Shantytown shenanigans

A woman called the office last week to ask if there were any building codes that covered the ice shanties that spend the winter on the lake between Farms Pier Park and Crescent Sail Yacht Club.

With all the drive for keeping the Pointes beautiful, it's a shame that the shelters were of varying size and color, the caller said. Perhaps some color restrictions applied, like for hunting clothing, she wondered.

Well, sorry, but according to the Michigan Department of Resources, the only restrictions on the structures from which fishermen have regularly been pulling Northern pike and pan-fish are in markings and remov-

The shelters must be marked on all sides with the owner's name and address in waterproof letters no less than two inches high, according to the department. Also, shanties must be removed by the last week of February and if used after that, have to be removed daily.

So, while there's no color code for the shelters, those without proper markings may warrant a call to the department's Michigan State Fairground office to see if a conservation officer doesn't want to visit the pikefishing pikers. Call 368-1000 for Orttenburger and another first-time candidate, Michael Pratley, tied for third place in the balloting with 248 votes apiece, the first election tie in 30 years in Frankfort. Successive freezes and thaws have thrown up large stacks of broken ice along the lakefront in Grosse Pointe. This pile is at the foot of Moran in front of the Grosse Pointe Academy. The ice piles up on shore when a thaw breaks the cover on the lake and an east wind forces the chunks up onto the ground. An examination of the ice shows it was six to eight inches thick on the lake before the last thaw.

Schools ask cities for interest

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Legal counsel from the six cities in the Grosse Pointe Public School System have been put on alert. The district sent a letter and a copy of a state Appeals Court ruling regarding the interest cities collect on invested school taxes before they're paid to the school system.

The letter, dated Jan. 8, has gone out to Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods city managers from Director of Business Affairs Christian Fenton, who says the Nov. 4, 1985, ruling by the Court of Appeals is applicable to all school systems nd-municipalities in the state. "Further, our attorney advises us that was have a duty, on behalf of the (s)chool(d)istrict, to pursue any benefits which may be available as a result of this case," Fenton's letter reads.

The case springs from a lawsuit in 1983 filed by the Grand Rapids Public School System against the city of Grand Rapids. Before 1982. the Grand Rapids treasurer paid the school taxes collected daily through wire transfers. That July, the city began paying daily by check, getting the use of the money in short-term investments for one day. The city earned $40,949 that way, according to the appellate court ruling.

In July 1983, Grand Rapids began making the payments once a week and earned $71,597 in interest with the new procedure that

A state law in effect since 1979 allowed for payment of property taxes collected by municipalities for schools twice monthly, within 10 business days of the first and 15 of each month, local treasurers said. Some of the local municipalities follow that payment method and don't forward the interest they earn on the short-term investment of the school dollars to the school

The appeals court, however, affirmed a lower court's ruling that interest earned from the ment of the money belonged to the school system.

"The issue before us is whether, pursuant to the . . . statute provisions, (the city is) entitled to retain interest earned on taxes collected for the school district . . . the opinion reads. they are now, officials say. Since the end of its fiscal year in June 1980, the school system has levied about $183 million, which has been collected by the cities.

The way the cities make payments of the collected taxes varies from municipality to municipality. officials say. Some remit the amount weekly, others pay twice a month. All are allowed to levy a 1 percent administrative fee to

Appointed by Heenan to serve on the committee are council members David Gaskin, James Robson and Carroll Evola. Gaskin will chair the committee. Councilman Mark Valente, who was nominated, declined the appointment and Evola's name was proposed.

> With a committee in place and funding at its disposal, the city is preparing to meet the challenge presented by the firefighters. It appears that the public safety issue will go to a vote, possibly this spring, since the firemen are near their goal of 1,871 signatures.

Firefighters and union president Joseph Bialk said the department needs only 100 more signatures and "everything after that is gravy. We almost reached our goal in two weeks."

Further complicating the situation is a lawsuit filed by the firefighters' union seeking an injunction until an unfair labor charge against the city is settled. The union seeks to maintain the status quo until a Michigan Employment Relations Commission hearing in April. Arguments for and against the injunction will be heard by Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Thomas J. Brennan Feb. 4.

Woods seeks to redevelop parks

By Mike Andrzeiczyk

The Woods council last week hired an architectural company to prepare a redevelopment plan for two of the city's four parks. The city will ask voters on the November ballot to fund the work to be outlined in the plan.

The council approved the contract with James Scott & Associates of Bloomfield Hills to prepare plans for Ghesquiere and Lake Front parks at a total cost of $8,000. Of that, $5,000 will be spent on the Lake Front plan with the rest to pay for the Ghesquiere plan.

The company was already visiting the two parks late last week, according to Councilman Jean Rice, who chaired the threemember committee that selected Scott & Associates.

The city decided to look at redevelopment of its parks after defeat earlier this year of a proposal to raise the bridge over the Milk River at Lake Front park. Raising the bridge would have given owners of larger boats greater access to the city's boat wells in the

It was suggested after the council killed the bridge proposal that it look at redeveloping its parks. The city has never had a development plan for the sites, so construction has been piece-meal, Rice said.

In the case of Lake Front, lack of a development plan has resulted in a site cut into three pieces by the bridge and the road, she added.

The park planner selection committee met three times to make some preliminary decisions, interview and select a company to do the plan. One factor that weighed heavily for Scott & Associates was the company's commitment to ease of maintenance and preservation of nature at the parks, Rice said.

"We don't want our parks to become covered with concrete," she added. "We want to maintain the natural beauty and setting of the

The company has earned a number of commissions during the past 27 years, according to information it supplied to the Woods. Some projects on which it has worked include the Pine Knob restoration, Trappers Alley, Wayne County Community College eastern and downriver regions and the Birmingham Train Station. The company has also done work at Our Lady Queen of Peace in Harper Woods and Jefferson Terrace and Berkshire in

The company will develop its plans in three stages. First, it will examine each park and consider a number of factors, including environmental impact and conditions, parking and maintenance requirements, pedestrian and traffic circulation, existing and proposed utilities, projected facilities, berming, screening and the effect of development on surrounding property owners. The Lake Front park plan will include any recommendation from the city's recreation commission as well as a variety of other topics, including possible expansion of the marina, addition of a fishing pier, better use of land area, location of more restroom

Woods student dies from gunshot wound

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Friends and family of Jeffrey Carson, 12, of the Woods, will gather this morning at St. James Lutheran Church in the Farms to pay their last respects to the youth, who died Sunday morning at St. John Hospital of a gunshot wound.

He will lie in state at the church beginning at 10 a.m., followed at 11 a.m. by services.

Jeffrey, a student at Brownell Middle School, was shot in the head Friday afternoon when a handgun he and another boy were handling discharged.

The two were in a Washington Road home handling the revolver at about 1:30 p.m. that day when the weapon discharged, striking Jeffrey in the head. Park emergency medical technicians responded to the call and took the youth to St. John, according to City police. The two boys were home from school that day because Grosse Pointe public schools were closed for a records/ planning day.

The name of the 13-year-old schoolmate involved in the shooting is being withheld by City police, which has a policy of not identifying juveniles who are involved in police investigations, police officials said. Investigation into the accident continues, police said.

Born in Detroit, the boy is survived by his parents, Thomas and Susan; two sisters, Melissa and Amy; paternal grandparents, Wesley and Evelyn Carson; and maternal grandparents, L.J. and Julie Hagelstein.

Memorial contributions may be made to St. James Lutheran Church, 170 McMillan Road, Grosse Pointe Farms, 48236, or to the Boy Scouts of America, De-

Interment will be in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

language is still around 99 years later Universal

By Nancy Parmenter

Okay, atentu! Feb. 6 is the deadline for signing up for Esperanto classes, an idiotimuna method for learning to communicate with people — or at least Esperantists — all over the world.

This 99-year-old language invented by a 19-year-old Czech student incorporates elements of Latin and Greek, Hebrew, Yiddish, English, the odd Romance language, and Russian. Esperantists claim that an average English reader can grasp the meaning of three-quarters of the Esperanto vocabulary even without studying the language.

Want to take an Esperanto IQ test? Here's the introduction to 'Esperanto, the international lan-

"Inteligenta persono lernas la

lingvon Esperanto rapide kaj facile. Esperanto estas la moder na, kultura lingvo por la tuta mondo. Simpla, fleksebla, belsona, gi estas la praktika solvo de universala interkompreno.

Don't ask me what it means. I had to work it out by myself.

Or you could take the class. Mary Napolitan, a teacher in the Detroit schools and member of the Esperanto Society of Michigan, has taught one class for Grosse Pointe Community Education and is ready to start another.

But why Esperanto? Why not something practical like Chinese? For one thing, the Chinese are crazy about Esperanto. They give school credit for it as a foreign language. They have an active society that publishes a magazine available on newstands everywhere. In Esperanto.

"They've been publishing it for 30 years," Napolitan said.

Napolitan hasn't been to China to try out her Esperanto yet, but she has met Chinese at international Esperanto conventions. Esperanto is something its aficionados get het up about: One of the participants in a San Francisco seminar hitch-hiked all the way from Nova Scotia.

Some dreamers have seen Esperanto as a replacement for all other world languages. More practically, Napolitan sees real business applications for it.

"World travel and commerce are expanding so fast," she said. "Esperanto could be used as a commercial language.

This seems to have possibilities. Consider all the badly translated instructions on electronic equipment. With a little training, worldwide commerce could be conducted in one language with no further need for translation. And you and I could master "insert tab A into slot B" in Esperanto.

Anyone who has ever studied a language — including English has been frustrated by the rules and exceptions. Esperanto doesn't have any. Well, hardly any.

There are 16 grammar rules. No exceptions. Two pronunciation rules: Letters are pronounced in one fixed way, and the accent is always on the second-to-last syllable. Nouns end in 0, adjectives in

A, adverbs in E. Are you ready? Napolitan got interested in Esperanto a few years ago when she completed a master's degree and was looking around for new challenges. She took some correspondence courses, then got in touch with some Detroit-area Esperantists for monthly conversational meetings.

"Most of us aren't proficient enough to say everything we want to say," she admitted. "But it's a challenge to try.

Napolitan majored in Spanish in college, but doesn't believe that knowledge gave her a leg up in Esperanto. She said she has only a reading knowledge of Spanish.

"The nice thing about Esperanto is that it's non-political and nonreligious. It's competely neutral. It puts all parties on an equal footng,'' she said.

She confesses she doesn't see a future for Esperanto as a world language. For her, its allure is that, using the worldwide directory of Esperantists, a traveler can visit any country and make contact with someone who can speak the same language.

'The basics can be taught in a short time," she said. "It doesn't take 10 years to learn to say hello to somebody.

Local nurse to help the needy in Honduras

By Elsa Frohman

Rhonda Grimshaw of Grosse Pointe Park is embarking on the adventure of a lifetime next week. Through Medical Group Missions, a cooperative project of the Christian Medical Society and the Luke Society, she will travel to Honduras and provide medical care for the poor people of that country. Grimshaw is a registered nurse. She works in the intensive care unit at Mount Carmel Hospital. She is using all her vacation time to spend a month in Central America, but that isn't all. She must pay her own way to get to Honduras and must bring all her own medical supplies to use once she gets there.

