A little too close to home

Guido Dinverno takes his trees very seriously.

That's why when WCZY-FM (Z-95.5) morning man Dick Purtan telephoned the North Brys Drive resident last week with one of his famous put-on calls, Dinverno, to put it nicely, fell

According to Dinverno's daughter, Paula Baldwin, Purtan called him claiming he was a city inspector from Grosse Pointe Woods, and told him that the city was experiencing some water problems which appeared to be right on Dinverno's front lawn. Purtan was so convincing, he even had Dinverno going out of the house and checking the lawn to see if it was soggy.

Baldwin says her dad went along with everything, sounding as properly concerned as one should when told he has water problems. Then Purtan told Dinverno he'd have to remove the three trees planted on the easement.

That's when things really got funny, Baldwin says, except from her dad's point of view. Seems Dinverno has planted three different sets of trees on that easement, and only the last planting has managed to take. So when Purtan told him he'd have to remove them and replant the area with bushes because the city was going to re-name North Brys Drive "Bush Boulevard," Dinverno got a little excited.

Purtan finally let Dinverno in on the joke and everybody, including WCZY employee Baldwin and even her dad, got a chuckle out of it in the end. That Purtan is really something, huh? Funny enough to drive a guy right out of his tree.

Whoops!

In last week's story about the Children's Theater production of "Oliver," we listed the names of cast members, the names of crew members and more names, but we forgot to include the names of two VIPs. And they really are very important people - Stelene Mazur, musical director, and Mary Ellen Cooper, in charge of specialty musical numbers.

Now I ask you, what would a musical be without the song and dance pros? Like spaghetti without sauce, like Rambo without violence, like a circus without peanuts. Sorry, ladies. You betcha we won't do it

This is in very good taste

There's some mighty proud folks down at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. Executive Chef Jeffrey Gabriel, competing professional chefs against from across the Midwest in a contest at Cobo Hall last month, was awarded a gold medal AND best of show. It's the first step toward earning a spot on the 1988 Culinary Olympics team.

The next tryout is in Chicago. We'll keep you posted.

Other winners at the competition, which drew 10,000 people, were William Wolf of Sparky Herbert's. Chef Wolfe won a silver medal for his cold food platter. Scott Cummings of Cottage Hospital was awarded a bronze medal for his individual cold food platter. And in the high school division, Paula Touchtone of North High, won a gold medal for her decorated

Thousands of flowers in her yard

By Peter A. Salinas

It is that time of year when thoughts turn to things green and colorful. Birds awaken at first light, and sing and screech outside the window, making sleep past 7 a.m. more a chore than rest.

Some 70 years ago Bertha Fritsch came to Detroit from Wisconsin. Here she started a family. Ahh, but, Fritsch, now 88, started something else when she moved to her current Grosse Pointe Woods home - she began a garden.

The first year at the house she planted 1,000 bulbs. She added 200 rose bushes and another 1,000 tulip

Her tulips would rival any grown in the Netherlands or Holland,

"I have many kinds of rose bushes, but don't ask me to name them all," she said with a smile. 'At 88 I don't remember so well.'

She says she has a harder time getting around now too, and added that her doctor has told her to give up gardening. Instead a relative bought her an outdoor clock which she neatly placed on the garage.

"Now I go out for an hour and There is a lot to do during that hour. She must prune bushes, fer-tilize, do some weeding and pull dead flowers off their stems.

That flower-pulling chore is a tough one — and continuous. With more than 2,500 perennial bulbs added to the annuals she plants, the garden blooms from early spring until late summer.

The first are the daffodils. She said those were also the first to go this year as the hailstorm this month knocked off most of the blossoms; then come the hyacinths, tulips, irises and lilacs. Of course, some time in June her 200 rose bushes begin the bloom.

She said she doesn't belong to any garden groups or clubs.
"I'm too old for that," she

She reads the garden sections in the newspapers every day and is happy to pass along a few tips to a reporter who has a hard time growing mold on bread.

"If you plant feverfew around the garden," she said, "you won't have ants around the house."

No ant could ruin her day — so long as she has a chance to work

Appeals court orders early election in Park

A sweet victory for the city of Grosse Pointe Park turned sour with a Michigan Court of Appeals emergency ruling late Monday afternoon. The court overturned a decision by a circuit court judge granting the city its request to hold a special election with the primary in August. The appeals court ruled that the election must be held between June 10 and June 20.

The firefighters, opposed to the planned merger of their department with the police department, were ecstatic after receiving the news Monday afternoon.

"Justice is finally done," firefighter Joseph Bialk said. "It (the ruling) gives us our special elec-

The firefighters had collected sufficient signatures on petitions to get a proposal on a ballot in a special election. They were opposed to holding it with the primary in August because that would be more than one month after the departments were scheduled to begin the consolidation process. Also, Bialk said, their goal was a singleissue election that was clear-cut and couldn't be clouded by other

A problem arose when the election was scheduled, according to the Home Rule Act, to be held between 120 and 130 days after the petitions were filed. The June date conflicted with a school board election set for June 9. General election law prohibits two local elections from being scheduled within 30 days of each other.

The matter was given to the circuit court to decide, which it did April 25, favoring the city's request to hold the election in August.
Ronald Helveston, attorney for the firefighters, said the appeals court Monday held that the Home Rule Act superseded general elec-

Herold McC. Deason, attorney for the city, said he planned to talk with the Wayne County elections scheduling attorney early Tuesday morning to find out of the county planned to take any further action.

'In the meantime, Mr. (Nunzio) Ortisi (city clerk) will proceed with what has to be done to implement the order," Deason said.

preparing for the special election, about five weeks away.

Mayor Palmer Heenan said,

'It's typical of the firemen to put their own interests before the city's. This action by a few selfinterested employees will cost the city a good sum of money to have a special election June 17, but it's insignificant to the extra cost that the firemen will put on the city if their proposition passes. In a related matter, Bialk said the firefighters will sign a statement requesting employment with the public safety department, stipulating that the request is contingent upon the outcome of the election. All frighters and police officers were given the statement to sign as a condition of employment with the new department. The deadline for returning the forms is May 15.

RA reform would affect

By Peter A. Salinas

Since numerous taxpayers in Grosse Pointe have middle to high incomes, it is likely many would be affected by a tax reform package that eliminates the popular $2,000 Individual Retirement Account deduction (IRA). Tax reform is gathering bipartisan strength on Capitol Hill, and reform of tax laws seems to be a popular pasttime in the nation's capital these days - prior to an election.

It is still early in the tax reform process, but a Senate Finance Committee proposal was given unanimous bi-partisan approval earlier this month. The proposal calls for eliminating the popular IRA for everyone who already has a retirement plan sponsored through his or her workplace — a

Group home advocateshost open discussion

About 45 residents attended the information center Monday night sponsored by agencies involved with the proposed group home at Lakepointe in the Park.

Representatives from four agencies set up discussion groups in the library at Trombly School, at times outnumbering the local residents who came to ask questions.

Some of the most common questions, according to Donna Kimber of Community Administrative Services, Inc., the private, non-profit agency that will operate the home, related to property values, supervision at the home and increased vehicular traffic.

"They wanted a general picture, if there will be monitoring, if there will be a lot of delivery trucks, she said. The home will be similar to other homes in the neighborhood, she added.

Denise Mogos of Wayne Community Living Services said of the 45 residents, about 10 were negative. The rest were either positive or neutral on the issue.

We were really pleased," she said, "not only with the number of supportive neighbors, but also with the cooperative effort of the groups in the area.'

There were 140 letters sent to residents within 1,500 feet of the home. Other organizations represented Monday were the Association for Retarded Citizens of Grosse Pointe-Harper Woods, which bought the house, and the Group Home Advisory Council of Grosse Pointe-Harper Woods.

Since the introduction of the IRA in 1981, hundreds of billions of dollars have been socked away in various kinds of IRA accounts. Banks have been the recipients of the huge amounts of money flowing into their coffers. Since the IRA account only remains tax-free so long as it is not withdrawn until retirement, banks, therefore, can count on those funds as long-term

According to Judd Moran, spokesperson for the Michigan Bankers Association, the federal government made IRAs available for two main reasons — to promote the formation of capital and to allow Americans to save for retire-

"In the United States our savings rate has for many years been lower than the savings rate in other countries," Moran said. "One of the important reasons for the IRA then was to promote savings."

Moran, a Grosse Pointe resident for 22 years before moving, said though figures are not available. he believes many Grosse Pointers take advantage of the IRA deduc-

Actually, for most people who can afford to put the money away, it is an essential part of any investment plan. Setting aside $2,000 into a savings account, a person in the 30 percent tax bracket saves $600 in tax — more for those in higher tax brackets.

