Now we know

Remember Mary Murphy, the sixth-grader from Littleton, Colo., who last month wrote a fictional story on how Grosse Pointe Park got its name? In her version, aliens came to earth in a grossmobile and searched for a special environment to support their lifestyle a gross environment. They came to Michigan and found this magnificent swamp where they settled. Travelers who happened by took one look at the swamp and the aliens and said, "Gross!" And that's how Grosse Pointe got its name, Mary conjectured.

In return for her fanciful version, she asked that we tell her the real story. Well, Brad Bartof, a French student at North High, and the Grosse Pointe Central Library both provided us with the origin of the name which we published the following week.

Then we sent Mary the stories we ran. In one of them, we wondered how Littleton got its name. Well, Mary, conscientious child that she is, wrote to

The town got its name from Richard S. Little who settled the area in the 1860s. He took out a homestead claim on 160 acres and worked his land to provide homesites for people who came to work at the flour mill built in 1867. Mary writes that today, the "little town" is 112 years old.

Nice story. We appreciate the follow up. It's just not gross enough to be interesting.

Our airwaves, their profits

If the government (that means, we, the people) own the broadcasting airwaves, why is it that private investors have made close to $10 billion in the past year from the sale of broadcasting rights?

Sanford Pensler, a 1974 University Liggett School graduate. wrote a lengthy opinion in the Thursday, Feb. 27, Wall Street Journal concerning this issue.

Pensler is a banker and lawyer involved in mergers and acquisitions in Manhattan. His article appeared on the Journal's Review & Outlook page.

He says the people of the country should profit most from the sale of broadcasting licenses not investors.

He concludes the federal government, "mired in debt and struggling to narrow its deficits," should receive the premiums from the sale of its air-

Detective detects detector theft

There has been a rash of radar detector thefts in Grosse Pointe Woods, according to Detective Robert Kwiatkowski.

Detectors, valued at anywhere from $150 to $300, are being stolen from autos.

From Feb. 4 through Feb. 26 we have had 10 taken from automobiles," Kwiatkowski said. He said the thief or thieves spot a detector in a car, break out the window and grab the detector.

"People should take them out of their cars if possible," he said, "If removing them is not possible, at least hide them out of sight and take down the power cord.

He said it is likely the detectors are being sold locally, and would appreciate any help from citizens in stopping these crimes.

Prepare for flooding, residents warned

By Pat Paholsky

Spring is on its way, and for most of the state's winter-weary residents, that's good news. For shoreline residents, however, the warm weather this year will bring anything but good news, according to the experts. As the lake levels inch upward, lakefront property owners are bracing for flooding worse than 1973, the last time the lakes were near current levels.

A representative for the Army Corps of Engineers told an audience that filled the Park council chambers last Thursday afternoon that the forecast for all of the Great Lakes is record high levels for the next few months.

There's about 512 inches of water as of February "just sitting there," he said.

In answer to a question from a resident, McCallister advised the group to "put sand bags as far back from the seawall as possible. Let the seawall and lawn take the beating. Protect your house.'

The lake levels are expected to remain high through 1987. McCallister said. If certain patterns persist, however, levels will be higher, he predicted.

Bank to change ownership

Toward the end of March, the 3,000 depositors at Colonial Central Bank on the Hill will find themselves with a new name on their bank. The Hill branch of Colonial Central, which until five months ago was Colonial Federal, will be bought by Standard Federal Sav-ings and Loan, the same bank now bulldozing property at the other end of the Hill for an office/retail development. The $10.5 million deal is what Colonial Central President Mark Mudge describes as a "transparent" change, one that will not have any effect on the branch's customers.

The customers won't be inconvenienced and the same terms (on loans and accounts) will apply, Mudge said.

"It's a simple purchase of the savings deposits in that bank, said William Yaw, media spokesman for Standard Federal. "It shouldn't mean any changes for the depositors.

The purchase, approved Feb. 20 by the Federal Home Loan Bank, the government agency with jurisdiction over savings and loan mergers and acquisitions, has not yet taken place, but is expected to be finalized within weeks.

Yaw said that the move has nothing to do with the long-planned Hill development and does not mean that Standard Federal is reconsidering or pulling out of the pears to be less about renewal of 25.35 operation mills for schools and 1.3 mills for the libraries, and more about what those mills are financing. Defeating the school millage, which represents about threequarters of the system's operating revenue, isn't going to cut spending, according to the pro-millage camp. It's only going to cause financial chaos for the school sys-

"You have to look at what it would mean if the millage were voted down," said Peter Gast, co-chairman of Citizens for Continued Excellence. The district would have to pass a millage before it ran out of money in August and would have to call another election, Gast said.

At the same time, the school system would have to put on hold its plans to sell tax anticipation notes to fund operations through the summer until property taxes came due in December. Defeat of the millage may also affect the district's bond rating, Gast said.

More importantly, the millage represents community support and consent of operation of the system, Gast said. The high per-centage of revenues from local property taxes, about 91 percent, means strong local control over the system, he added.

Gast said he hoped that those opposing the millage remain active in the system when the budget season comes around.

But, according to the chairman of the Taxpayer's Advisory Group, Joseph Callahan, millage opponents have on numerous occasions made their objections to school system spending known - without

"The board has been notified in many ways . . . and it hasn't responded," he said.

Defeating the millage will send the strongest signal possible that spending needs to be cut and economies have to be made, Callahan said. The school board has received numerous indications of community support for reorganizations, most recently in the 1984 recall campaign, which was soundly defeated, he added.

We feel we've been stabbed in the back by this board," Callahan said. It would be up to the TAG officers to decide whether they wanted to support a scaled-down millage request or one that might be lower than the current rate, he added. TAG expects to remain active during the school system's budget process, which begins March 24 with a workshop at 7 p.m. at the administration building

The school board will meet Monday night in the administration building as results from the election come in from the six precincts.

Freeman appointed to NLC committee

Grosse Pointe Woods Mayor George S. Freeman has accepted an appointment to the National League of Cities (NLC) Finance, Administration and Intergovernmental Relations Steering Com-

Freeman was selected for appointment early in February and will serve on the committee until December 1986

Freeman will assist in developing NLC policy recommendations and reactions on congressional and administration action.

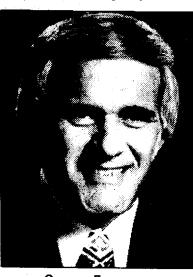

Freeman has been a financial consultant in investments and has for many years.

'We'll be making our recommendations to the League," Freeman said. "Then the NLC will present its plan to Congress."

He will go to Washington D.C.

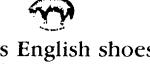

March 8 and 9, and attend at least two steering committee meetings during the year and the Congress of Cities in San Antonio, Texas in late November.

In Washington this month, the committee will focus on the 1987 federal budget (including the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing bill), and other proposals to amend federal tax policy.

Pongracz's father was an interior decorator. He was called from New York to Detroit to work on the interior design of the Masonic Temple in 1925. Ed was apprenticed as a watchmaker at Tiffany's and spent the next few years traveling back and forth to spend vacations with his family in Detroit and the rest of the time at Tiffany's in New York.

Ed Pongracz: The end of an era

"I met a couple of girls here," Pongracz said, "and decided to settle down." Pongracz gave his notice at Tiffany's and joined his family in Detroit. Unfortunately, the time wasn't the best for relocation. It was the beginning of the Great Depression and work was scarce. Pongracz' father suggested that he buy a watchmaker's bench and set up shop.

Pongracz' first shop was in the City, in the area of the Village. He put his bench in the window, where passersby could watch him work.

"It was the very successful," he said. "They needed a watchmaker in this area."

But that location would not serve indefinitely.

"I saw the expansion of Jacobson's," he said, "and knew I would have to move." Pongracz bought 40 feet of property in an area far-ther north on Kercheval now known as the Hill.

"I planned a big store," he said. "But after the war, I got the prices for construction and built a small store." Pongracz Jewelers on the Hill opened its doors in 1947.

Bill would help curb urban blight

By Peter A. Salinas

Deteriorated storefronts and degeneration of a city's streets and sidewalks have a way of spreading through a community, much like cancer spreads through healthy tissue until the body is consumed with disease and dies.

Staving off such problems before they occur or revitalizing a dying business district is much more cost-effective and desirable than having to raze a building and start over again.

Jerry McNamara, Grosse Pointe Woods administrative aide, is hoping recent legislation he helped to formulate will help cities in getting federal grant funding for blight prevention projects.

State Sen. John Kelly helped the bill through committee, and it is now being considered by the state

McNamara said legislation passed in 1945 enables communities to conduct urban renewal projects, but just touches on blight prevention.

Federal Community Develop-ment Block Grant legislation re-quires any project dealing with slum and blight prevention to be supported by state or local legisla-

Because blight prevention is poorly defined in the state legislation, McNamara said few communities take advantage of blight prevention projects.

More clearly defined state legislation would help them to qualify for block grant funding.

"We (the Woods) commissioned a study of all Grosse Pointe communities several years back," Mc-Namara said. "From that study, we developed a strategy to prevent blight which our council adopted.

This study gave us the local legislation necessary to secure federal funding to conduct blight prevention projects.

Without this kind of local legislation, however, the Woods and many other communities throughout Michigan are left with a murky definition of blight prevention. In many communities this means little, if anything, is being done to prevent urban blight, says McNamara.

Kelly says this act is designed to be coordinated with the 1966 Urban Renewal Act.

"It will allow smaller cities that have commercial blight problems to secure bonding and federal funding to deal with these prob-Kelly said.

He said the chances of this legislation moving through the state legislature quickly are very good.

"It hasn't been passed by the full senate yet," Kelly said, "but I predict quick passage,".

With the local legislation the Woods has, it can continue to develop these kind of projects, but state legislation which better defines such projects would expand what municipalities could do.

The Woods and Park both have been conducting a variety of revitalization and blight prevention projects under their own local legislation.

"Based on our blight prevention strategy," McNamara said, "we developed a commercial loan program, a master storefront plan and a street improvement plan.'

By providing low-interest loans to business for facade improvements and city-sponsored tree planting and landscaping, the situation before it occurs.

"The trick is to create the perception that things are happening an stimulate interest in beautification," McNamara said.

McNamara says there have been recent improvements along Mack Avenue near Seven Mile.

With the city taking on landscaping projects in the area, he says storeowners take a more active role in developing their own properties. He points to new facades at Revco Drug Store and the National Coney Island restaurant on the Detroit side and remodeling projects in the Woods as evidence that blight prevention begets blight prevention.

"It is hard to believe so much can be achieved with so little," Mc-Namara said.

Park City Manager John Crawford agrees, and said he prefers to use the word "revitalization," rather than "blight prevention."

Crawford said his city has been very active in securing federal funding for rejuvenating its business district and neighborhoods.

Through two types of residential loans, business facade improvement program and street improvement projects, the Park is on its way toward making lasting strides in beautification.

"We have been very, very successful with these projects," Crawford said. "There is a one-year wait to obtain some facade improvement loans. The interest in these programs far exceeds the availability of our funding."

For that reason, Crawford hopes the Kelly-sponsored bill will pass. "Passage of this legislation will give us the opportunity to continue to make progress we have made in community," Crawford said. Crawford noted that in some cases it is more cost-effective for

'We will do a study and inform the property owners of the results," Crawford said. "We give them six months to upgrade their property to meet code violations or clear it. That determination is bas-ed on economics. Will it cost more to correct the code violations than what the property is worth?"

McNamara said he has studied the situation regarding the definition of blight prevention, and has made a number of suggestions which have been incorporated into Senator Kelly's bill.

He feels the passage of this proposed legislation will enhance a city's ability to ward off the spread of urban blight, and to revitalize areas aiready tainted.

The Senate bill has already been sent out of a Senate committee to the state house for its consideration.

that street," Pongracz said, speaking of the young families that made their homes there. When World War II began, families on that street provided many young men to the military service.

'One house had 12 stars in their window," he said.

In 1939, Pongracz built a home on Notre Dame for his family. The four-bedroom house cost just $11,000, including lot. Real estate prices have risen some since then.

"I sold the house in 1971 and got $36,000 for it," Pongracz said. "Since then it has sold two more times and the last price was nearly $90,000. I guess I sold too soon." In 1971, Pongracz and his wife moved into a flat on Neff, where they have lived since.

From the beginning, Pongracz was interested in local government and attended council and school board meetings.

"I've always attended council meetings," he said. "I was always a good critic and not a troublemaker." Pongracz' interest in the school board led to his election to that body where he served two terms as president and two terms as secretary. "Two people who had a lot to do with building the City were Norbert Neff and Neil Blondell. Pongracz said. "They did quite a During those early years, the police department grew and the city services that seemed more like personal services were in-

Pongracz points to the real estate agents of the area as the people who made Grosse Pointe what it is today.

"They were some of the men who helped build Grosse Pointe." he said. "There was James Holden and the two Maxons. Paul and Richard. They were terrific Realtors. They helped lay out some of the subdivisions and some of the most popular streets.

But everything wasn't smooth sailing in the development of the community. Pongracz remembers bitter arguments over the start of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial in the Alger House.

'It split the neighborhood," Pongracz said. "They wanted it to be a public library. But it was not the kind of building that could have been made into a library

Another problem Pongracz remembers was a "small rlot" by a group of high school students in front of Titus Drugs. The students would gather there and on one Halloween night, they got so rowdy that the fire department was called out to disperse the group.

"I told him (the fire chief) not to try it," Pongracz said. "I said, they'll take it (the fire hose) away from you and turn it on you." The warning was not heeded. The fire department attempted to hose down the students and Pongracz' prediction came true. "They lost their patience and did the wrong thing." he said.

