Steiner Speaks Out On Reorganization

By Dean Brierly

The battle to reorganize Wayne County is being waged fiercely in Detroit and its surrounding communities, and is one of the hottest issues in the state right now.

However, Wayne County Commissioner Ervin A. Steiner, who represents the Pointes, feels reorganization "is not in and of itself the answer to the county's problems." He says any reorganization should begin at the state level, and suggests the current county structure could be "streamlined,"

"Milliken is pushing for reorgani-zation," said Steiner. "It will cost $2 million to fund the charter commission. The state has promised to pay that, but we have seen no letters, no commitment of any sort. If this goes through, we'll be a further $2 million in debt.'

At present, an apportionment commission is trying to decide whether to use the 1970 or 1980 census figures to determine the drawing up of districts from which charter commissioners will be elected, as the first step in the reorganization process.

GROSSE POINTE IS aligned with a total of 39 western Wayne County communities which have tried to convince the apportionment commission that using the 1970 census would result in their receiving less representation than they feel they deserve. The commission has until May 20 to make a decision.

The suburban communities point to their increased population growth over the past 10 years, while the number of their political representa-tives has remained the same. Detroit's population has decreased during this period, which would give that city a decided advantage in representation should the 1970 figures be used,

Steiner says he supports the use of the 1980 census, which will be available in the next six to 10 months, as it would assure the suburbs a far greater degree of representation. If the 1970 census is used, he says Grosse Pointe would have "no representation, whatsoever.'

Another aspect to the reorganization plan is a proposed reduction of the number of county commissioners. Defending the need to maintain the status quo, Steiner said, "I feel 27 commissioners can be unruly at times, but people in Grosse Pointe cannot understand the problems of the inner city and in no way can the people of the inner city understand the prob-lems of Grosse Pointe. You need input from all of them."

Any reorganization, said Steiner, should start at the state level. He blamed the state's practice of mandating services and then failing to provide funds for them as the root cause of the county's fiscal woes.

"THE STATE CANNOT mandate services without determining where the money is going to come from. Ctherwise, Wayne County will never balance a budget.'

As an example Steiner explained that county voters twice turned down a millage for Wayne County Community College, only to see the state override them and add it to citizens' tax bills.

He also accused county department heads of overspending the budgets allocated to them.

"As long as elected officials in the county are not held responsible to live inside their budgets, then you'll never get them to balance. The person who overspends on the budget given to him should be taken out of office. Department heads must decide what their real priorities are."

Steiner said the county could cut costs and reduce deficits by combining and streamlining departments as a more sensible solution than total reorganization. He added that the number of employes could be reduced through natural attrition - retirements and quits.

Among the services provided by Wayne County are air pollution control, an office on aging, department of substance abuse and a road commission

Steiner claimed the Pointes will be especially hurt should a decision be made in favor of the 1970 census.

"There will be no personal contact -nobody that is responsible to Grosse Pointe like we have today. I believe district representation is the most important thing about this whole matter."

Youth Bureau Called To Curb 'Drug Abuse'

By Susan McDonald

A task force studying juvenile crime in Grosse Pointe issued its final report this week, calling for creation of a new youth police bureau to stem an "apparent increase" in drug and alcohol abuse in local high schools.

Although the report notes there is no statistical evidence of such an increase, it concludes that "it is in the best interests of the communities and Board of Education to implement a new youth bureau . . . to investigate juvenile crime and other incidents."

The controversial report, which grew out of a League of Women Voters' town meeting last fall, met with opposition even before it was released to the public.

Only eight representatives on the 14-member task force voted to endorse the report. One member, Katherine Gee of the Park, issued a minority report, calling parts of the document "grossly unfair . . . naive and simplistic."

run into trouble from some city councils and the school board, whose superintendent, William Coats, has publicly stated his opposition to using school tax dollars to finance what he calls a "police function."

Dr. Coats also denied the task force allegation that drug use is on the rise.

"There's no evidence the (drug) problem has increased-the task force admits that and administrators in the high schools say it just isn't so," Coats said.

He agreed, however, that it is in the best interests of the community to form some kind of youth bureau.

