THE DETROIT Tigers have a new general manager. He is James A. Campbell, 38, who has been with the club since 1949. Owner John E. Fetzer announced the appointment today, in a noon session at Tiger Stadium, and Campbell promptly promised some "changes" in the near future. Campbell's duties begin immediately, and he is expected to begin negotiating player deals starting next week at the World Series, taking over, in substance; the duties of Rick Ferrell is being retained in the position of vice president, and will devote his time to evaluating player talent.

JAMES H. Meredith is still not enrolled at the University of Mississippi. The 29-year-old Negro Air Force veteran was scheduled to register at the university's Oxford, Miss., campus yesterday, but Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy called off the attempt after Mississippi Governor Ross Barnett ordered some 500 state highway patrolmen, sheriff deputies and policemen into position on the campus.

Barnett's "troops" carried nightsticks and gas masks, wore steel helmets, and had teargas shells. Police dogs were in evidence. Although only campus police actually carried weapons, state patrolmen had weapons in their cars. Kennedy, advised of Barnett's preparations to receive eral marshals.

Saturday, September 30 DEFENSE SECRETARY Rob- Plans Oct. 8 ert S. McNamara, who believes that the Berlin situation is the worst crisis facing the U.S. since the Korean War, told newsmen that the U.S. is ready to use its nuclear arms to protect vital interests in Berlin.

McNamara's specific mention of the nuclear arms of the United States and German forces which he said would be used in the event of a showdown was unusual in that the Administration has previously sought to draw attention away from its nuclear forces. Spokesmen in the past have stressed the "limited war" policy.

Final Drive Effort Move Closer To High Goal For New Liggett Mrs. Frederick S. Ford Hostess at Campaign Meeting to Spur $1,500,000 Drive for School on

10 Acre Woods Site

Final plans for the successful completion of the "Liggett Tomorrow Fund Campaign" were launched Tuesday in the Lake Shore home of Mrs. Frederick S. Ford, co-chairman with Lansing M. Pittman, of the drive.

The new Georgian colonial school will be built on a 10acre site in Grosse Pointe Woods at a cost of more than one million-and-a-half dollars.

only known for the educational attainments of her graduates, her high standards, but also because it is the only private school in this area deep-rooted in the history of Detroit."

Liggett School was incorpocated in 1882 by seven of the city's most civic-minded and philanthropic men: Jacob S. Ferrand, David Whitney, Jr., D. M. Ferry, K. K. White, George Peck, Ashley Pond and Senator James McMillan.

Tradition-minded, many of these families have continued to sustain an interest in the school. Mrs. Frederick S. Ford finds herself in the "middle" of this tradition, with her grandfather George Peck one of the incorporators, her mother, Minnie Peck Caulkins (Mrs. Horace J.) graduating in 1884. Mrs. Ford herself attended Liggett 12 years. Already her two granddaughters (daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Horace C. Ford) are enrolled in the new Liggett.

Family Tradition Co-chairman and Trustee Lansing Pittman also feels he has a stake in the future of the school. It was his greatgrandfather Senator James Mc-Millan who saw the need for Liggett. His wife, the former Sally Book, is a Liggett graduate and is working in tandem with "Lanny" to make the drive a success.

Putting their shoulders to the task of making "Liggett Tomorrow" a reality today are the hard working 14-member Board of Trustees, many of whom have strong-knit Liggett

The policemen said empty beer and liquor bottles were party house, everything was strewn on the lawn and over the lawns adjacent to 30 Hawthorne.

Vitale said that he spoke to and the mother claimed she did and Jacob and ordered the second not know that the teenagers had been drinking. The mother stated that her daughter was having a party for a small group of Grosse Pointe High seniors, and that most of the youths at the scene tried to crash the affair.

The mother told Vitale that she did not know where the alcoholic beverages were obtained, and the officer said that the teenagers refused to de vulge their source.

A call was put over the police radio to the Woods station for assistance, and Patrolmen Kenneth Metcalf, Thomas Kelly. William Duster and Robert Setchell responded in two criusers They stopped and arrested Wildey, taking him to the Shores station, then went to Hawthorne road to help disperse the crowd.

Jacques indicated he would sign a complaint against Cavanaugh, but to date, has not done so, Vitale said.

The resident witness, a woman, who called the NEWS, stated that the Saturday night incident was the "worst 'donneybrook' with teenagers on her street that could be imagined."

Woods Upholds Dog Ordinance

Despite a citizen's protest of discrimination, the Woods Council voted unanimously, Monday evening to uphold a new city ordinance to prevent dog-walking in the center sidewalk of Fairford road.

Fairford road is a divided street with a center park-area mall. Fairford's only sidewalk runs down the center of this

As a result of a petition signed by 27 residents of Fairford who complained that evening dog-walking activities by residents, and nonresidents were getting out of hand, the Council recently passed the ordinance prohibiting dog-walking and posted signs to that effect.

The ensuing wrangle and protests from dog owners forced a reconsideration of their stand and the matter was discussed at length in Council meetings and in a meeting of the council a committee-of-the-whole.

Monday evening the pro-dog walkers were represented by Mrs. James Davis who complained to the Council that responsible dog owners who used being discriminated against.

She stated that the dog owners feel that they have a "legitimate right" to use public streets and sidewalks and do not feel that they should have to drive their dogs in a car to another destination for evening

Mrs. Davis pointed out that the sidewalk in question is the only sidewalk on Fairford road. "If Fairford is going to be a parkway or a mall, or a boulevard, let's call it that," she said, "and not delude ourselves by thinking of it as a public street."

She said that she as a dog owner paid $2.35 for a license for her dog whereas owners of ing cats, can permit their pets to roam freely, without charge.

Mrs. Davis protested that the pro-dog owners, for whom she was speaking, were not even informed that the matter was going to come before the Council at Monday's meeting until one of their group received a Jack W. Barton, 42, of 2228 letter Monday noon. "If we had Fairview, Detroit, lost four suits had more notice," she said, "we

A King Sized Complaint

It would be unfortunate if what is being written here is interpreted as being all inclusive. So to prevent such an interpretation, the point is made immediately that the matter to be discussed directly involves a minority. But the matter should concern all of us, either directly or indirectly.

Last Saturday afternoon a steadily improving Grosse Pointe High School football team won a squeaker, as the sports reporters call it, over Fordson High. The Blue Devil line was particularly outstanding. A couple of speedy halfbacks kept the Fordson defenders busy all afternoon. The High School Band performed in its customarily brilliant fashion. The school choir was a delightful addition to the half-time show. Add that the sun shone brightly most of the afternoon, the breezes were soft, the girls just as pretty as ever and you have all the ingredients for a near-perfect afternoon. And it was that —with one major exception.

Coming upon a 13-year-old with a cigaret in his mouth is somewhat of a shock, even if one has had a number of such vintage in his immediate surroundings, and it is even a greater blow when the young smoker is recognized as one it seems he knew only last summer in knee pants. The experience reached alarming proportions when the young fellow whipped out his pack (some measure of the shock was lessened when a seat neighbor pointed out that he was pushing a filtered brand) and proceeded to supply eight friends, all at about the same age level. At least two young ladies took advantage of the little man's generosity.

When the supply was exhausted shortly before the half, one of the group was dispatched to secure more, this resulting in the activity spreading to several other points in the bleachers.

At least twice during the afternoon a teacher walked by, fought his way through the clouds and, on one occasion, coughed out an "hello" to one of the youngsters.

One has learned to be hesitant about criticizing the academician, so much is he on the defensive when corrective steps are suggested and so entrenched is he in the status quo. But it would seem to this longtime school booster and supporter that some concern should be expressed by a teacher when he comes upon a group of youngsters on school property—Saturday or not—puf

Every so often one catches a rumble from the corner of Fisher and Grosse Pointe Blvd. that some high school students are getting away with murder and that the teachers either don't know about the breaches in behavior or just don't give a hoot. If the former is the case, then perhaps this remark will be helpful. If the latter holds true, then heaven help us.