However, for many who are lower earners, it is not possible to put away $2,000 when bills have to be paid, and children have to be

According to the Wall Street Journal, the Internal Revenue Service estimates 45 percent of all IRAs are taken out by those earning $40,000 per year or more, a group which consists of less than 11 percent of all taxpayers.

Moran said the loss of 25 million individuals saving up to $2,000 a year, would compound that $50 billion with the interest the institution would be earning on loans or investments and in a few years, it would be trillions of dollars.

Obviously, some of that money will be saved. If not saved, it would be used to purchase goods or services - which keeps the economy "The immediate impact would be less money to lend," Moran said. "It might be a little harder to finance a home, a car or secure financing for industrial improvements. One might have to pay a little higher interest rate, simply because of the laws of supply as demand. But banks got along without the IRA deposits before — they will be able to survive without Moran said it is as yet unclear from the proposal by the Senate Finance Committee, whether interest on future contributions would be taxed. Other reports claim that only the interest on deposits made prior to any change in law would be tax-free.

Moran said it is still too early for the banking industry to come down on one side or another on the IRA question or one reform package over any other.

"There is considerable support within the banking community for eliminating abusive tax shelters,' Moran said. He pointed out that the Senate proposal is revenue, neutral. In other words, it does not collect any more or any less revenue - it changes who pays.

'People quickly point out that General Electric is a terrible culprit — not paying any taxes," Moran said. "Under the proposal

Academy auction raises more than $500,000

By Elsa Frohman

The final reciepts weren't in, but as of Monday morning, organizers of the Action Auction that raised funds for the Grosse Pointe Academy, had brought in more than $500,000.

"We haven't counted everything from the Duck Pond yet," general chairman Mary Kay Crain said. "But we've netted over $500,000. It was a spectacular night.'

The auction, held Saturday, was preceded by a preview party on May 7. Nine hundred fifty people attended the two events.

"We had to turn people away," Crain said. "We reached our

Some of the most spectacular items on the block were an Arabian stallion colt that brought $22,000, the classic Thunderbird which brought $31,000 and the puppy, perhaps not as large as a horse, but bringing a respectable $1,600 just the same.

The electricity in the tent was incredible," Crain said. "And when the horse ran by with his tail in the air, it was magic. People enjoyed every minute of it and they were happy to help.

The proceeds from the auction will go to both the general operating budget and the capital fund of the academy. The plans for next year's auc-

The Grosse Pointe Academy Lakeshore Building was decked out in festive balloons and umbrellas for the Action Auction preview party last Wednesday. The merchandise for the auction was laid out inside the building, and the live goods and automobiles, were displayed on the lawn. Large items on the auction included four automobiles and an Arabian stallion colt.

School may spend $40 million next year

By Mike Andrzejczyk

The Grosse Pointe Board of Education will hold a public hearing June 2 on its near-$40 million budget for 1986-87. The plan forecasts a 6.6 percent increase in taxes for the coming year.

The new budget, if approved, means a number of new programs for the coming school year. The administration at the high schools has been changed, giving each assistant principal a para-professional to handle some duties.

A director of guidance will be added to work half-time at the two high schools to take over college placement duties now handled by regular counselors, according to the administration. The position will mean the system won't be adding another counselor, however.

The district now has a counselor student ratio of about 1-to-250, according to Superintendent John Whritner. That will increase next year to 1-to-270, but that figure will decline in coming years when enrollments at the schools decline, he

The half-time position at both schools will be reviewed at the end of next year to decide whether to put a full-time director at each building, Whritner told the board.

The system will add 13 full- and part-time teachers at the elementary and middle schools in the coming years, when enrollment is expected to increase by 156 students. High school populations will fall by 171, according to projections.

While the student population increases at the elementary and middle schools aren't large, the way the numbers fall force the administration to add teachers to keep down class size, Whritner

The district will eliminate its internship program, replacing the five administrative interns with three assistant principals at the middle schools, Whritner said. Cost of the change-over is about the same, but administrators will be able to perform more duties than interns, he told the board.

The district will also add a new general education program, Kindertalk, next year. The two sections are for students who have language problems that may be cleared up in the intensive language program that will use the system's regular kindergarten curriculum, according to Special Education Services Director Claire Hunt.

By making Kindertalk a general education and not a special education program, the district is freer to move children into the class through teacher referrals, she said. The class is meant as a preventive measure for some students who may be labeled learning-disabled in the future.

The board cut the $20,000 appropriation in the budget for transportation of the children to Kerby school, the only building to offer Kindertalk.

The consensus was that the board would be setting an unwanted precedent by providing transportation for general education students, according to board President Jon Gandelot.

Trustee Carol Marr dissented strongly and asked for information about how many students may not attend the program because of lack of transportation.

Based on experience with its developmental pre-school, Kindertalk could lose two to five students because of lack of transportation, Hunt said.

The board also tentatively approved allocating $21,000 for starting new sports and upgrading others at the high schools

North High School will add a freshman baseball program and upgrade its boys and girls tennis and swimming programs. South will add freshman boys soccer, freshman girls track and upgrade its boys and girls swimming program, according to the high school athletic directors.

The varsity hockey program at the high school came under sharp attack from some board members, who questioned its cost per student and whether those costs were reasonable.

The board will approve the budget June 10. Throughout the summer, changes in revenues and spending forecasts will be worked into the document to pare the tax increase before a rate is set in September.

Last year, the board approved a budget that contained a 1.8 percent forecasted tax increase. By the end of the summer, the tax increase was balanced out, with trustees dipping into the system's fund equity to eliminate and hike.

The late Richard C. Mertz of Grosse Pointe Shores will be one of four men who made outstanding contributions to the development of the state's transportation system who will be inducted today into the Michigan Transportation Hall of Honor.

The Hall of Honor, a permanent facility in the State Transportation Building in Lansing, was established in 1971 to honor distinguished individuals in the transportation field. No more than four persons can be elected by the all-industry commit-

Under his leadership, Michigan Contractor & Building not only reported the news, but supported and defended the industry and promoted its growth and development.

As an individual, Mertz drew on his friends and professional contacts in groups ranging from equipment dealers to paving organizations and road agencies to serve as a catalyst for causes helpful to the industry. He helped to galvanize them into action and to solve their industry-wide problems.

Supportive of education, he was a founding trustee of the Upper Peninsula road Builders Memorial Scholarship Fund.

By Nancy Parmenter

When she had a mastectomy 12 years ago, to add insult to the pain and emotional suffering of the surgery, Louise Rose couldn't find a bra that fit.

It was more than an annoyance. An ill-fitting bra distributes weight unevenly or on the wrong part of the shoulders and can actually cause aching that resembles ar-

"The medical profession doesn't always recognize the aches caused by a bad fit," said Rose, who now works as a consultant for Jodee Bras, a surgical bra manufacturer. "You go to the doctor with these pains in your shoulders and back and he says, 'well, with your history . . .' and he orders scans and tests and never once asks how your bra fits.'

Even though a breast prosthesis is fully covered by most medical insurance, many women still don't buy one, thinking it a mark of vanity or an extravagance. But a breast can weight up to a pound or more. Rose said, and losing one throws off the natural balance.

Millage renewal cost $4,200

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Citizens for Continued Excellence spent about $4,200 in its campaign to pass Grosse Pointe public schools' three-year millage renewal. The committee collected close to $5,000 from residents and school organizations.

The Taxpayers Advisory Group, which opposed the millage, reported spending less than $1,000 in the campaign, according to documents filed with the Wayne County Clerk Elections Division.

Pro-millage committee chair-men Russ and Jane Nutter and Peter and Pat Gast gave the Board of Education a quick review of the campaign spending and offered ways to better run the next millage drive.

"Essentially, we have two messages for the board. The first is. don't call us. The second is, please start earlier," Mrs. Nutter told trustees May 5. Planning should begin as early as October to put together strategies, she added. Starting late in November makes it difficult to find volunteers, she said. Many people contacted by the committee this time begged off until after the holidays, she added.

Computers are becoming a very important part of running a successful campaign, Mr. Nutter said. The data provided by the school system needed some cleaning up, but was invaluable in identifying voters, he added.

"To get this job done successfully and easily, (future campaign chairmen) should have a fairly sizable computer resource available," he added.

The committee started off with a nest egg of $1,900 left behind from the 1983 campaign, but it was in the form of a certificate of deposit that didn't mature until March 1, according to Mr. Gast. Pro-millage forces went to various PTOs and school organiza-

The PTO/PTA Council also contributed $480, an amount it usually collects between millage campaigns, Mr. Gast said.

