Follow that dog

Now for a shaggy dog story. This one was phoned in by McKinley Road resident Mary Wharam, who reports that one of her neighbor's pets has the neighborhood in stitches.

It seems the lady has a dog named Fred, whom she takes for a walk every two or three hours. She also has a cat named Rainbow, who seems utterly devoted to Fred.
When Fred goes for a walk, always on a leash, of course, Rainbow follows right behind. Up the street, down the street, wherever Fred goes, Rainbow follows along.

The neighbors aren't sure if it's jealousy or devotion, but it makes for some pretty lively conversation. If you're driving down McKinley, make sure you watch for the passing parade.

Give a gift

Okay, let's listen up, all you local business people. The Detroit Symphony-WQRS Radio Marathon is on its way and gift certificates from business people are needed.

Park petition drive hits halfway mark

By Pat Paholsky

The firefighters in the Park are smiling again. In less than a week from when they began their petition drive to force a vote on the public safety issue, they say they've collected more than half of the signatures they need.

'We really started (the drive) Saturday and Sunday and came away very surprised at the response," firefighter Joseph Bialk said. "We surpassed half of our goal in two days and now we've set our goals higher. We want a lot more cushion.'

The firemen, who officially began their campaign Jan. 14, the day after the city council voted to combine the police and fire departments into a public safety unit, need 1,871 signatures to put the question before the voters at a special election.

Bialk said about 25 to 30 firefighters and supporters were out over the weekend, going door to

Detroiter will face resisting charges

By Mike Andrzejczyk

A 19-year old Detroit man will face preliminary examination in Grosse Pointe City Municipal Court in coming weeks on charges of resisting and obstructing a police officer in the commission of his duty.

William P. Anderson of Haverhill was ordered Monday morning, Jan. 20, by Judge Stanley Kazul to face preliminary examination on the charges contained in a warrant issued by the wayne County Prosecutors Office. Anderson was free after posting 10 percent of the $4,000 bond set by Kazul.

The charges stem from the Thursday, Dec. 12, death of Park Patrolman Steven Molitor, 41. Molitor suffered a heart attack after a struggle in front of a Mack Avenue restaurant early that day, and fell to the pavement, fracturnis skull. He was pronounced dead later that morning at Bon Secours Hospital.

According to reports, Molitor and his partner, Patrolman James Smith, were having breakfast in the restaurant that morning, when a patron told them that two men were letting the air out of one of the tires of their squad car. Both officers ran outside and stopped two men, driving out of the parking lot. One of those men was later identified as Anderson. A struggle allegedly occured. Molitor collapsed minutes later.

Chief Medical Examiner Werner Spitz report said Molitor's death was caused by the skull fracture over his right eye. That injury was exacerbated by the fibrillation of Molitor's heart, which caused him to faint, according to the report, which classified the incident as a homicide.

City police had originally requested that manslaughter warrants be issued in the case.

Construction values down in the Farms

Building activity in the Farms was down almost $1 million in 1985. Building department reports show that while only one less structure was built, the total value of construction was down from $4,021,975 in 1984 to $3,093,960 in 1985.

The number of new residences was down from 18 to 10, the number of miscellaneous structures was up to 97 from 92, and new businesses increased from none to one. The new business building, to house the offices of the Grosse Pointe News, is listed in the first quarter report when its permit was issued and is not yet ready for occupancy. It is valued at $280,000.

The average value of houses being built in the Farms has held fairly steady. In 1984, the average was approximately $150,000; in 1985, the average dropped slightly to $147,000, in a range from $80,000 to $225,000.

Almost as much money was spent on the 97 miscellaneous structures as on new residences in 1985: $1,245,960 to $1,470,000.

door. They covered about half of the city, gathering about 1,100 sig-natures, he said.

"There was a good percentage of people not home. We made a list of them and we'll go back. And this coming weekend, we'll hit the rest of the streets," Bialk said. Members of the Harper Woods

Fire Department, who have a mutual aid pact with the Park. helped collect signatures, according to Bialk.

The petition language calls for an amendment to the charter to provide for separate police and fire departments.

The firemen decided to take this course of action based on a poll they conducted earlier. According to the results, 78 percent of the residents surveyed said they wanted separate police and fire departments.

Bialk said the firefighters are hoping for a special election in April. The city clerk, once he receives the petitions, has 45 days to validate the signatures. An election must be scheduled within 120 days from the date the petitions were submitted, he said.

Weekend thaw

The ice fishing shanties off Lakeshore near Kerby were a couple of inches under water Friday after a warming spell of temperatures in the 40s and 50s caressed the area. It was short-lived, however, and by Monday, a few more of the wooden structures sprouted on the frozen lake.

Older drivers improve defensive skills

By Nancy Parmenter

Rush hour on the expressway: Cars are whizzing by on both sides; the most sincere effort to stick to 55 is thwarted. Traffic zooms along bumper-to-bumper; up ahead red brake lights illuminate and suddenly there are panic stops all over the place.

It's frustrating and sometimes scary. For the older driver, it's

"The older driver feels pushed out of the way," says Robert Trinklein, who has just finished teaching a defensive driving course for people 55 and older, 55 Alive/Mature Driving has nothing to do with the speed limit. It is a course developed by the American Association of Retired Persons and presented by volunteers all over the nation.

Older drivers have the same driving frustrations everyone else does, but their situation is compounded by the normal physical changes that take place with age. Older people should expect changes in vision and hearing and reductions in reaction time. The trouble is, they don't.

'The changes occur over a lifetime. They're gradual and hard to recognize," said Stephen Stiles, a program specialist for AARP.

The AARP course is designed to teach older drivers to compensate for these changes. Students discuss their frustrations and learn new techniques.

"Nobody ever thinks he needs the course," Trinklein said. "Everybody thinks his own driving Older people don't have very many accidents per driver, but reckoned per mile driven, older drivers have as many accidents as the youngest drivers. "The Nation-al Highway Safety Forecast points out that the older driver is adjudged at fault more frequently than middle-aged drivers, and due to fensive driver discounts. "Compethe population age shift currently under way in America, is perhaps one of the fastest-growing highway problem areas," states the AARP

Stiles suggests installing another mirror on the passenger side of the car. "Once you've got the mirrors, use them — but don't rely solely on them," he advised. "Turn your head, look around.'

Some drivers with night-vision loss have started to wear glasses claiming to aid night vision. "Don't wear those so-called night-vision lenses," Stiles said. "They don't do any good — in fact, they make it

Most people are not aware that smoking affects the vision; Stiles says that people with night-vision problems should stop smoking al-

If all else fails, don't drive at night.

One-third of people older than 55 have experienced some hearing loss, according to AARP statistics. But eyes can go a long way toward compensating for ears.

"Be aware of your surroundings," Stiles said. "Use your mirrors and keep looking around." Right now, drivers in 18 states get a sweetener when they take the defensive driving course: They get a discount on their insurance. The bad news is that Michigan isn't one of them; the hopeful news is that Trinklein believes it will be soon.

There are two bills pending in the state legislature that will enable insurance companies doing business in Michigan to offer detition will force them all to offer it," predicted Trinklein. Discounts in effect in other states range from 5 to 20 percent.

But Michigan drivers are taking the course, discount or not. There are currently 21 volunteer instructors teaching at least three classes each per year. Trinklein just finished giving his first class at Barnes School. Fourteen students were enrolled (the optimum size by AARP standards) and some have already signed up for the next one, to be offered in February.

"I expect a big influx once Michigan passes the law," Trinklein said.

One of the best things about the class is airing frustrations and finding out that fellow students share the same gripes. The biggest frustration is being cut off by other drivers, according to Trinklein.

"We have to learn how to interct with traffic." he said have to learn to stay out of the other driver's way. We can't zip around like we used to.

The expressway is bad enough, but "the worst place around here is Mack between Seven and Eight Mile roads," Trinklein said. "I'm surprised there aren't more tickets given for failure to stop (when exiting side streets). A kid on a bike wouldn't have a chance.

The same frustrations are common to all age groups, according to Stiles. A biggie: "It's hard to maintain a space cushion. You can give it a nice try, but you can't do it." As soon as you allow the proper amount of following space, another driver is certain to ease in-

The proper amount of following space is defined these days as a three-second interval. The old formula of car lengths and miles per hour has been abandoned as too difficult.

"It's hard to estimate distances," Stiles said. "I couldn't tell you what 100 feet looks like.' AARP has taken the standard two-second interval and added a second as a safety cushion for older drivers. To establish the proper following distance, pick a marker (a tree or utility pole). Start counting one-thousand, two-thousand when the car in front of you passes the mark. "If you get to the mark too soon, you're going too fast," Trinklein said.

Bruce Kefgen

Kefgen takes principalship in Pellston

South High School's Bruce Kefgen has been appointed as principal at Pellston High School in Pellston, Mich. He leaves Grosse Pointe tomorrow to take the position effective Monday, Jan. 27.

Kefgen, 36, has been with the school system for 812 years. The South alumnus has also worked at Austin School and University Liggett. A traveling teacher this year, with assignments at North and South, Kefgen has been active in speech and drama programs at the high schools.

This is a real fine opportunity for me to be a principal which is what I've always wanted," he said. "I like the size of the school because you get to know all the kids.

Pellston's High School currently has about 380 students in grades eight to 12, according to that school system. Next year, eighth-graders will be moved back to the middle school. The school system, in northern Lower Peninsula's Emmett County near Mackinaw City, has 720 students in its elementary. middle and high school.

Kefgen will have a 212-year contract, which he said will give him an opportunity to strengthen the school's academic system while working to maintain its vocational programs. The system sends about half its graduating seniors on to college, he added.

Volunteers needed for CPR training

Trained volunteers from the Health Education Council will, for the fourth year, provide cardiopulmonary resuscitation training for all 10th-grade students at Grosse Pointe North and South high schools. The program, "Race for Life," was given for North students in the fall and will be given at South March 10-13 and March 17-20 during gym classes.

For persons who would like to participate in teaching this lifesaving skill to local students, a new CPR aide course will be offered Wednesday, Feb. 12, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Classes are given at the Southeastern Michigan Red Cross Building on Gratiot at Eleven Mile. This course is all that is required to teach in the high schools. Further information may be obtained from Donna Bramlage at 882-1776.

K.E.N.N.Y. teaches kids to be stranger-smart

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Darlene Cooper's afternoon kindergarten class at Kerby Elementary School fidgets in the dark as Pat Potter begins the Safety With Strangers slide presentation.

She soon catches their interest, using a variety of props and circumstances to further illustrate the situations depicted in the slides that flash behind her.

A visitor to the classroom becomes an example of how children can't tell good strangers from bad strangers by looks alone. A visit by Principal Leo Warras becomes a chance to show who to run to in case approached near school. And their own examples and misconceptions are the continual opportunity to teach the children about how to be safe with strangers.

For an hour and 20 minutes, Potter uses the slides and taped presentation to show children situations they may, unfortunately, someday find themselves in. She supplements the slides through role-playing and drives home her message through repetition.

The program is meant to make children cautious when faced by a stranger, but it doesn't teach fear, Potter says. The idea is to teach children they have some control in such situations and they needn't always be afraid of strange faces.

Potter is just one of a number of people who have been presenting the Safety With Strangers pro-gram, endorsed by the Adam Walsh Foundation, in local schools. She and others are members of K.E.N.N.Y., Kids Everywhere Now Need You, which organized locally last May and hopes to present the slide presentation about safety to children throughout the public school system.

Marlene Hudson, president of the local chapter of K.E.N.N.Y., said she became interested in the organization after reading about it in the Detroit Free Press. At about the same time, she had talked with other parents who had discussed a number of attempted child abductions in the area.

Hudson decided something needed to be done, and invited the organizer of K.E.N.N.Y. to make a presentation. A chapter organized, originally with seven members, and the group started its activities.

There are now 18 members and the Safety With Strangers presentation has been made at a number of schools in the area, with more planned in February and March, Hudson said.

"Our goal is to have every child see the Safety With Strangers slide show," she said. "We have had very positive responses to the pro-

At one of its meetings, parents sat through the presentation with their children, Hudson said. Afterward, she tried to talk to as many parents as possible and all said they thought it was a very good presentation.

The organization has also talked with about 300 Grosse Pointe public school system teachers. showing them the program and received good reviews as well, Hudson said. Principals were asked to contact the organization to schedule the slide show. Several already have.

"The children love it," Hudson said. "They have a good time doing the role playing.

"It's a good program to reach the children without making them fearful," she added, noting the presentation teaches children to be "stranger-smart."

react in different situations. There are some problems, though.

Slides are dramatizations of approaches that have been used by child abductors. The slides are always being updated to keep current with the new approaches.

In one of the slides, a man from a car tries to lure children to him with a sad story about losing his cat's kittens.

While most of Cooper's class knows not to go with strangers, they are still too naive to see that the story is a ruse. Potter works hard to explain the deception.

There are other misconceptions as well. One child tells the class how he would fight. Another says he would use his giant robot to battle the bad stranger. A third gives tips on what to do if a stranger has a gun, while another says he will run and hide until the stranger

Potter works to dispel the children's misconceptions. She demonstrates that an adult can easily overpower a child, although she passes on a couple of self-defense items. Hiding, she tells the class, does no good, because strangers know where to look for children. It's far better to go somewhere, like home or a friend's or back to school, and tell someone what happened.

And she tries to deal with the fears the children have; of being shot at or drugged or being offered toys and any other number of situations they've seen on televi-

And she's not above tricking them.

At one point, she holds out a Transformer toy to the group, saying she doesn't know how it works and asks someone to help her. When a student approaches, she grabs the child. The class is aghast. That child, she tells them, is now in the hands of a stranger. The children begin to learn.

Hudson is scheduled to be the guest speaker at the general meeting of the Health Education Council Monday, Jan. 27, at 1:45 p.m. in the Exhibition Room of the Central Library.

The program has been endorsed by psychologists and three local public safety departments, which also recommend it to parents, Hudson said.

Presenters of the program are trained in the role playing techniques used in presenting the safety rules to students at a variety of age levels.

