Prankster's Cruel Hoax

 Farms police that she had received several calls from the man, and that she tried to stall him on his last call, talking to him for almost an hour, trying to keep him talking while she sought some way to notify police. Her efforts were fruitless. Mrs. Dill spoke to the man for about 10 minutes on the second call, as did Mrs. Christenson.

Mrs. Christensen told Woods police that she had received a few calls, but never any such as the second call from the hoaxer, who used shocking language. She cut him off by hanging up on him, she said.

Park Det. Lt. Arnold Hough said that his department had received a number of complaints from wives of doctors and lawyers in the Park regarding such phone calls. Chief Fred Duemling of the Shore Department said that his department was notified of one such call in the Shores about a week ago; and in the City, Chief Thomas Trombly said two calls were received by victims more than a month ago.

Some Became Panicky
 In most cases, it was said, the women called by the hoaxer, completely ignored the caller, although they informed police of the incidents, but others became hysterical and panicky. The chiefs of police urge all Pointe residents to remain calm, if and when they receive a call from the ominous phoner, and to call their respective police departments as soon as the caller hangs up. All the chiefs state that there is no reason to be alarmed by such calls.

Every effort is being made by authorities to apprehend the culprit, and it is believed that some time soon, the hoaxer's luck will run out, and he will receive the full penalty of the law.

Neighbor Report Parked Car Fire
 A neighbor called the Woods Police-Fire Department on Thursday, August 23, to report a fire in a '61 Chevrolet belonging to Roy Kirsch, 1914 Stanhope, and parked at his address. Officers arrived at the scene to find the automobile's rear seat and seat back smoldering, tore them out, and extinguished the blaze with a garden hose. No estimate of damage was given. The vehicle is insured.

Field Day
 at the field day was a 1962 Triumph-4 sports car, and the happy winner was George Bigley of 184 Merriweather, Grosse Pointe Farms.

 Schollenberger bleeding from a severe facial cut. She was admitted to Bon Secours Hospital, where 14 stitches were required to close the wound in her face and she received treatment for a possible arm fracture. Bennett was unharmed. Shores police stood by the scene until the Edison Co. fixed the pole. It hung above Lakeshore, suspended only by a few wires, for several hours, and took the Edison Co. a long and difficult time to repair. And what ever happened to the off-shore callers for help? A passing craft heard them, responded, saw that their boat was disabled, and towed it into the GPYC harbor. Later, the boat's two owners and sole occupants, Ronald Paul Dombrowski, 20011 Mitchell, Detroit, and Richard Ralph Remund, 19974 Gallagher, Detroit, came to the Shores police station to make a full report. They said their Golden Eagle inboard struck an unknown submerged object, breaking prop and shaft so it was unable to continue. Damage to the boat is estimated at $100. There were no injuries.

Fish Rodeo
 Carty and Mike Dulka grabbed third place honors. After the prizes were awarded came the downing of 80 pounds of hot dogs and all the pop the kids could drink. As usual in these events their success is due in large measure to the efforts of a hard working group of volunteers. One of the problems in mentioning their names is that invariably some are left out. Special mention and thanks are due to Clyde Putnam who has been co-chairman of this event for years. Clyde is vitally interested in the youngsters and although his own children have now grown up, he nevertheless continues to work tirelessly to promote events of this kind. Co-chairman Carl Lienemann, Bob German, Tony Delsener, Joe Crea, Dick Grabowski, Cliff Grabowski, Lloyd Jones, Bill Heels and Joe Gasko comprised the rest of the Rodeo Committee. The wives of the aforementioned men as well as Mesdames Hockstad, Tansley, Allar, Luberto, Meldrum and Wronski helped measure fish, serve food and generally insure the success of the event.

Shores Police Chief Fred Duemling and Patrolman Joseph Vitale raced from the station in a police ambulance. Patrolman Ronald Klotz was already at the scene when they arrived.  Kyser, bleeding from head wounds, was unable to make a statement. He was taken to Bon Secours Hospital, where he admitted to Patrolman Vitale that he "was going the speed limit," and stated that he had not been wearing corrective glasses, as stipulated on his driver's license. Kyser said his glasses were broken. Shores police have ticketed him before for not wearing the glasses. Hospital X-rays revealed Kyser to be injured more seriously than was first thought. He has five broken vertebrae, a punctured kidney, and suffered a diabetic reaction shortly after the tragedy. According to Shores Police Chief Fred Duemling, it may be a month before he is out of the hospital. Until he is able to make a statement, authorities contemplate charging him with negligent homicide. Didn't Know Passenger Kyser did not know the name of his passenger. Shores police contacted Woods police who, in turn, contacted Priem, the motorbike's owner. Priem identified Linda Ozark as the girl Kyser had taken for a ride. Linda, an eighth grader at St. Joan of Arc school, St. Clair Shores, has two surviving sisters, Denise Marie and Christine Ann Ozark, and a brother, Leon J. Ozark, Jr. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hopp and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ozark. Services were Saturday, September 1, at St. Joan of Arc Church.

Anti-Durants Form New Group

Republicans who worked to oust Richard Durant as vice-chairman of their Party's 14th District organization have formed a new group to campaign for George Romney's election as governor of Michigan.
 The "Republican Committee of 109 Plus," named for the 109 precinct delegates who voted for Robert E. Waldron at the district's August 15 convention, is an outgrowth of the Republican Action Committee formed to unseat Durant.
 Waldron was defeated in his bid for convention chairman by Mrs. Lois V. Nair, Durant's candidate. The vote was 164-109.
 The "Plus" refers to those who supported Waldron but were not precinct delegates, and who want to do precinct work.
 According to Charles H. King, dean of the Detroit College of Law, former chairman of the Republican Action Committee, and now chairman of the "Republican Committee of 109 Plus," the new organization stands for more than "just a change in name."
 "The object of the Republican Action Committee was to bring about a change in the organization of the party machinery," said King.
 "From now to November 6, the sole purpose of the new group, many of whom were not members of the Republican Action Committee, is to get every possible vote for George Romney and the entire Republican ticket in precincts where our members were elected precinct delegates."
 The "Republican Committee of 109 Plus" held its first organizational meeting at the Whittier Hotel. Sixty-seven of Waldron's 109 delegate supporters agreed to join the new group, according to King.
 Officers include George N. Bashara, Jr., vice chairman; Amalia Pasternacki, secretary; and Chauncey A. Norton, treasurer.
 Robert Herdegen, Jr., was named to the Board of Directors. Other directors are Mary Susan Davis, Aldo Cardosi, Edward Peterson, Douglas Dow, Kurt Keydel, Craig Langrill, Alda Hodge and Robert Frost.
 Included, among committee members are Wilber M. Brucker, ex-governor and ex-Secretary of the Army; Paul D. Bagwell, former GOP candidate for governor; Edith Bagwell, his wife; and John Felkens, former Republican state chairman.
 The "Republican Committee of 109 Plus" will operate in former Action Committee headquarters, 14827 Jefferson east.

 Farms Officers Harold Beupre and Russell Roland took the theft report from Galloway. Taken were two tan Motorolas and one black and silver A.M.C. long range transistor.
 The theft occurred between Saturday, August 18, and Wednesday, August 22.
 Thursday Mr. Galloway phoned the police and reported that in addition two pair of "Renaud" sun glasses, valued at $28; and two men's size 44 cashmere sweaters, one dark green and one dark blue, total value $70, were also missing from his boat.
REPORTS THEFT
 Dr. Vincent Adams of 455 Moran road, complained to Farms police on Saturday, September 1, that someone broke into his garage and stole a tackle box containing fishing equipment valued at $150, and a pair of sunglasses valued at $30.

The Fourteenth District Young Republican Club is sponsoring "Operation Bumper-Sticker" next weekend on the east side of Detroit. The Young Republicans hope to put 2000 Romney bumper-stickers on cars in this area. Mellinger, 248 Kerby, told Farms police that he had stopped his car on Mack for the red light at Kerby earlier that afternoon. He said he was in the right-hand lane with his turn signal on, waiting to make a right turn. However, when the light turned green Mellinger's car struck Jock W. Jensen, 20943 Norwood, Harper Woods, who had stopped for the light in the parking lane and, when the light changed, was attempting to pass Mellinger. Damage to Jensen's car was $95 and to Mellinger's $40.

Men's Chorus Seeks Singers

The Grosse Pointe Men's Chorus sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Wa. Memorial Association will have its first meeting and rehearsal at the Center, 32 Lake Shore road on Monday evening, September 17 at 8:30 o'clock. It will be under the direction of John Finch, head of vocal music at Grosse Pointe High School. The Men's Chorus welcomes males of all ages into its ranks and solicits tenors, baritones and basses indiscriminately. Previous vocal training is not at all necessary and Mr. Finch quickly teaches everyone the basics of sight reading—this in itself an inducement to join. No candidate is made to feel awkward because of an audition. All are welcomed to the fellowship and start out on an equal footing. Throughout the season, rehearsals are held weekly on Monday nights and concerts are given not only at the Center, but the chorus adds spark to many occasions throughout the community, as for instance, Men's Night in the Village. No previous contact need be made. All interested in singing are simply asked to show up at the Center Monday evening, September 17.

Edison Retiring Admiral Jacobi

Rear Admiral Leon J. Jacobi, USNR, retires September 1 as director of Detroit Edison's civil defense department after 36 years of service with the company. Admiral Jacobi, a native of Mt. Clemens, was graduated from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis in 1920 as an ensign with a degree of bachelor of science in mechanical engineering. After five years as a Navy officer, he joined Detroit Edison as an engineer in the company's purchasing department. In 1940 he was recalled to active duty, encompassing the entire period of World War II, during which he served in the Atlantic Fleet, as executive and commanding officer of the USS Dubuque. He was awarded the Bronze Star medal for meritorious service. In 1948, after returning to Detroit Edison, he served on the Hoover Commission for reorganization of the executive branch of the U.S. Government. The following year he was selected Rear Admiral, United States Naval Reserve. In 1961 he was awarded the "Chrome Dome" citation by the Detroit Armed Forces Information Council "in appreciation for distinguished service in furthering the mutual understanding and exceptionally fine relationship between the Armed Forces of the United States and the Metropolitan Detroit Area and the State of Michigan."

