

Durant Victorious in District Battle

 popularity with the delegates. The day after the 14th District GOP Convention, Thursday, August 16, George Romney offered the olive branch. "I understand Mr. Durant has publicly divorced himself from the John Birch Society," the GOP gubernatorial candidate said. "This was the issue I raised in questioning his qualification for party leadership."

"Assuming this is a complete severance from Birchism, it eliminates, in his case, conflict between the Republican Party and that organization."

Has Other Ideas
 Durant's resignation was interpreted in an entirely different way by Democratic State Chairman John J. (Joe) Collins, however. Addressing Wayne County Democratic Thursday night, Collins said:

"We are not misled—and I trust the GOP leadership is not duped—into thinking that Durant's decision to throw away his John Birch card in any way means he has renounced John Birch philosophies."

Collins considers Durant's victory proof that the Republican Old Guard in Michigan, far from being on the wane, is a more powerful force in GOP state politics than ever before.

"After all, Durant and his followers stood up to Romney and his backers and came out on top," the Democratic State Chairman said. "This development may rule out much hope of any change in future Republican action."

Writes Durant Letter
 A letter written by Romney to Durant only hours after the 14th District Republican convention closed last Wednesday was made public Saturday:

"Dear Dick:
 "As I am sure you know, the news of your resignation from the John Birch Society is very welcome. I'm delighted you've made this decision and I'm sure it played an important part in the events of last evening. "It is absolutely essential that Republican organizations everywhere attract the broadest possible citizen participation. "Your complete disassociation from the Birch group will help to make that possible in the 14th District. "That was a crucial first step. It is even more vital, of course, that the doors of the Republican Party organization in the 14th District now be opened wide to all who will participate. "The energies of those who have recently been competing for leadership must be joined in cooperative effort from this day forward. As one of the leaders chosen by the delegates, you have a heavy responsibility to demonstrate that the door is open and all are invited and welcome. "In this connection, I call to your attention that the Romney Volunteers organization in the District, which did not participate at all in the delegate contest, is vigorously working for my candidacy. "The Romney Volunteers need to be convinced that you wholeheartedly welcome them. "I believe you have made a wise decision which enhances your capacity for leadership. I am sending a copy of this letter to Dean Kling. I know that he and all others who participated in the recent contest will recognize that the common interest of all the people in the 14th District is the interest we must now serve. "Sincerely Yours, "George Romney"

will Be Watching
 Romney promised Saturday that he would "go to the people" of the 14th District and demand Durant's removal if he (Durant) failed to prove his action in removing himself from the official roster of the John Birch Society is "genuine and complete."

"At this time, only Mr. Durant knows with certainty whether his separation from Birchism is genuine and complete in spirit as well as in letter," the Republican gubernatorial candidate said.

"Despite the doubts of many, he deserves the opportunity to demonstrate."

Romney urged the people of the 14th District to "watch closely" to determine Durant's real intention.

"I will not accept Republican leadership that is affiliated with Birchism or that compromises with it," he said. "To this point in my life, I have not compromised any of my moral principles and I'm not going to start now, no matter what the price."

Durant's victory Wednesday night was a defeat for the majority. His candidates lost in most districts where his leadership was the issue, and, although fewer delegates voted for Waldron, they represented more people.

Statistically, Waldron's supporters accounted for 10,760 completed, with connections made to two storm sewers on Jefferson, and the entire sewer complex is now clear all the way to the lake. Some cleaning will be necessary when the project is finally opened up.

Fisher road presented a problem. The new main was being placed in close proximity to the old, and the old kept moving into the new trench. This forced the contractor to angle the new main into the street.

The problem has now been solved, according to Savage, and construction is proceeding on schedule.

The City Manager estimated that the new municipal offices will be ready for occupancy in about two weeks.

Suspect Youths In Theft of Nails

Four 25-lb. boxes of assorted nails were removed from a new home at 516 Heather lane some time over the weekend of August 19-22. Value of the stolen merchandise is $35.