Homebound: Bringing school to students

By Mike Andrzejczyk

You could say that Lois Kargenian's duties epitomize teaching; treating each student as an individual, with distinct needs, requirements and limitations.

For the last eight or nine years, Kargenian has been bringing the classroom to students who, because of accident or illness, can't get to one. It's a job that takes Kargenian, the district's homeboundstudent teacher, into the homes and families of students throughout the district.

Grosse Pointe's homebound program was originally designed for students with special needs who may be unable to attend classes for more than a month, according to Special Education Services Director Claire Hunt. The program was later expanded to serve any stu-dent who may, because of illness or injury, be unable to get to school for a month or more.

To qualify, parents need to supply a doctor's certification that the student can't attend classes for at least a month and request homebound services.

From there, Kargenian enters the student's educational day and becomes the liaison between the student and the regular classroom

Enrollment in the program has varied from 12 to one student, but usually has five or six, the caseload set by law, Kargenian says. And there's no way to tell beforehand what grades the students

"You can't predict where the children will come from," Kargenian says. "It varies from the genian says. "It varies from the early grades through high school."

The variety of curriculum requires a different perspective, Kargenian says. "I look at each student's particular needs... and see who needs me most," she adds. She tries to see each child in the program at least three class periods a week.

During her visits, Kargenian brings classroom materials given her by the student's regular teacher. She answers questions, goes over the work and relays future assignments. For long-term students, she takes on grading responsibilities as well.

"Each situation that presents itself is a different case," Kargenian says. The amount of time a student will miss class, how academically strong the student is, the availability of support people in the home and the nature of the disability are some things that need ability are some things that need to be considered when planning a program for a student, she adds.

Age also makes a difference.

High school students are more able to work independently on classwork, while children in early elementary grades need more attention, Kargenian says.

Those differences sometimes present problems. There's no way to bring experiments or classroom dents, Kargenian concedes. "(But)

If there's any way of doing more, we do it," she adds. That may mean an honor stu-dent as a tutor. It may mean using the expertise of a family member to aid the recovering student. She uses all the resources available through the school system to aid the student, Kargenian says. No student has ever failed a class for which he or she was receiving the homebound service, she adds.

One key to the program is flexibility, Kargenian says. Because it's a state law that she has to have another person with her when she's with the homebound student, it's a matter of setting different schedules or finding volunteers to visit the home with her. When she has a full caseload of six students, juggling visits, conferences with teachers, updates and reports with keeping up with students and visits can become a little hectic, she Sometimes her role is supporter as much as educator, Kargenian says. In some cases, she can consider her day successful if she brings some joy to an ailing student.

School system steps up cable TV work

By Mike Andrzejczyk Grosse Pointe public schools' work in cable television took a couple of giant steps forward recent-Last week, the Board of Education approved creation of the halftime position of coordinator for instructional television to help the system monitor, tape and use in its classrooms materials provided on M-Star on Grosse Pointe Cable Channel 21. The district also filled one of two adviser slots for its high school cable television clubs, which will teach students the technical and creative aspects of television production.

Ultimately, the high schools' extracurricular clubs will begin producing programming about the schools for broadcast on Grosse Pointe Cable.

The coordinator for instructional television position will be paid for the rest of the school year through a federal categorical grant, according to school officials. The position will continue as long as funding continues. The coordinator will be responsible for conducting in-service programs for the staff to show them how to use instructional television, particularly M-Star. The coordinator will also act as liaison between the school system, the intermediate school district, and Grosse Pointe Cable.

For the record

In the article on the Grosse Pointe Symphony Women's Association membership meeting on page 5B of the Jan. 16 issue, it was incorrectly stated the Virginia Lionti is a violinist. It should have read violist.

The coordinator is to design a pilot project for use of M-Star at the schools and, using that experience, work M-Star into the classrooms. M-Star has been available locally since last May. In October 1984, the state Education Department awarded $250,000 to a consortium of all the regional educational media centers in the state to fund it to provide quality educational programming to school districts throughout the state.

Wayne County Intermediate School District's professional resource center and department of technology helped get the programming on the air. It can be seen now on Channel 21 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

M-Star has been very successful in school districts in southeastern Michigan, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Marquette and Saginaw areas, according to local school officials.

The ISD has purchased the 64 M-Star programs, each consisting of from three to 60 video tapes. Local systems have one-year recordability rights on programming.

Cooperative purchasing can cut 30 percent to 40 percent off the costs of equipment and materials such as video tape players, moni-tors, teachers' guides and tapes, according to school officials.

The district has the equipment it needs to record and monitor pro-gramming, Superintendent John Whritner said. The problem is there hasn't been anyone available who can devote the necessary time to monitoring and reviewing pro-gramming and putting together a plan to use it in the classroom.

South's cable television club should soon be getting under way with the recent appointment of Julie Corbett from the school's Learning Resource Center as the club's adviser.

South's club has already held its first two meetings and is considering putting together at least one production before the end of the school year. The group has begun working on election of officers and discussion of budget and equipment requests as well.

North is having some trouble finding an adviser, though. The posting for the position went unanswered by the staff, so Assistant Principal Kathleen Herschelmann said she will now look to the community for the expertise and talent to head the club.

Although there isn't an adviser yet, Herschelmann said she has already heard from a number of students interested in taking part in the program.

Access to equipment will be provided by Grosse Pointe Cable, which will train students in its use. A group of students from North last school year took part in an internship program at the cable company.

The club will train students to perform camera, production and technical work with an eye to ultimately using that expertise to develop programming for the school system to air on the educational cable Channel 19.

With formation of the Grosse Pointe public school club each public and non-public school system served by Grosse Pointe Cable will have a student production team. Harper Woods public schools provide "Harper Woods Happenings" and the Association of Non-Public Educational Community, representing the area's private and parochial schools, produces "Something Original."

Nora Ephron comes out swinging

By Nancy Parmenter

Nora Ephron zinged American institutions from husbands to journalists in a lively lecture Jan. 9 for the Bon Secours Celebrity Series. Almost no one was safe from her barbs - and for the most part, the audience loved it.

Ephron, the 44-year-old author of "Heartburn" and screenwriter of "Silkwood," believes that — in spite of all the ranting and striving nothing has changed all that much in American society during the last 15 years. Movements rise and seem to make an impression, but are eventually co-opted by the mainstream.

Newspapers present a particularly inviting target in that respect. "The press is never even a micro-step ahead of American life," Ephron said.

She took aim at the proliferation of "living," "style." "weekend," sections in papers of the 1980s—sections which had all but vanished during the 160s under the influence of the influence o ed during the '60s under the influence of the women's movement. Now they are back in full cry, with the minor change that instead of portraying the Big Man and the Little Woman, they now present the '80s perfect couple: the Big Man and the Big Woman, a pair of unrealistic paragons. "They lie as much as the other couples," Ephron scoffed. She blames newspapers and magazines for perpetuating myths and eating up people's claims that they share the housework and have no career conflicts "just as if they had credibility.

When the living section came back into vogue, the New York Times bannered its new section and then, in what Ephron said was a classic example of co-opting, or "smooshing," revolutionary ideas into the prevailing values, the section ran an article on "Why I love to cook" by Betty Friedan.

"They got her, unwittingly, I think, to bless the old norms," Ephron said. "The genuine change was smooshed in and makes us feel that nothing has changed at all.'

If newspapers would just stick to reporting lifestyles, maybe it wouldn't be so bad. "I think the balancing act done by every woman in this country is fascinating," Ephron said.

But the lifestyle covered by most metropolitan dailies is relentless-ly upscale. "Newspapers aren't there to serve upscale readers they are there to serve the entire community," she said. "Real life is an inner city with huge problems surrounded by little white suburbs hoping those problems will go away. It gets serious when papers have 10 or 15 people in the living section and one person covering

It gets worse: These living sections are a fake perpetrated on the reader. "They not journalism at all. They are advertising masquerading as journalism," Ephron said. "You can't just run page after page of ads — you have to have some copy." What you get is the "cuisinarting" of America.

But newspapers only reflect what's going on, Ephron conceded. What changes have occurred have accrued to the lucky few and it is those few who are featured — the upscale, moneyed careerists. Real women still only earn 47 percent of their male counterparts' wages.

Nothing has changed on the home front, either. Husbands still expect their wives to get up from the table to fetch the butter.

"It was no surprise to me to read in Redbook that there has been almost no change in the breakdown of domestic chores," Ephron said. "There's only one exception - cooking — and we all know that's because cooking is the only interesting job.'

In other words, life is still dogeat-dog, with women ending up on the bottom of the heap most of the time. Nora Ephron, a veteran of two divorces, wants someone everyone - to face up to what a stinker life can be and tell the truth for a change.

"No one tells you how hard it is to maintain a loving and marginally romantic relationship with your husband, with kids crying all night and throwing up on your good

Artist, feminist Burnett to speak at War Memorial

Patricia Hill Burnett, artist, feminist and former Miss Michigan, will discuss "Have Women Artists Been Brushed Aside?" at the War Memorial Tuesday, Jan. 28, at 1 p.m.

Although she was already a wellestablished and successful portrait artist in the '60s, Burnett was advised to sign only her last name to her paintings so that people would think they had been painted by a

This dilemma, common to women artists, prompted her to call Betty Friedan to inquire about the local of NOW (National Organization for Women) chapters in Michigan. Finding there were none, Burnett convened the first chapter of NOW in Michigan and served as its president for two

Within five years she organized 25 NOW international affiliates in 21 countries, and has served NOW in several leadership capacities. She has been a guest of the Russian government, visited China on invitation from their government to study the status of women and has been the World Feminist Commission chair since 1974. Her political activities range from secretary for the Republican State Ways and Means Committee in 1976 to her present status of Republican precinct delegate and member of the Republican State Central Committee in Michigan.

Burnett's talents as a portrait artist have spanned the globe. Indira Gandhi, Valentina Tereshkova, the first Russian woman astronaut, former First Lady Betty Ford, actresses Jean Stapleton and Mario Thomas, as well as her good friend Betty Friedan, are but a few of her well known subjects. On the Michigan homefront, she has done portraits of William Mil-liken, Mrs. Edsel Ford, Hiram Walker, Martha Griffiths, Detroit Councilwoman Maryanne Mahaffey and other dignitaries.

As the first woman to occupy a studio in the Scarab Club, Detroit's formerly all-male artists club, she served for two terms on the board of directors, and still maintains her studio there.

The former Miss Michigan and runner-up to the Miss America contest in Atlantic City in the '40s was invited to appear at the War Memorial for this Council of Spon-sors program by Margot Kessler. Burnett will entertain her audience with highlights from her past experiences and her outlook into the future.

Tickets, at $6 per person and $5 for members, may be purchased at the War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore Road. The center advises that tickets be obtained in advance, as space is limited. The center is open Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., or call 881-7511 for additional information.

Board approves Woods library work

The Woods branch of the Grosse Pointe public library will get a new entrance this year. The Board of Education Jan. 6 allocated an extra $1,100 to cover the $5,100 project cost.

The system originally allocated $4,000 to cover the replacement of the doors, which have been badly damaged over the years by use and weather. After taking bids and consulting with the companies, the board settled for a $5,100 cost from Benz Glass Co. Benz will replace the library doors and install safety glass on both sides and over the doors. The school system will install a windbreak compatible with the building entrance to reduce wind damage.

The windbreak will be installed by school system personnel.

Park firemen fight preventable fires

Park firefighters ended up dousing two fires last week that might have been prevented.

Firemen responded to a kitchen fire on Berkshire at about 1:30 p.m. Monday, Jan. 13. The fire was contained in the kitchen of the two-story brick dwelling. Cause of the blaze was the resident's emptying of hot ashes from an ashtry into a rubbish can in the kitchen, according to the fire department,

Three days later, the department answered a call to a Wayburn residence of a fire in the second floor rear bedroom. Firefighters doused the blaze, containing it to the bedroom. Smoke damage occurred in the second floor and attic, however.

Cause of the blaze was an electrical malfunction. A building inspection should be done, according to the department.

The public safety issue

Grosse Pointe Park last week became the fourth of the Pointe municipalities to consolidate their police and fire departments into a public safety department and it is possible that the Farms, the lone remaining holdout, will join the merger parade if it can work out the necessary arrangements.

Is the public safety department a good idea whose time finally has come in the Pointes?

From the response of the city councils, it appears that the public safety concept is winning increasing support, even though the firemen in the Park are starting a petition campaign to seek a special election to require separate police and fire departments.

In the Park, the city manager, John Crawtord, summed up the advantages of the merger as "increased services to our residents at less cost." More specifically, the major arguments he cited in favor of the public safety department are that it will provide improved police services, including more street patrols, and at the same time make it possible to get fire-trained public safety officers to the scene of a fire in less time than it takes for a fire truck and other apparatus to arrive.

Under the merger plan, cross-training of policemen will begin at the end of the month with the firemen to be trained after July 1. In his letter to the council on the merger proposal, Chief of Police Richard J. Caretti pointed out that the "cornerstone for successful functional consolidation rests on training," adding that the Park intends to "concentrate on rotating every single officer through the best training programs

The Grosse Pointe Park Firefighters Association, in its press release in support of its petition campaign, contends, however, that "When you're dealing with life and death — the Emergency Medical Service or the Fire Department — the good people of Grosse Pointe don't want supposedly cross-trained policemen coming to the rescue," and warned of an increase in liability insurance lawsuits agains the Park "from mistreated citizens," if the consolidation plan is carried out.

The firemen may have a point, but it must be remembered that they are chiefly concerned about retaining their current jobs and current practices. And their opposition to consolidation was addressed by the Citizens Commission on Public Safety before it recommended a department of public safety in its report a year ago. This is, in part, what the commission said on that issue:

"The creation of a public safety department has been traditionally met by opposition from some firefighters and the firefighters' unions. These organizations have been actively involved in opposing public safety in other communities, including Center Line, Kalamazoo and Durham, N.C.