The incident led to a series of neighborhood block parties organized to give the teenagers something better to do than loiter at the drug store. "Forest Geary ran them," Pongracz said. "He did a good job for the schools.

One event that stands out in Pongracz' mind is the opening of the Punch and Judy Theatre.

It was a big event, he said. They advertised it nationally. All the big name ladies came out in their furs and jewels.

The city governments in the Pointes were a different matter in the early days, Pongracz said.

"In the early days, the Pointes were run by absolute dictators.' he said. He remembers a controversy over improving the parks. "They were trying to get the City to expand the park to have swimming," he said. "D.M. Ferry said. 'We don't need swimming pools because nobody stays here in the summer.' If he could only see it to-

Over the years, Pongracz believes that many of the special, extra services that were once the privilege of Pointers have dropped

"There is a lack of sufficient money for the luxuries," he said. "They used to have sledding at the park. There were more activities at school. Slowly, some of the nice things have been disappearing."

Another change he has seen is a decline in interest in the activities of the city council.

"The councils were always well attended," he said. "Now it is so obvious. People come and the moment their own affairs happen. they leave. They are not interested in the rest of the work.

Pongracz and his wife are leaving Grosse Pointe for the convenience of living in the Whittier.

"We were happy here, but we'll be able to get the services we need," he said. "This is a good move for people approaching their

Last month utility customers all over southeastern Michigan found inside their billing envelopes a request to donate to the THAW Fund. THAW is a brand new organization devoted to helping the working poor with their utility bills.

"It's to help people who fall through the cracks, people who don't qualify for other programs," explained Meg Mitzel, THAW coordinator.

Other programs, notably the Department of Social Services, help their clients with utility bills. But low-income working people and senior citizens receiving Social Security continue to have problems paying their bills, in spite of the improvement in the economy.

All three utility companies operating in the seven-county area of southeastern Michigan are participating in the establishment of THAW. In order that 100 percent of the donations be applied to the heating costs, the utilities have donated one year's administrative cost. Detroit Edison has contributed $25,000, Michigan Consolidated $10,000, and Consumers Power $5,000, Mitzel said. The program is administered by the Salvation

"The Salvation Army will police it carefully," said Grosse Pointer Richard Huegli, a THAW board member and the retired executive needed and as long as the funds vice president of United Community Services, which is also participating in the program. Huegli said the organization ex-people. "We're finding the situation in the rural areas even worse than in Detroit," he said.

Although the program is surfacing near the end of the heating season, Mitzel says shut-offs actually increase in early spring, as the burden of unpaid utility bills finally catches up. THAW will be an ongoing program as long as it is continue. Each household will be other means of payment and they may not have a family income greater than 150 percent of the federal poverty line. In a world of constantly shifting federal poverty lines, that translates to approximately $15,900 for a family of four, Payne said. No one is exactly sure how many people there are in the Detroit area who need help with utility bills. During the first three months of 1985, the three utility companies shut off service to 12,504 customers according to UCS statistics. Some of them were probably duplications as families ran out of money for both gas and electricity.

Most of the shut-offs had power restored within 48 hours, but approximately 1,800 families were without service for longer than that period. The figures do not include senior citizens, as the utilities had declared a moratorium on shut-offs for older customers.

'There is no information on the number of households that went without food or other necessities in order to pay the heating bill," Mitzel said. Donations from utility cus-

GROSSE POINTERS LET'S STOP RISING SCHOOL TAXES

VOTE NO ON THE MILLAGE ELECTION MARCH 10th

LET'S DEMAND A LESS EXTRAVAGANT SCHOOL BUDGET. WHY?

FIVE BIG REASONS . . .

- 1. School System now spending $5,300 a year per student compared to $1,100 in the early 1970's.
- 2. Only 22.3 students per classroom versus 28 a decade ago.
- 3. 45.7 percent of Grosse Pointe School seats are now empty.
- 4. Even though the millage rate stays the same, your taxes will increase this year because of higher property assessments.
- 5. G.P. School spending has risen much faster than the cost of living.

Speaker says parents can take active role in supporting their children's friendships

By Nancy Solak

True or false. Teaching children to say, "Can I play?" is good strategy for encouraging children's friendships.

False. The reply will more than likely be "no," says Marjorie J. Kostelnik, Ph.D., from the Department of Family and Child Ecology at Michigan State University.

Kostelnik was Kerby Kinship's guest speaker at Kerby School recently, where she talked to more than 70 parents from Kerby and Richard schools about "Supporting Children's Friendships.

The child who is on the fringe of the play circle, looking longingly at the others, can be taught a skill that will enable him or her to join in the fun.

For example, a group of girls is playing Barbies. Rather than asking "Can I play?" Courtney approaches them and says, "I'm from a fashion magazine and I want to interview you." What Courtney has created is a role for herself in the game. If she hadn't, the other girls may not have been able to think of a way she would fit

Brad, too, has developed the same skill. When the boys are playing space, he announces he is from the moon, "Naw," the boys feply "we don't like anyone from the moon." Undaunted, Brad, who obviously watches TV, says, "I'm your Maytag repairman." That idea fit into the boys' play, and Brad was accepted.

Children who have difficulty interacting with their peers experience great pain. In our society isolation is not only the worst punishment, Kostelnik says, but may be a contributing cause to juvenile delinquency, dropping out of school, dishonorable discharge from the military and suicide later percent said they had no friends, and 25 percent said they had one friend and wanted more. Researchers went back to observe these children and found that they were accurate appraisers of their social life.

Furthermore, the number of friends a person has does not gauge how popular or happy that person is. Everyone, adults included, vary in the number of friends they need to make them feel fulfilled. For some one friend may be enough; others may need dozens.

When a child has a friend from his own peer group, he receives stimulation, praise, affection and an opportunity for shared activities and social comparison. Adults cannot provide this kind of friendship because, invariably, the adult always has the higher status in the relationship, even when pretending to be the follower instead of the leader. Besides, adults cannot afford to be a pal all of the time; there are values to be taught, chores to be done and commitments to be met.

Peer friendships give a child the opportunity to experiment. He can be the leader on Monday, the follower on Tuesday, the negotiator on Wednesday, and the instigator on Thursday.

'So, your child always plays the role of doormat?' Kostelnik asks.
"No need to worry. Three days of being a doormat is enough for most adults. But often a child may need to experiment for a long time in a role, sometimes for as long as a year.'

Another advantage of peer friendship, in addition to the sense of belonging, is the opportunity for social comparison. It is important to a child to be able to say "I can spit from here to there with accuracy." Since this feat is not usually held in as high regard by adults as by children, it is important for In a study of 10,000 children, 10 the child to be appreciated for his accomplishments by his peers.

friendship, though it does not have as sophisticated a meaning as it does for adults. By the time a child is six, he'd rather play with someone "yucky," to use Kostelnik's term, than not play with anyone at

There are five stages of friendship according to Harvard researcher Robert Selman, and the ages children go through them overlap.

• Stage one (3-7 years) "Momentary Playmates" - These children are friends with any youngster who is physically close; a nursery school cohort, a cousin, a neighbor.

They also tend to judge people by their physical attributes. "I like Sally because she has yellow hair." Adults often view this kind of statement as shallow, but Kostelnik asks, "Have you ever heard a five year old say he likes her because she has such a great sense of humor?'

Also at this stage, children may reject friendly overtures because they do not recognize them for what they are. Often, they interpret the interloper as someone who wants to take over, rather than share an activity.

• Stage Two (4-9 years) "Oneway Friendship" - This stage is characterized by a narrow-minded awareness of how the other person's behavior affects him, as opposed to how his behavior affects others. To the horror of most parents, the line "I'll give you my favorite toy if you'll be my friend,' is in fact, according to Kostelnik, a positive growth sign. For the first time, she says, the child realizes that he has to do something to have friends

During this stage a lot of time is spent verbally defining friendships. "We're friends," Sue says to Emily as she puts her arm around Mary. A parent can help their child by explaining that Sue did not say ren to practice, or role-play.'

Children as young as two value this to Emily to make her feel sad, but to make Sue and Mary feel good.

• Stage Three (6-12) "Two-way Fair-Weather Friends" - Since this is the first time the child starts to see friendship as two people, they may become overly possessive and jealous. Contrary to popular belief, this is the most conforming age, Kostelnik says. "Before you can be an individual, you have to gain confidence in your qualities. A child does this by conforming and it's all right for parents to support conformity as long as it falls within their value system."

This is also a time when children stop saying, so-and-so is my friend. Instead, they form clubs where most of the time is spent deciding who should be in it and what the password should be. As soon as those tasks are completed, the children go on to form another club. This is their more mature way of saying so-and-so is my friend without actually verbalizing

• Stage Four (9-12) "Intimate Mutually-Shared Relationships" -In this stage children look for friends with inner qualities they admire, and for friends who are compatible. Also, at this stage, friends are ranked.

• Stage Five (12 and older) "Mature Friendships" - This person can be friends with Peter and with Steven even if Peter and Steven don't like each other. Friendships at this stage can endure despite time and distance.

No one is born with social skills, but developing them can lead to a happier life. Kostelnik suggests that parents help teach children now to break the ice, now to act positively toward others, and how to negotiate conflicts.

"It isn't silly to rehearse skills together. Use puppets or stuffed animals as props for young child-

Yes to continued excellence

Those who support the renewal of the school and library millages in the March 10 election make the argument that the continued excel-lence of the Grosse Pointe public school system is really at stake. This newspaper concurs in that opinion.

Some critics have argued that the decline in the school enrollment in recent years has not been accompanied by a corresponding decline in the costs of the system. That is true. But costs continue to escalate because of inflation and the consequent increase in salaries, supplies and everything else on which the school system spends tax money.

In addition, changes in curricula must continue to be made if Grosse Pointe's schools are to retain their tradition of excellence. The introduction of computer courses in recent years is an example. The equipment is costly and yet few people would deny students the opportunity to learn more about computers. In their careers and in their homes, most students will in the future find use for computer skills they have acquired in the schools.

It is true that average class sizes have declined as enrollment has fallen off because of the smaller number of children in the district. That reduction in class sizes could perhaps be carried to an unwarranted extreme, but there is little question that smaller classes tend to improve the performance of both teachers and students.

The library system is an integral part of the school system, even though a separate millage renewal is sought for support of the libraries. But the libraries also provide an essential service to a great many adults. Further, they offer special services ranging from providing hand tools to an outreach program for homebound and handicapped residents. It is significant that such organizations as the League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe and the American Association of University Women have expressed public support for the millage renewals. These organizations have demonstrated their backing in letters to the editor which indicate they have studied the needs of the schools and agree with the administration and board that the current levies for the schools and the libraries must be renewed.

There is something to be said for the argument by the pro-millage Citizens for Continued Excellence that the budget hearing is a better place for discussion of the spending on the school system than millage elections. On March 10 people are being asked to vote for or against the renewal of the 25.35 mills for the schools and the 1.3 mills for the libraries. Both levies are needed to produce the revenues to keep the schools and libraries operating at roughly their current levels. At such elections there is no opportunity to vote for extension of only part of the current millages. So we either vote yes or no on the millages requested.

True, if the millages were defeated, there would be another referendum. The school board could ask for smaller millages for both the schools and the library, but it is more likely that it would simply try again to obtain the same levies now being requested since they produce the revenues the board and the administration agree are needed to retain excellence. So those advocating a no vote really are calling for a second election which we doubt that the people want or would give the referendum critics the lower levies they seek.

Instead, the Grosse Pointe News believes the renewals are required if the district's tradition of excellence is to be maintained. The cost of maintaining and improving excellent schools can be regarded as an investment in the protection of our own property values, and more important, in our community's most valuable resource, our young people.

High school athletics a bargain

As we near our millage election, attention has been given to the costs of the high school athletic programs in Grosse Pointe.

Most agree with the philosophy of a sound mind in a sound body and believe in the values of athletics. However, there is some question whether we are obtaining the maximum program for the tax dollars spent.

With the addition of the girls sport teams in the 1970s, the high school athletic programs have grown to include 20 sports at each school and to involve over 1600 participants in the two programs. More than 1000 students, or approximately 33 percent of those enrolled in the two high schools, belong to at least one sport team.

The costs of this comprehensive and very successful program are a bargain to our community. When all of the costs of the athletic programs are considered, including: coaches salaries, uniforms and equipment, officials fees, transportation, and state competition expenses, our cost per participant to our community is $1.65 per hour of instruction.

We monitor our expenses closely. We obtain bids on all of our equipment and according to the vendors the "east side" is the most competitive market in the state. Our transportation is also a bid item. The buses we use to transport our teams are rented at a rate Grosse Pointe North High School

Congratulations to South staff

I just received the wonderful news of the most recent awards given to Grosse Pointe South's newspaper and literary magazine

Tower and Imprints. And my warmest congratulations must go to the staffs of 1984-85 who made it possible to win these honors. And would like to send my best wishes for the new staffs of 1985-86 in the hopes that this year's Tower and Imprints go on to achieve greater recognition next year

As the design editor of the Imprints that won the First Place Special Merit Award, I was thrilled. Yet, I am quite dismayed at the Grosse Pointe News' coverage in the Jan. 23rd issue.

Firstly, I would like to correct one fallacy: Bob Button is not an assistant to Eva Koch in selecting art and working with layout. Only on rare occasions do Mrs. Koch and her staff take part in design. She and Mr. Button have equal and separate assignments. Mrs. Koch is the adviser to one staff in selecting the written work to go into the magazine, while Mr. Button is the adviser to another staff, for which I was editor, in selecting art work and then designing Imprints.