"It's all out of your own pocket," she said. "You bring your own equipment and supplies. It's quite a hunt to get people to volunteer.

Grimshaw will be working with a dentist on the project. She will be administering oral anesthesia and doing suturing after oral surgery.

Farms makes committee appointments

The Farms council made several committee appointments at its Jan. 20 meeting.

Alfred Glancy III was appointed to the Economic Development Corporation to replace Robert Stewart, who moved out of state. The EDC is responsible for encouraging business develop-ment through the use of lowinterest loans.

To fill the office of city prosecutor, vacated when former prosecutor Peter O'Rourke was elected municipal judge, the council appointed attorney Matthew R. Rumora. Rumora is a resident of the City and maintains a practice in St. Clair Shores.

Eileen Dossin was reappointed to the Board of Review. She has served on the board since 1974. The board meets each March to give residents the opportunity to question or dispute their property tax assessments.

The dentist she will be working with is the person who got her interested in the project. He has a practice in Grand Rapids, but has been going to Honduras to help the people there whenever he can. "They have projects throughout the year," she said. "You can go down for two weeks or 10 days or whatever you can give.'

Medical Group Missions has projects through Mexico, the Dominican Republic, Honduras and Guatamala. Medical personnel from all over the United States donate their time and supplies for the projects.

"There is a 100-pound limit (on luggage) going over," she said. 'But most of my space will be taken up with supplies for the people already down there. I'm bringing antibiotics and gauze.

Grimshaw has been soliciting for donations of medical supplies for the trip. Her employer, Mount Carmel Hospital, has been a major contributor, but other local individuals and businesses have helped out.

While in Honduras, the project personnel will live in tents and boil the water from the local public water hole to drink. There will be no electricity. Grimshaw is taking her own sleeping bag.

"I think it will be real interesting," she said. "It will make me appreciate what we have here. We are such a wasteful society and they are in such great need.

For Grimshaw, the trip has a double significance. On one hand, she will be helping people who can-not help themselves. But she'll also be helping herself. She plans to attend nurse-anesthetist school when she returns and hopes to gain valuable experience in administering anesthesia while on the project.

"I'll be learning anesthesia and suturing," she said. "There are things I will do there that I wouldn't get the opportunity to do

Grimshaw said she isn't worried about the unrest in Central America.

The fighting is awfully close, but it's not in Honduras, yet," she said. "I know in my heart that I want to do it. I can't imagine it being a bad experience.'

She hopes to make this the first of many trips to help people in third world countries.

"I want to continue to go each year," she said. "More frequently if possible. A lot of people are afraid for me to go, but it'll take a lot of discouragement down there for me to decide not to go back."

Grimshaw is a 1979 graduate of South High. She took her nursing training at the University of Michigan, Wayne State University and Mercy School of Nursing. She lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grimshaw, in Grosse Pointe Park.

Anyone who would like to make a donation to her trip can contact the Grimshaws at 818 Trombley, Grosse Pointe Park. She will be gone from Feb. 1 through March 1.

Rhonda Grimshaw will spend the month of February in Honduras, giving medical care to the poor people there. Members of the medical mission must provide their own supplies and equipment for the project.

City extends taxi program

The Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority and Grosse Pointe Woods signed a contract last week that will extend the city's subsidized taxi-cab program into its fourth year.

Under the contract, approved for signing Monday night, Jan. 20, by the city council, SEMTA will use $8,889 from the Woods' $18,814 of municipal credit funds to subsidize the program, which pays the first $3 of cab fare for city residents over age 60 or with physical handicaps when they use Shamrock Cab Co.

The $8,889 will pay for 2,963 trips, according to the contract.

The subsidized cab program was begun by the city in November 1982. Originally, the program paid the first $2 of a fare for residents aged 65 and over. When ridership failed to pick up, the city council increased the subsidy and changed the age requirements, adding as well the provision for those with handicaps.

Currently, the program averages about 170 riders during the summer and more than 230 a month in the winter. Last November, 282 residents called for the service, the most since the program was first begun, according to city officials.

In coming weeks, the city will sign a contract with the cab company after council approval.

Under the program, residents of the city age 60 or older and handicapped of any age may call Shamrock at 777-1111 to arrange for the ride. The $3 subsidy is for a one-way trip and is enough to pay for short trips throughout the city. Proof of residency is re-

Businesses learn to communicate goals

By Nancy Parmenter

Japanese business acumen is by now legendary, but there's nothing magic about it. In fact, there could be a strong element of luck. Fifteen years ago when the Japanese economy was slow, a blue ribbon panel searched its collective soul for solutions and targeted some of the very systems Americans so admire today.

"They drew up a list of failures contributing to the poor economy,' said Glenn Mazur, president of Japan Business Consultants. "What were they looking at? The same items we now try to imitate: group decision-making, the ability of one person to stop the assembly line (for quality control). Don't think everything Japan does is per-

Japan's much-admired business system doesn't even pertain throughout the economy, Mazur told a business seminar audience Jan. 22. Only a few of the largest industries care for their employees from cradle to grave or practice quality circles. For the most part business is as top-down as it is here," Mazur said.

But American companies have a lot to learn about doing business with the Japanese. Our habit of moving in when the economy looks good and moving out again when costs get too high or the economy sours earns us nothing but black marks in Japanese eyes, according to Mazur.

The Japanese are loyal customers once you get their business, but time is an important element in getting it in the first place. 'Japanese selling techniques require close personal relationships that take years to establish," he said. "American salespeople have two strikes against them: They don't know the language or the culture, and they don't have any con-

American companies have a hard time recruiting Japanese staff because of our reputation for backing out when conditions become adverse.

'You don't do business in Japan that way — they remember it, they resent it, and you'll pay for it 'til Kingdom Come. In the Japanese market, you've got to be more tenacious.

Backing out "causes everybody down the line to lose face," Mazur said. This only compounds hiring problems. Japanese young people are programmed to want to work for Japanese companies. As soon as they graduate, they try to land a position with a large corporation that will last a lifetime.

U.S. companies tend to be social misfits and opportunists," Mazur said. "They won't have the stature

Getting ready

Personnel problems aside, corporation trying to set up business contacts with the Japanese. After the initial contact is made, take a well-prepared, professional team, preferably the same size team the Japanese business plans to field.

Women are generally not included in the very important afterhours socializing where much of the real business gets down. Women's rights to the contrary, Mazur advises that a firm's initial contact be made by a man. "It's likie 'Remington Šteele' — you need a man for a front," he said. 'Japanese men don't take women as seriously.

Much of Mazur's advice centered on the exchange of gifts. He recommends that a gift for everyone on the opposite team be selected with an eye to rank and the size of the impending deal. Make them nice ("no tacky company logo stuff") and wrap them. "I have seen a company bring out a box of mugs and hats and say 'go to it,' " he said.

Gift-giving in Japan is a form of "mutual bribery" or way to obligate people. "It's not to celebrate a birthday or anniversary," Mazur said. "It's more like I owe you and I don't want that obligation hanging over my head."

When Mazur first lived in Japan, following his student days at University of Michigan, where he majored in Japanese language and culture, he got his first taste of the gift-giving ritual. He was living in an apartment building and accepted delivery of a package for a

Mazur said he had no way to Mazur had some pointers for the cook them, so he gave them to his landlady, who, within a few hours, was at his door with another gift. "I finally understood," he said, "that nobody wants to be obligated to a foreigner."

Market research is often overlooked by otherwise sophisticated companies, Mazur said. Companies should analyze the market to assess needs and determine what variations might be required (metric measurements, for example) and be prepared to commit funds for product testing and promotion.

And it doesn't hurt to get some advice from an insider. According to Mazur, Procter and Gamble has been pushing Cheer for 20 years with any luck because its message that Cheer cleans brighter than the competition doesn't cut with the Japanese, who want data, not com-

Translations should be done by an expert. Mazur advises having it done "as close to the top as possible." If you hand a Japanese company an English brochure, they will have to translate it in any case, so it is better to have it done beforehand to maintain some control over the contents. Mazur told a "horror story" about a company that had a brochure translated by a company administrator's neighbor's exchange student's father. who couched it in corner pub style, opening with the Japanese equiva-

Academy looks to the future in the Early School addition

The proposed addition to the Early School at the Grosse Pointe Academy should be in the flesh by the time school starts in the fall. The plan was granted final approval by the Farms council Jan.

The plans have been on the drawing board since early in 1984 and have just now been enabled by a gift of $500,000 from the Michael Timmis family in memory of their daughter, Laura, according to Academy Headmaster Dr. Sidney

The 4,680 square-foot new addition will provide space for a gymnasium, a classroom and an activities room. Because the Early School is a Montessori school, all of the learning consists of directed activities, Dupont said. The activities space will be used for art, music, environmental science and

The addition is only part of a plan which will eventually include renovation and restoration of the school's main building as well. J. Michael Kirk, a Detroit-area restoration architect, is responsible for the overall plan.

Kirk's best-known work includes the restoration of the Menominee County courthouse and the office project for the Kresge Corporation headquarters on Big Beaver Road, which incorporated a century-old farmhouse into the office center. He recently prepared the master plan of the theater district on Woodward in Detroit, which includes the renovation of the Fox and the Palms theaters.

The academy buildings are in the Arts and Crafts style, Kirk said. The style, which reached a peak in Detroit, is typified by the look of the English cottage, with pitched roofs, leaded glass windows, glazed tile, and brick.

"The addition tries to use that style," Kirk said. "The peaked roof picks up the lines of the other buildings.'

The original architect of the academy was William Stratton, husband of Pewabic Pottery founder Mary Chase Stratton. Among the options the school is considering for the new addition is the use of new or original Pewabic tile on the walls or floors to carry out the tile theme of the existing building.

"We have been assured of a gift of Pewabic tile from Stroh's Brewery," Dupont said. The addition will be the first construction on the academy property since 1927 and will eventually allow for an enrollment increase of 25 to 30 pupils. "It will move us from being one of the finest preschools in the area to one of the best in the nation," Dupont said.

It will be built on what is known as "the grove," but Dupont said only five trees will be removed. The grove contains silver maples, the same trees that line "the nuns walk." They are nearing their life expectancy and will be replaced by sugar maples, which Dupont said will still be witnessing academy activities three centuries from

Bon Secours saves money with new short-stay unit

By Nancy Parmenter

It's too soon to know the benefits in exact dollars, but the new short-stay unit at Bon Secours looks so far like it is accomplishing its goal of saving money.

Cheryl Herba, assistant administrator of nursing, said an internal evaluation completed recently indicates that costs are down for the 18-bed unit established in August. A complete study will be done within two months.

A decline in patients that all hospitals are experiencing led Bon Secours to establish a task force to assess cost-saving op-tions. Data already showed that hospital use was down during weekend periods.

'That's because a lot of insurers won't pay for a weekend stay if the hospital isn't doing something for the patient," Herba said. In other words, there's no sense checking into the hospital early for surgery scheduled on Tuesday, unless there is a medical reason for being there.