"During our meetings, the firefighters' union brought in out-of-town representatives to reinforce the local union's position. Essentially, the firefighters concentrated on two themes: 'One man can't do two jobs' and 'Approval of public safety will result in a breakdown in law and order and increased fire property losses and

"The commission has considered these arguments and investigated examples cited by the Grosse Pointe Park firefighters and their union representatives. While the commission recognizes that bad programs can produce bad results and that even good programs require careful preparation and training, the commission believes that none of the arguments have merit in a properly implemented public safety department.

The report pointed out that while the Park firefighters had cited Kalamazoo as a prime example of a troubled public safety program, representatives of the firefighters union themselves conceded that the Kalamazoo firefighters are enthusiastic volunteers for the PSO (public service officer) position.

"They perceived financial benefits and career challenges which made the new position more attractive, the report added.

The citizens commission, which recommended approval of the merger by an 11 to 2 vote, did not address the question of whether the public safety proposal should be submitted to a referendum. But in view of the consideration already given to the firefighters' viewpoints by both the commission and the council, there appears to be little reason for a special election to try to override the unanimous decision by Mayor Palmer Heenan and the Park council in approving a public safety department.

Sign the petition, Park residents urged

I would like to offer a little food for thought to the citizens of Grosse Pointe Park. Last fall at a city council meeting, the chairman of the Citizens Commission on Public Safety stated something to the effect that the issue of public safety did not lend itself to a ballot referendum because the citizens had neither the knowledge nor the insight to make a decision on the issue.

The fire fighters and some concerned citizens are currently circulating a petition that would allow the voters of the city to decide for themselves whether they want to combine police, fire and E.M.S. into one department and have one man try to do all three jobs safely and efficiently, or keep the Police Department separate from the Fire and E.M.S. Department and allow for a higher degree of specialization, and a safer, efficient use of city services. We supposedly live in a demoto note that none of the city officials surveyed would sign the These designations are sexist and

The consolidation of the police, fire and E.M.S. services into one department not only directly affects the safety and welfare of the citizens and their families, but fire fighters and police officers

A quiet school election?

What a difference a couple of years make in the public interest aroused by an election in the Grosse Pointe School District.

Two years ago, in 1984, the district was split by the controversial school board order to close Barnes Elementary School that fall because of the declining enrollment. The order led to an unsuccessful attempt to recall three board members as well as an unsuccessful effort to elect a slate opposed to any closing.

Last year there were still some differences over the recall issue and other matters in a campaign for the board that heated up in the last few weeks before the June election.

But so far this year there has been little controversy and even less talk about any specific issues as the board prepares for the March 10 election to renew the school board general fund and library millage for another three years.

Perhaps it is because the board is asking only for renewal of the authorization of 25.35 mills now permitted for general fund operations. That maximum has been permitted for the past three years, although currently the board is levying only 23 mills of that total and will levy the same amount next year. A renewal of 1.30 mills for support of the library, the same in effect this year, also will be on the March 10 bal-

In addition to these renewals requiring voter approval, the school board also is authorized by the county to levy up to 7.65 additional mills for the general fund, plus a debt fund levy of a little more than 1 mill. The proposed levies that require voter approval and those that are already authorized add up to a 32.62 mill levy for the coming year.

It is true that defeat for the school and library millage issues in March would have no immediate effect on this year's taxes or school revenues but after July 1, the start of the new fiscal year, the district would be in trouble because that is when it borrows to finance its operating costs until it receives the fall tax collections. In short, defeat of the millages would mean the district would probably find it impossible to sell its tax anticipation notes.

Given the complexity of the issue, perhaps it is not surprising that not much attention has been paid to the March 10 millage vote, at least up to this point in time. From the viewpoint of the school board, school administration and school supporters, that is not necessarily bad. although voters ought to acquaint themselves with the facts so that they do not feel they are being offered a pig in a poke.

Our domestic needs

With the federal government requiring an $11.7 billion budget cut to comply with the new Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law and with Gov. James J. Blanchard proposing a hold-theline state budget, there apparently will be little new federal or state aid for Michigan units of government during the coming year.

Gerald Miller, former Gov. William Milliken's budget director who now heads a Washington-based group concerned about federal issues as they apply to the state, told the Detroit News the other day there are no "good" choices left to the states on how to deal with lower federal spending. Instead, according to Miller, the states will have three bad choices: States can live with cuts in certain programs, shift revenues from other programs or from contingency funds, or

Gov. Blanchard, on the other hand, did propose a 5.5 percent increase in funds for elementary, secondary and higher education but the specifics on where the extra money would go had not been released at this writing. While this increase would be welcomed by educators, there is no assurance that the Legislature would approve the governor's proposal. And the amount of the governor's increase is still less than the recommendations of the state Board of Education which had submitted alternative requests for increases of 6 percent or 10 percent for elementary and secondary schools.

The concern by administrators and legislators at both the state and federal level about public spending and taxes reflects citizen opposition to higher taxes and increased expenditures. Yet many people in both Washington and Lansing are concerned about the decline in the quality of the state's roads, bridges, public buildings, university buildings and othe segments of the infrastructure. They are equally concerned about declines in funding for health and welfare benefits which could damage the nation's health.

Under the harsh budgeting in Lansing and Washington, however, funding of costly remedial programs obviously is going to have to be postponed. The question is when these needs can be met. If they cannot be appropriately financed during periods of relative prosperity for the great majority of Americans, what will we do when a new recession or depression creates new housing, welfare and health problems? Governments do have a responsibility to meet human needs and yet it is clear that many human needs are not being adequately met these days.

Federal and state cutbacks on funding will create new problems for administrators on the local level who in many cases are the ones who provide the services with the help of state or federal aid. If the current stinginess in Washington and Lansing continues, cities might have to start imposing much heavier taxes to take up the slack. Yet that would be an uneven process because not all cities are in a revenue bind. It would mean, of course, the heaviest burden on those communities least able to finance their own services.

While we sympathize with the taxpayers, some services ought to be financed from federal revenues to a greater degree than they now are. They include health, welfare and education, which surely are as important in the long run as national defense. Yet if the federal government fails to adequately fund these domestic fields of health, welfare and education, it would fail to meet its responsibilities to the people, just as surely as if it failed to maintain an adequate national defense.

Support is an inspiration To the Editor:

On behalf of the staff and the Board of Directors at the War Memorial, I would like to thank the community of Grosse Pointe and those people who contributed to our first Tribute Tree.

The response was gratifying indeed! Tribute lights were donated as memorials and to honor friends and family nearby and far away . even to a beloved pet cat named Rascal. It was truly a heartwarming beginning to what we hope will be a long tradition at the War Memorial.

I would also like to express our appreciation to the Grosse Pointe News, especially to Tom Greenwood for the coverage and the beautiful photographs of the Tribute Tree lighting ceremony. He captured the essence of the Tribute Tree — one of serenity and caring. The community's support is an inspiration to us as we continue to provide the "margin of excellence" you have come to expect from the War Memorial.

Doesn't make sense Dec. 19, 1985). Is it freedom to expropriate one-third of the private farmland and to impose a oneyear suspension of human rights, as the Sandinista National Liberation Front has done? How much democracy will the Soviet bloc demand in exchange for arming and partially subsidizing the Ortega regime? Is there any real difference between Sandinista "selfdetermination" and what's happening in Afghanistan?

I want to give Ms. Sengstock the benefit of the doubt, but I suspect she would applaud the cut-off of U.S. aid to the contras. I would just point out that there is little difference between the Sandinistas and air pirates. Both are thugs who have taken the law into their own hands. Can we deplore the one while giving comfort to the other? It doesn't make sense.

Seat belt law gains acceptance

By Senator John Kelly

The implementation of mandatory seat belt legislation has been a long time coming. When this hotly debated and controversial issue finally passed the Legislature and was signed into law on July 1, 1985, the critics were out in full force. A chorus of "no one will use seat belts" could be heard. But it's nice to know that Michigan's sevenmonth-old safety belt law is proving the critics wrong by showing some positive results.

Public awareness of the law and its benefits have resulted in a reduction in traffic fatalities and serious injuries on Michigan roads and highways.

In the first five months since the "buckle up" law went into effect, fewer automobile occupants have been killed than in the same period in 1984. In a report released by the Michigan State Police, a preliminary total of 1,510 persons were killed in traffic accidents during 1985 compared to 1,556 in 1984. State police officials attribute the decline in deaths to the mandatory use of seat belts.

In addition, a recent survey of, 600 motorists showed a 99.7 percent public awareness of the law. The survey also revealed that 88 percent of all drivers obey the law and 82 percent support the law and favor stricter enforcement. All categories in the survey showed an increase in positive attitude over a similar survey conducted before the law went into effect.

State law enforcement agencies are putting their best foot forward to enforce the safety belt law. Between July and October of 1985, the Michigan State Police cited 6,515 adults and 152 juveniles for failure to buckle up while driving or riding in the front seat of an automobile. State troopers across Michigan report no adverse feedback from the over 6,500 citations and 13,000 warnings they issued.

I am pleased that the newly adopted law is showing some tangible evidence on its effectiveness. The only disheartening statistic I've been able to see is that 78 percent of those who were killed in automobile accidents since the law went into effect were not buckled

It might be too soon to start celebrating, but I am very encouraged with the results of the first six months and the positive reaction the public has taken regarding the use of seat belts. I am confident that with the new law in effect and if people continue to abide by it, the number of serious injuries and deaths will continue to decline.

The people of Michigan are to be commended for making the seat belt law a success. Now that we've seen what the seat belt law can accomplish, perhaps some of the controversy surrounding this issue will subside. After all, it's pretty hard to knock a law that has proven it can save lives and injuries.

I say

Time to go

One view from the Capitol

By Rep. William R. Bryant Jr. I have filed for re-election to the House of Representatives. The issues and process involved in the Michigan Legislature are still very important and stimulating to me and I still feel honored and pleased to be your representative in the Legislature.

As you may know, I took a serious look at running for governor, but, a year ago, decided that Bill Lucas would switch parties and run. The difficulties of having two moderate Republican candidates from Wayne County plus the all-star media status of Lucas led me to conclude 1986 was not the best time. And, I do want to say, I have not endorsed any candidate in the gubernatorial election.

I'm not even certain I could force myself to do the incredibly onerous work of a lengthy statewide campaign. The reason, however, that the governorship appealed to me, the reason I thought about making the race, was that I feel we need to move into a new, more cooperative era of leadership in Michigan and elsewhere, and I felt I might provide that in a more visible way as governor. The opportunities for cooperative leadership are great in the position you have allowed me to hold, also. And, not having tired in the least of the more mundane aspects of being state representative, I am continually thankful for the opportunity to serve in this capacity.

selves to function as seekers of truth, when we can bring ourselves to risk working to find better ways, when we can bring ourselves to commit to policies and processes which are more humane, which honor the individual and the great potential of individuals working ogether in a cooperative spirit.

We are all, each of us, unique and our views of truth tend to differ based on our inherent and experientially caused uniqueness. but there is far more common ground than we have yet found and utilized.

My most recent special project, to which some of you were kind enough to contribute, was to be instrumental in convening a two-day retreat of state policymakers in public education, legislators, state. board and state superintendent as well as key education staff in state government. Such a gathering had never been held in any state. It was a very fine event.

Your trust and confidence in me has been such that I have felt able to pursue projects of particular interest to me, and that fact has added, immeasurably, to my enjoyment of my work.

One particular major task lies ahead. That task is to write the kind of manual which does not now exist, an exploration of what the job of legislator is and should be all

I am presently working to try to get the remainder of the 198 come tax increase eliminated at There is so much we can all do the earliest possible date. My prowhen we can manage to allow our- posed solution has been accepted by three of the four legislative leaders and the governor. It would roll the tax back to its pre-increase level of 4.6 percent no later than April 1 and, if optimistic revenue estimates are correct, could result in the rate being 4.6 percent for the entire year on 1986 tax returns. I am hopeful this proposal will succeed.

Further, Republicans are only three votes from a majority in the House, and my successor as Republican leader, Rep. Mike Busch, is not running for the House again. I, therefore, will be working for a Republican House majority and, if attained, will seriously consider running for speaker of the Michigan House of Representatives.

I look forward to this election year. It will be a very interesting

Police catch two

A resident's watchfulness helped Park police arrest two teens Sunday evening, Jan. 19, who were at-tempting to break into a garage on Lakepointe.

The resident called police at about 6:45 p.m. to report seeing two youths slip under the partially open door of the garage. Police responded, and arrested the two aged 18 and 19.

They are being held pending issuance of warrants, police said. One of the pair is already wanted on a breaking-and-entering war-

Bike trip

How do I say goodbye to 52,000 people? Let me back up. Perhaps the question should be: Why do I have to say goodbye to the entire population of Grosse Pointe?

Because, even as you read this, I'll be in the middle of my first week as a columnist for the Detroit News. I'll be carrying on the work started by another Grosse Pointer, Charley Manos, who died this past

It'll be a people-places-andthings-what's-going-on-in-the-De- By Tom troit-metro-area kind of column. Of course, that covers Grosse Pointe as well, but you won't be mine exclusively anymore.

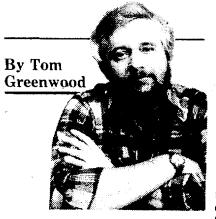

I'll tell you the truth. I'm really going to miss you guys. The way I see, there are 51,998 terrific people in Grosse Pointe and two old grouches. I'm not going to mention any names, but you know who you

In the past, whenever I said I worked for the Grosse Pointe News, people would ask what Grosse Pointers are really like. What they meant was — are they really snobs like we've heard all

I'd always tell them the truth as I saw it. No, Grosse Pointers are not snobs. They're people just like you and me, or at least the way we'd like to be.

I believe this town is still cruising on a reputation it earned during the '20s and '30s when mansions were the rule, and not the exception, in Grosse Pointe.

There's wealth in the Pointes, but most of it isn't inherited. People here got what they have the hard way — they earned it. How do you get a reputation as a snob? All you have to do is get yourself a good education, work hard at one or two jobs, keep your home up, want the best for your family, support charities, dress nicely, swim, sail, play golf or tennis and have a 48236 or 48230 zip code. So much for snobbery.