Secondly, I would like to give due credit to, and congratulate, the people who worked on design with me, for together we did a fine job according to the American Scholastic Press Association (i.e. the awards for the sense of style and general visual pattern). These five achieved such quality. people put their best talents into working with Imprints and I would like to identify them: Mike Elrick, '85; Mark Froelich, '86; Thomas Kershaw, '85; Beth Knight, '86; and Kip Monahan, '85.

And lastly, I would like to thank the students whose works were published in Imprints, for without their past, and continuing contributions, Imprints could never have

Again, my sincerest best wishes for a great year go to the news staffs (Tower and Imprints), and may they keep up the ever-increasing standards of excellence that these two papers have.

Expert analysis, not polls

Joseph Callahan has again consulted his printouts and has determined that buildings in the school system are "50 percent to 60 percent empty" (Feb. 20 issue). This, then, may be an appropriate time to recall the accuracy of Mr. Callahan's 1984 observations.

In several letters to the Grosse Pointe News that summer, he complained of "empty classrooms" and of a resultant "idle staff." In fact, when school opened for the 1984-85 year, the board was hard-pressed to find additional teachers for critical situations throughout the system. To teach in "empty classrooms," Mr. Calla-han; to bolster an "idle staff?" Perhaps the board should give serious consideration to Mr. Callahan's 1986 observations . . and re-open Barnes this coming fall and immediately request bids for new construction.

May I also suggest to both sides in the millage issue that a "yes no" telephone survey is a shoddy way of determining the efficacy of any educational program? I recall a Washington Post/ABC News poll of last July that revealed that 54 percent of those questioned thought that Reagan's cancer would not recur before he left office; 33 percent thought it would; while 12 percent had no opinion. Would it not be better to subject both the cancer and the sevenperiod day to expert analysis rather than to opinion polls? Finally, Mr. Editor, (sic) we could prevent "... more of the present teaching staffs [moving] up to administrative positions . . if administrators were paid less and/or teachers more. "Move up?" Shouldn't it be "move out" of the classroom - of Grosse Pointe?

Tax rollback no big deal

constancy in a good."

Obstinacy or constancy?

At long last, it appears the controversy over the rollback of the state income tax rate to 4.6 percent is at an end, although the debate over the need for the original increase to 6.3 percent will continue as an issue in the 1986 election campaign.

The state Senate last week by a 37 to 1 vote accepted the House-passed bill that cuts the income tax rate to 4.6 percent effective March 31 and even earlier if the size of the state surplus permits. The action dropped the rate from the 5.1 percent figure that had been in effect since last November.

So far as the average taxpayer is concerned, however, the latest cut is no big deal. A family of four with an income of $30,000 a year will find an additional $2.31 in its paycheck every week, and the tax savings of the $50,000 wage earner heading the same-sized family will amount to $4.23. True, every bit of tax savings helps in the mind of the average taxpayer, although we doubt the rollback does all that much for the state's business climate.

The 1983 increase which started the tax controversy was opposed by all except one Republican in the Legislature. It caused the recall of two Democratic senators and led to a Republican majority in the Senate when the GOP elected two members to replace the recalled Democrats. The GOP still has a 20-18 majority.

There still are two mild clouds on the horizon that could affect the rollback. One is the failure of the Senate to include provision for a tax amnesty which is so closely tied to the income tax rollback that both must be approved if either is to become effective. The second problem is the effort by Republicans to force an additional $180 million rollback to taxpayers on the grounds the state administration's collection of revenues exceeded the totals permitted under the Headlee amendment. At the moment, however, neither of these threats is expected to change the rollback timing.

Under the 1983 tax legislation, the rate would not have dropped back to 4.6 percent until Oct. 1, 1987. The earlier rollback enabled Gov. James Blanchard to claim that the state's economic recovery under his leadership had proved the effectiveness of his administration. The Republicans countered with their claim that the earlier rollback proved their thesis that the original tax increase had been excessive. They also disputed Blanchard claims that his administration was responsible for the state's recovery, arguing, instead, that the credit belonged to the Republican national administration.

Observers believe that a new tax issue — the size of the state's property tax — is now likely to blossom in Michigan. Both parties are talking about additional property tax relief, especially after a new survey showed Michigan's average property tax load to be among the highest in the nation. The GOP seeks tax relief especially for senior citizens while the Democrats want expanded property tax credits as well as new taxes on banks, insurance companies and others to finance the additional re-

So while the Senate action apparently will mean that most wage earners will have a few more dollars a week to spend or jingle in their pockets, it does not mean that we've heard the last of the tax issue. Instead, we can expect to be bombarded until next November with facts and figures, arguments and counterarguments, about the tax rate, the economic recovery and the need to further improve the state's business

Unfortunately, the word "compassion" is seldom heard in the arguments from either side, nor are many arguments made about the need to improve state support in such fields as health, welfare and education. Instead, the quality and extent of state services are matters that seem to be swept under the rug and left for consideration after the next election, if then.

New auto reform bill is not good policy

By State Senator John J. Kelly The latest automobile insurance reform bill to pass the Senate is not good legislation and I had no qualms in voting against it. I think it spells bad news for eastside Detroit and Grosse Pointe residents. The present Essential Insurance Act (EIA) is working appropriately and helping to keep the cost of car insurance down. As passed by the Senate, Senate Bill 647 is not an improvement. This bill will eliminate the current territorial restrictions on suburban and outstate

In the City of Detroit, SB 647 will allow insurance companies to raise rates annually by four percent, plus the city's Consumer Price Index (rate of inflation) through 1988. After that, insurers can continue to use that formula or raise Detroit rates the average of outstate rate hikes. Come 1991, the socalled reform law would expire and be replaced by the present

Now, if we are intent upon making improvements and want to have a truly honest system, then there should be no territorial rating and everyone should be the same rates statewide. After all, the whole reason for having insurance is to pool risk and raising rates based upon the number of victims in a municipality is completely contrary to both logic and the social policy of insurance. SB 647, however, does not accomplish this goal and we therefore are better served by retaining the present

I am also disturbed by Governor Blanchard's endorsement of this bill. As you may recall, he vetoed the auto insurance reform legislation passed by the Legislature last summer because he feared it could result in large rate increases. His support for SB 647, though, is tantamount to a retreat from the problems of urban dwellers. That kind of retreat, and the redlining process that has been so destructive to our neighborhoods, will lead to further deterioration of what urban policy we have in this state. Raising insurance rates for urban residents will accelerate flight from the cities and exacerbate already complex problems.

SB 647 is now before the House Insurance Committee for consideration. There has been some talk by House members of amending the University Women bill, but it is too e what will happen. bill, but it is too early to predict

To the Editor:

Your Feb. 20 editorial states with respect to school affairs that "Michigan (teachers) salaries have not kept pace with those in other states.

On checking with the school board offices, I find this statement in error and in fairness should be corrected in an issue prior to the March 10 election.

According to the board office. Michigan teachers average the highest pay of any state in the nation except Alaska. They report that Grosse Pointe's teacher salaries and fringes were the highest of any Michigan metropolitan area, equalled by only two other districts.

In checking this point, we received excellent cooperation from Dr. (John) Whritner and his most able staff. In support for the foregoing, his office provided the following authentic information on teachers' and librarians' salaries and fringe Librarians' compensation average: $43,836 a year. This breaks down to $37,978 basic salary and cost of living allowance plus $5,858 fringe benefits. Fringe benefits include 100 percent surgical and medical insurance, 100 percent optical insurance, and 80 percent dental insurance. These benefits cover the librarians' entire family, including spouses, even if selfemployed or employed on jobs.

Teacher's compensation: average $41,393 a year. This figure breaks down to $34,525 basic salary, plus $5,858 in fringe benefits and $1,010 COLA.

Fringe benefits include (1) medical and dental insurance (average cost to the district, $1,782) 100 percent optical insurance (cost $195) and 80 percent dental insurance (cost $520) (2) 67 vacation days, including summer holiday, Christmas recess and Thanksgiving recess (3) Two "personal shopping days" on which days the board employs substitute teachers at average cost per day of $51.38 (4) 120 "personal illness" days for which salary is paid and substitute teachers hired at $51.38-a-day average. For the 1984-85 school year, payments to substitutes for the personal illness and personal shopping days cost the district $175,000.

Teachers have kept pace

Two past board presidents are of the opinion Grosse Pointe's high school taxes are due first to salaries and benefits extracted by the militant union and secondly, the cost to the taxpayers of school facilities rendered unnecessary due to the 46 percent decline in enrollment. Other districts have taken drastic steps with important savings: Bloomfield Hills has closed five schools, with a sixth under consideration; Birmingham, five (schools closed); Livonia, 10; Dearborn Hills, six; and Southfield, six.

In contrast, Grosse Pointe has closed one school building, Kerby, students transferred to other schools. Barnes school students were moved to other schools, but still maintained open at cost of $88,000 a year for custodians, utilities, etc. Presently it is occupied by staff people moved in at a moving cost of $12,000, from other buildings with much unutilized space.

To the dismay of many taxpayers the board has announced it has no plans for future closings. It had shelved the 1982 recommendations of a citizens council and the then-superintendent for closing of more schools. This despite the board's most recent projection of further declines in student enrollments through the 1989-90 school year. In that year the board office predicts student enrollment of 7142, 102 less than now, and 6387 less than the 13,539 enrollment in 'peak year'' 1971.

It seems evident a major change in course by the board is overdue. Also that only a strong "no" vote on both the library and school millage can achieve that. Otherwise, a 'yes" vote will freeze taxpayers for another three years on a continuation of salaries and benefits and COLAS exacted by the unions. Also with the prospect of no tax relief from the elimination of unnecessary facilities and personnel being enjoyed by other districts.

J.C. Cook Grosse Pointe City

Editor's note: In fairness, some of Mr. Cook's errors should be corrected. First, the school system has closed two schools, Vernier and Old Kerby.

Some of Mr. Cook's figures are incorrect. According to the school system, the average teacher salary is $37,898, with fringes totalling $4918. Librarians, who work 12 months a year, have a base salary of $37,855, with $4,918 in fringe benefits.

Teachers do not receive 120 personal sick days. That is the limit of long-term disability for which the district is responsible. Teachers work 184 days and are paid for 200. No personal shopping days exist, but two personal leave days are allowed. Restrictions limit their

Of the districts cited closing schools, only two of the four contacted spend less per pupil than Grosse Pointe's $5353. Southfield spends $5,439; Birmingham, $5,934; Bloomfield Hills, $5,255; and Livonia, $4,000.

Meanwhile, back in the Pointes

What's it like to be back in the Pointes?

So far, it's been sort of wet. I was about knee-deep in Grosse Pointe Shores the other day while on a photo assignment. I happened on this Canada honker who was a little camera shy. I ventured too far toward the shore and met with an untimely foot-drenching.

Remodeling and new construction at my alma mater, ULS, is very impressive, but some things never change. I was wandering down a hall in search of the new art wing last week, when I looked into a room, and behold, there was my history teacher, Mary Remillet. She was standing in front of a classroom, likely expounding on something historical. Noticed a student relaxing his eyes. Oh, the memories .

I had been living up north - way up north, in a small rural community called Mio. There was not an incorporated city or village in the entire county nor was there stop light. They did have one thing the Pointes don't have — lots of free parking. I guess it's not extremely difficult to find a spot to park here, but it can chew up the better part of an afternoon.

You may have heard of Mio in the past several years. Just about everyone knows somebody who has a cabin there, but it has gained national and international at-

You may remember when both the Detroit News and Free Press covered the story about the teacher who allegedly forced a student to eat a roasted fly. The story also made Paul Harvey's radio

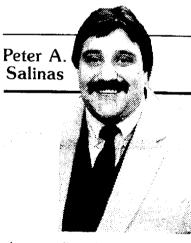

Just to set the record straight, there is a very good chance the kid never munched the toasted critter. I knew the teacher. He was a trained paramedic and a member of the Lion's Club. In short, a very conscientious and intelligent man. He made a mistake by taking a classroom problem 10 steps too far. I talked to a number of kids in the classroom who say the boy was a troublemaker and had put much worse than a fly in his mouth often.

You may also remember when two southern Michigan hunters got a little inebriated and stripped down to nothing but their hunting boots and carried their hunting rifles out on to M-33 and walked through downtown Mio.

That story too, made it into every paper in the free world, proclaiming that Oscoda County deputies had taken two "bare hunters" into custody.

This past hunting season two hunters left St. Clair Shores and disappeared from the face of the earth. Brian Ognan and David Tyll were last seen in Mio. I was living in Detroit then, but it turns out a very good friend waited on the two men at a Luzerne bar. By the way, still no word on where those two ended up.

Meanwhile back in Grosse Pointe . .

It took me two full days to regain the full use of my ears after taking photos at a North-South hockey game at the Grosse Pointe Community Rink. Felt like I had pucks stuffed in my ears.

I've come into an inheritance. New Detroit News columnist Tom Greenwood, whose former desk I now occupy, failed to remove about 40 pounds of reporter's notebooks from the bottom I've considered mailing them to him downtown - postage due, of Received two notes in the mail recently. The first was from the St. Juliana school secretary Donna Carloni who now resides in the Farms. She remembered me when attended the Catholic grade school, and wished me well. The other note was from Bill and Mary Sherman of the Woods whom I met up north while on a story at an airport. A hearty thank you goes out to them, and all of you who have wished me well since I started reporting here.

50% OF ALL LEARNING HAPPENS BY AGE FOUR!

At The Grosse Pointe Academy, our students begin their formal learning at a very early age. Our preschool, called the Early School, is a Montessori educational facility. Over 40 years ago, Dr. Maria Montessori wrote, "The most important period of life is not the age of university studies, but the first one, the period from birth to the age of six. For that is the time when man's intelligence itself, his greatest implement, is being formed. But not only his intelligence; the full totality of his psychic powers . . . At no other age has the child greater need of an intelligent help, and any obstacle that impedes his creative work will lessen the chance has has of achieving perfection."