The task force looked at what other hospitals are doing to economize and studied patients to see what patient population they could "capture" for the proposed unit. Some hospitals are using spare rooms for overnight stays and even "guest" accommodations at minimal charge, but Bon Secours officials found no hospitals using exactly the same pro-

Most of the patients in the shortstay unit are surgery patients who do not require long-term hospitalization. The unit is open from Sunday noon to Friday afternoon.

five or fewer days in the hospital, according to new government guidelines regulating payment for hospital stays, Herba said. By Friday afternoon, usually only three or four patients remain; they are transferred to another unit.

Patients may request placement in other units if they wish, Herba said. No one is required to stay in the short-stay unit. The cost to the patient (or his insurance company) and the care received are the same no matter what unit a patient is assigned to. The savings in staff reduction accrues to the hospital.

The unit closes down completely at 3:30 p.m. on Fridays. No nurses are assigned to weekend duty. No housekeeping is needed. Pharmacy, meals and other services which continue to operate in the hospital do not need to serve that unit. The lights are turned off. Herba said the savings to the hospital should be substantial.

welcome announcement

Now it's official. Rep. William R. Bryant Jr. of the Pointes has filed for reelection and will seek his 9th term in the state House of Representatives this year. It is good news for the Pointes and the people in this community he has served so well for so many years.

As he said in his column in the Grosse Pointe News last week, Bryant last year flirted with the idea of running for the GOP nomination for governor but decided against it. "The difficulties of having two moderate Republican candidates from Wayne County, plus the all-star media status of Lucas, led me to conclude 1986 was not the best time," he wrote.

But that was not the only reason for his decision. He added that he was not certain he could force himself to do the incredibly onerous work of a lengthy statewide campaign. Then he went on to explain that the governorship had appealed to him because he feels "we need to move into a new, more cooperative era of leadership in Michigan and elsewhere, and I felt I might provide that in a more visible way as governor.'

In fact, of course, Bryant often provided that kind of leadership while serving in the House as the Republican leader and currently as a member of the important House Taxation Committee. He, for example, recently proposed an income tax compromise that was acceptable to both Republicans and Democrats in the House as well as to Senate Democrats. Senate Republicans, however, refused to go along at that time but now seem to be moving toward acceptance of Bryant's plan, which would cut the rate back to 4.6 percent by April 1 or earlier if optimistic revenue estimates prove to be correct.

Bryant has given up his ambition to be governor, at least for the time being, but he made it clear he would consider running for speaker of the House, assuming his reelection and the election of a GOP majority. The current GOP leader, Rep. Mike Busch, already has announced he is not seeking reelection.

In his column last week, Bryant also wrote his feeling about the opportunity to serve the public in these words:

"There is so much we can all do when we can manage to allow ourselves to function as seekers of truth, when we can bring ourselves to risk working to find better ways, when we can bring ourselves to commit to policies and processes which are more humane, which honor the individual and the great potential of individuals working together in a cooperative

"We are all, each of us, unique," he went on, and our views of truth tend to differ based on our inherent and experientially caused uniqueness, but there is far more common ground than we have yet found and utilized."

Would that other leaders would seek more of that "common ground" in their approach to Michigan's problems. Unfortunately, in an election year we appear to be seeing more emphasis of the differences that separate us than on the "common ground" that could unite us and provide more solutions to state problems and more answers to the state's questions.

Whatever happens to the Michigan state income tax rate in the negotiations between the Republicans and the Democrats in Lansing, the 1986 rate will be lower than the 1985 rate of 5.33 percent that taxpayers found on their 1985 income tax forms. That is one of the few good things to be said about the tiresome tax issue.

Actually that 1985 rate was never in effect for a single month as a specific rate. Instead, it is the rate for the year and is made up of the 5.35 percent rate that was in effect from January through November and the 5.1 percent rate that went into effect Dec. 1 through the elimination of the .25 percent surcharge dedicated to ending the state's deficit.

So all that the state now has left of the controversial 6.35 percent rate that went into effect in 1983 upon the recommendation of Gov. James Blanchard is the 5.1 percent rate currently in effect — but scheduled to drop back to 4.6 percent this year whenever the contending parties can reach agreement.

Just what the new date will be is still anybody's guess. Senate Republicans last week came up with a new compromise that would call for a Valentine's Day or Feb. 14 date to the rate back to 4.6 percent. Republicans seem to be attracted by holidays. Earlier they had proposed a rollback to Nov. 11, Veterans' Day in Michigan, or to Jan. 1, to provide a Christmas present to taxpayers.

Democrats including both the governor and House Speaker Gary Owen have supported a rollback to 4.6 percent as of March 31. Apparently they wanted to avoid another "holiday," meaning April 1, April Fool's Day, which might have controversial implications for lawmakers who have been playing political football with the tax rollback for more than a

i Z

State Rep. Lynn Jondahl, the East Lansing Democrat who heads the House Taxation Committee, called the Republican proposal "a beautiful sentiment" but expressed concern to reporters over whether the state could afford the rollback that early in the year.

Senate Republicans, however, still insist that the surplus for 1985 and revenues from 1986 will be more than sufficient to finance a rollback to 4.6 percent before the March 31 date demanded by the Democrats.

Senate Republicans are, in addition, proposing proerty tax relief for some senior citizens and some businesses. Under their plan, Michigan residents 65 years of age and older who own homes with a state equalized value of no more than $65,000 would not have to pay school operating taxes. Blanchard also proposed additional property tax relief for about 500,000 more households but in addition wanted higher taxes on banks, insurance companies and capital gains.

In the meantime, Wayne County Executive William Lucas, who is expected to announce the formal start of his campaign for the GOP nomination for governor in February, is proposing to cut the state income tax to 4 percent or less. He hasn't said, to date, what additional cuts he would make in state services but, in fact, has proposed additional spending on new prison space which would increase costs.

Some people may wonder why it is that the state income tax issue prompts so much controversy in Michigan. One reason is obvious. It provides the state with its largest single source of revenue, about one-third of revenue from state sources, while the sales and use taxes account for about 23 percent and run in second place. Another reason the income tax is controversial is that the rates can be changed by the Legislature. The sales tax rate is fixed in the Constitution and a referendum would be required to change it.

Even after the two parties agree on a compromise date for returning to the 4.6 percent rate, the public might as well get accustomed to the continuation of talk about income taxes. This is an election year and, weary as most people are of the income tax rate issue, it will be argued and debated, especially by the Republicans, until next November.

Saving lives in the Pointes

In 1985, not a single auto accident fatality was reported in the Grosse Pointes even though the number of accidents rose in four of the five incorporated communities.

That encouraging finding was one of the facts revealed in a Detroit Free Press survey of traffic accidents and fatalities on the east side in 1985. Representatives of the State Police and the Traffic Association of Macomb County agreed, according to the Free Press survey, that increased use of seat belts, required by law since July 1, helped reduce the traffic fatality toll on the east side.

Only the Shores reported a decline in the number of accidents — from 79 to 69 — in 1985. In other Pointes, accidents rose from 238 to 253 in the City, from 408 to 485 in the Farms, from 278 to 362 in the Park and from 226 to 280 in the Woods, 1985 was the second year in a row in which the Woods escaped auto traffic deaths, while each of the other Pointes had recorded one fatality in 1984 before reporting a clean slate in 1985.

The east side survey results correspond to those in the state as a whole since the mandatory seat belt use law became effective July 1. The Michigan Coalition for Safety Belt Use reported that traffic fatalities declined by 19 percent in December compared with the same month a year earlier and by 11 percent for the six months after the safety belt use law became operative compared with the same period in the

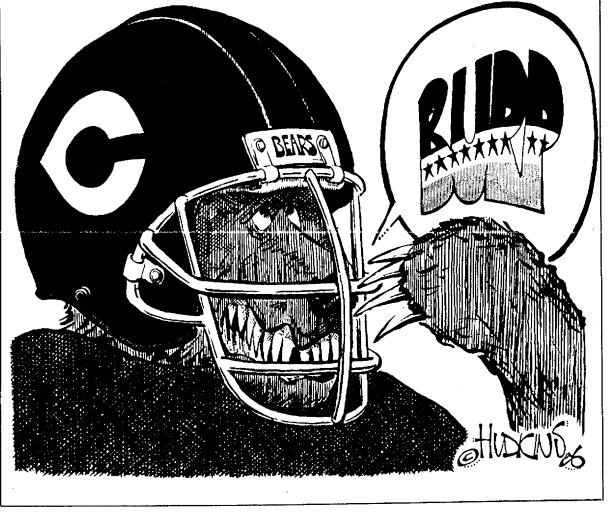

It is true that some Michigan residents still oppose the mandatory seat belt use law on the grounds that it requires an unwarranted state interference with individual freedom. Yet in this instance as in many others, controls are imposed in the interests of serving the general public. Furthermore, requiring the use of seat belts can be regarded as a logical extension of other state and federal traffic and other safety requirements.

The state and/or federal governments earlier had required motorists to obey traffic signals, speed limits, vehicle emission testing regulations, vehicle and driver licensing orders, and even safety equipment requirements, including such essential items as lights, brakes, rear vision mirrors and turn signals. Such regulations were imposed to protect lives, enhance the environment and in general maintain more orderly and safer traffic patterns on our streets, roads and highways. Surely the mandatory seat belt use law can be justified on the same grounds.

To the Editor:

I read with interest your editorial with which I agree that there appears to be little reason for a special election to override the decision of the City Council of Grosse Pointe Park which unanimously approved a Public Safety Department.

In the same edition is a letter from a firefighter urging citizens to sign the petition being circulated by the firefighters' union in opposition to public safety.

The point urged by the fire-fighter, with which I disagree, is that anyone who disagrees with putting the issue of public safety on a ballot referendum is somehow being undemocratic. Nothing could be further from the truth. In a democracy voters elect representatives whose views and judgment they trust. Important issues are decided all the time by elected representatives. To do otherwise is to

The subject matter of public safety has been examined over a two-year period by a well-educated and informed citizens committee which carefully reviewed the arguments of the firefighters as well as proponents of public safety. Ultimately, the issue was reviewed by the city council. Deliberations of the city council (at least speaking personally) in part were persuaded by the views of the citizens committee, the report of city management and the projections regarding the financing of the public safety program which were reviewed by the city's auditing firm of Coopers & Lybrand. Based upon our best judgment, we voted unanimously in favor of the consolidation of the Police and Fire Departments into a Public Safety Department.

If I were confronted at my doorstep with a person urging me to sign the petition, I would not do so as I do not believe a referendum is necessary. Even if I were disposed to signing petitions in general (which I am not) I would first inquire as to whether the person presenting the petition was actually a fireman from Grosse Pointe Park. If he were not from Grosse Pointe Park, I would politely close the door. I do not understand what firemen from Harper Woods are doing in Grosse Pointe Park seeking a referendum. If public safety is a danger to a community, why aren't the firemen of Harper

Woods going door to door in Grosse Pointe Shores and Grosse Pointe Woods, which have had consolidated departments for many years? If the person at the door were a Grosse Pointe Park fireman, I would inquire as to why he doesn't believe the concept will work in Grosse Pointe Park yet it works well in Grosse Pointe Woods, Grosse Pointe Shores and many other Michigan communities.

Make no mistake about it. The current referendum drive by the firefighters will inhibit proper management of the City of Grosse Pointe Park if the referendum is passed. If passed, the referendum would rigidly prevent the consolidation of two departments which would be the only departments which the city could not consolidate. This makes no sense from any standpoint.

