A two-way street

An interview is a double-edged sword. All the while a Grosse Pointe News reporter and photographer were recording their impressions in a ULS first-grade classroom in December, the kids were taking mental notes of their own.

Now that the class is studying "who, what, when, why, where and how" and using classroom newspaper reporting to put their new knowledge to work, memories of the paper's interview on their journal-keeping activities continue to surface, teacher Brigitte Peck reports. The kids apparently were able to discern some journalistic technique amid the pandemonium (our reporter says it was a highly participatory interview) — and were naturally particularly interested in a story describing their own exploits.

Last week a packet of appreciative letters arrived at the News office. Let Toohie's speak for the class:

"I thought your writing was excellent. And your story was excellent about Bunny Prins Charlie. Thank you love Toohie . . . I mite send one to India."

Thank you, Toohie. We can't ask for more than that.

It's cabin fever

Isn't the stuff bad enough, without someone sculpting it into something obscene?

Woods police were called to the site of a snow sculpture on Oxford Road last week.

Seems a Woods' resident decided a snow sculpture of a hand wasn't good enough, and he designed the hand making an obscene gesture.

Police told him to clean up his act, and we're told, the artist complied.

Mister, this late in the winter, snow is already obscene. It doesn't need any help.

. . . I teach

A notice has been posted throughout the public schools by Grosse Pointe Education Association President Doris Cook regarding establishment of the Christa McAuliffe American Education Fund by the National Education Association.

The fund has been set up in the name of practicing and aspiring teachers. Grants from the fund will be awarded to teachers to explore their subject matter in new and innovative ways and will also help high school and college students who intend to become teachers, according to the NEA.

Contributions to the fund may be sent to: The Christa McAuliffe American Education Fund, American Security Bank, P.O. Box 0149, Washington, D.C. 20055.

Name that music

Ever have a burning desire to name an orchestra? Well, have you even thought about it? Now that we've raised the question, here's your chance. The Renaissance City Chamber Players are looking for a new name. The group, headed by Misha Rachlevsky, was originally named as a link to Detroit as the Renaissance City. There's confusion, however, when the musicians travel outside of southwestern Michigan. During two European tours last summer, Rachlevsky's constant response was, "No, we are not playing Renaissance music."

In fact, that's the name of the contest. Send your entries to No, We're Not Playing Renaissance Music Contest, Renaissance Concerts, Inc., P.O. Box 8010, West Bloomfield, Mich. 48304. The winner will receive a

Local group brings hope to poor Haitians

By Nancy Parmenter

A few years ago, Patricia and J. Peter Gruits of Grosse Pointe Park took a Caribbean vacation. It had everything: sun and sand and palm trees. It also had something they weren't looking for: poverty in the extreme.

"We just couldn't forget what we saw," said Patricia Gruits.

That was in 1975 and Haiti was still deep in the grip of the Duvalier regime. Poverty and ignorance existed side-by-side with the ostentatious display of wealth of the rulers.

The memory of Haiti continued to stick with the couple. They talked about it to each other and to friends and gradually over the years they came to feel that they could do something. That something was a charitable organization, recognized by the governments of Haiti and the United States, named for its aim — Restoring Hope through Education and Medical Aid.

"I'm not a doctor, but I know lots of doctors," said Patricia Gruits, who is now retired from a position as minister of education at Bethesda Missionary Temple in Detroit. She figured — rightly, as it turned out — that many of her medical friends were looking for ways to help the unfortunate.

As the word got out that the couple wanted to establish a medical clinic, donations of equipment and money began to flow in. The result: five years ago, the RHEMA clinic and school opened in St. Mark, an impoverished city of 20,000 about 60 miles north of Port au Prince. It was a slow start.

The clinic, a former wealthy summer residence, is the only medical center of any consequence in the area, according to Gruits. It has dental, optical, and laboratory facilities and a pharmacy, all directed by a registered nurse and staffed occasionally by visiting doctors and dentists.

"We're trying to get permission to have a doctor on site," said RHEMA board member Gerald Hendrick of the Woods. "Then we could do anything any hospital in Haiti could do."

Getting established was complicated enormously by the Haitian government's attitude. Although "Papa Doc" and most of his upper echelons of government were medical doctors, they were not friendly to the idea of increased medical competition.

"Everyone of any power or consequence is an M.D.," Hendrick said. The protection of the medical turf continued through the rule of "Baby Doc."

"It took us a while to grasp how to do things over there," Hendrick explained. "Bribes are the way they operate. Even though we have people's best interest at heart, we still don't have permission to open a hospital."

Meanwhile, volunteer doctors come in and out, doctors who donate two or three weeks' "vacation" to work around the clock treating as many patients as can be squeezed into the clinic. Three registered nurses fill in the gaps.

"An R.N. can do almost anything a doctor could do, but we don't want them to take the risks," said Hendrick. "But if you go into the bush and find somebody who needs 16 stitches in the aorta, you do it."

Volunteers are the core of RHEMA. No one receives a salary. Three retired couples direct the clinic, the school and the food and clothing distribution center. They live on their own income; RHEMA provides a place to live and a donated car.

Volunteers in the States sew layettes, gather supplies, stuff newsletters and send money. Peter and Patricia Gruits soon discovered that they were spending so much time in Haiti that they sold their house in the Park. Now he lives full time at the clinic and she uses a stateside Florida base to solicit donations.

"I seem to have a gift for exciting people to get involved," Patricia Gruits said. "Now people are writing from all over the country to volunteer."

An important facet of RHEMA's work is the teaching of the Christian gospel. "That's a must," Gruits said.

She explained that Haitians already profess a Christianity "of sorts" in the Catholic background applied over their native West African religion. In fact, the unique Haitian religious blend has been a factor in the struggle to establish the clinic.

"They are steeped with voodoo and witch doctors," Gruits said. "We were opposed by a whole corps of primitive doctors."

The opposition has included attempts to gain power over the Americans by planting voodoo symbols at the front gate and working spells. Not long ago, witch doctors paraded past the clinic with a coffin. The powerful suggestions have not succeeded, however.

"They dislike our popularity," Gruits said. RHEMA is resented by the primitive power structure for giving inexpensive health care: a visit encompassing every clinic service costs $2.60. Gruits said the witch doctors are accustomed to charging what the traffic will bear.

Since the clinic opened, it has expanded under the architectural direction of Peter Gruits. In the works now is a series of centers to educate the people Peace Corps-fashion.

"We want to use a hub-and-spoke concept with the clinic as a hub," said Hendrick. "The students (now in training) pay a small tuition. If you don't charge some fee, they don't have respect for the program. This way, they make an investment in their future."

There are 23 students currently studying to be "barefoot doctors." At the end of their three-year course, they will bring basic medical care, soil conservation techniques, literacy programs and a dispensary to "family life centers" in remote mountain villages.

Soil conservation is probably one of the greatest needs in Haiti now, according to Hendrick. The land is barren and eroded owing to the practice of cutting down trees to make charcoal.

"They are on their way to destroying the land," he said. "They have no idea of land management. But if I can teach someone how to

Peter and Patricia Gruits look over plans for an expansion of RHEMA's clinic. The clinic has received medical equipment and drugs from World Medical Relief, 20 tons of dry milk from the government of Canada, and donations of time and money from thousands of individuals across the United States.

Memorial tries again for liquor license

By Nancy Parmenter

Undaunted by previous failures, the War Memorial has adopted a different tack in its quest for a liquor license. Two weeks ago, the center took a $1,000 option to buy a Class C resort license, a geographically transferable license that would still leave the city of Grosse Pointe Farms with two licenses at its disposal.

The center paid the non-refundable $1,000 for a $55,000 license now in use at the Bambi Bar in Hillman, Mich. The bar currently serves liquor and food, but owner Rosemary Lobb says she plans to convert to a restaurant. "I hope they get it," Lobb said. "I can't wait to get out of the bar business. It's a struggle."

Lobb said she expects to hear from the War Memorial within a matter of weeks, although she has not assigned an expiration date to the option.

There are 550 "movable" Class C resort licenses in the state, according to John Stora of the state Liquor Control Commission. Contrary to the usual interpretation of the word "resort," the licenses are not assigned only to hotels or restaurants that cater to the tourist trade, Stora said.

"For our purposes, the whole state of Michigan is defined as a resort area," he said. "Besides, there's nothing stopping the War Memorial from advertising in the Toledo Blade, inviting people to come up and sample the cultural institutions and eat at the War Memorial."

That type of plan is not in the cards, Memorial officials say. The center already has all the business it can handle and wants the license only to control the flow of alcohol on the premises.

"We believe there would be less drinking than there is now," center Director Mark Weber said.

Currently alcohol is served at private functions with one-day licenses purchased by the individual and on five occasions throughout the year with a special license purchased by the center. Alcohol is allowed only when food is served, and that policy would continue, Weber said.

Weddings are the only private function held at the center. Some family member must be a Grosse Pointe resident in order to qualify. Civic organizations and clubs scheduling events are charged lower rates if they are from Grosse Pointe.

Restricting weddings to residents may or may not be a sticking point with the Liquor Control Commission. Stora would not comment directly on the War Memorial because no application has yet been received, but in general, he said, the commission would not approve any application from a center that restricted activities to residents.

"A civic center license allows (residential) restrictions, but then the city has to be involved in the operation," he said.

It is also unclear whether the two licenses currently allowable in the Farms will stand in the way of the War Memorial's application. "The rules could hinder bringing in a resort license," Stora said. "If licenses are available, we usually don't grant (the resort license)."

Under the usual chronology, liquor license application is made first to the state, which then notifies the local jurisdiction and requests a background check by the local police.

Preparations for the application are under way, according to War Memorial attorney John Rickel. In the meantime, the center has written to members of the Farms council "asking for help finding a solution" to the liquor license problem.

"I'm not too sure what they're asking for," said Farms Mayor Pro Tem Joseph Fromm. He said the letter indicated that paperwork from the state would arrive shortly. However, the War Memorial has not requested to be placed on any upcoming meeting agenda.

The War Memorial has been determined in its search for a liquor license. In June, its request to be allotted one of the then-three licenses allowed in the Farms failed. (Since that time, the number of additional licenses allotted in the Farms has declined to two, on the basis of a shrinking population. There are five liquor licenses currently in active operation.)

In November, the center's attempt to buy the liquor license from the Bronze Door was thwarted when the bankrupt restaurant decided to accept only bulk bids for the entire property.

"There have been two issues sticking ever since (then-director) John Lake made the first application in 1975," said Rickel. The issues, as he sees them, are control and liability.

"The only way you can guarantee no liquor is to do a body search like they do at Pine Knob," Rickel said. "The War Memorial board has made the decision that body searches aren't appropriate for the kind of ambience the Memorial is trying to provide."

Rickel said the center has never had a lawsuit or accident stemming from the use of alcohol, but that there had been "a number of diplomatic standoffs" trying to get drinkers out of the parking lot after a party.

As to liability, groups renting the War Memorial are "going bare," according to Weber. Although the center is covered by insurance, groups run the risk of bankruptcy in a lawsuit. "It could wipe out some of these groups," Weber said.

Liquor was served at the War Memorial 233 times in 1984, as the center hosted 4,000 events attended by 200,000 people. Last year, according to Weber, the center's 60-person catering staff served an astonishing 83,000 meals, for an average of nearly 230 meals every day for a year.

Homeowners mailed notices of assessments

By Mike Andrzejczyk

It's one of the most detested pieces of mail and it ranks just behind notification of audit by Internal Revenue Service — notice of change in property assessment.

Residents throughout Grosse Pointe will probably receive the notices by the beginning of March. Cities are required to notify homeowners of the changes 10 days before the first meeting of the local board of review.

Residents in the City, Farms and Shores can expect increases of 6 to 7 percent and 5 percent respectively, according to officials in those cities. Woods homeowners probably won't see a general increase while only one or two Park property owners will see any increase, according to city officials.

While the average increase may be about 5 percent, some may be higher or lower, according to Frederick Hornfisher, handling the assessor duties for the Shores. Residents should have received their notices by the beginning of this week.

The Shores boards of review are scheduled for Tuesday, March 4, and Monday, March 10, from 9 a.m. to noon, and 1 to 5 p.m., village officials said. Those interested in appealing assessments will be taken on a first-come, first-served basis.

Grosse Pointe City has scheduled its boards of review dates for Monday and Tuesday, March 17 and 18, according to officials. Residents should contact the city the week before to make an appointment.

The Farms board of review will meet Tuesdays, March 11 and 25, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., officials said. The March 11 meeting will have evening hours, if necessary. Residents' appeals are heard first-come, first-served.

The Woods board of review also meets March 11 and 25, from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m., city officials said. Appeals are heard first-come, first-served.

The Park board of review meets from 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., with breaks for lunch and dinner, on Tuesdays, March 11 and 25. No appointment is necessary, officials said.

The Park will also be looking for bidders soon on a plan to do a reassessment of city property, according to James Ellison, director of public service. Judgments put in place at last year's boards of review will be continued through this year because of the pending reassessment, he added.

As in past years, assessors offer advice to residents who think they will appeal at a board of review hearing.

Many appeals may be averted by first calling your local assessors. Errors in fact can be cleared up without resorting to the appeal.

If you decide to go before the board, remember:

• Be prepared. List five to 10 homes you think are comparable to yours in age, size and location. Take them to city hall and ask for the field sheets or field cards and check the assessments. If they're consistently lower than yours, you may have a case.

• Be organized. Take pictures of the board of the homes you've checked, a picture of your home and all the assessments. Don't take more than 10; it's not necessary.

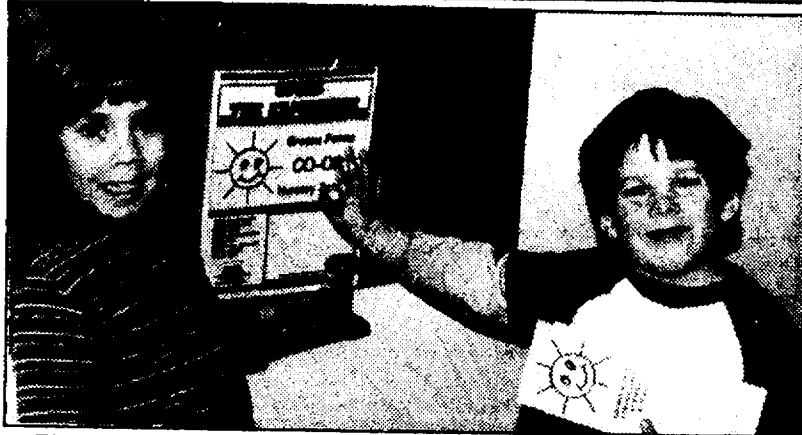

• Be brief. Don't complain about taxes, spending or ask for great goods of information. Members of the board are residents of your community and pay the same taxes you do.

• Be patient. Boards that meet first-come, first-served depend on appellants who are prepared, organized and brief. You may have to wait a few minutes, depending on the number of people ahead of you.

Other things you may want to bring with you is information about structural damage that the assessor may be unaware of, such as damage by fire or settling; lists of sales prices or bids on your home or comparable homes consistently under twice the assessed value; documentation of the sales price of your home, if purchased within the last year; or a bank or real estate appraisal.

Dems to honor Lucien Nedzi

The 14th Congressional District Democratic party will honor former Congressman Lucien N. Nedzi at the annual F.D.R. Dinner at 5 p.m. Sunday, March 2, at the Polish Century Club in Detroit.

Nedzi, who served in the U.S. House of Representatives from 1961 to 1981, is currently practicing law in Washington, D.C. While in the U.S. House of Representatives, he served on the House Armed Services Committee and was acting chairman of the House Administration Committee. Nedzi also served as the house chairman of the Select Committee on Intelligence.

Congressman Dennis M. Hertel, the current 14th Congressional District congressman, said, "This dinner honoring Lucien N. Nedzi is long overdue. When I went to Congress in 1981, I was amazed at the great respect his colleagues had for him. He is a great blend of intelligence, compassion, hard work and common sense."

Dinner tickets are $25 per person and may be ordered by calling 979-0064 or 874-0211.

Readiness series continues

For many parents, the first day of kindergarten can be a day of mixed emotions. Although parents often are apprehensive about the preparation they have given their child, they are pleased that their child will have the opportunity to share in an enriched school experience.

A three-part series on school readiness is offered by the Grosse Pointe Public School System to address concerns and help parents learn more about that first year at school.

The first session "Reading Successfully Can Begin Naturally at Home" was presented by Dr. Linda Clinard, Feb. 20 at Monteith Elementary School.

The second session, "School Program and Services," will be a panel discussion by six Grosse Pointe kindergarten teachers who will present highlights of curriculum and information about the optional full-day kindergarten program. This session is scheduled for Tuesday, March 18, at 7:30 p.m. at Monteith School, 1275 Cook Road in the Woods.

The last session is open to parents in the community and features Dr. David Elkind, child psychologist and author of "The Hurried Child" and "All Grown Up and No Place to Go." Co-sponsored by SAC and the school system, it will be held Monday, April 14, at 7:30 p.m. at North High School, 707 Vernier Road in the Woods.

