk. The big man did not seem to hear him. His eyes were glued on a closely typed statement. Darrel spoke again. Then Daniel Wheatley looked up, and rubbed his hand across his forehead as if trying to remember something.

"Oh, yes, yes," he began; "Mrs. Thorpe called before you got to the office this morning. I forgot to tell you. She left word that she was going marketing with a Mrs.—Mrs. Darby, or some such name. Also, she wanted me to be sure to tell you to bring home a Christmas tree and all the trimmings." There was a merry twinkle in Wheatley's usually hard eyes. "Looks as if you were going to celebrate Christmas at your house," he finished, with a laugh. "We certainly are," Darrel grinned back; "we're going to have a real old-fashioned celebration of the day."

"Think your wife would object if you took a cranky old man to Christmas dinner?" Darrel wondered if he were hearing things, then his quick wit jumped to the surface. "If you really mean that, Mr. Wheatley, I can assure you of a hearty welcome. My wife thoroughly believes in having people for Christmas dinner. At least, I am sure she does now." The last sentence Darrel whispered to himself.

Carols on Fields of Bethlehem
On the hillsides of Bethlehem, "where shepherds watched their flocks by night" on Christmas eve and Christmas morning, tourists from many lands gather annually to sing carols and remember the life and words of Jesus of Nazareth.

In Bethlehem for Christmas
Due to modern transportation one can leave America as late as the middle of December and be in Bethlehem in Palestine for Christmas, 6,000 miles away.

Big Game Census
Uncle Sam's annual check of big game animals in national forests reveals there are three of these animals now for every one present in 1924. The last census disclosed 1,842,000 big game animals. Deer are much the most numerous. Mountain sheep appear to decline in numbers in spite of the protection given them.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Christmas Play
By Katherine Edelman

THE town hall was wreathed with holly and mistletoe. Bright red bells hung from the old-fashioned chandeliers. Christmas candles sent their soft glow into the night. The whole place cried out welcome to the crowd who thronged through the doors.

By eight o'clock every seat was occupied. Small gossip and murmurs of expectancy ran through the crowd. The little town was proud of the boy who was taking the leading part in the play. They had known Ted Rawlings all their lives. Known him as an easy-going lad, interested in nothing more than fishing and hunting around the country, and later as an astonishingly changed ambitious fellow. No one seemed to understand how the quick transition occurred.

All eyes turned to the stage as the heavy curtain rolled upward. Three hundred pairs of eyes fastened themselves upon the moving, speaking figures. "Isn't Ted wonderful, young girls whispered breathlessly to each other. Between acts, thunderous bursts of applause filled the room. Hands clapped with vehemence. Small boys made their approval known by shrill whistling.

Ted carried the audience with him, every step of the way. He seemed to enter to reciter he portrayed. His make-believe was so intense in the last act, that there was a deep silence for a moment when the final curtain fell.

"Ted, you were perfectly wonderful," Sally was saying.

derous bursts of applause filled the room. Hands clapped with vehemence. Small boys made their approval known by shrill whistling.

Ted carried the audience with him, every step of the way. He seemed to enter to reciter he portrayed. His make-believe was so intense in the last act, that there was a deep silence for a moment when the final curtain fell.

FOR the time it was no make-believe to Ted. He was living again all the agony of parting, of seeing Sally Howard go away without a word. He had been sure until her train pulled out that she would come and say how sorry she was for the bitter, reproachful word she had hurled at him. Words that had left their mark upon his soul—that had stung him into a mad, ambitious desire to show her what he could do.

He found no real satisfaction in the tumultuous applause that followed. In this hour of his triumph, his heart cried out for Sally. I only she was here! If only she had cared! He scarcely knew what he was saying in answer to the lavish congratulations.

Suddenly small hands pressed tightly around his arm, and a remembered voice spoke in his ear. "Ted, you were perfectly wonderful," Sally was saying, "wonderful, wonderful. I'm so proud—so proud of you."

"But, Sally, I don't understand. I thought you were in New York."

"I was, until last night. I've been keeping track of you. I knew all about the play, and—and the way you have been working lately. I wouldn't have missed this for anything in the world."

"But the things you said, Sally? They hurt—they still do."