An old grey and blue car, minus hubcaps, model unknown, was seen parked in front of the house Sunday evening around 6 p.m., and an eight-year-old neighbor boy, who sometimes plays in a field near the new house, observed two high school age boys get out of the car and enter the deserted house.

The boys made two trips to the building, carrying something out each time.

The child who witnessed the incident has promised to watch for the car and get its license number.

Institute of Arts Extends Welcome to New Director

Willis F. Woods, seventh Director to head the Detroit Institute of Arts in its 74th year history, was welcomed Monday, August 20, to his new post with a reception which included thousands of Detroit-area civic leaders, city officials, and enthusiasts.

Lines of invited guests filled the main entrance of the Institute at the beginning of the three-hour reception, as Metropolitan area residents flocked to meet the man who will take over direction of the world-famous Institute as it begins a building expansion program and many projects for increased community service activity.

In the receiving line to introduce Mr. Woods to his guests were Detroit Mayor and Mrs. Jerome Cavanagh, the President of the Detroit Arts Commission, Lawrence Fleischman, and his wife, and Ralph McElvenny, president of the Institute's Founders Society, the 4,600-member private organization which provides for the acquisition of all works of art for the city-administered museum.

At a pre-reception press conference, the 42-year-old Mr. Woods said he was looking forward to the "tremendous and exciting opportunity" of leading the Institute as it moves toward an expansion program for the addition of two new wings and an underground parking garage.

He pointed out his first major project would be the development of the December exhibition of the paintings of Vincent Van Gogh, an already planned showing of all the major works of the famous Dutch master.

Mr. Fleischman pointed out that the reception for Mr. Woods was held on the day of his arrival "to show you the support you have from all the people of Metropolitan Detroit — and to show that we are anxious to get to work in further increasing the stature of an already-great museum."

Mr. Woods had a full schedule for his first day of activity at the Institute, beginning with a conference with Paul Grigaut, Chief Curator of the Institute, and followed by a meeting with the 84-member staff of the Woodward Avenue Institute.

Joining Mr. Woods for the three-hour reception was his wife, Mrs. Ann Woods, who for the last two years has been his assistant at the Norton Gallery and School of Art, Palm Beach, where Mr. Woods had been Director since 1949.

During Mr. Woods' tenure at the Norton Gallery he virtually doubled the enrollment at the Art School — designed for development of recreational interest in painting and cultural subjects — and increased the attendance at the privately-supported exhibition of the works of all schools and cultural interests of man.

Mr. Woods pointed out during the press conference that he felt it particularly appropriate that he was coming to the Detroit Institute, since his own art interests range from historic artifacts of Oriental culture to modern art — and the Detroit Institute is particularly noted for its wide spectrum of exhibits. At Detroit, there are examples of works of art and cultural creations from every known age of man — a collection of "a few things from all ages and schools, rather than many things from a few schools."

Mr. Woods, whose hobby of painting has brought him increasing stature in art circles, planned to be a doctor — but an increasing disinterest in science courses while at Brown University, plus the viewing of some autopsies — convinced him that he was more interested in making art his career.

After World War II service as an officer with the Army Corps of Engineers in the European Theater, he took a post-graduate art course at American University in his native Washington, D.C. While there, he got a job as Curator of the University's new Watkins Memorial Gallery — and he so loved the work he was convinced he wanted to become a museum curator.

An apprenticeship at the National Gallery of Art followed, where he met an assistant curator, Ann Watkins, daughter of the man for whom the Watkins Gallery was named. They were married while Mr. Woods was Assistant Director of the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, and a short time later Mr. Woods was summoned to Palm Beach.

During his years at Palm Beach, Mr. Woods has been one of the most sought-after speakers in the Southeast, discussing art in all its forms before meetings of civic clubs, church and school groups, study clubs, and appearing regularly on television and radio programs.

The Woods family with which interest in art is a common hobby — includes Sarah, 13, Willis, Jr., 11, and Laura, 9.

Cottage Hospital Doctor Tells of Trip to Russia

How do Russia and its people appear to a pathologist on the staff of Cottage Hospital?