There is no fee and reservations are not required.

Tuman brings caring to North

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Over the past five years, Jim Tuman figures he's brought his message to 500,000 students throughout the world. The message is pretty simple; the most important person in your life is you. Tuman will bring his motivational program "Who will control your life?" to the Performing Arts Center at North High School tonight at 7:30 p.m. The forum is sponsored in part by the North High School Parent's Club Pac/SAC council. The public is invited.

Tuman, in his middle 40s, hails from Canton but has traveled across the United States to bring his message of goal-setting and self-esteem to students.

Everywhere he goes, he finds that the students are working through the same kinds of problems, he says. Many lack definite short-term and long-term goals and a plan to make them happen. Most teens view the world unrealistically. Many frequently live out other people's dreams or expectations. Low self-esteem and substance abuse aren't blocked by cultural barriers, he says.

Tuman "has an outstanding reputation for giving motivational talks that stimulate youngsters and adults alike and have an impact on their thinking," according to Edward Deeb, chairman of North's parent's club.

"He doesn't just stand at a podium with a microphone; he mixes and interacts with the students and that really helps hold their attention," Deeb adds. "He really knows how to bring home a point."

Tuman uses about 10 participatory exercises to drive home his point. One technique involves figuring out how many minutes there are in a working career.

The audience will then sit in total silence and stare at a clock for a full minute, then talk about the prospect of spending 5.4 million minutes just like that in an unwanted career.

Tuman also asks students to come to the microphone and tell about one good thing they feel about themselves. While it starts out slowly, everyone eventually wants to share something, he adds.

Sharing and caring are two words that come up a lot as well. The participatory techniques are just catalysts for the opening up of emotions.

He recalls one school where the homecoming queen came to the microphone to tell her classmates about her cancer and chemotherapy. There, before her classmates, she removed the wig she wore to hide her hair loss and told her fellow students how much she needed them, Tuman says.

"The courage around the sharing is just unbelievable," he adds.

Tuman, who spent last summer in Ethiopia as a famine relief worker, earned his master's degree at Columbia University.

A member of the 1980 U.S. Olympic bobsledding team, Tuman has appeared on news programs on ABC, NBC and CBS, and has been interviewed by dozens of newspapers. He was also the subject of a half-hour documentary shown nationwide in Japan in 1984.

The world after the classroom can be a harsh place and a young person needs to set goals and plan ahead while in school, Tuman tells his audience.

His whole presentation of caring and sharing has had its effect.

Melanie Gray, a sophomore at Fremont High School in Grand Rapids, took part in one of Tuman's talks last week. She called the program "something the whole world could use."

"Today, we've experienced something here that has really opened up our lives," she adds, saying that a number of classmates came forward to tell their friends a lot of things about themselves and the way they feel.

Some of her classmates talked about suicides, friends they had lost to suicide and how those deaths affected their lives, Gray says. "It really helped people come together," she adds.

There's no time frame for the presentation, Tuman says. He was originally scheduled to appear at Fremont High in the morning, but after lunch, students said they wanted more. The program stretched on for six hours.

The Thursday night program will be followed the next day by a presentation to students.

The community forum is sponsored by the Family Life Education Council, Health Education Council of Grosse Pointe, Northeast Guidance Center, PTA/PTO council and other organizations.

For more information about the program, call North at 343-2199.

Case still open

The house was torn down last week, but the fire that killed William and Mary Jane O'Brien May 8, 1985 is still under investigation, according to Farms Detective Earl Field. The couple, both 67, were asleep when a resident discovered the fire shortly before 3 a.m. and called the fire department. The house was located on Lakeshore near Sunset Lane.

Hearing scheduled for parks redevelopment

By Peter A. Salinas

For people interested in the proposed redevelopment of Grosse Pointe Woods Lake Front and Ghesquiere parks, a public hearing on the recommendations from the city's planning consultant has been scheduled for Tuesday, March 4, at the city council chambers.

Councilwoman Jean B. Rice, said James Scott, of the landscape architectural and site planning company hired by the city, will present his recommendations to the public.

"He has done a lot of work," Rice said. "Public input is very useful, and can help him make decisions about what is needed."

Rice said that depending on the outcome of the hearing, Scott may make changes in his overall master plan, before making a final presentation to the city council April 21.

"After that," Rice said, "the council and administration will price out the plan, and then another hearing on the cost will be held (later in the summer)."

"I guess what I'm trying to do is make both parks more diversified — more user-conscious," Scott said.

He said park-use has been too seasonal, with no winter activity at Ghesquiere.

"We are recommending a lighted paddle tennis court, cleared hard surface trails, lighted ice skating rinks with a warming shelter and other suggestions not addressed in the past," he said.

Scott said he will recommend a recreational master plan that will include removal of the controversial Milk River Bridge.

The bridge has been a thorn in many boat users' sides, because they cannot get access to the lake or marina at Lake Front, because the bridge does not allow enough clearance for boats to pass under.

"We are recommending that the existing bridge come down," Scott said, "with a new vehicular bridge at the far end of Milk River. We will also recommend two or three pedestrian bridges which will be high enough and long enough to allow pedestrians to move about the park without crossing any roads. It would be a series of skyways."

Other recommendations include: outdoor racquetball courts; a fishing pier; walkways with benches; and domed tennis courts.

"These are only recommendations," Scott said. "The council will have to make the final decision."

"Scott has some very innovative ideas," Rice said. "The problem is there has never been a plan for our parks. We have just put things in — in the wrong place."

"If they (Woods residents) have an interest in the city, the viability of the city's recreational facilities, they should come to this hearing."

Printmaking demonstrated

By Nancy Parmenter

Silently the ninth-graders pass among themselves the stone tablets, the woodblocks, the tools of the printmaker's trade. They stare incredulously when printmaker Jim Poole tells them that a particular etching required 50 hours to complete. They take turns using a grease crayon to reveal the grainy texture of a plate.

"I'm priming the pump," Poole said. "A lot of the kids will never do a print, but later in life maybe they'll want to buy one. This gives them a basic understanding of how to judge."

Poole, an associate professor at the Center for Creative Studies, was taking part in a visiting artist program at University Liggett last week. Poole is one of six CCS teachers who travel to local schools for a day or a week. ULS has developed an extensive visiting artist program, bringing in musicians, painters or dancers every month.

"They'll remember this," said Edward Jacomo, who heads Liggett's department of creative and performing arts. "Next year (when we do printmaking again), the kids will say 'so that's what that guy was doing.'"

Although the ninth-graders didn't have an opportunity that day to actually try any printmaking techniques, some of the classes did. The visiting artists' program covers a range of activities from lectures and discussions to performances to lots of hands-on. The kindergarteners, for example, followed Poole's appearance with three days of making their own prints using techniques he had explained in a class devised by ULS Lower School art teacher Suzanne Raymo.

"One of the things we pride ourselves on is that every kid who comes here gets a chance to do printmaking," Jacomo said.

The array of techniques presented Friday was dazzling. Embossing, etching, woodcuts, linocuts, lithographs, the uses of transparent and opaque inks, color registration marched in quick succession past the students.

Poole talked about the importance of planning ahead in printmaking. He brought samples of work by CCS students — some of them showing the obvious hazards of failing to pre-plan: prints backwards and upside down, colors out of alignment. A lovely print full of tiny detailing reveals the final exhaustion of the artist, who gave up and filled in a space with cross-hatching.

"When you get tired, go do your math homework," Poole said, to understanding nods. The message that printmaking, for all its rewards, is hard work, was getting through. "Once you make your mark, you're basically stuck with it," Poole added.

To avoid the pitfalls of unthinking error, Jacomo has his print classes give a lot of consideration to a subject before they ever start to make a print. They think about it, develop a mental concept, and even write about it. They wrote haiku to prepare for a woodblock project.

"We don't say 'do whatever you want,'" Jacomo said. "We don't shy away from saying 'these are the things you must do.' And sometimes we let them get frustrated."

"If something is too easy, they don't take it seriously," Raymo said.

Raymo and Jacomo have tried to prepare a comprehensive program of artists in residence. Raymo has made it her responsibility to organize gallery exhibits. Projects and field trips try to include other faculty members so they can understand what the students are doing. Both Jacomo and Raymo talk to the artists to make sure that they understand children as well as the goals of the program.

"We don't want the kids to be intimidated by the artists," Raymo said. Conversely, they don't want the artists to be intimidated by the children, which has unfortunately happened a few times when it turned out that the artist communicated well with Jacomo but froze when faced with little people.

Planning for the year has to be completed during the previous summer. Jacomo has written a few grants for specific artists, but most of the program is financed by the school.

"We want to stress that the arts are important work," Jacomo said.

A good art program teaches not only the right ways, techniques, approaches. It teaches the correct terminology and gives a grounding in things like linear perspective. Such a background allows a student to move beyond the "I know what I like" shallow approach to art to a real understanding and appreciation.

"It goes beyond regurgitation to interpretation," Jacomo said.

Cook re-elected

Grosse Pointe Education Association president Doris Cook has been re-elected to a third term to the Michigan Education Association Board of Directors.

Cook will be one of four representatives from Region 6, which includes the Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods school districts and all those in Macomb and St. Clair counties.

Do-it-yourself test for eyes

The National Society to Prevent Blindness (NSPB) estimates that more than 11 million Americans have lost some vision. Many others, with conditions such as glaucoma, may not know they are at risk.

To help people check their vision, NSPB has just released a revised edition of its Home Eye Test for Adults (HETA).

The do-it-yourself test provides four individual tests that point to signs of macular degeneration, glaucoma, or the more common near- or far-sighted refractive errors one encounters with age.

According to the society, the majority of those who fail any part of the test may only require eye-glasses or a change of their current prescription, if they already wear glasses. However, the test can warn of more serious eye problems that require prompt medical attention.

The HETA, developed with the advice of some of the nation's leading ophthalmologists, is not diagnostic. NSPB recommends a periodic professional eye exam even for those who have passed the test. Copies are available for $1 to cover postage and handling costs through: National Society to Prevent Blindness, 79 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016.

This is the third home eye test now available from the society. The Home Eye Test for Preschoolers, introduced in 1972, alerts parents to vision problems of children. The society's 10-minute TV Eye Test for adults has been offered to television viewers by local stations in many parts of the country.

Mack USA sets June date for fireworks display

Too early to think about summer?
Not if you happen to be planning this year's Mack USA celebration.

it isn't.
Work on the 1986 program began shortly after last year's program. Some of the details were worked out at a recent luncheon meeting at the Lochmoor Club. Officials from Grosse Pointe Woods and Grosse Pointe public schools, Lochmoor Club and the Grosse Pointe Business and Professional Association of Mack Avenue met to talk about some of the details of this year's display, set for June 29, and ways to improve it from last year.

This year, the fireworks will be preceded with a performance by the Austin Moro group, organizers say. And, like last year, the display will be fired at full dark from the grounds of the Lochmoor Club, with public seating allowed along Mack and on the grounds of Parcels Middle School.

The committee hopes to raise $15,000 to cover the expenses of the display — the same budget as the previous two years. The fireworks are the first display in the area since the mid-70s.

Co-chairing the Mack USA celebration are Kathy Forster and Robbie Curry. Also attending the Lochmoor lunch were Lee Meyer, president of the business association; Dr. Michael Lahey, vice president of the business association; Peter Behr, general manager of Lochmoor Club; Cheryl Graves, also of Lochmoor; Woods mayor George Freeman; Chester Petersen, Woods city administrator-clerk; George Catlin, Woods city attorney; and Jack Patterson, Woods public safety director.

Also attending were Dr. John Whritner, school superintendent; David King, director of support services; Gus Russo, Lochmoor Chrysler-Plymouth; and Christine Kuskowski, representing Pointe Plaza.

Donations to the event may be made by mail, by sending a check or money order payable to Mack Avenue USA to 17401 Mack, Detroit 48224.

Students invited to audition for Nester award

Auditions for the Thomas Nester Memorial Scholarship, sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra Society to honor the orchestra's late founder, are scheduled to be held during May.

The talented young musician who is chosen to be the Nester winner will receive a $400 prize as well as an opportunity to appear as a soloist in a regularly scheduled Grosse Pointe Symphony concert. To gain additional expertise and platform poise, the winner will also be invited to play in all rehearsals and concerts of the Grosse Pointe Symphony concert season.

Felix Resnick, Detroit Symphony violinist and long-term Grosse Pointe Symphony conductor, will choose the panel of judges to officiate at the auditions.

Students through grade 11 who play an orchestral instrument, excluding piano, are eligible to compete and should be prepared to perform, for 10 to 15 minutes, works that show a variety of musical periods and styles. One selection must have a published orchestral accompaniment.

They need not be memorized and entrants are expected to provide their own accompanists. One copy of the material to be performed must be provided for the judges.

Previous Nester winners are not eligible to audition and if, in the opinion of the judges, no candidate qualifies, no award will be given.

Ralph Miller, project chairman, invites interested young musicians to call him at 343-2140 for application information. Applications to audition are due March 24.

Boy crashes snowmobile at Ford house

An 11-year-old Southfield youth suffered a possible broken leg and neck injuries when he crashed a snowmobile at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House Sunday.

The youth and his father were visiting friends in St. Clair Shores and took a snow machine out to Gaukler Point. They rode around in the open area on the peninsula, then the father and the owner of the snowmobile allowed the boy to drive it by himself, according to Shores police reports.

Apparently the boy "froze" with the throttle wide open and drove full speed across the frozen lagoon. The snowmobile jumped the broken concrete breakwall, "went airborne," crossed the Ford House main driveway and hit an elm tree head-on, according to the report.

Not understanding where the city boundary lines were, the adults called the St. Clair Shores police, who called in East Detroit because the St. Clair Shores ambulance was already on a run. A few minutes later, police from Grosse Pointe Shores were also called.

The youth was taken to St. John Hospital for treatment.

Renewal not automatic

We wuz wrong!
It wasn't the first time and no doubt it will not be the last, but we were wrong when we predicted in this column on Jan. 23 that the March 10 election on the Grosse Pointe school millage renewal would be a quiet one.

As Grosse Pointe News readers now know from the paper's news columns, an organization — the Taxpayer's Advisory Group (TAG) — has emerged to oppose the millage renewal on the grounds that the school system has not made enough economies.

What TAG complains about the most is that school taxes have increased in the Pointes since the early 1970s, even though the school enrollment has declined by 46 percent from its peak. TAG calls for greater efforts at consolidation of schools and contends that even the closing of Barnes elementary has not saved much money.

Fortunately for those who favor renewal of the millage and support the board's efforts to pass it on March 10, the Citizens for Continued Excellence has begun efforts to counteract TAG's campaign and has started a telephone campaign seeking support for the renewal of the 25.35 millage levy. Yet it now has become clear that renewal will not necessarily be automatic.

Three years ago, when the voters last approved the millage renewal, the issue was even hotter than it appears to be this year. The result was a narrow victory for renewal by a 3,903 to 3,678 margin. That vote meant renewal was approved by only 225 votes out of 7,581 cast or by 51 percent of the people voting in the election. That narrow victory margin ought to provide additional incentive to those favoring renewal because it shows that many Pointers were not convinced of the need for the renewal three years ago and may still have their doubts today.

However, the call by TAG for further consolidations — meaning closing of schools — appears to be untimely this year. The enrollment in the fourth-Friday (of September) count was up by 41 last fall, marking a reversal of the declining enrollment reported annually in recent years. True, the total enrollment of 7,350 still represented a decline of 6,179 or 46 percent since the peak was reached 14 years ago. But it obviously is too early to say for certain whether the enrollment decline has been reversed or whether the 1985 fall increase was only a "blip" on the record of decline.

Since the 1985 figures throw future enrollment predictions into the questionable status, it appears to this newspaper that the board and the administration are wise in not planning any more consolidations or closings in the immediate future. In addition, after the controversy over the closing of Barnes, there was an informal agreement that no further action would be taken to close any more schools for at least two years. Since that action was taken in 1984, the board could plan further closings after this year without breaking the informal agreement, but we think the uncertainties about future enrollment militate against such action now.

Three years ago much of the opposition to the millage renewal came from precincts in the three schools that had been proposed for closing, with people from Barnes, Mason and Monteth even voting against the renewal. This year the opposition does not have this kind of a base but it does represent a responsible segment of the community. Yet it must be remembered that the defeat of the renewal proposal could mean another election with the layoff of more than 100 teachers in the event of another loss and their recall if the renewal won in a second try.

As it has in the past, the News supports the board and administration in their efforts to renew the millage. Discussion of the issues, now prompted by TAG's activities, is a useful part of the renewal campaign, but we prefer the arguments of the aptly named Citizens for Continued Excellence.

Enter Lucas — from the right

Whatever happens to County Executive William Lucas in his bid for the Republican nomination for governor, it is an effort that could have benefits for blacks, the Republican Party and the state of Michigan.

If Lucas makes a credible race that attracts substantial black support, it would be good for the two-party system as well, whether he wins or loses. Such a record would help destroy the belief that black voters are taken for granted by the Democratic Party and supports Lucas' contention that the GOP offers blacks a chance at upward mobility.