We believe in the Montessori theory and methods. That is why, in 1962, The Grosse Pointe Academy became Michigan's first Montessori school, enrolling children between ages 2½ and 5 years of age.

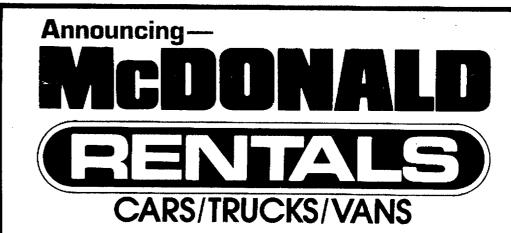

Recent studies on young children's learning have done nothing but confirm the Montessori methods. Distinguished Professor Benjamin C. Bloom of the University of Chicago, wrote in the 70's, "From conception to age 4, the individual develops 50% of his mature intelligence; from ages 4 to 8 he develops another 30% . . . This would suggest the very rapid growth of intelligence in the early years and the possible great influence of the early environment on this development."

Consider giving your child the best possible start. Look into the Montessori education at the Grosse Pointe Academy Early School. You are only a child once. If you believe the finest minds, you understand there are sensitive periods in each person's life when learning is easier than at any other time in one's life.

BB spree in Farms

The owner of a BB gun seems to have gone on a mini-rampage in the Farms March 1, according to police reports. In five incidents which may or not be related, windows of cars parked on the street were shattered by BB pellets.

The first was discovered on Saturday afternoon when the owner of a car parked on Kerby discovered that the driver's door window of his Pontiac was broken. That evening, three more, all on Moran, were found. All three had windows broken on the driver's side, police reports stated. The cars involved were a Honda, a Volkswagen and a Pontiac.

Sunday morning, the owner of a Mercedes parked on Kercheval in the Hill district found that his left rear window had also been shattered by a BB. Police have no suspects.

New times. New ways. Once upon a time, having served God, your country and your family, it was okay to sit down and watch the rest of the world go by.

No more. To retire now means to move into a new phase of living. With all responsibilities, obligations and commitments taken care of, we are now confronted with the news that years don't count, diminished endurance is irrelevant and will power is of the utmost importance. There's still work to be done and challenges to be met. You can't relax and sit back and enjoy a world of comfort. It's now no fair to coast in. It's upward and on-

If you don't participate, the world will go on without you and you'll be left an orphan of time. To be part of it, you must work at it. You've got to keep up with fashion instead of wearing just what's comfortable. You've got to exercise when you'd rather rest and you've got to watch what you eat instead of eating what you like.

who say it well.

Reality tells us that no matter how hard we work at it, the body ages. It is agreed that it is good for the morale to make every effort to take care of that body and to work at keeping it looking good, but the years still take their toll.

However, the mind is another story. It may work a little slower as the years go on, but it is possible to maintain an alert and vigorous mentality long after the body shows signs of aging.

This is particularly true of today's older citizens. The Pennsylvania State University study found that people who recently turned 65 exhibit better mental agility than older generations because of improvements in education and nutri-

It was found also that mental skills can get rusty from not being used. It was suggested that older adults take continuing education courses to keep their mental skills

Grosse Pointe residents have abundant opportunities to learn about whatever interests them. The Grosse Pointe Community Education Department offers a long list of courses in both cultural and interests studies. The War Memorial is another place where programs are scheduled to enlighten and enlargen perspective. The Grosse Pointe Public Library is a treasure trove of books on every subject. Records are available for those interested in classical music.

For those who would like to pursue an interest in greater depth, Macomb Community College has a long list of available studies.

For those who would like to combine learning with a vacation in any part of the United States, Canada or abroad, there is a program designed for them. It is called Elderhostel.

Elderhostel students live on campus of their host institution while attending classes. They have access to the cultural and recreational facilities and resources available there.

The programs last one week.

They begin on Sunday afternoon and end the next Saturday morn-

During the week, students may elect three courses which will meet for 11/2 hours each weekday. It is possible to take one or all of them. Housing is in the college dormitories and all meals are provided. Students must be 60 years or older.

The courses are not for credit and there are no exams, grades or homework. No previous knowledge or study of the subject is presupposed. Some students have Ph.D.'s and others have never graduated from high school.

The cost is modest — $205 a week which includes five days of classes, six nights accommodations, all meals and a variety of extracurricular activities. Classes end on Friday when there is a festive gathering at dinner, followed by graduation exercises and entertainment.

Altogether the package appears to be a fine opportunity for a first-rate vacation. Besides providing an opportunity to enrich and enlarge on new vistas, it also is a fine chance to meet new friends who share the same interests. The fact that they come from another part of the country and have had various edicational and work experiences could add to that pleasure.

Some students make Elderhostel a part of their vacation itinerary. On their way to visit relatives, they may stop off for a week at the college of their choice.

With such a wide variety of studies to choose from, students will have no problem choosing one that might enhance a lifelong interest. For instance a nature enthusiast might enjoy spending a week at the Leelanau Center for Education. It is nestled in the hills of the Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore, about 30 miles west of Traverse City where they can indulge their hobby by electing 'Plants of Sleeping Bear Dune.'

For a catalog listing courses, locations and descriptions, write to Elderhostel, 80 Boylston St., Suite 400, Boston, Mass. 02116.

It's back to Washington, D.C. for Park Councilman Mark Valente III, who has accepted a job as ethnic liaison for the Republican National Committee. The position begins March 17 and continues through November.

Neither Clark nor village officials were willing to state an exact number of years to define their terms of "long" and "short" leases, but Clark said the society needs "more than two years."

While the details of renovation and fundraising are being worked out, the old school building is likely to need a new roof. Money for that work has already been bud-

North, South high schools share honors

By Pat Paholsky

This is the last in a series on the schools of Grosse Pointe.

Despite their diverse backgrounds and some obvious differences, the two high schools in this community are more alike than not.

One has history in its side — more than a half century of students passing through the halls and classrooms of an architecturally traditional building. The other is a newcomer to a community that cherishes its past, a mere youngster in its second decade of existence. The modern buildings reflect a breezy, youthful ambience.

Even their names — North and South — suggest opposites, psychological as well as physical.

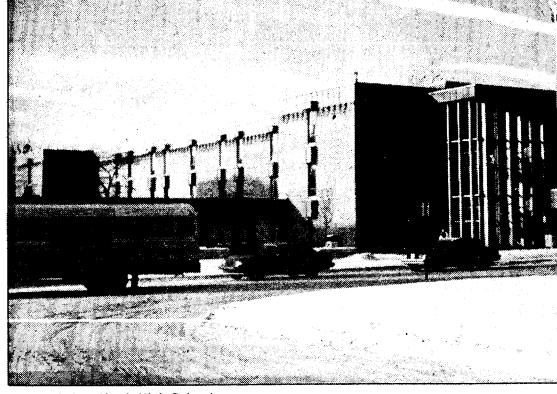

Yet the similarities are striking.
Both have received national recognition.
South was named one of 82 exemplary high schools in the nation by the U.S.
Department of Education during the 1982-83 school year. Last year, North received the same honor for its excellence in education.

Both student newspapers receive awards regularly as do their literary magazines. Students in both schools win honors in music, art, photography and writing contests. The athletic teams have won championships and numerous other awards and honors.

Each school has about 90 teachers and the student population varies from year to year — this year about 1,700 at South and 1,400 at North.

The schools

When students first walked into what was then known as Grosse Pointe High school on Feb. 1, 1928, there were residents who thought the school — with its 36 classrooms, five-room library, two gyms, swimming pool and auditorium — was too big. Research by Dr. William Hoover, instructional materials specialist at South, revealed that just two years later, however, student enrollment reached 1,340, almost up to its then-

Pointe Woods. Dr. Joseph Spagnoli, now deputy superintendent, was named to develop educational specifications for the new building. He assembled a committee of more than 100 teachers and support persons who were asked to compile a wish list of their ideas of an ideal building.

Dr. Kathleen Herschelmann, assistant principal at North, recalls helping to shape the new school. "When we designed rooms in business (classes), we designed an all open door with folding doors in between rooms. That has been extremely functional."

She added that North "at that time was a place where if teachers wanted to try something different, they taught at North. It was called the exit of the Rebels — North is your new world."

The school opened in 1968 with 1,969 students.

ask questions. "No more is the teacher God," he said.

South Principal Edward Shine, who is beginning his 20th year as an educator, said, "When I first started, we got caught up in sideburns to the extreme. The most important thing is the education process."

He adds, "I think school today is a much more comfortable place."

The curriculum

Both schools offer more than 200 academic and vocational courses. There are advanced placement courses and each year, more than 200 AP exams are taken in each school, with 85 percent of the grades a 3 or higher.

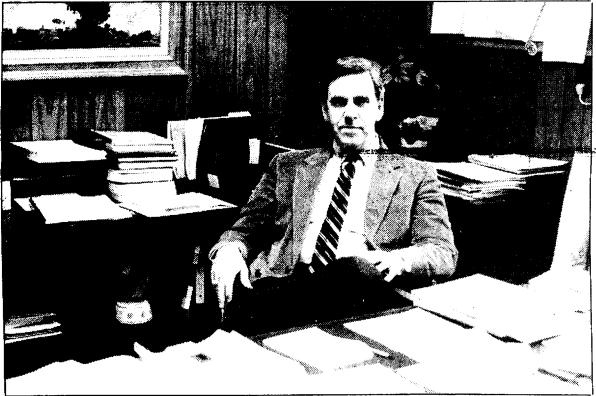

There are a number of electives as well as an extensive art program that includes courses in figure drawing, ceramics and photographs. There are vocal and instrumental music programs. The two high school libraries have a total of 73,400 volumes and 210 magazines available for you can never get bored. Where kids are involved, there is an enthusiasm that's refreshing," Shine said.

Because there are no school buses "picking students up and shipping them out at the end of the day," he said, "when the bell rings, the kids don't empty out. At four or five o'clock, there are kids around in the activities center or in the social center. And if I come back at night, there are things going on."

Another problem, according to Kastran, is the changing world. There are more single parents and 70 to 80 percent of the mothers work outside of the home. "We do our best in a human way to help the kids grow up," he said. "We are a microcosm of society and times are different. We have more learning-disabled kids than before, maybe because we are identifying more."

But problems are minimal, Kastran says. "We have the support of the community and a tremendous faculty."

capacity of 1,375. The board of education offices were moved back to Cadieux Elementary School where they are still located.

For 25 years, the high school consisted of seventh- through 12th-graders. In the '50s, the seventh- and eighth-graders transferred to Pierce and Parcells junior highs. A few years later, the ninth-graders went to Brownell and the high school began 10 years of being a three-year institution. It wasn't until the new high school was built that it went back to being a four-year school as it is today.

When it became obvious that the community was in need of another high school, the board of education bought the 31.7-acre Vandenbush farm in Grosse

Of the faculty at the two high schools, 76 percent have master's degrees, 11 percent have 60 hours or more of graduate credit beyond the master's and 2 percent have doctorates.

Staffing the counseling and guidance departments of both schools are 12 certified counselors. And both schools have career resource centers and counseling centers. In the Department of Special Education are social workers and special teachers for students who are emotionally, physically or learning impaired.

Dr. John Kastran, North principal, says the style of teaching today as well as the quality of teaching has improved. There is an academic freedom today and students circulation. With the Grosse Pointe public libraries being a part of the school system, they provide an additional resource.

A minimum school day for ninth, 10th and 11th graders consists of six classes in a seven-period day. Twelfth-graders have a minimum 5½ classes in a seven-period day. All students are encouraged to take seven classes.

The two schools have more than 40 student organizations and activities ranging from art to drama to games to literary to foreign language to skiing. Each school offers more than 20 boys and girls sports.

One of the questions, Herschelmann says, is "what is going to be the curriculum of the '90s? We need to keep abreast of who is coming through," she said, citing as a hypothetical example a group in the elementary school that is not reading.

Kastran said, "I think the world influences curriculum. We are becoming more global. Kids ought to know where Iran and Iraq is."

He added that the curriculum today is more rigid than what he learned in second-year college. "It's a faster pace and it's improved. We got a lot of the garbage out."

The students

About 84 percent of those graduating go on to higher education. Of the 1985 graduates, 13 were National Merit Scholarship finalists and 16 received National Merit Scholarship commendation awards.

There is a general problem of putting 1,600 kids together who are going through developmental stages, Shine said. They are challenging authority and breaking away from the family.

"Our school day is oftentimes much more structured than home life. It's our job to help them in the education process and help them grow," he said.

"The exciting thing about a high school is there is always something going on and

Kastran adds, "We have a lot of AP programs and we give a lot of attention to low ability students. But we need to focus more in two areas — the average kid and the vocational kid."

The one thing that can't be ignored is the rivalry between the schools. Most of the time, competition is healthy. It promotes school spirit and develops a camaraderie. Sometimes it gets out of hand.

Kastran talked about a leadership program that he and Bernard LeMieux, assistant principal at South, have coordinated. The purpose is to bring the schools closer together through various groups, such as cheerleading and journalism students.

"We will have a teacher exchange day, all on a volunteer basis," Kastran said. "We will have some freshmen mixers and we are even planning a senior citizen day."

The support

Herschelmann says the communication between teachers and parents is "terrific" and says teachers have no hesitation about getting on the phone to a parent when it's necessary.

Shine, who is in his first year with the Grosse Pointe district, said he is impressed with parental involvement in the school.

"I find it unusual because parents are usually more involved on the elementary level and then less in the middle school," he said. "As kids grow up they want their parents less involved, but here the kids are interested and enthusiastic."

