Dear Friends:

What is so Rare as a Steak in June?

- Sirloin Steaks, and thick, charcoal grilled tenderloins bid fair to become museum pieces these days. But, though we enjoy preparing and serving them, you'll find no band of black on the Al Green menu to mourn their passing. There are good reasons why it's almost impossible to purloin a sirloin.
- The other day we talked with a Medical Officer who directs a debarkation hospital of 3,600 beds . . . a hospital where some of our own Grosse Pointe boys have been among the 11,000 wounded who occupied those beds last month He said that for their first meal the boys get thick juicy steaks, with repeats if they want 'em So, gladly, we'll settle for sea food, calf's liver, mutton chops, or lamb chops! You too?

Home Markets First

In the old days the tarilf was recognized as a mighty vehicle for the nouralment or blighing of home industry. The power to control it vested the Congress It is true the old plan made the tarifa football in the national scalature but nevertheless y and large over the years the country made a rather good job of it. It was under the economic concept nothing producting the projection of the protection of the

Opposed to this was the old Democratic theory that the tariff was merely a convenient method of raising revenue This had its origin in the agenta. South with its monopoly of the world could be a supported by the control of the support of the support of the world could be a supported by the support of the variable result was a recession in prospecty, we mean out of work.

During the quarter century after the civil war the country recognized its growing industrial postion and the increasing advantages of foreign markets. The reciprocity agreements which were fathered by James G Blaime were a move towards special arrangements with certain countries with whom there was a mutually favorable market for our wares and theirs. There was never an abandonment however of the protein effective practice of conserving our own home markets for our own people.

Under it we fabricated our own raw materials into finished products sold them to ourselves and exported abroad the surplus. The American workman remained the highest paid craftsman in the world the manufacturer had a chance to make a good profit and the total national wealth increased ten fold in a half century.

In this later era with the overstrained disposition to regard foreign markets as with necessity, the idea of abnormant of protection and an approach towards free than grown. This has come largely with the return of the southern influence in the Congress Cordell Hull, able and consclusions as he is, reflects that school of thought.

consciuntous as he is, reflects that school of thought.

Many of the younger conomic statesmen have been directing their eyes so intently abroad in later years they have failed to see always the varily greater field of home markets and general welfare and prosperity of the ingmen of the country, not to mention the opportunity of enterprise to function profitably.

enterprise to function profitably.

The renewal of the arrangement under which the Executive, on the advice of the Tariff Commission can by simple edict raise or lower existing tariffs as much as fifty prenent from the established scale vests tremendous power in the hands of one individual or a very small group it deprives the Congress of its long held power which the records show had in the long run been wisely used.

With our new international outlook it is easy to magnify the importance of world markets. We want them and they are welcome. But our race for them must not place in eleparaty the greater need for regular and profitable em ployment of our own people and living profits for our own industrial establishment.

American First is a good motto with which to approach this alluring field ahead

THE BAHA'I FAITH

Religion must be the cause of Unity

True religion having its source in on God can not logically be a cause of discord. When we find disunity among religious we find the cause to be man made doctrines creeds and rituals.