John T. Short Honored by 'Y'

John T. Short of Grosse Pointe Farms has been appointed to the State of Michigan Y.M.C.A. Board of Trustees. Over 100,000 boys and girls and men and women are now actively engaged in Y.M.C.A. The concept of the Y.M.C.A. as strictly a young men's organization has changed through the years and today the "Y" is active in many areas. Adult education classes, activities for recreation, job training for unemployed youth, are a few. Locally in Grosse Pointe the Hannan Y.M.C.A. sponsors eighteen Indian Guide groups in the elementary schools and at Grosse Pointe High School has two Hi-Y Chapters. Mr. Short is Chairman of the Board of Management of the Hannan Y.M.C.A. and is a member of the Board of Directors of the Detroit Y.M.C.A. Active in many community activities, Mr. Short is vice-moderator of the Board of Deacons of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church and is vice-chairman of the Program committee of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. Hurt in Fall From Truck

Robert M. Fruit, 54, of 1718 North Bentloul, Baltimore, Maryland, suffered serious injuries on Saturday, September 1, when he fell from a van while unloading furniture. According to Shores police, Fruit was unloading the furniture in front of 535 Lake Shore road, when he slipped and fell to the pavement, fracturing several ribs and his arms. The injured man was taken to Bon Secours Hospital by Paramour Gordon Swartz. The emergency call was relayed to the Shores police by the Farms authorities who first received the call.

Issue Warrants For Bad Drivers

Warrants have been issued for three traffic violators who failed to appear as scheduled before Judge John H. Gillis in Grosse Pointe Shores Justice Court on Monday, August 20. Wanted are Buford Easterling, Jr., 3638 Mt. Elliott, Detroit; Philip John Doherty, 42724 Loni drive, Utica; and Michael H. Kanakry, 467 Manistique, Detroit. Easterling, arrested at 1:50 p.m. on June 29, is charged with speeding. He was clocked doing 50 miles per hour on Lakeshore, a 35-mile zone. Doherty is also wanted for speeding. He was charged with traveling 47 miles per hour on Lakeshore at 5:20 p.m. on June 2, at which time he was also ticketed for not having his car registration on his person. Kanakry, arrested at 11:07 p.m. on June 14, was ticketed for driving without a taillight. A fourth offender, James Dickerson Arnold, 19, 1921 Alard, charged with reckless driving, also failed to appear as scheduled before Judge Gillis. Lt. George LaForest originally arrested Dickerson. He was observed doing 70 miles an hour on Lakeshore from Vernier to Oxford at 7 p.m. on June 30, charged with reckless driving, and released on $100 bond the same day. When Dickerson failed to appear, Judge Gillis issued a warrant for his immediate apprehension. Picked up within hours, he was held overnight in the Village Jail. Dickerson appeared before the judge on Tuesday. Found guilty, he was ordered sent to the Wayne County Jail, to be transferred to the Detroit House of Correction where he will serve the major portion of his 45-day sentence.

Receives Ticket For Pushing Car

Thomas Scafe, 10483 Balfour, was ticketed by Park police on Friday, August 24, for pushing a car and causing an accident. Scafe pulled his car up behind Michael Stackpoole, 1113 Nottingham, who was stopped at the intersection of St. Paul and Beaconsfield. According to Stackpoole he "motioned four times for him (Scafe) to go around me because I wanted to park." Instead Scafe bumped the rear of Stackpoole's car and pushed both of them around the corner. Then he pulled out and drove off. Fortunately Stackpoole got the license number of the other car and police traced it to Scafe.

RACER BIKE STOLEN

Rick Hamann, 441 Rivard, reported to Farms police on Monday, August 20, that his 26-inch black English racer was stolen from the Central Library, Kercheval and Fisher, that day.

Organ Study Class Offered

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial Association is making available the study of organ to those in the Grosse Pointe area who are interested. Both note and chord method will be taught in the Center's Terrace Room under the direction of Mrs. Jane Poucher. The instruction will be applicable to all types of home organs. These organ lessons will be offered in semi-private classes of three or four each for 45 minute periods scheduled between 7 and 10 o'clock on Tuesday evenings beginning September 18. The fee is $15 for a ten week course and advance enrollment is advised. Mrs. Poucher, herself a skilled organist and teacher, is happy to adapt the lessons to whatever form of music the student wishes to master whether popular, classical or religious. As an added convenience the organ at the Center is available for practice for those who do not yet have an instrument. Scheduling of practice time is set up individually through the Center's office. The giant dish antenna of the University of Michigan's radio telescope on Peach Mountain stands as high as a 10-story building.

Introducing Pointe's Newest Teachers

Progress of construction on the two-room addition being made to Richard School is viewed by Principal RICHARD W. KAY and the two teachers new to the school staff this fall, MRS. MARILYN OLSEN (left) and MISS NANCY HOUSE (right) recognized along with Mr. Kay and other school administrators that the addition would not be ready for use as soon as had been anticipated when bids were let last spring. A steel strike and other complications have slowed the work so that completion appears to be at least several months away, much to the disappointment of all concerned. Several groups of children and their teachers will have to double up in other rooms until such time as the new rooms can be occupied, Mr. Kay stated.

continuing a practice of recent years the News will again carry a series of articles and photographs introducing the teachers who are new to The Grosse Pointe Public School System this fall. One building's newcomers will be featured each week until all 14 public schools have been covered. In this way it is hoped that the community at large will feel better acquainted with these important new arrivals in our midst and help make them feel welcome in Grosse Pointe.

Richard School, located in McKinley avenue, has been selected to open the series. The school not only has two classroom teachers new to the system but a new principal as well. Richard W. Kay has assumed the leadership of this building, succeeding Dr. Clarence J. Messner who headed the unit for 32 years and who retired last June.

Mr. Kay comes to Grosse Pointe from the Northville Public School where he has been principal of the Amerman Elementary School for seven years. Service as a classroom teacher and athletic coach preceded that. A graduate of Wayne State University (two degrees), Mr. Kay is married and has two daughters, Pamela, 16, and Cynthia, 13. Service in the Naval Air Corps as a carrier pilot was performed during WW II. He still keeps his hand in things athletic by refereeing high school basketball and football games.

Mrs. Marilyn Olsen will teach the fifth grade at Richard this fall. A native of Illinois she attended high school in Toledo and earned a bachelors degree at the University of Toledo (cum laude) and a masters at the University of Michigan. She was a member of Peppers Women's Honorary and National Collegiate Players while in college and listed in Who's Who in American Colleges. Alpha Omicron Pi was her sorority. Previous teaching experience was gained in the Lincoln Park and River Rouge schools. Community Theatre work is a continuing road. She resides in McMillan street.

A former student returned home to teach is Miss Nancy House. As a teacher of third graders at Richard she joins her mother on the Grosse Pointe faculty, Mrs. Lillian House being a teacher of physical education at Brownell. Nancy attended Richard as a student as well as Pierce and Grosse Pointe High School. She earned her degree at Western Michigan University last June and is beginning her initial teaching experience this week. While at Western she served as a student assistant, counseling other students in her dormitory. A brother, Jim, is a student at the University of Michigan. The family residence is in Fisher road.

Drivers Ticketed After Accident

Two drivers were ticketed on Wednesday, August 22, after they collided on Wayburn.

Shirley G. D'Angelo, 2642 Anderdo, was driving south on Wayburn, and Gisela Roessler, 1146 Maryland, was driving north, approaching her.

passed, sideswiping Mrs. D'Angelo's car.

Miss Roessler was ticketed for driving left of the center. Mrs. D'Angelo received a ticket for not having her driver's license with her.

Theater Makes Center Donation

A check for over $140 was presented to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Association on Friday, August 24. The Grosse Pointe Children's Theater of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial was the donor.

The money represented proceeds from the Theater's most recent production, "Daddy Longlegs," and will be used to help defray costs of purchasing lighting equipment for the new William Hayes Fries Auditorium, now under construction on War Memorial grounds.

Vandals Damage Parked Bicycles

Two bicycles left in the rack at the Lochmoor Club entrance Tuesday afternoon, August 28, were damaged by vandals some time after 1 p.m.

The bikes' owners, 10-year-old Jonathan Bullard, 1330 S. Oxford, and his companion David Henderson, also 10, of 671 S. Oxford, returned to their 26-inch Schwinnas at approximately 2 o'clock, to find that their generator wires had been cut and the air let out of their tires.

Woods police are investigating the incident.

Petty Quarrel Is King Size

A family quarrel turned into quite a brawl for one couple Friday evening, August 24.

Ralph and Minnie Petty, a young Negro couple who reside at 517 Jefferson court, Detroit, were out socializing with friends early Friday evening. After a few rounds of drinks, they decided to stop in on another friend who manages a parking lot on Jefferson in the Park.

Apparently on their way to Grosse Pointe the Petty got into a small quarrel. When they alighted from their car at Jefferson and Beaconsfield the argument became heated.

It must have been a doozie. When Park officers Charles Sussler and Ralph Moore found Mrs. Petty shortly after 10:30 p.m. her throat was slashed from ear to ear. She told the officers as they escorted her to Bon Secours Hospital that her husband had knifed her and then taken off in their car.

Later that same evening, the officers carrying out the investigation learned from the Petty's neighbors that Mr. Petty was in Deaconess Hospital. Lt. Stanley Enders and Sgt. Charles French went over to chat with him. They arrived at the right moment—Mr. Petty had just been treated for multiple stab wounds in both arms.

Mr. Petty told the gentlemen that like any proper officer he let Minnie go first. That is—she stabbed him (she was conveniently carrying a knife in her dress) before a knife in her

Caution Traps Wanted Drivers

Woods police stopped a '55 Dodge for driving too slowly in the left lane of Mack at Newcastle on Thursday morning, August 23, and discovered that two of its three occupants were wanted by Detroit police on outstanding traffic warrants.

Albert Henry, 25, 147 Leicester, and Norman Jeffrey Hanes, 23, 1980 Philadelphia, were turned over to Detroit authorities.

The third occupant, Jerome James Gill, Jr., 23, 1412 East Grand boulevard, was released at the Woods station.

CONVERTIBLE DEBENTURES

You'll want a free copy of our latest research study on this type of security.