Getting six or seven adult couples to chaperone a dance is no problem, he said. "I find that very unusual."

One explanation may be that many of the students' parents grew up in Grosse Pointe, he said, "and their kids are here, so their roots are in the school. I think parents are comfortable coming in the school."

Radar detectors are hot item

A $3,500 portable computer and a $250 radar detector were taken Feb. 26 from a vehicle parked on Harper between 2 a.m. and 4:30

According to Grosse Pointe Woods police, this "smash and grab" larceny is probably connected to at least 10 other such thefts in the past month. Mostly radar detectors have been stolen.

The vehicle had its driver-side window shattered and the two electronic items removed

'We still don't know too much about these thefts Detective Robert Kwiatkowski said, "Parents should keep an eye open for kids who might be buying or selling radar detectors.

"We definitely feel these larcenies are connected. It appears only the Woods is being hit, although there have been some similar larcenies in Grosse Pointe City.'

He added people should remove radar detectors from their cars if possible, or at least hide them in the vehicle.

Proposed ordinance to limit lot splits

A zoning ordinance in the Shores aimed at preventing the construc-tion of houses in what is now the rear yard of existing houses along the lake will be presented at a public hearing March 11.

In accordance with state law, the zoning addition originated with the Shores planning commission, which, following the public hearing, will make a recommendation to the village council.

The ordinance would affect approximately 15 properties from the Edsel & Eleanor Ford house south. These properties have long setbacks from the lake, with potentially enough space to split the parcels and erect a row of houses fronting the lake, according to Village Manager Michael Kenyon.

'This is to prevent houses in front of other houses," Kenyon said.

All of the property owners along Lakeshore have been notified by letter, village officials said. The hearing will be held in the village council chambers Tuesday, March 11, at 8:30 a.m.

Proposed ordinance to limit lot splits

A zoning ordinance in the Shores aimed at preventing the construction of houses in what is now the rear yard of existing houses along the lake will be presented at a public hearing March 11.

In accordance with state law, the zoning addition originated with the Shores planning commission, which, following the public hearing, will make a recommendation to the village council.

The ordinance would affect approximately 15 properties from the Edsel & Eleanor Ford house south. These properties have long set-backs from the lake, with potentially enough space to split the parcels and erect a row of houses fronting the lake, according to Village Manager Michael Kenyon. This is to prevent houses in front of other houses," Kenyon

All of the property owners along Lakeshore have been notified by letter, village officials said.

The hearing will be held in the village council chambers Tuesday, March 11, at 8:30 a.m.

"We have started to sand-bag Patterson Park at Grand Marais and we're trying to pick up any rights of way so we are high enough," he said. "If we are successful, we can keep water out of the flood area. The pumps may be able to handle it," he said.

The Park is giving 50 sand bags free to homeowners and then charging 15 cents for each bag over that amount. Ellison said that's what it costs the city

According to the Army Corps of Engineers formula, about 800 sand bags are needed to build a wall one foot high and 100 feet long.

"We don't know what will hap-pen to our marina," Ellison told the group. During the high water levels, the docks are expected to go under. The marina at Windmill Pointe has five main piers with about 270 docks.

'All of our water and electricity is attached to the concrete docks and we will have to relocate them or not furnish water and electricity," he said.

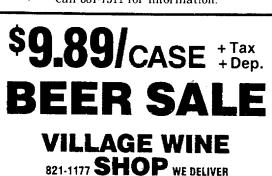

It's an expensive operation, Ellison said, adding that City Manager John Crawford "will have to make that decision when the time comes. We have transformers that will have to be raised. Even last year, we had to post that the water was non-potable.

About 60 people attended the afternoon meeting. Ellison said letters were sent to the 50 shoreline residents in the Park.

Youth classes will begin at the various possibilities in drawing and painting with new activities weekly. Beginning and continuing students will develop new skills with brushes, paint, pastels,

Each of the art classes will cost $25.50 per person and includes all

Speeding gets him in trouble

A Warren man, 24, was stopped by Shores public safety officers for driving too fast on Vernier Feb. 25—and that was just the start of his troubles.

When he rolled down his window to respond to the arresting officer. an odor of marijuana smoke wafted out. What appeared to be a hand-rolled cigaretie was smoldering in the car ashtray. A patdown revealed a baggie of possible marijuana in his front coat pocket.

According to police reports, the man gave his brother's name and was driving a friend's car, as his own license had been revoked. Officers checked the state computer information network and discovered that the man also had an outstanding warrant against him for failure to appear on another

Two friends came down to the station to post the man's $200 bond. A police clerk recognized one of them, a Shores man, 22, as having an outstanding $50 warrant on a city ordinance violation. Bonds were posted all around and the people were released.

Proving fair can be better than just so-so

By Elsa Frohman

Having responsibility for the publication of 650,000 copies of the Detroit Free Press daily, David Lawrence angers some people and pleases others. Lawrence says his first priority is fairness, a theme that is repeated often in his Sunday

Not everyone who writes to him in his role as publisher believes that he achieves that goal. However, the Institute of Human Relations of the American Jewish Committee has selected Lawrence as recipient of its Human Rights Award, in recognition of his dedication to erasing discrimination in all aspects of life.

"My hope is that I live my life in a way that is fair to other people," Lawrence said. "I try to understand what it's like to be in other people's footsteps."

moting understanding across ethnic and religious lines.

If Lawrence sounds a little bit corny, he acknowledges it. He may be a little bit embarrassed talking about his own virtues. He often turns his comments away from himself and toward the news organization he leads. At times, he speaks of the Free Press as an extension of himself, as if there were only a very indistinct dividing line between the two.

"I try to take criticism (of the newspaper) seriously, but not personally," he said. "A large part of my life is here. I care about this newspaper . . . The easiest thing to do is to be defènsive. I take my work personally, but at the same time, for me to conduct my business by my emotions would be hurtful and would not lead to discussion.'

Lawrence's favorite theme, fairness, comes up again and again.

His quest for fairness is pursued on many levels. Not only does he strive to present balanced newscoverage on the pages of the news-paper, he is concerned that the Free Press, as a business, should conduct itself with an eye to fairness and equal opportunity.

"I think it is the job of a newspaper to serve all the people,"
Lawrence said. "Some 650,000 copies of the paper go out to people of different colors, faiths and genders every day." Lawrence is working to bring more minority workers into the Free Press work-

"A diverse workforce can produce a newspaper that is more re-flective of the community it serves." he said.

Lawrence leads the Free Press from the perspective of a newspaper man. He began as a journalist and rose through the ranks to his current position as publisher. A 1963 graduate of the University of Florida, he started his career as a reporter at the St. Petersburg Times. His resume includes editorial positions at The Washington Post, The Palm Beach Post, The Philadelphia Daily News and The Charlotte Observer before he came to the Detroit Free Press in 1978 as executive editor. He was named publisher and chairman of the Free Press in 1985.

"As a newspaper man, the greatest contribution I can make is by putting out a newspaper that works hard to get at the truth. Lawrence said. "Newspapers have an important role in our lives. By that I mean, you live in a free society and to keep it free, you have to let people have enough information to make up their own minds. The way to conquer prejudice is to give people enough information. Discrimination always flows when people don't have enough information.

Lawrence sees a second role for himself, outside of his work on the newspaper.

"I hope to contribute through more than the newspaper," he said, referring to his work with a long list of committees, boards and organizations. Lawrence takes his community involvement seriously. from sitting on the board of trustees of the Grosse Pointe Academy, where two of his five children are students, to working with Wayne State University to establish the Journalism Institute for Minorities.

A complete listing of Lawrence's organizational involvement includes the Detroit Institute for Children, Children's Hospital, the Foundation for American Communications, the Founders Societv of the Detroit Institute of Arts, the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Detroit Renaissance, the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, the United Foundation, the Michigan Council for the Arts, the Economic Club of Detroit, the Detroit Committee on Foreign Relations and the Michigan Thanksgiving Parade Foundation Committee. He is on the board of directors or trustees of each of those organizations. Lawrence is not a name on a letterhead to the organizations. He has been repeatedly praised for the active role he takes.

"I have a guilt complex about being on a board and contributing nothing," he said. "It may be hard to talk me into doing something. but once I've said I'm going to do it, I'm going to do what I said."

Time seems to be the only limitation on Lawrence's energy.

"You have to learn to do a juggling act," he said. "I think I can work harder than most people I work along side.'

Work and community organizations are not the only driving forces in Lawrence's life. He also places a great value on his family.

"I have a family I care a great deal about," he said. "I attend all my sons' hockey games. I take the kids to Sesame Street Live and ballgames. As you move toward your late 30s, (Lawrence is 44) you get a greater sense of your own mortality. You do better at finding out what is important and what is not. Money cannot be the biggest turn on.

Lawrence has been in Detroit for more than seven years, longer than he has spent in any other community during his working career. He lives in Grosse Pointe Park and says he has come to feel at home

"I like this area. This was the first time we came to the midwest," he said, pointing to the majority of his career which was spent on the east coast and in Florida. "If I have my druthers. nothing would please me more than to stay here and do what I am doing. I've had opportunities, yet I've staved here.

The essence of Lawrence's outlook is optimism.

"Most of what I do is fun and work," he said. "I'm never down two days in a row. I essentially think that tomorrow is going to be a better day

A surgical nurse, she became interested in the physiological effects of diving. "Each 30 feet that you dive down in the water, increases the pressure on the body. Some soft parts of the body adapt well to the pressure, but I found that the bony parts of the head do not. Divers must be taught how to clear their ears, and what to do to avoid a terrific pain in the sinuses," she explained.

Artificial hearts are wave of future

By Linda St. Thomas Smithsonian News Service

People don't remember the first person to use an artificial kidney machine or to wear an artificial leg, but they do remember Barney Clark. The artificial heart, whether seen as a mechanical miracle or an expensive experiment, has taken center stage in the world of medical technology.

Today, more than three years after the first permanent artificial heart was implanted in Clark, researchers are improving the plastic-and-metal devices and continuing to test them in animals. Medical engineers are designing new models that would be totally implanted in the body, freeing the patient from cumbersome machinery. And several cardiovascular surgeons are ready to consider patients as potential candidates for the Jarvik-7 or other compressedair-driven hearts.

Meanwhile, the public and the medical community have begun to question the value of a procedure that, thus far, has resulted in serious medical complications for the patients.

Amidst this rapidly changing technology and public debate, the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History of Washington, D.C., continues to collect mechanical hearts and related materials such as pumping devices, heart valves, oxygenating machines, pacemakers and apparatus used in open-heart surgery.

"Our cardiology collection illustrates many of the conflicts and issues in 20th-century medical technology," Barbara Melosh, curator in the museum's Medical Sciences

Division, says. Among these are such questions as: How far should physicians go to sustain life? Should physicians consider questions about the quality of life for patients tethered to machinery? Who decides which patient receives an artificial heart or a human transplant? Should so much money be spent on artificial hearts when those funds could be directed toward preventive medicine programs? Should artificial hearts be used as a permanent replacement of the natural heart or as a temporary measure to keep patients alive until a human heart becomes available for transplant?

It has taken decades of research to reach the point of asking such ethical questions. Since 1964, the National Institute of Health has allocated about $200 million for research on artificial hearts and related materials and even more money for education programs. Despite these efforts, heart disease continues to be the leading cause of death in the nation, claiming the lives of about 770,000 persons in

Work on a mechanical substitute for the heart began with a search Huge, aggressive grizzly bears for ways to circulate the blood, organs and tissues. In 1930, avia- 1970s when he was a medical stu- an over-the-shoulder case.

tor Charles Lindbergh, spurred by his sister-in-law's cardiovascular disease, began working with Nobel Prize winner Alexis Carrel on a perfusion pump. The Lindbergh-Carrel pump could keep an animal's organs alive outside the body by supplying their blood vessels with nutrient fluid. Once jokingly called a "robot heart," the glass pump is now on display in the Smithsonian museum, as is the later Sewell heart-lung pump, made, incredibly, from an Erector

In 1946, Dutch physician Dr. Willem Kolff, who was to become a pioneer in the artificial-heart field. first developed an artificial kidney machine using an old bathtub and thin cellophane sausage casings. The jury-rigged dialysis machine kept a 67-year-old woman alive for many years. Kolff joined the Cleveland Clinic in 1950 and participated in the development of the heart-lung machine, coronary-artery surgery and the intra-aortic balloon pump that assists a weakened natural heart.

The search for a replacement for the natural heart faced formidable problems. The device had to replace two of the heart's four chambers — the left and right ventricles. (The left ventricle does 80 percent of the pumping.) The "total artificial heart" had to beat 40 million times a year and pump about seven quarts of blood a minute. In addition, it had to fit snugly inside the chest and be made of materials that would not cause infection, damage the blood or induce clot-

The first breakthrough came in 1957 when Kolff and his colleague. Dr. Tetsu Akutsu, implanted an electrically powered polyvinyl heart into a dog. The animal only lived for 90 minutes, but the quest was on in earnest. Numerous hearts were developed and implanted in calves and sheep in the 1960s, including a silicone rubber heart designed by Kolff's team, then at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City, and a Teflon-coated steel heart developed by Dr. Yukihiko Nose of the Cleveland Clinic. In 1967, Dr. Christian Barnard of South Africa performed the first human heart transplant; in 1967, Dr. Denton Cooley of Houston's Texas Heart Institute implanted the first temporary total artificial heart into a patient awaiting a transplant.