After attending the International Cancer Conference in Moscow, Dr. John D. Langston of Berkshire road recently returned to his staff position at the hospital with mixed reactions to what he saw and learned.

He was accompanied on his trip by his wife and two daughters, Penelope and Star, who didn't think much of Russian cuisine, but otherwise enjoyed themselves.

To begin with, Dr. Langston said the conference brought forth little new in the detection of cancer and the means of preventing or curing it.

"Most of the material had been presented prior to the conference—some of it as far back as 1954," Dr. Langston said.

What he considered "the most informative part of the meeting" was a co-operating study on "the survival experience of cancer patients" made by England, Denmark and Finland along with three cancer-reporting groups from the United States.

What the pathologist wanted most to see—a general laboratory in Russia—was denied him, Dr. Langston asserted.

"It was either too early or too late for such a visit each time I pursued my request. My only conclusion was that they didn't want me looking around their hospital laboratories. However, we were taken on tours of special cancer centers."

Dr. Langston said the visiting medical people from practically every country in the world were given free run of Moscow University—"and the entire city for that matter!"

He said there were only two well defined restrictions.

"We were told not to rent a car without a Russian driver and not to get on a railroad train."

The Russians also had "some new and impressive-looking scientific instruments on display," the doctor said, "but they had none for sale."

His skepticism was roused to the point where he wondered if some of the instruments "really worked."

However, the doctor said he admired one Russian approach to the cancer problem.

"They call them 'expeditions' in which a team of medical specialists examine the entire population of a fairly good-sized city at one time for cancer."

Describing the most marked difference in the medical profession of the U. S. S. R. and that of the United States, Dr. Langston said:

"Most of the Russian doctors we met were women, generally between 40 and 60 years old. Many of their dentists also are women—a profession that women rarely get into in this country."

"But this is readily understood when you realize that 60 to 70 percent of all Russian university students are women."

The Cottage Hospital pathologist found the incongruities and inconsistencies around every Moscow corner. Here are a few of them:

A workman can afford caviar in his diet, but new shoes or a suit of clothes is way beyond his means.

The women queue up to have their hair set in beauty parlors, but they wear unstylish clothing over figures unencumbered with any vestige of a foundation garment. And the children are better dressed than their parents.

Behind the 20-story modern apartment buildings going up in Moscow are the crude log cabins or huts which the new structures were replacing.

Of the few military men seen on Moscow streets, the officers wore tailored, well-fitted uniforms while all the common soldiers wore what appeared to be the same uniform—baggy and sloppy.

Despite their poor garb, the Russian people take great pride in their native cultures. They turn out in droves at the art galleries and museums.

The streets are spotlessly clean—only foreigners litter—but the flower beds are full of weeds and the grass is never mown.

When a Russian buys a new garment, he or she pays for it first and then is permitted to try it on for size.

If English is such a favorite language in the Russian schools, Dr. Langston said he saw little evidence of it in the Moscow streets or public places. He said he found German was the best language to use to get the natives to understand him.

The Grosse Pointe said the Moscow hotel, built in 1957, that he and his family stayed in wasn't bad and the service was good. The hotel also provided soap and daily fresh towels, something we didn't get in other European hotels. But he added:

"There was no drain plug in the bathroom sink, but Mrs. Langston was smart enough to bring one along with her."

14 Cases Heard In City Court

Fourteen cases were tried in City court on Tuesday, August 14, by Judge D. L. Paterson.

Donald C. Cagert, 113 Milan, Amherst, O., was charged with reckless driving. He failed to appear and had to forfeit his $50 bond.

Helen M. Golla, 959 Anita, was charged with reckless driving. Her case was dismissed as the complainant refused to prosecute.

The complainant refused to prosecute Joyce J. Dunlap, 211 S. Milwaukee, Jackson, who was charged with reckless driving. Her case was dismissed.

John O'Dell Ledyard, 35 Dyar lane, was charged with making an improper left turn with no signal. The case was dismissed as the complainant refused to prosecute.

The case of Ernest J. Dumouchelle, 456 Lakeland, who was charged with reckless driving, was also dismissed as the complainant refused to prosecute.