"I wanted them to hurt, Ted. I know—I know it was cruel, but there seemed no other way. Someone had to give you the right kind of push to get you going. You know you were really lazy? But now, well, you've really put on speed."

"Nothing like the speed I'm going to show in getting ready for a Christmas wedding. There's just two days left. We've got to make it a really big event. Let's give out the announcement now—while the crowd is still in the hall."

The First Santa Claus
The first Santa Claus was St. Nicholas, Bishop of Myra, who started mysterious midnight gift-bearing journeys. In the Fourth century he was famous because he was a rich man who enjoyed giving secret gifts to the poor. One of his tricks was to throw purses of gold into cottage windows and run away.

From Europe's Christmas Menu
Take your choice of Christmas eats: Plum pudding in England, Pfefferkuchen in Germany, Værknæk in Denmark, Fatigman's Bakkels in Norway, Horse-shoe cake in Hungary, Speculaas in Holland, and Lutisk in Sweden.

Getting a Shoeful in Holland
Not on reindeer but on a white horse, St. Nicholas arrives in some parts of Holland, and instead of looking for stockings he searches for wooden shoes to fill them with gifts.

Switzerland
Switzerland is a confederation of 22 cantons which are joined under a federal constitution, with large power of local control retained by each canton.

World's Tallest Woman
The tallest woman in the world is believed to be Miss Elsa Droyson of Berlin, Germany. She is seven feet four inches tall.

Tower of Pisa
The leaning tower of Pisa was intended to stand upright but the soil beneath gradually gave way on one side until the marble structure was 16 feet out of the perpendicular.

Engineers Seek Ways to Build 'Solid' Foundations
Tests with the object of constructing buildings that will not settle are being conducted under the auspices of the Engineering foundation.

Prof. Gregory P. Tschobotareff of Princeton university, who is heading a part of the studies, said buildings constructed on rock—such as in New York—do not present a problem to engineers.

"But not to all cities," he said, "are equally fortunate to have in any places rock within easy reach from the ground surface."

He cited Shanghai, New Orleans and Mexico City as examples where soft soil deposits handicap the engineer.

"Rock lies at such depths," he said, "that it cannot be reached by any known foundation method. In such cases, considerable settlements become unavoidable. In Shanghai, one-foot settlement is considered quite normal for buildings founded on piles driven into the river mud."

"In Mexico City, which holds the world championship for the most difficult foundation and soil conditions—soft mud 600 feet deep—heavy buildings resting on concrete rafts floating on the surface of that mud have been known to sink about nine feet into the ground."

He carried the audience with him, every step of the way. He seemed to enter to reciter he portrayed. His make-believe was so intense in the last act, that there was a deep silence for a moment when the final curtain fell.

Worship of Sun Linked To Stone Age Farmers
Worship of the sun as a distinct object apparently did not start until the new Stone age, when man had developed a crude agriculture. In the old Stone age all nature was looked upon as "a great human ghost," the spirits of the dead were supposed to enter into natural objects and the trees, animals, rocks and clouds were endowed with human qualities.

With the advent of crops regularly sown and harvested, the one natural object upon which these crops depended was singled out for special reverence, writes a correspondent to the Wisconsin Star. A great wealth of sun symbols is first noted in this period of pre-history. The paintings and carvings of old Stone age men show no designs that can be connected directly with the sun.

Worship of the sun has gone around the earth. It was a prominent part of the religion of ancient Egypt, where at one time it was refined into a monotheistic system which ranks as one of the world's great religions. It was almost universal among American Indian tribes, reaching its greatest refinement among the Incas of Peru, where the rulers were supposed to be directly descended from the sun. The Japanese ruling family traces its mythological descent from the same source.

U. S. Information Service Gets Many Odd Requests
He is a taxpayer. So he writes to the United States information service about this: An English friend is sending him some riding boots. But he has heard that English and American shoe sizes differ. He takes a 6 1/2 D in American. What is it in English?

That's a sample of the problems that are dumped into the lap of the Great White Father. They are answered.

The agriculture department got these:
"We have a cow and her hide is coming out around the neck."
"How can I raise and market tarantulas?"
"Send information on cockroach. I will thank you very much. Please rush."