Dr. Clifford Kwan-Gett, one of Kolff's Utah colleagues, ushered in a new era in 1972 by designing a mechalical heart with an innovative flexible pumping diaphragm. It kept a calf alive for two weeks. Like its modern-day successors, the heart had two independent pumps and was powered by a washing-machine-sized electrical machine that sent a flow of air to the pump or heart.

dent at the University of Utah. The Jarvik hearts, modifications of the Kwan-Gett models, offered a better fit in the chest cavity, a larger stroke volume (more blood per beat) and a stronger, multilayered diaphragm. The nowfamous Jarvik-7, first implanted in 1982 in Barney Clark, is smaller than its predecessor and is powered by a 250-pound "Utahdrive" system or by the portable "Heimes Driver.

The "Utah 100," currently being tested in animals at Utah's Artificial Heart Laboratory, is smaller than the Jarvik-7 and oblong-shaped to fit patients weighing as little as 110 pounds. The Utah 100 - it pumps 100 milliliters or 3 fluio ounces of blood with every beat could be ready for clinical testing in humans in about three years," says Dr. Donald Olsen, director of Utah's Institute for Biomedical Engineering.

Today, Olsen, Harvik (now president of Symbion Inc., in Utah) and researchers at Penn State University, the Cleveland Clinic and the Texas Heart Institute are working on several approaches to the total artificial heart. One goal is the refinement of the compressed-air-driven heart that has kept recipients alive, but not without complications such as blood clots. strokes, infections and kidney disorders. Because the life span of the device itself is unknown and because its use requires patients to be attached to external machines. the artificial heart is seen by some physicians as a temporary device for patients awaiting human-heart transplants.

However, the permanent-artificial-heart program continues with Dr. William DeVries of Humana Heart Institute International in Louisville, Ky., and several other surgeons around the country who have Food and Drug Administration approval to perform implantations. The program's proponents claim that human transplants can never solve the heart transplant problem because of the scarcity of donors and the age and health restrictions on patients considered for human hearts. About 400 transplants occurred last year, but according to an NIH advisory committee report, as many as 35,000 persons each year could have their lives extended with mechanical Kolff, now 74, has been exploring the possibility of making artificial hearts by machine in the event that they become more widely used as either permanent replacements or temporary "bridges." Such devices, Kolff predicts, could be made inexpensively in several hours compared to 13 days required to produce today's handmade hearts.

A long-range goal of artificialheart research is a fully implant-Dr. Robert Jarvik designed his able, electric model powered by

Woman's Health When women smoke

By Willaim T. Mixson, M.D.

A former secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services said that if women smoke like men, they will die like men. Unfortunately, his comment is proving to be true. This year, more women will die of cancer of the lung than will die of breast cancer, which has been the number one cancer killer of women. In the future, this will become more and more true as the smoking practices of the past 15 to 20 years catch up with America's women.

Women have two good reasons to give up smoking. If you are not pregnant, your own health is one reason. If you are pregnant, the health of your unborn child is the second.

Most women are willing to give up cigarettes when they're pregnant, because they know that smoking isn't good for their unborn baby. Smoking is recognized as the single most preventable cause of infant death. Thousands of infants deaths could have been avoided if mothers had not smoked during their pregnancies.

Women who smoke a pack of cigarettes a day during pregnancy have a 25 percent greater chance of having the placenta (afterbirth) block the uterus or having it separate too soon than women who do not smoke. The risk is 90 percent greater with women who smoke more than one pack a day. Your chances of having a miscarriage are 30 to 70 percent higher if you smoke, and the rate of premature deliveries also increases as you smoke more. If you smoke during pregnancy, your baby will weigh less when it is born, and children of mothers who smoke have a higher rate of pneumonia, bronchitis, and visit doctors more often than children of non-smoking mothers. Even if you are not or do not plan to become pregnant, smoking still doesn't make sense. There has been a frightening increase in lung cancer and emphysema among women. Osteoporosis, a disease of thinning of bones resulting in fractures in older women, seems to be aggravated by smoking. Although it can be prevented or arrested by daily hormone and calcium treatment, smoking reduces the effects of the treatment Most smokers will agree that smoking is bad for them, but it's a hard habit to give up. Scientists have found that the nicotine in tobacco is more addictive than heroin. If you smoke and want help in quitting, ask your doctor about local groups that have nonsmoking programs. Or get in touch with local chapters of the American Lung Association, American Cancer Society, or the American Heart Association.

It's never to late to stop smoking. You're the best reason there is to quit.

Cheers

Not many people know it, but there's one rule all sportswriters try to follow: no cheering in the press box. There's even a book by that name, written naturally enough, by a sportswriter.

Sports reporters aren't supposed to cheer (in the press box or on the sidelines) because they are expected to be detached and unbiased and completely objective.

Most of the time, that's pretty easy to do. We get so caught up in making sure that we get the complete, accurate story and some informative quotes that it never even crosses our minds to root for one team or one individual over another. (As hard as that may be to believe for some North/ South fans who fall all over themselves accusing us of favoritism for South/North).

Sometimes, though, we slip. It doesn't happen often, and it usually takes some pretty exciting plays to make it happen. But it does happen.

Take last fall, for instance. North football fans were going wild as the Norsemen came back from an 11-point deficit to win in the last four minutes of their playoff game. I stood on the sidelines in the wind and rain, scribbling furiously in my notebook, trying not to miss any of the action.

Another reporter stood next to me and as things got really hairy on the field, he turned to me and said: "I don't know if I can take it . . . this game is really turning into something, isn't it?'

What he couldn't "take" and what I was having a hard time managing myself, was the necessity for us to remain impartial. To just sort of stand there and quietly appreciate the storybook ending that was unfolding before us. Sure, maybe we could smile a little, whisper a satisfied "Yeah!" to ourselves when North pulled it out, but there wouldn't be any yelling, applause or jumping up and down,

That's the way it usually works. Usually. But last week, I blew it.

While watching South take Fraser on in the first game of the ice hockey regionals, I stepped over that thin line between impartial observer and sports fan. It happened when South's Rob Wood skated over the blue line, faked a Fraser defenseman out of his skates, deked the goalie and buried the

And I cheered. Actually, it was more like a good, loud "All right!". And it slipped out before I could stop it. Immediately realizing what I'd done, my face turned red and I took a quick glance around to make sure no one (especially any North fans in attendance) had seen me. My indiscretion had gone unnoticed and I quickly resumed my impartial sports reporter stance.

I was able to restrain myself most of the rest of the week, although I was sorely tempted on a number of occasions to stand right up and cheer. Like when Port Huron Northern goalie Trevor Graham withstood 60 - count 'em - 60 North shots inthe Norsemen's 6-4 win over the Huskies. And when North came out strong against No. 1-ranked Trenton and skated with them in the first period of its 6-4 loss to the Trojans.

That was the most exciting period of hockey I'd seen all year. And what could I do about it but nod my head and say, yes, that was an interesting period and sure, I hoped that North could stay with the big. bad Trojans for the rest of the game?

Because if I did anything else, it would be kind of tough for people to trust me. You know, how do we believe what she writes when she cheers for North one game, South the next and who-knows-who another time?

It's too bad I can't root openly for the sports teams in Grosse Pointe. Because if I could, I would cheer for them all. I like sports and I can appreciate a nice play just as much as the next person, maybe more. since I see so many athletic events. And maybe if I could cheer all of the time, folks might understand that when they're out there, the kids who play high school sports for Grosse Pointe's schools really only wear one uniform in my eyes: that of talented high school athletes.

Speaking of cheers, here's three of them for South varsity skaters Wood and Bill Tecos, who have been chosen to play in the annual All-Stater game March 16 in Midland. Tecos was South's No. 1 goaltender for three seasons and Wood, a forward, led the league in scoring in his first year on the squad after playing Junior B hockey last

With this honor, the pair is listed among the best 36 seniors in Michigan as chosen by a six-member committee from throughout the state.

Orienteering offers outdoor adventure for people of all ages

By Peggy O'Connor

Picture yourself walking through slightly hilly terrain, surrounded by early spring vegetation, and breathing fresh, clean air. You come out of the woods to the top of a hill and are treated to a beautiful view of the countryside.

That, according to experienced orienteers, is what it's all about.

At least it is for Julie Weeks, 28, of the Woods. She's a survey research analyst who just happens to be the president of the Southern Michigan Orienteering Club (SMOC)

Orienteering is an outdoor sport involving the use of a topographical map and compass. It is sometimes referred to as "adventure running," although many participants compete at a more leisurely pace. Weeks got interested in the sport while attending the University of Michigan. She joined U-M's club (which no longer exists) in 1979 and is in her second year at the helm of the 200-member SMOC.

"Orienteering got its start in Scandinavia. The U.S. military brought it over here, only they called it 'maneuvers.' It's actually a lot more fun than military maneuvers sound," Weeks says with a smile.

"It's grown into more of a community-based sport. Whole families participate, although we're not nearly as involved over here yet as they are in Scandinavia. They had 20,000 people compete in a meet there last year. When we hosted the U.S. championships (last October) we had 350.

'I'd love to see it become a real mainstream sport over here.'

There really isn't any reason why it shouldn't. Orienteers are ordinary people of all ages, sizes and skill levels. Local residents the James Gugino family and Olivia Mandel, of the Woods and Barbara Rowe, of St. Clair Shores, are club members. All one needs to start in the sport is a compass, the maps provided by the host group and a good pair of walking shoes. A little sense of adventure wouldn't hurt, either.

Orienteers may purchase a quality compass (the swivel kind, not the flat ones found in Cracker Jack boxes) for around $10-$20. The meet fees include a topographical map upon which is drawn a course with from six to 12 pre-determined points. Participants must visit these points in order. When the orienteer finds one of these points, or "controls," he will see an orange and white marker with a special punch attached. The orienteer punches his "control card," indicating that the correct control has been located.

The challenge and fun of orienteering lies in relating what is drawn on the map to what is observed in the woods and in finding one's way from one point to the next in the shortest or easiest way possible.

The five-color maps indicate, by color, the terrain. There are several different courses available at most meets, with the easiest - the "white" course of approximately 2 kilometers - laid out entirely on trails and the more difficult tracking through the woods. The other courses are yellow. or 3 kilometer advanced beginner: orange, or 4 kilometer intermediate: and red, or 6 kilometer advanced.

Orienteering is basically a fall and spring sport, with summer vegetation making it too complicated for that season. There's also winter orienteering, which is done on cross country

SMOC's meet sites are at the Highland Recreation Area, west of Pontiac; Portage Lake-Waterloo; the Prospect Hill-Waterloo Recreation Area; the Silver Lake, Pinckney Recreation Area; and Ella Sharp Park in Jackson. The sport is practiced all over the country, with the New England states and the east coast among the most popular sites.

"What I like about it is being outdoors and learning to be able to maneuver around out there." Weeks says. "You're thinking all of the time It's like the club's bumper sticker says: 'Orienteering: Cunning Running'

Weeks says that prospective orienteers are welcome to join. To get outdoors. There are a lot of orienteering applications to everyday life. You get a great teeling of accomplishment knowing you have found your way around out

And you meet a lot of nice people. After meets you see competitors walking around, talking with each other, asking others how they found their way around. It's a very friendly

Beginner instruction is available at all local meets. They'll even go out on a meet with you until you get the hang of it. The cost to participants is $2 per meet for members and $3 for non-members. SMOC membership is $4 per person, $7 per family and the costs are basically to cover the club's almost-monthly newsletter. A limited number of compasses are available for rental at 50 cents each.

The SMOC's first spring meet is this Saturday, March 8. For more information on the group, call Weeks at 963-2414 (days) and 881-4299 (even-

Fish flood: high waters may increase population

By Peter Salinas

This may be stretching a point a bit, but there is a positive benefit from spring flooding. Well, it's more likely pulling a point apart, but if flooding along the Lake St. Clair shoreline turns out to be as bad as predicted — fishing some two or three years down the road may be even better than it is today

Fish that spawn in the shallows will have more available spawning area," said Ron Spitler, Michigan Department of Natural Resources district fisheries biologist. "Bas-ed on what I've learned, the fish may be spawning in people's yards, but the just-flooded areas will provide rich nutrients for the young fish, increasing survival."

Spitler says northern pike "which like to spawn with their bellies right in the grass" will benefit from the flooding the most.

Any land which becomes flooded gives up its nutrients to the surrounding water, providing good cover and abundant food for young fish. This greatly improves their chance for survival.

"Spawning-wise this should be a very productive year," Spitler

LAKE ST. CLAIR and the Detroit River are probably only second to Lake Erie for walleye production, and while walleyes spawn in tributaries, there should be no

Fishing season on the Great Lakes is open all year, and Bob Haas, biologist in charge at the Lake St. Clair DNR station in Mount Clemens, said that given one week of warm temperatures with a little rain, the ice will open up on the lake and fishermen will

Haas said that 1982 was a banner year for walleye production and those fish reached legal size about two years ago. Fishermen have been catching them, and last year they were in the 18- to 22-inch

"This year, there may not be quite as many walleyes, Haas said, but the average size of those caught will be bigger. It will still be a very good year.

HIGH WATER will make it easier for fish to spawn in areas they weren't able to reach in the past, but anglers will also be able to get into areas they hadn't been able to previously.

Haas also cautioned boaters to be cautious when getting into unfamiliar areas. Objects that were above the surface last year may be slightly underwater and present a

On the average some one million to 1½ million walleyes are caught in Michigan waters from the southern end of the Detroit River to Port Huron, Haas said, and this year should be on par with that average.

Spitler is a tournament bass fisherman, and says Lake St. Clair is noted for its smallmouth bass

"There are also a lot of largemouth bass in the bays, canals and cuts," Spitler said. "The marshes near Dickenson, St. John and Harson's Island are very good for largemouths. A friend of mine caught a six-pound largemouth in that," he laughed.

these waters.