And if Lucas should be nominated and elected, it would mark the first time that a black has been elected governor of any of the states. That would be beneficial to blacks, Lucas' new party and the state as a whole. It also would be evidence that the country is moving toward the "colorblind" society that President Reagan says he favors.

Lucas has not yet spelled out all of his political positions, but it is clear that he is running as a conservative Republican, not as a moderate or progressive Republican in the Bill Milliken mold. So far he reflects right wing positions on abortion, welfare, taxes and other issues that resemble the stands taken by Richard Headlee, the GOP nominee four years ago. Perhaps that is not surprising since Headlee helped recruit Lucas into the Republican Party and two of Headlee's advisers are running Lucas' campaign.

Many Democratic leaders say that Lucas not only cannot be elected but that he cannot even be nominated by the Republican Party. Some newspaper columnists — including several not especially well informed in political matters — parrot that Democratic judgment. And among the Democratic leaders who are making that contention are several black leaders who seem to be expressing what they hope will be a self-fulfilling prophecy.

When asked whether a black can win the nomination, let alone the election, Lucas comments that he heard that talk before when he ran for sheriff and county executive. But it is true that he is now in a statewide contest in which he will be much more of a minority candidate than he was in Wayne County. The question is whether conservative Republicans in out-state areas who seldom see, let alone know, black people will vote for Bill Lucas in the primary.

Yet there are risks as well as opportunities in the Lucas campaign. What would a resounding Lucas defeat in the primary say to blacks and to all voters in Michigan? Would it be blamed on such factors as campaign organization and Lucas' stand on issues, which obviously are important, or would it be blamed on his color? Would it be blamed on the desertion of GOP leaders who encouraged him to switch parties and file for governor? And if Lucas became the GOP nominee and then lost to the incumbent governor in the fall, what would that say about the respective attitudes of the two parties toward minorities?

We own no crystal ball. Whether Lucas' candidacy is successful or not, the county executive's entry into the governorship race will make the August primary — and perhaps the November election as well — an exciting and challenging political experience in Michigan.

Warnings from Washington

When U.S. Sen. John D. Rockefeller IV read George Washington's farewell address in the Senate chamber last week, in the traditional commemoration of the first president's birthday, few senators appeared on the floor and little coverage showed up in the media except for a brief item in the New York Times. Yet the speech still contains some sound advice in these times.

The address is chiefly recalled now, it is true, because of its warning against "foreign alliances, attachments and intrigues" and the "insidious influence of foreign elements," notably Europeans. That advice was often cited in the pre-World War II isolationist era and sometimes is evoked by neo-isolationists of our own day. The farewell speech used to be cited, too, for Washington's renunciation of any third term ambitions, but that issue ended with the constitutional amendment banning third terms for any president.

Yet like President Eisenhower, who warned against the influence of the "military-industrial complex" in this country, Washington urged his countrymen to "avoid the necessity of those overgrown military establishments, which, under any form of government, are inauspicious to liberty and which are to be regarded as particularly hostile to republican liberty." Two presidents, both retired generals but speaking more than 160 years apart, certainly reinforce this warning today.

In addition, the first president warned against the rise of political parties based on "geographical discriminations," and counseled against "the baneful effects of the spirit of party generally." His contention was that while parties "may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely in the course of time and things to become potent engines by which cunning, ambitious and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people and to usurp for themselves the reins of government, destroying afterwards the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion."

Read what Washington had to say about public debt and public credit.

"As a very important source of strength and security, cherish public credit. One method of preserving it is to use it as sparingly as possible, avoiding occasions of expense by cultivating peace, but remembering also that timely disbursements to prepare for danger frequently prevent much greater disbursements to repel it; avoiding likewise the accumulation of debt, not only by shunning occasions of expense, but by vigorous exertions in time of peace to discharge the debts which unavoidable wars have occasioned, not ungenerously throwing upon posterity the burden which we ourselves ought to bear."

But then he added this advice: "The execution of these maxims belongs to your representatives, but it is necessary that public opinion should cooperate. To facilitate to them the performance of their duty it is essential that you should practically bear in mind that toward the payment of debts there must be revenue; that to have revenue there must be taxes; (and) that no taxes can be devised which are not more or less inconvenient and unpleasant . . ."

Too bad that more senators, all of the U.S. House and the current president of the United States weren't listening to that sound advice, originally addressed on Sept. 17, 1796, to Washington's "friends and fellow citizens," when it was repeated on the Senate floor last week.

To make a great community greater

To the Editor:
I have three specific things to complain about:

First, I have no objection to the ice shanties on Lakeshore Road, however, I do have an objection to their being left to sink. I do not have a boat, nor do I swim in the vicinity, however, other people do. Year and after I pass this area and in the spring several shanties are left and day after day I watch them slowly sink into the lake. If the people putting them up are not responsible enough to take them down before the thaw, a stop should be put to putting them up when winter begins.

Second, I am sure Grosse Pointe Farms can afford lights along Lakeshore Road. I go back and forth along Lakeshore to work every day. When returning home, frequently after dark, when you get to Grosse Pointe Farms there are no lights on the lake side of the road. They are needed more on this side of the road than on the other side. When I get to this area of Lakeshore, I always drive in the left lane, just because it is extremely difficult to see where you are going, and I feel safer. Also, farther on down the road at Grosse Pointe Shores, there is a stretch without lights.

Third, Friday, February 7, 1986, as I am sure you are well aware, we had our first snowstorm of the winter. While travelling through Detroit on Jefferson Avenue, the roads were wet (they had been salted sufficiently so that the snow was gone from the road). When I got to Alter Road, it was like entering a completely different area. The street was completely snow-covered. The snow was so deep I kept getting bogged down in the deep ruts. It was not until Monday that the roads were completely clear of snow. I realize Detroit has more manpower to clear the snow, however, Grosse Pointe has fewer streets to clear. I greatly appreciate the side roads being plowed, however, I think it is more important to first clear the main roads.

Thank you for listening to my complaints.

I love Grosse Pointe and, as long as I remain in Michigan, I would not dream of living in any other community (I have lived here all my life), but there are a few improvements that could be made to make a great community into an even greater one.

League supports renewals

To the Editor:
At its Feb. 4 board meeting, the League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe passed a resolution supporting the two millage propositions which will come before the voters on March 10.

Proposition I, the general operating millage proposition, permits a renewal and a continuation of authority to levy millage millage previously approved by the electorate. This millage authority expired on Dec. 31, 1985 and thus it is necessary to renew it. The amount of the millage authority under this proposition continues to be $25.35 dollars (25.35 mills) per one thousand dollars of the state equalized valuation. There is no increase in the authorized amount.

Proposition II, the public library operating millage proposition, permits a renewal and a continuation of authority to levy millage previously approved by the electorate. This millage authority also expired on Dec. 31, 1985 and thus it is necessary to renew it. The amount of the millage authority under this proposition continues to be $1.30 dollars (1.30 mills) per one thousand dollars of the state equalized valuation. There is no increase in the authorized amount.

The League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe, in its position statement on local education, has outlined, in part, the following goals:

- A. Support the concept of community education.
- B. Support and encourage public schools to:
  1. Provide appropriate class size for effective teaching.
  2. Provide an adequate school social worker program.
  3. Meet the needs of children with special requirements.

The board feels that passage of the two millage propositions will aid the Board of Education in achieving its goals, as well as working toward the fulfillment of the above positions of the League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe.

Recall Lauve

To the Editor:
Now that John Lauve has announced he is running for governor, it seems appropriate for someone to immediately start a "Recall Governor John Lauve Committee" so that they will have plenty of time to collect the necessary signatures to qualify to place the question of his recall on the ballot. I make this suggestion with the assumption that some court of law will, some day, agree with Mr. Lauve that a recall group should have more than 90 days to collect the signatures necessary to recall a governor.

Good men

To the Editor:
To the Grosse Pointe Woods officers who were on duty the night of Jan. 21 — I want to say thank you and God bless. Their assistance to me when I became ill during the night was appreciated. Their response was prompt, efficient and gentle. Such gentlemen deserve praise and acknowledgement for their services. It is reassuring to know these good men are available to our community.

Prime Time for senior citizens Eating chocolate is like falling in love

By Marian Trainor

Are you feeling guilty, wicked, sinful because you succumbed to temptation and ate every last one of those irresistible chocolate candies that you received on Valentine's Day? Don't, because many of the bad things you've heard about chocolate are not true. No less than the highly regarded "University of California Wellness Letter" states that no research has ever shown that chocolate either causes or aggravates acne. If this information doesn't apply to you, pass it on to your grandchild.

More pertinent is the news that chocolate has a small amount of protein and no cholesterol. If you like to drink your chocolate, don't worry about caffeine. It has less than one-fifteenth the amount contained in coffee.

Devotees claim that eating chocolate is like falling in love which could be true since chocolate contains phenylethylamine, the same substance released by the brain when one is on a romantic high. If one is rejected or falls out of love, phenylethylamine levels drop and the scorned may crave chocolate.

Chocolate is a favorite of fitness fans who concern themselves not only with exercise but good diet. They often reward their strenuous efforts with a chocolate treat. Frank Shorter warms up before his race by consuming a dozen chocolate bars.

If you are a chocophile, a term preferable to chocoholic, you have spirit, there are those who will argue that liquor is quicker. But liquor has its drawbacks. At a certain point, alcohol is a depressive. Also if you turn to alcohol to soothe an aching ego, you are apt to drink too much on the theory that if one drink makes you feel good, two will make you feel better and so on until you feel so good that you feel bad in the morning. And another item; no one was ever stopped by the law for driving under the influence of chocolate.

A cup of coffee or tea could be relaxing but neither has the richness, the lovely soft consistency of a absolutely unbeatable chocolate concoction.

With liquor and coffee disposed of as an antidote to depression, let us consider tranquilizers.

In a book Bernard Green, Ph.D., says that rather than alleviating stress, tranquilizers cause it and you can't fight stress with stress.

He contends that sometimes the side effects of tranquilizers are the same symptoms as the problem being treated. He further states that the negative results are intensified in an older person. Much of these assertions relate to misuse.

Karen Kohn Wilson, an Ohio State University psychologist, so believed in the power of chocolate to give pleasure, or if needs be cheer, that she started a "chocolate of the Month" mail order business.

For serious chocolate fanciers, Fanny Farmer offers the Chocostreets. For a long time the candy industry was dormant. Then Godiva came out with a beautiful packaged product. Godiva changed the image of chocolate.

There is a real trend toward 'snob' chocolate partly due to the baby boom generation who look for the best of everything, but also by those who can't afford the best but can achieve a feeling of elegance and being rich when they pay $1 a piece for one strawberry dipped in chocolate.

However chocophiles contend that the highest price is no guarantee of the most sensational taste. Locally Sanders, Morley and Sydney Boggs, among others, rank high in quality.

Don Gussau, the editor of Candy Industry Magazine, who spends much of his time surrounded by every kind of candy, buys a brand that sells for $4.95 a pound. He also likes Milky Ways and Snickers.

But for some there is satisfaction in buying something very special in times of stress, even if that something is only a box of candy. It's worth whatever it costs for the lift it gives. If you can't buy designer clothes, you can splurge on Bill Blass Chocolates at $14 a pound.

You may want to go a bit further. If you can't buy a mink coat, you might like to buy a $20 solid chocolate mink replica. There are

I say

The creative process

The two most-frequently-asked questions I hear when someone finds out I'm a reporter are, "How can you do all that writing day in and day out?" and "Why would anyone do a job like that?"

The "why" I usually answer with "I've become attached to eating." "It pays the bills, most of the time," and "A good question. Let me think about that and get back to you."

All three are true in their wilted little ways, I think. The 30 to 60 hours a week I may put in to do keep a frozen dinner or two stored away. There aren't any bill collectors beating down my Detroit door to get me. There are also some consolation prizes to this job.

If pressed, I have to admit I like my job. I can't think of another one where I could have met as many interesting people or done the variety of things that I have over the past five years.

I quit smoking twice for stories and have talked to people with such divergent careers as nationally recognized story-teller and president of the American Bar Association. I've got a Channel 2 promotional coffee cup stashed away someplace and faithfully use a Mason-jar Questers mug I received recently.

The why of this job comes through loud and clear for me in more than coffee cups and T-shirts, however. Every once in a while, I do something that helps somebody. That makes all the four-hour budget hearings, butt-busting council meetings and irate phone calls worthwhile.

For me, it happened about three years ago, when I did an article on the opening of Oxford Center, part of St. Clair Health Corp. that operates St. John Hospital and a half-dozen other ventures.

Anyway, I drove out to Oxford one less-than-cheerful day, missed the exit, got turned and twisted around and, finally, found the alcohol and drug treatment home.

Well, I did the interview in a nearly professional manner, only hemming and hawing a couple times when I couldn't think of questions, and wrote a longish story about alcoholism and the facility.

So, a couple weeks went by and a letter came from Oxford. The woman I interviewed told me she got a call from a teenager in Grosse Pointe who was having a problem with drinking. When the woman asked where the teen had heard about Oxford, the girl said from my story.

Whenever things get a little out of touch and I try to make myself a little more important than I am,

Seeing the variety and intensity of Rivera's work is something anybody can enjoy. And, if you look really close, you'll notice one painting from the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House collection, as well as another, a portrait of Edsel Ford, bequeathed to the institute by the Ford family.

The other incident that got me thinking about creativity was listening to poet Margo LaGattuta tell Parcels students about the writing process last week at the school.

It's hard to describe the feelings I had when listening to her tell kids about how she worked her ideas into lines, how she polished, added and deleted to make her work just right.

It's just as hard to say that the images of her poems became real when she read them aloud because the language she used and the way she used it painted such a vivid oral picture.

Mine were probably the same feelings that housepainters have when they see the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, or when a harmonica player watches a chamber music quartet; if only...

One thing I did want to be sure to mention this week was the Michigan Association of Children with Learning Disabilities meeting I attended last week at the library.

I don't remember being with such a group of concerned, active, knowledgeable parents who were so interested in their children's education. It was something to see.

It was also something to see how little I really knew about special education and the rules governing it. It put me in my place and took me down a good couple of rungs.

It also makes me realize I have a lot more to learn about a lot of things.

What started me thinking about the creative process?

Last weekend, I and what seemed to be the rest of Detroit went to the Detroit Institute of Arts to view the Diego Rivera retrospective. Artists fascinate me because I can't draw water from a well.

Parcells students learn from poet

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Parcells enriched English students got themselves some exercise for the creative sides of their brains Wednesday, compliments of poet Margo LaGattuta.

LaGattuta, of Rochester, was at the school all day and presented three, 1½ hour programs to sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders, which combined poetry reading, creativity exercises and anecdotes about her writing experiences.

"Poets," she told a group of sixth-graders, "are regular people, who get their ideas from a variety of places." Some of hers have come from her sons, craft fairs and even driving. The name of her first book, "Diversion Road," is taken from a thoroughfare in Rochester.

"Writers are stealers," she added. "You take things from many different places and use them in other places. It's really very fair stealing."

"It's not really stealing, though," she added. "You take someone else's idea or thoughts or words and push them through your own processes and what comes out is really yours, your own work."

Besides "Diversion Road," published in 1983, LaGattuta has also written "Noedgelines," published by Earhart Press, Ann Arbor, and to be released about the first of March.

She has also been published in many literary journals, including Cincinnati Poetry Review, Passages North, Calliope, Yearbook of American Poetry, Woman Poet, Moving Out, Labvris, The Little Magazine and waves.

LaGattuta said she has always been interested in writing, but stopped while she raised a family. In 1976, she returned to Oakland University to finish work on her degree and took a creative writing class that sparked her old talents, she added.

One fear any writer never loses is that of "the horrible empty white page and you just don't know how you're going to break that silence," she told the students. "It doesn't go away... It just gets worse."

One misconception is that writers do most of their work behind desks, LaGattuta said. She told students that she does much of her work during the night and whenever she goes out, jotting down snatches of images or word patterns that strike her as interesting.

Because her poetry often depends on the sound and music of language, LaGattuta said she had to speak her lines aloud before writing them down; something, she added, that could be embarrassing in a crowded store or restaurant.

"I got over that embarrassment," she said, adding "good writing has to do with good seeing. Often, my best ideas come when I'm not thinking about writing."

"All our ideas aren't always clear to us and sometimes we have to clear the fog away," LaGattuta continued. "I like to think of writing poetry as being a little like a birdwatcher; you have to be very silent so you don't frighten the birds away."

Being creative isn't something that always comes naturally, LaGattuta told the students.

"I always tell my students that there's no time in the day for creativity. There's no time in the day for simply doing nothing but being creative. You have to make that time," she added. "If you want to make something, give yourself the time to do it."

Besides poetry reading, LaGattuta told students something about the forms of poetry. She had them do a few creativity exercises "to get that right side of your brains active," she said.

The right side of the brain is associated with creative thinking and imagination. The left side offers the balance through logical reasoning and restrains some of the right brain's creativity, LaGattuta said.

She led students through an exercise called clustering, in which they used a central word and followed an image inspired by that word to its conclusion. When one trail ended, students were urged to pick another direction with their imagery.