Convertible Debentures are basically promissory notes or IOU's of a corporation and they are usually backed by its general credit rather than by property mortgages or liens. Thus, you become a creditor of the corporation with the company's full faith and good credit behind your investment, and you have less risk than a stockholder. Also, should a rising market be indicated, you have a long term call on the company's common stock—the option to convert your bond at a contracted (pre-set) conversion price. Write today for latest bulletin. No obligation, of course.

Two Rescued As Car Burns

A Farms woman driver and her daughter received minor injuries on Saturday, September 1, when their car went out of control at Moran and Ridge roads and struck a tree, bursting into flames.

Injured were Mrs. Alice M. McKinney, 24, of 65 Mapleton, and her daughter, Ruth, 8. They were helped from their automobile by the driver of the car that hit theirs, Francis Huxley, 67, of 741 St. Clair.

Farms police said that Mrs. McKinney was driving south on Moran and ran through a stop street at the Ridge intersection. Huxley, a chauffeur employed by Hal H. Smith of 380 Provenal, was traveling east on Ridge, when the McKinney car crossed the road, but he could not avoid the collision.

The woman's car jumped the curb in front of 194 Moran and crashed into a tree and burst into flames. Black smoke billowed from beneath the vehicle.

Huxley stopped and helped the woman and her daughter from the burning car. Firemen arrived at the scene and extinguished the flames with a tank extinguisher.

Mrs. McKinney and her daughter were conveyed to Cottage Hospital, where the mother was treated for head and side injuries, and the girl for a lacerated right knee.

The officers who responded to the accident call, Patrolmen James Bliss and Earl Field, said that the impact tore the front seat loose, forcing it out the left front door.

Mrs. McKinney was given a ticket for not having her car under control and causing an accident. She is scheduled for a court hearing on Wednesday, September 19.

Fire Extinguishers Discovered in Lake

Four large fire extinguishers missing from the Detroit City Airport were found in Lake St. Clair on Tuesday, August 28.

Ronald Farmer, 2198 Malborough, who found the extinguishers, turned them over to Park Officer George McDowell.

Total value of the four extinguishers is $200.

The fellow who retires without a hobby finds it's a poor policy.

Open Car Door Causes Crash

Woods police ticketed both drivers involved in a minor accident at 19613 Mack on Monday, August 27.

Charged with not having her car under control is Florence Hubert, 1902 Prestwick. Mrs. Hubert was behind the wheel of her '60 Chevrolet, travelling south on Mack in the right lane, when Mary Wilkins, 903 Crescent lane, pushed open the left front door of her '59 Oldsmobile, parked at the curb in front of 19613 Mack.

Mrs. Hubert's vehicle rammed into the open door of Mrs. Wilkins' Oldsmobile. Both cars were damaged, the Chevy in its right front bumper and fender, the Olds in its left front door and side.

Mary Wilkins received a ticket for interfering with moving traffic.

Both drivers are scheduled to appear in Woods Justice Court September 15.

Theft of $106 Pinned on Boy

Park police arrested a 14-year-old Detroit boy on Tuesday, August 28, for the theft of more than $100 from a Park residence.

The boy is a jumper for a milk truck. On Saturday, August 25, he entered the Phil Costa residence, 1134 Nottingham, and grabbed a wallet containing $106 from the kitchen. Costa reported the theft to police that day.

Admit Stealing Parking Meters

Two Pointe juveniles admitted last week to the thefts of two parking meters which they stole in July.

The boys were questioned about the thefts by Farms police on Tuesday August 28. They admitted to the larceny of two parking meters from the parking lot, behind Kercheval-on-the-Hill, one on July 25 and the other on July 27.

The case will be heard in Wayne County Juvenile Court.

Reports Purse Stolen at Club

Jane Ecclestone, 300 Lincoln, reported to Farms police that her woven basket purse was stolen Sunday, August 26.

The purse was taken from her car while parked at the Country Club of Detroit across from the tennis courts between 6:15 and 6:45 p.m. that evening.

The basket purse, which has U.S. stamps around the edge and handle, contained a black alligator billfold. Inside the billfold were drivers' license, charge plates, and car keys.

Seniors to Hear Lee J. Smits

Lee J. Smits, newspaper man and public relations head of the Michigan Consolidated Gas Co., will address the Senior Men's Club at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial on Tuesday, September 11.

New Vanguard Ticket Plan

After consultation with a special representative from the Ford Foundation, Vanguard Playhouse now offers customers one of the most unique season tickets in the country; designed for easy use and cash savings.

For purchasers who like to wait until the last minute before deciding which night they will attend, a "carte blanche" plan is available. Under this policy, the season ticket holder purchases a book of 6 or 10 admissions and may apply as many admissions as he wishes, to any night he wishes. This permits the season ticket holder to pick only the shows he wants to see, and on the nights he wants to see them.

For persons wishing permanent seats on specific nights, the Playhouse offers a permanent seating plan which guarantees the same seat location throughout the season.

The $18 admission plan is valued at $18 and sells for $15, offering the purchaser a cash saving of $3. The 10 admission plan valued at $35, sells for $25, offering the customer a $10 savings. Either plan is available on the permanent seating basis or on the "carte blanche" basis.

The unusual musicals, dramas and comedies being offered by Vanguard are representative of the fact that Detroiters would never see most of these shows staged professionally if it weren't for this theatre. Scheduled for the coming season are the following 7 shows: "The Threepenny Opera", "The Egg", "The Fantasticks", "Hedda Gabler", "The Hostage", "HIM", and "Little Mary Sunshine".

Goal of the current season ticket campaign is the sale of 7,000 season tickets which would only leave balcony seats available for box office sale. Inquiries and orders should be directed to the Season Subscription Dept., Vanguard Playhouse, 58 E. Columbia, Detroit 1.

Three Teachers Attend Parley

Three Grosse Pointe teachers attended the international convention of The Delta Kappa Gamma Society, an honorary organization for women educators, held in Philadelphia earlier this month. More than 1,500 persons were in attendance. Leading the Grosse Pointe delegation was Miss Laura Mackeben, Grosse Pointe High School social studies teacher, who is president of the Grosse Pointe chapter of the society. Miss Virginia Johnston, Poupard first grade teacher, and immediate past-president of the local chapter, and Miss Manerva Johnson, Pierce social studies teacher and recording secretary, accompanied her.

Delta Kappa Gamma is organized in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and six Canadian provinces. A total of 80,000 claim membership. This year the society awarded four international scholarships to members for graduate study, each award being in the amount of $2,500. Three World Fellowships in the same amount were given also to women from other countries for study in North American universities.

The Grosse Pointe chapter will be hostess to members of all Delta Kappa Gamma chapters in southeastern Michigan this fall. A regional workshop will be held at the War Memorial Saturday, October 20.

Symphony Group To Be Honored

Mrs. Andrew L. Malott of 18 Oxford road will open her lovely home and grounds for the meeting of the Women's Auxiliary for the Detroit Women's Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday, September 12, at 1 o'clock.

Co-chairmen of the day, Mrs. Edward A. Baumann, Sr., of Lochmoor boulevard and Mrs. Harry Chapman of Lakeshore lane, have endeavored to make the auxiliary's initial social event of the year a highlight. Assisting them will be the vice-president of the auxiliary, Mrs. William P. Chester of Roosevelt place.

The orchestra, founded sixteen years ago, is sponsored by the Tuesday Musicales of Detroit. The incoming officers of the Tuesday Musicales, Mesdames Aaron Simmons, Harry W. Taylor, F. D. Lorentzen, Jr., and Kurt R. Keydel have been asked to preside at the table.

Appearing on the program are the energetic chairman and vice-chairman of the Women's Symphony Board, Mrs. Walter H. Winkler and Mrs. Frank Zocharski.

They will be heard along with Minota Pollock and Ruth Yzquierdo who comprise the Women's Symphony String Quartet. Also appearing will be Mrs. Edward A. Baumann, Jr., lyric soprano of Lancaster road, accompanied by Lawrence LaGore, and Betty Gozesky, pianist.

Guests will have the opportunity during the afternoon to purchase patron tickets for the 1962-63 concert season from Mrs. Sol Q. Kester, ticket chairman.

Grosse Pointe area residents Ruth Burezyk, pianist and Jean Ground, soprano, are appearing as soloists with the Women's Symphony on March 15, 1963.

The fellow who can make both ends meet today proves to the world that he has great ability.

In This Issue . . .

Toast That Perfect Host . . . page 8

Elsa Maxwell says that the symbol of the cocktail party is the white-ringed stain on the hostess's best mahogany. You can get rid of that stain by rubbing the meat of a walnut on your furniture. This is just one of the tips we've gathered—from hostesses, butlers, and inveterate party-goers—on the lazy man's delightful way of entertaining (and whoever said you can be lazy and run a smooth party must have had one martini too many).

The Return of the Tyrant . . . page 10

The suburban wife longs (subconsciously) to be dominated by a Victorian-style husband. So says Professor C. Northcote Parkinson, author of "Parkinson's Law" and "In-laws and Outlaws." With great satisfaction he offers a plan to restore Father to his rightful place as the beloved tyrant in the family.

Should You Help Your Child with Homework? . . . page 14

Yes, says Frieda Van Atta, a long-time teacher. Educators have changed their minds on this one. Mrs. Van Atta discusses how to tell when your child needs help and outlines the steps to follow when you tutor at home, with some common-sense advice that will make the going much easier for you and your pupil.

Shades of Abe Lincoln . . . page 16

Our "Unusual Suburban Home" this month features a log house that dates back to pre-Revolutionary times. Located in Fox Chapel, a suburb of Pittsburgh, it combines the new and convenient (a built-in charcoal grill) with the old and charming (cherry plank floors and Early American antiques).

On the Cover

Upstairs, downstairs . . . and even on the sun deck, everybody's back home this month to get in the groove for the busy fall season ahead. Cover artist John Huehnergath shows Junior and his buddy in the garage . . . the parents and their friends on the ground floor . . . and the younger set with a game of darts upstairs. Can you think of a better place to be?

GETTING AROUND

. . . to Our Pleasant Places and People

A FRIEND IN Silver Spring, Maryland, sent us this notice from a bulletin board in the U. S. Department of Agriculture: "To live happily in the country, one must have the soul of a poet, the mind of a philosopher, the simple tastes of a hermit, and a good station wagon."