Under similar circumstances at the football field not long ago, a member of our Board of Education, equally taken back by the juvenile smoking, took matters into his own hands and made an effort to correct the matter on the spot. He was practically hooted back to his seat. And on two or three occasions over the past year or so, teenage drinking has been observed in or under the

It can be argued (and probably will be) that this is a lot of hullabaloo over something relatively unimportant. But this observer, perhaps still remembering the parental discipline and attitudes of 30 years ago, doesn't

As substantially staffed as our public school system is (and please, maestro, don't play that old "over-worked, underpaid teacher" tune again) it would seem that two or three teachers could be assigned to each school function in an effort to maintain some supervision over the

And while, on this subject, would it be too much to request that a custodian be assigned to brushing off the bleacher seats before a football game? They were coated with a layer of heavy dust last Saturday, as the cleaners in the neighborhood can attest today.

What Goes On at Your Library

It is indeed with trepidation, respect and enthusiasm that I undertake the writing of this Library Column. To attempt to carry on the high level of excellence set by Jean Taylor is frightening, but at the same time, challenging. There are so many doors to open — so many subjects which can be dealt with -so much to be said about such a variety of things. It will be hard at times, but it will also be fun - and certainly richly rewarding. In the final analysis, I can only do my best, and hope that it will measure up somewhat to the material published here in the past.

Could you guess what's good about a headache?

By FRED KNOPP, R. Ph.

If you happen to have one right now, probably all you need is an aspirin. But the fact is: a headache sometimes is a signal. It may be telling you something is wrong . . . perhaps some thing quite remote from the pain. In this event it's a symptom-valuable information for your psysician. So if you have a persistent or recurring headache and don't know why, see your doctor. Don't take a chance. Your physician can probably clear up your problem in short order. Of course, he may say all you need is aspirin-but even that's worth knowing.

CANDY CANE

To everyone who plans to buy an Imperial, Cadillac or Lincoln this year

If you'd like the best perspective on what your next luxury car can offer, begin with a drive in the new Imperial - first luxury car having its power-train warranted* for five years or 50,000 miles.

Your Imperial dealer is ready to furnish one of his new models for your comparison. You'll find Imperial is designed for spaciousness and luxury on the grand scale. Imperial's town-car look is deliberately restrained - and timeless. But its famous roadability is evidence of very timely advances in high-performance power and the largest automatic-adjusting brake system in any American luxury car.

After you've tested and inspected and compared, we'd like your personal judgment of our major premise: that Imperial's differences afford important motoring qualities not found in either Cadillac or Lincoln. IMPERIAL - A QUALITY PRODUCT OF CHRYSLER CORPORATION

So accept our friendly challenge, please. We're confident that driving an Imperial will influence your ideas about what a luxury car should be and should do.

*Your authorized Imperial Dealer's Warranty against defects in material and workmanship on 1963 cars has been expanded to include parts replacement or repair for 5 years or 50,000 miles, whichever comes first, on the engine block, head and internal parts; torque converter, drive shaft, universal joints (excluding dust covers), rear axle and differential, and rear wheel bearings, provided the vehicle has been serviced at reasonable intervals according to the Chrysler Certified Car Care schedules. Factory approved remanufactured parts may be used for replacement.

The following report for the 1961-62 fiscal year is a condensed summary (in cash receipts and disbursements form) of the financial transactions authorized by your Board of Education in support of the total educational program of the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

The Board of Education wishes to supplement the financial data with a few brief comments:

In accordance with State Law, all funds received and dis-bursed by The Grosse Pointe Public School System are maintained under three major classifications, or Funds, which broadly indicate the function. These are:

GENERAL OPERATING FUND

BUILDING AND SITE FUND

DEBT RETIREMENT FUND GENERAL OPERATING FUND:

As indicated by the title, this fund provides for all activities of the School System, other than those specifically designated as Building and Site or Debt Retirement.

The General Fund receives the bulk of its revenue from two main sources. The first and largest source is from tax levies on real and personal property within the school district. The second is from State Aid.

Expenditures from the General Fund are made in accordance with a budget prepared by the Superintendent of Schools and as reviewed and adopted by the Board of Education.

School System was operated within the budget adopted in June, 1961. The Revolving Fund receipts and disbursements represent transactions within the System and consist principally of

At June 30, 1962, there were three outstanding bond obligations of the School System. These are as follows: Balance Outstanding Original Issue June 30, 1962 1953 Bond Issue$2,500,000.00 $ 425,000.00 1954 Bond Issue 1,225,000.00 285,000.00 3,085,000.00 1956 Bond Issue 3,475,000.00 $7,200,000.00 $3,795,000.00

The first two issues are twenty-year serial bonds for which mandatory rates were voted. Because of these mandatory rates, and substantial increases in assessed valuation, more revenues have been received than were necessary to meet the annual principal and interest requirements. Additional funds thus accumulated have been used to establish the required reserves and to call bonds for redemption prior to normal majurity date.

The 1956 issue is a 25-year serial bond obligation to be financed with an unlimited tax levy. This means that we levy taxes each year sufficient to meet the annual principal and interest payments.

A few weeks ago the silver urns on the altar of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church were filled with lovely white chrysanthemums given in memory of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Staley by their daughter, Mrs. Henry Sanger, of Rancho Santa Fe, Calif.

The memorium to the Staleys recalls a chapter in history which also ties in with another old Detroit and Grosse Pointe pioneer family, the Bewicks.

John Staley was born in Danville, Pa., in 1871, but came in his youth to Michigan where he completed his education at Albion College. After graduation he immediately entered Detroit's banking circles, as an assistant teller. He rose rapidly in the First National Bank and in 1919 succeeded James T. Keena (another Pointer whose descendants still live here) as president of the Peoples State Bank. He was one of only two bankers who had until that time been elected to the directorate of the United States Chamber of Commerce. In 1920 he was appointed a member of a committee to perfect a one hundred million dollar foreign trade financing corporation and also served on numerous banking commissions.

Mr. Staley had a wide range of philanthropic responsibilities outside his business interests. He was chairman of the board for the YWCA of Detroit, a trustee of Grace Hospital, a member of the board of Albion Free Hospital Association. During her recent Pointe stay Henry Hopke, here on a flying visit from Zurich, sur-prised her one noon lunching in the local hamburger heaven. Perched on a stool munching a hamburger she admitted she had been dreaming of such a culinary delight for months as a welcome change from a diet of pheasant and crepes suzette. Fortunate for Mrs. M., that Mr. Hopke came along because when she came to pay her tab she discovered she hadn't a bill small enough for the hamburger heaven to change.

What Became of the Mon in the Gray Flamlel Suit? BY SLOAN WILSON Round Table: Beautify Your Town! A Suburban Ghest Story BY ELIZABETH BOWEN

Suburbia Today

THE MAGAZINE OF PLEASANT PLACES Published Monthly

In This Issue . . .

Clean Up, Paint Up, Fix Up . . . page 6

"What are you doing to beautify your town?" we asked the editors of suburban newspapers in this month's Round Table. And from Pennsylvania to California came prompt reports, covering everything from window boxes on Main Street to communitywide programs that show that people in the suburbs are saying: We began with beauty here, and we're going to keep it that way.

One Used Gray Flannel Suit . . . page 10

Sloan Wilson, creator of "The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit," looks at his stereotype seven years later and finds that he's not what he used to be. That driven young man, with his gray flannel and his rat race, has become older and wiser-Mr. Wilson sayscontent to mind his own business and not the Jones'.

Thanks to many years of local taxpaying, Al Brown, like the rest of us, is an authority on the suburbs. This month he presents a suburban speller, complete from Agent to Zoning—and did you know. for instance, that a Commuter is "a drone who travels daily to and from the hive and takes orders from the queen bee."

What Happened? . . . page 26

Famous author Elizabeth Bowen gets in the mood for Halloween with a touch of the supernatural in her short ghost story, "Count on Us." She sets the scene in an ordinary (or is it?) suburban house outside London. It all begins strangely enough-but wait till you get to the end!

On the Cover

Artist Frederic Marvin uses a woodcut to create the bold strokes on this month's cover. And appropriate it is, too, for boys don't lend themselves to fine lines. They dawdle on the way to school on brisk October mornings, then dash inside as the last bell rings. They sometimes even leave a bike upended till they return at three to ride home—the long way.