I'm going to miss a lot of people out here. Cops, firemen and council members who always had time for a cup of coffee, a few jokes and inside information. I'll miss the merchants, too.

Business people who have something to offer that the shopping malls can't match: the personal touch. How they can smile, remember your name and your taste in clothes, food, cars or whatever, amazes me.

I'm going to miss the charity people. Lordy, there are a lot of concerned persons out here.

Everyone seems to be putting together a cookbook, selling Christ-mas wreaths, filling food baskets, staging fashion shows, holding charity dinners, or selling tickets to help someone, somewhere get fed, clothed, cured or sent to Disneyland.

I'm really going to miss the people who call me on the phone, stop me on the street, and wave to me from their cars. One nice thing about working for a community paper is that the community lets you know what it thinks. Good or bad, they let you know. You've made my day when one of my stories graces your refrigerator door. No higher compliment is available.

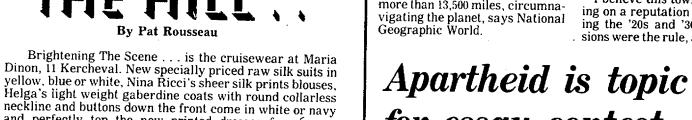

Other things I'm going to miss: in the autumn, crunching through the fallen leaves nearly knee deep outside South's football field; sitting beneath the apple trees in full bloom alongside the tennis courts at North; St. Paul Church in the early morning light; the Christmas parade; the Farms Boat Club Regatta; Lake St. Clair anytime; driving along Lakeshore Road; sitting on a bench, cone in hand, in front of the Over the Rainbow ice cream parlor; Veterans Memorial Parkway; walking down Cloverly Road — the prettiest street in the Pointes; and the horses at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club.

I'm really going to miss the staff here at the paper. They're good people and hard workers. They care about the community and about what they write, I wish I could take them with me.

But I can't. All I can do is say goodbye to them and to you.

I'm sure going to miss you snobs.

Questions are designed to reflect the similarities and differences between the dream of Martin Luther King Jr., and the struggle for freedom of Black South Africa and Bishop Tutu. The Center is providing a resource to assist contestants in their writing, and students are encouraged to utilize articles currently appearing in the newspapers and news magazines.

The contest is open to students in the Grosse Pointe Public Schools and local parochial and independent schools

2. The Republic of South Africa is governed under a system called apartheid. What is apartheid, and what is Bishop Tutu doing to try to

The questions for grades 6-8 are: 1. In the tradition of civil rights leasers such as Martin Luther King Jr., the most famous of our time is Bishop Desmond Mpilo Tutu. The Rev. King worked to change laws and traditions in the United States which denied black citizens their civil rights.

What are the differences or similarities between the issues faced by Bishop Tutu in The Republic of South Africa as compared to those faced by Martin Luther King in the United States?

2. The Republic of South Africa is governed under a system called apartheid. What is apartheid? What effect does it have on the education, employment, housing, living conditions, voting rights, economics, and social life of the black and white people of South Africa?

Park commission takes activist role

By Pat Paholsky

A beautification commission would seem to be an unlikely place to find activists. The Park Beautification Commission, however, counts some committed and outspoken members who have focused on preserving all the elms in their community against Dutch elm disease.

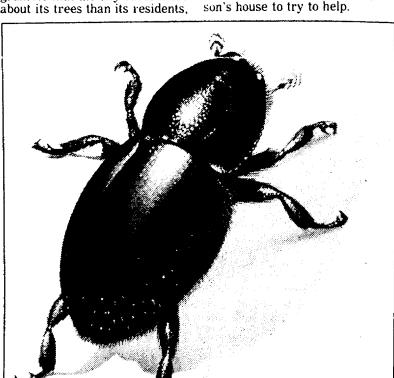

On the face of it, waging a war against a beetle that is responsible for decimating whole tree popula-tions, especially in a community that has been designated as Tree City U.S.A., would seem to be a logical and natural effort.

But it's expensive and that's what makes it a political issue. Add to that some citizens who grumble that the city cares more that the money should go toward increased police protection, and the result is a barrier that some commission members weary of trying to surmount.

Not so for Park Beautification Commission members who have spent numerous hours surveying the city's elms, both public and private, attended conferences and workshops, read stacks of material to inform themselves and who attend council meetings to plead their case.

Their time isn't all they donate either. They make phone calls from their homes and use their cars to conduct commission business. If a resident calls with concerns about his elm tree, a commission member will go to the per-

Last year the commission was responsible for two pieces of legislation in the Park aimed at managing Dutch elm disease - the cessation of tree-spraying, deemed by some experts to be the least cost-effective method of controlling the disease, and an ordinance banning elmwood to be sold as firewood from being brought into the city The commission also convinced the council to approve two

Through the latest efforts of some commissioners, an expert in Dutch elm disease research and the practical application of that research visit Grosse Pointe Park for two days last week. Dr. Gerald Lanier, a professor of Forestry and Shade Tree Entomology at the State University of New York, spent a full day Jan. 13 meeting with officials, residents, employees who work on trees and representatives from the other plantings of new trees last year -

Pointes. In his presentation at the city council meeting, a repeat of one given earlier in the day, Lanier said elms can live 100 years plus, "maybe 200 years." Elms are good street trees and have a longer life because they tolerate many things other trees do not, he said.

He spoke of his research in pheromone-baited sticky traps in which up to 25,000 beetles can be caught for between 50 cents and $5 per trap and the situations in which it's effective.

Lanier is described by Commissioner Carol Ward as being in the forefront of cacodylic acid treatment in which an elm tree that is hopelessly diseased is injected with the herbicide. The treated tree attracts elm bark beetles which colonize it to breed, but the brood does not develop. The trap tree can be left standing with no danger to surrounding trees.

Diseased trees should be removed immediately, but due to the expense and work scheduling, both home owners and city crews delay removal, risking the spread of the disease to healthy trees.

At the conclusion of the presentation, Mayor Palmer Heenan said Lanier will recommend a program for the Park.

Lanier toured Grosse Pointe Park and its neighbors, Grosse Pointe City and Detroit, with Ward, who was his host for the visit, and Jerry Abbs and Al Mazur, also beautification commissioners. Resident Lee Carrick offered the medical school facilities at Wayne State University for testing and he also offered to computerize data to help the commission.

"I consider Dr. Lanier valuable because he has applied his research practically in cities," Ward said. "So many people can tell you what to do but they haven't done

Play about teen suicide to be presented Tuesday

In the past few years, the incidence of teenage suicide has increased. What occurs in the physical and emotional world of young people that prompts them to attempt to take their own life? What can a parent do to help an adolescent?

These questions are effectively addressed by a group of high school students in the play, "Today I Tried." Produced by Simone Press, the play is associated with the Attic Theater and the Open Door Theater of Ann Arbor.

Escaped mental patient injures officer

It took two police officers, aided by two residents, to subdue an escaped, mental patient in the Shores Jan. 17. One of the officers was hurt in the process.

"It takes a lot of people. (Sometimes mental patients) have an unnatural strength," said Shores Sgt. Daniel Healy. "We're just lucky nobody else got hurt." Healy said Monday that the injured officer was still out on leave.

The mental patient, a Detroit man, struck a Shores woman with his elbow as she was walking with her husband on Lake Shore at 4:30 p.m. Jan. 17. The man kept walking until he saw a Shores scout car. Then he ran away down Lochmoor with the car in pursuit, according to the police report.

The officers cornered him in a backyard on Lochmoor. The man threatened them with a two-foot stick, and as the officers closed in on him, he "went berserk punching and kicking," the report stated.

Handcuffed, the man continued to resist. As the officers struggled to get him into the back of the scout car, he kicked one of them in the groin. The same officer was later treated for facial injuries as well.

Police learned that the man had escaped from the crisis center at Detroit Receiving Hospital, which reported that he is considered dangerous. He had previously threatened to kill his mother and sister, according to the report.

Seven residents sail on a legend

By Tom Greenwood

Dreams do come true. Just ask the seven Grosse Pointers who spent part of last September floating on a sea cloud.

Correction: Make that the Sea Cloud. At 316 feet long and with 29 sails covering 29,000 square feet, the Sea Cloud is the largest privately owned yacht in the world. And it's also one of the most lavishly decorated.

"The yacht was built in 1931 by E.F. Hutton for his bride, Marjorie Merriweather Post," said Barbara Willett, of the Shores. "It boasts oak paneling, antique furniture and original oil paintings throughout the ship. The Sea Cloud is truly a yacht that captures your heart.

Willett, with her husband G. Howard, plus fellow Pointers Ann and Dr. John Lesesne, Richard and Janet Fruehauf and Diane Marston, were among 55 passengers aboard the Sea Cloud as it toured Greece and Turkey.

The trip was sponsored by the Association of Junior Leagues. Barb Willett, a Junior League member for 10 years, former president of the Detroit chapter and a member of the national board for two years, served as liaison between the guests and the ship's tour director.

Among the other passengers were alumni of Georgia Tech and the University of Tennessee.

Sailing on the Sea Cloud meant different things to different people. For John Lesesne, a veteran sailor for 50 years, it was a dream come "I've wanted to sail on this magnificent ship for almost 40 years," he said. "The experience of seeing the square sails set in a stiff wind on the quarter was thrilling beyond description.'

For Diane Marston, the Sea Cloud was part of a "homecoming." The ship stopped at Kusadasi, on the coast of Turkey, and allowed passengers to visit the ancient Roman ruins at Ephesus. Marston and her husband Michael lived in Turkey 20 years ago when he was stationed there with the Air

For Janet Fruehauf, the Sea Cloud added luster to the wonders of ancient Greece. "The 60 crew members provided excellent food and service," she said. "The ship itself created an elegant and warm ambiance. Everywhere our group went, the Greek people were warm

and friendly toward us."

'We boarded the ship in Athens and we were simply stunned by its size," Willett said. "It's longer than a football field. Its main mast is nearly 200 feet above deck. Howard and I tried to climb up for a good photo, but it was quite scary. It gets smaller the higher up you go and the wood was slick with oil and salt spray. And of course, the ship is dipping up and down and rolling back and forth. We didn't go up too far."

According to Willett, the typical day at sea began at 8 a.m. with many passengers scrambling on deck to see the crew unfurl the sails by hand.

"They had our complete admiration and attention," she said. 'They scrambled around up there like monkeys. And they were way, way up there, believe me.'

The passengers would amuse themselves by reading, taking photos or doing exercises on deck. The Sea Cloud would usually dock at 11 a.m. and the passengers would disembark for a day of touring.

"But we were always back by dinner time," said Willett. "Mostly because of the wonderful amount of the wonderful and the wonderful always back by the wonderful always because of the wonderful always a biance of the Sea Cloud, but also because of the excellent meals. The suppers were elegant and of small portions, something we came to appreciate.

"Lunches however, were very lavish affairs. All buffet. The midday meal was the largest, just as in Europe. The tours gave us a chance to walk it off."

Because there were only 55 passengers, each guest was able to dine several times with the captain, Ed Cassidy, a 30-year man in the U.S. Coast Guard and former captain of the Coast Guard tall ship, the Eagle.

"He serves six months, usually during the winter, on board with his wife," Willett said. "He spends his summers vacationing at Cape Cod. What an ideal existence.

Nights for the guests were spent in the lounge, or on deck, watching the sails billowing against the starry skies.

A special treat occurred whenever the Sea Cloud would come into port. "Everything came to a standstill," Willett said. "We'd see people lined up on other ships with their binoculars. Horns tooted greetings and often other ships would send their tenders out to circle the Sea Cloud, snapping photos all the while.'

The saddest time for the guests, naturally enough, came when it was time to disembark and return to reality.

'It was hard to do," Willett said. 'We signed up for more information on the Sea Cloud and its destinations. It also sails in the Caribbean. The trip was admittedly very expensive, but who knows, we might be able to do it again some day. I wish everyone could experience it at least once in their

50% OF ALL LEARNING HAPPENS BY AGE FOUR!

At The Grosse Pointe Academy, our students begin their formal learning at a very early age. Our preschool, called the Early School, is a Montessori educational facility. Over 40 years ago, Dr. Maria Montessori wrote, "The most important period of life is not the age of university studies, but the first one, the period from birth to the age of six. For that is the time when man's intelligence itself, his greatest implement, is being formed. But not only his intelligence; the full totality of his psychic powers...At no other age has the child greater need of an intelligent help, and any obstacle that impedes his creative work will lessen the chance he has of achieving perfection."

We believe in the Montessori theory and methods. That is why, in 1962, The Grosse Pointe Academy became Michigan's first Montessori school, enrolling children between ages 2½ and 5 years of age.

Recent studies on young children's learning have done nothing but confirm the Montessori methods. Distinguished Professor Benjamin C. Bloom of the University of Chicago, wrote in the 70's, "From conception to age 4, the individual develops 50% of his mature intelligence; from ages 4 to 8 he develops another 30%...This would suggest the very rapid growth of intelligence in the early years and the possible great influence of the early environment on this development."

Consider giving your child the best possible start. Look into the Montessori education at the Grosse Pointe Academy Early School. You are only a child once. Park commission takes activist role

By Pat Paholsky

A beautification commission would seem to be an unlikely place to find activists. The Park Beautification Commission, however, counts some committed and outspoken members who have focused on preserving all the elms in their community against Dutch elm disease.

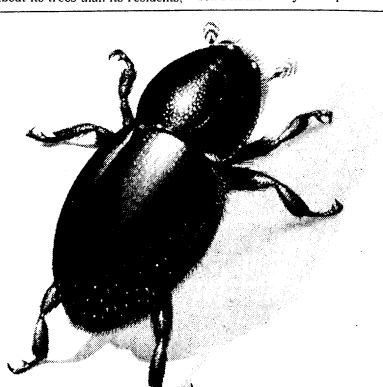

On the face of it, waging a war against a beetle that is responsible for decimating whole tree populations, especially in a community that has been designated as Tree City U.S.A., would seem to be a logical and natural effort.