Thanks for the tip, James Houston, of Marietta, Georgia. Mr. Houston, who's in the wrecker business, says that ordinary dirt, sprinkled on any spilled liquid, will make the cleanup a cinch. After a recent bout with an overturned egg truck, he and his crew should know.

From Maricopa County, Arizona, a little while ago, we had news of the marriage of Henry Hong to Miss Mary Kong. The new Mrs. Hong, the former Miss Kong, is a native of Hong Kong.

Clifton Smith, 19, who lives near Middlesex, New Jersey, has his own lively business. He keeps a "stable" of 35 frogs for rent to children who

When Dr. Enid Robles of The Lansdale Clinic, Lansdale, Pennsylvania, has to send a small patient to the hospital, she paves the way by providing him with a booklet, "I Went to the Hospital." The booklet shows, in cheerful but accurate pictures, what the child can expect in the way of nurses, interns, thermometers, wards, and all the rest of the unfamiliar and probably alarming routine. We think the booklet can do wonders in alleviating prehospital tension for a youngster. Written and illustrated by Ellie Simmons, it is put out by the Parents' Committee of the Children's Ward of Tompkins County Hospital, Box 23, Ithaca, New York, and may be ordered for 30¢ a copy. The Parents' Committee has also prepared a documentary film on hospitalization—"A New World for Peter"—which they rent on request.

A building near Princess Anne County, Virginia, has had an unusual succession of tenants. It was originally built as the Central Methodist Church. It then served as the home of the Gomley Chessed Synagogue. And now it's used as an assembly hall for the Knights of Columbus.

want to enter pet-show racing events. But Clifton doesn't promise to pick a sure winner for his customer. He claims the frogs look so much alike that he can't keep track of which ones are champions.

EUROPE GOES ON

Starting October 1, low 17-day Jet economy Rainbow fares to Europe will save you up to $136 over regular Jet economy fares.

You will, for example, be able to fly New York-Shannon for $305, round trip . . . Washington, D.C.-Paris, $421 . . . Los Angeles-London, $630 . . . and on Pan Am's new route, Miami-Lisbon, $437.

But, how much of Europe you see in 17 days, and how easily and enjoyably you see it pretty much depends on what the airline you select offers in the way of flights, destinations, departure points and service. In every one of these important areas Pan Am gives you more for your money than any other airline. And you're in U.S. hands all the way.

Set your own schedule.

You can see and enjoy a lot of Europe in 17 days, if you can leave when you want, travel within Europe as you please, and return at your own convenience.

On Pan Am you can. This fall Pan Am will offer a total of 63 Jet flights a week from the U.S. to Europe. Far more flights than any other airline. Far more freedom in planning your trip.

Select your own destinations.

Just as important as when you can leave is where you can go. Again Pan Am is a friend indeed. Pan Am offers direct Jet service from the U.S. to 21 European cities . . . far more destinations than any other airline.

On Pan Am you can plan a 17-day itinerary that starts where you want to start . . . goes where you want to go . . .

ends where you want it to end. Fly direct to Rome from New York, for example, then when the mood strikes you continue through Europe by Pan Am and connecting carrier, return home directly from London. No backtracking. No time lost. And many extra cities at no extra fare!

Leave from close to home.

Another Pan Am vacation stretcher is the opportunity you have of leaving from close to your home. Only Pan Am departs directly for Europe from as many as 15 U.S. Gateway cities . . . New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore/Washington, Miami, Detroit, Chicago, Seattle/Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Dallas, Houston.

Think of what it can mean on a 17-day vacation not to change planes . . . not to waste time in layovers . . . not to travel up to hundreds of miles reaching a departure point! Voila!

Prefer a tour?

Pan Am has helped more people see the world through the convenience and economy of low-cost tours than any other airline. Pan Am's pre-planned 17-day Jet

Many of the 425 members of Unit No. 7 of the Hairdressers' Association in King County, Washington, go right on with their work on their day off. Equipment in hand, they visit hospitals, homes for the aged, and children's institutions, where they give free haircuts, manicures, and shampoos to people who cannot get out to a beauty shop. A welcome break in a routine day, these visits are real health and morale builders, too—you feel better when you look better, as we all know.

Ed Stone, who lives near El Cerrito, California, writes us about stopping at a general store in a small town in his state. The elderly, friendly proprietor had a large, old-style one-dollar bill framed and hung on the wall behind his cash register.

"I guess that's the first dollar you took in when you opened this store," Mr. Stone said.

"Not quite," the storekeeper answered. "Took me, close to three years before I put that up there. That's the first dollar I could count as profit."

"Main Gate, St. Peter speaking," was the answer a newsman got when he telephoned the Dayton Air Force depot from nearby Oakwood, Ohio. The depot hasn't a direct line to heaven, just a guard named Jay St. Peter at the main gate.

There's a new twist to the childhood game of "playing house," according to Mrs. Joan Kelly of Glen Cove, Long Island. It's called "witch house," and one of the delights is preparing, verbally, the recipes for ghoulish masterpieces. Recently, she overheard a group of youngsters absorbed in this game. One by one, they called out their contributions to the imaginary dinner—"toad," "crushed viper," "bat's wing." Then the youngest member of the group, a five-year-old, piped up, "And don't forget the vitamins!"

Teen-agers in Parkrose, Oregon, have a special friend in the person of Mrs. Betty Easton, who until recently ran an employment agency of her own. Retired now, she devotes one day a week to volunteer job counseling to place teen-age clients in part-time and summer jobs while they're in school plus full-time positions after they've graduated. Advising the students is only half of it; in addition she persuades employers to give young people a chance. According to Mrs. Easton, most teen workers are willing, capable, and responsible:

"If a prospective employer has any doubts, I just tell him to get in touch with the men who have hired them. These satisfied employers are our best advertisement."

How to Have the Perfect Cocktail Party

"COCKTAIL PARTIES are ghastly businesses," Elsa Maxwell told an interviewer. "The symbol is the white ring on the best mahogany."

(Right here, for the record, it should be noted that the ring can be removed by rubbing with a walnut meat from the can.)

Mrs. Cleveland Amory doesn't like cocktail parties, either. She especially doesn't like being invited at the last minute and being told "to come as you are."

"From experience," she says, "I've found that you shouldn't come as you are unless your hair is beautifully done and you're wearing your best. I don't go very often, but Clip's there for both of us."

Charles Addams says cocktail parties are a purée of people who tend to get as blurry as bananas in a blender. Philip Wylie thinks they're a catastrophe and "sound like a ton of china going over Niagara," and Max Shulman is frankly scared of them.

Listen to them! And guest-of-honor timber, every one of them. But all they're talking about, of course, is "the average cocktail party" where quantities of liquor and people are combined in the hope that something will happen.

"And what can't!" as Jack Lemmon says.

But even Mrs. Amory admits she has been to memorable parties, too—the ones that burst into brief, lovely lives of their own. And Philip Wylie goes on to say he does like the ones he has himself (a very good sign).

"We send out our invitations a couple of weeks ahead of time," he says, "and write on them how long the party is supposed to last. Five to seven. And if it's a big party, 50 people or more, we get a professional bartender. He's worth it for two reasons. He'll see that the drinks get lighter, not stronger, on the third and fourth rounds, and he'll close the bar up for you when the time comes, as it usually does, about an hour later than you indicated on the invitation. When the bottles disappear, people do, too."

A butler with 40 years of parties behind him agrees on the importance of bringing big parties to some sort of decisive end.

"There's many an evening I've been behind that bar till midnight," he says, "but I always thought the people seemed to enjoy themselves most at the ones that ended more or less on time.

"At those parties when I used to powder and curl my hair—in London, in the days when I had hair," he added nostalgically, "people would be asked for six to eight, and by eight they'd all be gone. It was the way they did things in those days."

As a professional who is still in great demand for putting on parties, even in these less curled and powdered times, he has these practical suggestions for those who are doing their own:

1. Consult your local liquor dealer or the steward at the club about prevailing tastes. For 50 people you will find that six quarts (or seven or eight fifths) of Scotch, four of Bourbon, three of gin, and one each of sherry, apéritif, and vermouth will usually be enough, but tastes and capacities vary locally. It is wise, therefore, to arrange with your dealer to have extra supplies on consignment, which can be returned after the party. Then you will be sure of not running out. Count on 16 to 18 good stiff drinks to the quart. After the second round make them lighter. People will enjoy them just as much and more.

2. Be sure to have ginger ale, vegetable juices, or bouillon over ice cubes for those who don't drink. Set the nonalcoholic drinks out on their own tray in your best pitcher, ready to pour. If some of your guests are college age, you will want beer on hand, and here too it is practical to get more than you think you are going to need. An excellent nonalcoholic punch can be made, using sparkling white grape juice, soda, and a dash of ginger ale. Pour over a big block of ice.

3. Consider seriously hiring china and glass for a big party, instead of using your own. Here again, your liquor dealer will probably know where to go—who better?—and also where to get extra ice.

4. Limit the drinks to a choice of three or four—too much variety makes for interruption and delay and puts a crimp in the party. Mix the cocktails and bottle them before the party and then shake them or pour them over the rocks at the last moment. By the same token, keep the hors d'oeuvres simple, easy to handle, and plentiful for a big party. Thin bread and butter sandwiches are always popular. Make them with care, spreading the butter right to the corners, and put in generous fillings—plenty of ham or turkey or cheese. If you make sandwiches the day before and wrap them and put them in the icebox, they will be even better the day of the party—the bread and butter tend to "marry" with the filling, if given time. In many towns the Woman's Exchange specializes in hors d'oeuvres and party sandwiches and can save the busy hosts a lot of time and work.

5. To get a party of 50 people running happily, you will need help—say one bartender, an extra man to keep the glasses chilled and filled, and a girl to pass hors d'oeuvres and keep passing them (people tend to eat sparingly at first, but hunger rises with the excitement). If you are depending on friends to help with the drinks and hors d'oeuvres, the number of helpers should be doubled because they're sure to have a little trouble keeping their minds on their work.