GETTING AROUND

... to Our Pleasant Places and People

Not all Halloween pranks end as happily as one that happened last year to a woman living alone near Santa Monica, California. The morning after Halloween, she discovered that one wall of her newly painted house had been polted with tomatoes and washed off the mess as best she could. In the spring, she noticed a strange plant in the flower bed next to her house. She transplanted it to the back yard and watched it grow into a healthy bush, and this fall she had a crop of the most luscious beefsteak tomatoes she ever ate!

When any resident of North Decatur, Georgia, (or anyone else) is unfortunate enough to have to pay a traffic fine in the city of Decatur, he'll be somewhat consoled to find this message printed on the back of his receipt: "Thank you for your patronage."

The old question of who are better cooks-men or women—has been settled, claims one correspondent who lives near La Crescenta, California, and the men come out on top. Proof is furnished by a student cake-baking contest, sponsored as a welfare project by the PTA, and involving over 900 students. The classifications are "Best from Mix" and "Best from Scratch" and in the three years since the contest started the best cakes in class (sophomore, junior, and senior), have been won by the same two boys. Both are advanced scouts, athletic lettermen, and-not content with baking their own cakes—they have talked every other athlete in the high school into entering the competition.

A seven-year-old in Oakwood, Ohio, tired of being chided for his unclean ways, told his mother he was turning over a new leaf and that he would start out by washing all of his toys. He got a washtub from the basement, took it to the kitchen, and filled it with water. Several minutes later, his mother came in to see how things were going, and this is what she found: In the tub of water were a guinea pig, two frogs, one toy, and a four-yearold girl from next door.

What Are You Doing to Beautify Your Town?

Left: Palm-lined shopping street in Coral Gables, Florida, the "City Beautiful," has sidewalk plantings. Right: Even the sewage treatment plant is beautified.

Dumps are turning into parks, flowers are blooming on Main Street—newspapermen in a nationwide survey report on ways and means

Edited by GEORGE FIELDING ELIOT

Something in the way of "Keep Our Town Beautiful" is cooking in almost every suburban community. The efforts range from a modest planting of shrubbery by volunteer committees to year-round community-wide programs generously endowed with public funds. In all these beautification efforts, small and great, a common denominator is apparent—everywhere people who relish the greens and flowers and open spaces of the suburbs seem to be saying, in deed as well as words: We began with beauty here, and we mean to continue.

Few indeed are the suburban families unresponsive to this urge. The minute they take possession of a new home they start planting, trimming, mowing, and watering—with one eye, of course, on what the neighbors are doing. From these front-yard beginnings—very literally grassroot beginnings—arise wider visions: visions of what Our Street should look like and, presently, of what Our Town as a whole should look like. Whereupon committees take form, leaders of energy and enthusiasm appear, and a Town Beautiful movement starts gathering momentum.

Very often, the initial drive centers on a single special project. When SUBURBIA TODAY asked people all over the country, "What are you doing to beautify your town?" two situations were mentioned again and again: (1) The Horrible Eyesore That We Just Couldn't Live With Any Longer. (2) Sprucing-up Those Shabby Shopping Dramatizing a volunteer clean-up drive in Berea, Ohio, members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce sweep and hose a downtown intersection.

Streets. Specific targets like these often trigger action that would be hard to start on a basis of glittering generalities. Often, too, success in dealing with such specifics sparks more persistent if less immediately exciting programs.

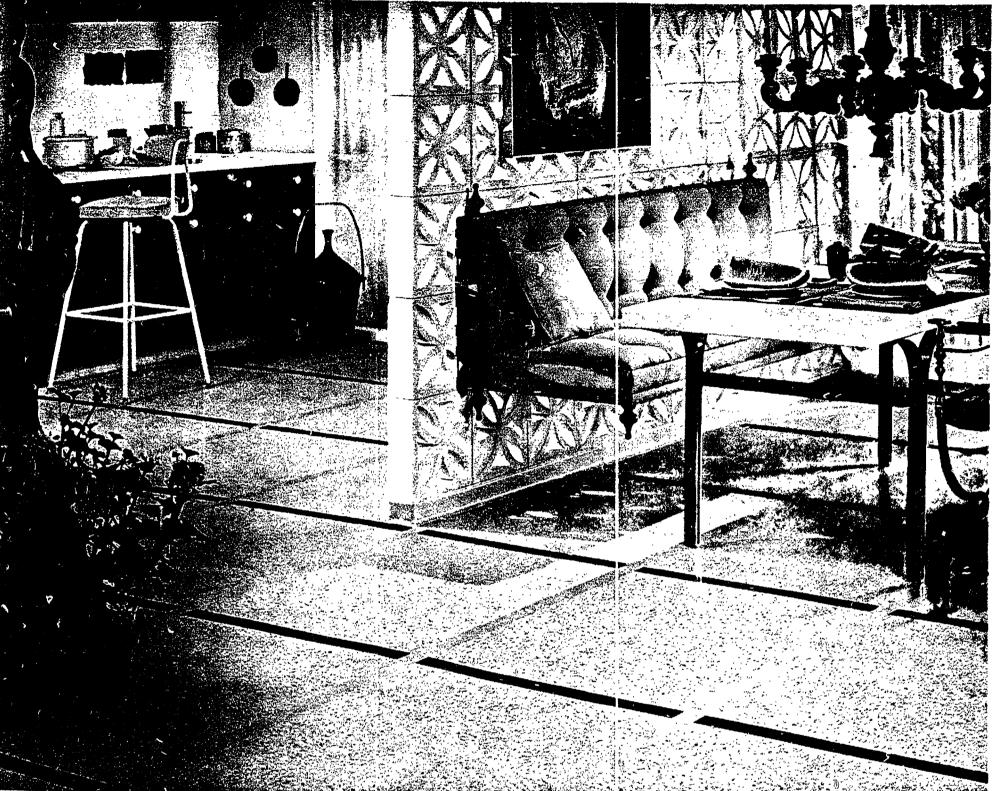

Consider, for example, the blemish that disfigured the thriving young town of Rolling Meadows, outside Chicago. Rolling Meadows was once just what its name suggests—hundreds of acres of farmland with a pretty brook called Salt Creek winding its way through the center of the area. Came the developer and his builders. The houses rose, the streets were laid out, the trucks and bulldozers and sewer diggers labored mightily. Rolling Meadows took civic form and shape. But the banks of Salt Creek became the dumping ground for all the debris of these efforts, an unsightly scar right across the middle of town.

People flocked to the well-built houses, the bright lawns, and the green shade trees. But almost at once they began asking themselves, what do we do about getting rid of this central mess? The developer, Kimball Hill, assailed by protests, offered to donate the 72 acres of land along the creek banks for public parks. A volunteer citizens' committee came into being. They had the land for free, but it was going to cost a lot of money to clear, grade and seed it, and turn it into park land. The only practicable way was to form a legal park district, appoint commissioners, and promote a referendum for a bond issue to finance the project.

Organized under the slogan, "Swing A Park," the volunteers went to work. They raised the initial funds to get the park district formed and a planner hired; dances and other fund-raising stunts helped. The first referendum for a bond issue, however, went down to defeat; too many voters thought $420,000 was too much money to pay for beauty. The park-district commissioners and their volunteer aides refused to take No for an answer. They put on a door-to-door, never-say-die campaign, and won the second time round. Now Salt Creek ripples in tree-shaded loveliness through a winding park, stretching nearly the length of the town from north to south. Fringe benefits include playing fields, an Olympicsize swimming pool and bathhouse, and a retention pool which controls the creek level and provides kids with a place to fish. Three schools adjoin the park land, permitting dual use of facilities with savings to taxpayers.

Salt Creek is no longer the community eyesore; even those who were harshest in their criticism are proud of the pastoral beauty that has been reborn in their midst. It's safe to say that Keep Rolling Meadows Beautiful is a cause that will not lack for enthusiastic support from here on out.