"Sometimes I think of myself as an art teacher, setting up little displays," she added.

"Writing is a discovery process," LaGattuta continued. "You don't always know where you're going and you sort of discover that along the way."

"There are times when you write your ideas very fluently and other times when they just don't come out," she continued. "One of the mistaken ideas that new writers have is that writers do things right the first time through. That isn't always true. It takes time to shape and really polish a piece of writing."

Among some of the suggestions LaGattuta had for students before she answered their questions were to limit the fear and self-judgment of one's work because that often inhibits creativity. Also, don't put off starting to write a paper or poem; the task will always expand to fit the time given, she added.

Endings don't always have to be neat, either, LaGattuta said.

"Sometimes an ending doesn't have to be absolute. You don't have to tie up all the loose ends. That doesn't mean you should end before you have thoroughly examined your subject. Sometimes you can end with a question."

It's the way that you say it that counts

By Peter A. Salinas

The only woman in a corporate boardroom listens attentively to a report given by a male colleague. When asked for her assessment of the particular problem, she is interrupted midway through her second sentence. Several minutes later another colleague makes the very point she was in the process of making. There is general agreement that the idea is a correct assessment of the problem, and the meeting ends.

Obviously, her idea was fine. Her problem was in the way she communicated it.

This scenario is replayed countless times every day. With more and more women in the managerial ranks in corporate America, there is a greater need for women to actively examine how they communicate, says Dr. Mildred C.P. Matlock, director of speech and pathology at Rehabilitation Institute in Detroit.

She says there are many differences in the way women and men communicate — some are natural and perfectly acceptable, while others put women at a disadvantage when they are trying to make a point or issue a directive. "Authoritative voices are perceived as being strong, resonant and forceful," Matlock said. "— like men's voices. Women, by nature, have a higher pitch, which can work to their disadvantage."

Matlock is quick to point out that some, not all, women have a problem in communicating.

Women who have lilting voices — something of a sing-song quality — a breathy or sexy voice or are giggly often not take seriously when they communicate.

Matlock, 39, received both her master's degree and doctorate in speech and language pathology from Wayne State University. She has been director of speech and pathology at the Rehabilitation Institute for five-and-one-half years.

"The way girls are socialized is part of the problem," she said. "This goes beyond language."

How we are socialized goes all the way back to infancy. Boys are often encouraged to take that extra step, even during the first year, while girls are often kept closer to the parent and encouraged to be less adventuresome.

"Later boys are taught to express their thoughts directly, to be creative, to venture out and not beat around the bush when they communicate," Matlock said.

Girls are kept closer to home, Matlock says. They are discouraged from exploring their environment, and taught to be suggestive and manipulative rather than being forthright.

"Girls are taught to say, 'Wouldn't it be a good idea to go here?' rather than to say, 'Let's go here,'" Matlock said.

Inflection is an important part of speech, says Matlock, and it can make the difference between a woman who has a problem being taken seriously and one who does not.

A woman who says, "It's time for dinner?" is really asking whether or not her companion wants to dine. A woman who says, "It's time for dinner," isn't asking her companion, she's telling him.

The same holds true for issuing a directive to a subordinate. If the directive sounds like a suggestion, there is a chance it may not be taken as an order.

"Women are often taken less seriously than men," Matlock said. "Women are not expected to be in a boardroom, and I don't care what year it is. Recent studies show that women are interrupted more often, even by other women, than men are. And that's on a social level, not to mention in a corporate setting where there are many who are very competitive."

Both men and women managers often seek employee input and this often makes a managerial position run smoothly, Matlock says, but if employees think they have a choice all the time, it could be devastating.

Matlock said some older studies showed that many people believed women talked more than men. She called this the old stereotype where women were seen as doing all the talking for their husbands.

"Women just don't talk as much as men in a mixed corporate setting," she said.

Silence, says Matlock, can get one into just as much trouble as putting one's neck on the line by speaking up.

"Silence can mean that you accept what one is saying," Matlock said. "Even if you don't agree with someone, being quiet, can be taken as approval."

Another mistake is not saying something when you should.

"We are all guilty, both men and women, of saying, 'I thought of that, but I just didn't say anything,'" Matlock said.

She suggests making a tape of meetings so one can hear him or herself communicating.

"After you get over the shock,"

she laughed, "you can make changes."

Suggestions for better communication, says Matlock are: using one's own voice, a voice one is comfortable with; be direct, state an idea for what it is and get it on the table; and speak up, don't take the chance of being silent and letting someone else state your idea.

Non-verbal communication is also important.

"Sitting there, nodding your head and smiling all the time, gives the impression of being too eager and being easily led or being simple-minded," Matlock said. "It is also hard to think of an authoritative person as laughing all the time. Laughing occasionally, or when it is appropriate, is fine, but don't overdo it. People will think you are simple-minded."

Using gestures to emphasize what you are saying is good, says Matlock.

"People enjoy looking at someone who is involved with what they are saying," she said.

Matlock said if people think what you wear is important, then how one communicates over the phone becomes even more so, because that is the only criterion by which they will judge.

"Pure ability will only take you so far," she said. "After ability, it is how well you communicate and how well you get along with others, that will take you further up the corporate ladder."

"Communication is a tool, and as such, it can be used in a very powerful way."

Isn't This The Goal That We Have For Our Children?

We have all seen the statistics on how much more college graduates will make during their lifetimes than high school graduates. The tale is the same for an individual who has completed post college studies vs. the simple B.A. degree individual. After all is said and done, the ultimate dream of parents is that their child will be a successful, productive member of society. Our hope and desire is that our children are able to "make it" into a fine secondary school, a prestigious college, and then . . . law school or medical school or an M.B.A. . . . This goal certainly is more important than the fine automobile, the vacation, . . . almost anything a parent chooses in a lifetime.

When does a child develop ACADEMIC ACHIEVEMENT MOTIVATION? The psychologists generally agree that it is obtained between ages six and ten. Yes, folks, the desire to achieve in academics is developed in the first through the fifth grade and certainly by middle school. At The Grosse Pointe Academy, we believe children become good students because teachers, in small classroom settings, have taught the value of academic success during these important years.

Don't leave that most precious commodity, your child's future success, to chance. Look into the Independent School Education Program at The Grosse Pointe Academy.

This is it for Fran French

Fran French laughs when she says, "After three retirements in one year, surely this time I'll be out!"

But it's clear she's no quitter even though she has prepared for retirement on three occasions this year: in June, when she expected to finish up her 35-year teaching career as principal of South High School; in September, when Ed Shine, her replacement, finally took over; and again this month, when she finishes up an unexpected tour of duty as the acting principal of Ferry Elementary School.

Calling French back to work after a short three-month retirement seemed the perfect answer to the problem of filling Ferry School Principal Audrey Prim's place when surgery forced Prim to take a few weeks off.

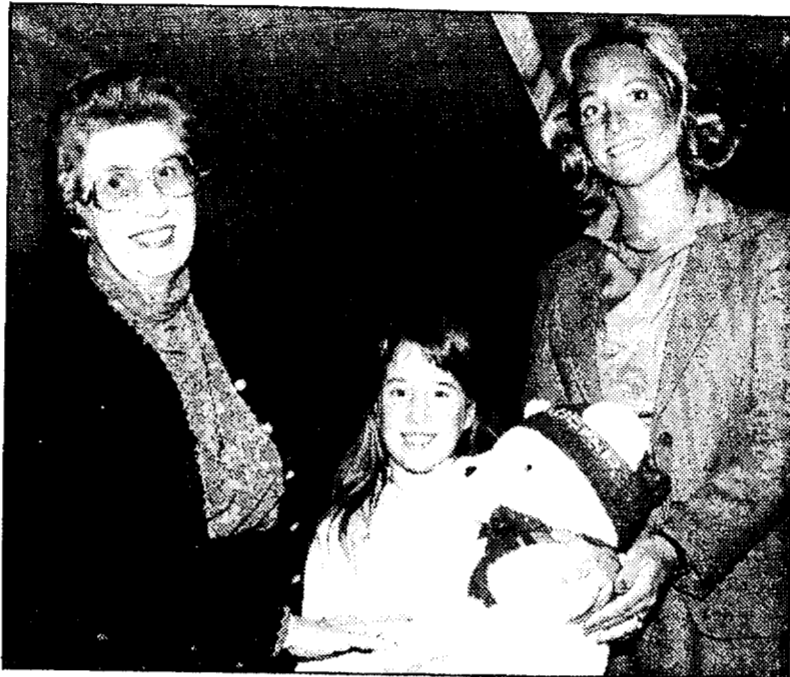

Although her experience has always been at the secondary level before, French says she has enjoyed these past six weeks. "I found that human relations, and managing a building, are really the same, no matter what the grade level."

The first woman to serve as a high school principal in Grosse Pointe, she credits the success of her month and a half at Ferry to the willingness of the staff and faculty to bring her up to speed. "I had tremendous support from each of them, and that's so important to an administrator."

What are her plans now — now that she's really going to retire? Family obligations will keep her close to home, but she's eager to indulge in a little reading and play a lot of golf when the weather gets milder. She hopes her success at school carries over to the golf course.

"Even when I was playing golf a lot more 10 years ago, I was never outstanding, but I had so much fun. I just can't wait to use my new cart and new clubs," she adds.

Bicycle helmets can prevent injury

A national education campaign is needed to encourage the use of bicycle helmets by children, according to a doctor's report presented at the American Academy of Family Physicians.

Each year more children die in bicycle accidents than as a result of accidental poisonings, meningitis, and accidental gunshot wounds, which get a lot more attention, the report stated.

The failure of school-aged children to wear helmets is a serious public health hazard and an important area of preventive medicine that has been overlooked, according to the report.

Recent data indicates that about 500 children die and 300,000 are injured each year in bicycle accidents.

Diet series to begin

The War Memorial will hold afternoon and evening meetings of "Dare To Be Thin" beginning in March. The class, a recent addition to the center's roster, is designed to help dieters stay on track through a realistic approach involving self-awareness and stress management.

Instructor Mary Eady, an experienced diet counselor, lecturer and successful "loser," feels that people on a weight reduction plan often fail because of negative feedback from friends, the media, loved ones and themselves. She will show how to analyze one's relationship with food such as what triggers overeating, how to avoid temptations and how to assert one's personal choices in her 15-week class.

The course will meet on Tuesdays, March 4 to June 24, from 1 to 2 p.m. or on Wednesdays, March 5 to June 25, 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Single sessions will cost $6 each or $60 for all 15 weeks. A card valid for any five sessions is also available for $25. Register at the center or call for information at 881-7511, Monday-Saturday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Anne Frank exhibit comes to museum

The international exhibition, Anne Frank in the World, 1929-1945, will be at the Detroit Historical Museum from March 28 to April 16. The exhibit has previously been in New York, Amsterdam and Frankfurt, and is currently touring the United States.

The exhibition features previously unpublished photographs from Dutch and German archives and private collections. It provides a personal account of the life of Anne Frank as well as an historical account of the Nazi rise to power and of life in Germany and occupied Holland. It is an excellent opportunity to educate visitors on the importance of human rights and on the dangers to all persons when these rights are denied to any members of a society.

This major exhibition is made possible through the sponsorship of the Burroughs Corporation, Comerica, Inc., The Jewish Welfare Federation/United Jewish Charities and the Michigan Bell Telephone Company. It is presented in conjunction with the Anne Frank Center, a branch of the Anne Frank Foundation of the Netherlands, and is under the auspices of the American Friends of the Anne Frank Center, Inc. and the American Jewish Committee.

Final round

University Liggett made it into the final debate rounds at the state championship debates held in Ann Arbor Feb. 1. Three hundred students from 54 high schools competed in the 69th Michigan Interscholastic Forensic Association Tournament. ULS was defeated by Hudsonville Unity Christian High School in the Class C tournament. The team consisted of, from left, Pamela Colby, Adam Levinson, Mike Baks and debate coach Lestina Colby.

Trombly kids make friends at SOC event

Working with both children and senior citizens, Outreach Librarian Helen Leonard knows that when it comes to making friends, age doesn't make a difference.

and Friendship participants for a viewing of Close Harmony. The afternoon was a success for all involved. Although the penpals that the Trombly students will be writing were not present at Ferry for the movie, Leonard was pleased that the point of the movie hit home with children as well as adults.

That universal quality of friendship helped make the day on Jan. 20 when she arranged for 20 Trombly Elementary School students, grades 1 to 5, and parents to bring brown bag lunches to Ferry School to join local senior citizens at Food and Friendship.

Sponsored by Services for Older Citizens, Food and Friendship is a week-day program where senior residents can share a hot noon meal with friends and can share in educational programs and activity classes as well.

As the outreach librarian for the public library, Leonard makes regular presentations to Food and Friendship. A movie she had planned, "Close Harmony," was based on the true experience of a teacher who combines the talents of her student choir and her older adults' singing group to present an intergenerational music program.

This movie, and the Trombly children's plans to become penpals with seniors, prompted her to invite the students to join the Food

Curriculum dinner

Teachers and the Ferry Elementary School Parent Teacher Organization, on Monday, March 3, from 4:30 to 7 p.m., will combine a Coney Island dinner with a glimpse of the elementary curriculum at the school.

Throughout the evening, teachers will present aspects of the curriculum for each grade level — the ladder of learning, "Computers and Kindergartners," "Sound Effects in Literature," "Learning Math With Cuisinart Rods," and "Library Skills" will be among the presentations.

Special-area teachers will participate by providing information about their services, either through demonstrations or discussions. The vocal and instrumental music students will furnish taped music in the gym during the Coney Island dinner. A tape/slide show of scenes from all classrooms will run throughout the evening.

Hein is finalist in German competition

Benjamin Hein, an eleventh-grade student at Grosse Pointe South High School, recently scored in the ninety-ninth percentile on a Level II National German Examination sponsored by the American Association of Teachers of German.

He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Gerhardt Hein, of Grosse Pointe Park, and is a German II student in Judith Righi's class.

Ben's score qualifies him as a finalist in the competition for a four-week, all-expense paid trip to Germany.

According to Righi, his score is the highest received by a South student in AATG's National German Exam during the last five years.

Activities set for Kerby Days in March

Numerous activities to highlight student talents will take place at Kerby School during March. Kerby Days was established to celebrate all aspects of children's lives, including their scholastic progress, their artistic leanings, and their relationship with school friends and their families.

The public is invited to the Open House on March 5, as well as to the Kindergarten Roundup March 14. To set the tone, Kerby School was host to Dr. Marjorie Kostelnik who spoke to parents about "Supporting Children's Friendships."

In the scholastic arena there will be a spelling bee and a Math Champs program for students in the upper grades. Also in March, Kerby kids will have the opportunity to participate in the March of Dimes Reading Champions program. In addition to promoting reading, the following awards will be presented: for 30 books read, a gold; for 20, a silver; and, for 10, a bronze.

Between March 3-14, in addition to regularly scheduled parent/teacher conferences, 40 students will participate in the school's first Science Fair in recent memory. All of their science projects, along with an Art Show presented by all of the school's students, will be on display during that time when parents will be in the building.

The annual PTO Open House/Festival of Stars on March 5 will have a new look this year. In the past, students developed their own acts and auditioned to perform in the Festival of Stars.

This year, in order to accommodate all budding thespians, participation in the event was opened to all students as an enrichment activity under the direction of Kerby parent Cindy Pangborn. More than 100 students signed up to be a part of "The Princess Who Wouldn't Talk."

To fulfill everyone's need for the physical, and to encourage Kerby's family spirit, the evening of March 10 has been set aside for roller skating at Great Skate roller rink. All students, parents and siblings are invited to join in this evening of fellowship.

Finally, on March 14, Kerby will host its annual Kindergarten Roundup at 1 p.m. and 2 p.m. for children who will be five years of age by Dec. 1, 1986, and their parents. An added attraction that day, for the future kindergartners, as well as for the entire student body, will be a visit from members of the Living Science Foundation who will bring a menagerie of animals for the students to see, hear, touch and study.

For further information on any of these events, call 343-2261.

Local students compete in Scholastic Olympics

More than 300 eighth-grade students from 12 Catholic schools competed in the Scholastic Olympics at Notre Dame High School recently.

Winners from St. Clare of Montefalco were Thomas Clos, second place in drafting; Bill Dailey, third place in English; and Dennis Rourke, second place in science. With seven points, the school came in third place overall.

From Star of the Sea, winners were David Barthel, second place, and Steve Swan, third place, both for forensics; Tionis Henderson, third place in history; Joe Kramer, second place in religion; and Jason Gilleran, first place in science. The school came in second overall.

In each subject, first, second and third place winners were awarded plaques and all competitors received a certificate for their efforts.

Pierce students race their cars

The fourth annual Pierce 500 Car Competition was completed recently at Pierce Middle School. Students in the eighth-grade woodworking class, taught by Rex Marshall, designed and produced their own race car entries in the four weeks prior to the race.

The cars, powered by a carbon dioxide cartridge, were required to meet specific measurement limitations. The ratio of weight to speed was an important concept each student designer explored. On race day, all entries competed in elimination heats on the 125-foot course laid out in the hall near the industrial arts room. Marshall signaled the start of each race and Larry Woods, engineer at Pierce, was the official timer, stationed at the finish line.