6. Depending on your layout, an auxiliary bar can be a convenience when placed at the opposite end of the room or in another room. The most practical bar is made by covering a long table with a cloth so it is covered on top and draped in front. On top, it is set for the party, and underneath, where only the bartender can see, the extra supplies are stored.

7. With 20 cars or more arriving, there is a risk of parking snarls. It is a good idea to hire two high-school boys with driving licenses and flawless records to take the cars at the door and park them.

So much for logistics. And now for the extras, the little touches that create the final illusion.

A party should be a celebration for a birthday or an anniversary or a visiting friend or for listen-

Parkinson's Law

In the home as in the office, the best is none too good for the head of the house—and here's how to get it

BY C. NORTHCOTE PARKINSON

author of "Parkinson's Law" and "In-Laws and Outlaws"

Each member will in turn be hoisted on the others' shoulders and carried back to his home in triumph.

IT IS THE FATE of suburban man, as contrasted with suburban woman, to divide his time between two worlds; the world of the office and the world of the home. In the Office, in the Downtown part of his life, a man may be Manager of the Sales Department, Vice-President of the Kiwanis, and Permanent Class Secretary. In that world of business and male association women play only a humble role as awe-stricken and admiring subordinates. In the suburb where he lives, by contrast, the Downtown Executive dwindles to nothing. He is merely Bill, Janice's husband, an auxiliary whose duty it is to move the trash can, cook at the barbecue, replace the fuse, and open the beer.

The original balance of power in the home may have been fair and probably was, but the recent trend has been to the man's disadvantage. In a Victorian household of 13 children the father's role was necessarily dictatorial. He was headmaster in all but name. But when families dwindled to three or less (in the 1930's) it became possible and indeed fashionable to treat each child as a separate and insoluble problem in psychology, devoting to each an attention which may not have been sensible then and which certainly would not have been at all possible before.

The parental authority that waned as children became fewer has not been restored now that children have again become numerous. And the effect of shorter working hours, with a longer weekend and vacation, is to diminish the proportion of a man's life during which his status may be high. More and more of his time is spent in minding the baby or fixing the dishwasher. His authority is gone.

Of this fact his wife is aware, and she is not entirely pleased about it. For the cult of "togetherness" and the idea of Dad playing elder brother to Junior may end in a league against her and prevents her, in any case, from using Father as a Court of Appeal. The Olympian role depends upon distance, and Father, so far from being remote, has almost become one of the kids. As this leaves Mother to make the unpopular decisions on her own authority, Father's lack of prestige is not ultimately convenient even for her.

What is Father to do about it? In attempting to solve this basic problem of the modern world we must dismiss, first of all, the idea of Father taking command in the home. He might dream, for a moment, of issuing detailed orders which would improve the standard of housekeeping. The more probable result, however, would be his wife's virtual resignation, after which all the work would fall on him. He would probably do it better (the world's best cooks are men), but that would be small consolation for having to do it all. He would reflect—if he had the leisure—that household organization was originally assigned to women not because they have any special gift for it (they haven't) but because men prefer to do something else.

INTERFERENCE in the home would be fatal. On the contrary—you should seek to withdraw to a distance from which authority can be exercised. You must create, over weekends, too, a masculine world from which women and children are definitely excluded. You must be away from home more often, returning with improved status and a hint, perhaps, of the mysterious.

Towards establishing this new environment, the first step is for the downtrodden husbands to organize themselves into a secret society. Its members will form groups of five, each sworn to uphold the prestige of the rest. You, let us suppose, are Green, your fellow members in the group being White, Black, Brown, and Gray. You decide jointly on a prestige policy for each member. White is to have been a hero in World War II. Black has saved several people from drowning. Brown once had all Hollywood at his feet. Gray gave up boxing when he killed an opponent. And you, Bill Green? Did you go round the world before the mast in a windjammer? No. You are the marksman who even today, years out of practice, can still riddle the bull's-eye at 500 yards.

In each of these legends there should be an element of truth or, anyway, of likelihood. White thus needs to have been born before 1930 and Black should at least be able to swim.

Let us assume that your own turn has come for build-up. First visitor is White, who asks you, in the family's presence, why you're not doing more shooting these days.

YOU: I don't know, White. I guess I'm too old.

WHITE: Too old—after that lesson you gave Tom?

YOU: (embarrassed) Oh, that! It was nothing, really . . .

WIFE: But what happened?

WHITE: Well, Janice, this husband of yours heard Tom boasting about what he could do with a gun. Poor

for the Self-made Caveman

terested." True heroism is always associated with modesty. The false hero should be more modest still.

Come now to Phase B. Prestige cannot be maintained indefinitely by the blushing refusal to talk about an imaginary past. To the heroism of the past must be added a heroism of the present. This can be done through a Sports Club formed for the purpose and confined to men; confined, in fact, to married men.

THE CLUB premises will comprise a space for indoor sports, a Finnish sauna or steam bath, and a bar. What sports should the club pursue? Volleyball, judo, archery, or fencing? It hardly matters provided the emphasis is on activities to which women are not attracted or in which they cannot excel. With similar clubs established elsewhere, it will be easy to arrange matches with visiting teams, as easy again to play matches away. Whether any game takes place is immaterial, but the rule to be observed is that both teams always win by a narrow margin. A further rule will allow each member to score the winning point on a strict system of rotation. Each will in turn be hoisted on the others' shoulders and carried back to his home amidst frantic applause.

The change brought about in the home by this operation, Phases A and B, is best illustrated in dramatic form. It is evening in the suburb and all four children are at home.

WILLY: I wanna go see Paul.

MOTHER: No, dear. Father said you were to do your homework.

SALLY: Mamma, that brat Marty is pulling my hair!

MOTHER: Marty! Stop it, or I'll have to ask your father to take over.

MARTY: Can I go play with Tim?

MOTHER: Not tonight. Father wants you to feed the puppies.

SUE: The Field kids have asked us to go camping with them.

MOTHER: No, dear. Father won't hear of it. (This is strictly true.)

The merit in this technique is that Father is not present, does not know of the proposals and the bluff, therefore, cannot be called. At this moment, over at the club, the theoretical game is finished, and the sauna is taken, and Father is one of those gathered round the bar singing "Little brown jug, how I love thee!" And now, back home, the telephone rings.

ANNE: (a neighbor): Janice?

MOTHER: Anne! Haven't seen you for weeks!

ANNE: No, dear, I've been terribly busy with the new Discussion Group. I expect you've heard of it.

MOTHER: The Peace Society?

ANNE: That's it. We are to meet and discuss ethics and fallout, segregation and international friendship. Dr. Foster is to speak at our first meeting and Professor James at the second. Helen is president and she wants to know whether you will be treasurer? We all feel you should be on the committee and we all remember how good you were with the Operatic Society.

Mother detests the whole business which she thinks intolerably futile. On the other hand, she doesn't want to offend Helen and the rest. Nor does she want Anne saying that she is antisocial and lazy. Time was when she would have weakly said 'yes' but nowadays she knows how to handle it.

MOTHER: How terribly kind of you all to think of me. I'm honored and grateful—I really am. I should have loved to help, but Bill has forbidden me to be on any more committees! So I shall have to say 'no'.

ANNE: (Screams) But, Janice, how Victorian of you!

MOTHER: I know, but there it is. Bill expects to be obeyed.

ANNE: And beats you if you don't?

MOTHER: Not too often. I usually do what he says.

ANNE: (Awe-struck) You poor thing!

MOTHER: Oh, well . . . so I must ask you to find someone else. How about Peggy? She is wonderful with accounts and things. . . .

THE CONVERSATION goes on for 20 minutes and will be reported fully to the other wives. But amid the chorus of sympathy that will greet her, the oppressed wife will detect with satisfaction the shrill note of envy. To the convenience of having a Head of the House to whom all unpopular decisions can be attributed, she has added the distinction of being married to a tyrant. As she hangs up there comes the distant sound of cheering and the strains of "See, the Conquering Hero Comes!" Bill is on his way home, having won the match for his club. The children will be delighted, their own prestige in the gang being at stake. And Mother? She will be delighted, too, whether wholly convinced or not. She is married to a brutal male, and it is the fate that every woman desires.

It hardly matters what sports the club pursues, so long as they are those in which women cannot excel.

old Tom! Remember his face, Bill, when he saw your target?

YOU: Well, he was a little ahead of himself. But he means no harm. We had a drink together afterwards.

WHITE: Black was telling me about the time you shot the rattlesnake down in New Mexico. He's pretty good himself, I hear—well, I must be getting along. Good-bye, Janice. G'bye, Bill.

Gray turns up with Brown a few days later and says that they have been having a bet. Did you win the championship in 1956 or 1957? This question settled, they go on to talk about something else. Essence of the scheme is to avoid overdoing it. A week later Black appears with his talk of that time you shot the rattlesnake. By now your boys will regard you with dumb veneration, and even your wife will tell the others about you at the supermarket.

FOR THIS build-up process (Phase A) the rule is to choose an activity in which your pretended excellence remains untested. Former achievements in war, diplomacy, finance, or love, for instance, are not readily put to the test. "Why didn't you ever tell me?" your wife will whisper. "Oh, it was nothing," you mutter. "I didn't think you'd be in-

FINE ART

ON A SHOESTRING

If you have ever sighed wistfully at an art exhibit, wishing you could afford to hang original art in your house, then sigh no more. You can easily afford it. For about the same price you'd pay for a good reproduction, you can begin a collection of "graphics"—signed originals by fine artists of international reputation.

The graphic is in every respect an "original." It is the kind of original, however, that the artist has designed for printing in a limited number of copies. Instead of theirs, being only one such picture in the world, there may be 20 or 50 or any number up to about 250. Each is printed from a plate the artist has made himself. Either he does the printing himself or he supervises the work. Each is inspected by him, and he signs only approved ones.

The difference in price is impressive. At one New York art gallery, a fine Braque aquatint—in an expensively hand-made frame—was recently offered for $215. The price, unframed, would have been about $150 for an original work of art by an artist whose paintings command prices in the $50,000 range. Framed works by lesser known fine artists can be bought at the same gallery for as little as $39.50, a price that is often charged for reproductions of fairly good quality. Picasso, the highest priced living painter, whose paintings today sell for upwards of $100,000, is available in signed lithographs at a cost of from $200 to $600.