NOT MANY MILES from Rolling Meadows, the village of Mount Prospect, Illinois, is dealing with quite a different problem-face-lifting its business district. Its retail establishments are threatened by the rise of huge shopping centers on the outskirts of the town. The members of the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants' Association saw only impending doom at first. But the local bank president and a leading druggist had other ideas. "Don't give up," they urged. "Let's chip in and make the business area of our village such an attractive and easily accessible place to shop that folks won't bother to drive to the shopping centers. Let's

So that's what is going on now. Results so far: new blacktopped parking lots decorated with old-fashioned gas lanterns; a new village hall and library addition; remodeling of store fronts in a consistent stucco and half-timber pattern; patio and park spaces, trees and flowers.

From these two centrally located projects, let's look east and west, north and south around the country.

Littleton, Colorado, has an annual Sidewalk Art Show that forms the colorful centerpiece of Littleton's Town Beautiful efforts-including antilitter campaigns, flowers, transforming a swamp into a park, and preservation of historic landmarks. The Art Show had 1,700 entries in 1961—ceramics, weaving, painting, jewelry, metalwork.

Marietta, Georgia-Two rose gardens, planted and tend ed by members of the Men's Club.

Bellevue, Washington-Spectacular improvement of the main business street, financed by a bond issue plus contributions of property owners. Power and phone companies helped by shifting poles to rear lot lines.

Hatboro, Pennsylvania-Restoration of Loller Academy (built 1811) as an historic landmark and beauty spot and a meeting place for civic and youth groups.

Redwood City, California-The rebuilding of this community's famed Easter Cross (original destroyed by vandals) inspired a general cleanup and beautification of the surrounding area. The work was financed by contributions.

South Euclid, Ohio, won the "Cleanest Town" award of fered annually by the National Clean Up-Paint Up-Fix Up Bureau of Washington. South Euclid's prize-winning project was to clear off old automobiles and many tons of other debris from vacant lots that were being used as dumps. A heavy fine for one lot owner and a stern promise of heavier fines to come brought prompt action—and imitation by others.

TWO BEAUTIFICATION programs in eastern cities are mo-L tivated by a desire to preserve the colonial look. In Fair port, New York, merchants are being urged and aided to remodel their store fronts on a colonial motif, harmonizing with the general tone of the residential areas. One example The Mobil Oil Company redesigned a new gas station along colonial lines, at considerable expense. They're being paid off in extra business: beauty attracts customers. In Moun Holly, New Jersey, the Mount Holly Shoppers' League (mostly young housewives) is leading a crusade which has already induced the remodeling of several buildings and the acquiring of new parks by the township.

"Is suburbla Changing?" the bright young reporter asked. "Is 'the man in the gray flannel suit' the same as he was when you wrote about him seven years ago?"

"Of course suburbia is changing," I said. "The only thing I can tell you for sure about the suburbs is that they are like New England weather: if you don't like them, wait a while."

The suburbs as they are today don't seem to me to have much in common with the rawly bulldozed tracts into which most of my friends moved shortly after World War II. Back in 1946, most of us just wanted a place to live, a garden, and good schools for the children. We were brought up in the depression and came of age during the war. We were sick of barracks, cheap apartments, and meager service pay. The little houses put up by the contractors looked fine to us, almost too good to be true. The task of getting together the money for a mortgage, an obstetrician, and a car, the three necessities of family life, sometimes seemed almost insuperable. Most of my friends took whatever job offered the highest salary. It wasn't fashionable to talk much of ideals in those days. It had taken some idealism to risk one's neck for one's country for four years, and now we felt the time had come to settle some more sternly realistic problems, to look out for ourselves and our families for a while, even to enjoy a few luxuries. Many of us who felt that the war had delayed our careers were energetically ambitious. I knew almost no man who didn't boast of working nights and weekends.

Most of the parents soon became even more ambitious for their children than for themselves. The fights over school-bond issues and the tireless work on PTA committees in which so many of us got involved stemmed partly from fear that poor schools would hopelessly handicap our children and partly from hope that with a good education our children could accomplish anything. Our sons and daughters were quick to perceive our intentions. Regardless of all the talk about juvenile delinquency and easy schools, the suburban children of my acquaintance worked harder than I ever worked when I was their age, and the struggle for high marks often became as intense as their fathers' struggle for a high salary.

This is the way we began in the new suburbs 17 years ago, and the nature of the times was such that most of the men I knew prospered beyond their wildest dreams. We moved a lot, too. In 17 years I bought and sold something like nine houses, as I moved up the ladder and from city to city. Hardly anyone thought my case particularly unusual.

We were a restless, energetic people, confident that our youth would go on forever, as I suppose all young people are. Middle-age, I think, took most of us by surprise, like a dread disease for which no one had thought to provide insurance. And a good many of us, when we got to be middle-aged, looked in the mirror with something less than pleasure.

Our ambition had made most of us richer than we had ever expected to be, but what else had we?

Look What's Happened to the Man in the Gray Flannel Suit!

BY SLOAN WILSON

author of "The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit,"
"A Summer Place," "A Sense of Values."

He's in revolt, says the creator of the famous "image"—and a good thing, too

Well, we ourselves were all right, most of us thought, but what about our neighbors? For a while almost everyone seemed hopelessly harried: "The rat race" was a phrase used by everybody. At cocktail parties it was common for men to confess how much they hated their jobs. It was a shock when I learned that a contemporary of mine had a heart attack at the age of 40, another shock when I realized how many of my friends had stomach ulcers. Bottles of tranquilizers appeared more and more in the pretty tiled bathrooms of the new houses, and it became suddenly fashionable to see a psychiatrist.

Our way of life, it seemed, had made us bold in some ways but in other ways made us timid. With surprise we realized we were all dressing very much alike, almost as though we had escaped from one uniform into another. We had lived in days when politics were often explosive, and no one wanted his business career jeopardized by political beliefs which might be regarded as eccentric. Only a man sublimely self-confident could dress as he liked and talk as he liked wherever he was. Most of us played it safe, but it hurt to realize suddenly how mouselike we had become.

Many of the wives became as unhappy as their husbands. Yes, the schools had to be improved, and in many of the new suburbs almost everything had to be created from scratch, but who wants to grow up to be only a brisk committeewoman, and won't the telephone ever stop ringing, even for a minute?

Place in the suburbs. It was speeded by the children who had studied so hard and who, quite often, at the age of 14 or 15, announced that they wanted an entirely different life from that of their parents. Many of the children said they wanted to be physicians or teachers or scientists—they didn't want to work for money alone. Having been brought up with more money than their parents had ever had, they didn't seem to think wealth so important.

Maybe it was the bright, inquiring eyes of our children upon us, or maybe it was just part of the process of maturing, but many of us became vastly dissatisfied with ourselves and with the suburbs. Some families broke up. A few moved into the city or far out into the country. The suburbs, they said, almost inevitably made people narrow-minded, for one met only people like oneself there, people of similar income, similar background, and similar problems. People in the suburbs cared only about money and were much too competitive. When one family in the neighborhood built a swimming pool, they pointed out, five others felt compelled to borrow money to do the same.

Some of this seemed true, yet to most of us flight from the suburbs didn't seem to be the answer. Most of us still needed good schools for our younger children, and we still enjoyed having a garden of our own. Did these benefits necessarily have to carry evils with them?

A good many of my friends set out energetically to prove that they did not have to conform to all the stereotypes of suburban life just because they wanted good schools and a garden. As soon as I wrote "The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit," a lot of them stuck their gray flannel suits in the back of the closet and refused to wear them. Apparently I literally scared the gray flannel pants off of them! Some of the attempts not to conform were funny. I remember one man who insisted on proving his independence by wearing Bermuda shorts and a plaid sports shirt to his office. Wild hobbies proliferated. One of our neighbors gave up golf to buy an old fire engine which he trained his whole family to operate as a working auxiliary to the local fire department.

But not all the aspects of the revolt against conformity, against senseless interfamily competition, and against materialism were funny-many made a lot of sense. Several of our families, for instance, dropped out of the country club, where the parties had been getting kind of wild, and saved their money for a trip abroad. A close friend of mine gave up a profitable job at an advertising agency to become the treasurer of a small college where he felt he could be more useful, and in several cases people moved from large, showy houses into smaller ones, just to get rid of some of the financial pressure. Small, unpretentious cars became popular. All of a sudden many of us began taking extension courses at a local college, and conversations at cocktail parties centered less on golf or the upkeep of lawns, more on recordings and books, including some which weren't even on the best-seller list.