Before considering signing, our citizens should make sure that they understand the facts. The city has had many public meetings and forums on the subject and, undoubtedly, will continue to have many in the future. I would urge each citizen who is truly concerned regarding the subject to find out more facts before signing the pe-

Young people are concerned

To the Editor:

Sengstock's essays were her sincere witness to what she saw in Nicaragua — a thoughtful report.

In the Yale Magazine of December 1985 came these lines in the section called "Class Notes" from students of the class of 1982 telling it "like it is:" "Peter drafted me for Senator Inouye's softball team and we spent a very fast summer catching up after two years of not being roommates. I then left D.C. for Central America, where I spent a week in Honduras and a week in Nicaragua. On the way I saw K.M. in New Orleans, where she's organizing hotel workers under very tough conditions. Regarding Central America I'm sorry to report to all you hard liners out there that the U.S. presence is not bringing peace, and that our president will have to invade Nicaragua if he wants to try The young people of today have much to tell us. Miss Kathleen to make them say 'uncle.' Don't all run too fast to enlist, ok? . . . The is strong especially in Nicaragua. In Honduras I saw B.B., '84, who's working with women's cooperatives through the Peace Corps. In Nicaragua I saw journalist M.A. and B.O., '83, but missed P.R., '83, who was helping to organize the agricultural reform near the Honduran border. Other Yalies here are involved in health care and documentation of the revolutionary process. I am now in Rio for the next six months (hopefully) on a University of Texas scholar-

From what is quoted above, it can be seen that we "old fogies" need not despair about the future if "the kids" of today are so genuinely concerned about building a better world.

U.S. Savings Bonds correction

To the Editor:

The Jan. 9, 1986 issue of the Grosse Pointe News carried an advertisement for U.S. Savings Bonds. The advertisement said these bonds are now paying 10.94 percent.

These bonds ceased paying 10.94 percent on May 1, 1985, and are currently paying 8.36 percent.

Since this advertisement appeared as "a public service" of the Grosse Pointe News, I believe your intent is to give correct and useful information to your subscribers. Suggestion: In the earliest possible issue of the Grosse Pointe News you run another ad of the same size showing with equal prominence the fact that "U.S. Savings Bonds now paying 8.36 percent.

And thank you for the spirit that prompts you to run these public service advertisements.

Woods should get new leaders

To the Editor:

Two articles in the Jan. 16 Grosse Pointe News prompted me to write this letter; the front page article on high water by Nancy Parmenter and the marina article on page 6-A by Walter Nikesch. This is an extension of a situation in the Woods that started with high water in 1973 and continued for 16 years with no resolution. While other lake shore communities have been improving boat dock facilities, the Woods City Council has been sitting on their hands debating the issue and doing nothing. Each year more docks in the Woods Park cannot be rented because the low bridge obstructs boat passage. This year it looks as though all 156 docks south of the bridge will be vacant. This is a deplorable situation since boat docks are impossible to find anywhere in this area; there are 1,156 registered boat owners in Grosse Pointe Woods and many have been on the waiting list for years.

Mr. Petersen, the ever creative City Manager, is telling all Woods boaters to look elsewhere for boat dockage this year due to high water. This passive attitude has prevailed for 16 years and Mayor Freeman has done nothing whatsoever to solve the problem. Since 1973, the Woods Boat Club, the Citizens Recreation Commission and various individuals have prepared many proposals to raise or relocate the bridge; several negative council members including John Sabol and George Freeman have voted against every single proposal!

In July 1980, there was an "open window" for a solution and it was quickly closed by Mayor Freeman. The Council approved a Citizens Recreation Commission proposal to move the bridge but Mr. Freeman added a requirement that 56 vacant docks be spoken for through a signed "letter of intent" from boaters who wished dockage. At the time, there were several hundred residents waiting for boat docks so this added requirement served no purpose except to delay implementation of Council action. However, the Woods Boat Club coordinated a mailing to residents and returned 177 signed letters of intent to the Mayor. These "letters of intent'' included a commitment by the boaters to pre-pay one year's dock rental fee to help fund bridge re-construction. The balance of funding would come from increased dock rental fees over a seven year period with no city or tax funds involved. After Mr. Freeman's added requirement was met, he then imposed a third requirement; he requested the issue be included as a ballot item in the November 1981 election. This, of course, delayed implementation of Council action another Results of the November 1981 elections were positive; the general public voted in favor of resolving the boat dock issue and to date, no action has been taken on the proposal approved by the Council in July 1980. This is the core point of the recent Grosse Pointe News article written by Walter Nikesch.

The people of Grosse Pointe Woods are sick and tired of continued delays through lack of leadership in City Hall. I predict that the negative thinking and passive Council members will be replaced by those who are more orientated toward resolving these long standing problem issues. In the 1985 November election, Councilman John Sabol was voted out of office for his continued negative position. Mayor Freeman was re-elected only because he ran unopposed. I think the people of Grosse Pointe Woods should demand leadership action from Mayor Freeman or remove him from office.

Women can blame it on Eve

To the Editor:

The Grosse Pointe News was criticized by one Dawn Van Hoek for "persisting in identifying mar-ried women by their husbands" names." She promptly nullified her complaint by signing the letter using her married name (proving that she really wanted society to recognize her marriage).

She cited a Jan. 9 Grosse Pointe News article headlined "Herbig and wife . . . " and contended that his wife's name should have been shown as Jutta Czapski, in recognition of her exploits outside of

To solve one of her sexist frustrations, the writer might consider rescinding her marriage since the normal marital vow to love, obey and "honor" her husband (including his name) was a fraudulent trick of a male chauvinist God. She could then revert to her maiden name or hyphenate it, as some are wont to do — or even change it to Dangerfield and receive some social sympathy. If she and other distaffers of a similar inclination could find a Bible and open it to Genesis 3:15, they would find that God, in the beginning, established marriage and the family. Because of Eve's disobedience she would bear children in pain and "thy desire shall be to thy husband and he shall rule over thee." (You are welcome, Mr. P.J. Van Hoek).

But, then, N.O.W. we know that marriage is more respected than ever and the family is more solid. than ever — and that God's Word is NOT true.

To the Editor:

This response is in reference to your editorial "That Holiday Airport Scam," published on Jan. 2.

Metropolitan Airport recorded a record 15.5 million passengers in 1985, making it the 12th busiest airport in the United States.

A consulting firm, which recently studied Metropolitan Airport's future needs, recommended major expansions to include additional parking facilities. Presently, there are approximately 10,126 available parking spaces.

Politics play no part in this dilemma. Your assumption that the tow truck owners are making contributions to my campaign funds is grossly incorrect.

of thought on the American chestnut and they're both wrong.

There are those who believe that the tree is extinct. They are countered by those who confuse the tree with the horse chestnut and think they see it everywhere.

In actuality, the tree, which many thought was wiped out in the early part of this century by an imported blight, still exists in much of its natural range and outside it as an introduced tree. But just

That bush that keeps sprouting in your back yard may be a chestnut. Grosse Pointe lies within the tree's natural range, which extends over much of the eastern United States and along the edges of the Great Lakes — and was spreading before the blight hit. The blight laid it so low that it is now on the list of endangered native Michigan trees — and as such, it is against the law to cut it down.

The mighty chestnut once grew to a height of 120 feet with a dia-

There are two prevalent schools meter of 12 feet and lived for centuries. Some of the trees in the approximately 30 Michigan groves are 150 years old. Most of them are on the western side of the state, planted outside of the natural range by farmers.

"It's really a wonderful tree," said Dennis Fulbright, an associate professor of botany and plant pathology at Michigan State University, who has been conducting research on chestnut blight since 1979. "The wood is pretty, it's decay resistant, it grows a good crop of nuts every year and gives you shade in the summer. What more could we want?

What we could want is a cure for chestnut blight. Although it has been studied for 20 years, treatment is not yet available commercially as it is for Dutch elm disease. It isn't any more reliable than elm treatment, either. 'If we do our job right, we'll find a cure," Fulbright said. "There's a cure out there. But right now

Chestnut blight differs from elm blight in that it attacks the bark and eventually girdles the tree, as opposed to invading the tree's vascular system as the elm disease does. The result is that the chestnut only dies down to the ground, leaving the root system intact to continue producing new growth, which in turn is blighted. But both diseases are caused by a fungus. and both spread rapidly.

"Lots of people try to extra-polate and say that maybe we can control Dutch elm (as we treat chestnut blight)," Fulbright said. 'Some researchers are trying to transfer the virus to the elm

The virus in question attacks the chestnut fungus, weakening it and giving the tree a second chance. It was discovered in Italy in the 1950s, when dying Italian chestnut groves began to recover. The naturally occurring virus so weakened the chestnut fungus that the Italian chestnut industry has revived and now exports 10 million pounds of nuts to the U.S. yearly, Fulbright said.

The same thing has happened in Michigan, but studies have showed that the virus is different.

"What's happening in Michigan is unique to Michigan," said Ful-bright. "The fungus has been debilitated on two continents by two different viruses.

Fulbright began collecting the "hypovirulent" or sick fungus from Michigan trees and is now growing it in the laboratory. In a study on the spread of the disease at Chimney Corners near Frankfort, he is injecting the weakened fungus into the rapidly dying grove of 2,000 chestnuts.

"Nature has given us a treatment," he said. "We can treat them and extend their life, but we can't stop it from occurring

Fulbright drills holes in the bark around the orangeish, sunken canker and injects the infected fungus. It all goes well, the healthy fungus will soon be infected too. Sometimes, however, the genetics of the two fungi are not compatible we're just focusing on trying to and they refuse to fuse, thus understand it." and they refuse to fuse, thus thwarting transmission of the

> "It's a dilemma," Fulbright said. "The fungus has to be weak and sick enough not to fill the tree, but healthy enough to grow (as it can infect the other fungus). If it's too sick, we have to keep repeating the treatment because it won't spread."

There is an organized program in the state to reintroduce the tree. The soil conservation district in the Cadillac area collects chestnuts, gives them a good start and distributes seedlings.

"They'll probably die," is the pessimistic view of Fulbright, who nevertheless supports the program. The fewer chestnuts there are in a neighborhood, the greater the chance that they will survive. If everyone on the street sends for a seedling, survival chances are decreased, but still worth a try.

The chestnut is a thick-trunked, spreading tree like a sycamore and needs a large space to grow in. It will produce nuts in six to 12 years and will be "a very nice looking tree" in 15 years, according to Fulbright.

If you think you have a sprouting chestnut in your yard, you can identify it by the deeply serrated narrow leaves, which are shaped almost like holly leaves. The free resembles a beech, but has rounded buds. The chestnut burr is covered with thousands of cactuslike needles, unlike the horse chestnut burr, which has a few prominent spines.

People interested in getting on the list for a chestnut seedling may send a stamped, self-addressed envelope (39 cents postage) and $2 for the Wexford County Soil Conservation District, 3060 W. 13th St., Cadillac, Mich., 49601.

representatives of the Automobile Club of Michigan office at Bournemouth and Mack, Woods parking commission and St. John Hospital met recently to talk about how to cut traffic on Bournemouth while finding extra parking for the AAA building.