'We'd be delighted to work closely with such an agency," Coats said. "But I am opposed to having the Board of Education financially underwrite what ought to be an obligation of the police departments.

"We don't ask the cities to pay for our reading programs. That's our re-sponsibility. This is their responsibil-

The task force also reports that officials from the Woods and Farms (where the high schools are located) admit they don't have adequate manpower to properly handle youth crime. It proposed financing a new, two-man youth bureau with contributions from all five cities and the schools.

The Woods and Farms would contribute about $36,000 each and the schools about $23,300. The City, Park and Shores would pay the remaining $21,200 in the bureau budget.

Ms. Gee, in her minority report, notes the task force may encounter

The document also is expected to strong opposition to the budget requirements of the new bureau.

> Representatives of the Woods and Farms, who are responsible for law enforcement at North and South High School, "have an obvious financial vested interest in dividing the proposed budget" to include all five cities, Ms. Gee said.

> "The final report was strongly influenced by Woods and Farms rep-recentatives," she said. The taxpayers and consumers of the three remaining communities have not had a democratic input into the committee or its report."

She did not end her criticism of the document there however. In her conclusion, Gee says the task force recommendations are "neither based on factual data nor the best use of available research.

"Its proposals reflect naive, simplistic and reactive thinking. Their adoption would affect adversely the learning climate of the schools."

Members of the task force who voted last week to adopt the majority report were chairman Jon Gandelot. Judge George Bashara Jr., Edward Deeb, Arthur Fetters, John Gillooly, Christopher Lynch, James Mast and Frances Schonenberg.

Ms. Gee voted against the report and Judge Beverly Grobbel was pres-ent at the meeting but abstained from the vote. Members not present were Douglas Graham, Frederick Lovelace, George Reindell III and Gerald Schroeder.

City councils in the Pointe are expected to discuss the report at meetings this month.

Inflation Blamed for Park Budget Increase

By Joanne Gouleche

The Park Council asked city administrators last week to trim a proposed $4.2 million budget by $100,000, but that request is expected to do little to help taxpayers cope with a 26 percent tax increase next year.

"I know this is a very tight budget, but we are faced with

Your city budget

"Stagflation" has caused headaches for city managers in all the local municipalities this spring as they sit down to prepare next year's budgets. Tentative proposals for 1980-81 are being considered by councils now. Public hearings will be held in local city halls later this month.

GROSSE POINTE CITY'S $2.5 million budget represents a 10 percent increase over last year. The tax rate will be rolled back (because of Headlee) from last year's 21.74 mills to 19.8. But, because of steep increases in property values, the average citizen's tax bill will jump about 10.25 percent. A hearing is scheduled for May 12, at 7:30 p.m.

THE FARMS' $4.7 million budget is up about 92 percent over last year. The tax rate will be cut from last year's 17.75 mills to 16. Property values rose sharply there, as well. A home valued at $35,000 last year increased to $43,400 this year. Despite the tax roll-back, the city tax bill on that home will increase from $621 to about $694. The Farms hearing is set for 8 p.m. May 19.

THE WOODS plans to spend over $9.3 million next year and reduce the total tax rate from last year's 12.97 mills to 12.0 mills. Because of rising home values, an average citizen's tax bill (on a home assessed last year at $25,000) will increase from $477 to $498 in 1980-81. The hearing is May 19 at 7:30 p.m.

THE SHORES' is on a different fiscal year and will not begin consider ing its budget until next month.

a situation where people are out of work," Councilman Douglas Graham said.

The city is expected to make the cut in capital improvements and fixed expenses.

At a three-hour study session Thursday, May 1, the council wrestled with inflation in most budgeted areas while seeking ways in which to slim down the $586,000 increase over last year's $3.6 million budget.

To finance the increase, City Manager John Crawford is proposing a general operating mill rate rollback from 18.39 to 17.50 mills, the maximum allowable under the Headlee Tax Limitation Amendment.

But a new 1.50 tax levy for rubbish and .90 of a mill for debt service will push total tax levy for 1980-81 to 19.90 mills compared to the current 19.50 mill rate.