Marie L. Anderson, 16830 Cranford, was charged with reckless driving. Her case was dismissed for the same reason—the complainant refused to prosecute.

Michael E. Tweddle, 825 Lakeland, was found guilty of reckless driving and fined $15.

MIRACULOUS
The space age we live in is one wherein the improbable and the incredible become reality.

Young Bicycle Stealer Warned

Ten-year-old Andy Prietz, 1974 Hampton, got on his bicycle and rode over to the Grosse Pointe Woods Community Club for an afternoon of "fun" on Monday, August 13. He left his bike parked in front of the building.

At 4 o'clock, Andy suddenly saw a 13-year-old acquaintance riding off on his bicycle.

The boy went immediately to the Woods station, reported the incident and named the thief. Officer Plumb was dispatched to the culprit's home where, after recovering the bike at the side of the house, he warned the young teenager not to try any similar escapades.

Drinking Driver Chased to Halt

Blowing his horn and swerving wildly from side to side, Edward Heddon, 19606 Moross, Detroit, successfully blocked traffic on southbound Mack at 2:30 a.m. on Saturday, August 18, for several minutes before Woods police finally forced him to stop.

Patrolmen Geatches and Kerving tried to head him off at Bournemouth, failed, and eventually forced him to pull over at Moross. Heddon, eyes bloodshot, staggered out of his station wagon and nearly fell into the scout car. He smelled strongly of alcohol.

Owner Explains Abandoned Car

Shores Patrolman Joseph Vitale, on his way to work early Saturday morning, noticed a '58 Mercury, its left side damaged, abandoned in front of 1000 Lakeshore. Arriving at the station shortly before 8 a. m., Vitale sent Patrolman Gordon Swartz back to investigate.

Swartz found that the vehicle had been traveling north when it ran off the road in front of 931 Lakeshore, crossed a center island, and continued north in the south lane, eventually striking an Edison pole at Lakeshore and Briarcliff.

The car was then driven in front of 1000 Lakeshore, and left.

Police were unable to immediately contact the vehicle's owner, John F. Glass, 21843 Nevada, East Detroit. At 9:45 a. m., Mrs. Anthony Glass telephoned the station.

She said that her husband, who lives at 28823 Groveland, Roseville, was the one who had driven the car that morning, Anthony Glass is John Glass' brother.

Accident Picture Supply Depleted

As the second summer Driver's Training program draws to a close, the NEWS wishes to announce that there are NO accident pictures on file anywhere in the NEWS office.

We suggest that students desperate for such material visit one of the large newsstands in Downtown Detroit.

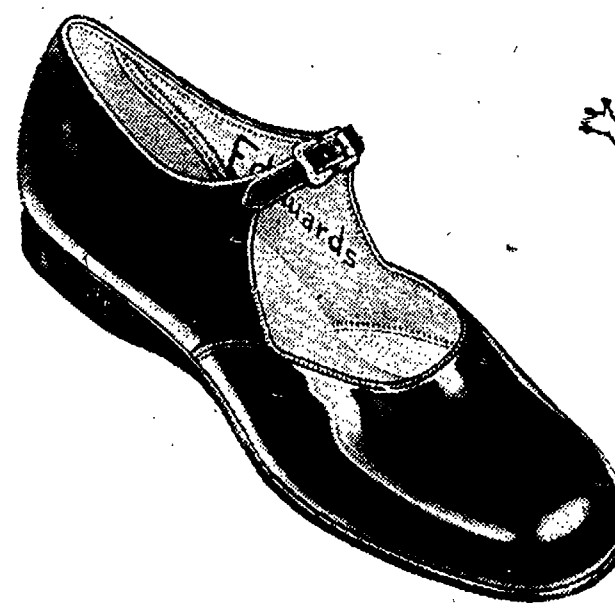

We beg them not to phone or drop in the NEWS office. We are not hiding any pictures. We are not saving any pictures. We do not dislike teenagers.

We simply do not have any accident pictures on hand. They were all given away to those who asked for them first.