And this one:
"Send booklet telling how little ailments turn into big ones. How can I tell such an ailment when I wake up in the morning with a coated stomach. I may guess wrong."

Here's a big business deal: "Is there any place in the government I can get free money. That is money I don't pay back. I need $1,200."

What would you do about snakes in the cellar; would you besmirch your patriotism if you hauled down a dirty American flag and washed it? It's all in the day's work for the Great White Father.

Chemical Treatment for Fish
Chemical treatment of freshwater fish to produce fish preparations similar to those made out of sea fish has been proposed in Hungary, according to the American Chemical society. The purified fish is freed of scales, disintegrated, and soaked in a solution containing common salt, calcium sulfate, magnesium sulfate, magnesium chloride, ferric oxide, and alum in amounts which saturate the fish with the components of salt water. The treatment softens the bones of freshwater fish at the same time.

Barber Chair
A pony at Santa Rosa, Calif., has been ridden by more than 30,000 children. It is a local barber's idea of solving the problem of keeping children quiet when having their hair cut. The pony is attached to his barber's chair. He sets the youngsters on it, gives them the reins and quickly cuts the locks.

Bookman's paradise
The bookman's paradise is Leipzig, Germany, where there are over a thousand publishers and shops devoted to the trade, and where books have been the chief manufacture for 200 years.

Balloon Test Flights Aid Airplane Pilots
Meteorologists who watch colorful balloons float into the sky are responsible for the most accurate method devised for guiding airplane pilots through hazardous winds, according to Elbert F. Corwin, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute meteorologist.

The new technique, with its narrowed margin of error, is expected to prevent fliers from encountering violent up-winds and treacherous down-drafts that sometimes suck planes into mountainsides. Pilots will know at which levels they may fly to avoid the currents.

Corwin said that the new method utilized a geometrical principle, determining a distance through angles. Weather observers at present base calculations on an assumption that balloons always rise about 800 feet per minute.

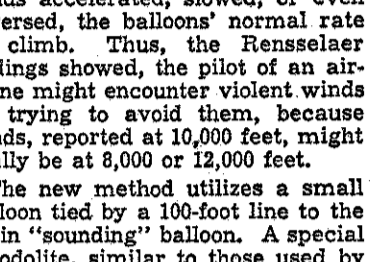

Corwin and two student assistants, at the request of the United States weather bureau, for months sent colored balloons into the air and observed their flight to heights of five miles and distances of from 10 to 17 miles.

It was found that "up and down" winds accelerated, slowed, or even reversed, the balloons' normal rate of climb. Thus, the Rensselaer findings showed, the pilot of an airplane might encounter violent winds by trying to avoid them, because winds, reported at 10,000 feet, might really be at 8,000 or 12,000 feet.

The new method utilizes a small balloon tied by a 100-foot line to the main "sounding" balloon. A special theodolite, similar to those used by weather observers and surveyors to study angles, would then measure the angle between it and the two balloons. Calculations then determine to within relatively few feet their height.

"I WISH we could do something exciting — something different at Christmas," Peggy looked out at the winter landscape as she spoke. "For instance?" Vivian Clark glanced up from the magazine. "Something like making someone terribly, tremendously happy." Peggy came closer to her sister as she answered, and Vivian saw that she was very much in earnest. "I've been thinking," Peggy went on, "how wonderful it would be to bring something thrilling — something unforgettable — into someone's life. I don't mean like helping with the baskets and the entertainments at the church; we've always done that; but a sort of special something, for one particular person." For a minute youthful voices surrendered to silence. The gay little clock on the dresser made audible sound. Suddenly Peggy jumped to her feet. "I've thought of something!" she cried breathlessly, "something really different! You know Sara Werby—she's been an invalid for 10 years—shut in from the world except for a few friends who run in every now and then. "But what can we do for her? We do visit her occasionally, and have always taken her a little Christmas gift. You know she's much too proud to accept charity." "Who's talking of charity? What I have in mind is something that will just thrill her. I'm going to write to Mona Muir—you know, she runs that department on the Star—and I'm going to tell her how wonderful Sara has been, and ask a card show-er for her." Vivian whistled through her teeth. "Well, that is a grand idea, Peggy. I know she'll be thrilled." "She's bound to be! Think of the postman stopping with loads and loads of mail every day." Peggy's blue eyes were dancing. "But suppose people don't write? You know how busy everyone is at Christmas." Vivian's face reflected the doubt in her words. "But they will write," Peggy's voice was emphatic. "I'm going to hold the thought that Sara Werby will be just swamped with mail."