"As soon as that ice goes out people will start fishing," Haas said. For some that day can't come too soon.

LIKE EARL Wakely Jr., Grosse Pointe Woods building inspector and avid Lake St. Clair fisherman, who says he has been fishing through the ice all winter, and when the ice is gone - he'll be gone too.

When the ice comes off we head down to Amherstberg and Bob-lo to fish for perch. Wakely said. "Last year in March we caught a couple nice mess of perch fishing from an area they call the Horse-

Nautical etiquette

4 ou're invited aboard a friend's boat for a day of cruising or sailing. Of course, you're delighted. But — as a non-boater — you have some questions about what's proper. What should you take? Wear? Do? Not do?

Nautical etiquette is an informal, practical collection of good shipboard manners that considers the safety, comfort, and convenience of crew and guests and the efficient running of the boat.

Here are some guidelines to prepare for a day of cruising or sailing. The rules are the same whether you're aboard a luxurious 63-foot yacht, a sleek racing sailboat or a small day-cruiser.

Familiar objects will have unfamiliar names. Simple chores will take on new complications. And the weather will dictate everything. Wear non-skid shoes. If you don't have deck shoes, such as Topsiders or Docksides, any soft-soled running shoe or tennis shoe is acceptable.

Bring clothing suitable for the day's activities: a jacket and tie or a skirt if you plan to cruise to a dressy restaurant for dinner; a bathing suit and towel if you plan to swim; sun lotion always; a sweater or a jacket, since it's cooler on the open water than it is ashore, especially in the evening. Take a slicker if rain is predicted Stow your gear in a soft duffle bag that can be crunched into a small space. Boats are not known for their abundant storage areas.

• If you're bringing food, ask the hostess for suggestions. Chill drinks beforehand and pack them in an insulated cooler. The refrigerator (if there is one) may be needed for perishables. Don't bring elaborate trays of fancy hors d'oeuvres that will slip and slide about when the boat is underway. Cook everything in advance, at home. Ask if the boat has an oven if you're bringing a casserole that needs reheating. Avoid glass of any kind. Cans, plastic bottles and paper goods are the best containers for boating activities.

 Be prompt. If the captain says he's expecting you at 10 a.m., be there. Departure times are often calculated with regard to weather, bridge openings or starting times for sailboat races in the area.

You may offer to assist with navigational procedures or with lines. (Don't call them ropes, even though they look like ropes.) Jim Acheson, director of the Great Lakes Cruising Club, and owner of a 63-foot cruiser, says the most important rule for boating guests is: "Never do anything unless you're asked." Most captains prefer that guests be quiet and stay out of the way during critical maneuvers.

 Ask how the toilet operates before you use it. Boat toilets are called heads. (Don't ask why.) They're mechanical wonders that include a holding tank and a macerator-chlorinater that cannot process Kleenex, cigarette butts, paper towels or tampons.

• Conserve water. Boats carry a limited quantity of fresh water in tanks. Don't let the tap run while you dry your hands.

• Smoking. Ask if and where you may smoke. Never smoke while the boat is taking on fuel.

• Don't board a boat without permission. Boat owners regard their craft as their home. You wouldn't dream of peering curiously into the window of someone's home or walking through someone's front door without knocking first and being invited in

• Don't throw anything in the water. That's nautical littering. Seasickness is not a disgrace. If you suspect you might be susceptible, bring your own remedy. Most pharmacies have overthe-counter pills for motion sickness. Some newer preventatives come in the form of patches that are taped directly on the skin and release their medication slowly, during the cruise. Read the directions carefully. Some are not effective after you begin to feel queasy and must be taken before you leave the dock.

If the worst happens - profuse apologies are not required. Seasickness happens occasionally even to the most seasoned

The Grosse Pointe PeeWee Marlies began the University Liggett School Fellowship Tournament with a strong 3-0 victory over the St. Clair Shores Blackhawks. For the championship game, the Marlies again faced the St. Clair Shores Blackhawks. After a scoreless first period, the Marlies got a goal in the second period and four more in the third, to

ULS takes Fellowship Cup

The University Liggett School Bantam hockey team won the Fel-Iowship Cup tournament on March 1 with a 6-3 victory over the Grosse Pointe Maple Leafs. The victory completed an 8-11-4 season for the Bantam Knights and made it the second time in the last three years that they have won the tournament.

In the consolation game, the St. Clair Shores Wheels defeated St. Clair Shores Pizza-One, 3-2.

The tournament was a weeklong event which featured four Bantam teams from Grosse Pointe, St. Clair Shores and ULS. The purpose of the tournament was to present competitive play in an atmosphere of friendship and sportsmanship. During the week each team played three games against each of the opponents to determine the seedings for Saturday's championship and consola-tion games. The Grosse Pointe Maple Leafs were undefeated in their three games, gaining the top seed, while the University Liggett Knights were 1-1-1, for the second seed. The St. Clair Shores Pizza-Ones with a 0-1-2 record played in the consolation game against the St. Clair Shores Wheels, 0-2-1.

In the championship game the Knights were led by the line of John Bellamy, Doug Wood and Jon Davis. Bellamy scored five goals and Wood and Davis contributed four and three assists, respectively. Rob Hydon opened the scoring for the victors with a nice feed by Wood. ULS then went up 2-0 on Bellamy's first goal, before John Radke scored for the Maple Leafs. Leading 2-1 going into the second period, the Maple Leafs and Knights traded goals twice with two markers by Bellamy and one each by the Maple Leaf's Bob Osborne and John Radke (Radke's

In the third period, leading 4-3, the Knights broke the game open with Bellamy's fourth at the three minute mark and fifth, seven minutes into the period. Knight goalie Matt Krieg played an outstanding game, blocking 27 Maple Leaf shots, 15 in the final period, as the Leafs applied pressure in an effort to get back into the game. Bellamy's five-goal performance was overshadowed by Doug Wood's six goals on Friday night in the Knights 6-0 win over the St. Clair Shores Wheels.

The victory was a fitting conclusion to a very successful season for the University Liggett Bantams. Inspired by the play of Wood, Davis and Bellamy, and the leadership of Lubera and Paul Brigolin, the Knights finished the season winning eight of their last nine games.

The defense, led by goalie Krieg, became stronger as the season progressed, with Krieg ending the year with an 88 percent save percentage and a 3.98 goals-againstaverage. The improved play of defensemen Cecil Lepard, Brigolin, Gene Gargaro, and Lubera was instrumental in the Knights' strong finish. Inspired play by Armistead Burwell, Bob Scoville, Stewart McLaren, Kamran Jafri, and Hydon helped the offense to have two other strong lines to go with the Wood, Davis, Bellamy

Norsemen cruise to cage wins; gymnasts second

By Josh Abbott North High

North's varsity basketball team was in high gear last week in preparation for this week's basketball districts.

On Feb. 25, North traveled to L'Anse Creuse to face a scrappy LC squad, winning, 57-45. The Norsemen started slowly, trailing 19-18 at halftime. But they came out like gangbusters in the second half, going on a 25-8 tear, building a 15-point lead in the third quarter and cruising to the victory.

Senior Bill Miller was high scorer with 16 points. Senior center Dave Bryer had 13 points and Miller, junior forward Tom Shehab and senior forward Jon Palazzo had five rebounds each.

On Feb. 28, the North High gym was packed to witness the contest for second place in the Bi-County between a pair of 8-3 teams, North and South Lake. South Lake had beaten North earlier in the year.

North got off to a quick start, scoring six of the first seven points and taking an eight-point lead at halftime. The third quarter was paced by Miller's scoring and Bryer's rebounding and the Norsemen, leading 51-33 at one point, threaten to pull away from South

The Cavaliers refused to quit and their full-court press began to work. A combination of North turnovers and poor shooting enabled South Lake to pull to within two, 63-61, but North bore down and the free throw shooting of Bryer, Palazzo and Dave Justice helped the Norsemen pull out a 71-65 vic-

Miller had 27 points, many on fast-break lay-ups.

After a slow start, the North JV team took a pair of wins to finish the year at 12-8. On Feb. 25, the Norsemen beat L'Anse Creuse, 57-54, and on Feb. 28, they destroyed South Lake, 62-28.

Forward Russell Rice led against South Lake with 14 points. Kirk Lowry and guard Brian Peltz had 12 and 11 points, respectively. Karl Schultz scored 23 points and had 16 rebounds.

The JV finished the season with a 9-3 Bi-County record.

North's ninth grade basketball team swept a pair of games last week to finish the season on a high note, beating L'Anse Creuse on Feb. 25, 59-43, and topping South Lake on Feb. 28, 60-46.

Kevin McCarron was high scorer against L'Anse Creuse with 22 points. Scott Schorer had 20 points and Derek Lawson added 11. Schorer also had nine rebounds.

McCarron and Matt Brady paced North against South Lake, with 16 points apiece. Schorer had 10 points and 11 rebounds.

Gymnasts 2nd in league

North's gymnastics team finished second out of five teams in last weekend's league competition. Fraser had 129.15 points; North, 127.07; Lakeview, 118.06; Edsel Ford, 118.03; and South, 98.0. Fraser, North and Lakeview finished in a three-way tie for the dual league trophy. The regional score was North's highest of the season, according to coach Gretchen Madi-

Junior Jill Boardman won the all-around title, finishing first in the bars and on the balance beam and second in floor exercise and vault. Senior Cindy Dundon was fourth all-around, with third, fourth and sixth place finishes.

North competes in the regionals this weekend. ''Jill should do really well . . . and so should Cindy Dundon," Madison said.

Spikers fall

North's varsity volleyball team ended its season in the districts with a 15-13, 15-7 loss to rival South High on March 1. Cindy Bowman led with her superb net play.

North's ninth grade spikers ended their frustrating season, with a loss to East Detroit Oakwood, 15-12, 15-12. Captain Mary Spiewak and Heidi Cartwright had three kills each, Katie Koller had five

The frosh finished at 3-12.

Swim team wins league

North High hosted the league swimming championships Feb. 27 and 28, taking an easy victory by amassing 418 points. Lakeview was second with 258 points; Lake Shore had 234 points, South Lake, 99 and Brablec, 75.

First place finishes were recorded by diver Mike Reynolds, who set a league record with his victory; and by Greg Cooksey in the 100 back and 200 IM; by Brad Cooksey, 200 and 500 freestyle; and Andy Young, 100 and 500 free.

Greg Cooksey set a league and varsity record in the 100 back. Also winning was the 200 medley relay team of Greg Cooksey, 'Rob Walters, Dave Farrell and Ian MacNeil; and the 400 free relay team of Young, Brad Cooksey, Drew Dungan and Jeff Williams. Williams also finished second in the 200 and 500 free. MacNeil was second in the 500 free and 100 back.

SCS Arena hosts skating championships

The 4th Midwestern Sectional Precision Championships will be hosted by the St. Clair Shores Figure Skating Club Saturday, March 15, beginning at 8:30 a.m. The public is invited to watch teams representing the 20-state Midwestern section compete to qualify for the 1986 National Precision Skating Championships to be held in Boston, Mass. in April.

Precision Team Skating involves 12 to 32 skaters performing various group formations, maneuvers and transitions precisely to music. "Precision" refers to the importance of unison, the accuracy of formations and the synchronization of the team.

One-third of the St. Clair Shores Juvenile Precision team is from Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods, team officials say.

The ages of the competitors range from teams made up of youngsters under the age of 12 to adults. Among the competing teams will be the 1985 Gold Medal winners in the Juvenile and Senior divisions from the Fraser Figure Skating Club. The Fraser Junior team along with Wyandotte's Senior team received Silver Medals in last year's National Competition.

All-day passes for this competition will be available at the door: $3 for adults; $1.50 for children (under 14) and senior citizens.

For further information, call: 779-4300.

(Because of the championships, the SCS Arena will cancel public skating on March 15. Public skating will return on March 16 from 2 to 3:45 p.m.).

most steals, 86. Regional wrap-up

By Jennifer McSorley South High

The Blue Devil hockey team wrapped up a very successful season last week, beating Fraser and Port Huron in the regionals before losing to top-ranked Trenton in the title game on March 1.

South topped Fraser, 5-4. Rodney Goin, Rob Wood, (two) John Nicholson and Tim Jerome scored goals; Wood, (three) Mike Kramer, Jerome, Evan Frakes and Andy Roy earned assists. Fraser nearly took the lead mid-way through the third period, but goalie Bill Tecos had other ideas he made five quick saves and kept the score tied for Wood's game-winner late in the contest. South then defeated Port Huron, 9-2. Scoring for the Devils were Bill Huntington, Roy and Jeff Lefebvre (three each), Wood and Micholson. Earning assists were Mike Amore, Huntington, Lance Eriksen, Roy, Wood, Eric Warezak, Nicholson, Roger Romine, Mike Irwin and Bill Gryzenia.

Saturday night's game pitted the No. 1 team (Trenton) against the No. 3 team (South). Trenton avenged South's Dec. 18 4-3 win with a 9-1 trouncing, keeping the puck in South's end most of the night. Wood scored the only Devil goal of the game, from Romine; but South had an earlier goal -Amore from Huntington - disal-

Sophomore goalie Mike Semack spent much of the year watching No. 1 goalie Tecos perform well and said This year has been a learning experience and it's been a lot of fun. I've learned a lot and it's been worth it. Everything we've done . . . it's all paid off.

Against Fraser on Feb. 19, South was outpointed, 126.6-103.6. Kathy Trefzer took a third on the vault with an 8.1 and Seyler was third on the floor with an 8.1. (By Jennifer McSorley).