The parking commission has been working on changing the flow of traffic within the lot, behind J.C. Penney's in the shopping center, and it was a good time to work on addressing traffic that uses Bournemouth as a cutthrough from Moross and Harper to Mack, Woods Public Safety Director Jack Patterson said.

Since the matter first came before the city council and parking commission in November 1985, the public safety department assigned marked and unmarked cars to the area for traffic enforcement and visibility. While in the area, the department wrote 36 violations, according to city documents.

Twenty-two of the tickets were for stop sign violations, 10 for speeding and four others were miscellaneous moving violations, according to the department. The residence of violators included six from St. Clair Shores, 11 from Grosse Pointe, seven from Detroit and 12 from Harper Woods.

The department has found that traffic appears to come off Moross and down from Harper along Bournemouth.

The department asked that it be allowed to temporarily close the exit from the parking lot behind Penney's onto Bournemouth for about two weeks, after which more traffic counts will be taken to determine any change. Recommendations will come before the Woods council as soon as hospital officials have evaluated the proposals, according to the city.

A CHILD LEARNS THROUGH EXPERIENCE.

In the Montessori classrooms at The Grosse Pointe Academy Early School, you will not find the teacher's desk in front of the classroom. In fact, you probably can't figure out where the front of the classroom is. Our teachers (really called Directresses) simply do not have desks because we attempt to avoid a focal point of attention. Learning comes from the total classroom environment, the Practical Life area, the Sensorial Materials and the academic areas including reading, arithmetic, science, physical education and geography. To accommodate the variety of abilities of children and the diverse interests of learning stages, The Grosse Pointe Academy Early School classrooms are well stocked with structured Montessori materials and equipment. Students at age 3 are taught to take materials from "child height" shelves and return them when they are done. Activities and experiences include polishing shoes. cutting vegetables, pouring liquids, using dressing frames, arranging shortest to longest rods, color tablets, lightest to heaviest tablets, objects for feeling, musical instruments for sounds, and, of course, math manipulatives and alphabet letters of several varieties; for reading, spelling, phonics and writing. The classroom environment is creative, adventurous and spontaneous and children are encouraged to make decisions and solve problems.

How does learning take place? Our teachers interact by observing the children, demonstrating, recognizing the moment for intervention or readiness. Mistakes are, of course, permitted, and we believe that much is accomplished by self-correcting. Tom Peters, the author of In Search of Excellence and A Passion for Excellence and teacher at the Stanford University Business School, has a term for how a Montessori classroom is run. It is referred to as "M.B.W.A. - Management By Wandering Around." This theory of management surely works in business as Peters points out in his best sellers, and for 40 years it has been very effective in the Montessori classrooms.

Come and visit The Grosse Pointe Academy Early School. Watch our children and excellent teachers in action. It is not too late to involve your 3 to 5 year old in the experience that will form his/her learning base for a lifetime.

build a nearly 8,000-square-foot house on the lake hit a snag when several neighboring residents objected to the plans. The Grosse Pointe City Council, sitting as the Board of Zoning Appeals at the Jan. 20 meeting, granted two of the three variances Gebran S. Anton Jr. requested.

Anton, who owns a 14,800-squarefoot lot on 2 Sycamore Lane, was granted a variance allowing the house to cover 26.2 percent of the property. The ordinance limits lot coverage to 25 percent. The second variance approved by the board allows a proposed in-ground swimming pool to be excluded from the lot coverage requirement.

The third variance sought was for a second-story balcony that would project eight feet from the house facing the lake. The architects will resubmit plans for the

Farms audit shows surplus

By Nancy Parmenter

It's a little late, but the Farms has received an audit report on the fiscal 1985 budget, for the year ending June 30. The audit was prepared by Coopers & Lybrand. Comptroller Carrol Lock blamed the delay on staff changes in his department and at the accounting firm, but Mayor James Dingeman said the problem is chronic and asked that the firm be nudged to perform faster next

The city finished the year with a general fund budget surplus for the second consecutive year. Lock said it is not unusual to achieve a surplus and that it should not be regarded as a wind-

'The important thing is that we finished the year within the plans we started out with," Lock said Thursday. Whenever the Farms runs a surplus, it is calculated into the following budget and allocated to normal expenses, he

In June, the city anticipated a surplus of approximately $710,000 in the $5.2 million general fund budget and built it into this year's budget. The audit shows a surplus of $726,000 which remains undesignated.

"As long as we have surpluses, things will go smoothly," Lock said. "If you don't have a surplus, you have to get the money somewhere else." He said the surpluses have made it possible for the city to levy the same amount of tax for the last three years.

"It's like money in the bank and it gives you a cushion for un-expected things," Lock said. The audit covered all of the city's budget funds. The $1.4 million water and sewer fund registered a net gain of $32,000. "We didn't set any records, but it's better than a $32,000 loss," Lock said.

Other funds include two retirement funds, sidewalk and highway funds, and funds for the collection and disbursement of taxes owed to school, county and other government agencies. The Farms levies a 1 percent administrative fee for collection.

Summer of a lifetime awaits teens

The summer of 1986 can be the ummer of a lifetime for local mendous," Nicholson said. Among the rewards are improved language skills, greater adaptability and independence, an increased knowledge of the history and culture of another area of the world, and an awareness of one's role in the international community. In addition, 97 colleges and universities now offer scholarships for alumni of AFS programs.

The AFS summer program enables a teenager to spend eight to 10 weeks with a carefully selected host family in one of 70 countries. The "cultural immersion" - being welcomed as a member of a family — provides students with a more profound cultural understanding than that available from traditional travel and study programs.

AFS is a non-profit, non-governmental organization that is operated on the local level by trained volunteers. There are several additional summer program choices, including language study for college credit, an outdoor skills adventure program and community work projects.

Scholarship assistance is available. Sophomores, juniors and seniors in high school are eligible to apply. The deadline for applying is March 1. Applicants are interviewed and screened by a local selection committee to make certain they are capable of taking on the rigorous challenges of living in another culture.

MEAP scores up, down

Statewide averages on the Michigan Education Assessment Program tests in reading and mathematics for fourth-, seventh- and 10th-graders continued to rise in almost all areas, but local district scores were mixed.

The statewide results were released Thursday, Jan. 23, at five locations throughout the state. The statewide averages continued their steady increase from 1980, when the program's tests for reading and mathematics comprehension were redesigned.

While the state averages for students achieving acceptable scores on five of the six tests increased. Grosse Pointe students' scores on the seventh- and 10th-grade math and reading tests declined. Scores for the fourth-grade reading and math tests increased over 1984 and local scores remained well above state averages.

Locally, 84.9 percent of the tenthgraders successfully answered two of three questions in objectives on the mathematics test, down from last year's 87.3 percent. Reading scores also fell, to 94.4 percent from 96.6 percent last year.

The state assessment tests are given in all public school districts each year in late September and early October. The tests are meant to see what students have learned during their previous three years of schooling.

The testing program was established by the state Board of Education in the 1969-70 school year to give parents, the public and the legislature information on achievement by local students. The program tests all students in grades four, seven and 10 on basic skills in reading and math and periodically tests students in other sub-

| Tenth | 84.9 | 87.3 | 67.9 | 66.4 |

The scores reflect the percentage of students tested who correctly answered two of three questions in each of objectives contained in certain skill areas, like whole numbers or vocabulary meaning.

Statewide, fourth-graders averaged 79.3 percent on the reading and 83.6 percent on the math portions of the test, an increase of 1.0 and 1.6 percent respectively over last school year.

Locally, fourth-graders scored 92.6 and 93.5 on the reading and math portions of the test, an increase of 4.1 and 0.4 percent res-

All grade levels and tests showed improvement on the state level, except for the seventh-grade reading scores. The state average for seventh-graders successfully answering two of three questions on objectives in the reading test dropped slightly from 80.8 percent to 80.3 percent.

Locally, test scores in math and reading at the seventh- and 10thgrade levels declined. Seventhgraders scored 96.2 percent on the reading test, down from last year's 98.5 percent. Math scores for the grade fell from last school year's 87.9 percent to this year's 86.9 per-

This school year, health education was tested in about 250 school districts which volunteered to participate. A sample of students in grades four, seven and 10 took the test to assess the level of statewide achievement in the first testing of health education knowledge.

The assessment tests are meant to measure understanding of the student's grasp of basic skills in math, reading and health. Each objective, such as conversion of meters to centimeters for seventhgrade mathematics or understanding prefixes for the same grade in reading, is considered understood if the student answered two of three questions on the state test.

The test results can then be broken down for individual students, classrooms, schools and districts. Educators can use the results to determine student progress in certain basic skill areas in reading and math.

The results can also aid in curriculum development, since they are one indicator of how well the present curriculum works. The results should not be the sole determinant of curriculum or educational material, since they only review a limited number of skills students need in math and reading, according to the state Department of Education.

Prime time for senior citizens -

By Marian Trainor

Winter fun is just that for those who enjoy skiing the slopes, skimming like a graceful swan over the ice on skates, or sitting out on the frozen river with the chill wind attacking them from every angle, waiting for a fish to bite.

But for others, winter fun is a contradiction of terms. They find no enjoyment in cold weather and all that it brings; dark, frosty mornings, icy streets, cars that won't start. New fallen snow is pretty but it loses its charm when it has to be shoveled. A silver full moon, surrounded with twinkling crystal stars against a velvet blue night sky is lovely to look at if you are standing behind a window reinforced with storms. As for a weekend in Northern Michigan to see nature in full-dress winter splendor, just give them an airline ticket to Florida — return dated

The first gust of a north wind sends them scurrying inside only to venture out when absolutely necessary, such as to go to work, to replenish the food supply or to keep social engagements.

While watching winter sports on television, there are times they dream of such daring deeds as giving cross-country skiing a try, putting on a pair of skates or maybe just taking a long walk in the new fallen snow.

Hardier souls might even contemplate more daring adventures in winter's wonderland, maybe getting behind a dogsled in Alaska. braving a course that winds along a historic gold rush trail from Anchorage to Nome, breathing freezing cold air chancing unpredictable storms and encounters with moose. They see themselves mushing alone on a trackless, shelterless ice behind durable dogs, descendents of animals that came to North America with natives thousands of years ago. Now there is a real Walter Mitty daydream!

If it sounds too extreme, it could be modified. No need to go all the way to Alaska to indulge in makebelieve do-and-dare feats.

How about a make-believe trip to Aspen, Colo. for some real downhill skiing. The 8,000 foot altitude takes some getting used to, but after a day spent letting your lungs adjust, you are ready for the spectacular Big Birn, a mile wide and mile long course or the great chute-the-chute of Spar Gulch. Or you might want to think about vrooming over frozen hills and dales in mountains that even Indians abandoned to the cold in Vail, Coo. That is snowmobile country too. Snowmobilers invade white wonderlands to gaze on snowscapes few men have ever

There's more to this scenario. You might choose to sail across frozen lakes in a fiberglass boat in Laconia, N.H. or bobsled in the Adirondacks down a mile-long

All of these activities are exciting and fun to ponder but not to do. Dyed-in-the-wool, true winterhaters would never think of doing more than just think about it. They actively resist the lure of picturepost-card-pretty scenes of ski lodges nestled in snow-covered slopes looking out on lakes of frozen crystal.