Peter Brankovic won first place with a time of 3.06 seconds. Brad Kime was the second-place finisher with a time of 3.16 seconds.

Chris Brow designed the car voted most unusual. Leslie Madar's car was voted the best show car.

Flood emergency volunteers sought

What if "they gave a disaster and nobody came to help?" The American Red Cross, Southeastern Michigan Chapter wants to avoid having to answer that question by recruiting 300 volunteers in Macomb and Wayne counties to meet the flood-caused emergency needs of shoreline residents.

According to volunteer Disaster Chairman Willie Gilbert, more volunteers must be recruited to assist in carrying out the chapter's preparedness plan which has been developed in cooperation with public officials in the affected areas. "Flooding is expected to affect approximately 75 miles of shoreline stretching from New Baltimore in Macomb County to Brownstown Township in Wayne County. Our existing volunteers and paid staff cannot adequately cover such a widespread area without the short-term help of local residents," said Gilbert. People who live outside of these areas are welcome to volunteer if they are willing to drive to the affected areas. All volunteer hours are flexible depending upon the individual's schedule. Red Cross assistance is provided by disaster victims 24 hours per day. People who wish to volunteer during this critical time should call Red Cross as soon as possible at 494-2860.

Red Cross will cooperate with government emergency management personnel, but does not expect to assist with their sandbagging or evacuation operations. According to Gilbert, Red Cross will provide shelter, food, clothing, personal care items, and flood clean-up supplies. Red Cross also assists with replacement of health and medical items, such as, prescriptions, eyeglasses, dentures, etc.

Anyone over 14 can assist Red Cross in its relief effort. Volunteers can choose or will be assigned as needed to assist with: surveying of damage to residential property; cooking for, feeding and sheltering of disaster victims at Red Cross shelters and service centers; recordkeeping; transportation of supplies for these various operations; and family assistance, which is a case-by-case assessment of the emergency needs of the victims.

Training sessions will be conducted by Red Cross for new volunteers. These courses are designed to prepare volunteers to assist Red Cross during the flood operation. One session for each course offering will prepare individuals to provide that particular service. Individuals are not expected to make a future commitment but may continue as Red Cross disaster volunteers if they are interested by taking additional training.

The following courses have been scheduled: Damage Assessment, Monday, March 10, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Mass Care and Shelter Management, Saturday, March 8, from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Family Assistance, Saturday, March 15, from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Course locations will be determined in the future based on the geographic locations of volunteer applications.

Licensed nurses are also needed to volunteer in the area of disaster health services. Training will be provided for nurses who are new to Red Cross, and a refresher course will be scheduled for nurses who have had disaster health services training in the past but would like to "brush up" their skills. Nurses who wish to volunteer can get more information and sign up by calling Red Cross at 494-2875.

Writers workshops scheduled

Of special interest to budding authors will be "Freelance Writing For Glory and Profit" and "Your Manuscript: A Constructive Evaluation," two one-day workshops that will be held at the War Memorial in March. Instructor for both programs will be Jeanne Paul, a freelance feature writer for newspapers and magazines since 1973. Her book reviews appear frequently in The Detroit News and Baltimore Sun, and she is a former ghostwriter for Sen. Charles Percy.

An intensive day-long workshop for those interested in freelance writing will be held Saturday, March 15, from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. "The difference between professional writers and amateurs," says Paul, "is the difference between writing for money and writing for the desk drawer. Pros know what editors want and they give it to them."

The workshop will cover where ideas come from, focusing the article, the right market, and how to overcome the fear of editors. Other subjects will include writing a query letter, how to deal with rejection letters, when to copyright and getting the "free" out of freelance.

The cost of the workshop is $75 until March 12 and includes materials, lunch and coffee. After March 12 the fee will be $85.

"Your manuscript: A Constructive Evaluation" is designed for writers who desire a critique of their unpublished work, be it a non-fiction article, review or book chapter. The informal class will be held Saturday, March 22, from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and is limited to 12 participants. Suggestions for the improvement of the manuscript will be given by Paul, who will also encourage questions and constructive criticism from the other students.

Material should be submitted at the time of registration, which has a March 12 deadline. The article or review may not be more than 10 double-spaced pages. Those who are working on non-fiction books should submit Chapter One only. Materials should be photocopies, not originals.

The cost of $50 includes a written and oral manuscript evaluation. Registrants should bring a sack lunch to class; coffee will be provided.

Register at the War Memorial or call 881-7511 for information.

grow his food, I don't have to feed him next month."

No one at RHEMA is sure how the changes in government in Haiti will affect the clinic. They are hopeful that the new government will be more open to new ideas.

No change in government will soon change the living conditions of the Haitians, however. These are marked by contrast.

"You see a lot of Mercedes and a lot of donkeys and bicycles," said Hendrick. "People live in thatched huts and corrugated metal lean-tos by the side of the road." International jetsetters live in walled enclaves elsewhere on the island.

"The Haitians are in need — and they are very appreciative," Gruits said. That keeps the volunteers feeling fulfilled. They all signed up for a three-year tour of duty and all were willing to sign up again.

"They enjoy it," said Gruits. "They said 'sign me up for 58 more years!'"

Parcells students win writing awards

Three students at Parcells Middle School received awards in a story competition sponsored by Cricket magazine. Joy Hastie, 11, received second prize, and Krista Karnasiewicz, 10, and Hardy Kim, 11, received honorable mentions. Joy's story appeared in the February issue of the magazine.

Easter workshops for the family

Easter festivities at the War Memorial will begin in the form of workshops and a special Easter Bunny Brunch. All of the activities are designed for participation by adults and children.

Strictly for fun are two Saturday workshops with Candy Hartson. On March 8 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., Hartson, who taught the popular Graham Cracker Gingerbread House workshop, will show how to make a rabbit hutch using graham crackers and candy decorations. The completed project will make an apt centerpiece or decoration for the Easter season.

The fee for the workshop is $10 per adult and may include one child five or older. Children must be accompanied by an adult. $7.50 supply fee will be payable to the instructor at the workshop.

Saturday, March 15, the center will begin the day with Make Your Own Easter Chocolates from 9 to 10:30 a.m. The entire family may join in the fun as chocolate rabbits and filled candy treats take shape in the workshop.

This workshop is $10 per adult (includes one child age 5 or older) and $4 for each additional child. A $4 supply fee will include one pound of light or dark chocolate and one flat mold. Dietetic chocolate is available if requested at the time of registration.

For the first time, the War Memorial will present an Easter Bunny Brunch, also on March 15, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. The happy hare will hop along with Easter eggs for the youngsters who will also be entertained by a magician. Brunch will consist of hot dogs, chips, pickles, apple juice and cupcakes. Admittance will be by ticket only, purchased in advance at the center, for $6 per child and $5 per adult.

Finally, the European flair of Ukrainian egg painting will be taught in the Pysanky workshop Saturday, March 22, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. The intricately designed patterns are not as difficult as they appear once you learn the secret, according to Martha Wichorek, who will demonstrate the craft. Wichorek has taught the workshop at the center for the past 28 years.

The fee for the class is $5 for adults and $3.50 for children and includes admission, stylus, design sheet and beeswax. Participants should bring two raw eggs that have been wiped with vinegar.

Samples of all of the crafts, as well as others, are on display in the center's lobby showcase. For information call 881-7511, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Monday to Saturday.

Cable rates to increase

As of April 1, subscribers to Grosse Pointe Cable's basic service will pay $9.80 a month, up from $9.30. They will, that is, if they don't sign up instead for one of the system's package services.

This is the third rate increase in basic service since January 1984, according to General Manager Michael DuFour. The rate went up to $8.30 in January, 1984 and up to $9.30 in April 1985.

Customers who subscribe to one of the company's packages of services will not see the rate increase, he added.

The idea is to get the nearly two-thirds of the customers who subscribe to unpackaged services to take one of the system's packages. The company has expanded its packaged services from nine offerings to 17, five specifically for older residents.

The cheapest package for older residents is $12.95; the cheapest package of the others is $24.95, according to the company.

The fees charged the company by providers of services like Home Box Office or Showtime are discounted when systems have more people signed up for them, company officials said. Grosse Pointe Cable is also offering discounts for subscribers who choose two or more pay services and other incentives.

The company would like to get about half its viewers into packaged services, DuFour said.

The system has wired two-thirds of the homes in Harper Woods, Grosse Pointe Woods, Farms, City and Park, DuFour said. Homeowners with inactive leads will be notified by mail urging them to resubscribe, he added.

The company plans a big marketing push to increase subscribers as part of its new packaged service promotion, company officials said.

The rate increase would not have to be approved by city councils in the franchise area, company officials said.

Augustana Choir to sing at Memorial Church Sunday

The Augustana Choir of Rock Island, Ill., one of the nation's most respected choral groups, will present a concert at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore Road, Sunday, March 2, at 8 p.m.

The 71-voice choir, directed by Donald Morrison, has sung in many of the nation's largest concert halls, recorded for RCA Victor, and performed on network radio and television. Last year the choir toured Scandinavian countries and sang for the king and queen of Sweden.

The choir, made up of undergraduate students at Augustana

College, was founded in 1931 by Dr. Henry Veld. Their first public appearance that year was in Chicago's Orchestra Hall. Since then the choir has attained an international reputation by giving concerts in 33 states, Canada and Europe.

All proceeds from the concert benefit Augustana College and Choir. The choir committee is comprised of John Siefkin, Constantine Trued and Kathleen Peterson.

Donation is $5. For more information, call Kathleen Peterson at 823-3678 or the church at 882-5330.

Shores police give ambulance assist

A patient at Bon Secours Nursing Care Center died two weeks ago in spite of heroic efforts by police and ambulance personnel. Mabel Meissner was being transported by ambulance to the hospital Feb. 16 when she went into full cardiac arrest.

Shores Public Safety Officers Larry Catanzaro and Michael Kortas were responding to an alarm call when they saw a Michigan Ambulance pulled off on the shoulder of the road. In the rear were both paramedics, working frantically on their patient.

Catanzaro got in and drove the ambulance to Bon Secours Hospital while the medics continued their lifesaving efforts in the back. Kortas went on to answer the alarm — which turned out to be false — while officers at the station covered for them, working into the next shift, police reports stated.

Meissner died before she could be admitted, according to a hospital spokesman.

three prominent local people for their significant contributions to the community, city and state.

The tribute dinner, slated for 6 p.m., Friday, Feb. 28, at Penna's in Sterling Heights, is being held to raise money for diabetes research and education programs at Mount Carmel.

Honorees for the occasion are Sister Mary Leila Koeppe, RSM, retired chief executive officer of Mount Carmel; Homer M. Smathers, M.D., retired chief of medical staff and founding director of the vascular laboratory at Mount Carmel; and the Hon. G. Mennen Williams, chief justice of the Michigan Supreme Court and former governor of Michigan. Williams is a Grosse Pointe resident.

Executive chairmen of the annual tribute dinner are Elliott S. Hall and Ira Silver. General chairmen are Mrs. Michael Madden and Mrs. Luis Toledo.

Proceeds from this year's dinner will go toward the treatment of diabetes through transplantation research and education programs at Mount Carmel. Diabetes is a disease that affects almost 10 million Americans and is a leading cause of blindness, kidney failure, heart problems and amputations due to circulatory failures.

Mount Carmel's research has included a pancreas and islet cell transplantation program that has achieved insulin-free status for several diabetic patients. The hospital's diabetes programs involved classes in "self-management" of the disease and will soon be available to community groups and health-related agencies.

Sister Koeppe was chief administrative officer of Mount Carmel for 16 years prior to her retirement in 1978. Under her guidance, the hospital's kidney center was founded, which treats many diabetics, and the Michigan branch of the

The third honoree, Williams, has been involved in public service for almost 50 years, both in appointed and elective offices, and has served his country and his state with distinction. The former governor of Michigan is now chief justice of the Michigan Supreme Court.

MEDICAL EXCELLENCE AND HUMAN UNDERSTANDING

He's hooked on writing

By Elsa Frohman

Tom Peters of the Farms found himself at a loss for words. He was appearing on a local Kalamazoo talk show promoting his first novel, "The Education of Tom Webber," when the hostess asked him the last question he would have expected.

"How do you distinguish your novel from any other dirty book on the market, Mr. Peters?"

What? Did this mild-mannered corporate speechwriter from Grosse Pointe write a (gasp) dirty book?

To be perfectly candid, "The Education of Tom Webber," published in 1977, was described in The Grosse Pointe News as "raunchy." But Peters denies the book's prurient nature.

"The main character is more moral than most of the other characters," Peters said. "He says what he thinks. There are some pretty turgid moments, though."

"The Education of Tom Webber" is about one week in the life of a young teenager in a Catholic military school near Kalamazoo during World War II. Peters defends the sexual nature of the book because sexuality is one of the subjects that teenage boys tend to have on their minds.

"I explore his emerging sexuality," he said.

"The Education of Tom Webber" ends after the hero's military school graduation. In 1986, Peters is looking for a publisher for "The Education of Tom Webber, Part II."

In "Part II" Tom Webber has come back to the Detroit area. He has become an orphan under the care of the Capucian monks.

"Part II gets heavy," Peters said. "There is a lot of adventure and it ends up to be a momentous week."

In the course of this week, Tom Webber meets several famous people, including Horace Dodge and Jack Kerouac, visits many familiar Detroit landmarks and has a date with a Grosse Pointe girl.

Peters hopes to find a publisher willing to re-publish the first book in a single volume with the second book.

"I was very happy with my first publisher," Peters said. "I'd be happy to go back to them. But they're out of business."

Local author tries his hand at a sequel to 'The Education of Tom Webber'

While Peters doesn't have a firm publishing deal on "Part II" yet, the manuscript has attracted some attention. It won an honorable mention in the 1985 International Literary Awards competition put on by Manuscripts, Inc., in Dayton, Wash. Judges in that competition described "The Education of Tom Webber, Part II" as "one of the top 10 unpublished novels from more than 4,000 submissions."

Peters read about the competition in a writers' magazine and entered, hoping for the $2,500 first prize. He didn't get into the money, but was pleased with the outcome anyway.

"When I read the part about being in the top 10 out of 4,000 submissions, I felt pretty good about it," he said.

Though Peters has had one novel published already, literary fame and fortune are still elusive. Just getting the first book published was a long and sometimes disheartening process.

"I wrote to publishers for over a year," he said. "I would write a query letter (a letter asking if a publisher would be interested in seeing the manuscript) and eight out of the first 12 or 13 wrote back that they do not read unsolicited manuscripts." Agents were no more encouraging. If you've never been published, it is hard to get published.

Finally, three well-known publishers responded to his queries and asked to see his manuscript.

After a publisher has agreed to read the manuscript, a second and just as long process begins. At most publishing houses, an editor reads manuscripts and screens them for submission to an editorial board which makes the final decision on which books will be published.

Peters manuscript went as far as the editorial board at Crown Publishers, but was rejected. Scribners considered the book, and Peters received a personal letter from Charles Scribner III suggesting revisions and a second submission.

Peters struck pay dirt at Banner Books (now out of business). The publisher agreed to a printing of

The Date

The following is an excerpt from Chapter Five of Tom Peters' novel, "The Education of Tom Webber, Part II." The chapter is titled "The Date" and brings the hero, a teenager in the care of Capucian monks in Detroit, to Grosse Pointe on a date.

It is twilight. The sky over Lake St. Clair is a deep, almost midnight blue. The waters of the shallow lake are slightly ruffled with gentle waves, and lights across the way in Canada are already coming on: streetlights along their lakeside drive and other building lights in downtown Windsor. Looking down through the channel to the Detroit River, lights are on at Belle Isle here and there, too. It is a tranquil time, leaves scudding about at their feet as they walk slowly along Grosse Pointe's millionaire's row, Lakeshore Drive. Tom marveled at the acres of manicured lawns and the hulking mansions further up on high, almost hilly terrain with vista-views of the shore and lake.

3,000 copies and took out trade ads to publicize the book.

A printing of 3,000 is a far cry from the New York Times Best-seller List, but Peters did achieve a measure of regional success with the book. It attracted attention in Kalamazoo, where the story is set, and in the Detroit area, where the book was reviewed in The Detroit News.

There was even an inkling of a movie deal on the novel. A movie producer requested several copies of the novel.

"I thought my career was made," Peters said. But, unfortunately, no movie contract was forthcoming.

If Peters' two-part story rings true, it is because the author drew on his own experiences. He attended a Catholic military academy in the area of Kalamazoo. He changed the name, but many people in that area made the connection. Peters also spent many of his formative years on the east side of Detroit, where "Part II" is set.

However, Peters denies any possibility that Tom Webber is Tom Peters.

"Tom Webber is a compilation of a kind of person I would admire," Peters said. "He is an athlete and he is interested in humanity. He is popular, but he is a rebel. He lays it on the line and provides me with a framework to talk about our American culture." Tom Webber also writes poetry, something he has in common with Peters, who said he has been writing poetry since he was 16.