While the four-tenths mill increase seems small, it's the 24 percent increase in State Equalized Valuation on property in Grosse Pointe Park that will put the bite into taxpayer's wallets next year.

Residents with a $35,000 assessed valuation could face a $249 increase in property taxes.

TO OFFSET SOME of that tax burden, the council toyed with proposing a bond issue, at least to fund some of the $189,000 capital improvements requested for next year.

Last month the council turned down the bond recommendation because of a nine percent interest rate on municipal bonds. Crawford didn't get much more support for the idea last week, even though he told the council a bond issue would "lock in" the city at 1980 prices to finance much of the improvements.

"People are not looking to spend money these days," Mayor Matthew Patterson said "It's not possible to ask people for a bond issue."

Crawford later said he thinks the city may reconsider the bond issue

That decision could be made at the last minute at the May 12 Grosse Pointe Park Council meeting when that council will decide whether to join the other four cities in backing the one judge system.

Court reorganization for the Pointes is proposed in legislation designed by State Sen. John Kelly and amended by Rep. William Bryant. Their bill sets a May 13 deadline for formal concurrence by the five Pointes on the number of judges they want.

IF THE DEADLINE is missed. state law prevents the election of a district judge in odd numbered years and the Pointes will run the risk of being overloaded with cases that are transferred from Detroit Common Pleas and Recorders Court when they are reorganized.

The Woods and Farms backed the one judge concept with formal resolutions at this week's council sessions. Woods Mayor George Freeman said he believes a one judge court is more economical.

The Woods Council room was the scene last week of a public meeting to clarify misunderstandings about Bryant's proposed one judge system and Kelly's original two-judge bill.

Senators Kelly and John Hertel and Representatives Bryant and Gilbert DiNello attended last week's discussion which quickly became an intense debate on the merits of the proposed court systems.

KELLY CONTENDED that a district court system will "drastically change the relationship between the Pointes and the courts." He pointed to a study by state legal specialists that indicates a Grosse Pointe district court would increase its caseload by 639 civil cases which would be transferred from Common Pleas and Re corders Court The Pointes' present municipal courts are not courts of record and therefore cannot try most civil cases.

"If you look at the figures and ask them (the specialists) they come down with two judges," Kelly said.

doesn't have to deal with the com plex issues.

Adding to the confusion that uncommitted voters and delegates may be experiencing is the entry of Congressman John Anderson into the race as an independent Republican Anderson's supporters say they have collected more than the 18,339 petition signatures necessary to put him on the general election ballot.

"We've gotten a lot of those petitions from the Grosse Pointes," said Cynthia Sharp, press agent for the Anderson for President Committee's Detroit office

Sharp said she believes Anderson's honesty, candor and experience will appeal to Pointers while his larger appeal will be to Democrats and in-

The SOS group is meeting regularly in member Elaine Hartmann's Farms living room and are planning one more, very public event.

On June 5, all the supporters of the SOS movement are invited to a good old-fashioned town meeting at 7:30 p.m. at Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church on Maumee.

Subject of the meeting will be the bank's purchase of a building that houses six shops on Fisher road including the popular Pointe Pedlar, Teetzel Co. and Weathervane Antiques. The bank has refused to renew the shops' leases past this November. It plans to replace them with a new bank and trust facility.

The bank is expected to apply to the bureau for a license, sooner or later, and when they do, SOS will be on the bureau's doorstep, asking for a public hearing.

"I THINK WE can approach it, (the hearing), in a number of ways, and one is need," Justine Kulka, a Pedlar partner, said at a recent meeting. "I genuinely question the need for another bank out here. There are

Michael Moriarty 'Acting Is A Celebration'

By Dean Brierly

Our appointment is set for 3 p.m. Running about two minutes late, I enter the Birmingham theatre and leave behind the late afternoon sun.

As my eyes adjust to the dark interior, a tall figure looms before me and I come face to face with Michael Moriarty, alias the nazi officer Dorf of "The Holocaust," alias the gentleman caller of "The Glass Menagerie," alias the young baseball pitcher of "Bang the Drum Slowly," alias . .

Moriarty extends his hand in greeting, and one is struck by how big he seems. Over six feet tall, wearing an English cap, dark blue pea coat, cigar and bemused look.