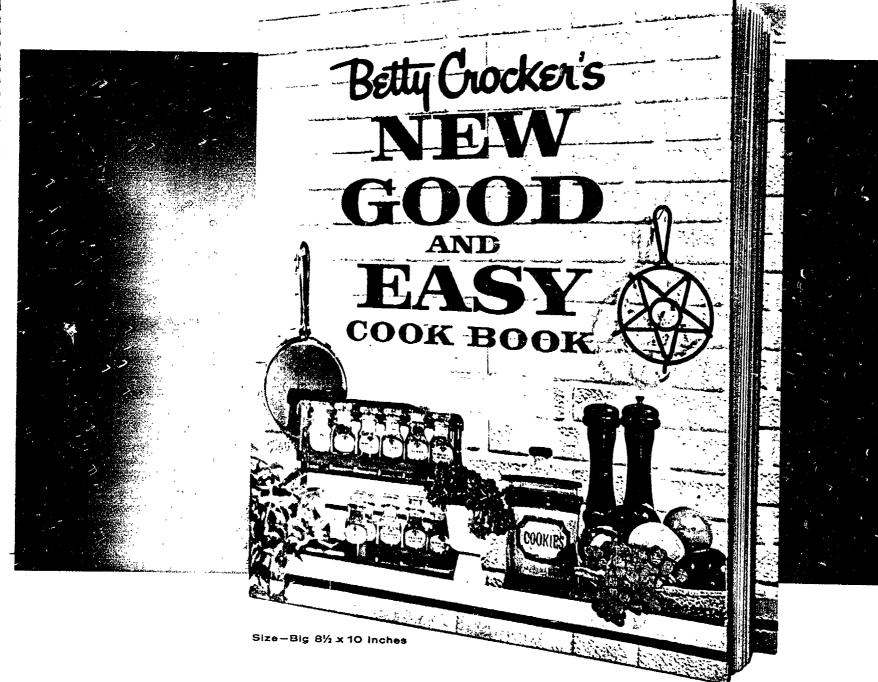

Not only did the people that I, so to speak, grew up with in the suburbs begin to grow less cocksure, more questioning, but the once-new communities themselves began to mellow, become more diversified.

Many of the landscapes flattened by bulldozers now have trees on them, and even rows of houses which originally were almost identical have, through alterations, taken on the diverse personalities of their owners. Countless little houses have had rooms added for grandparents, and young couples who once would have lived in the city until they had children now often begin their married life in the suburb where they grew up. Life in the suburbs is losing its terrible bland, homogenized quality. The "typical suburbanite" becomes harder than ever to caricature or to confine within the outline of a stereotype.

The reason why the suburbs have changed is simple: Those of us who built them up have changed, grown older and, hopefully, wiser. New people of many kinds are moving in every day and are bringing more changes with them: "The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit" is still referred to as the stereotype of the harried young executive, but he no longer is typical of the suburbs. As a matter of fact, he probably doesn't live there any more. In revolt against his own stereotype, he moved long ago to the city and now spends a great deal of time repeating the old clichés about how dull the suburbs are, how impossibly without culture. He might be surprised if he visited them again someday.

THE ROAD NEVER GOT...

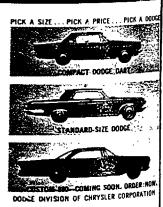

SUCH A BEAUTIFUL GOING OVER

The 1963 Dodge in the topmost picture has just come back from a good long run.
It's been to the World's Fair in Seattle, to Mammoth Cave and to lots of other interesting places. It has carried backbreaking loads of people, luggage and camping equipment. It's been pelted by sand, gravel, snow, rain, sleet and hail. But take off that luggage rack, give Dodge a good hosing and rubdown, and it'll look, run and sound like a brand new car. That's the way this Dodge is. Dependable. Long-lasting. Tight.

With a fully unitized body that is reluctant to rust, because we take care of that.

With Torsion-Bar suspension in front that won't let road bumps do any harm. With a stouthearted engine (6 or V8) that gives and gives on regular gas. With a high-output alternator that helps the battery last a good long time.

But great as Dodge dependability is, it's not everything. The good looks of the '63 Dodge testify to that. If you want to give the road a good going over in a car that comes out of it looking great, see your dependable Dodge Dealer.

bringing up baby, hints collected by Mrs. Dan Gerber, mother of 5

Gold-star day in the life of your baby when two beautiful but uncertain feet take a stab at a step. Whether it's a "solo flight" or with your helping hand doesn't matter. The fact is, he's made the grade as a gadabout.

What age, wanderlust? It varies, but most babies walk between 12 and 15 months ... some sooner, others later, depending on ambition and physical development. Many a parent is tempted to hurry baby into walking, especially if a same-age baby down the street has taken that first step. To urge baby before he's ready, however, may slow down his desire to walk. When mind, spirit and body tell him to go ... you won't be able to hold that live wire down.,

High-steppers use different muscles now. And protein's the thing to help develop those muscles. Gerber Strained and Junior High Meat Dinners are good sources of protein because they have 3 times as much meat as regular vegetable and meat combinations. Add to this extra meat, the goodness of garden vegetables and you've casserole dishes that are exceptionally delicious. Beef, Veal, Chicken, Turkey, Ham.

A trio of shoe cues. Walkers will wobble less if shoes fit properly. (1) Uppers should be soft enough for comfort, sturdy enough for support. Flexible soles make stepping easier. (2) Shoes should have ½ to ¾ of an inch grow room. (3) Toes should be wide enough for wiggle-room when baby is standing.

Nutrition note from Dan Gerber. Your baby's cereals must be readily digestible if he (or she) is to get full nutritive benefit from them. Gerber researchers developed an exclusive, controlled cooking method which breaks down grain starches to assure digestibility. In addition, Gerber Cereals are scientifically formulated to meet your baby's early nutritional needs . . . all 5 are enriched with a special kind of iron, plus calcium and B-vitamins.

Important: Gerber prepares over 100 baby foods-infant formulas, cereals, strained and junior foods-to meet your baby's nutritional needs. We're proud to say:

Windjammer Holiday

Twice every month, the schooners "Mandalay" and "Polynesia" take passengers from Bimini on a fair-sailing cruise of the Bahamas

BY FRANK ROHR

TALL SHIPS, trade-wind clouds overhead, and lazy days of sailing along the warm Bahamas ... who wouldn't trade a commuter's schedule for a 10-day cruise in southern waters?

This Caribbean vacation tour operates all year round with Captain Mike Burke's fleet of wind-jammer sailing ships (with engines, too) that carry sky-high masts and yards of billowing canvas. Below decks, for a change, the quarters are comfortable and the food is good.

In the 10 days, you cover more than 500 miles at sea, and the ships dock at seven of the coral isles off Florida's east coast.

Passengers go on board at Bimini, famed for its big-game fishing and beautiful beaches; then on to Great Isaac, Stirrup Cay, Nassau, Abaco, Freeport on Grand Bahama Island, and Gun Cay. No two days are the same. Great Isaac is the wilds... a majestic, lonely lighthouse on the barren reef rising out of a sea teeming with fish. Nassau is the mellow, beflowered capital of the Bahamas, with a native straw market, among other charms, where there are hundreds of bargains for the visitor who is willing to hunt.

Two ships sail side by side on each cruise, for some friendly competition and for safety. The 151-foot "Polynesia" is the largest staysail schooner in the world, while the 128-foot "Mandalay" is the red-carpet ship of the windjammer fleet, for the yachtsman who likes his adventure highly polished.

There's no social director on board and no schedule to follow. Dungarees, shorts, and swimsuits are the uniforms of the day and night. You can help the mate hoist the sails or just soak in the sun and watch someone else do the work. You can take your turn at the wheel after you've been taught how to steer by compass and stars or join the informal sessions each day in sailmaking and splicing and knot tying. Of course, there is fishing, and skin diving, and shopping sprees in the native markets, when you hit a port. At night, there are beach parties, impromptu calypso dancing on deck, and often, a moonlight sail toward the next harbor.