Spending came in at about $4,200, with most spent on newspaper advertising and printing of brochures. Other expenses included photography work, paper and supplies, phone bank expenses and rent paid to the school system for use of its facilities.

With money left over, the committee decided to give $80 back to contributing school PTOs and organizations and also gave $500 to the Foundation for Academic Enrichment.

Before dissolving, the committee used the balance to buy a certificate of deposit and give to the PTO/PTA Council to be used as seed money for the next campaign, he added.

In its campaign against passage of the millage, the Taxpayers Advisory Group reported spending less than $1,000, according to TAG treasurer Louis DePerro in the group's statement or organiza-

TAG did buy a newspaper advertisement worth $336.33 on March 6, the same day the group reported its formation, according to a letter sent to the Elections Division by Citizens for Continued Excellence.

Citizens spent a lot of time in putting together a slide show for presentation to groups because the school district didn't have certain materials on hand, he added.

"I can't emphasize enough to have some of this documentation available and on hand because a millage campaign isn't a onceevery-three-years proposition. It should be a continuing thing," Mr. Gast added.

A victory for reform

The Lucas campaign

A coalition of labor, business and political interests last week finally persuaded the Wayne County Commission to put on the Nov. 4 ballot a proposal to amend the county charter and abolish the elective office of drain commissioner. It was another victory for reform of county government.

That action was good news for county taxpayers who will have the opportunity next fall to get rid of one of the last vestiges of cronyism, favoritism and waste that once characterized Wayne County government.

The commission action reversed an earlier vote which had rejected the proposal to put the drain commissioner issue on the August primary ballot. Two board members, Kay Beard and Richard Manning, who had failed to vote when the issue was defeated by a 6 to 5 vote several weeks ago, finally supported the proposal, and put it over by an 8 to 7 margin.

Both had been under heavy pressure from County Board Chairman John Hertel as well as business and labor interests to take a stand for the reform measure. The Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, in a letter to the editor of The Detroit News, had called the failure of Ms. Beard and Manning to vote the first time "narrow-sighted and a dereliction." Tom Turner and the Wayne County AFL-CIO had earlier backed the vote and so had both Detroit newspapers.

On the first annivesary of his conversion to the Republican Party, County Executive William Lucas told a Detroit Free Press reporter that he has no regrets at his decision and is tion with the progress of his candidacy and the his decision, he obviously couldn't voice them.

But it was interesting to note that he did express concern about some of the criticisms he is facing as he pursues his goal of becoming the GOP

He complained about Democrat-sponsored "slights inquendoes and half-truths," said he now can understand "why so few politicians graduate to becoming statesmen," added that it takes "an awful lot of character and ability

(and) guts," but contended that he is "upbeat, positive, still gaining great support" and "overcoming the difficulties" thrown at him.

Well, that is the way it is in politics. The opposition party insists on serving as the opposition and even some people in a candidate's own party find occasion to complain and criticize.

At this juncture Lucas is running not only against the Democratic governor, James Blanchard, and his supporters, but he is also running against the other announced GOP candidates for the Republican nomination. So it is only natural that he is hearing "slights, innuendoes and half-truths" not only from Democrats recent poll contributes to that opinion by finding that about a third of black Wayne County level of his grassroots support.

In reporting the victory, Hertel was enthusiastic about the proposal's chances in the fall. He pointed out that the original charter was approved by 72 percent, of the voters and the amendment abolishing the road commission was supported by 74 percent. Now he has high hopes that the drain commissioner reform will win equally strong backing in November.

In Hertel's view, the elimination of the elective office of drain commissioner will end the era of reform in Wayne County but the new structure of county government under the charter will have to proceed with its responsibility of problem-solving. And that will be the challenge of the future.

After citing specific criticisms of the present operation of the drain commissioner's office, the Greater Detroit Chamber said:

This reform will allow the consolidation of this office within other county departments. This will result in adequate checks and balances and a more accountable and efficient delivery of services for county residents something which is woefully lacking in the current drain commission operation.

The victory proved once again that when labor, business and government representatives get together on a reform proposal, they can prove to be a very formidable coalition. If they can maintain that united front in November, Charles Youngblood and his elected office of drain commissioner won't stand a chance.

GOP ticket knowing they could not vote for other Democrats running in other races, 21 percent said they probably would cast their ballots for Lucas and another 14 percent said they were from a Market Opinion Research exit poll of voters in the Detroit mayoral election last fall. It found that Lucas would take from 30 to 35 percent of the Detroit vote. Whether that included

Democrats voting in the primary or the general election wasn't clear, however. That fact makes some difference since it is widely believed more blacks would vote for Lucas in a general election, when they could still vote for other Democrats, than in a primary in which voters are limited to one party in the partisan

the Lucas campaign involve race. One is whether blacks, who are mainly Democrats, will support Lucas in large numbers in either the primary or general election or both. The other is whether conservative white Republicans, and especially those outstate who are not as familiar with blacks as urban whites are, will vote for a black Republican candidate for governor

Polling isn't likely to obtain credible answers to such questions. People do not admit to racial bias when polled. Yet the answers to those two questions may well determine whether Lucas is nominated and whether, if nominated, he will become the first black governor of this or any other state since the days of Reconstruction

Perhaps one way to get at the opinion of both blacks and whites at this stage would be to ask them whether, on the first anniversary of Lucas' conversion to Republicanism, they are happy with him as a candidate for governor. We already know that Lucas is determined to continue in the race despite some campaign troubles. But what about the people who will go to the voting booths in August? Are they happy to that question at this early stage, even though,

This kind of thinking is outdated

Editor's note: A resident, upset over several comments made by Susan Watson of the Detroit Free Press in her columns recently, sent her the following letter. We are reprinting it with his permission.

Dear Ms. Watson:

You are so right. Grosse Pointe is a terrible place. Amazingly, youngsters in our schools don't even carry guns. I can't believe it. And, for some strange reason, the people out here don't litter the streets and they all seem to take a great deal of pride in seeing that heir community sparkles.

Grosse Pointe people are featly strange by the standards of some of the people who don't live here. You'd be surprised how strong the family unit is out here and how parents stress education. Despite the fact that some Grosse Pointers wear alligators on their clothes, you might find they have some redeeming factors.

In fact, it is even rumored that a Grosse Pointer has escaped this "land of milk and honey" to become publisher of a major newspaper in the downtown area. I believe his name is Lawrence or something like that.

A point I'm sure you haven't considered is that many of the residents of the five Grosse Pointe communities are making significant contributions to the city of Detroit. You'll find them out working for the United Foundation, being involved in many local charities, serving on hospital boards, collecting money for worthy causes and pitching in on numerous civic projects. They recognize that they live together in this whole area and they cannot close themselves off from the entire community.

You had made some cynical comments about Grosse Pointe in your recent column, so I strongly suspect you have a proven prejudice against Grosse Pointe people. As you know, this kind of thinking is outdated. Perhaps you should be a fair-minded newspaper person and come out to Grosse Pointe and do a little investigating on your own. I bet you would be surprised.

Seeks variance

To the Editor:

As you know, we have been attempting to construct a commercial retail/professional office building at the corner of Kercheval and Muir Road. In order to build this building we must, once again, go in and seek permission from the city of Grosse Pointe Farms to allow us to encroach upon the height limitation which is 39 feet 6 inches by an additional 8 inches in order to place the sky-light such that it will be aesthetically pleasing. If we cannot put the skylight height at what we are proposing, it will be necessary to flatten the actual tip of the skylight resulting in a dust-collector, a dirt-catcher and a building that will not look like it is properly completed.

We appreciate very much the co-operation of the residence and the property owners in the past, and we want to assure everyone that the building which will commence construction about the 4th of July, will be one in which all Grosse Pointers can be justifiably

We will be appearing before the city council on May 19, in order to ask for this 8 inch variance. If anyone wishes to comment either in writing or in person, they may do so on or before the 8 p.m., May 19 date. Thank you, again, for all your past help and for you consideration in the above matter.

Flaws in campaign laws

In both Lansing and Washington political campaign laws presumably enacted to control campaign spending are being manipulated for the benefit or the detriment of specific candidates. The actions raise questions about the effectiveness of such laws.

In Michigan, the secretary of state's office has not yet approved state campaign funds for William Lucas, the Wayne County executive who is running for the GOP nomination for governor, because of charges that the costs of Lucas' trips around the state last year should have been counted as part of his campaign spending.