Club Swimming Hold Champion

By Bill B... Grosse Pointe Yacht Club was sixth, and Country Club out of 12 teams that competed in the Michigan Association last weekend at E...

Detroit Golf Club won the championship for the fourth time in the last five years with 141 1/2 points. Second place was captured by Western Golf and Country Club with 117 1/2 points and the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club took third place with 79 points.

In the bottom six places were Oakland Hills Country Club (52 points), Detroit Yacht Club (42 points), Plum Hollow Golf Club (41 1/2 points), Dearborn Country Club (27 points), Country Club of Detroit (25 1/2 points), and Grosse Ile Country Club (21 points).

26 Events Run Off Preliminaries in the 26 events were held Saturday and the swimmers with the five fastest times earned the right to swim in the finals on Sunday. Sixth place was awarded to the swimmer with the sixth fastest preliminary time in each event. Again this year it was more difficult than ever to make the finals as performances at all age levels showed improvement.

New records were set in either the preliminaries or finals of six out of the eight relays and 10 of the 18 individual events.

Sparking Grosse Pointe Yacht Club with record-breaking first places were Jim Lozelle and Ann Whyte. Tom Heholt and Lisa Beckenhauer set records in winning their events to lead Lochmoor.

Lozelle was timed at 28.4 in winning the 50-meter breaststroke race in the 15-16 year old class. This bettered the old record set by Ken Wiebeck and Jim MacMillan in 1961 by .1 of a second. Teammate Bill Gebhrke finished fourth in the event.

Ann Whyte Breaks Record After tying the record of 32.8 for the 50-meter freestyle in the 11-12 year old age group on Saturday, Ann Whyte clipped a full second off that time to set a new record in winning the event on Sunday. Ann Fisher of the Country Club of Detroit was fourth in the race.

In the eight years old and under division, Lochmoor Club had two winners in Tom Heholt and Lisa Beckenhauer. Heholt set a record of 16.3 and Beckenhauer set a record of 16.6 in the preliminaries. Both won their 25-meter freestyle events in the finals without surpassing their record times.

Jim Godin of Lochmoor and Bob Cleary and Bruce Black of Grosse Pointe Yacht Club placed in the 9-10 year old 50-meter freestyle race. All six of the finalists in this event qualified with faster times than the old record. In the finals, Godin was third with a 34.2, or 8 of a second from the winning time and new record. Cleary had the same time as Godin but was given fifth place on a judge's decision and Black was fifth.

Bicky Homer Wins Country Club of Detroit's only individual winner was Bicky Homer in the 13-14 year old 50-meter freestyle event. Bicky had the third fastest preliminary time but took first place in the finals with a 31.8. Sally Clarke of Lochmoor tied for third with a 32.2 and Cheryl Gardner of Lochmoor was sixth. In the same age group, Kate

Teeners Playing

Two teen-age tennis teams, composed mainly of Grosse Pointe area youths, have been competing weekly in the Southeastern Michigan Tennis Association sponsored High School age boys league, (17 years and under), and in the boys league, (15 and under), since mid-July. The 17 and under team, called the East Siders, has a 5-0 record, having successfully beaten the representatives of the following parks, clubs and communities: Detroit Tennis Club, Stoepel Park (Detroit), Dearborn, Allen Park and St. Clair Shores.

With a victory against East Detroit this Friday, August 24, the East Siders would win the championship along with a team award and individual trophies.

Those having played for the team at one time or another during the summer have been: Ron Burns, Tom Berschback, Dan VanTiem, Denny Montgomery, Greg Bielawski, Bill Connolly, Mike Bielawski, Dave Fulton, Rick Brydges, Andy Bates, Vic Dhooge, Rick Allison, Denny Cavanaugh and Ken Long.

The 15 and under team has a 6-0 record, having won the East Side championship a week ago. This week, Thursday, August 23, the Grosse Pointe team will meet Stoepel Evergreen Park in Detroit for the league title. Boys who played over the summer are: Phil Hodgman, Denny Cavanaugh, Chuck Wright, "Butch" Wardwell, Nick