The food, including piping hot pastries and rolls, is cooked on board, and native dishes like spicy langosta (lobster), grouper, and conch are washed down with rum swizzles, island-style.

The photographs shown here were taken on board "Mandalay," with a crew of trained young men recruited from colleges and jobs all over the country, some signed on for sea-going sabbaticals and some determined to make windjamming a career. One of "Mandalay's" passenger lists included an airlines pilot and his fiancée; a Pittsburgh couple who brought their four- and five-year-old children; a Canadian family with five children (incidentally, there is a registered nurse aboard); an artist; and a retired couple who claimed they stayed young by traveling.

"Mandalay" and "Polynesia" leave from Bimini on the first and 15th of every month. A chartered plane flies from Miami to the island for $10 a person. There, from 20 to 38 passengers board each ship and settle down in the elegant teak and mahogany-panelled quarters. On the return trip, the ships put in at Miami. This winter, Captain Burke is planning to expand his windjammer fleet for a similar 10-day tour of the Virgin Islands.

The price? From $175 to $300, depending on accommodations. This fee covers all expenses such as linens, food, and liquor, and while you're in port the ship is your hotel.

With comfort built into every square foot, the ship carries 20 guests and is air-conditioned for cool sleeping—and for a break from topside sunbathing.

Laurie and Davie-Ott of Pittsburgh count their tropical sea-shell treasures on board "Mandalay" while their parents relax on deck. Davie also learned to fish and joined the grownups whenever they dropped their lines.

Next Spring

Plant your spring bulbs in autumn's good weather, in the right soil, at the right depth... and they'll do the rest

BY JOHN BRIMER

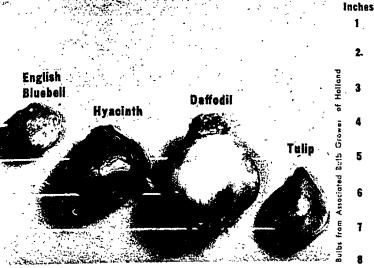

Would you like to have masses of white and blue and butter-yellow crocuses popping out of the bare brown earth in your garden next spring? Or hundreds of golden daffodils to cheer those icy, rainy days when Old-Man Winter tries to stage a comeback? Or a broad row of early scarlet tulips, with glistening black centers, vivid as a splash of paint against the first green?

All of these joys can be yours if you plant spring bulbs this autumn, when garden chores are diminishing and the weather is pleasant. Each bulb bears with it the embryo of beautiful blossoms to come and most, planted the right way, will go on year after year, increasing in beauty as their children and grandchildren join the throng. One seldom hears of disappointment, but if one bothers to check, it will be found that the gardener was at fault, not the bulbs. To avoid difficulties, let us see what to do and how to do it:

Sun vs. Shade

Most spring bulbs need a sunny location in order to give their best performance, but some early types—crocus, daffodils, snowdrops, and seillas—can be planted almost anywhere, for they bloom while branches are still bare and get plenty of early spring sun. Some, such as the English bluebell, Scilla nutans, are forest dwellers in the wild, and therefore will do best in a moist, shady, or woodsy location. But practically all tulips need full sun to do their best, while narcissi and daffodils, grape-hyacinths, bulbous iris, and most others will revel in at least a half-day of sunshine.

Sufficient water is also required so that soil nutrients can be put into solution and carried into the plant to build leaf and flower structure. Too much water, however, may be fatal, particularly in wintertime, damaging or rotting to two inches deeper. Deeply planted tulips—up to 10 inches—flower longer, have larger blooms.

Will Be Great!

the bulbs. Even in the Netherlands, the home of bulb culture, you'll note that sandy subsoil lies below the shallow topsoil, assuring drainage to prevent saturation of the soil around the bulbs.

Planting at the Proper Depth

If you fail to plant bulbs at the required depth, you may get less than you've paid for, both next spring and in years to come. Experience and research through many centuries have demonstrated that there is a certain depth at which bulbs do best in nature, as shown on the chart at the top of this page. Hence, by working with nature instead of imposing unnatural conditions, you can assist your bulbs to do their appointed work and do it more easily. As we indicate in our caption on the chart, depths may vary a little with different soil conditions, and you can use your judgment to produce results.

Feeding Your Bulbs

Since bulbs do most of their work underground before even a sliver of green appears above the surface, food is of prime importance. Differing from most plants, they do not need a high degree of soil nitrogen. This element is mostly needed for above-ground production, while phosphorus and potash are the elements used in root production. At planting time, therefore, use a specially formulated bulb food offered by a number of manufacturers or mix your own low-nitrogen, high-phosphorus, high-potash food and incorporate it in the soil. Experts also recommend dehydrated animal manure, bone meal, dried blood, compost, and other organic foods. All are useful and release slowly over a long period. We must caution against using fresh manure, however, because bulbs may be damaged or destroyed if they come in contact with it.

If your bulbs are properly planted and fed, nothing further need be done this autumn. Perhaps in very cold sections a light mulch might be applied the first winter to give protection for root formation before the soil freezes. The mulch will be removed as soon as the soil warms in spring and green shoots appear. In hot and dry climates, too, a bit of watering after planting and again all through spring will assist the bulbs to flower well and make sturdy growth. In spring, scratch in some more bulb food between the shoots as they emerge to give the flowers a good boost.

Right now, get started; buy your bulbs and plant them properly, and next spring will be wonderful!

A Remarkable New Eating Experience

All across the country, American homemakers are discovering how to bring some of the world's legendary banquet dishes to their own tables in a matter of minutes. The secret: five Famous Foods of the world in cans which the Boston Traveler newspaper announced "answers a demand for continental cuisine...all ready to heat and serve."

Just minutes away from your table, for example, is Italy's fabled Chicken Cacciatore, enthusiastically described by the Chicago Daily News as "tender chicken cooked hunter style with tomatoes, herbs and mushrooms." "You will like this new line of ready-to-eat foods, for they are deliciously flavored," proclaimed the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, ... "a gourmet line of foods at budget prices. One can serves three generously."

When you can serve authentic Cacciatore or the fabled Beef Stroganoff of old Imperial Russia or Köttbullar (Sweden's famous little meatballs) for less than a dollar, don't delay. Treat your friends or family soon! And try building a meal around hearty Spanish Garbanzo or French Onion soups as well. Magnifique!

Halloween coming, don't be too sure

BY ELIZABETH BOWEN

author of "Seven Winters and Afterthoughts," "Death of the Heart," "House in Paris"

THE ROOM WAS—extraordinarily!—alive.

So much so that Katie stopped dead, met by a shock. Her heart missed a beat. She stood in the doorway clutching her armful of packages and stared. Of all young women, she surely was the least prone to fancies ("the Martha type" she was, people told her). Yet here, now, in the Barringtons' living room, she confronted something she simply could not account for, was seized upon by a sensation she could not fathom.

No, come!—there was some explanation, surely? "They're back," she decided. "They took some earlier plane." At this, her surge of joyous excitement was mixed with a slight pang: she was not in time, after all, with her preparations! Such a welcome home Katie'd planned. A great florist's box topped off her slithering load of groceries, fruit, and interesting bottles. She called out, "Harriet—whatever on earth? Joe! HARRIET?"

No answer. Nothing but silence came from the rest of the house; undisturbed, as she'd left it the night before. Empty, as it had been these three last, long weeks. Though not empty (somehow) quite as it had been.

In those three weeks, she had learned what emptiness can be. Eagerly, Katie had volunteered to caretake while the Barringtons were on holiday. Here, at last, was one small thing she could do for them. She'd swelled with pride at having this trust reposed in her. The door key-tossed into her waiting hand by happy-go-lucky Harriet at the last moment-went everywhere with her in her purse, like a treasured talisman. Mornings, she'd detoured on her way to work to make certain the Barrington property was in order; evenings, she'd hastened back here, straight from the office. Sundays, she stopped longer, to air the place out, doing some polishing meanwhile. To check on window bolts, water plants, sort and re-address mail ("Only forward anything that looks interesting," Harriet had pleaded.) came to be Katie's almost pious routine. But not a cheerful one. Joe and Harriet gone, their home seemed a hollow shell. Their absence ate into Katie, more every day. Increasingly her rounds through the rooms depressed her. "Bare ruined choirs, where late the sweet birds sang," a more literary girl might have thought. Katie knew no poetry.