As one collector recently remarked, "The signature alone is worth the price."

Graphics used to be called "prints." This was reasonable terminology, since they are produced by a printing process. But it left the public no way to distinguish in its own mind between original art and reproductions, which are also "prints." Except for a few connoisseurs who knew the difference, nobody was willing to pay very much for a print. The artists never expected much payment for them and a low price was maintained.

Museums and galleries, however, which seldom exhibit reproductions but often have shows of original prints, felt that they needed a distinctive word and adopted the term

Paintings by fine artists run high but you can start a collection of their original prints for as little as $10 or $15

"graphic." Although both are printed, there are many significant differences between the two.

Most important, the reproduction is a picture of a picture. It is primarily the work of a printer who is usually trying to reproduce in printer's ink what the artist originally set down in oil paint on canvas. Unusual colors, mixed with care by the artist, are nearly impossible to reproduce accurately, as is the texture of the original brush strokes. The reproduction may be a very pleasing picture in itself, and worth owning for that reason. But it is not the picture the artist originally intended to make.

The graphic, on the other hand, is intentionally designed by the artist to be printed. He chooses and mixes his colors in printer's ink, and makes the printing plate himself. Every line and tone on the graphic is his work. The famous etchings of Rembrandt and Goya, the lithographs of Daumier, the original lithographed Toulouse-Lautrec posters, would today be called graphics, not prints.

And today, as the public gradually comes to understand the difference, the value of graphics is on the rise. Twenty-five years ago you could buy a signed Rembrandt etching for $50, or a Lautrec poster for $20. Now you would have to pay several hundred for either.

This does not mean that any graphic you buy will increase in value. Most of them will not. As is true of paintings, to buy a graphic as an investment requires expert knowledge. You're better off buying the picture that pleases you and not worrying about investment.

interesting for collectors and investors, the average picture buyer can fill his house with pleasure by obeying his own instincts for line and form and period. The graphic by the comparative unknown can be bought unframed, for as little as $10 or $15.

In the opinion of many collectors, there is vastly more artistic value, more beauty and pleasure in an original work, even though it is by an artist of lesser genius. And in buying a graphic, you are getting a work that in all probability is unique as far as your own community is concerned. Even though there may be 100 of them distributed around the world, your visitors will probably never see one except in your house.

Should You Help with Homework?

"Yes," says an experienced teacher, telling how to go about it, and why

BY FRIEDA VAN ATTA

author of "How to Help Your Child in Grade School Science"

EVERY SCHOOL TERM, many parents spend hours goading and nagging their children to make better marks in school. But more often than not, nagging will get them nowhere. Low marks, unfortunately, are liable to be symptoms of a deeper problem: Somewhere along the line, the child has failed to grasp the basic material that is the key to his more advanced work in school.

In this era of crowded classrooms and overworked teachers, children in most public schools must be treated as groups rather than as individuals if curriculum requirements are to be met. The teacher just doesn't have time to cope with special needs. If a student misses important classroom work or fails to master basic principles when taught, he is in serious trouble. It is here where you, the parent, can step in as a tutor, to bridge the learning gap for your child.

Let us assume, as an example, that your child is in the sixth grade. For the first two quarters his report shows a "B" average in arithmetic. In the third quarter he gets a "C." This is cause for concern. Go to his teacher and ask her why he's slipping.

She tells you that the class has been working in fractions for the past several weeks. Both in his daily written work and in his quarterly examination your child has been falling down on the problems involving division. His teacher has no free time to go back and tutor him on the first steps, but she can show you the section in his textbook where the material is introduced with full explanation and exercises to be worked. Then you can review it several times with him at home, making sure that he understands the meaning of words like "divisor" and "invert." After you've worked some problems together, give him a few similar problems to work alone. If he makes mistakes, take him through the exercises again, being careful to point out where he made his basic error. On another day, without previous review, give him another set of examples to do.

Before you enter into the teacher-student relationship with your child, remind yourself that while he has many things in common with other children his age, he is not to be confused with any of them. No two children develop in exactly the same way or at the same rate. A child slow in the first few grades can suddenly find himself and become a brilliant student, but potential can be seriously delayed if his confidence is destroyed by a parent who demands more of him than he is capable of achieving at the time.

The parent's role of tutor-when-needed, with the blessing of the school, is a recent change in educational policy. For many years, many educators recommended that parents make no attempt whatever to help their children with homework. It was felt that such efforts would do more harm than good. This attitude is now changing. Early this year, the Department of Elementary School Principals, of the National Education Association, published a small handbook for parents entitled: "How to Help Your Child Learn." I heartily recommend it to you. It costs 50¢ and can be ordered from NEA, 1201 16th Street, N.W., Washington 6, D.C.

I suspect that this change of heart on the part of our educational experts stems from need. Not too long ago, before the post-war baby boom, our nation had an abundance of good teachers. A teacher's job was to teach. I had only 30 children in my class, and I taught them all their seventh-grade subjects. I came to know each child intimately and to understand whatever problems he may have had.

All of this has changed. Last year, in a large central school system, I taught seventh-grade English in a modern junior high school. I had 150 children in five classes, averaging 30 children each. The clerical work alone for this many children—attendance records, admissions and transfers, checking books in and out, collecting homeroom lunch money—took hours of my teaching time each week. No matter how much a teacher might want to give individual tutoring, she just hasn't the time or the energy to spare, with a class of 150 children. Today, if special attention is needed, it must come from parents or from an outside source.

One last word of caution: If you do help your child directly with his school work, always do it in cooperation with his teachers. Should you become too critical and demanding (and it's a constant temptation), the teacher may recognize that you are doing more harm than good. If she asks you to stop, follow her advice.

You can build confidence by praising effort and sharing your child's satisfaction in what he can accomplish, but demanding perfection is no way to help. If you take the trouble to tutor him, he will see that you are truly concerned, and this knowledge, plus the review he needs, can do more than pressure to stimulate him to greater efforts.

■ LOG AND MORTAR WALLS—both inside and outside—give a rugged, romantic character to this pre-Revolutionary house in Fox Chapel, Pennsylvania. The front of the house dates back to 1774, while the “new” back part was built in 1812. The owners, Dr. and Mrs. James Henninger, have used simple, dignified 18th-century furniture in many rooms and modernized in kitchen, utility room, and baths. Out of doors, they have planted rose and herb gardens, and they love the view of dogwood from the porch with its built-in barbecue, where they “live” all summer. Mrs. Henninger, who is quite musical, has found that the 10-inch-thick log walls of her living room provide wonderful acoustics for her grand piano and hi-fi, and the stereo that is unobtrusively built in a cherry cupboard. The Henningers are still very happy with their log house as it was and is, in spite of the home-remodeling agent who made a special appointment one day to come and explain to them how it could be covered with aluminum siding—“and you’d never know the place!”

Right: The only room without log and mortar walls on all sides, this modern bath is decorated with an Early American print wallpaper.

Above: The spacious master bedroom, complete with its own fireplace and solid wooden beams overhead. A log-walled bath and an airy sleeping porch open off this room.

Right: Antiques in the dining room include fireplace bricks that were part of Pittsburgh's original Fort Pitt, portraits of Mrs. Henninger's great-grandparents, and her great-grandmother's cherry drop-leaf table.

My baby looks like the Gerber baby—

Bringing Up Baby®
Hints Collected
by Mrs. Dan Gerber,
Mother of 5

Of all the warm and wonderful words, written by warm and wonderful mothers, none please me more than these: “My baby looks like the Gerber Baby.” Because I like to think the Gerber Baby has a special something that belongs to all babies who are loved. It lights up their eyes. It sings out in their shining faces. It speaks softly of inner security... proof positive of a happy heart.

Yes, love is the strong song, managing miracles nothing else can. When you love a baby you wrap him in a smile that will warm him a whole life through.

Mothers often write to ask if the Gerber Baby is a boy baby or a girl-baby. Well, our little charmer was conceived not as a he or she, but a representative baby... the beautiful kind all mothers have.

When the Gerber Baby first appeared in Gerber advertisements over 30 years ago, mothers by the score began writing for reprints of the little sketch. (Matter of fact, the very popularity of the picture prompted the decision to use the baby as the Gerber trademark.) If you would like a print suitable for framing, just send 10¢, to cover costs, to: Gerber Baby Foods, Dept. 649-2, Fremont, Michigan.

Today, the Gerber Baby is more than just a famous trademark. It has become the symbol of the specialists who devote all their energies to the most important people... your baby and all babies. Their efforts are never-ending in behalf of better infant nutrition. From research, all through processing and final packing, the people who prepare your baby's food look upon the Gerber Baby as their special representative for Gerber quality.

Important: Gerber prepares over 100 baby foods—cereals, strained and junior—to meet your baby's nutritional needs. We're proud to say: “BABIES ARE OUR BUSINESS... OUR ONLY BUSINESS!”®

You Owe Your Dog an Education

BY WILLY NECKEL

Author of "How to Train the Family Dog"

Teach him "Heel," "Sit," "Down," "Stay," and "Come," and keep him out of trouble with the neighbors and strange children and all the other dogs around

"Come" is speedily obeyed by Meigs, the cocker spaniel of Jess and Joyce Henslee of Elmhurst, Illinois.

WHEN I AM ASKED why a dog should be trained in obedience, my answer is simple: because a dog is to be enjoyed. You will enjoy your dog more—as a companion, as a guardian of your home, and as a friend—if you give him a basic education in obedience.

Just like children, dogs that are given no training and too much freedom are spoiled and aimless. They are basically unhappy. Like unhappy people, they will get into trouble. They become the neighborhood nuisance or a menace to society.

Another reason for training your dog is that it is fun for the whole family, as well as the one who trained him. You can all feel proud of owning a well-mannered dog.

Any breed of dog can be trained, including dogs whose breeding may be a little muddled. Some breeds and individual dogs are harder to train than others. Like people, dogs differ in their physical coordination, intelligence, sensitivity, desire to cooperate, and so on; but each one can be trained if his owner is willing to work hard and be patient. It surely is worth it in the end.

In many towns there are obedience-training classes and clubs for the dogs and their owners. The course usually consists of two or three months of weekly training lessons, and daily practice sessions are always recommended.