When tempted they remind themselves how far away their feet are from the body's central heating system and how much chilblains hurt. They think of their poor old nose sticking out there turning redder and drippier as Jack Frost keeps nipping away. Ears are vulnerable too with their veins of ice.

Nonsense, you say? What about bundling up in wool, down and thermal wear?

For the dedicated arm-chair winter recluse, these are but temporary safeguards that only those with souls of Eskimos find comfort in. Winter hermits .nake use of them, but indoors to ward off drafts that sneak through unprotected cracks.

Besides, staying inside out of the elements in winter is like putting time in the bank for summer. All the projects that have been put aside so as to enjoy summer's munificence can now be completed. Now is the time to read that book that has decorated the coffee table since June, finish the afghan begun last winte, call a friend who is often remembered in thoughts but never in deed.

It's not the most fun in the world, but now is the time to clean closets. paint, wallpaper, clean the basement. Winter was made for such dreaded tasks.

The man-of-the-house never need fret against winter's inclement weather. There are numerous activities for him to enjoy. With football running into basketball, and both of them concurrent with hockey, and hockey and basketball hanging in until baseball season. there is enough visual action to keep him happy until winter melts into summer and golf clubs and tennis racquets can be dragged out and polished up for a summer on the courts and greens. For him, winter is also a time to score points as Mr. Fix-it. There is no better way for him to endear himself to the household than to repair all those little things that have gone wrong and have been called to his attention for many a day-little blood vessels turning to little week-month, chores then seem so small, but like the molehill and the mountain, have grown in perspective. A husband and father can be a giant of industry, he can be a leader of the community, he can be renowned and revered by all will are associated with him, but his star will never shine more brightly than the day he accomplishes all the household tasks that have been so long neglected.

Of all the excuses for staying out of winter's icy clusters, safe and warm in the comfort of heat radiating from radiators, space heates, electric blankets and every other warming device that can be turned on, is one that fast-forwards us to a time when haless, coatless, scarfless and bootless, we can step out into the sunshine in our own backyard which will be a living picture of fragrance and beauty and color. But it won't be there unless we plan it carefully and with due consideration. So while others shiver away their time out in the snow and cold, we Polly-sit-by-the-fire, will spend ours perusing garden catalogs and getting ready for better things.

We can see it now — the first heralds of summer, the green shoots breaking through the soil, later to break into purple and yellow miniature orchid-like blooms. Later they will be joined by masses of colorful begonias and spiky dahlias. There will be clusters of phlox and primrose and daisies and gorgeous sweetsmelling peonies and then will come summer's most beautiful offering — roses. One wishes he or she could buy and plant and care for every glorious promise of beauty in the books, but it is an impossible dream — gnetler, but somewhat like the one conquering winter's rugged wastelands.

Soupy's On!

He's still crazy after all these years

By Elsa Frohman

Soupy Sales is a bundle of barely suppressed energy. If he isn't up pacing the room, his answers to questions rattle out with the words tumbling over one another, zooming off in directions the interviewer never anticipated. But he isn't impatient. He responds with warm enthusiasm.

It is hard to believe that this is the same man who came to Detroit in 1953 to star in a noontime children's show. That was 33 years ago, and this Soupy Sales doesn't look more than a year or two older than the rubber-faced funny man in the crumpled top hat, ratty sweater and checkered bowtie. who entertained a generation of young people in the Motor City and the nation.

But this is the same Soupy Sales. He was in town last Friday to be honored at the annual Salute to Excellence for his role as an innovator in the golden age of televi-

No one seems exactly certain of when the golden age began and ended, but nearly everyone agrees that Soupy was there, in the thick of it, leaving his mark with a particularly screwball style of comedy.

"Lunch with Soupy" was a live production. Consequently, very little of the early show remains in a form that can be replayed on a television set. But thousands of people, now in their 30s and 40s, can quote chapter and verse. "Over the teeth and through the gums . . ." "Be true to your teeth and they'll never be false to you

" "Don't kiss, Blacktooth!" Soupy Sales wrote those lines and nearly every other word that was spoken on his programs. "You had do everything yourself in those days," Soupy said. "And if you didn't do good, there would be someone else on the air next week. It was a great learning experience. It was like going to school every day. You don't have that anymore today. There is nothing creative (in television). That's all missing. The only place you see it is in the new cable shows. TV was meant to be live. Clips," Soupy said, referring to the bits of old movies showing Indians goofs. Now it's so sterile. They even tell you when to laugh."

Soupy came to WXYZ-TV in Detroit in 1953, after starring in television shows in Cincinnati and Cleveland. His style and cast of loony characters was starting to develop. White Fang, the meanest dog in all of Deee-troit, was already a part of his repertoire, but not in the form that most Detroiters remember. He was considering throwing pies, but hadn't had free rein to use them.

White Fang came from the Basil Rathbone version of 'The Hound of the Baskervilles," Soupy explained. "It came off of an old V-disc," he said. "They were records that were sent out to the ships and bases for the men in the armed forces.'

Soupy adopted the sound effect of the howling hound for his invisible side-kick, White Fang. This was the White Fang that appeared in Detroit in 1953. He had been on the radio with Soupy since 1946 and was an off camera presence in Cincinnati and Cleveland.

Soon after Soupy went on the air in Detroit, a happenstance brought about the character that most people remember. The sound effect record carrying White Fang's howl was lost. A crew member, Clyde Adler, filled in by doing White Fang's gruff voice. One of the engineer's wives made the glove that became all that anyone saw of White Fang.

"We would never show the dog," Soupy said. "If we had had someone dress up in a dog suit, it would have been cute at first, but it would have lost its appeal. It was like the old days of radio, you had to use your imagination. It was the same with the man at the door.'

The man at the door made his debut in Detroit. Soupy's first set had a painted window and door. Soupy urged the producers to make the door and window open so he could have the puppets, Pookie and Hippy, and the man at the his man at the door gags.

The puppets, Pookie and Hippy, were Soupy's own invention - actually, there was only one puppet.

"I went to New York and had Pookie sculpted," Soupy said. "It cost me $500. Hippy was Pookie, inside-out.

Willy the Worm, the sickest worm in Dee-troit, who wished children happy birthday, was a simple toy. Unfortunately it was a cheap, poorly constructed toy that wore out regularly.

"We bought them three and four at a time," Soupy said. "But one day the producer came and told me that it was a tragedy. The company that made them had gone out of business. So Willy had to be sent to worm heaven.'

"Lunch with Soupy" was a nearly instant success in Detroit. 'Usually, it takes six months to tell if a show is going to be a hit," Soupy said. "But with us, it was one month."

Detroit loved Soupy, and it wasn't just the children. Adults insisted on turning the television to channel 7 everyday at noon.

"We had almost more adults that children watching," Soupy said. "We had a 19.9 rating and a 23.5 share. It was unheard of. We were on opposite Ding Dong School and Arthur Godfrey and nobody was watching them.

Soupy attributes his phonomenal success to the new style of comedy he was bringing to the small screen, which was still a wonderful new toy in most homes.

'Don't forget that kids in those days had never seen off the wall comedy, particularly directed at Soupy said. He also made his performances seem more personal by working close up to the camera. "It was like I was coming into your living room. It was like breaking down that fourth wall.'

Soupy's popularity with adults led to a night-time version of his show, on five days a week at 11 "I was meeting myself, coming and going," Soupy said. But that wasn't the end. He was soon doing a Saturday version of "Lunch with Soupy," that was broadcast nationally, originating in Detroit.

Soupy is proud of his firsts. He was host of a late night talk show, "Soupy's On," before Johnny Carson started doing the "Tonight Show." He was the star of the first national non-cartoon children's show. He was the first to use film Soupy was also a Grosse Pointer. He lived on Rivard, between St. Paul and Maumee. When his son, Tony, became critically ill with Stephens-Johnson syndrome, medical care at Children's Hospital saved his life. Soupy is still grateful to Children's.

"I was thrilled when they asked me to come back for this honor," he said. "Particularly because they saved my son's life. We thought we had lost him.

Soupy said he has wonderful memories of Detroit. He enjoyed swimming at the Grosse Pointe park at 5 a.m. before going to work. He mentions going to the movies at the Punch and Judy, and attending Grosse Pointe High School football games. He gives particular praise to the Sanders bakery counter at his local grocery.

"They had cinnamon raisin rolls you had to wear sup-hose on your head to keep from slapping your brains out," he said.
Soupy was the center of attention in Detroit in those days. Two mayors held "Soupy Sales" Days" in his honor. He caused a mob scene whenever he did a public ap-

But success hasn't eluded him since he moved on to the national spotlight. He has done movies, stage shows, television, radio and nightclub acts. War Memorial plans 29th music festival

Plans for this year's Summer Music Festival were formulated at the first SMF committee meeting, recently at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

An "Arts Festival" theme was decided upon by the committee, which is comprised of Alexander Suczek, artistic director, Johanna Gilbert, general chairperson and Harriet Lafer. War Memorial input was given by Executive Director Mark Weber; Jan Arndt, director of programming; and Gail McEntee, publicity coor-

This summer's festival will present a diversity of attractions from classical recitals to pop. A steel band, dixieland, folk music and light classics will be among some of the selections for the outdoor, lakeside concerts.

The Summer Music Festival was founded by Suczek and this year will celebrate its 29th season and quality presentations of professional musical performances, indoors, and on the lawn of the War Memorial. Thousands of people have participated in the yearly event, purchasing or supplying their own picnic suppers for the lawn, or enjoying the concerts in reserved seating.

Go south of the border for dinner tonight with a Latin touch

America by storm. Its flavors are both exciting and assertive. Its bright chillies, hot or mild — its tomatoes, red or green, can readily dispel the belief that Mexican foods are hot. Actually, the choice is in the hands of the chef and the taste preference of the individual. The essence of chili flavor, not the heat, should come through.

Many prefer to make their own tortillas while other prefer to purchase ready-mades from the expanding volume of products available in our markets. What ever your preference, the acquired tuste for Mexican cuisine is here *to stay. These ground beef specialties represent some javorites.

The following is a selection of recipes featuring a Mexican flavor, from the low-calorie, low cholesterol, budget wise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Mexican Enchiladas

Enchiladas are extremely popular with our neighbors across the border. The Mexicans have a penchant for well spiced dishes made from simple ingredients. Cornmeal tortillas can either be made at home or purchased in most supermarkets. Though the recipe may look complicated, it's really very easy and worth every bit of effort. The sauces can be made early in the day, or even the day before.

At the January meeting, the Grosse Pointe Jaycees donated the proceeds from home fire extinguisher sales to both Detroit Receiving Hospital's Burns Center and to the University of Michigan's Institute for Burns.

Through mail order sales held during Michigan Fire Prevention month, the group's third annual successful effort resulted in a 50/50 split of the proceeds between the two burns centers. Project chairman, Chuck La-Veglia, noted that because the home fire extinguisher sales were held in late autumn, many Grosse Pointe residents bought them as

Robert Weber: Growing with Kiwanis

By Elsa Frohman

Robert Weber of Grosse Pointe Shores marked 50 years as a member of the Kiwanis last December. He has held offices from president of the Detroit chapter of the international organization, to district governor in 1950, to president of the international organization in 1969-70, to his current post of vice president of the Kiwanis International Foundation. Next year, he will be the president of the foundation, the Kiwanis' fundraising

I've ever been in. From the day you join, it is a learning experience and builds confidence in leadership, speaking ability and getting along with people.'