In Washington, the Federal Elections Commission has ruled that Vice President Bush's 1986 campaigning in Michigan is being undertaken chiefly in the interests of "party-building" and that his political action committee therefore is free to pour as much money as possible into the precinct delegate election in the August primary.

It is interesting to note that the Lansing action - or lack of action - by a Democratic office is depriving a Republican candidate of funds for his primary campaign, while the Washington action — by a GOP-controlled commission — is aiding a GOP candidate in his early campaign for the 1988 presidential nomination.

Furthermore, in Michigan, the state law that limits campaign spending for governor is only effective when a candidate applies for state funds. Thus millionaire businessman Richard Chrysler, who rejected state funding, is free to spend as much of his own money on his GOP campaign for governor as he wishes. Meanwhile, Lucas, who as an elected official and governmental employee did not accumulate any great personal wealth, is not yet getting the funds he seeks from the state to help finance his primary campaign.

Yet if Bush is just "party-building" in Michigan while seeking delegates to support his 1988 candidacy for president, why is Lucas regarded — at least to date — as having campaigned for governor last year while visiting communities around the state for the purpose, he says, of winning more influence for Wayne County?

True, the federal elections commission is a federal agency controlled by Republicans while the secretary of state's office is a state agency controlled by a Democrat. But the politics being played in both agencies offers evidence that both state and federal campaign laws are deficient and are capable of manipulation for political purposes.

If that is the case, then both laws appear to be failing in their purpose and ought to be amended or perhaps even repealed.

Elect or appoint? Let voters decide

To the Editor:

Lately, many political discussions include the issue of elected and appointed positions in Wayne County government. I wish to relay my thoughts as to why I feel the voters should determine whether the position of drain commissioner should be elected or ap-

As a Democrat, it has always been difficult for me to understand why, especially in a Democratic county, voters are not given the opportunity to decide such issues, considering the fact that we are believers of the public ballot process. What is wrong with having the electorate in Wayne County make this decision at the ballot box?

The following scenario is what has been happening to the elected positions at the county level.

The current sheriff originally obtained his position through appointment by a three-member committee, then was elected to retain his position as sheriff. He was not originally elected by the people, although this is an elected Quite frankly, I am firmly convinced that the current sheriff, who at the time of his appointment was the deputy clerk in the Wayne County Clerk's Office, would have been defeated by Loren Pittman, who was the undersheriff at that time, if the electorate would have had the opportunity to make that decision. Instead, the "search" committee appointed a Wayne County deputy clerk to be the sheriff of Wayne County.

Mr. Lucas was originally appointed to his position as sheriff by this "search" committee while he was serving as the under-sheriff to Mr. Roman Gribbs. Although he was later elected at the polls to retain his position, I believe that Mr. Lucas would have been the people's choice anyway had the electorate been given the opportunity to decide.

Before Mr. Lucas, it was Mr. Gribbs, who was also appointed Gribbs, it was Mr. Buback.

You have to go as far back as Mr. Andrew Baird to find an instance where this position was originally elected in Wayne County by the Democratic voters in the primary at an election. In fact, you will find the similarity of this appointed process with past county prosecutors, county clerks, and several other county positions.

Basically, the public is free of any special interest groups. It is rather obvious that the positions of the committee members are in no way directly related to the responsibilities of the drain commissioner.

I am extremely disappointed with the way this appointment process has evolved because as far as I am concerned, it is really a "cover up" to let the public think that certain county positions are elected by the people when, in fact, it is a three-mem-ber "search" committee making the appointment.

With respect to the present appointment method being used, we have already prevented the public from determining who is the most qualified, therefore, why don't we truly make it an appointed position by granting this authority to the county executive, with the confirmation of the Board of Commissioners?

Under such circumstances, it should be safe to assume that the process of checks and balances would come into play to make sure that the person who would be appointed to perform these duties would have the proper education, experience, qualifications and professionalism that is needed to represent the county executive and the Board of Commissioners.

The county executive and the Board of Commissioners are the ones who must interact with the position of drain commissioner through the appropriation and resolution process, as well as overseeing the position after the apby this committee and then later pointment is made through elected by the people. In my opinion, we are not really eliminating an elected position because, technically, that process has already been removed by certain groups who control the appointment process for elected positions. We both know that once a position is held, the chances for someone else defeating the in-cumbent at the polls is pretty slim. Essentially, the rights of the voters have been taken away by process of the appointments being made by a three-member "search" committee.

Through this explanation, I hope the Wayne County electorate will be given the opportunity to decide whether the office of drain commissioner should be elected or appointed.

Editor's note: Celia Murray is working as an intern this summer at the Grosse Pointe News. She's from Boston and in the following column, she compares Michigan to Massachusetts.

Coming from Massachusetts to Michigan was a bigger culture shock than I thought it was going to be. To begin with, let's face it, people in Michigan talk funny. It took me a good two weeks to realize that when someone said "car" what he really meant was Michiganders drive those 'cars' different from people in Boston. Michiganders stop at yellow lights. This is an almost unheard-of phenomenon in Boston. Imagine my surprise as the car also something that is new to me. Well. I did learn it when I was in driver's education, but I haven't seen it practiced much around Boston. Instead, one learns to calculate the inches required to get around an obstacle without having to slow down to less than 10 miles per hour.

Flying into Metro airport should have offered a clue as to one of the major differences here. From the air the city looked like one big, orderly square. Everything is so organized, streets begin and end where they are supposed to, and all without changing the name every mile or so.

The word "block" was not a ahead of me stopped at a yellow part of my vocabulary until I

"up North," his whole attitude changes. Suddenly I am standing there by myself as the person I am talking to gets a faraway look in his eye, and a goofy smile on his face. I guess understanding "up North" comes with time.

Michigan is probably the only place that my squeamishness when putting a worm on a hook will ever be detected, or worse, be considered a social handicap.

And I am sorry to say the Tigers' regular season doesn't cut it for sports, when the Celtics are going for the NBA championship.
Surprisingly enough, I miss the punk rockers. It was always interesting to see where they would put a safety pin. I haven't seen too many ambling around Grosse Pointe, but maybe I'll have better luck in Ann Arbor.

I also miss the ocean, but on a stormy day Lake St. Clair makes a nice substitute, especially when can't see Canada

All in all, Michigan has been a pretty interesting experience. I only hope that when I go home I don't talk as funny as you all do.

Prime Time for senior citizens Quilting draws seniors together

By Marian Trainor

Over Memorial Day weekend, Grosse Pointe's Greatest Garage Sale will take place in the Carriage House parking garage behind Jacobson's in the Village.

It will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday and Monday, May 25 and 26. Groups as well as individuals will be selling all their white elephant treasures. There will be craftsmen displaying their works. There will be everything from antiques to T-shirts for sale.

A very special item to be raffled there will be a quilt, a beautiful piece of handiwork, the kind that is kept in the family and handed down to generations.

Besides being a thing of beauty and a joy forever, there is a very special story attached to it.

It is the work of a cadre of elder-ly ladies who call themselves the Eastland Group. They are all residents of the Eastland Apartments.

They meet every week in the clubhouse there to share a variety of activities. They bring a brown bag lunch. Occasionally they go out to eat, nothing elaborate, to places such as one of the local high schools that feature lunches prepared by students who are taking courses preparatory to being chefs, cooks or some other area of restaurant service.

Sometimes a speaker -- a doctor, lawyer or nurse - comes in to talk on subjects of concern to them. Sometimes, there are nutrition demonstrations or travelogues.

Activities vary but there is one that is routine. Each week they go through a simple set of exercises that gives their joints a gentle workout. Some of them perform them while sitting in a chair.

The group enjoys their weekly get-together but what matters most is the opportunity it gives them to work for others.

They just don't get together to be entertained or to socialize. From the beginning it was established that what they needed and wanted most was the satisfaction of being able to contribute.

So each one set to work on doing what she did best; knitting, crocheting, sewing. They supplied their own materials and worked on their chosen project there and at home during the week.

The result added up to sweaters and booties and dolls donated to Children's Hospital. Sweaters were knitted for patients at Veteran's Hospital.

Much as they took pride in their ability to create on their own, the ladies came to a decision to work as a group on one big project. After discussing the matter together, they decided to make a quilt.

But they found that making that decision was just a beginning. There were many details to be worked out.

To begin with, while the ladies were skillful in various areas of needlework, they had never done quilting.

As those who have worked on a quilt know, it is not just a matter of sewing a few patches together until a cover the right size is achieved. It is approached with the same sense of design that is brought to any work of art.