If you cannot take your dog to a class, get yourself the proper equipment. It consists of a training collar, a short leash and a long leash, and "the time to have patience." Then take your dog and head for the street or the back yard or the family room in off hours—some place where the two of you can work alone undisturbed.

Before you begin, make sure your dog is in top physical condition. A dog, like a child, should be rested and well nourished, if he is going to be alert and receptive. Like a child, too, he will do better if he isn't overworked. And before he starts a training session he should always get out for some free exercise and a proper chance to relieve himself.

You will get best results if you arrange two training sessions a day, not over 15 minutes each. If the going seems rough, as it sometimes will, remember you always have one great asset—your pupil is truly eager to please you and find out what you want. Here is the curriculum:

■ FIRST LESSON: "Heel." Fasten the short leash to his collar and show him you want him to walk on your left side and respectfully at your heels. Hold the leash in your right hand and take up the slack with your left, so you can give a little reminder jerk when he starts to stray from his proper place. One little jerk—not a steady pull. He is not walking on a leash now, he's learning to heel, to enable him eventually to come off the leash and walk in a well-educated way at your heels. Every now and then, as you walk along with him, say "Heel" in a firm but friendly way. For the first lesson, concentrate on having him go with you as best he can, and then in the following lessons keep him fairly well in the correct position, at your heels. When he gets ahead of you, bring him back, commanding "Heel!" and at the same time make him mind by giving him quick sharp jerks on the leash. Give him a little slack on the leash when he is heeling as he should. Then, if he drops behind or crowds ahead, tell him to "Heel" and jerk on his leash.

Keep at it till he gets the idea and heels in the correct position without tugging. He must really follow as you walk fast or slow, or turn right or left. It sounds hard, but don't forget you're dealing with a very intelligent animal. It will be easier to train him than you think, and most dogs take kindly to heeling, especially at the end, when they have the reward of being taken off the leash. Some even seem to train themselves and are already heeling before they have a lesson—like those children who seem to teach themselves to swim or read.

■ SECOND LESSON: "Sit." When he has learned this lesson, he must mind and sit at once when you give the command, no matter what he has been doing—heeling or snoozing in the sun or preparing to rush the neighbor's cat (no one can be a saint all the time). To teach him to "sit," put on his training collar with the short leash and walk with him at heel. Then stop, take hold of the leash about 10 inches from the collar, tell him to "Sit," jerking upward quickly with the leash and pressing down on his hind quarters with your left hand. Repeat the word "Sit" several times. Then let him get up and both of you go on with the walk, repeating the process again. All you can expect, while he is learning, the meaning of the word, is to get him to sit—don't bother too much how he does it. But once he knows what you're talking about, show him how to sit smartly on both haunches, facing in the direction you've been going. Finally, he should sit at once when you tell him to, whether he is off his leash or on it.

■ THIRD LESSON: "Down." This one isn't easy. It seems to worry most dogs at first to have to lie down on all fours at the command, but they get used to it, and it's one of the most useful things they can learn. The way to show your dog what you want is to drop quickly to your left knee, and with your left hand gripping the leash close to his collar, give it short jerks downward. Say "Down, down, down." Keep on saying it even when he is down. At the beginning, he needs to have the word drummed into him. As soon as you walk off, he should get up and follow (he will), and then he should be patted and praised. But don't pet him when he's down or he'll want to jump right up and forgive and forget. After one of these hard lessons, put him through the heeling and sitting he has learned to do perfectly—and praise him. He will feel better and so will you. It is a good idea to switch to a quick review sometimes even in the middle of a 15-minute training period, if things aren't going too well, in order to relax for a bit before going on with the tough work. In the end, however, the struggle will be worth it. Your dog will be safer, knowing how to charge "Down" when you tell him to, and he will be admired—as he will clearly see—for his sagacity in obeying you.

■ FOURTH LESSON: "Stay." This is another hard one, and you will both benefit if you can get in two short sessions a day, keeping them strictly private between you. And once again, begin with a review of what your dog has learned, so you can both feel cheered before tackling the new problem. Now for "Stay": Your dog is on the short leash. Tell him "Down." Move around, keeping the end of the leash in your hand, but slack. Every time he starts to get up, say "No" (no need to teach him the meaning of that word), "Stay." When he has learned to stay on the short leash, put him on the long leash and continue the drill. Cast the leash out ahead of you, for all the extra length it has, command him to "Stay," and then walk to the end of the leash and pick it up. His instinct now, of course, is to anticipate your walking off, and he will probably get up the first few times to go with you. But he has to learn to "Stay" till you tell him to move, so get right back to him and make him go down again. Repeat "Stay" and try again. You will be surprised how soon he does get the idea. In the end, the greediest poodle will learn to "stay," even with a biscuit in view, until he is released to pounce on it. The bright-eyed mutt will quiver from his nose to the tip of his tail, but once he has been taught to "Stay," there he'll stay.

■ FIFTH LESSON: "Come." Before you get to this one, your dog will have been answering to "Come" in his own way—rushing up when he hears you calling and jumping on you affectionately. This is not the idea, but never, of course, reprove him, no matter how he does it, or he might get mixed up and think he is being punished for coming. The well-educated, proper way to answer is instantly to abandon bone excavating or napping or whatever he is doing when he hears you call "Come," run to you, stop in front of you, and "Sit," waiting for your next command. The way to teach him to do it is to put him on his long leash and say, "Down. Stay." Walk away the length of the leash, then turn and say "Come." Call him by name: "Chappy, come." If he still stays, pull him to you, and when he gets up to you say "Sit." Give him a few minutes to get the idea, and then pat him and admire him—and begin all over again.

When he has learned this lesson, the course is complete. From now on, in addition to the practice he will get normally, it will be a good idea to run through the lessons for review now and then, to polish you both up. In the friendly give and take of daily life it's easy for you to get slack yourself, and you can't afford to, any more than a parent can, or an officer.

When you give an order, you have to see that it is obeyed. It may be a nuisance, but see to it anyway. There has to be discipline on both sides, after all. Be serious and firm in your commands. Since English is not your dog's native language, it will be easier, when you give orders, to stick to the short words he knows—"Down, Chappy," not "Down, Chappy, you idiot, can't you see your paws are wet?"

Your dog will not mind being trained and taking orders. On the contrary, he knows now what you are talking about instead of having to puzzle over what you want, and he will thrive on the improved communication. It's hard work for him to get his knowledge, but a joy to exercise it, and you owe it to him.

Home Heating: Progress Report

Baseboard heating is unobtrusive and takes a minimum of space. It can be installed in one or more rooms.

Welcome improvements in equipment allow you to have the warmth you want in a new wing or room BY PHYLLIS ENGEL

Editor, the Ladle, publication of the New York State Association of Plumbing, Heating, and Air-conditioning Contractors

OVER THE LAST 15 YEARS, home-heating engineers have made you a present of an extra room in your house! That is, they've been able to make heating equipment so compact that you save the equivalent of a room in usable space in the average house—to say nothing of getting greater heating efficiency. Some of the new methods can be applied to a single room or a new wing, so you needn't rip out all your old system.

If you are adding a room or wing or converting an unfinished attic or basement, your choice of heating equipment should depend on three factors: How much money you want to spend (think of this in terms of both initial outlay and fuel costs); what degree of warmth you require; how much will you add to the resale value of your house?

The least expensive method is to use a space heater. This is a freestanding unit not usually installed as a permanent fixture. They come in many sizes and shapes, and use gas, oil, or electricity. Initially cheap, they are uneconomical to operate over an extended period—but this may not matter to you, say, in a bedroom used only occasionally for guests or when a child is home from college. Another drawback is that they give uneven heat. Local building codes sometimes prohibit their use, since not all of them include safety controls.

Electric baseboard units give more uniform heat than space heaters, and they are moderate in price and easy to install. But watch out for operating costs; these can be quadruple that of other systems, except in such low-electricity-rate areas as the Tennessee Valley. Also, extra heavy insulation is recommended for ceiling, walls, and floor when using a baseboard unit, and this expense often wipes out the initial savings.

Two other efficient electrical units might serve your purpose: One is radiant paneling set into the wall. The other is a recessed ceiling unit that combines a light, an exhaust fan, and the heater. This is particularly good in an added-on bathroom.

To get double your money's worth, you can buy a unit that both warms and cools. This is a heat pump that is actually an air conditioner working in reverse when you need heat and the usual way when you want cold air. It's installed in a window or through a wall, like most air conditioners. It may cost two or three times as much as electric baseboard units but is cheaper to run. The heat pump is best in parts of the country where cooling is as important as heating, or in mild climates, because the pump's heating capacity tends to fade as the temperature drops.

What about colder parts of the country? A combination gas heater and air conditioner was introduced this summer. Installed in the same way as a heat pump, it is more satisfactory because it is thermostatically controlled for heating and cooling, not affected by temperature changes outdoors, and is a full furnace.

You may want to expand your existing central-heating system to take care of the new room or wing. Ask your heating contractor if your plant would take the additional load. Expansion may cost no more than an electric baseboard. A hydronic (combination of radiant heat and convected heat to circulate warm air) or hot-water heating system can be expanded easily by using finger-size flexible tubing that can be snaked through wall spaces. Warm-air duct systems can sometimes be expanded easily, too, if rebalanced to compensate for the added load.

SOMETIMES it's practical to install a separate, permanent-type system for a new wing (and maybe even for one new room). Small hot-water plants are available for just such jobs; they can be tucked in any part of your house, even in a closet.

Remember that any new heating should be planned before construction starts; that's the economical and efficient way.

The next 15 years may bring solar heat from a disk in the roof no bigger than a salad plate or atomic energy from a little black box, but without waiting for those wonders you can have all the heat you want today.

A modern, compact heating unit (right) can be put in a new wing without detracting from appearance. Or it can replace a bulky, dirty, inefficient old-style furnace such as the one at the left.

House Grown for

Fill your house all winter with the

Eucharis Lily

Sansevieria Flowers

WHEN YOU consider selecting some house plants for fragrance, the scented geraniums suggest themselves at once—they make their own delicious contribution and supply a background of green for the rest. Apple geranium has a distinct bouquet of apple, while the leaf of the rose geranium is perfumed with rose and spice. Fern-leaved geranium, with lacy foliage, smells of pine. Lime, nutmeg, and peppermint geranium each smells as the name suggests. Both the Prince Rupert and the white-rimmed French lace geranium send out aromatic scents.