He pours coffee for two, and the stage is decided on for the interview An appropriate setting Chairs are arranged, the lights go up and Michael Moriarty, who's come "home" for a play at the Birmingham Theatre, leans forward to talk about his craft.

"Life and circumstances keep sending me back to the stage," he says, referring to the fact that most of the work he's done has been on the stage, despite a well-rounded career that spans television and film as well.

"The stage is still the domain of the actor," he explains, "Whereas film is the domain of the director. For my generation, which was from the 50's, the stage is where we found our first jobs. Nowadays, it's more likely the first entrance to professional acting is through film or TV."

Moriarty speaks of developing his talents in the European tradition of acting, despite working mainly in this country. He describes the European approach as looking at a career as a number of roles done over a long period of time involving courage, risk, love, volume and craft.

"That's a lot healthier way of looking at acting than the American system, which has a large level of sustained neurosis and fantasy life. A lot of American actors have illusions of grandeur. I've been lucky, My career is closer to Europe than to the U.S.

Moriarty says the European attitude to acting is not encouraged in the American system, which he defines as "singular image building with sustained reliability at the box office It's like Campbell's soup, A good solid product, but no changes, and bought by the majority."

Michael Moriarty will open a tour of the award-winning play "Whose Life Is It Anyway?" from May 20 to June 15 at the Birmingham Theatre, 211 S. Woodward. Call 644-3533 for tickets.

The Detroit born actor, whose parents, Dr and Mrs. George Moriarty, still reside in Grosse Pointe, says he's managed to avoid falling into that system from the experience of watch-

How to Borrow Money in Tight Credit Market

The tightening of credit availability and the rise in prices of consumer goods is on everyone's minds today. To many, deciding their personal credit situation is a confusing task. Where do you begin?

increase in cash values as the premiums are paid may be an exceptional source of credit, say the CPAs. Many policies allow loans at five to eight percent and usually insurance companies do not refuse to lend you money.

Often there is no deadline for repayment of the loan, but it does reduce the payoff value of the policy. If you die and $10,000 has been borrowed from your $50,000 policy, for example, your beneficiary will receive only $40,000.

Another place to check is your local credit union. If you are a member generally you will be able to borrow at a lower rate of interest than a savings and loan association or a bank.

Michael Moriarty—He's An Actor But Not A Star

ing a lot of the tragedies around him. He cites Marlon Brando, Marilyn Monroe and Greta Garbo as some of Hollywood's most spectacular tragic figures

"These are not some of your happier creatures," he adds dryly.

"Take Brando for instance. He was the sacrificial lamb. It was like taking a great natural resource and hurling it into a cesspool. It was about that definite,

"He turned his talents to becoming the highest paid star in the history of the cinema. And for what? So his photograph costs more than anyone else's. I say big deal, Moriarty starts warming up, his voice picking up some of that intensity that comes across on stage and film.

"He wasted the best years of his life. He could have given us countless hours of pleasure," he adds in a voice tinged with regret.

Moriarty says what happened to Brando was inevitable, and that it served as an example to newcomers to the profession. He cites an abundance of new talent in this country which is learning about the importance of a healthy career.

If any American actor could be said to be completely free from typecasting, it is Moriarty. Asked about the great variety of roles he's played, he responds, "That's what acting's all about. I've been sent a lot of bad scripts, but I've been lucky to have been given the time to say no."

Moriarly points to his role as SS officer Dorf in the controversial television film "Holocaust" as one of his finest accomplishments.

"Of all the TV pieces I've done, I can be as proud of that as any other. It was a beautifully written role. No one had ever written a nazi like that."

Commenting on the brutal subject matter of the film and reports that he broke down on the set after filming certain scenes, he replied:

"Every actor gets into a mammoth theme of pain sooner or later. The pain and reality of the holocaust was felt by the entire cast. You build up the pain until the only release is through tears. Everyone in the film broke down. There are no words for While he's noted for his heavily dramatic roles, Moriarty says he enjoys doing comedy more than drama.

"This one's got a lot of comedy in it," he says, referring to the Birmingham theatre production.