But it's expensive and that's what makes it a political issue. Add to that some citizens who grumble that the city cares more about its trees than its residents, that the money should go toward increased police protection, and the result is a barrier that some commission members weary of trying to surmount.

Not so for Park Beautification Commission members who have spent numerous hours surveying the city's elms, both public and private, attended conferences and workshops, read stacks of material to inform themselves and who attend council meetings to plead their case.

Their time isn't all they donate either. They make phone calls from their homes and use their cars to conduct commission business. If a resident calls with concerns about his elm tree, a commission member will go to the person's house to try to help.

The European elm bark beetle, above, is smaller than the native of the species. Dr. Gerald Lanier of Forestry and Shade Tree Entomology at the State University of New York said it is about the size of a half-grain of rice. He calls it the "main bad guy" in the area.

Last year the commission was responsible for two pieces of legislation in the Park aimed at managing Dutch elm disease - the cessation of tree-spraying, deemed by some experts to be the least cost-effective method of controlling the disease, and an ordinance banning elmwood to be sold as firewood from being brought into the city. The commission also convinced the council to approve two plantings of new trees last year one in the spring and one in the fall.

Through the latest efforts of some commissioners, an expert in Dutch elm disease research and the practical application of that research visit Grosse Pointe Park for two days last week. Dr. Gerald Lanier, a professor of Forestry and Shade Tree Entomology at the State University of New York, spent a full day Jan. 13 meeting with officials, residents, employees who work on trees and representatives from the other Pointes.

In his presentation at the city council meeting, a repeat of one given earlier in the day, Lanier said elms can live 100 years plus, "maybe 200 years." Elms are good street trees and have a longer life because they tolerate many things other trees do not, he said.

He spoke of his research in pheromone-baited sticky traps in which up to 25,000 beetles can be caught for between 50 cents and $5 per trap and the situations in which it's effective.

Lanier is described by Commissioner Carol Ward as being in the forefront of cacodylic acid treatment in which an elm tree that is hopelessly diseased is injected with the herbicide. The treated tree attracts elm bark beetles which colonize it to breed, but the brood does not develop. The trap tree can be left standing with no danger to surrounding trees.

Diseased trees should be removed immediately, but due to the expense and work scheduling, both home owners and city crews delay removal, risking the spread of the disease to healthy trees.

At the conclusion of the presentation, Mayor Palmer Heenan said Lanier will recommend a program for the Park.

Lanier toured Grosse Pointe Park and its neighbors, Grosse Pointe City and Detroit, with Ward, who was his host for the visit, and Jerry Abbs and Al Mazur, also beautification commissioners. Resident Lee Carrick offered the medical school facilities at Wayne State University for testing and he also offered to computerize data to help the commission.

"I consider Dr. Lanier valuable because he has applied his research practically in cities," Ward said. "So many people can tell you what to do but they haven't done

Play about teen suicide to be presented Tuesday

In the past few years, the incidence of teenage suicide has increased. What occurs in the physical and emotional world of young people that prompts them to attempt to take their own life? What can a parent do to help an adolescent?

These questions are effectively addressed by a group of high school students in the play, "Today I Tried." Produced by Simone Press, the play is associated with the Attic Theater and the Open Door Theater of Ann Arbor.

The Children's Committee of the Provisional Class of the Junior League of Detroit, Inc. has scheduled the play to be presented Tuesday, Jan. 28, 7:30 p.m., at Grosse Pointe North High School auditor-

Escaped mental patient injures officer

It took two police officers, aided by two residents, to subdue an escaped mental patient in the Shores Jan. 17. One of the officers was hurt in the process.

'It takes a lot of people. (Sometimes mental patients) have an unnatural strength," said Shores Sgt. Daniel Healy. "We're just lucky nobody else got hurt." Healy said Monday that the injured officer was still out on leave.

The mental patient, a Detroit man, struck a Shores woman with his elbow as she was walking with her husband on Lake Shore at 4:30 p.m. Jan. 17. The man kept walking until he saw a Shores scout car. Then he ran away down Lochmoor with the car in pursuit, according to the police report.

The officers cornered him in a backyard on Lochmoor. The man threatened theres with a two-foot stick, and as the officers closed in on him, he "went berserk punching and kicking," the report

Handcuffed, the man continued to resist. As the officers struggled to get him into the back of the scout car, he kicked one of them in the groin. The same officer was later treated for facial injuries as

Police learned that the man had escaped from the crisis center at Detroit Receiving Hospital, which reported that he is considered dangerous. He had previously threatened to kill his mother and sister, according to the report.

Seven residents sail on a legend

Dreams do come true. Just ask the seven Grosse Pointers who spent part of last September floating on a sea cloud.

Correction: Make that the Sea Cloud. At 316 feet long and with 29 sails covering 29,000 square feet, the Sea Cloud is the largest privately owned yacht in the world. And it's also one of the most lavishly decorated.

The yacht was built in 1931 by E.F. Hutton for his bride, Marjorie Merriweather Post," said Barbara Willett, of the Shores. "It boasts oak paneling, antique furniture and original oil paintings throughout the ship. The Sea Cloud is truly a yacht that captures your

Willett, with her husband G. Howard, plus fellow Pointers Ann and Dr. John Lesesne, Richard and Janet Fruehauf and Diane Marston, were among 55 passengers aboard the Sea Cloud as it

toured Greece and Turkey.

The trip was sponsored by the Association of Junior Leagues. Barb Willett, a Junior League member for 10 years, former president of the Detroit chapter and a member of the national board for two years, served as liaison between the guests and the ship's tour director.

Among the other passengers were alumni of Georgia Tech and the University of Tennessee.

Sailing on the Sea Cloud meant different things to different people. For John Lesesne, a veteran sailor for 50 years, it was a dream come true. "I've wanted to sail on this magnificent ship for almost 40 years," he said. "The experience of seeing the square sails set in a stiff wind on the quarter was thrilling beyond description.

For Diane Marston, the Sea Cloud was part of a "homecom-ing." The ship stopped at Kusadasi, on the coast of Turkey, and allowed passengers to visit the ancient Roman ruins at Ephesus. Marston and her husband Michael lived in Turkey 20 years ago when he was stationed there with the Air

For Janet Fruehauf, the Sea Cloud added luster to the wonders of ancient Greece. "The 60 crew members provided excellent food and service," she said. "The ship itself created an elegant and warm ambiance. Everywhere our group went, the Greek people were warm

and friendly toward us."

"We boarded the ship in Athens and we were simply stunned by its size," Willett said. "It's longer than a football field. Its main mast is nearly 200 feet above deck. Howard and I tried to climb up for a good photo, but it was quite scary. It gets smaller the higher up you go and the wood was slick with oil and salt spray. And of course, the ship is dipping up and down and rolling back and forth. We didn't go up too far."

According to Willett, the typical day at sea began at 8 a.m. with many passengers scrambling on deck to see the crew unfurl the sails by hand.

"They had our complete admiration and attention," she said.
"They scrambled around up there like monkeys. And they were way, way up there, believe me."

The passengers would amuse themselves by reading, taking photos or doing exercises on deck. The Sea Cloud would usually dock at 11 a.m. and the passengers would disembark for a day of touring.

"But we were always back by dinner time," said Willett. "Mostly because of the wonderful ambiance of the Sea Cloud, but also because of the excellent meals. The suppers were elegant and of small portions, something we came to appreciate.

"Lunches however, were very lavish affairs. All buffet. The midday meal was the largest, just as in Europe. The tours gave us a chance to walk it off."

Because there were only 55 passengers, each guest was able to dine several times with the captain, Ed Cassidy, a 30-year man in the U.S. Coast Guard and former captain of the Coast Guard tall ship, the Eagle.

"He serves six months, usually during the winter, on board with his wife," Willett said. "He spends his summers vacationing at Cape Cod. What an ideal existence.'

Nights for the guests were spent in the lounge, or on deck, watching the sails billowing against the starry skies.

A special treat occurred whenever the Sea Cloud would come into port. "Everything came to a standstill," Willett said. "We'd see people lined up on other ships with their binoculars. Horns tooted greetings and often other ships would send their tenders out to circle the Sea Cloud, snapping photos all the while.

The saddest time for the guests, naturally enough, came when it was time to disembark and return to reality.

'It was hard to do," Willett said. "We signed up for more informa-tion on the Sea Cloud and its des-tinations. It also sails in the Caribbean. The trip was admittedly very expensive, but who knows, we might be able to do it again some day. I wish everyone could experience it at least once in their

50% OF ALL LEARNING HAPPENS BY AGE FOUR!

At The Grosse Pointe Academy, our students begin their formal learning at a very early age. Our preschool, called the Early School, is a Montessori educational facility. Over 40 years ago, Dr. Maria Montessori wrote, "The most important period of life is not the age of university studies, but the first one, the period from birth to the age of six. For that is the time when man's intelligence itself, his greatest implement, is being formed. But not only his intelligence; the full totality of his psychic powers...At no other age has the child greater need of an intelligent help, and any obstacle that impedes his creative work will lessen the chance he has of achieving perfection."

We believe in the Montessori theory and methods. That is why, in 1962, The Grosse Pointe Academy became Michigan's first Montessori school, enrolling children between ages 2½ and 5 years of age.

Recent studies on young children's learning have done nothing but confirm the Montessori methods. Distinguished Professor Benjamin C. Bloom of the University of Chicago, wrote in the 70's, "From conception to age 4, the individual develops 50% of his mature intelligence; from ages 4 to 8 he develops another 30%...This would suggest the very rapid growth of intelligence in the early years and the possible great influence of the early environment on this development."

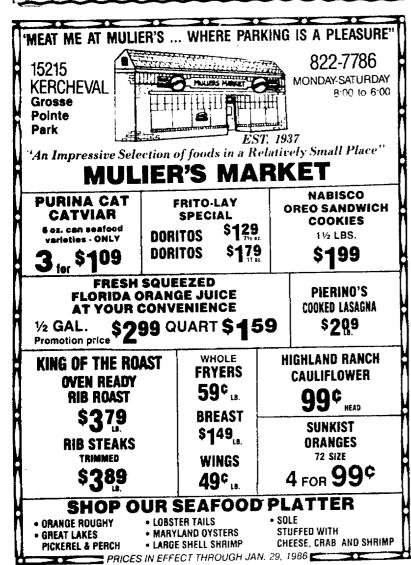

Consider giving your child the best possible start. Look into the Montessori education at the Grosse Pointe Academy Early School. You are only a child once. If you believe the finest minds, you understand there are sensitive periods in each person's life when learning is easier than at any other time in one's life.

Park plans to trim 1,200 trees

About one-third of the trees in the Park are scheduled to be trimmed before April. The council approved spending $60,003 to do the job after receiving what officials termed a favorable bid.

"We should take advantage of this opportunity and trim as many trees as possible," City Manager John Crawford said. "I believe this price will never be seen again.'

The city, which let for bids in December, received three other responses, ranging from nearly $74,000 to $83,000. The job was awarded to the low bidder, Chas. F. Irish Co., Inc., to trim 1,290

The ordinance requires the city to trim all trees once every five years, Assessor James Ellison told the council. 'It also reduces the chance of storm damage.

The expenditure will exhaust the tree budget, Crawford said. It also means the city hall will have to forego the spring tree-planting for which $23,000 had been earmarked. Instead the money will be added to existing funds in the tree budget to enable the city to go ahead with the tree trimming.

The council, unanimously approved the expenditure.

Former congressman to be honored

Former 14th District Congressman Harold M. Ryan will be honored for his many years of public service at a testimonial dance Thursday, Feb. 6, at 6 p.m. at the German-American Club on E. Outer Drive in Detroit.

The honorary chairmen of the dinner are Speaker of the House of Representatives Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill, Governor James J. Blanchard and Chief Justice G. Mennen

After graduating from the University of Detroit Law School in 1935, Ryan practiced law until he was appointed in 1948 as assistant Wayne County prosecuting attorney. In 1949, he was elected to the Michigan State Senate where he served until 1961. He was then elected to the U.S. House of Representatives to fill the unexpired term caused by the death of 14th District Congressman Louis C.

While in the U.S. House of Representatives, he served on the Banking and Currency Committee and the Public Works Committee. It was due to his legislative efforts that the new Patrick McNamara Federal Building was constructed in downtown Detroit. In 1964, he lost his congressional seat to Lucien N. Nedzi, a fellow congressman. From 1965 to 1978, he again engaged in private law practice.

In 1978, Ryan was elected Wavne County Circuit Court judge where he served until he retired in 1985.

Anyone interested in attending the testimonial should call 961-0652 or 557-1155.

Republican group seeks ethnic Americans

By Pat Paholsky

The Republican Party, once the bastion of the white Anglo-Saxon Protestant and identified as the party of the wealthy, is now the party of choice for an increasing number of ethnic Americans. And its leaders want to encourage the exodus of traditionally Democratic voters to the Republican Party.

That's the goal of the National Republican Heritage Groups Coun-cil which is comprised of 39 nationality federations, from Albanian to Vietnamese, and 27 state councils. Chairman of the national council is Frank Stella, Detroit businessman and civic leader, who appointed three Michigan men to the board of directors. One is Park Councilman Mark Valente III, who is chairman of the Public Relations Committee.

Valente, who spent seven months, from July 1984 to February 1985, woring in the White House for the deputy director public liaison for Ethnic Affairs, is well versed in statistics relating to ethnic voting patterns.

"During the 1984 election, there were 56 different ethnic groups and we carried more than 50 percent of every one in the election," he said. Ethnics have now mainstreamed themselves into the system.

While the Heritage Groups Council has been around since 1968, Valente said it was only every four years that an effort was made to reach the various ethnic groups.

"The real resurgence was in 1980 when Ronald Reagan first won and he drew incredible numbers of ethnics, anywhere from 45 to 55 percent, depending on the group

The reason, Valente said, is that many of these groups are in agreement with Reagan's foreign policy and his thoughts on family.

"Most of them have strong fami-ly values," he said. "On the foreign side, they are vehemently anti-Communist. Many of them know what Communism is because they escaped from it.'