Peters acknowledges that he has made the road to publication more difficult for himself by choosing to write about a teenage boy's maturing experiences rather than some more commercial genre.

"I set out and said I was going to write about things I thought should be written about in the way I thought they should be written about," he said.

With both Part I and Part II of the story of Tom Webber complete, Peters said he believes he will let his teenage hero rest. His next project may be something a little more commercial in nature.

"I don't think I would go for something just for the shock value," he said.

Peters does his writing on an electric typewriter, in his basement, in his spare time. He divides the process of writing a novel into two stages. The first, the creative stage, takes an determined amount of time which is spent forming and defining the plot and characters. The second stage, the actual writing of the novel, has taken about six months, in the case of each of his completed novels. He said he attempts to write a minimum of three pages each day, writing extra at the next sitting if he misses a day.

"There were a few times when I had to write 10 or 12 pages," he said. "There are times when you really flow. Sometimes you get going and knock out nine or 12 pages. But there are other times... You can't baby yourself. You have to set a schedule."

Peters is no stranger to the typewriter. He works for Blue Cross as a writer of speeches and film scripts. But his personal writing is a completely different matter. He writes his novels both for the pleasure of the process and the possible rewards of being published.

"It's only fun when it goes well," he said. "But when it goes well, it's great."

For ticket information, contact the Bon Secours Assistance League at 884-5737.

Howard's theatre activities began with "Plain and Fancy," which led to "My Fair Lady." He has been involved in musical theatre ever since either as music director, dance music arranger or composer.

"Carnival," "Hello Dolly," "1776," "Chicago," "Barnum," "Annie," "Baby" and "The Tap Dance Kid" are just some of the shows bearing the name Peter Howard. In addition, he has worked with some of the brightest stars in the theatre: Julie Andrews, Barbara Cook, Lauren Bacall, Carol Channing, Richard Kiley, Elliot Gould, Joel Grey, Carol Lawrence, Jerry Orbach, Chita Rivera, Ginger Rogers and Barbra Streisand.

Howard is a native of Miami, Fla. but has spent most of his years in New York City. He received his B.S. degree at Juilliard and his M.S. at Columbia University. Delta Kappa Gamma hears of travel

The Beta Delta chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma met recently at the home of Ann Ferguson to enjoy a slide presentation of the travels of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Freeman. The trip started from Texarkana, Texas and continued through Houston, San Antonio, Midland, Odessa, Fort Worth and Dallas, ending in St. Louis, Mo.

The slides of historic and modern buildings, museums, oil wells, the plains and buttes, and the artistry of Frederic Remington and Charles Russell were narrated by Elaine Freeman.

The home of Edith Forster was the scene for sewing and stuffing of Snoopy and Woodstock dolls which were donated to the Grosse Pointe Foundation for Exceptional Children.

The next meeting will be held on March 6, at 7:30 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe Central Library, where Katherine Macks, former Wayne State University professor, will narrate.

Teenage prodigy to play for Pro Musica Society concert

The 18-year-old violin prodigy, Joshua Bell, will appear in the Pro Musica Society's second program this season on Friday, Feb. 28. The concert will be in the Recital Hall of the Detroit Institute of Arts at 8:30 p.m., followed by the society's traditional social hour with refreshments in the museum's Romanesque Hall. Bell will be accompanied by the young award-winning Canadian pianist, Angela Cheng. The evening is presented in cooperation with the museum's Department of Performing Arts.

The program for the recital includes "Sonatensatz in C Minor" by Brahms; "Sonata in A Major, Op. 13" by Faure; "Chaconne from the Partita in D Minor" by Bach; "Nigun" (improvisations) from Ball Shem by Bloch; and "Carmen Fantasy Op. 25" by Sarasate.

In spite of his youth, Bell is already a veteran of the concert stage. He has appeared with the Philadelphia and Cleveland orchestras. He toured Europe and made his Carnegie Hall debut last spring with the St. Louis Symphony.

Bell is a native of Bloomington, Ind., and has studied violin since he was 5. He currently studies with Joseph Gingold at Indiana University and records with Decca/London records.

Cheng is widely acclaimed for her technique, tone and musicianship. She has performed throughout the United States and Canada and made her New York debut in Alice Tully Hall a year ago.

Tickets for this concert and the social hour may be arranged in advance by calling Pro Musica at 885-0793. Single admissions are $15; students are half price. Reserved parking adjacent to the museum is also available by advance arrangement only.

Your IRS Refund Check Has A Brand New Look.

This year the familiar green punched-card check will be replaced by the new IRS tax refund check.

The design is all new.

You'll see a full-length engraving of the Statute of Liberty, as well as a faint close-up of her face, over a multicolored background ranging from pale blue to pale peach. A pattern of the letters "USA" is printed in pale blue on the reverse side.

The technology is state-of-the-art.

These new checks are more difficult to alter or counterfeit. And since they're printed on lightweight paper—that costs less to buy and store—they save the government $6 million a year.

They're easy to cash.

The folks who cash your IRS refund checks know about these new checks—so you should have no cashing problems.

If you're expecting an IRS refund, watch for the new U.S. Government check.

League marks 36th anniversary with women's conference speaker

By Elsa Frohman

The League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe celebrated its 36th anniversary with a luncheon at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church featuring a slide presentation and speech by Barbara Mahone, delegate to the United Nations-sponsored conference on the status of women in Nairobi, Kenya.

Mahone began by explaining the purpose of the conference, the last of three held in conjunction with the Decade for Women, 1975-85.

"In 1947, the UN formed its Commission on the Status of Women," Mahone said. The commission has had the task of gathering information and reporting on the status of women throughout the world ever since. The Decade for Women began with a conference in Mexico in 1975 and a second conference was held in Copenhagen. The Nairobi conference was planned to complete the decade's work.

Mahone explained that the Reagan administration appointed 36 women to form the U.S. delegation to the conference. Leader of the delegation was the president's daughter, Maureen Reagan.

"The delegation represented everyone, from the wealthy to the common people," Mahone said. Among the 36 was former UN ambassador, Jeane Kirkpatrick, though she was not able to accompany the group to Kenya.

Mahone is director of Human Resources Management for General Motors' Chevrolet-Pontiac-Canada Group. She had been a previous Reagan appointee to a different conference. She said she believes that previous appointment helped her get the appointment to the Kenya delegation.

"As a delegate, you have no personal view," she said. "It was made clear to us that if we couldn't support President Reagan's policies, we didn't belong in the delegation."

Preparation for the conference included briefings on nearly every aspect of U.S. foreign policy so the delegates could represent that policy knowledgeably.

Before the delegation departed, it was honored with a White House luncheon attended by the president, the vice president and the entire cabinet.

"I think it was a measure of how important the president believed the conference to be that he had a luncheon at the White House with the entire cabinet," Mahone said.

The trip to Kenya was paid for by the State Department and by private donations. The delegation and a complement of Secret Service agents were flown to Nairobi in a presidential aircraft loaded with equipment and supplies. The delegation took along its own computer equipment as well as food supplies.

"We were so loaded down, I was worried about getting off the ground," Mahone said.

The official delegates arrived in the midst of a storm of controversy over hotel rooms, Mahone said. After the UN conference had been scheduled, a second group decided to have a conference in the same location to observe the UN conference, Mahone explained. The NGO (Non-governmental Organizations) conference began before the UN conference and its delegates were dismayed to find that they were expected to give up their hotel rooms to the UN delegates.

"The NGO Forum got more publicity," Mahone said. That group included many well-known feminists, such as Bela Abzug, Betty Friedan and many others. According to Mahone, the Kenyan government sided with the UN delegates in the hotel dispute, causing much negative press coverage when the NGO delegates were deprived of their hotel rooms.

Once the UN conference got underway, the first questions were over seating of delegates and the rules the conference would be conducted under.

Mahone credits Maureen Reagan with working to adopt rules that all the delegates could live with. Under the adopted rules, resolutions would be approved by consensus rather than a vote. Mahone explained that if issues were voted upon, the third world nations would always vote as a block, cancelling out the concerns of the western industrial nations.

The second triumph of the early hours of the conference was the seating of the Israeli delegation without protest from the Arab delegates.

As the conference got into full swing, the U.S. delegates were assigned shifts to listen to translations of all the speeches being given. They were to listen for specific attacks on the United States so the United States could ask for the right of reply. Mahone said the right was requested about a dozen times during the 11-day conference.

The rest of the delegates time was taken up by lobbying, gathering information and attending social functions. Each delegate went out to observe a development project in the surrounding country of Kenya during the conference.

Barbara Mahone was one of 36 U.S. delegates to the United Nations Conference on the Status of Women in Nairobi, Kenya, in July 1985. She talked to the League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe about her experiences at the club's 36th anniversary luncheon.

Mahone spoke of the political nature of the negotiations that went on, explaining that the tensions between the United States and the Soviet Union colored most of the issues that were discussed.

"If we were to make an initiative concerning family violence, the Russians would say, 'See how it is in the capitalist west — the men beat their wives,'" Mahone said.

The result of the conference was the Forward Looking Strategies, a list of resolutions concerning the health, education, status and living conditions of women throughout the world. In September, the strategies were adopted officially by the United Nations.

Mahone sees the benefits of the conference as having begun before the conference itself. She points to the Reagan administration's initiative on family violence as something that probably wouldn't have happened as soon if the conference had not been on the administration's mind.

In addition to hearing Mahone's description of the UN conference, the League of Women Voters honored women elected officials in the Pointes at the luncheon.

The league is a group of women and men interested in disseminating information about the elective process in the United States. The group publishes the Know Your Elected Officials brochures that list local, state and national legislators and officials, and the Know Your Grosse Pointe book which is published every 10 years.

The senator will be answering questions and concerns from the audience. Everyone is urged to attend. There will be no admission charge and parking is convenient.

Levin was first elected to the U.S. Senate in 1978. He was elected for a second term in 1984. Contributing to his reputation as a conscientious, caring and careful legislator has been his work on a variety of issues ranging from attempting to halt spending on wasteful and destabilizing nuclear weapons to making government more effective and fair.

Born in 1934 in Detroit, Levin attended Detroit public schools and graduated from Central High School in 1952. He graduated from Swarthmore College in 1956 and from Harvard Law School in 1959.

He practiced law in Detroit for five years before his appointment as an assistant Michigan attorney general and general counsel for the Michigan Civil Rights Commission in 1964. In 1967-69, he was special assistant attorney general and the chief appellate attorney for the Defender's Office in Detroit.

Carl Levin

Levin won a seat on the Detroit City Council in 1969. In 1973, he was re-elected, receiving the most votes of any candidate in the city-wide council elections, thereby becoming Council President for the following four years.

Levin is a member of the Armed Services Committee, the Governmental Affairs Committee and the Small Business Committee.

What's in a name?

There's no truth to the rumor that in the third grade, I took names so well in my job as hall monitor that I was voted "Most Likely to End Up as a Gestapo Officer." But my talent for picking up names (and dropping them) was, well, legendary. And remains with me to this day, I might add.

Which is probably why people still run the other way when they see me poised with notebook and pencil in hand (just the way the kids in Sister Damien's third grade class did back at St. John's Grade School).

Taking names . . .

Behind the scenes names — My recent plea for assistance in identifying those students who serve as statisticians and team managers has drawn some response. North High assistant hockey coach Pete Costello called to let us know that statisticians Wendy Lass, Jill Bankey, Thea Walker and Angie Dallas and team manager Brendan Rohan, have done a great job on behalf of the Norsemen icers this season.

By the way, if Wendy Lass' name seems familiar, that's because it is. Her big brother Rick was North's very first varsity goaltender back in 1983-84.

Here's-a-new-one-on-me names — Okay, so I've never heard of the Eastern Michigan League's All-Academic Varsity Cheerleading Team (I always knew that cheerleaders sure could spell, though). But it does exist, sports fans, and South High is well-represented. Sophomores Jenni Villegas and Kari Dierkes, juniors Roberta Wahl and Anna Olsen, and senior Marilyn Jackson earned spots on the 35-member team. (Give me an A-L-L R-I-G-H-T!).

Nicknames — My favorite this year is "Uncle Tim," bestowed upon South High varsity hockey coach Tim Zimmerman. Zim's had a succession of nicknames throughout his years at South — some of them even printable — but Uncle Tim's the best so far, I think.

Gez that name is familiar — The Woods' own Jimmy Carson was the subject of a feature story in the Feb. 20 Detroit Free Press sports section. Carson is finishing up his last year in junior hockey, playing well and still projected to go in the top 10 players drafted by the National Hockey League this June.

Gez that name is familiar-Part II — Sean Bruce, who has led the South High Blue Devil basketball team in nearly every category in its last four straight victories, earned recognition for his efforts in a recent Detroit News. Nice to see other folks discover what we here in Grosse Pointe already knew: we've got some awfully good athletic talent in these parts.

Don't mention that name — Say "Detroit Red Wings" in any gathering and watch some major-league subject changing start to take place. The Wings are pretty pitiful this year and the best thing that could happen to them is for April to come; but it still bothers me to read players and team officials being quoted in the newspapers about how much they're looking forward to the end of the season. Uh-huh. Does that mean that beleaguered Wings' fans can get into the rest of this season's home games (nine in all) for free?

Just asking.

Remember that name — Mike Reynolds, the North High diver profiled in last week's Grosse Pointe News. Reynolds was really a pleasure to talk to . . . which isn't always the case with high school athletes (don't ask me who or I might just tell). Reynolds is being courted by a few colleges and should be a real asset to whatever university he chooses . . . whether he dives or not.

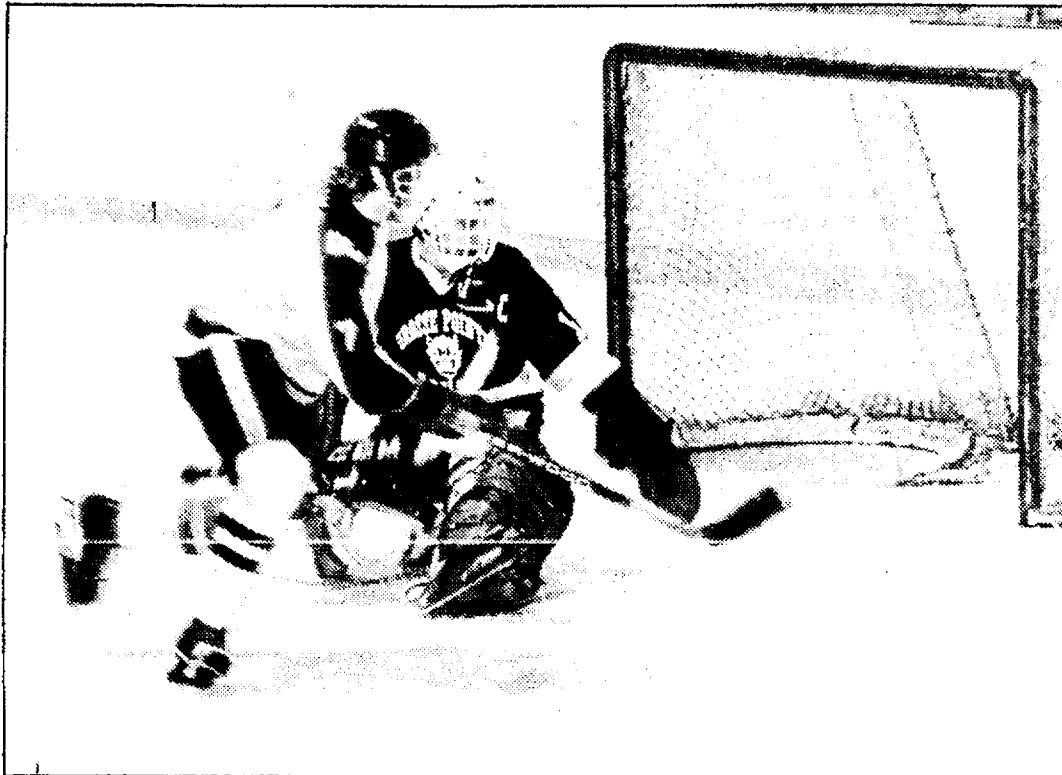

What in the name of . . . — When North baseball coach Frank Sumner says his varsity crew is getting in a little early spring practice, he means early. As in 6 a.m. In the morning. That's what time the Norsemen start practice these days, while sharing gym time with winter sports teams.

I just want to know how much harder it is to get a curve ball to break when you throw it before your eyes are open.

Get those guys some name tags — Let's see, the youth hockey season is in the home stretch, and I'll bet I haven't seen a few of the names which appear in the regular "Center Ice" column spelled the same way twice. For some reason, Jamie Bufalino occasionally comes in as "Buffalino" or even "Bufallino." And poor Behi Rabhani, has had it just as bad.

Because of conflicting information submitted to us, (like some kids' who have more spellings to their names than Colonel Khaddafi does) we have had to resort to guessing about the correct spelling of many names, and just hoping for the best. Let us know when we're falling behind in the name-that-kid-correctly contest. We'll fix it.

Hey, when I take names, I want 'em right.

A great start . . .