"I prefer comedy — it's a higher vision of life than tragedy. The problem with comedy is that there are very few great comic scripts that have substance. Comedy is the art of resurrection and renewal and rebirth. Besides, I have a comic view of life."

The actor recently underwent a rebirth himself, becoming a born-again Christian. In his early years he claims to have been very anti-social and introspective, caring only about his craft. He says he finally "got bored with myself" and started coming to terms with life and with other people.

As he puts it, it's due to his coming to terms with God.

"The more I live, the less predictable my existence becomes. It becomes more an act of chance. I've become less presumptious of the great plan. I've committed total surrender to the Lord. It's a little bit scary.

"I've seen a lot of change in my life," he continues. "Life is a constant surprise to me. The Lord's given me surprises way beyond my imagination.'

Although he was surprised at his initial success and enjoyed it at first, he claims his spiritual renewal is more important now than any success from his profession.

"I'm overjoyed at my increasing inner contentment. It's more important than money or fame. That's what I like. The rest is all frosting on the cake.'

The words may sound cliched, but when Moriarty strings them together, belief is hard to avoid.

'Acting is just the best way I know to celebrate my existence and give thanks," he adds.

Despite the success he's enjoyed in the cinema, Moriarty, who lives in New York, is anything but charitable towards the silver screen colony. Ask him what he thinks about Hollywood and he says, "I try to think of it as little as possible. It's a desert. If you like deserts, you should like it there. I don't like deserts.'

Moriarty is also less-than enthralled on the subject of awards, despite having won two Emmys for television, and Tony, Theatre World and Drama Desk awards,

"I really don't know why they exist. The way I deal with them is that in addition to his sense of hearing, they are an excuse to celebrate your work. If approached as a celebration, then they're in perspective. The meaning of the award is determined not by the presenter, but the receiver. The meaning is placed on the award at that moment by the receiver."

Besides acting. Moriarty has been devoting more time to his little known musical career. He recently finished recording a jazz-oriented album and for some time has played a number of clubs in New York. He says he does it "between successes."

His grandfather was a songwriter, his father an avid listener to jazz and classical music, Moriarty started writing songs in high school. He trained himself in jazz theory and received his piano technique from New York jazz pianist Lance Hayward.

"I have a small following in New York. Some of them like my music better than my acting," he says.

Moriarty clamps down on his cigar, by now unlit, and gazes about the empty theatre as he talks about other outlets he's starting to pursue. He mentions he's starting to draw more, having developed his sense of sight and says he may start painting.

Perhaps the project which occupies most of his time these days is Potter's Field, the non-profit theatre company he founded to produce Shakespeare's plays and give young actors and actresses a unified approach to the bard's work.

"I'm trying to create an environ ment in which to work with young actors and actresses, It's like watching a garden grow. I'm building a universe for myself that is the best l can imagine."

"Right now we're at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York We do Shakespeare and the Bible because it's the most beautiful language on earth.

Moriarty is getting restless and seems ready to finish the interview. He is asked what acting has in store for him in the future. He leans forward in his chair and picks his words carefully before replying.

"The years 40 to 60 are the best years of an actor's career. Actors don't mature and get the great roles until their 40's, I'm 39. The best years of my career are just around the corner."

Letters to The Editor

Test scores are distorted To the Editor:

History-in-the-making is unpleas-ant enough without our being forced to relive bad history. Last spring the News published a detailed story on the "composite" Michigan Assessment scores, which, according to the Director of Research and Development for the Grosse Pointe Schools made this district "number 1.

An appropriate test question for that incident would be: Grosse Pointe's number 1 ranking is: (a) hype (b) statistically ridiculous (c) meaningless (d) all of these.

Believing that bad history — that is, history based on non-facts or dis-torted facts — becomes accepted if repeated often enough, I would like to again set forth the two points I made last year, and add a third.

1. The Michigan Department of Education cautions school districts against developing comparative rankings. They have no legitimacy.

2. No careful statistician would try to derive any sort of meaningful composite score by combining the results of math and reading tests from three different grades. 3. By accepting this melange and by reporting it without a factual context indicating the state's position, both the Board of Education and the from South High, will per-News, respectively, become parties form a concert at the Punch to the formulation of bad history.