For years, he said, ethnic groups were locked into the Democratic party, "where they were taken for granted. You have this large mass of people and then someone like Ronald Reagan comes along."

Valente said his committee establishes contact with leaders in the various ethnic groups throughout the country and oversees the press releases that go out, adding that they deal primarily with the ethnic press.

None of the board members or officials of the council are paid they are all volunteers.

"Whatever funds we raise go to pay the operating expenses of our office in Washington and go to candidates. Whenever we go anywhere, we pick up our own hotel, meals and transportation," Valente said.

The group is now concentrating on establishing more state councils in the West and is planning to go to Las Vegas in May, he said.

Shopping center pickpocket grabs wallet

A brazen thief relieved a Park woman of her wallet as she stood in a supermarket checkout line Jan. 11. She told Farms police that she could feel a tugging at her purse as she waited in line at Kroger's on Mack Avenue, but that she didn't notice the wallet missing until she tried to pay for her groceries.

Apparently the thief unzipped an outer compartment of the woman's purse and lifted out the wallet, according to Farms police reports. The wallet contained $80 and personal papers.

Two hours after the theft, the woman discovered her wallet, thrown on the ground between two garbage cans at the rear of the store. The money was missing.

It's A Fact Of Life"... Why Not Be Prepared?

As a nurse I've come to understand ... death is a fact of life. I've seen many families burdened by the loss of a loved one. It made me stop and think, "There must be a better way." Then I got this practical prochure, "A Fact of Life." I learned how making funeral plans in advance can save my loved ones from making decisions at a difficult time and protect against costly inflation.

Junior League announces Rosecroft is '86 Showhouse

By Elsa Frohman

The Junior League of Detroit has selected one of Grosse Pointe's most distinctive homes as its 1986 Designer Showhouse. Announced at a gala preview party held in Jacobson's Store for the Home on Jan. 11, Rosecroft, at 266 Lakeland, will be the site of the Junior League's bi-annual fundraiser.

The showhouse is a regular and much anticipated event in the Pointes. However, this year's house will be unique. In previous years, the group has always selected a house that was on the market for sale. The designers came in and redecorated for the three-week run of the show, then the home was be decorated by the most prominent designers in southeastern Michigan. Built in 1912 by Albert Kahn, the house presents an outstanding framework for the work of the interior designers.

As part of the festivities at the preview party, guests were asked to guess how many windows, door and stairs are inside the impressive facade of the house. Rosecroft sports 126 windows, 74 doors and 112 stairs.

The house will be open from May 1 through 23. Bids are currently being accepted from the designers who will make the house a memorable event.

Co-chairmen for the 1986 Designer Showhouse will be Barbara Weiss, Patricia Kolojeski, Cynthia Ottaway and Stephanie Hampton. Kolojeske has a special attachment for this year's house because as a bride, her first home was in

Friars slated at First English Lutheran

On Friday, Jan. 31, at 7:30 p.m., the University of Michigan Friars will be heard in concert at the First English Lutheran Church, 800 Vernier Rd., in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The Friars were organized in 1955 as an octet from within the University of Michigan's Men's Glee Club. In the 30 years since, the Friars have enjoyed a reputation for singing excellence and the group performs regularly at banquets, parties and school functions in the Ann Arbor area and throughout Michigan.

Highlights of the past several years have included special appearances at the White House, before Michigan Stadium football crowds, on regional television and radio and at the popular Bandorama program of the U of M bands. The Friars also join the U of M Glee Club in concert throughout the United States and performed during the Glee Club's 1985 tour of Europe.

Friars slated at First English Lutheran

On Friday, Jan. 31, at 7:30 p.m., the University of Michigan Friars will be heard in concert at the First English Lutheran Church, 800 Vernier Rd., in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The Friars were organized in 1955 as an octet from within the University of Michigan's Men's Glee Club. In the 30 years since, the Friars have enjoyed a reputation for singing excellence and the group performs regularly at banquets, parties and school functions in the Ann Arbor area and throughout Michigan. Highlights of the past several years have included special appearances at the White House, before Michigan Stadium football crowds, on regional television and radio and at the popular Bandorama program of the U of M bands. The Friars also join the U of M Glee Club in concert throughout the United States and performed during the Glee Club's 1985 tour of Europe.

The octet takes its name from that of a prestigious society of ship of that turn-of-the-century drinking society, and pays tribute to the spirit of light-hearted spontaneity which is the trademark of every Friars performance.

This new graphic symbol updates the image of the sisters and their reputation for quality health care delivered with respect for the dignity of each person.

Sherry Burns: Saluting excellence

By Elsa Frohman

Sherry Burns says that her primary duty in her job as executive producer for programming at WDIV is worrying.

"I'm the person paid to worry that it will all come together," she said. "If the producer worries enough, everything will work out."

Burns, a resident of Grosse Pointe Park, is in charge of supervising all the details that go into producing a successful television program. "I'm there at the inception and

*Pointer Interest

I carry it through gestation and the labor of taping, and I stay with it through delivery, which takes about six weeks in the post produc-tion stage," Burns said. Burns will be at the helm tomorrow night when WDIV and Children's Hospital put on the Salute to Excellence at the Westin Hotel. The theme of this year's production is the Golden Age of Detroit Television and representing that golden age will be honoree Soupy Sales — a former Grosse Pointer who blazed trails in children's programing in the 1950s and 1960s.

"There are two aspects to this," Burns said. "There is the event and the television show. I have to pick the guests, make bookings, make arrangements, arrange logistics, work with the writers and see that everyone has his tux. Not to mention scheduling the crew and working with the Westin peo-

For some time, Burns has been meeting with representatives from Children's Hospital to finalize plans for the fundraiser.

The Salute to Excellence was first conceived in 1984.

'Children's has always been a pet cause with us," Burns said. She explained that the management at Children's approached the television station several years ago and asked that a telethon be staged.

"Alan Frank in programming and audience development came up with the idea for a foast or roast to honor a Michigander," Burns said. "This could be a glitzy social event as well as an entertaining TV

The original idea was to honor an individual in the arts, sciences or other aspects of public life.

The first year it seemed obvious that we would honor George Kell and Al Kaline," Burns said. "But we said right then that the se-

Sparky Anderson of the Tigers became the second sports figure in a row to receive the Salute to Ex-

Soupy Sales

For 1986, WDIV and Children's were determined to break out of the sports mold, and chose to focus on the television industry.

"We considered the current nostalgia," Burns said. "There is some natural feeling for this. That was the time when so much live, innovative television was coming out of Detroit. I grew up in New Jersey, but I watched Soupy when he went national.

The Salute to Excellence promises to be a spectacular enter-tainment event. Burns has arranged for a reunion of former children's television stars to toast Soupy. Among them will be Sergeant Sacto, alias Tom Ryan; Milky the Clown, also known as Clare Cummings; Casey Kasem, who started his career on the radio in Detroit and many other local personalities. Dick Purtan will be the master of ceremonies for the

The evening will move along with a mixture of tributes from the guests attending in person and video taped tributes from celebrities who couldn't be present. There will also be television "clips" and a group of children from Children's Hospital who will perform the "Soupy Shuffle," a dance made famous by the honoree in the late 1950s. "This should be a really wonderful event," Burns said. "These shows are always fun."

One caveat — Soupy Sales' trademark will not be seen at the salute.

"No pies will be thrown," Burns said firmly. "This is going to be a clean event in more ways than one. Everyone will be in a tux and we had to assure them that they wouldn't be covered with whipped

Ironically, though Soupy is going to be honored by WDIV, he never worked for the station, (or its predecessor in the Detroit area). Soupy was seen on WXYZ-TV in the Detroit area.

Though the salute focuses on the past glories of local television, Burns is quick to point out that local programming is not dead. She is currently producing a wide variety of local programs.

Last week, Burns' department taped and broadcast Bishop Desmond Tutu's appearance at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul in Detroit. WDIV had exclusive local television rights to the program.

However, local television is no longer producing the type of show that Soupy Sales made so popular. "The business is evolving," Burns said. "Now there is an appetite for news." News programming is produced by a different department from Burns' entertainment programming department. "Back then, you had news on for maybe an hour a day. Now, mom has control of the television. Kids have grown more sophisticated in what it takes to entertain them. It's different, and we're of an age when we start looking back and saying it will never be like that again. Our kids today would rather watch Madonna.

The Salute to Excellence will be aired on WDIV as a special in March.

Sports Week

By Paggy O'Connor

The Super Bowl isn't all THAT super ...

Okay, so it's Super Bowl hoopla time and you're having a hard time concentrating on anything else. This year's extravaganza has a linebacker called the "Refrigerator," a space cadet for quarterback, and a telecast that comes with it's own built-in "bathroom break," of all things.

So what? This column, as usual, offers an alternative to all that nerve-wracking pro sports stuff, by being chock-full of great sports tidbits . . . some of which border on super. And there's not a Refrigerator or a space cadet in the lot. Hey, I'll make you a deal. Read on and I'll let you take as long as you like in the bathroom.

... It's official: South's varsity baseball team is headed down to Florida during spring break for a week of workouts. The Blue Devils have spent a couple of months selling trash bags to earn their way down south and as of last week, had filled their quota and made enough to completely fund the trip, which begins March 29

"The kids have done a great job. They wanted this trip and they went out and worked for it and got it," says South baseball coach Dan Griesbaum.

Somewhere in the neighborhood of 22 players, accompanied by coaches and chaperones, will fly to Tampa March 29, visit Disneyworld, then spend the next week in two-a-day workouts in preparation for the varsity baseball season.

'The kids worked for this, but I also want to thank the community. We really appreciate those people who helped us out by buying trash bags and making donations," Griesbaum adds. "I especially want to thank the parents. They've been so supportive, taking orders forms to work and putting up with boxes of trash bags sitting around their houses. I just can't say enough about how helpful and understanding the parents have

No problem, Dan. Just bring back a planeload of suntanned Blue Devil batters, in excellent shape and ready to take a few Eastern Michigan League pitchers "over the

... Art Getz, for more than 20 years the supervisor of this area's Little League teams, heard my plea and came to the rescue. In the Jan. 16 column, I recalled the NBA playoff game played in Grosse Pointe in 1960. I asked that anyone who knew the outcome of the game let me know so I could quit wondering

Well, Getz and his sons, Arthur Jr. and Mike, attended the game that Saturday, March 12. And thanks to his son Arthur, Getz managed to recall that the Pistons lost that game and the one the next afternoon in Minneapolis, giving the Western Division title to the Minneapolis Lakers.

Getz remembers that the Pistons led for most of the game, before Lakers' great Elgin Baylor hit two or three buckets to win the game for his team.

It was great to see Getz' old programs, nice that he remembered that the Pistons lost, and terrific of him to let me know all about it. Now, if I could only find out the final

. North-South Hockey: Best sight of the night in last Saturday's North-South hockey game wasn't necessarily the excellent play of South's Rob Wood, the great skating of North's John Russell, or the nearlyimpeccable goaltending of the Devils' Bill

Tecos, although they were a close second. No, the best sight of the night was the sartorially-splendid GPCR Zamboni crew:
Brian Stube and Mike Agnello. The pair, (obvious South fans judging by the Confederate flags which flew from the ice resurfacing machine) went about their duties dressed in tuxedos; dark gray with a white shirt and pink cummerbund for Agnello, light gray for Stube.

They came out onto the ice to the cheers and jeers of South and North fans . . . most of whom spent the first few minutes before game time throwing garbage at the pair. (I guess they just didn't know class when they

About the only thing that could possibly keep Stube and Agnello off Blackwell's Best Dressed Zamboni-drivers' List were their shoes: they shunned black patent leather for the more practical sneakers and snow boots.

C'mon guys, no guts, no glory.

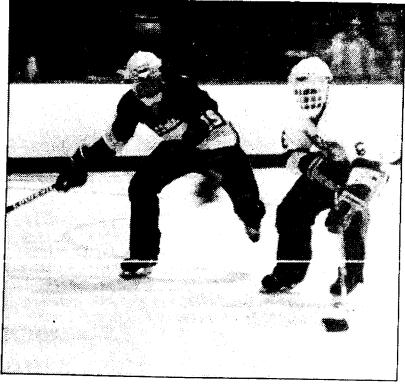

. Okay, so I do have a few space cadets in this week's column: those pinheads who threw the heated coins out onto the ice before and during game time. It seems like a pretty funny thing to do at the time, but you try skating over a coin embedded in ice and not ending up with your knee pointing in the opposite direction of your ankle.

... Speaking of legs not doing what they're supposed to do, that's the situation North cager Rob Skuras finds himself in today. Skuras is in the hospital with two torn ligaments, suffered in last week's win over

Hey Rob, Bill Hoover says "get better

Ditto, from me.

The usual overflow crowd of 1,000 hockey fans showed up at Grosse Pointe Community Rink last Saturday night to watch the surprising South High Blue Devils skate past the favored Norsemen, 7-3. South goalie Bill Tecos had a shutout going until late in the second period; that's Tecos (left) making a stop as South's Tim Jerome and North defenseman Dave Johnston look on. Above, North's Tom Ugval stays close to South's scoring sensation, Rob Wood.

So much for sure things — South bombs North

Up until last Saturday night, area hockey fans could count on two things to happen in their favorite sport: a) the Detroit Red Wings will usually find a way to lose, and b) the North-South hockey game will nearly always be decided by two goals or less.

Make that ONE sure thing.

The 1986 version of the much-heralded crosstown rivalry got started on time Jan. 18. . . and that was just about the last thing that went according to plan, at least from a North point of view. After a close first period, South scored five unanswered goals to take a 7-3 victory over the Norsemen and move two games up on North in the Michigan Metro League.

It was the largest margin of victory in the three-year series and it came in a game that was expected to be as close as the rivals' record at game time indicated: North was 8-3; South, 7-3-1.

South got out in front in what was mostly a chippy first period, although each team had good chances to score in that first stanza. But the only goal of the period came when South's senior left wing Rob Wood skated in, drew goaltender Matt Dennis out and passed to junior John Nicholson, who put the puck in the net.