If you grow nicotiana in your outdoor garden, single out a few of the younger plants just beginning to flower. Pot them up and set them in the window. For weeks, they will unfold their starry blooms with sweet perfume, just as they do in the garden. To have narcissus by Thanksgiving, plant paper whites now—in pebbles and water or bulb fiber. Place at first in a cool, dark spot until masses of roots have developed, then bring to light and sun.

Lily-of-the-valley pips may also be planted now in leaf mold or bulb fiber—one inch apart, one inch deep. Water thoroughly and sink the pot outside. Cover with a foot or more of leaves or hay to prevent deep frost. In December, bring them to a partially sunny window spot. Within three weeks you will have a whiff of real spring from them.

Two other bulbs for beauty and fragrance in the window garden are the Peruvian daffodil, and the Amazon lily. Grow the Peruvian daffodil with only an inch between the bulb and the pot rim all around. Set the bulb half out of ordinary garden soil. Water only after first signs of growth.

Amazon lily flowers open several at a time, and their subtle scent suggests sweet lemons. Use a large pot, allow plenty of root room in rich soil, and always keep moist.

There are two special blossoms for a cool bay window or a glassed-in porch. The first is stock, coming in pink, purple, or white. Sow seeds now in milled sphagnum or finely sifted soil. Separate two-inch seedlings, three to a pot.

Plants Fragrance

freshness of sweet-smelling flowers

Lemon Tree Flower

Freesia

PHOTOGRAPHS BY ROCHE

Don't overwater at any time. And secondly, there is freesia. In late winter, when other plants are seedy, flowers of yellow, pink, or white will appear. They prefer a temperature from 48 to 58. Plant the corms in one part leaf mold, three parts loam, one part manure, and one part sand. Set 12 plants one inch deep, in a six-inch pot. Water sparingly until growth begins, then abundantly.

An easy plant to handle is the sweet olive. From the midst of dark-green leaves, small creamy flowers with a far-reaching fruity fragrance appear and continue coming for months. Three other fragrant fruits for indoors are the ponderosa lemon, producing both blossoms and huge lemons weighing one pound or more. The oteheite orange bears two-inch fruit, and sweet-scented blooms. The Persian lime grows fruits and fragrant flowers.

Equally fragrant are the willow-leaved jessamine (Cestrum parqui) and its close relative, cestrum nocturnum. Their white flowers open at night.

OLD-FASHIONED rosemary, gray-green and aromatic, is a fine window-garden herb. The plant grows leathery leaves and clusters of perfumed waxlike flowers. If given support, it trails up the window. Clerodendron fragrans produces sweet-scented clusters of double white flowers, flushed pink. Guatemala gardenias, often called Cape jasmine, grow 10 feet tall, but in a pot they are more restrained.

You can grow an indoor garden of sweet-scented plants or add a few of these aromatic ones to the house plants you already have. Whichever you do, you'll discover that various varieties send out their scent most strongly at different times, in the morning, at noon or at night.

When the thermometer tumbles and the garden outside has entirely disappeared, you'll be surrounded indoors with the aroma of lovely growing things, supplying constant pleasure through the winter days and possibly, also, a little harmless self-satisfaction.

A Remarkable New Eating Experience

Legendary banquet dishes that once took hours to prepare can now reach your table in minutes! The secret: five Famous Foods of the World in cans which the Houston Chronical announced would "please the most particular connoisseur of fine foods."

All across the country the foods were drawing praise from home-makers, husbands and critics alike. The noble Beef Stroganoff of old imperial Russia was described by the Seattle Times as "Generous thick slices of tender beef . . . sauce thick with mushrooms, flavored delicately with sherry." And the N.Y. Herald Tribune enthusiastically suggested it as "a natural for a buffet supper."

When three glorious servings of the Stroganoff, Chicken Cacciatore or Swedish Kottbullar cost less than a dollar, don't postpone the treat. Delight your guests or give your family an inspired change. And try the two remarkable soups as well: authentic French Onion or hearty Spanish Garbanzo. Delicious!

HANDIWORK AT HOME

■ HERE IS FAST, EASY HANDIWORK using a big new smocking stitch, and the results will do you proud. The hats trim themselves, and very neatly, too, in a few deft stitches . . . the baby's elegant little outfit looks as if it ought to come from Paris in a shiny white box . . . and for a touch of extra ornament and color (in a beat-up college room, for instance) smock a few pillow covers in brilliant velveteen.

All these are designs to make at home, using a smocking transfer to be pressed with a warm iron onto the reverse side of any material with a soft hand—velveteen, challis, fine wool, or corduroy—which will fall easily into luxurious deep folds. When the pattern has been transferred, take a needle and strong thread and get to work—you'll be surprised how fast it goes. You can smock either of the hats in two hours from start to finish (and they're exclusive SUBURBIA TODAY designs). Coupon on the bottom of the opposite page is for your convenience in ordering patterns.

Smocking Is BIG

Below: Bright decorative pillows in smocked velveteen. They'll add color to any room. The square one has a zipper for easy removal and cleaning. Square and round pillows are 11 inches, the bolster, 14.

Cocktail Party

ing to some new records—for anything except that plodding reason, "I owe everyone in town." Probably true, too, but there's no magic in that. If you can find some live music, that's a good way to begin on a perfect party.

Lack of oxygen is as fatal to a party as it is to human life. Early in the afternoon, air the house thoroughly. And there must be some way to hear yourself think.

William MacLean, an engineer, contributed a serious article to the Journal of the Acoustical Society of America titled "On the Acoustics of Cocktail Parties." After arduous research in the field he came to the conclusion that if a living room measures 15 x 15 feet and the ceilings are fairly high, 16 people can be taken care of. Just let a seventeenth come—and he will—and the din begins, or as they say in nuclear physics, it goes critical.

Ask all the people you want, but give them larynx room.

SEATING ROOM is another matter. If you're having more people than you have seating capacity for—and you are—then ask lots more, and no one will feel awkward standing. A party with lots of people standing makes for more circulation and that's the way it should be at first. As new friendships bloom—or as legs get tired—little clusters of people may want to sit down, and it should be made inviting for them to do so, but mostly, from five to seven, it's easy to keep moving if everyone else does.

Children can help sometimes, and if they are allowed to, they'll have fun and be fun. But it's not their party and they shouldn't stay long. They should have some treat of their own planned somewhere else, and this is one time, if they're little, to be sure to have a sitter.

Half an hour before the party, with every cork pulled and every glass in place, take time for repose and to go over your guest list and think about the friends who are coming. This preview will help you to enjoy them instead of worrying about them and will make them feel welcome from the moment they arrive until the bar closes. And when 50 people have that feeling—the result of planning, supplies, and a little last-minute magic—you have the essence of the perfect cocktail party. In a walnut shell.

SMOKEY REPORTS

Forest Fires down in
'61

Our forests were ripe for disaster last year. The West was dry—too dry—from years of drought. Lightning lashed the high country, setting more fires than ever recorded from that cause before.

A gloomy picture, yes, but what was the record? In this year of high fire hazard, with more folks than ever visiting our forests, the number of forest fires caused by people was near an alltime low.

This is a record to be proud of, but not one to be satisfied with!

Forest fires still take too much of our natural wealth each year. We can't afford to lose our scenic heritage, our wildlife, wood, and water.

With your help, Smokey will be able to report new gains in '62. Please be extra careful, won't you, with every fire?

"Say when."

A MOST IMPORTANT BOOK FOR TODAY'S PARENTS

Teaching Your Child Right From Wrong

By Dorothy K. Whyte, well known specialist in parent education.

Do you want to help your children develop sound, sensible standards of ethical behavior? Do you need guidance in training them to a strong sense of values and social responsibility? Of course you do—all conscientious parents are looking for this kind of help. Now for the first time they can get it from a leading authority with years of professional experience.

Dorothy K. Whyte's new book, TEACHING YOUR CHILD RIGHT FROM WRONG, gives you straight-from-the-shoulder, factual help in teaching these vital principles during your children's most important formative years. As you read the lively case histories throughout the book, you will find guidelines for action that apply to your own children. Specific suggestions cover a multitude of problems encountered by parents of children of all ages . . . from birth through the teens. What's more, the book avoids complex, technical language—describes every symptom and every remedy in easy-to-understand language—generously flavored with wit and good humor.

Here is what the Chief of the United States Children's Bureau says about TEACHING YOUR CHILD RIGHT FROM WRONG.

"Mrs. Whyte has brought new illumination to a difficult subject. It seems to be widely recognized that we need to help children find lasting values to sustain them in a world where so little seems stable or permanent. Indeed, this was the most pervasive theme of a recent White House Conference on Children and Youth. Yet rarely do we find ways of achieving this goal defined in realistic and concrete terms. Teaching Your Child Right From Wrong does this superbly. Mrs. Whyte is not afraid of old-fashioned words like "ethics", yet she has managed to distill the essence of the best current thinking about these "old-fashioned" topics in an easy, idiomatic way. Parents and those who work with children will find the book a stimulating aid to the clarification of their own thoughts."

Katherine Brownell Oettinger
Chief, Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare

A constructive, simply written, witty answer to the most important problem facing America's families today—how to develop social responsibility in their children—Teaching Your Child Right from Wrong includes these helpful chapters:

The How and Why of Being Good—What do we mean by right and wrong? The fallacy of togetherness.

Glad to be a Boy . . . Proud to be a Girl—How to develop and foster healthy sex attitudes.

Spare the Child—What permissiveness really means. The secrets of successful discipline.

The School and You—How much help to give. School phobia. When to step in.

Murder in the Living Room—Is television harmful? How to help your child acquire taste.

Those Scene-Stealing Siblings—You can't wish envy away. How to deal with children's rivalries.

Selfhood: Rx for Brotherhood—How prejudice grows. Ways to combat it.

There is Nothing Like a Dad—A father's role in ethical development. How to be firm . . . and friendly.

Buy, Buy Baby—Gimme-itis—How to establish real values.

Conspiracy of Silence—How and what to tell children about death, divorce, other difficult situations.

Once More With Feeling—Steps to ethical behavior. The need for flexibility.