The surface of the stories is that Grosse Pointe ranks first or third or whatever. The substance of the event is that none of these rankings really counts. All they add up to is bad history.

Sincerely, Henry B. Maloney of Hollywood Road, Grosse Pointe Woods

The auxilians gathered at the Renaissance Club on May Day to celebrate their organization's 25th anniversary and, with Mrs. Robert Niccolini, of Colonial road, presiding, to review their group's growth from its birth date, May 18, 1955, to the present.

They took the trip through the years via an audiovisual slide presentation created to record their history.

Hutzel's Auxiliary still has 21 of its charter members active after a quarter century of service, and all these charter members were made Honorary Members for Life at the silver jubilee event.

Eleven of those 21 originals are Pointers: Virginia Chauvin, Olga Denler, Charlotte Failing, Ardath Hart, Barbara Leonard, Frances Mead, Thirza Morrow, Gerry Parker, Elizabeth Reeves, Betty Reid and Helen Winslow.

One of those 11 was especially honored at the anniversary meeting, for the auxiliary unveiled a portrait it had commissioned of Charlotte (Mrs. John N.) Failing by noted artist Patricia Burnett. Mrs. Failing has served both as Hutzel's president and chairman of its board of trustees.

Hutzel's patients are the primary beneficiaries of the more than 10,000 hours of volunteer service the auxilians donate each year, but the main focus (Continued on Page 16)

Great Day for Dr. Kiely

It's nice to know that one is loved, and on the last Sunday in April the Session and Congregation of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church told their senior minister DR. RAY KIELY, pictured above greeting parishioners MRS. THATCHER REA and her daughter MRS. JEREMY WEB-STER, exactly what they thought of him via a framed citation proclaiming their appreciation and thanks for his care and guidance during his 10 years with them. Following the presentation by Alfred Warren, an elder in the church, Dr. Kiely received a standing ovation: a rare show of emotion in that large, Gothic structure on the lake. After that, Dr. and Mrs. Kiely greeted their flock in Fellowship Hall.

another Decorators Show House on display right now in Our Part of Michigan?

The Second Show House is, to be sure, not right next door. It's in Flint . . . but Flint, after all, is a reasonable day trip destination from Grosse Pointe.

Our Show House opened Saturday, April 26, and will run through Sunday, May 18. Flint's, housed in the classic, Georgian type home built in 1929 for the Harlow H. Curtice family during Mr. Curtice's years as president of General Motors, opened last Sunday, May 4, and will run through Sunday, May 25.

It's the first Show House ever for the Junior League of Flint, (the Junior League of Detroit is an old hand at putting on Show Houses), and it's under the aegis of general chairperson Denny (Mrs. Robert C.) Morgan.

She was Denny Carne back in 1957, when she graduated from Grosse Pointe High School. The daughter of the Daniel M. Carnes, of Fordcroft road, lives in Grand Blanc now.

So . . . if Grosse Pointe's Show House has whetted your appetite for more of the same, think about driving out to Flint some bright May day. You can get your Flint Show House tickets right here in The Pointe, at the Sign of the Lion, which has decorated the library at the Curtice home.

Derby Day Tradition

Bon Secours Hospital Assistance League Group VI's cocktail buffet at the Lothrop road home of Henry C. Murray is a Kentucky Derby Day tradition in The Pointe and it is, traditionally, one of the "most fun" of our town's spring parties.

This year was no exception. Guests clustered around television sets placed strategically throughout Henry's house to cheer on their favorites, and win or lose it was a marvelous way to spend the afternoon, for the drinks flowed, and the food was delicious, and there were all those old friends to chat with, and new friends to make.

Hostesses were the Group VI members, the Mesdames J. Addison Bartush, Charles Bayer, William Carroll, Fred K. Cody, James E. Coyle, Patrick J. Crowley, Charles T. Fisher, Jr., Thomas Fitzgerald, Robert Frear, Don T. Galvin, John B. Hastings, Herbert G. Henchel, E. James Howard, "They really don't start in the worst area because they haven't had a survey.