. . . to the regional hockey tournament was just what happened Monday night at St. Clair Shores Civic Arena. The South High Blue Devils got a scare from the upstart Fraser Ramblers, but a Rob Wood goal with 5:28 to go in the game gave South a 5-4 win in the first round of the playoffs. It was a rough game, with numerous penalties on each side. Above, South senior Bill Tecos makes a stop on Dennis Harm's effort. At top left is an indication of the close-checking second period as South's Wood and Tim Jerome are sandwiched by Harm and defenseman Dan Gerkey. And at right, the Devils celebrate Wood's game-winning goal (that's defenseman Evan Frakes in the foreground). South got goals from Rodney Goin, Wood (two), John Nicholson and Bourke; assists went to Wood, Andrew Roy, Mike Kramer, Jerome and Frakes. South will play Port Huron, which had a first-round bye, at 6:30 p.m. tonight, Feb. 27.

And, lest North High and University Liggett School fans think we've forgotten them, the Norsemen played Port Huron Northern on Feb. 25, at just about the same time ULS was taking on Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard. Unfortunately, that was also the exact time the News went to press. But fear not, followers of the Norsemen and the Knights, we will feature complete game results and photos from all the regional action in the March 6 edition of the Grosse Pointe News.

Knight skaters finish with 14-7-1 mark

The "skating Knights" of ULS capped a very fine hockey season with three blowout wins over Andover, Port Huron Northern, and St. Clair High School. The trio of victories gave the Knights a 14-7-1 regular season record. "And now," junior defenseman Blasko Ristic commented, "we will take a very determined and serious attitude into the regional tournament." (ULS was competing in the tournament at press time). The Knights' post-Christmas record stands at 11-1-1. During the winning streak, the Knights out-shot their opponents by a whopping 540-292 margin, scoring 75 goals over that period of time and allowing just 35 (5.8 goals per game average versus 2.7 goals against per game). "That's fantastic. Our three strong goalies, particularly senior stopper Ed Brady, and the improved play of the team's defense, must be credited with these impressive numbers," Coach John Fowler said. On Wednesday, Feb. 12, ULS skated to an easy 7-3 victory over Andover. On Feb. 19, against Port Huron Northern in McCann Rink, the Knights exploded for five goals in the first period (two each by senior blueliner John Birgbauer and sophomore center Gordie Maitland). Ed Brady was solid in net, turning aside every Port Huron Northern shot except one, as the ULS skaters cruised to an impressive 6-1 victory. Charies Roby talked a goal and an assist, and was joined in the scoring column by senior Mike French and junior defenseman Ristic; each had one assist. Junior assistant captain Bob Jewett scored one goal. "The fans were treated to a very fine brand of skating hockey," a parent noted at the conclusion of the Knights' last home game. For the four ULS seniors, John Bigbauer, Mike French, Ed Brady and John Petrilli, it was a memorable finish to their careers in front of an appreciative home crowd. The Knights had little trouble in their last regular season game against St. Clair High School on Sat., Feb. 22, cruising to a 7-2 win.

Cagers rebound

The ULS varsity basketball team continued in its bid to turn its season around with a thrilling come-from-behind win over Huron Valley Lutheran on Feb. 21, at ULS. The 53-50 victory avenged a Jan. 24 loss to Huron Valley and raised the Knights' record to 5-11. It was also the squad's third win in the last four outings. "This is the third time we have come back to beat teams who have already beaten us," said Coach Chuck Wright. "These kids are showing a lot of courage and character. I'm especially proud of the defensive job Keith Calcagno did on high-scoring Tony Mitchell. That was one of the keys to the victory," Wright said. ULS trailed, 37-28, entering the fourth quarter. Tightening their game-long press, the Knights stole several passes. Kirk Haggarty and Marc Hunt forced the turnovers and either converted the steals into layups or dished off to Kevin Darby and John Travis for buckets. ULS scored 14 straight points to take a 41-37 lead with 4½ minutes to play. The teams traded baskets until, with 13 seconds left, Travis sank two foul shots to give ULS a commanding 53-48 lead. Haggarty led the Knights with 17 points and 18 rebounds. Darby added 16, with 10 of these being scored in the pivotal fourth quarter. Travis contributed 12, six in the fourth quarter.

The play of sophomore forward Gordie Maitland is just one of many reasons why the University Liggett School varsity hockey team improved its record to 14-7-1 this season under first-year coach John Fowler. The Knights won their last three games prior to regional tournament competition this week.

Blue Devil icers finish first

By Jennifer McSorley
South High

The Blue Devil varsity hockey team completed its regular season with two victories last week. Senior Rob Wood had hat tricks in both games. South finished in first place in the Michigan Metro League. The Devils topped Port Huron, 7-5, on Feb. 20. Wood, junior Andy Roy and sophomore Tim Jerome scored first period goals; Mike Amore (two), Jerry Bourke, Rodney Goin (two) and Wood drew assists. The score was tied at 3-3 at the end of the first period and remained that way until Wood scored from Jerome in the third period. Junior Jeff Lefebvre, Roy and Wood closed out the scoring. Jerome, Evan Frakes, Lance Eriksen, Wood, Lefebvre and Eric Warezak drew assists on the third period goals. Sophomore goalie Mike Semack played the entire game, making 20 saves. South closed out its home season — the last appearance at home for seniors Amore, Mike Kramer, Bill Tecos, Warezak and Wood — with a 6-1 victory over Gabriel Richard on Feb. 22. Richard took a 1-0 lead early in the game, but the Devils came back with three goals in each of the last two periods. Wood scored all of the second period goals — a pure hat trick — on assists from Roy and Jerome. He added another goal in the third period, from Warezak; Roy and sophomore Kevin Bourke closed out the scoring. Jerome and Jim Ryszewski assisted on those goals. Tecos played what coaches called an "outstanding game," making saves on 26 of 27 Richard shots in coming close to a shutout performance. The Blue Devils were competing in regional playoffs at press time. Full results will be published in the March 6 Grosse Pointe News.

Cagers take pair

By Stephen Ebner
South High

The South basketball team chalked up a pair of Eastern Michigan League wins last week, conquering Roseville, 68-57, and L'Anse Creuse North, 49-47, in overtime. Guard Ed Gramling led the attack against Roseville with 23 points and nine rebounds. Guard Sean Bruce shot for 15 points, 12 assists and four steals. Returning from an injury, center Gordie Langs had seven points, 11 rebounds and four blocked shots. "We played very physically," said coach George Petrouleas. "That, and a 55 shooting percentage helped us greatly." After beating L'Anse Creuse

North on Feb. 21, South (11-2) remained in control of second place in the EML. Mount Clemens, which gave South its only league losses, has clinched the EML title. In the LCN game, South rallied in the last minutes. With the score tied at 44-44 at the end of regulation, the Devils held LCN to just one basket and a free throw in overtime. Bruce netted 20 points, stole eight and assisted on five, while teammates Hudson and Langs combined for 15 rebounds. South plays its final regular season game Feb. 28, hosting East Detroit. The first round of tournament play begins March 3. South's overall record is 14-5.

South's JV lost to Roseville, 56-48, but bounced back to beat L'Anse Creuse North, 54-51. Against Roseville, Andy Ament had 14 points, four rebounds and two steals, earning player of the game honors. Andre Bielski had 18 points. Lance Harding and Roger Drabant combined for 13 rebounds. Co-captain Nick Saros was player of the game against LCN, scoring 16 points, with three assists and five steals. Bielski led the scoring with 17 points; Ament added eight points and four blocked shots. "A lot of these guys are just a year away from really showing their stuff... this year was for tuning up for varsity," said coach Al Devine. "Petrouleas will be the recipient of some talented ball players." South is 6-7 in the league, 8-11 overall and plays East Detroit at home Feb. 28. "This game means a lot to the team, we know we're better than our record shows. A 7-7 record would be a big lift..." Devine said.

South's freshman completed their outstanding 15-1 season last week, by beating Kelly 78-60, and crushing rival North High, 59-47. At Kelly, Chris Rowan had 34 points and Chris Gramling netted 16 points. Against North, Chris Markus led the way with 18 points. Rowan had 14 and Gramling, 10. "I can't say enough about the team," said coach John Jones. "They're a close knit bunch which has matured a great deal."

Swimmers second

South's varsity team traveled to the 12-team Brighton Invitational last weekend, swimming to second place overall. South now awaits the Class A state meet. First place efforts for South included the medley relay team of Jeff Clark, Rick Leonard, Matt Smith and Scott Frame; Matt Smith in the 100 fly; and Rick Leonard in the 100 breast. On March 7 and 8, South will compete in the 30-school Class A meet in Lansing. Coach Fred Michalik looks forward to the meet, saying "The kids are tired, so we're just going to rest (until then) and not overtrain. I think we'll finish in the top four." (By Stephen Ebner)

Spikers on top

South's volleyball teams are nearing the end of the regular season; in fact, the freshman team concluded its year with a victory over North and the varsity finished in first place in the EML. The varsity topped Roseville, 15-7, 15-2, last week, as junior Heather Imel scored 15 service points and senior Theresa Schulte had 12. Junior Barb Van Wingerden made five kills and junior Patty Hess and Imel added four apiece. The girls also beat L'Anse Creuse North, 15-11, 13-15, 15-12. Junior May Younes scored 12 service points and sophomore Megan Keller, 11. Van Wingerden had nine kills and Imel, six. The girls play at East Detroit on Feb. 28, and compete in the district tournament on March 1.

The JV squad beat Roseville, 15-2, 15-10. Sophomore Carrie Donaldson and freshman Chris Schulte scored seven service points each. Sophomore Barb Denler and Schulte each had three kills and sophomores Erin Duffy and Lisa Van Tassel had two kills apiece. The girls then lost to L'Anse Creuse North, 8-15, 15-17. Donaldson scored seven service points and Schulte, six. Denler made seven kills and Schulte added three. Patty Pentecost was leading setter with 15.

The JV team is tied for first place in the EML with L'Anse Creuse North, with one game left — against East Detroit Feb. 28. "L'Anse Creuse North should of had no problem with Port Huron Northern so we have to win (our game) to stay tied for first," said coach Amy Argo.

South's freshmen lost to Oakwood Junior High, 3-15, 6-15. Coach Jan Kuhagen said "Oakwood has a very strong team. They are first place in their league... we really didn't have a chance." South did beat North, 15-8, 15-9. "Jessica Risher and April Vasher were very strong serving... excellent team effort, good passes to setters and good sets," said Kuhagen. Members of the frosh team which finished with a 5-9 mark are Jeralyn Bocci, Cathy Brisley, Lorrie Geist, Rachel Geer, Traci Lee, Meg Nelson, Risher, Julie Stade, Katy Tinney, Vasher and Stephanie Vito. # North sends four players on to college football

By Peggy O'Connor

Look out Hillsdale, Wayne State and Bowling Green University: here come the Norsemen.

Four Grosse Pointe North High seniors have signed letters of intent to attend college next fall on football scholarships. Quarterback Craig Como and receiver Jon Palazzo — the heart of the offense which led North to a 9-0 regular-season mark, a league championship and a victory in the first round of the state playoffs last fall — will attend Hillsdale College. Receiver Steve Pochmara is headed for WSU and defensive tackle Rob Brumer will attend Bowling Green.

A fifth North player, Brian Bergeron, didn't sign a letter of intent in the early signing period, but according to North coach Frank Sumbera, is still considering colleges.

North has not had this number of football players awarded college scholarships in at least the past five seasons. Sumbera said the awards are fitting finishes to the fine prep careers of each of the four seniors.

"It's rewarding for the kids. It's a payoff for all of their hard work and effort," Sumbera said.

Each player should fit in well with the school of his choice, he added. "A lot of schools — especially the MAC (Mid-American Conference) schools — were interested in Craig. But with his size and because of our offense, Hillsdale seems the best suited for him," Sumbera added.

"Rob Brumer was recruited heavily by the MAC schools, but some of them felt that he wasn't massive enough yet to start on defense. Bowling Green loved him for his quickness, even if size-wise he's still a year or two away," he said.

Como, 6-0 and 170 pounds, earned Class A, All-State honorable mention honors for his performance this season. He was North's leading scorer with 69 total points, punted for a 35.4 yard per game average, and set the school record for most completions (63). Como also holds North's career and season touchdown pass marks (15) and rushed for six touchdowns in 52 carries in an offense which did not make great use of the option play.

"My buddies and I are pretty happy. I never thought we'd end up at Hillsdale together. Palazzo and I are going to room together," Como said.

Como added that Hillsdale coaches plan to keep him at quarterback. "There's a senior quarterback ahead of me, but after he graduates, I'll be in competition for the starting job.

"I'm pretty happy — and relieved that my college plans are set."

Como

Brumer (6-3, 220), and Palazzo (6-2, 175) earned Class A All-State "Best of the Rest" recognition for their play. The 6-3, 235-pound Bergeron was named to the Detroit Free Press All-Metro squad.

Pochmara (6-1, 175) said he was pleased with his choice of WSU. "I really wanted to play college football and I was looking for a scholarship to a school with a good engineering program. I guess I got both," he says.

Pochmara

Pochmara said Tartar coaches have told him that they are considering using him frequently, hoping to throw 30 to 40 times per game next season. The Norsemen threw around 30 times per game last year as Pochmara split receiving duties with Palazzo.

The talented Palazzo wasn't sure at first if he'd like the centrally-located Hillsdale College. "But I talked with a few people and ended up visiting there and found out I liked it a lot.

"I also think it's great that someone I know (Como) will be going there, too."

Hillsdale coaches have informed Palazzo that if he works hard enough, he should be able to letter at the wide receiver position in his first year.

"And I'm going to work hard," he said. Teammate

Palazzo

Brumer

Rob Brumer said he feels lucky to earn a full-ride scholarship to Bowling Green. "I'm very happy about it. Not too many people get full-ride scholarships. I'm pretty excited."

Brumer said he assumes that he will play somewhere on BGSU's defensive line, probably at defensive tackle, his spot on the North squad. "I hope I'll be able to fit into their program. I know they are hurting for defensive linemen since they graduated quite a few.

Brumer said he plans to study in BGSU's technology department.

No Grosse Pointe South High players have been offered football scholarships. But coach Russ Heppner said that Andy Bedworth has talked with coaches from Dartmouth, Princeton and Cornell and that Jeff Van Tassel (who earned Free Press All-Metro East honorable mention recognition) and Jamie Barlow had visited Albion College.

Up and down week for North

By Mark Moore
North High

The varsity basketball team had an up and down week last week, ripping Lakeview, 50-36, on Feb. 18, before falling to Romeo in a non-league contest on Feb. 21, 59-52.

Against Lakeview, the Norsemen opened up big, outscoring Lakeview, 17-8. North went cold in the second quarter and could only muster four points, taking a narrow, 21-19 lead into halftime.

The Norsemen made some key baskets early in the third quarter, got back the momentum and cruised the rest of the way. Chris Dudeck had 13 points and Bill Miller and Carl Anderson had eight points apiece. Dave Bryer led the Norsemen under the boards with five rebounds; Miller had four.

The Norsemen traveled to Romeo on Friday night to play in front of a capacity crowd. The teams matched every other basket-for-basket for most of the game, until Romeo finally opened up a lead which it kept.

Miller led the Norsemen with 14 points, followed by Jon "Sweet J" Palazzo and Dave "Little World" Justice with 11 points each.

The JV squad pummeled Lakeview on Feb. 18, but were stunned on Friday night by a surprisingly tough Romeo squad, 53-41.

Against Lakeview, North opened up a healthy lead early on and stayed in the driver's seat for the rest of the game. Marc Demanigold led all scorers with 14 points. Carl Schultz dropped in 11 points with a big second half.

Romeo opened up hot against North on Feb. 21, but Kirk Lowry kept the Norsemen in game with his 12 points. Demanigold helped out under the boards, but couldn't hold off Romeo's attack in the 12-point loss.

North's freshman squad also ran circles around Lakeview last week, 53-35, but fell to a surprising South squad on Friday.

Playing one of their finest games of the year, the freshmen destroyed Lakeview with an outstanding second half. Scott Schorer played great ball, finishing with 15 points. He also had a team-high 12 rebounds. Scott Clein and Matt

Brady sank 10 points apiece. Clein had 11 rebounds and Brady, eight. In the loss to South, Kevin McCarron had a hot hand with 14 points and six assists. Clein controlled the boards with 12 rebounds and added six points.

Spikers tie

By Josh Abbott
North High

Victories over Lakeview and Roseville Brablec gave the North varsity volleyball squad a tie for the Bi-County title with L'Anse Creuse.

On Feb. 18, the Lady Norsemen traveled to Lakeview, winning 15-4, 5-15, 15-11. Junior Julie Cook paced North with 13 service points. The girls then beat Brablec, 15-2, 17-15. Senior Cindy Bowman led North with six kills. Seniors Brooke Bessert and Virginia Sanders added six service points and four kills, and four service points and three kills, respectively.

North ended the Bi-County season at 11-1 (17-7 overall) and competes in the district playoffs Saturday, March 1 at Regina High.

The JV volleyball team ended its season with a pair of wins over Lakeview and Brablec. North finished an impressive 11-2.