THREE hours late, the snow-bound train reached Chicago. Mary Lou gathered her baggage together and took the bus across to the other station, to find her connecting train had left on schedule. The folks would drive in to town to meet the train unless she could head them off. Her message put through, Mary Lou sank down on one of the benches to collect her thoughts and make her plans until train time. Five o'clock, and no train until 9:30 the next morning. "Going out soon?" a cheery voice near her asked. She looked up to find the chief usher standing beside her. A middle-aged, friendly looking fellow, Mary Lou told him of her missed connections. "Here, Eddie, look at this!" a red cap interrupted her story. He was leading a three-year-old child, a dear little girl with big blue eyes and yellow curls. "What are you doing with the kid? Is she lost?" Eddie asked sharply, turning away from Mary Lou. "Might as well be. She came in from Denver, in charge of the stewardess. They missed the train north, and the stewardess is celebrating Christmas by having her appendix out, emergency case. They told me to turn the kid over to you," the boy grinned as he handed her over to the chief usher. Eddie took her clumsily. "See here, what can a bachelor like me do with a kid like this?" He looked appealingly at Mary Lou. Mary Lou's eyes filled with tears. Then she held out her arms toward the youngster. "What is your name, dear?" she asked. "Annette Pollard. I am three years old and I am going from Chicago to Rio, Wisconsin, to my grandma Pollard. My daddy is there." It was a lesson she had been taught. Mary Lou held her close. "I had a little girl almost as old as Annette

TOGETHER they penned the letter to Mona Muir on the big city paper. Later, between snatches of shopping, they discussed the possible number of cards and letters that would be delivered at the little cottage on Bank street. They both seemed to be more concerned

"I've thought of something!" she cried breathlessly. with what Sara Werby was going to receive than about what they themselves were going to get. "It's funny how doing something for others gets a hold of you," Vivian said for a moment. "I wasn't nearly as enthusiastic as you at first, Peggy; now I believe I'm even more eager." But their real happiness came on Christmas eve when they stood by Sara Werby's bed and saw the radiance upon her face. Stacks of letters, cards, and packages were piled everywhere, with postmarks from almost every state in the Union. "It's the most thrilling thing that ever happened in my life," Sara told them. "I never knew there were so many wonderful people in the world. It will take me weeks and weeks to answer them all, but it's going to be loads of fun." Her brown eyes sparkled like a girl's. "I imagine some of them will develop into lasting friends," Peggy ventured. "Vivian and I are so happy about it all—in fact, I think we're just about as excited as you are." "You're pretty happy then," Sara Werby whispered softly, "for I don't believe there is anyone—anywhere—who is going to have a more thrilling Christmas than mine."

Mary Lou heard the voice of Annette's father. when she died," she said brokenly to Eddie. "Let me keep the child tonight, and take her to her home. I missed the same train she did." Eddie studied her face. What he saw satisfied him. Still he hesitated for a moment. "That sounds good to me. But I'd better get the conductor to authorize it." IT WAS soon decided that Mary Lou should keep her. But she must not leave the station. "It won't be very comfortable for you, ma'am, but the kid can curl up on a bench here and be dead to the world in no time. There are some rocking chairs in the far room there. Why, of course there are some cots there, and baby beds." "We ought to telephone the child's relatives," Mary Lou suggested. "Of course we should. Here is the address and telephone number. You do it for me, will you, please, ma'am? I've got my last minute shopping to do. I'm mighty glad you came in on this train. Eddie'll take the kid while you telephone to Rio," and the conductor was off, after turning over the child's money to Mary Lou. But not until Mary Lou had made him promise to send a big doll back for the child's Christmas. "We'll let Annette say hello to her daddy herself, if she wants to," Mary Lou exclaimed. And so it was done. Mary Lou heard the voice of Annette's father, tense with concern, and then joyful as he realized where his baby was and heard her childish treble over the phone. "Her mother's parents sent her back here to have Christmas with me. Her mother died two years ago," he added. The sun was shining dazlingly bright the next morning when the train stopped at Rio. The red-haired man who was waiting expectantly on the platform had only time to thank Mary Lou, and get her address, before the train pulled out leaving him holding Annette as she waved a good-by to Mary Lou. But the trip home was much easier. Mary Lou forgot the burning pain at the loss of her own little daughter, the aching loneliness since her own husband's death, as she remembered the soft kiss of the baby lips of the motherless child who had been in her charge the night before. And the look in the face of Annette's daddy made her sure she would see Annette soon.