Attention must be given to motif, the kind and color of material and putting the squares together. And then there was the matter of the tiny painstaking handstitching needed for each square, not easy for older eyes and hands that have lost some of their deftness. But it was accomplished and the group experienced the joy that comes from creating a beautiful work.

The task was done, but in the process something very important happened within the group.

Elaine Reed, who brought the group together because she was concerned that some of the elderly residents of the apartments were spending too much time alone, says that when they first met, the only thing the ladies had in common were their age. They all had different backgrounds and interest. When they first began to meet in 1982, the get-togethers served as an opportunity to get out of their apartments once a week. Up to then, many of them had, for one reason or another, little opportunity to socialize on any level.

While they did enjoy the meetings, there was not much interaction among them. Sometimes after a speaker had given a talk, the following week they would discuss what had been presented. But basically there was not the camaraderie that would have made the meeting a more pleasant experience.

But when they began to work together on a group project, that changed. There were so many details that had to be ironed out and discussed. As this process went on they began to discover each other as individuals. So, in a way, the quilt served many purposes. It brought a group of ladies closer together and it will help to raise money for that fine community service, SOC (Citizens Onward for

If you live in the five Pointes or Harper Woods, you are familiar and may even have taken advantage of the services that SOC offers, such as the Senior Citizen Information Center which serves as a link between older residents and services available throughout the metropolitan area.

Food and Friendship is another SOC achievement. A nutritious lunch is served to participants 60 years of age or over, five days a week at Ferry Elementary School. Educational and recreation programs follow the luncheon for those who wish to participate.

To serve the ill or handicapped, there is a Meals-At-Home Program. Every noon, five days a week, volunteers deliver meals to these shut-ins. Often, this is the only personal contact the seniors have all day.

Minor home repairs is another service. It provides handyman services such as raking leaves, installing and removing storm windows and making minor electrical plumbing repairs for low- and middle-income residents over 60.

Transportation for older citizens who are not able to drive or to use buses is another offering, as is rebate and tax service provided by trained volunteers who assist older residents with the preparation of home heating rebates and property tax rebates. There is also a monthly newsletter containing helpful hints such as where to get a free pamphlet or how to make your home secure.

So when you purchase your raffle tickets on the quilt, you will be doing more than just taking a chance on winning a beautiful quilt that could become an heirloom in your family. You will be helping to raise funds for a unique organiza-tion — SOC — that does so much for the community.

You will be saying thank you to a group of ladies who spent many long hours and their own money on a project they wanted to give away because they enjoy doing things for

But most importantly, you will, in a Way Decome a part of a wonderful happening, an unnamed, uncharted discovery, that moment when a group of people came together as one and recognized in each other a common bond and went away happier because their acquaintances were now their friends.

New gardening column starts next week

Ellen Probert

How does your garden grow?

Beginning in next week's Grosse Pointe News, there will be a column devoted exclusively to Grosse Pointe gardens. The Gardener's Shed will deal with the "how-to's" and "who does" of gardening in the Pointes.

Ellen Probert, executive secretary of the Garden Center located at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, has agreed to write the column for us. She has extensive experience as a journalist, having begun her writing career as a student journalist for the Grosse Pointe High School Tower.

Probert has been a columnist, reporter and feature writer for the Detroit Free Press, the Detroit Times and the Cleveland News. She has done freelance writing for the Toledo Blade, Christian Science Monitor and the Norwalk Reflector-Herald.

Today, Probert divides her time between the Grosse Pointe Garden

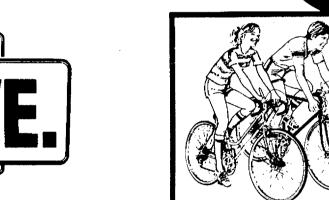

Center and working as a docent at the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House.

The Gardener's Shed will be a column specifically tailored to Grosse Pointe gardens. Probert will be providing how-to advice from her experience with the Garden Center, but will also be writing about the activities and concerns of the many garden clubs in the Pointes. She will be keeping in close contact with the clubs to gather ideas for future columns and information from our many local gardening experts.

The Gardener's Shed will appear once every two weeks in the Second Section of the Grosse Pointe

Groups file intent to sue City of Detroit

Four groups filed official notifi- Air Act's standards for acceptable cation last week of their intent to begin a lawsuit to force the city of Detroit to include additional pollution controls in the planned incine-

The Environmental Defense Fund, the North Cass Community Union, Inc., the Detroit Audubon Society and the Sierra Club notified the Environmental Protection Agency and other potential defendants that they will file suit under the federal Clean Air Act unless the EPA acts within 60 days.

"We allege that the permit for the facility is illegal because it does not require state-of-the-art technology that will greatly reduce emissions," said Mark Richardson, an attorney working with the Richardson noted that the plaintiffs want the facility to include baghouses and scrubbers to minimize both particulate and acid gas emissions from the plant. "Without these controls we believe that the incinerator will violate the Clean emission levels," he added.

The plaintiffs have also established a fund to cover legal costs of the lawsuit, said Richardson. The city has already begun construction on the $470 million dollar facility, which, at 4,000 tons per day, will be the world's largest mu-nicipal trash incinerator. The additional controls desired by the plaintiffs would add an estimated $17 million to the project, an increase of 3.6 percent.

Don't call when siren is activated

When some residents hear a warning siren, their first thought is to call police to find out what is

Police, however, are likely facing a bigger challenge in having to respond to whatever emergency is occurring.
Sgt. Michael Makowski of the Grosse Pointe Woods Department of Public Safety said every time the siren goes off, his department is flooded with calls from residents who want to know why the siren is going off. Makowski said this ties up department dispatchers and other office personnel — preventing officers from responding to emergencies.

The Woods' storm warning siren is tested on the first Saturday of every month at 1 p.m. The only other time it should be sounded is if a tornado has been sighted, or if there is another emergency situation.

"When they hear the siren," Makowski said, "they should turn on their radioes or televisions and watch or listen for warnings from the news agencies.

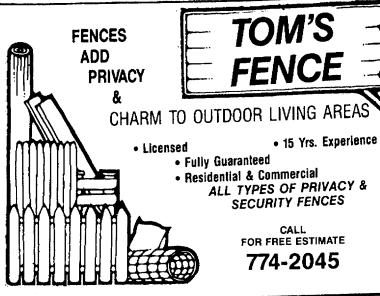

He said that last week when a tornado was sighted in Plymouth, the Woods activated its siren sys-

"Everyone called to find out why the siren was sounding." he said. "When we have rough weather like that lines come down, limbs fall and we have to be able to respond. The only three ways that siren can be set off is through a test, an actual emergency or accidentally. We haven't had an accidental set-off."

Makowski noted when Harper Woods sets off its siren, many Grosse Pointe Woods residents call their public safety department — a move which again ties the department's collective

"We trigger our siren if there is a sighting of a tornado in Wayne County, or one headed our way. he said. "Wayne County is big, and the siren may not mean that danger is imminent — but taking shelter anyway — perhaps with a portable radio, will keep you better informed and safer than if you had not taken cover."

When a man dressed only in his underwear recently played a tune on his harmonica for an elephant in the Honolulu Zoo, police charged him with cruelty to animals.

IRA changes . . .

(Continued from Page 1A) the investment tax credit would be wiped out. Corporations would pay more taxes. The question is who pays those taxes in the long run? It is the consumer.''

Moran pointed out that in the long run, the federal builget deficit of $200 billion a year has to be pared down, and that eventually the $2 trillion national debt has to be paid back — with taxes.

"It is quite conceivable that the banking industry will not oppose this plan," Moran said, but he qualified that with "but I'm not prepared to say that for sure."

Joe Mengden, president of First Grosse Pointes usually have sophisticated investors handling their finances, and changes in tax laws will mean these investors will be handling the movement of investments to the best possible areas for

He noted that the elimination of IRAs would not be until the 1987 tax year and people will get the deduction until April 15, 1987. He addedithat many corporations have a 401-K (a reference to the tax code) which allows the corporations a retirement plan for its employees.

"It (eliminating IRAs) would mean a shift in where the money goes," Mengden said. "We will see a reduction in the cash investment in tax shelters. There has already been a reduction over the past six months '

Mengden p be a decrease in stock prices since, under the Senate plan, the capital gains will be treated as income. Currently, capital gains are taxed at a special rate of 20 percent. If approved and capital gains were treated as income, they would be taxed at 27 percent.

Stockman speaks to 1,000 at luncheon

By Nancy Parmenter

David Stockman wants to raise the federal income tax.

'I'm the last person in the world I ever thought would advocate raising taxes," he admitted to the crowd of 1,000 at the recent Macomb Library Cooperative author

But there's a reason for Stockman's turnabout.