At Lakeview, the girls won, 15-0, 15-2. Freshman Kelly Gianunzio served 17 points to lead the squad. On Feb. 19, North beat Brablec, 15-9, 15-11. Sophomore Robin Wheatley had 11 service points and two spikes for kills.

North's ninth grade spikers beat East Lapeer, 9-15, 15-5, 15-8, on Feb. 14, before losing to West Lapeer, 15-5, 15-11. In the two games, Katie Koehler had 12 points and Heidi Cartwright chipped in with nine.

The frosh stand at 3-10. They were to have played the season finale at home on Feb. 25 (after press time).

Swim streak goes on

North's boys' swim team won its 17 consecutive Bi-County Dual Meet championship last Thursday, Feb. 20, by beating Lakeview, 121-49.

Turning in first place finishes were Brad Cooksey (200 free, 100 breast); Greg Cooksey (200 IM, 100 breast); Andy Young (100 free); Ian MacNeil (50 free); Mike Reynolds (diving); and Dave Farrell (100 fly). The Norsemen also won the 200 medley relay with a team of G. Cooksey, Rob Walters, Farrell and Young, and the 400 free relay with a team of Drew Dungan, Jeff Williams, MacNeil and Young.

Williams (200, 500 free), Ron Jendretzke (200 IM, 100 back), Bob Straske (diving), Bill Turnbull (100 fly), Jeff Cornell (100 fly), MacNeil (100 back) and Chris Candiotis (200 IM) swam their best times to date.

The Bi-County League championships will take place at North Feb. 27 and 28.

Hold campsite with phone call

Campers can now make phone reservations in Hartwick Pines, Ludington, Mears, Petoskey, South Higgins Lake and Warren Dunes State Parks, as well as written reservations, says the Department of Natural Resources (DNR). All state parks are now under a phone reservation system.

"We made this change to improve our service to the public," says Ron Nagel of DNR's Parks Division. These popular parks will only require a two-night minimum reservation like all other state parks in the Lower Peninsula.

Upper Peninsula state parks will again take written and phone reservations with only a one-night minimum. As in the past, only 50 percent of the campsites in a given park are under the reservation system. The other 50 percent are available to the public on a first-come, first-served basis.

Reservation forms are available at all DNR state park offices, the Information Service Center (517-373-1220), and the State Travel Bureau (517-373-1195). Phone reservations can be made by calling the park where you plan to go camping. "It isn't too early to plan vacations and make reservations," says Nagel. Over 57,000 reservations for use of state park campsites were made last year.

'The Miser'

William LeMassena plays the title role in "The Miser," Moliere's comedy masterpiece, which opens a four-week run at 8 p.m. tonight, Feb. 27, at Meadow Brook Theatre on the campus of Oakland University. For ticket information, call 377-3300.

Beauty, majesty pervades 'Ran'

By Marian Trainor

This award-winning Japanese version of "King Lear" was first shown at the Detroit Film Theatre. Departing from its regular schedule, the theater presented 14 showings of the film. Every showing was a sell-out, leaving audiences who were unable to get tickets disappointed.

With such a demand "Ran" was moved to two commercial theaters, Eastland and Main in Royal Oak.

The fact that Akira Kurosawa is the director was a big drawing card and word that "Ran" had won most of the available film honors — the New York Film Critics best foreign film award, the National Society of Film Critics best film of 1986 and acclaim by several critics put it in a "must-see" category. It deserves every honor accorded it. In the realm of cinema, "Ran" is a work of art.

Each frame is a study in perfection; color arrangement, choreography of figures moving across the screen, object composition with editing to show comparison and contrast.

"Ran" which means chaos in Japanese is the story of Hidetora (Tatsuya Nakadot), a Japanese warlord who has achieved control of his terrain after 50 years of warfare and butchery.

He is now 70 years old and ready for someone to carry on. He chooses his eldest son, Taro (Akira Torso), and turns the main castle over to him. Jiro (Jinpachi Nazu), his second son, will inhabit the second and Saburo (Palauke Ryu), the youngest will get the third. Hidetora will live nearby with his staff of soldiers. Together, the sons will be invincible.

Taro is delighted, Jiro is not too pleased with his lot but accepts it. Saburo (Cordelia's counterpart) protests, pointing out that sibling rivalry will follow the decision. Raised on chaos, they will revert to chaos. For his honest assessment of the situation, he is banished from the empire.

Too soon, Saburo's prophecy begins to materialize. Goaded on by his wife, Lady Kaede (Mieko Harada), Taro strips his father of all authority. Jiro in turn, still ranking at being second best, plots to overthrow Taro.

Total chaos reigns as sons plot against father, brother against brother, until the destruction is complete.

This heroic tragedy of an empires' collapse is a timeless blueprint of human shortcomings; greed, retribution, intrigue and the terrible consequences that result when such passions are unleashed and quarrels escalate to horrific battles.

The story is one of devastation but this tapestry of human folly, barbarity and war unfolds in sequences of astonishing beauty. There is violence, but it is a poetic violence. It is never unnerving or frenzied. Even the battle scenes are memorable for their spectacular display of color as Hidetora's sons go to war with each other, their armies streaming across fields carrying flags of red, yellow and blue. A beheading is signified by a brief splash of crimson on a white wall.

Even a sequence showing Hidetora entrapped in a burning castle is treated with quiet dignity. The elderly man is shown sitting placidly on a throne as flames crackle all about him. He rises quietly, walks through the burning castle down the many stairs until he emerges like a patriarch coming down from a mountain. The armies cease firing, part and let him through. The scene becomes an unforgettable comment on the futility of war.

Another device that Kurosawa uses to accent the dark horror of war is the sky. When we first see Hidetora, he is sitting under a sunny sky, talking happily with his sons and friends. By the end of "Ran" the clear blue skies have reddened into an infernal charnel house.

Less spectacular scenes have their own impact. We remember the gentle scene showing Saburo, the caring son, cutting branches to shade his father who has fallen asleep in the sun and Lady Kaedo as she crushes a bug in her robe, a significant gesture showing what she has in mind for Jiro who has arranged the murder of her husband.

While "Ran" is 16th century Japanese "King Lear," the emphasis is not so much on the fate of one mad old king as it is on the havoc his decision sets in motion. The theme of ingratitude of the child toward a parent is overshadowed with the theme of retribution.

In the height of his power Hidetora had been a ruthless warlord, stopping at nothing to gain power and wealth. He has blood on his hands, atrocities for which he must pay.

Lady Kaede, first the wife of Taro, then Jiro's lover, takes on that role of vengeance.

As Taro's wife during Hidetora's reign, she was a submissive daughter-in-law. After he relinquishes his kingdom she sets her plan for retribution in motion. The castle, now held by Taro was taken by Hidetora after he murdered her family and caused her mother to commit suicide. She is determined to take back the kingdom.

In the last scene after witnessing Hidetora's final agony and the climatic battle, we see a lonely figure of a blind young lord on a precipice, a moving symbol of war's futility and man's lonely search for peace.

"Ran" is three hours long, but they are hours that pass quickly as our mind and heart and senses are pervaded with the beauty and majesty of this film that has so much to say to us about human frailties and says it so well.

Students of the social scene say Japanese girls still tend to admire older men, although not as much as did their counterparts of a generation ago. Then, the usual young lady in Tokyo was not at all embarrassed if her escort was at least 25 years her senior, but was rather proud of it, in fact.

Violin prodigy performs in concert at MCC

Mi Dori, a 14-year-old violin prodigy, will appear in concert at 7 p.m. on Sunday, March 9, as a highlight of this season's Classical Series at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts.

With her cereal-bowl haircut, little-girl dresses and Mary Jane shoes, the young artist from Osaka, Japan, looks like anything but the kind of performer who could draw raves from some of today's leading violin virtuosos.

But four years ago, when at age 10 she auditioned for Zubin Mehta, she so impressed him that he invited her to be a surprise guest soloist with the New York Philharmonic on New Year's Eve. Her playing drew a standing ovation and she went on to perform with such luminaries as Isaac Stern and Pinchas Zukerman.

At the Macomb Center, Mi Dori will be accompanied by Rohan DeSilva, young concert pianist from Sri-Lanka who has performed with the Royal Academy Symphony Orchestra, the Boyce Chamber Orchestra, the Ernest Read Symphony in London and the Colombo Symphony in Sri-Lanka. He received his master's degree from New York's Juilliard School of Music in 1984 and currently is a post-graduate student there.

Mi Dori was born in Osaka on Oct. 25, 1971, and began studying the violin with her mother at the age of four. When she was eight, a tape of her playing was sent to the Juilliard School where it drew a response of "absolutely extraordinary" and a full scholarship to the Aspen Festival.

She came to New York in 1982 and, like DeSilva, is a Juilliard student. Her studies have included the Bach Sonatas and all the major concertos for her instrument. Her concert calendar for this season includes performances with the Toronto and Montreal Symphonies.

Tickets for her Macomb Center performance are $8 for adults and $6 for students and senior citizens.

They may be obtained at the center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The center is located on the Center Campus of Macomb Community College at Hall (M-59) and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

a.m. to 5 p.m. both days.

The seminar gives participants the tools and knowledge to develop, write and market an original screenplay for a feature film, movie for television, series episode or short film. Students will receive extensive printed material, including a complete screenplay.

For information, call 577-4665.

'The Hitcher' is 90 minutes of suspense

By Michael Chapp

If one was asked to summarize "The Hitcher" in a single word, that word would be suspense. Real, unmitigated suspense. The kind of pot-boiling suspense that keeps viewers on the edge of their seats for 90 minutes.

Reminiscent of Steven Spielberg's "Duel" in many ways, "The Hitcher" is about a lone cross-country traveler (C. Thomas Howell) who's tormented by a psychotic hitchhiker (Rutger Hauer). Because of its extremely graphic violence and disturbingly emotional sequences, "The Hitcher" plays best as a feature-length public service announcement which expounds the dangers of picking up a hitchhiker. But it's more — much more.

Just out of school, Jim Halsey (Howell) is delivering a car from Chicago to San Diego. On a dark, rainy night, Halsey picks up the hitcher for light conversation and companionship. Opening the door, Halsey says, "My mother told me never to do this." Pulling out a knife, the hitcher responds, "Do you know what an eyeball looks like when it's punctured?" So much for light conversation and companionship.

Bringing the knife to Halsey's throat, the hitcher tells Halsey to say, "I want to die." With luck, Halsey escapes, abandoning the hitcher in the middle of nowhere.

Whew! Relief.

But not for long. Continuing on his way, Halsey repeatedly meets up with his tormentor. The hitcher kills a number of people, and makes it look as if Halsey is responsible.

Eventually, the film becomes a showdown between the two, with the life of Halsey's newfound friend and confidante (Jennifer Jason Leigh) hanging in the balance.

The picture contains a number of typical Hollywood action scenes, but none of them detract in any way from the complete aura of suspense which permeates every frame.

Throughout the movie, the viewer feels an uneasiness — a knot in the stomach. One wonders who the hitcher is, and why he is torturing Halsey.

There is also a feeling of supernatural in the movie. There is a questioning of fate. There is terror.

Hauer brings to his character a frightening aloofness. From his eyes comes the blank yet deeply terrifying stare of a sado-masochistic sociopath. Having played a villain many times before in films like "Nighthawks" and "The Blade Runner," Hauer has menacing mannerisms down to a science.

Howell, on the other hand, is better known from films of the teenage variety. "The Hitcher" represents a change in pace for him — a challenge he accepts readily. Though he's asked to do little more than respond to the terrifying advances of the hitcher, he does so convincingly, and therefore forces the audience to be wrapped up in his character's hopeless situation.

Artistically speaking, the movie is very atmospheric. Wide, sweeping panoramas of mountainous terrain are numerous, as are sun-drenched vistas and wind-swept plains; all of which communicate the aloneness and magnitude of Halsey's situation.

Parents would do well to be aware of the film's shocking nature (Halsey finds a finger in his french fries, for example), as well as its strong nature and mature themes.

For adults though, "The Hitcher" is a top-rate thriller. It's daring, it's atmospheric, and it's suspenseful. But most of all, it's a hauntingly effective winner.

Mystery in 'Veronica's Room'

"Veronica's Room," a thriller/mystery by Ira Levin, author of "Rosemary's Baby" and "Deathtrap," is the fourth production of the season at the Golden Lion Restaurant.

A young girl, Susan Kerner, is induced to impersonate Veronica, the long-dead daughter of the Brabassants. But once dressed in Veronica's clothes, Susan finds herself locked in the room — and locked in Veronica's room. Or is she Veronica, in 1935, pretending to be an imaginary Susan? This fine work was called "a neat, elegant thriller" by the Village Voice and recently was revived on Broadway.

Portraying Susan Kerner is Nancy Minckler, a local actress with a wealth of professional credits. She has appeared at Fourth Street Playhouse, Actor's Alliance and the New York Theatre Ensemble.

The young man, Susan's companion, will be portrayed by Alex McAlinden. Alex was in the recent film, "Tigertown," which was produced for the Disney Channel on Cable Television. Susan's hosts will be portrayed by Jim Cornell and Darlene Haselwood. Cornell is an active member of the Stagecrafters organization, and Haselwood appeared as Myra in Grosse Pointe Theatre's production of "Deathtrap" by Ira Levin. She has also taken on a variety of roles at the Heidelberg Dinner Theatre.

"Veronica's Room" is under the direction of Denyse Wickline. Stage manager for the production is Molly Dodge. The play will be performed Fridays and Saturdays through April 5.

Patrons will be treated to a mystery dinner (a fish alternate is available if requested at time of reservation). Cocktails begin at 7 p.m., dinner at 7:30 p.m. with the show following dessert.

Price for the evening is $19.95 which includes dinner, show, tax and gratuity. The Golden Lion Restaurant is located at 22380 Moross, near Mack. Call 886-2420 for information and reservations.

Kaye Ballard comes to Hilberry

Kaye Ballard's one-woman show, "Hey Ma... Kaye Ballard," the off-Broadway hit that received both an Outer Circle Critics nomination and a Drama Desk nomination, will come to the Hilberry Theatre for one performance only, Sunday, April 6, at 7 p.m. Proceeds will benefit the travel fund for the Hilberry Theatre's appearance at the Edinburgh Festival in August.

Kaye Ballard, star of stage, film, television and nightclub, became a household name via her success in the television series, "The Mothers-in-law," but she first came to national attention when she starred in the Broadway musical, "The Golden Apple." She not only landed on the cover of Life Magazine, but her singing of "Lazy Afternoon" from the show's score catapulted the number into a hit and it has gone on to become a standard.

"Hey Ma... Kaye Ballard" is a lively solo entertainment highlighting the personal and professional life of the veteran singer-comedienne-actress.

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Ballard's first break came in Detroit at The Bowery, a nightclub well remembered by many Detroiters. Here she was discovered by Spike Jones, and she subsequently toured with him, with Vaughn Monroe and with Stan Kenton.

For ticket information, call 577-2972.

Attic to present 'Of Mice and Men'

The Attic Theatre will present the John Steinbeck classic, "Of Mice and Men," from Feb. 28 through March 30.

The story depicts itinerant farm hands in Northern California during the Great Depression. Big, retarded Lennie and his smaller, savvy partner, George, dream of a place of their own. They take jobs at yet another ranch to make a new start and save for their dream. Soon they share their dream with the old man, Candy.

The simple, straightforward dialogue that follows examines the sorrow of disillusionment and underlying hope of survival among the farm hands, and it reveals the universal longing of all humans for a home and brotherhood.

West Indies

Clint Denn, noted world traveler and filmmaker, will present his all-color film program, "The West Indies," on Sunday, March 3 for The Detroit Institute of Arts World Adventure Series audiences at 2:30 p.m. in the museum auditorium.

Often referred to as the Netherlands Antilles, these islands Aruba, Bonaire and Curacao, have experienced a turbulent history. Pirates, Indians and military conquests have swept over the area from the days of the Spanish explorers. In one decade governments changed seven times.

Focusing on Aruba's white sands, Bonaire's underwater coral gardens, herds of flamingos, windmills, secluded beaches, and lush hotels, "The West Indies" illustrates the many attractions that have earned the title "tropical paradise."

Tickets at $4 may be purchased in advance at the ticket office or at the door. For reservations or information, call 832-2730.

Jazz night

The Park Place Cafe has a jazz night every Thursday from 9 p.m. until 2 a.m. During that time, drink prices are reduced and complimentary hors d'oeuvres are served.

1C. PRAYERS

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who show me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in perpetual glory. Amen.
Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as your favor has been granted. Thank you for favors received. H.T.

THE BEST JAGUAR EVER BUILT:
 Breeding tells. While trends in automotive design come and go, the 1985 Jaguar XJ6 remains defiantly true to its heritage: lithe, graceful and utterly distinctive.

It is the nature of automotive styling to be transient. And it is the nature of Jaguar to create cars of classic grace: cars whose beauty endures long after the fads are forgotten. Such a car is the Series III. Combining beauty of form with quick response and notable luxury, the XJ6 rewards its driver in many ways. Come in and experience the pleasures that have been bred into the best Jaguar ever built.