South's volleyball teams have completed their seasons, with the varsity squad on top in the EML and the JV team in second place. In the varsity district tourna-

The JV squad played its last game on Feb. 28, losing to East Detroit, 8-15, 10-15. Chris Schulte led in most categories, with four kills and six service points. (By Jennifer McSorley).

On ice: the 1985-86 hockey season

One team had a brand new coach, another, high hopes for its talent-laden line-up. And still another approached the 1985-86 high school hockey season hoping that its young personnel might win more than a handful of games. There were more than a few surprises: like a Michigan Metro League championship for South High's eightsophomore squad; the coming of age of University Liggett School's defense; and the steady play of North's junior goaltender.

There were certainties: the dominance of North's smooth-skating John Russell. South's high-scoring Rob Wood and ULS's dependable John Birgbauer. And last week, there were the regionals . . .

Tuesday, Feb. 25: North vs. Port Huron Northern

Even coach Mike Manzella had to raise an eyebrow when the official scorer announced North's shots on goal after the Norsemen's 6-4 victory over the Huskies. Goalie Trevor Graham faced 60 North shots, most of them difficult, in his squad's loss. Northern took an early lead in this game, but North roared back with two goals — Russell's goal on a faceoff won by Rob Marshall and Russell again. scoring on a rebound of Rob Olds' shot.

John Quinlan made it 3-1 from Dave Johnston, but the Huskies tied it up the second period, despite North's 40-18 shot advantage. It didn't take the Norsemen long to grab another lead; Rob Koehler converted a Casey Quick shot on the power play for a 4-3 margin. Port Huron tied it again, but Russell made it 5-4 from John Andary and with 27 seconds to go.

Quick iced the game when he deflected
Bob Alcott's shot from the point; Dan again, 3-3, where it stayed at the end of

Spitz also assisted. Tuesday, Feb. 25: ULS vs. Gabriel Richard

John Fowler's University Liggett School Knights improved their record by 10 wins this season, finishing at 14-7-2, despite playing a three-goalie system and relying on three juniors on defense. ULS even got a break in the regional playoffs, drawing a bye in the first round. But their good fortune ran out when they ran into a buzzsaw — No. 3-ranked Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard — in the second round at Southfield Civic Arena. Richard handed the Knights a 10-1 loss, ending their storybook season.

Thursday, Feb. 27: South vs. Port Huron Most hockey experts didn't figure the Big Reds had a chance against high-flying South. And they were right: the Devils skated to a relatively easy 9-2 victory. South led all the way in this one; it was 3-1 after the first period, and 6-2 after two periods. Andrew Roy and Jeff Lefebvre each had a hat trick; Wood added a goal and three assists; and John Nicholson and Bill Huntington rounded out the scoring. South outshot Port Huron, 39-15.

Thursday, Feb. 27: North vs. Trenton The first time the Norsemen faced Trenton this season, the Trojans took an easy, 11-0 victory. This time, North gave the No. 1-ranked squad all it could handle and more.

The contest was the most exciting of the six-game tournament and the first period set the tone. Kevin Tisdale gave North a 1-0 lead when he took a pass from behind the net from Quinlan and buried it behind goalie Allan Avery. North netminder Matt Dennis was sharp, as North was outshot, 15-6. North fans and officials hoped that the team could keep up the pace in the second period. But Trenton scored a power play goal early in that stanza, then added another three minutes later. Steve Menzel scored his second goal of the game to give Trenton a 3-1 lead and although North outshot the Trojans in the second period, 14-12, they trailed 4-1 going into the third. Trenton made it 5-1 midway through the period - then North mounted a furious comeback. Spitz scored from Marshall at 8:24 and after Trenton increased the lead to 6-2 on a power play, Russell took advantage of a four-on-four situation and jammed the puck in; Bob Poulos assisting. And with three seconds to go, Tom Ugval scored the final goal—

the last of the senior's fine career—from Poulos, and the game ended with Trenton on top, 6-4. "Before the game, I said that it would end up at 6-2," Russell said. "I said we'd give 'em a game and we did. We were really in this one. Coach Mike Manzella agreed with his star forward. "We figured they would come at us with everything. You really have to be tough to beat them. We threw a two-three set-up against them and we really had it working. But you've got to contain that top line (Menzel's line) and that goalie ... he's even better than Tecos," Manzella said.

"But we gave it our best."

Saturday, March 1: South vs. Trenton North gave Trenton so much of its best that Trenton came out loaded for bear against South in the Saturday night finals. Trenton scored early and often, building up a 9-0 lead and outshooting the Devils, 42-20, in avenging South's 3-2 victory during the regular season --Trenton's only loss.

Wood scored from Roger Romine with less than five minutes remaining. "What can I say? Trenton is the best team that we will see. I hope they win the states because they deserve it," said South coach Tim Zimmerman. "But I'm proud of our team. I think that this year's team will be a challenge for other South teams.

It was celebration time for South, left, when the Devils beat Port Huron, 9-2, on Feb. 27 and junior defensemen Jerry Bourke and Evan Frakes did just that. But the high-fives were few and far between on March 1, when Trenton trounced South 9-1 . . . and one look at sophomore forward Bill Huntington (right) and goalie Bill Tecos tells that story.

The best game of the entire regional competition was North's gutsy performance against Trenton in its 6-4 defeat. We'd love to show it to you and in fact, were all primed to do just that . . . until none - that's right, none - of the shots our staff photographer took of the great game came out. Soooo, we thought you'd like to see North's action against Trenton earlier this season — that's sophomore defenseman Wayne Houle and junior forward John Quinjan set for the faceoff in front of goalle Matt Dennis (who played very well against the Trojans in the regionals) — and at right, seven North seniors getting ready for a game. Those seniors, by the way, are Kevin Tisdale, John Russell, Tom Ugval, Casey Quick, Pat Carlsen, Bob Alcott and Peter Guzzardo.

The action was fast and furious in the regional final on Saturday night . . . unfortunately it was mostly Trenton action. That's what's legally called a "goal mouth scramble" and correctly called interference in the top left shot. Above, Rob Wood, the game's only goal-scorer, fights for the puck. And in the shot at left, Huntington looks a little outnumbered.

'Pretty in Pink' is credible, touching

By Michael Chapp

An entertaining, insightful, funny and often poignant film, "Pretty in Pink" is far and away the most delightful project with which Hollywood teen-expert John Hughes has involved himself. And that's saying quite a mouthful, since Hughes is the creative force behind such successful pictures a "Sixteen Candles" and "The Breakfast Club.

Although Hughes serves only as writer and executive producer of "Pink" - having turned the directorial reins over to newcomer Howard Deutch — his thoughtful style permeates every frame, making the movie a teen film which works, and works well, because it has heart.

Andie Walsh (Molly Ringwald) is a high school senior who grew up on the wrong side of the proverbial tracks. She has nothing except a

'Much Ado' to open

"Much Ado About Nothing." a Shakespearean "middle" comedy, will open at the Bonstelle Theatre Friday, March 7, at 8 p.m. Performances continue March 8, 14 and 15, at 8 p.m., and Sundays, March 9 and 16, at 2 p.m.

"Much Ado About Nothing" has Shakespeare's brightest and wittiest lovers, Beatrice and Benedick, and some of his funniest comics, Dogberry and the members of his watch, amazingly blended with the dark story of the broken romance of Hero and Claudio.

Shakespeare set his story in 16thcentury Messina. To illuminate the bravado, the passion and the panic inherent in the play, director Robert Emmett McGill has chosen for his setting the Sicilian countryside at the turn-of-the-century. For these are "hot-blooded, honest and vigorously expressive people,' says McGill. Tickets and information are available at the Wayne State University Theatre box office, Cass and Hancock, 577-2960. Tickets are also available at any metro AAA office or J.C. Penney

Dean Stanton) and a talent for making creative and attractive clothes

Blane McDonough (Andrew Mc-Carthy) is a high school senior who grew up on the other side of the tracks — the right side. He has everything, except a close relationship with another human being, leaving him feeling empty.

just being involved. And he demonstrates his knowledge convinc-

The first problem is Andie's adoring friend, Duckie Dale (Jon Cryer), a zany class-clown type who masks his insecurities with a never-ending series of one-liners, dangerous bike stunts and wacky clothes. Though Duckie and Andie are good friends, that's all they'll ever be. She knows it, he doesn't. When Duckie finally does realize the truth, it hurts - bad.

Problem number two, though, is the real biggie. Andie is an outcast at her predominantly preppie school because she dresses differently and has no money. And even though Blane says this isn't important to him, both have deeper fears that it is.

When the two go to a party at Blane's rich friend's house, Andie is treated like dirt. She's ridiculed, laughed at, and threatened. They leave and go to Andie's favorite hangout, a nightclub named "Cats," where the well-dressed Blane is pushed around, stared at and threatened. They leave.

They're attracted to each other, but the world's social trappings are tugging at their heartstrings, and beginning to force them apart.

Blane doesn't call Andie for awhile. When she confronts him in the high school hallway, he sidesteps her questions. She becomes enraged, knowing full well it's the cold social structure prying apart the grip of their relationship. The film's final question is whether the two will end up together, and if so, how they will respond to the mounting pressure to do otherwise.

Obviously there's nothing particularly unique here. There have been stories about young lovers facing adversity since "Romeo and Juliet" and, no doubt, long before that.

What is refreshing and exhilarating is the psychological insight with which Hughes weaves his story. He spends time in a quiet scene with Duckie after Andie has and fun dumped her admirer. He follows Blane and Andie in some completely silent scenes after their break-up — letting their body language, thoughts and tears tell the story, rather than some empty words. A lesser film would have opted for the latter, seeking the easy way out.

Every character in the film is thoughtfully and multi-dimensionally written and acted. McCarthy and Ringwald obviously get the best scenes, but Cryer almost steals the show with his flawless reading of Duckie. Likewise, Annie Potts, as Ringwald's best friend and co-worker, is a psychological gold mine of a character - with enough neuroses and internally developed religions to keep Sigmund Freud busy for eternity. And Stanton, as Ringwald's father, is one of the first teen-film parents to be depicted as a friend rather than a foe to his child. Of course, audiences would accept nothing less from an actor of his caliber.

In addition to the actors, the director uses a number of elements to give a deeper understanding of the story. In the background, one can always detect a subtle use of surroundings contributing to the plot. For example, Andie works at record store called Trax, as in the wrong side of . . . " Sure it's obvious, but at the same time, it's subdued.

So O.K. The movie is artistically credible, the acting's good and the story is touching. But is it fun? Absolutely. With its quick pace, comic relief in the right places and a soundtrack that doesn't quit. "Pretty in Pink" is a crowdpleaser of the highest kind. Even parents and other adults will enjoy the film. It's a feel-gooder that's completely satisfying.

If parents could choose the sex of their expected child, there'd be a surplus of at least 300,000 baby boys a year, estimators say.

Taxes on Social Security benefits

Social security recipients filing 1985 federal income tax returns will be sorting through some complicated rules to figure out if their benefits are taxable. Traditionally, Social Security benefits were not taxed. But that changed in 1984 when, for the first time, approximately one of every 10 benefit recipients was required to pay some tax on his or her benefits. That change caused a bit of confusion last year. In fact, about 10 percent of those who reported taxable Social Security benefits last year made a mistake on this calculation. According to the Michigan Association of CPAs, it helps if you grasp some of this tax law's fundamentals.

According to the rules, benefit recipients above a certain income level must pay some tax on benefits received. Those who relied on Social Security as their sole source of income will be exempt. In fact, people 65 or older with low incomes may not even have to file a 1985 tax return. If you are in that age group and single, you need not file if your gross income is below $4,470. A married couple 65 or older need not file a joint return if their gross income is less than $7,700. These figures do not include any Social Security benefits received, which are generally exempt from income tax at these income levels.

If your income exceeds these levels, however, some preliminary calculations will demonstrate if your Social Security benefits are to be taxed.

Because the rules on taxing Social Security benefits are relatively new and caused confusion among taxpayers, the IRS and the Social Security Administration are taking special care to explain them. For instance, the Social Security Administration will send you Form SSA-1099 to show you how much in benefits you received in 1985 and they will also send Notice 703, which explains the rules on taxing benefits.

In addition, the IRS Form 1040 instructions explain the benefits taxation rules and you can get a worksheet to calculate your personal Social Security formula. But before going through the elaborate federal government publications, CPAs suggest some easy-to-follow alternative measures to determine if your benefits will be taxed.

Referring to a Form 1040, write down your "tentative" adjusted gross income - that's adjusted gross income without including Social Security benefits. Add to it one half of your 1985 Social Security benefits plus any income you received from tax-exempt securities, such as municipal bonds. If the total is more than $25,000 for a single, or $32,000 for joint filers. part of your benefits will be taxed. according to CPAs. In this case you MUST file by using the Form 1040, the long form.

The amount of your benefits that will be taxed is either (1) half the add to their $28,000 tentative adamount over the $25,000 or $32,000 floor, whichever applies to you, or (2) half of your 1985 Social Security benefits. Choose the lesser of the two and add it to your tentative adjusted gross income.

Here's an illustration of exactly how this tax can affect Social Security recipients. Let's say a couple has a tentative adjusted gross income of $28,000. They receive $8,000 in Social Security benefits and earn $3,000 in interest income from municipal bonds. They must justed gross income half of their benefits ($4,000) plus the $3,000 in interest income from the taxexempt securities. Since the total of $35,000 is greater than the $32,000 floor that applies to joint filers, they must pay tax on either half their benefits or half the amount over the floor. In this case, since half the amount over the floor, $1,500, is less than half their $8,000 in benefits ($4,000), they will add the $1,500 to their taxable in-

Tax questions, answers

The countdown to April 15th has begun. Over the coming weeks, more than 100 million American taxpayers will be mulling over income tax questions.