During the five years he spent as the Reagan administration's program-slasher, Stockman discovered a wide consensus for retaining government programs. Program by program, not just Congress, not just special interest groups, not just Democrats, but the people went on the record as wanting to retain the government safety net, the veterans' pro-grams, funding for libraries and school lunches and aid to the poor and elderly.

"We reformed some programs and did a little trimming," Stockman said, but the millions saved by cutting a few "wasteful little scoundrels" and "ankle-biters" were not enough to make a real change in the size of the federal government.

Which brings us to taxes. If you want programs, you have to pay for them. Stockman recognizes the public's reluctance, however.

"What has happened in Washington in the last four years represents a deep ambivalence on the part of the American people,' he said. "It wants a benevolent government that takes care of people — but it also wants a cheap government. You can't have it both ways. You have to pay for what you get.'

The overflow crowd heard Stockman enthusiastically and mobbed him for book autographs after the talk. That day at least, Harper & Row's $2.4 million investment in "The Triumph of Politics: Why the Reagan Revolution Failed" looked well-placed.

Stockman opened by taking exception to the "kiss-and-tell" image his book has acquired in its few weeks on the market. All of the socalled tattling anecdotes had already appeared in print before the book was written. "I know," he said, "I leaked them myself."

"The Triumph of Politics" is Stockman's view of the "tumultuous collision" between economic theory and political reality. The big government that made such an easy target on the rubber chicken circuit was harder to deal with up close. It wasn't as full of "$500,000 grants to some scientist to investigate the sex life of Polish lizards" as Stockman ex-pected. The route to saving real money turned out to mean a lot more drastic measures than just cutting the fat.

"It became a program-by-program debate over what this country wants and how much it's willing to pay," he said. "But there are only five or six big items in the budget — Medicare and Social Security are half the budget. The issue was: Will we do something about this open-ended entitlement? The short answer is 'no.'

But the audience was most interested in the anecdotal content of the book. During the question period, participants bombarded Stockman with questions ranging from tough to rude: Is Ronald Reagan smart or dumb? Have you paid off your college loan yet? How can you defend your irresponsibili-ty in staying around after you knew the budget wasn't going to work? And: Do you have a fan club and how can we join?

Stockman didn't take the bait. He told the audience that he has in fact paid off his college loan, but he declined to trash Reagan.

"My criticism has nothing to do with the president as a leader," he said. "All presidents have to be actors to some degree. But it can't be all 'feel-good.' It isn't going to do any good to wish the deficit away."

The deficit can go away if the public is willing to pay it away, however. If we don't, "we'll bust the budget. (The alternative of) running the printing press will just increase inflation.

And if we do bite the bullet, he predicted, "We can have a pretty tolerable economy.'

Among young women in prisons, divorcees outnumber singles by 10 to one, and they outnumber wives by nine to one.

CITY OF Grosse Hointe Farms MICHIGAN

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES AND ON THE PROPOSED CITY BUDGET

The City Council of the City of Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan will hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, May 19, 1986 in the Council Chambers at the Municipal Offices, 90 Kerby Road, on the proposed 1986 City tax levy and on the proposed 1986-1987 City budget.

Last year (1985) the City levied 13.2000 mills (13.20 per $1,000 SEV) for City operating purposes. Because of an estimated increase in the State Equalized Value of existing property in the City, state law (Act 5 of 1982) provides that the base rate for 1986 City operating taxes be decreased to 12.27 per $1,000 SEV. This is .9300 mills (.93 cents per $1,000 SEV) lower than the 1985 operating tax rate.

To fund the City's proposed 1986-1987 budget and to maintain the present level of City services, the City finds it necessary to increase its operating tax levy. An additional millage rate levy of .58 mills (.58 per $1,000 SEV) is proposed above the 1986 base operating millage rate. This provides an estimated 4.68% increase in City operating tax revenues.

Public comments, oral or written, are welcome at the public hearing on the proposed additional millage rate and on the proposed City budget.

Hospital adopts school

David Benfer, Henry Ford Hospital's chief operating officer and a Grosse Pointe resident, launched the hospital's partnership with Detroit's McMichael Middle School in "Adopt-A-School" re-

In addition to a Career Day May 8 where professionals from Henry Ford Hospital will speak about job opportunities ranging from security to occupational therapy, the hospital will sponsor a visit by the students to its Detroit Campus May 16 to allow 20-30 students an opportunity to "shadow" and consult with professionals in the field of their choice on a one-to-one basis. Also in store is an honors breakfast May 13 for students who have achieved excellence in academics and citizenship.

Speaking before McMichael students, faculty members and parents during the ceremony. Benfer emphasized the significance of providing assistance to

"Today's schools produce tomorrow's community," Benfer said. "The Adopt-A-School program brings the private sector and the public school system together. The program helps bridge the gap between the perception our students have of the working and the training and skills they will need someday to succeed in their chosen field."

The hospital has adopted two schools: McMichael and Woodrow Wilson Middle School. The schools were selected by Henry Ford Hospital's steering committee, which includes Benfer, Assistant Administrator Gary Severn. Nursing Administrator Mary Morris, Director of Human Resource Development Dr. William Moskal and Director of Corporate Public Relations Patricia McCarthy, also a resident of Grosse

Also included in the activities for the adopted schools is a duct the Beginning Alcohol and Addiction Basic Education Studies (B.A.B.E.S.) program which is geared for children ages 3-11. The program helps educate youngsters about drug abuse.

Residents commended

The Caring Council of St. John Hospital recently commended outstanding employees with "A Patient Thinks You're Great!" Award. The certificates are awarded to any employee, unit or department cited by a patient for exceptional care.

In the first year of the program, which began in April 1985, 67 certificates were awarded. Among employees commended for outstanding work were:

Families needed

Local families are being sought to host the 210 French and Spanish students ages 14-18 who will be in the area July 1-July 28 through the annual NACEL Exchange Program. The students speak English, bring their own spending money and are eager to share American family life for one month. Host families should be willing to share their daily activities. Families and students are matched according to shared interests.

At the same time as the French and Spanish students are enjoying American life, 130 students will be living with families in France, Germany and Spain. As part of this group, Stephanie Mor-reale from Grosse Pointe Park has been selected as a NACEL Ambassador to France for a month. Priority for these Discovery Programs to Europe is given to teenagers from former host families.

Inquiries about both programs can be addressed to Evelyn and Julian Prince, the NACEL area coordinators. Call 626-6641 or write them at 3452 Buckingham Trail, West Bloomfield, Mich.

To graduate from high school in Sweden, you need to prove six weeks of on-the-job training for some accredited employer.

Dear Neighbors:

May 15, 1986

Does the news discourage you lately?

From the threats to world peace in the Middle East, South Africa and Central America, and issues closer to home such as teenage suicide, it's hard not to be discouraged. Most people feel helpless to do anything about it. But we are writing you this letter in the Grosse Pointe News to point to something you can do.

On Monday, May 19, Nancy Pihl, C.S., a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship, will be speaking at our church on the subject of peace. She will show how peace of mind is natural to us all, and how each one of us can discover it - starting with a new concept of ourselves in rela-

We'd like you to come hear Mrs. Pihl. Whatever your religious affiliation — or even if you consider yourself a non-believer — we think you'll find her talk alive and thought-provoking.

It will not be a church service. No collection will be taken. Care for small children will be provided. And lighted, secured parking is available in two lots across from our church located at 14710 Kercheval Avenue just west of Alter Road.

Mrs. Pihl's talk, "Want Peace? It's Yours!", will begin at 7:30 p.m. We'd love to have you join us. See you then?

McCormick closes book on a five-decade library career

By Mike Andrzejczyk

When people ask Joyce McCormick what she plans to do after retirement, she likes to respond with a story she was told about a retiring general.

"Everyone kept asking him as they've been asking me—
'what are you going to do, what are you going to do?,' "she says, smiling. "And he said, 'Well, for the first month, I'm just gonna sit in a rocker on the porch. In the second month, I just might get to rocking.

She is retiring as head of circulation at the Central Library this summer. She started with the library in 1944 at $90 a month and stayed ever since.

It is the change involved in her job that McCormick says she has found satisfying.

"I like people, books and movement. Things change," she says.
"I didn't want to be sitting at a desk or doing anything of that sort. I preferred variety."

In the 42 years she has been with the library system, McCormick has seen a lot of changes. When she started as a clerical person to aid seven librarians, the Park branch at Pierce Middle School was the system's main branch. A branch was maintained in the City, consisting of two adjoining homes joined together.