North coach Mike Manzella's game plan prior to the contest was to get as many shots on South goalie Bill Tecos as possible and in the first period, it looked like North might have been successful with that strategy. But Tecos stopped several good North shots on power plays, and a John Russell shot ticketed for the corner bounced off the goalpost instead.

Coach Tim Zimmerman said he felt the Devils were able to thwartNorth by making sure to cut North skaters off up the middle and force them to take low percentage shots.

"If they were going to shoot, we wanted them to shoot from a bad angle."

The Blue Devils opened the game up with five straight second period goals as sophomore Tim Jerome scored and Wood and sophomore Bill Huntington added two goals each. Huntington closed out the scoring for his first hat trick of the year; Wood earned playmaker honors. Nicholson, junior Andrew Pay and senior Mike America (who ship Roy and senior Mike Amore (who slugged it out with North's Tom Ugval late in the first period) got the other assists.

North got goals from John Russell, Kevin Tisdale and Dan Spitz. Spitz, who played an excellent game, assisted on Tisdale's goal; Rob Marshall and John Andary got the other assists.

"We played well in the second period. I don't think North played as well as they can . . . but I'll take it," said Zimmer-

"I thought the key was in the first period when we killed off those penalties. I think that really gave us confidence," he added.

But Zimmerman isn't confident enough to acknowledge that the squad he once thought might have a tough time winning five games is now beginning to

"I'm not at that point yet. Next week is our toughest week. We've got three league games . . . all on the road.

"We'll see what we're made of then."

'10-5' rule doesn't fit Pointe coaches to a

By Peggy O'Connor

Picture Detroit Tiger manager Sparky Anderson directing his teem from a sitting position in the Tiger dugout. Or Lion coach Darryl Rogers straining to see over his football team as he sits in a chair on the Silverdome sidelines. A couple of pretty ridiculous scenarios, That's how the varsity basketball coaches at North, South and University Liggett School feel about the new national high school rule requiring basketball coaches to remain seated during games. The new rule, called the 10-5. allows coaches to "stand to make a substitution or react spontaneously" to a nice play, but does not allow them to stand while the clock is running, under penalty of a technical foul.

Judging from the reaction of local coaches, it is not the most popular rule ever passed in high school basketball.

"It's atrocious," says Chuck Wright, first-year varsity coach at ULS. "The rules are already very explicit - if a coach is doing something wrong, like screaming at officials, or swearing, the referee should give him a technical. What do we need the 10-5 rule for?

'And how can they (referees) enforce it correctly? Recently, we had a situation where the opposing coach was standing. I asked the official about it and he said that as long as he (the coach) wasn't yelling at the referees, he wasn't going to get a technical. So I ended up standing, too. He didn't whistle either one of us," Wright says.

Wright, who admits to being a very animated, vocal coach, says he's had to remind himself a few times to keep from standing during games.

"My gosh, this is a teaching sport. How can you teach sitting down? I really can't think of a good reason for this rule, except that maybe at some levels of high school ball they're trying to keep the coach from inciting the crowd or something.

"But I'll tell you, you can yell just as well sitting down.' South coach George Petrouleas says that the rule is redundant. "My personal opinion is that it is a rule for incompetent officials. The rule to keep coaches under control has always been in the books, making the 10-5 rule unecessary," says Petrouleas, the dean of Pointe cage coaches.

"The Bobby Knights of the world have created problems for high school coaches who are not in that realm. And there are already adequate rules for those who are."

Petrouleas says he has yet to see a technical foul called on a violator of the 10-5 rule. He predicts that the hectic state tournament time in March will be a better test of the referees' willingness to invoke the

"The rule is absurd . . . I can't communicate with my players. The basketball court is the coach's classroom. No teacher sits down to teach," he says.

None of the three coaches — Wright, Petrouleas and North's George Olman - has been hit with yet, but each says he must make a conscious effort to stay glued to his seat when the action

"It's a ridiculous rule," Olman says. "They say they put it in to give the game back to the kids. except that now, a coach can't talk to his players. What does that do for the game?", Olman asks.

He agrees that enforcement of the rule seems to depend on the individual referee's judgement. "I was scouting a couple of teams a few weeks ago and these guys were standing up most of the game without getting called for it. It's going to depend upon the individual referee, I guess.

Petrouleas says that he can see a time when the rule might be amended or repealed, if the hue and cry against the rule from coaches and officials alike continues. "What we'd like to do is emphasize the negative aspects of this rule and show the more positive aspects of what a coach can do if he is allowed to communicate with his players," he says.

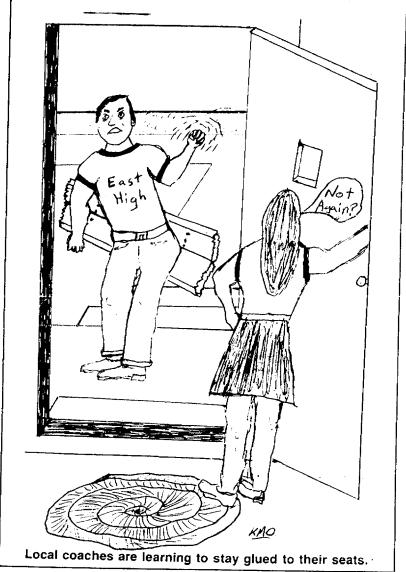

In the meantime, each coach says he'll continue dealing with the rule in his own way.

"A coach takes his chances standing up. Me, I'm thinking of getting a seatbelt," Olman says with a chuckle.

'I've thought about removing all the chairs and benches just to see what they'd do," Petrouleas says. 'But I've got too much to worry about already.

"As it stands now, if I get called for it I plan on telling the official that I was 'just responding spontaneously to a great play' just to see what he does then.

Glad tidings for boaters

During its scramble to adjourn for the holidays, the U.S. Congress left behind a few Christmas tidings sure to make news within the recreational boating community.

The U.S. Coast Guard, which at the hands of the Senate had been facing a massive cut of $230 million in its budget, succeeded in weathering the storm and came through the congressional shoals relatively unscathed. While the USCG's operating budget may fall just a bit short of last year's, its capital account will actually be significantly higher.

The outlook for 1986 is improved not only for the Coast Guard's budget but state boating safety programs should get a big boost as well. For the first time since 1980, when Congress agreed that the federal fuel taxes paid by boaters should go into a trust fund to be ussafety, education and law enforcement programs, the full amount authorized, $30 million, will actually be appropriated. This more than doubles the $13.6 million released

Jill Boardman led the Lady Norsemen, taking first place in the vault with an 8.95, on the bars, 8.55, and on the floor exercise, 8.7.

Swimmers lose

North's boys' varsity swim team finished last in a tri-meet Jan. 11. The state's No. 1 team — Bloomfield Hills Andover - topped North, 120-56, and Brother Rice beat the Norsemen, 101-67. North also lost to Ann Arbor Huron, 124-48, on Jan. 14.

Greg Cooksey took first place in the 100 back in the tri-meet; Mike Reynolds also finished first in diving. Cooksey and Jeff Williams finished first and second in the 200 IM and individually, Drew Dungan and Pete Eliades swam personal bests in the 100 free and 500 free, respectively.

Against Ann Arbor Huron, Andrew Young swam to a first place finish in the 100 free. Individual bests were recorded by Ron Jendretzke and Bill Turnbull in the 500 free; Scott Tenkel in the 200 IM; Dungan in the 100 free; Chris Candiliotis and Eliades in the 100 fly.

North's Jill Boardman (we've flipped this photo of Jill upside down to better show her face) started the gymnastics season out right: with three first place finishes in the girls' season-opening win over Royal Oak Kimball.

ULS sports 'Jekyll and Hyde' Knights split pair

After defeating Bethesda, 60-54, at home on Thursday, Jan. 16, the Knights fell apart at Southfield Christian, 58-36 on Jan. 18. ULS's record is 2-8.

"It was awfully nice to beat Bethesda," said coach Chuck Wright. "We had lost to them earlier, so the victory shows that we've made some progress. But we took a huge step backwards against Southfield. We lacked intensity and were absolutely flat for the first time this year. It won't happen again.

The Bethesda game avenged Dec. 7's 68-62 loss. The Knights came out very aggressively, dominating the boards. Unfortunately, they missed many lay-ups, so the halftime score was tied at 25-25. With the aid of its full court press, ULS broke the game open in the second half, scoring 10 straight points. Bethesda closed the gap to four, but couldn't get any closer. Sophomore Kevin Darby pop-ped in 23 points; senior Kirk Haggerty added 12.

Spikers split

The ULS varsity volleyball team had its first league game on Jan. 9 at Oakland Christian. The Knights split, winning the first game 16-14, 15-7 and losing the second 15-13, 15-11.

On Monday, Jan. 13, ULS split a league match with Lutheran Northwest, winning the first, 15-13, 7-15, 15-8, and losing the second 15-6, 15-1.

On Jan. 17, ULS beat Academy of the Sacred Heart at home, 15-9, 15-5, 15-11. Kathy Bianchi was the high scorer with 12 points. Bianchi and Cindy Paul had good set-ting games with a combination of 47 sets. Kara Van Dellen played a fabulous game with a total of 18 great spikes. Coach Shelley Owens said she was pleased with the performance.

ULS travels to Plymouth Christian on Jan. 28. The girls' next home game is Jan. 31 against Zion Christian at 4:15 p.m.

Walking with the hands behind the back is a posture of dominance. Leaving the front of the body completely exposed demonstrates a sense of security and control.

is a bouillabaisse of fact and folkway, superstition and science, delivered with a hearty seasoning of humor. The author of "The Naked Ape" (and 15 other books) has struck again with a book lively enough to keep your attention for a straight read-through, but segmented enough to pick up and put down, if that's your style.

If you choose to pick up "Bodywatching" while your family is television-watching, be warned that you will interrupt them with cries of "hey, listen to this!" at least once a page.

"Bodywatching" aims to educate the reader about the parts of the body with a maximum of sugarcoating. Morris leavens scientific discussion of 20 body parts with a sprinkling of odd facts, body language, tradition and history, much, but by no means all, sexual in orientation. The book's lavish photographs illustrate the author's points so well that they alone are worth the look.

So much has been written about body language that it is easy to imagine that Morris does nothing more than remind us of what we already knew. It doesn't take a psychologist these days to know that crossing or folding the arms in front of the body is a defensive, protective gesture.

Morris, however, puts forth the notion that we have evolved so far from the beginning of our traditions that in some cases we no longer know what body signals really mean. Nevertheless, the book is filled with jolts of recognidelicacy and politeness. Not so. It's Try, for example to read the section on yawning without actually doing it. For that matter, try to read the book without acting out any of the gestures. Yawning is a fine example of what Morris means when he says we have lost all understanding of some of our body language.

You no doubt thought, as I did, that the reason for covering your mouth when you yawn is based on delicacy and politeness. Not so. It's to keep your soul in. "The covering of the yawning mouth was intended to prevent the premature departure of the soul — and also prevented evil spirits from taking the opportunity to enter the body through the gaping orifice."

Sweaty palms are something everyone has had to deal with, but — odd fact: During the Cuban missile crisis, the general level of stress was so high that researchers studying palmar sweating had to temporarily suspend their experiments. It was impossible to establish a "relaxed" reading

Thumb through the section on hair. It covers people with hair all over their faces and people with none. The one-fifth of the male population that is bald will doubtless agree with Morris that "bald may not be handsome, but it is almost certainly sexier."

Here we learn that baldness was the visual signal of the dominant male, implying maturity, strength and an abundance of male hormone. Look at Yul Brynner: "In terms of association this (shaved head) puts him into one of several categories — humble oriental monk, ancient ruler, sheared criminal, or professional wrestler. The dominant, active life style narrows this list down, so he emerges with the personality of a 'wrestlerking',' dignified, ready for a fight, defiant, swashbuckling. Wow.

Desmond Morris' invitation to the "strange landscape" of the human body is full of intriguing twists. Best of all, it's a good read.

Blues, jazz

'Longshot' is good for a few laughs

By Marian Trainor

You don't have to be a horseplayer to enjoy "The Longshot," a film about four motley characters who consistently go down to the wire with losers, but it helps. If you have ever spent an after-

If you have ever spent an afternoon at the track, standing at the fence in the hot sun, shouting your lungs out at a half-ton of horseflesh refusing to lift those hoofs, when your last dollar is riding on it, then you really have empathy for these amiable but goofy foursome. It sure makes it easier to see why the four friends go to such desperate ends as they do to recoup years of losses on one long shot.

They even go so far as to turn to one of the meanest minions in the business for a loan. If the horse loses, there is no escape. They are in deep trouble.

That is the story line that holds together a loosely strung series of situations — some of which are funny, some a little rough around the edges but, as a whole, entertaining.

Some of the set-ups are strictly out of Mack Sennett. Tim Conway arriving home drunk, trying to fix a leaking toilet to appease his shrewish wife, playing up to a rich witch hoping to hit her for a loan and ending up out on the sidewalk wearing black leather briefs over his underwear, stretched across the hood of a car while being beaten by an automatic car lot sentry.

There's no doubt about it. This is Conway's movie — but then he wrote it. That's okay because Conway is a funny guy as followers of the Carol Burnett, McHales Navy and the Tim Conway Show know.

While Conway is central to the misadventures of the crew, he is not alone in his ability to conjure up zany doings.

Ted Wass, the much younger member of the team has some moments of his own, such as trying to control a much-dented station wagon that has a tendency to keep rolling after the driver turns off the key and gets out; giving artificial resuscitation to his pet goldfish after it has been flipped out of the bowl on to the floor; an elaborate explanation of how he picks his lottery numbers by enlarging on the number 91/2 which is his shoe size and a vivid description of what goes into the makings of the hot dog his friend is about to eat.

Jack Weston, in his lumbering stupid way, gets off some humorous observations on women and marriage. There are some food gags, too, in which the overstuffed Weston plays a part. He is at his best, however, when he rails in frustration over wrong second-guesses at the track.

If there is one of the group who might be singled out as a steadying influence, it is Harvey Kormann, and even he gets caught up in the final plunge into desperation of trying to win back all of the lost cash that rode off in the dust of losers' hooves.