Christmas Invitation

By Katherine Edelman

JACK TRESLAR hunched his broad shoulders deeper into the big chair, turning a new page of his book. He was reading a Christmas story, trying hard to become absorbed in the tale.

A sharp ring from the telephone brought him to his feet. Who could be calling him on Christmas eve?

A strange voice responded to his "hello." "I hate to bother you on Christmas eve, Mr. Treslar. But I'm ringing up to ask if it would be possible for you to come and spend Christmas with me. My name is Bevan Willers. I live out at Richmond. I have a big home, and—"

"But—but I don't even know you, Mr. Willers. There must be some mistake."

"I want you!" the low voice was emphatic. "Will you come or not?" Jack repressed a quick exclamation. "I—I had thought of spending Christmas—" he began.

"Wouldn't it be possible to change your plans? I have a feeling they could be side-tracked easily."

Jack thought of the lonely Christmas he had been anticipating. Ater all, there might be something to this unusual invitation.

He ascended the steps leading to the massive door.

"You are right about my plans," he admitted. "They are rather in the air. But—but going to spend Christmas with an utter stranger took me back for a moment."

"That's why I thought you might come." There was a note of disappointment in Bevan Willers' voice. "I probably got the wrong man, however."

Jack thought again of the lonely Christmas before him. And before he could debate the question, he heard a voice inside of him answering, calling through the wire to Richmond, "You got the right man, Mr. Willers. I'm coming."

An hour later, bathed and dressed, Jack Treslar was speeding along the frosted highway to Richmond. Following the detailed instructions that had been given him, Jack found the long winding drive leading from the roadway. What a secluded, ghostly place, he thought, as he drove under the snow-sprinkled trees.

BEVAN WILLERS was waiting. In the dim light from the chandelier, his tall bent figure seemed grotesque. "I have let the servant away for the evening," he said, his bony hand motioning toward the end of the shadowed hall.

Jack Treslar felt a twinge of fear as he followed. Here he was—alone in the house, with this strange old man. Anything could happen. There wasn't another residence within blocks. Then, his adventurous spirit reasserted itself, and he looked smilingly across the table at Bevan Willers. "Well, what's it all about?"

A dead silence was the only answer. Gray eyes under heavy bristling brows stared at him intently. Jack stared back unflinchingly. Then a hearty laugh rang through the library. With amazement Jack saw the old man straighten up in his chair. Years seemed to fall off his shoulders. The twisted, grotesque appearance vanished as if by magic. He spoke quietly.

"I'm not crazy," he began; "I'm just a lonely old fellow, ticketed as a sort of recluse. The true facts are that I've been trying for years to write. Yesterday I got word that a story of mine had been accepted."

"But I still don't understand your strange invitation, and—" Jack interrupted.

"I'm coming to that," Bevan Willers continued. "The hero of my book is a daring, adventurous fellow. A man willing to answer a strange call that came in the night. I got intrigued with the fellow, and began thinking. Wondering if there was any young fellow who would act as he had done. So I rang the first hotel that came to mind and described my hero. Young, unmarried, interesting sort of chap. Pretended his name had slipped my mind for the moment. They connected me with your room. You know the rest."

Jack stretched out his long arm across the desk, and gripped the old man's hand. "Now that I'm here, Mr. Willers, do you still believe you have got the right man?" There was wistful entreaty in his dark eyes.

"I don't just think—I'm absolutely positive."