There was also a small, oneroom storefront on Mack, a tinroofed building that froze workers in winters and baked them in summer, McCormick remembers. She also helped at the Old Kerby School station, where on Fridays she was a storyteller. And then there was the station maintained in the Shores municipal building and the station wagon that was the system's first bookmobile, McCormick recalls.

'In a sense, we've shrunk,'' McCormick adds. "We've expanded into larger buildings, but as far as coverage has gone, we've shrunk.'

McCormick became head of circulation in 1953, moving to the Central Library and beginning her work with the circulation systems of all branches. The circulation department handles all circulating items in the system, from books and magazines to tools and videotapes.

The library doesn't yet circulate computer software, but that will someday come to pass, she Computerization has brought the biggest change to the library system, McCormick says. She remembers the first steps made into computerization of circulation records and is watching as the library system moves toward a reader access system of computerized files.

Besides that, there are computer-time rentals available at the central library. Also, a varieaccess to readers and researchers.

"A library is no longer books, magazines and papers," McCormick says. "This will always change. Libraries will always adapt to what's coming.

While the technology and the tools have changes, the basics of the library remain the same, she

"It's still a person one-on-one with another person," McCormick says. "Somebody comes into the library for a service and that service is rendered. That hasn't changed at all. I don't think it will ever change.

"Machines are going to get in the middle there somewhere (but) . . . I don't think the person will ever be out of it," she adds.
As for the future, McCormick says she'll take the summer to think about what to do next. There are a number of possibilities, including travel and volunteer in with their children," McCor-

She was born to parents of British citizenship who traveled extensively, including Canada and Germany. Her father spent World War I as a prisoner in Germany while her mother worked in an airplane factory. After she was born, they immigrated to the United States, in time to be caught by the Depression.

She sort of backed into library

McCormick graduated from Wayne State University and always wanted to return to get her degree in library science but never got the chance, she says.

As the only clerical person for seven librarians, she often found herself helping alongside them. she adds. The work situation was less formal then, and she may have found herself driving the bookmobile or being a storyteller. She still sees some of her former audience, she adds. "I'm still meeting children who came down; now they're coming

Bon Secours to offer senior nutrition program

Bon Secours Hospital will introduce its Senior Citizen Nutrition Education program with a free lecture Tuesday, May 20, 7:30 p.m., in the Fries Auditorium at the War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore. The speaker will be James Sowers, M.D., endocrinologist and nutrition expert from Wayne State University.

'Eat Right and Stay Young" will focus on how certain foods can help prevent the degenerative diseases such as hypertension, osteoporosis, heart disease, and diabetes that rob senior citizens of their health.

At the lecture, Bon Secours Hospital will also introduce its new computerized nutrition assessment service. By entering a person's three-day dietary intake, the computer can analyze the diet and produce a print-out that recommends ways to improve deficiencies or decrease excesses.

Hospital costs down in Michigan

Health care cost increases in Michigan have slowed for the first time in recent history.

Data in the March issue of "Michigan Hospitals" reveal that Michigan hospitals' inpatient admissions are down and lengths of stay are growing shorter. The downturn in admissions and lengths of stay has brought about a number of changes, but perhaps the most dramatic is the drop in the number of hospital employees, according to the Michigan Hospital Association.

More than 6,000 jobs were eliminated by hospitals during 1984, the most recent year for which data are available.

Nursing undergoes many changes

By Nancy Parmenter

Like many other professions, nursing is undergoing changes in the 1980s. Education, professional status and proof of competency are issues not only for teachers, but for nurses as well.

Several states have already changed their licensing requirements for nurses. Michigan is looking at changes.

But the changes didn't come about overnight. They have been in the discussion stage for 20 years, says Kitty Bacso, president-elect of the Michigan League for Nursing. The league is a professional association; the Michigan Nurses Association is a union. Many nurses are members of both.

Several years ago when many of the state's hospitals phased out their nurses' training programs. people thought that was the sum of the educational change. But the phase-out was merely the first response to a growing call for standardized education for nurses, said Bacso, who is director of Professional Medical Services (PMS) by Harper Woods.

There have historically been four levels of nursing, levels that overlap in education and in title. The licensed practical nurse is attainable with 12-18 months of study and a passing grade on the state board test. The diploma school. usually run by a hospital, requires two to three years of study and entitles the student to take the test to be called a registered nurse.

The associate degree, a 212-year college program, also entitles the student to take the state RN test. as does the four-year bachelor degree program.

"All-three are allowed to call themselves RNs," Bacso said. The title of registered nurse thus does not reflect a specific amount of training and education. "Nurses are beginning to know the difference, but lay people — you say you're a nurse and they can't tell.

All of this could change. North Dakota, Maine and West Virginia all have legislation either passed or in the hopper to create just two levels of nursing. The National League for Nursing, of which the Michigan League is the local During the last five years, nurses branch, has gone on record favoring two levels.

The scuttlebutt is that they'll take the LPN, the associate degree and the diploma school and put them all in the technical nurse category," Bacso said. She said that several Michigan legislators are interested in the reform, but that no bills have been formulated. Not everybody is thrilled with the proposed change. The 1.2 million nurses currently working nationwide with those three degrees fear loss of jobs or a decline in wages. Bacso said those nurses would be "grandfathered.

"There are legitimate concerns over the way in which the grandfathering will work," she conceded. "Hospitals won't throw them all into one pot and pay them the same salary

"This really isn't for our generation, it's for the next," she said. "If they're RNs now, they'll always be RNs. Nurses have to band together and swallow the pill - and consider what's best for nursing.

Bacso agreed that there are some drawbacks to eliminating some of the levels. The LPN has been a relatively easy way to get into the field with a fairly short preparation. "It's like an economic stepladder." Bacso said. "You could start with that and keep working your way up.

High school students now considering a career in nursing may feel confused by the possible changes. Bacso agreed that starting out now to become an LPN would probably not be a smart career move.

"I'd recommend going to at least an associate degree program," she said. "Then you can add hours while you work and move up to a bachelor's degree.

The proposed changes will be good for the profession, according to the nursing league. Higher standards and an increased amount of education should increase the number and quality of nursing applicants. Bacso says.

"And better nurses will be good for the consumer, too," she added.

have been allowed to make nursing diagnoses; this means that their professional knowledge can be put to use instead of having to wait for a doctor to arrive.

The opportunities in nursing are greater. "There are pages and pages of nursing jobs in the classified section," Bacso said. Nurses are working in the medical equipment field, as nurse anesthetists. as risk managers in the insurance field, as nurse practitioners and in home health care.

The wider variety of jobs has not affected salaries and benefits a great deal. "It's been seen as a woman's field. Benefits and pension plans haven't been the greatest," Bacso said. "The old feeling was that you were covered by your husband's plan. But that's changing.

Registered nurses working in Michigan hospitals can expect to earn $9.50 to $15 an hour. LPNs make $6 to $10.

A nurse must renew her license every two years. At present, there are no requirements: "You just pay your money and get your license," Bacso said. But competency hearings are currently under way around the state. The next is scheduled for May 13 in Lansing.

At issue is the number of hours of continuing education the state ought to require for relicensing. Several legislators have proposed a minimum of 18 credit hours during each two-year licensing period.

The nursing league has not taken an official position on the issue. Bacso's personal experience shows an interest in continuing education, however. She has an associate's degree in nursing, a master's in education, and is currently working on a specialist's certificate in gerontology.

'It all ties together," she said. One problem nursing faces is that the turmoil surrounding proposed changes in the profession has created confusion in high school counseling offices. Counselors no longer know which degrees are available or desirable or where the state stands on competency requirements, Bacso said.

The Michigan League for Nursing has developed a career package for use in high school counseling. Tapes and brochures explain current programs.

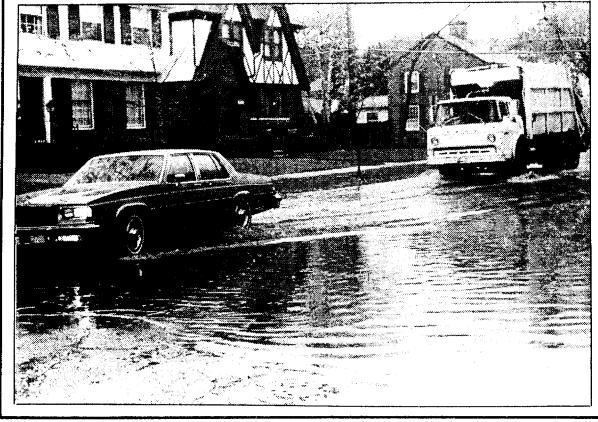

The other hurdle is the programs themselves. Colleges and nurses training programs are in the throes of change and are working on coordinating their programs with each other for uniform standards and requirements.