There is an enjoyable sequence that features Jonathan Winters in the film. In his role of a garrulous old farmer, he brings into play all those facial expressions that made him so delightful on television. It's amusing just to watch him squeeze his eyes, stretch his mouth into a silly smile and hear him speak in those measured grandmotherly tones. It brings back all those good times spent watching him on his Jonathan Winters Show.

"The Longshot" is not the best movie you'll ever see, but it is good for some laughs which is not a bad recommendation.

'Iron Eagle' tries to do it all

By Michael Chapp

Sometimes, when examining the shifting themes in modern moviemaking the task is incredibly easy. Sometimes, a complete filmmaking revolution can be observed in one person's pictures. Witness please, a director named Sidney J. Furie. This is the man responsible for "The Boys in Company C," a film which expounded the stupidity of war and the advantages of procifications.

the advantages of pacifism.
But "Iron Eagle," Furie's new film, latches on to the new patriotism in American movies. It condones the use of military force and bestows national kudos on those who aren't afraid to use it.

What Furie's about-face represents is an attitude — a feeling that since Washington-on-the-Potomac is ostensibly powerless to act against international acts of terrorism, Washington-au-Hollywood can wage war on movie screens. And since the red, white and blue never falter on the silver screen, the vicarious victory is always assured.

Politics aside, "Iron Eagle" purports to be the story of a boy's struggle to become a man, and a man's struggle to give effective tutelage to a boy. Regrettably, this part of the film doesn't work very well, leaving little to be salvaged from the picture.

Jason Gedrick plays Doug Masters, an 18-year-old high school senior who has lived his whole life on the Air Force base that headquarters his father (Tim Thomerson), a top-notch pilot. Since his early childhood, Doug has been spending his free time in F-16 flight simulators, and consequently has enough flying skill to make the real pilots on the base green with envy and red with

Doug finds himself in a quandary, though, when his father is shot down over enemy territory, and taken hostage in a Middle Eastern country. The U.S. government refuses to take any action — military or otherwise — to retrieve the pilot, so Doug realizes he must make the move himself if he ever wants to see his father alive again.

With the help of his friends, Doug gets all the intelligence information necessary to acquire a couple of F-16s, fly into enemy territory, destroy the base where his father is being imprisoned, rescue his dad, and get back home alive. All in a day's work—or so says the film.

Doug trains under the watchful eye of Chappy Sinclair (Louis Gossett Jr.), a retired Air Force Colonel who admires Doug's father so much that he says he would sacrifice his own life if need be. The boy learns discipline, combat-thought and selfworth from Sinclair in a three-day crash course (no pun intended) on piloting an F-16. Then, the two head to the Middle East to rescue Doug's father.

One gives nothing away by saying that the real question is not WILL the rescue work, but HOW it will work. Any astute moviegoer knows enough about the Rambo-syndrome in movies to predict the film's outcome.

But alas, this picture suffers from more maladies than just its predictability. The acting lacks even the slightest semblance of conviction. These actors read dialogue as if they were local summer-stock players.

The script contains enough throw-away lines to fill the city dump. And where the dialogue is intact, the film moves slower than the Ford freeway at rush hour. There is so much soul-searching in the movie that by the time the action finally does pick up, few in the audience will care.

Not that the film is a total washout. The shots of the F-16s in flight are graceful and quite pleasing to the eye. The feeling of freedom in flight is wonderful, but certainly not wonderful enough to neutralize the movie's vices.

"Iron Eagle" is the type of film that tries to do it all — politics, life-size video games (in the flight simulator), a teenage hero, heavy metal rock music on the sound-track, a happy ending and even some breakdancing.

Unfortunately, in trying to grab the whole pie, each individual piece is elusive, and ends up in the filmmakers' faces instead.

Author D. H. Lawrence was not always accurate in real life, either. His dying words: "I am better now."

Escape to the 1900s this weekend

The delights and diversions of the 1900s will come to life again at Henry Ford Museum Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 25 and 26.

Visitors to the museum's first Great Escape Weekend of the year will meet the personalities, sing the songs and taste the foods from the turn of the century. It was an exciting time when men were beginning to fly, Annie Oakley was swinging her gun and Teddy Roosevelt was lending his name to teddy bears. Ragtime and Tin Pan Alley tunes were hot in the dance halls and people ate delicacies like Hopping John.

Bob Seeley — of Detroit boogie woogie fame — will be on hand to drum the rhythm of ragtime out of the piano. And Jim Perkins, serve: "It's a good thing beauty is renowned folk circuit guitarist, will perform early blues and only skin deep or I'd be rotten to popular songs. Then, the Detroit the core."

'Ain't Misbehavin" to play Feb. 6, 7

Two performances of "Ain't Misbehavin," the award-winning Broadway musical that recreates the atmosphere of a delectably lowdown Harlem night club during the Prohibition Era, will be pre-sented by a cast of touring New York professionals at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts.

Featuring some 30 songs written or made famous by one of America's best remembered jazz-men, Thomas "Fats" Waller, the shows are set for 8 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 6, and again at 8 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 7. Tickets are $12 for adults and $10 for students and senior citizens may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling

Sagan's "Contact' more than good science fiction

Politics, religion, power strug-gles complicate what is already a project of enormous importance, national scientific competition and possible disaster, but also a promise of a better world.

Mathematicians wondered about what elementary discoveries they might have missed. Religious leaders worried that Vegan values would find adherents. Astronomers worried that there might be facts about the stars that they had gotten wrong. Politicians worried that some other system of government might be more acceptable.

After years and trillions of dollars, the Machine is built. Five people go. They have wonderful experience, and none of it can be verified.

Although the procedures that finally make the project possible are highly technical, the author weaves them into the novel in such a way that they are not formidable but create their own interest.

The description of their journey to Vega is richly detailed and suspenseful. "They were falling — it was hard not to entertain the thought that they had plunged into the middle of the earth, bound for its core of molten iron - or maybe they were on their way straight to —. Black hole, she thought, Black hole - black holes

"The Joint Is Jumpin," "I'm Gonna Sit Right Down And Write Myself A Letter" and "Your Feet's Too Big."

It is in such philosophical observances as that, as well as the author's absolute control of the scientific data basic to the story, that makes "Contact" more than just a good science fiction novel.

sumer. Realizing this, the Department of Transportation provides a number of hotlines dealing with many facets of transporation. If you have a problem with your boat or car; a complaint about airport security or carry-on luggage; or want to report a chemical spill on a highway, call the appropriate hotline at the Department of Transportation.

Computer lab

These nationwide hotlines are ready to provide safety recall information, report possible safety defects in boats and cars, take reports on chemical spills, and complaints related to the aviation industry. The hotlines will answer the questions directly or, if they are technical questions, refer them to staff specialists for call-back.

Hotlines are popular in private industry as a customer relations and sales tool. Corporations have found 800 numbers break down barriers to communication and make it easier for customers to buy a product or service, or get important user information. The Department of Transportation uses consumer hotlines because they are an efficient and cost-effective way of The hotlines can also help us gather safety information from consumers that can be used to improve transportation safety. In short, hotlines help us "get close to the consumer" — the many people who are, in one way or another, affected by the Department's services and programs. Here are examples of DOT consumer hotlines available today:

 Boating Safety Hotline — 800-368-5647 — Provides safety recall information on individual model recreational boats. Takes reports of possible safety defects on boats. Answers questions related to recreational boating safety. Run by the U.S. Coast Guard in Washington, D.C., the hotline operates Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Eastern time.

• Marine Safety "Alert" - 800-323-SAFE — Takes reports of possible unsafe conditions on board U.S. merchant vessels. Designed primarily for receiving reports from personnel who work on merchant vessels, the hotline will also take reports from passengers traveling on U.S. commercial vessels (for example: scuba dive boats, or excursion and sightseeing vessels.) Run by the Coast Guard in Washington, D.C., the hotline operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

• Oil and Chemical Spill - 800-424-8802 — Takes reports of oil, gas and hazardous chemicals spills anywhere in the United States, either on land or in the water. Run by the U.S. Coast Guard in Washington, D.C., the hotline operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

 Auto Safety Hotline — 800-424-9393 — Provides safety recall information, fuel economy ratings and other safety data on individual model cars. Takes reports of possible safety defects in automobiles. Answers questions related to automobile safety. Run by NHTSA in Washington, D.C., the hotline operates Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. Eastern time.

• FAA Consumer Hotline - 800-FAA-SURE - Provided for cunsumers who have complaints or inquiries dealing with carry-on baggage; airport security procedures, child safety seats, or user services, including examinations, aircraft certification and facility operations. Run by the FAA in Washington, D.C., the hotline operates Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Eastern time.

What to do with a pension: Options tire in the next few years, selecting the right pension payment option is like walking through a financial maze. Each path seems to lead in the right direction, but only one path will actually carry you to your destination.

The sheer array of complicated options that pop up at retirement time make people uncertain about which direction is the right one for them. A major decision is whether you want a "single life pension" or a "joint and survivor pension." A single life pension pays monthly installments until you die. Under a joint and survivor pension, a survivor you name continues to receive monthly payments after your death. According to the Michigan Association of CPAs, knowing the differences between the single life and joint and survivor pension payouts is important to people planning retirement.

The single life/joint survivor question comes up whenever a retiree invests his or her pension money in an annuity. Annuities pay a specified amount every month beginning at retirement and continuing for life. They're attractive because they're secure.

With all annuities, the single life/joint survivor question is critical, CPAs say. The annuity may also be the pension plan sponsored by an employer. It can also be one that you purchase privately. Many persons are purchasing annuity contracts with proceeds from lump-sum distributions. Another common way to fund an annuity is by rolling over a lump sum from a pension plan into an IRA annui-

Your money is invested by an insurance company and you are paid back in monthly installments. Although the after-tax return on an annuity may not be high when compared with many other investments, the annuity is attractive to people who want to lock in a guaranteed income to pay fixed expenses. It adds a cushion for those receiving Social Security benefits.

When a retiree purchases an annuity or when a person nears retirement, there is a choice between payout methods. Basically the decision boils down to this: Do you want to receive a smaller monthly payment and have the annuity continue to pay your spouse after you die? Or, do you want to receive a larger monthly stipend and have able to a spouse after you die? Your answer depends on your personal financial situation. You can choose a single life pension, which pays nothing to a surviving spouse in the event of your death. Or, you can choose a joint and survivor pension, which continues to pay your spouse after you die. The survivor pension, which continues to pay your spouse after you die. The survivor, incidentally, can be someone other than a spouse. It can be a child or grandchild, for instance. Payments may be spread over a beneficiary's lifetime — or over a specified number of years.

If you select a joint and survivor contract, you usually must choose between at least two kinds: A 100 percent joint and survivor option pays you and your spouse the same amount, even after your death; a 50 percent survivor option pays your spouse half as much as before your death.

Federal laws ensure that a spouse is treated fairly in making joint and survivor/single life pension decisions: For employer-sponsored pension plans, a spouse must sign a waiver declining the joint and survivor option whenever a single life payout is chosen by a married couple.

Here's what these annuity pay-

For someone who is going to re- little or no annuity payments avail- out options might look like for a typical retiring couple, Bob and Linda. Bob is planning to retire at age 63 and his single life pension benefits, according to his policy, would guarantee $7,390 a year for as long as he lives. If Linda waives her rights to a joint and survivor payout, she will receive no further annuity payments after Bob dies. However, if Bob and Linda choose a 50 percent joint and survivor option, they will receive smaller benefits while they are both alive, say $6,500. Should Bob die before Linda or Linda before Bob, the surviving spouse would receive half of the $6,500 a year benefit, $3,250. Under the 100 percent joint and survivor option, Bob and Linda would receive a regular $5,616 yearly benefit. Even if one spouse survives the other, the $5,616 payment remains the same. In addition to the single life and 50 or 100 percent joint and survivor payout options, there is one other viable alternative: You could choose a single life payout and purchase an insurance policy to fund a life insurance benefit. The insurance policy would fund the loss of the 50 percent survivor payments and be a hedge against Bob's death.

Solid woods and fine craftsmanship. A Harden tradition since 1865.

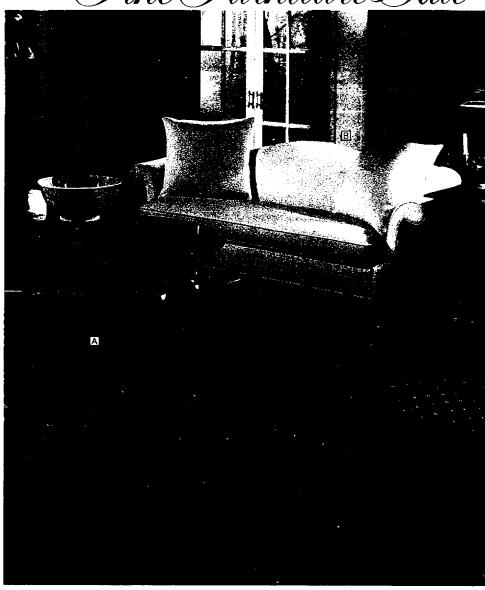

Today, as it was at the very start, the Harden Furniture Company is a family business. The company's work-rooms are located in one factory at McConnellsville, N.Y. as they have been for the past 121 years. Today, many of Harden's skilled craftsmen represent the third and fourth generations to work for the company.

The woodworking skills that have been developed, handed down and perfected over the years are evident in every Harden finished piece. Additionally much of the solid wood used in Harden furniture is grown in the company's extensive forest lands of cherry, oak and other northern hardwoods.

A special ingredient in Harden furniture is the enormous amount of personal pride each craftsman takes in producing furniture of the finest quality and character. This pride extends from the workers in the sawmill to the skilled hands in the finishing rooms where as many as 17 separate steps are taken to assure a satin-smooth finish of lasting beauty.

Solid woods and fine craftsmanship. Two important reasons why Harden furniture is one of the wisest investments you can make for your home. Now, during this special sale, you can own this fine furniture at extremely attractive prices.