She was unimaginative. But when her kind do feel, they feel the more—experience takes them by surprise. Katie cared for Joe and Harriet out of all proportion; such friendship was totally new in her sober life. She asked herself, what could they see in her? To the quiet suburb where she lived with her aunt, the Barringtons were still exotic newcomers. What brought them, why they'd come to reside here, nobody knew-naturally, many wondered. A chance word-or was it a stroke of fate?-had put Katie in touch with Harriet in the town library one memorable sunny Saturday morning: from then on had blossomed this dazzling intimacy. Absorbed in their vivid existence and in each other, the stylish, youngish, well-matched husband and wife dashed, inexplicably, in and out of the big city-yet, too, had time to create, in this home they'd chanced on (the corner house with the vine and the blue shutters) an intensive, magnetic, glowingly self-expressive world. So far, no neighbor, other than Katie, had crossed their threshold.

She was in their confidence. Though, now she came to helps save you ironing. Here's another:

Wrinkles never bake in because guesswork about drying time is eliminated. Automatically, Kelvinator senses the moisture in the clothes and shuts itself off when they are dried just right—never overdries, never underdries.

Third, Kelvinator smooths away wrinkles

Third, Kelvinator smooths away wrinkles with a 10-minute cool tumble at the end of each cycle. Your clothes come out soft and fluffy.

Fourth, a special cycle removes wear wrinkles from wash-wear, but keeps in the pre-set creases.

All this doesn't eliminate ironing entirely, but it does keep it to a minimum. Many things come out needing only "touch up" ironing or even none at all!

And Kelvinator also gives you the regular timed cycles for damp drying and gentle, no-heat fluffing.

This new dryer is a good example of the Kelvinator Constant Basic Improvement program in action. Instead of costly annual model changes, we concentrate on basic improvements, bringing them to you just as soon as they are tested and approved.

think of it, the Barringtons (unlike ordinary people) never discussed decisions or talked plans. The news of their vacation had come, therefore, quite out of the blue—Joe remarking half-vaguely as he opened a bottle: "Monday, we're off." As simple as that! Spring came too slow for them; they were racing ahead of it into southern sun. Stunned, Katie looked from one to the other: "For long?" she'd managed to ask. Joe, clinking the ice with a long spoon, said he supposed about three weeks. "Three to a day," said Harriet. Katie fought against dismay—let her not be selfish!

Monday, she'd come round early. Just as well that she did: they still sat over their coffee, with nothing ready—without her, her bustle, and grip, they'd never have made it. She was armored (or so she thought) with her best smile; yet Joe, swinging baggage into the car, had paused to twinkle an eye at her. "Hi, cheer up!" And Harriet, flinging her arms round the woeful girl, had exclaimed, "We'll be back, you know. Count on us—we'll be back!"

Off whirled the two, to the airport.

What she had not foreseen was the desolation. Not for the world would she lapse in her role of caretaker. But each lone visit became a peculiar mockery—each an ordeal, deadening to her heart. For nothing seemed to be left; there was nothing there! Yawning and chilly, the black hearth was haunted by a faint reek of wood smoke, all that remained of the log fires' leaping blaze and the heady glow of evenings gathered around them. Color seemed drained from everything, textures poorer—the magical lavish look was gone from the curtains, cushions, rugs, lampshades, ornaments. On the walls, the pictures had lost dimension. Yes, from everywhere, wherever her eyes turned, a mysterious vitality had ebbed... The Barringtons had taken it all with them.

"But they're just away," Katie had stoutly told herself, repeating this like an article of faith. "Joe and Harriet, they're only away—not gone!"

Faith was rewarded.

A telegram from Harriet confirmed the date (tomorrow) and hour (evening) of the home-coming. Katie, with her passion for being certain, had called the airport, verified the flight number, checked on the schedule. Now, to get busy. . . !

SHE MADE A START overnight—laying the fire, ready for a match tomorrow; setting fresh candles everywhere, in the crystal and silver gilt holders; bringing sheer linen out to make up the bed. To stock the Barringtons' icebox and provision the larder, she laid in delicacies undreamed of—adding wine, two cartons of cigarettes, three dozen glossy deep-crimson tulips.

For the last time (that was, in her role of caretaker) she put the key into the Barringtons' door. Letting herself in, laden as she was with so much that was slippery, fragile, crushable, was an operation; it took up all her attention—otherwise; probably, she'd have noticed whatever it was about the house sooner than she did and been mystified by it before she was. For instance, the coral-red entrance hall was full of a warmed vibration, a soundless rustling—as though again, already, owners were in the house, just out of view; at the moment, nearby. little marble-topped table at the foot of the staircase—how came it to be burning? An oversight, possibly, when she'd left late last night? Though unlike her! Somehow, she did not wonder—enough that the hall had, once more, its familiar radiance, its remembered whisper of welcome, of invitation. So much so, that Katie had the impression that gloves of Harriet's and her blond shell cigarette case were there on the marble table, in the lamplight. That this was odd did not strike her till minutes later—when she'd begun thinking. Had she dreamed them up?—so often her eye had lit on them, lying there.

Heedless, she made for the living room.

There, she was to be halted!

Yes, there she stood (stands, for this is the minute we first saw her) in the doorway, confounded. So it is that she leaps to her first conclusion—calling aloud uncertainly, half-unwillingly. Silence, her answer: a silence utter, convincing. Unmistakable stillness, throughout the dark of the house. No, whatever it was, it was not that. They were not back.

No, they had not stolen a march on her, Joe and Harriet. So, what? . . . A shakiness in her knees made Katie steady a shoulder against the door jamb. This, and a dryness in her mouth, warned her she must get a grip on herself. Methodically, she began to put down the packages, one by one; later on she'd take them through to the kitchen. She had time; there was still an hour to go. Joe and Harriet would not be around just yet. How should they be? They were not. There was not a sign of them.

Not a sign? . . . Then what was going on in here?

How came the air in the living room to be fragrant with hyacinths, jonquils, freesias—making a mock, already, of Katie's tulips, scentlessly packed away in their waxy wrappings? Jealous, she looked around: she saw not a flower! And what drew the fragrance out, from its unseen source? The fire was burning, each log came out into flame like a tree into leaf. Out of its own impatience, the wood had kindled . . . No, stop—stop! Fires don't light themselves. Last night, a tossed-away match or a cigarette stub not through with smouldering? No, for good reason: Katie was not a smoker. And, too, if the wood had kindled far back as that, what by now would be left but extinct white ash? . . . As it now burned, this fire was at perfection. Who or what had lit it? What other hand?

Two big armchairs had moved forward, into the lovely arena of the glow. Pushing wrinkles into the white fur hearth rug, there they were; back again at the angle at which they were accustomed to being sat in, not far apart. This had not been their position when last she saw them—this had not been their position for three weeks; which was, since the Barringtons went away.

She knotted her hands tightly behind her back, thinking. (She didn't, for some reason, want to go too near anything in this animate room.) Two things were possible—Joe and Harriet had come in, then gone out again; or, they had other friends, who, prankish, had lately entered the house.

That second alternative tormented her. "Other friends"—and why shouldn't they, why not? Did she, Katie, imagine she owned the Barringtons?

But, steady a minute: wait. How did "they" get in? There was no other key to this house. There was no such thing. There existed only the one key which Katie guarded. That one, no other.

Tossing it in the palm of her own hand, before dropping it in Katie's, Harriet had acted a small drama. Rolling her eyes at the key, she had sung out, "Mine, my own and my darling! And moreover—mind you, Katie!—the sole survivor. Joe lost his, and some guest walked off with the spare. So don't you lose this one!—bless you, you never would! But another thing also, Katie: don't lock us out. I mean, the night we'll be getting home. If you can't be there—("Me, not there?" Katie'd cried, shocked.) If you can't be there," Harriet had gone on, "leave the place open. Remember! Or we'll be sunk."