Kiwanis International celebrated its 71st anniversary last week. The organization was founded in Detroit in 1915. Weber explained. He is a member of that original chapter, though Grosse Pointe has its own chapter which has provided the community with many good works over the years.

"It was founded by a group of friends as a business exchange club," Weber said. "The original idea was trading, but it developed into a group that developed projects in the Detroit area for the community, particularly the

But the organization was confined to just two countries until 1951 when it was organized throughout the world, Weber said. Today, there are 315,000 Kiwanians in more than ,500 chapters in 76 nations.

The Kiwanis Club was only 20. years old when Weber joined in December 1935.

and Loan, asked me to a Kiwanis lunch and I was asked to join,' Weber said. "I was impressed with the caliber of the businessman and professionals I was meeting. I deto serve my community, the nation and the world. At the time, Weber was involved in his family business, J.F. Weber Lumber and Real Estate. Over the years, his success in business was mirrored by his rise cided that this was an opportunity in the Kiwanis organization. Weber explained that each Kiwanis chapter chooses its own community service projects. The founding Detroit chapter furnishes fiber optic operating equipment to Children's Hospital, as well as providing volunteers, two days a week, to read textbooks for blind students through the Detroit public radio station. The group also furnishes special radios to the blind to receive the textbook broadcasts, and helped build and operate the Kiwanis Handicapped Center on the waterfront in Detroit.

"It is an opportunity to serve is the duty of every person to take some responsibility for others. throughout Michigan as a speaker for local chapters. That is a trait I probably got from my mother and father. It was a natural stepping stone. If I had to do it over, I would probably choose the same organization.

Though each local chapter chooses its own service projects, the international organization has a number of projects supported by all chapters. Most notable are the three youth organizations sponsored by Kiwanis. Key Club International, for high school students, has 150,000 members, making it the largest high school group in the world, Weber said. Circle K, the college organization, has 25,000 members, and the Builders, the newly established junior high school group, has 15,000 members.

'All are sponsored by the Kiwanis Club and all do social service in the schools and in the community," Weber said.

Weber's involvement in Kiwanis has meant many hours beyond the usual meetings. As international president in 1969-70, he had to take a year away from his work to travel to local chapters throughout the world as a speaker.

'Whatever business you're in, you have to have the leeway to give up a year to travel, (to be international president)" Weber said.

In traveling the world for Kiwanis, Weber found the clubs to be fundamentally the same wherever they were.

"Because of the good work that Kiwanis does, it is only natural for businessmen worldwide to band together," he said.

While Weber was international president, the Kiwanis Clubs launched a major offensive against the then growing problem of drug abuse among youth. Operation Drug Alert since has received support from other anti-drug cru-saders, including First Lady Nancy Reagan. The drug program was the major topic of Weber's international speaking engagements.

Today, Weber is concentrating on the fundraising end of the Kiwanis organization. As an officer of the foundation, he is involved finding bequests for the foundayour fellow man," Weber said. "It tion's endowment. He also travels

> In semi-retirement, Weber maintains a seat on the Standard Federal Executive Committee and is involved in a large number of community service activities, including the lay pastoral committee of Christ Church, through which he visits nursing home residents on a regular basis, the Boy Scout Advisory Council, the Grosse Pointe Township Board, The Grosse Pointe Shores Planning Committee, and the board of trustees of Olivet College. He is also a past president of Goodwill Industries and a past commodore of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

> He was also a member of the Grosse Pointe Board of Education for many years.

"Joining Kiwanis is what I did for Robert Weber," Weber said. "I gained a confidence in leadership and compassion and understanding. I have a desire to give a great share of my life to others. That is a part of my life I got from Kiwanis. I love to serve people.'

Cookie sale kickoff scheduled

More than 5,000 Girl Scouts kicked off the 1986 Girl Scout cookie sale on Saturday, Jan. 25, at the Fox Theatre in Detroit.

Activities began at noon and continued until 2 p.m. Saturday afternoon. The scheduled events included cookie tasting, door prizes, safari characters, cookie information and a free movie, "Jungle

This year's cookie sale is expected to generate 50 percent of Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council's annual operating income. Last year Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council, serving 26,000 girls in Wayne and southern Oakland Counties, sold more than 1.1 million boxes for a gross total of $1.2 million. Money from the sale is used to support a wide variety of programs to help girls develop the skills necessary to reach their potential as community leaders.

When "meaning well" gets lost in the translation

One of the most difficult columns I've ever written was one in which I criticized a certain element of athletics in Grosse Pointe: parents who may "mean well" but who go a little overboard. I must have gotten letters for months from people who called me an idiot (and a lot of things I can't print) for actually believing that parants would construct the second contract the second contract that the second contract the second contract that the second contract the second contract that the second contract the second contract the second contract that the second contract ents could cause a problem when everyone knows they merely have their child's best interest at heart.

So it's understandable that I sort of rolled my eyes and thought "no way" when a list of story suggestions crossed my desk. One idea was to follow a Wisconsin newspaper's lead and do a piece chastising parents of high school athletes for their "loud-mouth" behavior at games and practices. Sure, I said to no one in particular, just the thing to endear myself to legions of Grosse Pointe

Then I got a call from a local coach. We talked for a while, during which time he told me about a discouraging period he'd been through recently. Seems that the parent of one of his athletes had really put him through the mill, showing up at practices and shouting things at the coach, second-guessing his strategy, bad-mouthing him in front of players and fans, and behaving in a loud and abusive manner at most of the

The coach had put up with it for a long time, but even 12-year coaching veterans have their breaking points — after all, not every coach is a Tom Landry clone. In fact, this coach (who incident like had) this coach (who incidentally, has had coaching positions in three high schools) was just about ready to chuck it all and quit

By the time he got around to talking to me, he'd already decided to stick it out. Even so, the whole situation had just about taken all the firm out of acceptant he said taken all the fun out of coaching, he said. And he wasn't sure if he'd ever get rid of the bad taste in his mouth.

About all I could do was sympathize with the coach. After he hung up, I decided that I'd do a little research. How many other coaches had suffered through similar problems? And how did they handle it?

I've seen it myself: parents who make spectacles of themselves at games, yelling at officials, criticizing their kids' opponents and the opponents' coaches, finding fault with their own coach at the tops of their lungs. Most of the coaches I talked to had seen it happen too.

Now before people start calling or writing to tell me what an idiot I am and how such things can't happen in Grosse Pointe, let me say that I'm speaking of maybe 4 or 5 percent of the parents whose kids are involved in Grosse Pointe sports programs. And that means that 95 or 96 percent of the parents are great. They support both the kids and the coaches, help with sports fundraisers, fill the stands for games, assist in crowd control and in booster activities, and in general, are every coach's dream. And each coach I spoke to confirmed that fact.

But these parents also toil in anonymity, usually because they prefer it that way. What they do, they do for the kids and not for themselves, and that's the way it should

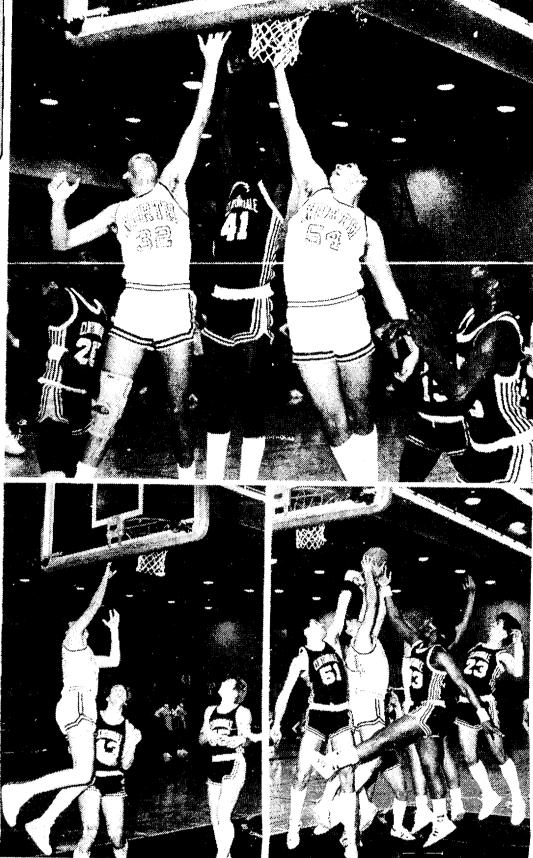

Unfortunately, the other group, the ones who do not suffer their real or imagined beets - with the coach, the athletic director, their kid, the system, whatever - in silence, are the ones who make life diffi-

So what's a coach to do about that 4 or 5

One coach I spoke to says he feels it's a matter of communication. He handles it by sitting down with such parents, talking or listening to them talk — things out. "Coaches always have one or two parents who think their kid is an all-star and should be in every game. You can never change the person who has an unrealistic view of their child's ability. But you can take time with them, hear them out. Most of the time, it helps. Sometimes, there are people you are just never going to get through to," the coach says. "The worst part of it is that often, their kids are just great. But they end up suffering just as much as the coach."

A former coach and athletic administrator recalls the battle she had with parents who accused her of favoritism. The lengths she had to go to to prove otherwise left her highly disillusioned. "I couldn't believe that these parents actually thought I could take the time out - in the heat of a game, mind you -- to stop and make sure my favorite kids got into the game. Sure it bothered me. It still does. But if you believe in your program you have to try not to let it get to you.

Not their night

The much-anticipated showdown between Bi-County League rivals North High and Clintondale didn't quite shape up to the down-to-the-wire thriller fans of the two teams have come to expect. The Dragons outshot and outrebounded the cold-shooting Norsemen to take a 68-36 victory Jan. 21 and get a leg up in the league standings. Above, that's Dave Bryer (32) and Tom Shehab (54) fighting for a rebound. At left, Mike Zrimec takes a shot and at right, Shehab tries in vain for a rebound in a crowd of Clintondale players. NCAA rule has little impact on Pointe athletes

By Peggy O'Connor

A controversial NCAA rule requiring freshman athletes at Class 1 schools to achieve a minimum grade point average hasn't had Grosse Pointe's senior athletes hitting the books any harder than usual

Rule 48, adopted at the recent NCAA convention in New Orleans and scheduled to go into effect in August, requires incoming freshman at Division I schools to com-pile at least a "C" average in high school and score at least 700 (out of 1,600) on their SAT tests.

A Grosse Pointe school system official says that while SAT results for Grosse Pointe's senior athletes are not available, it is believed that they are well above the required averages.

"I don't see the rule as having any impact at all on our students," says North High athletic director Tom Gauerke. "Sixty percent of our students have averages of 3.0 or better and as I think of kids who will go on to college sports, I just don't see it effecting any of them."

South High athletic director Chuck Hollosy agrees. 'As far as the 'C' average and the SAT scores, the kids who are recruited from South score so much higher than those averages.