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS the Board of Education of Rural Agricultural School District No. 1, Grosse Pointe Township, Wayne County, Michigan hears with profound regret of the death of Mr. Charles A. Paye, formerly an esteemed and valuable member of this Board and Secretary of this school district; and

WHEREAS we count this district fortunate in having enjoyed for so long the benefits of Mr. Paye's counsel and service; and

WHEREAS we are grateful for the interest in the school system, which was continued by him after his years of active service and until the time of his death; and

WHEREAS we wish to pay deserved tribute to his qualities as a man and a citizen;

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that this Board does hereby express its deep sense of loss at his passing, and extends to his widow and children its deep sympathy and directs that copies of this resolution be sent to Mrs. Paye and to the Grosse Pointe Review.

—Being Directions On How to Carve Christmas Turkey

Gather round ye masters of the Christmas dinner table. Uncle Sam will teach you a lesson:

The government has issued an official bulletin on the proper technique for carving the Christmas turkey.

The bulletin rules on such important problems as whether the father should stand or sit while doing the honors and the position of the turkey on the platter. All you have to do is read this, and carving the festive bird will be a lead-pipe cinch.

"The turkey rides on the platter back down," says the bureau of home economics. "The first problem is father's: Should he stand or sit while carving?"

There are two schools of thought on this subject, and the government grants father his constitutional rights to do as he pleases. But it is suggested, after deliberation, that a short person had best stand and a tall person should sit for the most effective work. Are you short or tall?

The next problem, says the bulletin, is the point of attack. It is here that many a head of a house, the bureau believes, has lost the Christmas spirit through ignorance or awkwardness—or just plain stubbornness.

reau estimates, a bird on the platter is worth two on the tablecloth.

"First," the bureau said, "remove the leg from the body by grasping it in your left hand (but what if you're left handed?) and cutting straight down to the hip joint. Remove the wings and the other leg.

"Then place the fork squarely across the breastbone toward the end of the keel, to anchor the bird while you carve the breast in slices; using a slightly sawing motion."

If you don't like the shape of your turkey, or the distribution of dark and white meat, well—why not have your wife carve in the first place?

Will Not Hold Junior-Senior Fete Next Year

Because of Grosse Pointe High School's rapidly increasing growth, the junior class will not honor the graduating seniors with the usual junior-senior banquet in January, as has been the custom of previous years.

Last year's experience proved that seating and serving accommodations are far from adequate when the members of the junior and senior classes are combined in the cafeteria. Hearing is unavoidably difficult in the corners of the cafeteria.

With the graduating classes averaging about 120 students the cost of presenting a banquet is a great drain on the junior class treasury, whose own membership is well above 200.

Because the 12B's felt themselves

"out" of senior affairs, a 12B-12A proposal will replace the customary senior prom. This will enable students who are perhaps better acquainted than the 11's and 12A's to meet as a single senior unit. It will relieve the cost of the senior unit. It will relieve the cost of seniors' giving their own prom funds in the class treasury.

Christmas Hymns Ring From Depths Of Michigan Mine

ISHPEMING, MICH. — "Silent Night, Holy Night" drifts mysteriously up the pitch-black Morris mine shafts here. Down below, 1,500 feet underground, 200 grimy-faced workmen pause for the world's most unique Christmas party, an annual event held at the Inland Steel company's iron mine here.

Finn and Austrian, Swede and Englishman, Italian and Irishman, these helmeted giants of the earth join lustily in Christmas hymns as elevators carry them to the 1,500-foot level where their party is held. "Genial Jim" Fowler, 225-pound timber boss, strides forth in a Santa Claus costume and takes his place at the brightly lighted tree. Like children around a tree at home, the miners stand eager and expectant.

Genial Jim Fowler, garbed as Santa Claus, gives Elmer Waara, one of the miners, a folding rule as remembrance of a six-inch error.

Gifts are rib-tickling reminders of errors during the year. Last year, for example, the mine carpenter was given a rule—inspired by a six-inch error made a few months earlier.

Scott's Curiosities

In Sir Walter Scott's old home, Abbotsford, can be seen the crucifix of Mary Queen of Scots, Napoleon's pistol and blotter, a tumbler from which Burns drank, Rob Roy's gun, and other curios.