Each of those light words now somberly, sharply echoed in Katie's brain. That key had stayed in her keeping, day and night. Without it—short of forcing a window, and what a watchdog she'd been, as to every fastening—no living human could enter.

The telephone rang. Turning to face the ringing, she stayed where she was a minute, licking her lips. She looked down a stretch of the inexplicable room which, while she watched, was being transmuted slowly by yellow radiance, soft, yet festively bright. Not for nothing had she set the candles ready; one by one, each wore a pointed flame. These, unflickering, lit her way to the telephone.

"Yes?" she asked.

The voice over the wire was wary, expressionless, and official. Was this the Barrington house? Who was speaking: a relative of the family? Were there relatives; where could they be contacted? Uh-huh. Then what was she—an employee? Katie drew in her first long breath, to say, "Just a neighbor. Why?" What, a neighbor? Then she had better know... Incoming flight XZ OIO, scheduled for 20.05, would not, after all, be making the home airport. It had failed to make the take-off. Uh-huh, yes: crashed. Yes, exactly that. Around an hour ago. Cause not yet established; but one thing had been, uh-huh. There were no survivors.

Katie put down the receiver, abruptly. As though hearing a call to something more urgent. And called she was. It did not surprise her to see Joe and Harriet standing there in the hallway. Laughing, triumphant. "Count on us," they had said. Joe waved to Katie, over Harriet's shoulder. Harriet, poised to run forward, straight into Katie's arms, lingered to tug off one dark glove. Splendid they were, in their swinging overcoats.

Nevertheless, light came through their bodies.

Let LEONARD BERNSTEIN open the door to the wonderful world of music for your family

An extraordinary new book with 5 long-playing 7" records will bring the magic of his famous Young People's Concerts into your home

Starting this fall you can give your children the gift of living with great music — of having their taste and understanding guided and nurtured by a great musician: Leonard Bernstein.

Leonard Bernstein's Young People's Concerts on television are among the phenomena of our age. Millions of us have wanted to relive them — to hear again the great music and the flashing insights that have transformed our old habit of "lazy listening" into a richly active adventure in the joy of music.

In permanent form at last

Now at last, the greatest of these celebrated concerts have been put in permanent form — to be relived, re-read, replayed, returned to over the years.

They will be published, in the fall of this year, in the form of a unique musical treasure chest: records and a book that together encompass the heart of this extraordinary musical education.

About the contents

THE BOOK, beautifully illustrated with over 50 color pictures and 100 musical examples and diagrams, contains Mr. Bernstein's incomparable commentaries, rewritten for reading.

THE FIVE LONG-PLAYING 7" RECORDS are performed by major orchestras, chiefly the New York Philharmonic under Leonard Bernstein's direction and produced by Columbia Records. They enable you to listen, whenever you wish, to the great music (from Bach and Haydn to the modern American composers, Copland and Ives) that illustrate the major points made in the book.

Never before has such a magical opensesame to musical understanding been made available to the family.

Mr. Bernstein's narrative is alive with his exuberant joy in music, his genius for making us understand. He ranges over the whole world of music.

He talks of Beethoven and of folk songs. He shows how Bach constructs a fugue, following "instructions" as precise as those that come with a child's Erector Set—then lets you hear an example, from the fourth Brandenburg Concerto, played by the Philharmonic.

He shows how a symphonic work develops — and grows — from its first note to its finale.

He explains orchestration with a scoreit-yourself experiment for the young reader — and a Ravel recording to demonstrate the special effects of the various instruments.

He explains the techniques of composition that produce the shimmering "colors" of Debussy's La Mer — and plays it for you. He tells — and illustrates with records — what makes music classical, what makes it romantic, what makes it American, or French, or Italian; what makes it funny. And one of the special delights in store for you is the example he gives, on a record, from a great symphony that makes you laugh: Prokofieff's "Classical" Symphony.

He invites us to experiment with the "meaning of music" through a recording of Moussorgsky. He explains counterpoint in terms of "Three Blind Mice." He leads us closer to the grandeur of Beethoven and Brahms.

He opens innumerable doors to the world of music. Whoever reads the book and listens to the records — be it a child or a highly educated adult — becomes a citizen of that world.

Special Money-Saving Opportunity

The publishers are sparing no effort to make this musical treasure-chest as entrancing to look at as it is to read and hear. The 7" vinyl LP recordings, the book with its color pictures and musical examples — all in a handsome case — will be a delight to own and give.

Enormous advance interest enables us to plan an unusually large printing which will so radically bring down the cost that we can offer the complete boxed set for only $12.50. But you can save even more if you reserve your set now.

Highlights of Clare Potter's collection photographed in her present workroom, a converted stable in West Nyack, New York

Long skirts are back for chilly evenings. This one is a sweep of scarlet silk benyaline, draped to move with quiet grace. With it, a lovely plain shirt in heavy oyster-white silk.

Clare Potter clothes are available at fine shops throughout the country. We will be glad to supply the name of the one nearest you on request. Please address Fashion Editor, SUBURBIA TODAY.

THE MAKING

■ FOR THE LAST four years, Clare Potter's suave, endlessly wearable town and country clothes have been designed and cut in a converted stable on her place, "Timbertop," where she and her husband now live all year round. The stable, painted white throughout and filled with light, has adapted happily to its new role. Mrs. Potter works in the south loft with her bolts of cloth and sketches and mannequins; on the north side, Mr. Potter, an engineer by training, now applies his technical skills to producing the manufacturers' patterns from the originals, which his wife cuts and drapes on the live model. In a box stall on the ground floor, the new samples hang on long, polished-poles, and twice a year Clare Potter assembles a complete collection and goes into the city to have seasonal showings like all the other name designers. Between times, the "trade" gladly goes out to "Timbertop" to call on her. "It means a breath of fresh air," she says.

Above: A claret wool jersey town-and-country dress has circlet and pockets lined a flash of bright Potter pink. Below: Three-piece suit of wool tweed. Skirt and matching overblouse make a second outfit, worn without the jacket.

Clare Potter, by her stable-work-room. In free time, she enjoys her garden and hilltop swimming pool.

Above: Another long skirt, in tangerine velvet, with a top of soft green mohair. Completely, deliciously silk-lined.

Beautify Your Town

Once the people of a community become thoroughly beauty-conscious, the results can be of permanent benefit to all concerned. Look at Dearborn, Michigan, partly residential, partly industrial. which has acquired a nationwide reputation for cleanliness. Dearborn has a year-round clean-up campaign, supervised by an 18-member Dearborn City Beautiful Committee (volunteers) led by Mayor Orville L. Hubbard with close co-operation from city departments, schools, churches, civic associations, and individual citizens. Antilitter ordinances, school and association clean-up contests and parades, and a Mrs. City Beautiful contest are features of the program, which is partly supported from public funds and partly by voluntary efforts.

OWN IN SUNNY FLORIDA, Coral Gables also proudly calls itself the City Beautiful-and spends something approaching 10% of its annual budget (this tab was $369,000 in 1961) to make good its claim to the title. Even the city sewagedisposal plant has been designed for exterior beauty; people think it's a gambling casino or a restaurant and drive right in. And in Coral Gables, too, as we've noted in examples previously mentioned, beauty pays-"It's one big reason," reports Rolfe Neill of the Coral Gables Times, "why Gables property is worth 15% to 20% more than in surrounding areas of Dade County."

Maybe some of the examples we've quoted will help your community in its beauty program. There are national organizations that will be glad to help, too. Keep America Beautiful, Inc., with headquarters at 59 Park Avenue, New York 16, New York, is chiefly concerned with litter-prevention but also knowledgeable in other aspects of municipal beautification. The National Clean Up, Paint Up, Fix Up Bureau (1500 Rhode Island Avenue, NW, Washington 5, D.C.) is noted for its award programs and advisory field work.

But Keeping Your Town Beautiful is, at bottom, a do-it-yourself proposition and a keep-at-itevery-day proposition, too. Beauty is one of suburbia's greatest tangible and intangible assets, and it's also the product of hard work, persistence, and the kind of local leadership that brings forth and makes the most of community spirit and pride.