Athletic administrators at Grosse Pointe's non-public high schools — University Liggett and Our Lady Star of the Sea — are also in agreement. Very few of the athletes at ULS are Division I callibor, according to athletic division in the according to athletic division. caliber, according to athletic director Bob Wood. "Those who have been in the past have also been academically outstanding.

"I don't think it'll have much of an effect on us, either," says Star's Margaret Spindler, "Most of our kids attend this school for academic reasons. Those who do go on to college athletics might get athletic scholarships . . . but most of them have averages of 3.5 or better.

Despite Rule 48's lack of relevance to Grosse Pointe student athletes. Wood and Spindler feel that one intent of the requirement — to improve the academic standings of freshman athletes and thus, their chances for college degrees - is a good

"I think that overall, the rule will make it tougher on some incoming freshmen. But that 700 score is woefully low . . . you get 200 points just for signing your name correctly." Wood say . .

"Overall, though, I think it's a good idea to put more academic responsibility onto the schools. I think the American education system has to do a better job of preparing athletes.

Star's Spindler likes the idea of "Primarily, because aren't going to make a profession out of playing sports. So, in order that they get the most out of their college experience, they are required to be good students and not necessarily good athletes. It has to be impressed upon them that good grades come first.

"And that goes for boys, too."

But South's Hollosy isn't sure that Rule 48 will be the answer to the question of increased academic emphasis for athletes.

It's still going to be a matter of many schools putting kids where they don't belong (academically) and using them for their athletic skills," Hollosy warns. "Many of these diploma factories are using these kids for four or five years and then dumping them out with-out degrees. And I'm not sure Rule 48 will change that.

"The people who abuse will still abuse, I'm afraid."

Which was exactly the sentiment of yet another coach. He's new to the varsity coaching ranks this season and has such confidence in his coaching ability and belief in his program that he lets both do the talking. "I listen to parents, but I make it clear that I am the coach, that they aren't the ones who hired me and that my program will succeed. You kind of have to let things go in one ear and out the other," he says.

Which is, I guess, just about the only recourse the beleaguered coach has. Because sometimes parents can and do cause coaches problems. And because sports are so very emotional and such a big part of life, there are always going to be one or two people who get more involved than they should. And quite often, they end up spoiling things for a lot of people.

Grosse Pointe has always had its share of such — dare I say it? — jerks. It has also had more than its share of excellent, experienced, knowledgable, coaching talent. It would be a shame to lose that talent because of one or two jerks.

Even ones who "mean well."

Insightful 'Down and Out' is really up and in

Take a rich, somewhat aitruistic Beverly Hills businessman, pair him with a down-on-his-luck vagabond, and the result is "Down and Out in Beverly Hills," a hilarious comedy with satirical insights into the human social condition.

Starring such well-known personalities as Richard Dreyfuss, Nick Nolte, Bette Midler and even Little Richard, the film shifts gears often and moves from the sublime to the ridiculous. In doing so, however, the movie maintains its discipline and never loses sight of its fundamental storyline, which is why it works so well

The businessman (Dreyfuss) leads a "typical" Beverly Hills existence. He has a college-age daughter fighting for her independence, a son in high school who wears women's clothes and makeup as an emblem of his rebellion, a wife (Midler) whose days are filled with shopping malls and beauty parlors, a dog who hates him, and a maid who . . . er, takes

The vagrant (Nolte) has only one material thing in the world — his dog. But that little dog is all he needs in life. When the dog disappears one afternoon, Nolte is de-his mind off things every night. vastated, and begins searching the Realizing after awhile that the search is hopeless, he wanders in Drevfuss' backyard, loads a few rocks into his overcoat pockets, and jumps into the pool.

His suicide is thwarted though, by Dreyfuss, who not only rescues the wanderer, but invites him to be a houseguest for awhile. Dreyfuss thus fulfills his philanthropic obligations, but at the same time figures he can learn a thing or two from one who lives on the other side of the proverbial tracks.

While the rest of the family huffs and puffs at the presence of the bum in their house, Dreyfuss is introduced to a completely different way of thought. He and Nolte spend a day — and night — on the beach drinking and discussing life. They share late-night snacks and conversation. Dreyfuss is awestruck by his guest, learning in the meantime about the fundamental things in life — companionship, a sense of worth, a sense of love.

Nolte, you see, has a certain wisdom that eludes most people. Though he's dirty and ragged on the outside, he has the wisdom of Solomon on the inside. He can also read people like books, and knows exactly what to say, how to say it, and when to say it.

The rest of the family soon begins to realize Nolte's wisdom — a fact which doesn't go unnoticed by Dreyfuss. Each member of the family is taken in by Nolte's sagacious charm. Dreyfuss' wife, maid and daughter fall in love with Nolte, while his son admires the wanderer's nonjudgmental attitude toward those who are differ-

The scenerio thus changes, and Dreyfuss hates it. It was all right when he was the one who saw the deep insight Nolte had, but now that the whole family is privy to the "truth," the fun and mystery are gone. Dreyfuss begins to see his guest as a sociopathic iconoclast, and resents him deeply for it.

It's difficult for viewers not to be sympathetic to Dreyfuss' feelings. Human nature is such that we want to keep special discoveries to ourselves. When we have to share something special we've discovered it hurts.

And so it is in "Down and Out in Beverly Hills." Dreyfuss, looking older but still full of vitality, develops his character slowly and methodically. He draws the viewer into his psyche, and in doing so the viewer understands his plight.

But the conflicts of the film are sustained because of the similarly stupendous performance by Nolte. He is very believable as the bum, and everything from his raspy voice to his defiant saunter are on the money. Had Nolte not been effective, the film's theme would have been lost, thus disheveling the entire picture.

Bette Midler, in a smaller role, is funny and interesting to watch. Like few others in the business. Midler has a presence on the screen that demands attention. She is simultaneously funny and upsetting, sassy and charming. It's a quality that helps her in this film.

Paul Mazursky's quirky directorial abilities are nowhere demonstrated better than in "Beverly Hills." Through his use of humor and sincerity, satire and commentary, he exudes from audiences all the feelings and ideas one could hope for in an adult contemporary film.

Mazursky's film eventually savs that although someone may have certain qualities on the outside, their inner thoughts, motivations and knowledge may be completely different.

To be reminded about a valuable lesson of life at the movies is great. To have a good time in the process is better still. "Down and Out in Beverly Hills" does both.

Guide to woodburning stoves available when indirect costs, including outof-pocket expense for hotels and meals, are included.

The brochure notes that the major causes of fires related to woodburning stoves are due to heat from the stove or stovepipe and chimney igniting adjacent combustible materials; sparks escaping into the home; sparks from the chimney top, and flames from creosote build-up in the chimney.

Homeowners should purchase stoves that carry some listed certification, such as UL (Underwriters Laboratory), which show the device has been safety tested by an authority.

Among other safety tips listed on the brochure: • When installing a stove, the manufacturer's instructions should be followed carefully, in accordance with local fire codes. · Stoves that are vented into rounding wood beams being ignited. • The chimney should be inspected and cleaned prior to each creasing the possibility of sur-heating season, with only dry, wellseasoned hardwood used. • The damper should be opened before starting a fire and flammable liquids should never be used. Dry wood never should be stored near the stove. · By opening air inlets on the stove door and allowing the wood to burn freely for 10-15 minutes a few times a week, the build-up of creosote can be reduced (Creosote is a flammable tar which is the primary cause of chimney fires).

· A briskly burning fire should be maintained. Long smouldering fires increase creosote build-up.

· Children should be carefully supervised when the fire is burnexisting chimneys increase ing, and a burning stove should never be left unattended.

Since IRAs became widely available in 1982 - when economists said we were not saving enough and doubts about the Social Security system first arose - approximately 40 million Americans have opened these accounts. But about 75 million people who are eligible to open IRAs have not opened accounts, and observers say this year many of those 75 million will make the move toward an IRA. If you already have an IRA or are thinking about opening one, you should be familiar with some common questions that are raised by people investing in an IRA. here are 10 answers to questions that the Michigan Association of CPAs says IRA investors need to know. 1. Why should you love IRAs? Because the contribution lowers your current tax bill and the interest earned on your investment is not taxed until you withdraw it, so it creates a tax-sheltered nest egg. By the time you make withdrawals at retirement, you'll probably be in a much lower tax bracket and will pay a relatively low tax on amounts withdrawn. 2. Who can contribute to an IRA? Anyone who works for a living or receives alimony and is under age

70½ can contribute to an IRA.

3. Aren't there limits on how much you can contribute to an IRA in a year? Yes. If you are single, you can contribute up to $2,000 of your

If you are married and you and your spouse both work, you can put up to $4,000 into the account. For married couples with only one working spouse, no more than 2,250 can be contributed to a 1985 4. How does an IRA lower my 1985 tax bill? By making the maximum contribution by April 15, 1986, you can lower your taxable income by $2,000. A single person with a taxable income of $35,000, for instance, would get a $680 tax savings as a result ($560 savings for a couple filing jointly). Earnings on the IRA would remain tax-free.

You only pay tax on an IRA when you withdraw money from it. 5. How does an IRA stack up as a long-term investment? As a retirement savings plan, the IRA is attractive because any interest or gain on your IRA is not taxed until you withdraw the funds. As a result, your investment grows more quickly than comparable taxable investments. If you put $2,000 a year in an IRA for 20 years and it earns 8 percent interest (compounded annually), you would have $98,846. In a normal taxable investment, you would have $71,060 after the same 20 year period (assuming you are in the 35 percent tax bracket). 6. Isn't there a penalty for withdrawing money from an IRA?

Yes. If you withdraw money from an IRA before age 591/2 you must pay a penalty equal to 10 percent of the amount withdrawn. Of course, you must also report the withdrawn amount as taxable income. This 10 percent federal penalty does not apply, however, if the withdrawal is made in the event you die or become disabled.

7. How much does it cost to set up a new IRA?

Some banks, savings and loans, mutual funds and other financial organizations that offer IRAs will charge an annual maintenance fee of as much as $35. Some also require that you pay a start-up fee on a new account, usually $25 or less. Many charge no fees or minimal fees, so shop around.

8. Are those fees tax-deductible? Yes, but in order to claim this itemized deduction, you must pay these fees separately. Some companies will automatically deduct

Americans love Individual earned income to an IRA this year. the fees from your contribution, which lessens the size of your contribution and also prevents taking the deduction from the fees in the year you pay them.

9. What should I invest my IRA You can invest an IRA in a wide range of vehicles, and choosing the right one depends on your age, investment goals, other investments and your ability to accept risk. Some of the most popular IRA investments include: certificates of deposit, money market funds, corporate stocks and bonds, real estate investment trusts, mutual funds and annuities. Each of these investments must be evaluated for its total return and inflation exposure, safety and liquidity. You may want to ask a CPA for assistance in finding the right kind of IRA investment. CPAs' code of ethics prevents accepting a commission on an investment or advising clients on specific investment products, so you can get an objective answer as to the best kind of cial situation. Are there any drawbacks to investment in your personal finan-

IRAs? A small minority of personal financial advisors point out that inflation erodes the value of an IRA nest egg. However, having that tax-sheltered nest egg — even if the inflation rate rises — will put you ahead of those who have no retirement savings.