They are likely to work it out, Bacso believes. "Nursing educators have decided this (realignment) is going to happen."

The St. Clair Professional Building (adjacent to Saint John Hospital) may not look like it's open, but it is. All physician offices are conducting "business as usual" during normal office hours. Please allow me to briefly explain what is taking place.

For more than a year, the St. Clair Ambulatory Care Corporation has been involved in examining the exterior brick facing of the building to find out why rusting and cracking of the brick panels was occurring.

After working with our engineering consultants, we have found that a mortar additive manufactured by an outside firm used in the construction of this building is responsible for the deterioration of the brick panels. We have determined that in the interest of safety for our tenants, patients, visitors and employees, we will reskin the entire brick facing of the St. Clair Professional Building.

We have enlisted the services of an independent construction firm for this refacing and expect work to be completed this fall.

Please be assured we are doing everything we can to minimize noise and inconvenience to our neighbors, tenants and patients.

That's the way it should be

My favorite scene from the movie "Casablanca" is the last one, where Humphrey Bogart's character turns to the police chief, played by Claude Reins, and says You know, this could be the start of a beautiful friendship.

It's what might be said about the junior varsity softball teams from North and South this spring. Seems the girls have broken with the longstanding tradition which for some odd magon provings hide. which for some odd reason, requires kids from North and South to be bitter rivals.

Things took a turn for the better three weeks ago when the teams were playing in different brackets in the Sterling Heights Tournament. North was in the thick of a game when the South girls, finished with their game, walked by and started cheering and yelling "Go, North!" The North girls were a little surprised, given the usual sentiment between the control of the control o timent between the schools, but when South made it to the finals, the Lady Norsemen returned the favor and came by to cheer the Devils on, bearing gifts of candy and cookies, no less.

Then in the South softball tourney two weeks ago, the two teams got together to discuss the other squads involved. And even after North beat South — which later finished second, ahead of North — the South girls "showed a lot of class," according to North JV coach Bill Fleming, and gave the Lady Norsemen their heartiest congratulations.

"It's just been incredible. We each needed to win our games to get into the finals in Sterling Heights and it was nice to see the girls cheer each other on," Fleming said.

"I think these girls are beginning to break down some of the barriers between these two schools . . . and that's nice to see. I think the girls showed a tremendous amount of poise and maturity for being ninth and 10th graders. A lot more than some of the older kids show.

Getting together recently for South High's JV softball tournament were members of the North and South softball squads.

"I think it's just great."

As a battle-weary veteran of the North-South war (which has been going on almost as long as the real one did, although not nearly as long as the mini-series of the same name), I can only add a large sigh of relief and a heart-felt: "Amen!"

Since we're in the mood to discuss things turning out the way they should, how about an update on a dream come true?

Readers will recall the story of Linda Lickfold, reserve pitcher for South High's softball team. Lickfold, a transfer student from Mount Clemens, wanted nothing more than to make South's team and someday pitch against her old Bather buddies. She didn't survive the cut last season, but after hanging around as team statistician and impressing coach John Bruce this year. she was named to the squad.

And on April 30, Lickfold saw her dream realized. She pitched two-thirds of an inning, held Mount Clemens scoreless and was awarded a save. Just like in the Bursting with pride these days have to be the moms, dads, coaches, managers and directors of the Grosse Pointe Soccer Association. At press time, the girls' varsity kickers from North and South — chock-full of GPSA grads - were sailing along in the state playoffs, sporting 10 wins apiece and making the state's top-10 rankings.

And for the icing on the cake, both North and South beat the highly-ranked girls' team from the heretofore mecca of soccer:

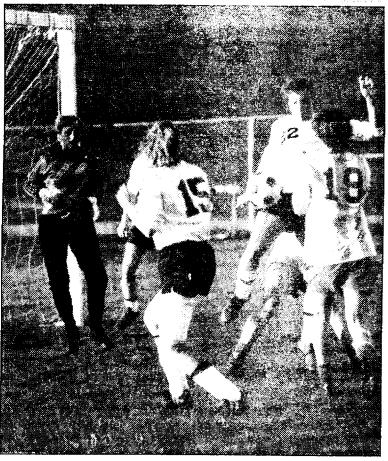

If that wasn't enough, GPSA players Michelle Kovalcik, Katie Kolp and Kathleen Foley made it to the under 14 state select team tryouts. The final results aren't in but just being chosen for the tryouts sure did the GPSA proud.

Which is just the way it should be.

What a week!

It was some week for the girls' varsity soccer team at South High. First, they beat No. 6-ranked Troy in the playoffs on Wednesday night, 1-0, in overtime. The next afternoon, they came right back to win the Expressway League championship with a 3-2 vicory over western division champion Edsel Ford. That's top scorer Kim Wood (above) trying to convert a pass from Jennifer Smith past Edsel Ford goalie Allison Widmer. And at right, Becky Steffes (19) takes on Troy's Heather Lawler.

Rating the rankings Grosse Pointe coaches keep state athletic polls in perspective

By Peggy O'Connor

Once per week during the high school sports seasons, a set of magical little numbers is printed in the daily newspapers that draw the same sort attention from coaches, fans and players than the state lottery numbers receive from lottery fanatics.

The numbers are state rankings and while coaches admit to pawing through a newspaper or two on Monday mornings to catch the up-dated lists, they also say they try to keep the rankings process in perspective. Most high school sports teams are ranked in the same manner: under the auspices of their individual coaches' associations. High school football squads are rated by computer, based both on their success and on the strength of opponents played; sports like softball, baseball, tennis, soccer, hockey, swimming and volleyball are ranked from the information supplied by coaches or leagues representatives designated from each league.

"I think they're very, very ac-

Proof of that came last year, when the Michigan High School Tennis Coaches Association saw its top four teams in Class B and four of their top five ranked in Class A finish in just that order in the state tennis finals.

"... they are meaningless as far as ranking how good the teams really are."

- Guido Regelbrugge

In baseball, each high school district has a representative — Frank Sumbera from North High for North and South's district - who will make calls to a main office based on the records of teams in that particular district to make the class by class rankings. In soccer, however, the league reps call in the top seven teams, again based on records, and from those votes, the top 10 teams in the entire state are chosen.

Whatever the method, there will be coaches and teams which for one reason or another, are not ranked . . . and not very happy about it. That's why they should take it for what it's worth, says North soccer coach and league rep. Guido Regelbrugge.

'To me, rankings are important in that if you get your team in the top 10, you can get recognition. But they are meaningless as far as ranking how good the teams real-

A case in point, Regelbrugge says, occurred earlier this season when No. 10-ranked North was beaten by South High, which was unranked at the time and remained so for two weeks after that. North later beat No. 6-ranked Troy, but as of press time, was not ranked in the state's top 10. "There's no rhyme or reason for how they rank teams." Regelbrugge says. He also claims that teams from soccer-mad areas like Livonia or Troy, need only to achieve fairly good records to earn top 10 rankings. "There has been

"No. 1, I think it's interesting to see what the different coaches feel about their teams. Also, it's a big motivational factor and confidence builder for the kids. I know when our baseball team was rated in the 10 earlier this year, the kids were walking around sky-high.

"That's a great feeling to have."

As long as both coaches and players take it for what it's worth and don't let it get to their heads. says South baseball coach Dan Griesbaum.

"I've always told my team: "the only important No. 1 spot is the No. 1 spot at the end of the season.' It's nice to be rated, but it can work against you as well," Griesbaum

Other teams begin gunning for you. And you can let it go to your head too much and forget that you have to take the negative with the positive in sports. My kids know that no matter where they are ranked, we still have to be playing the same way, with the same attitude.

One sport's coaches — track don't have to worry about how rankings effect athletes; there are no state rankings for track.

"It's probably too difficult because there are so many kids and so many teams involved and the talent is so diverse," says South coach Steve Zaranek. "But I wouldn't mind seeing rankings for individuals.

"I think kids should be recognized for their efforts.

A Coast Guard commendation

You can't sink a bunch of seasoned sailors.

Thomas K. Lowry, owner of Tomahawk - the C&C 35 that sank during heavy winds and high seas in the 1985 Port Huron to Mackinac Race - is back. Lowry is fairly jumping up and down with anticipation for the 62nd running of the Mackinac coming up in mid-July. He's going to run the Chicago to Mackinac, too.

Lowry is ready to sail with a new C&C 39 and the same hardy crew, with one addition: his 19-year-old daughter, Beth.

"None of the crew has soured on sailing," Lowry said. "These are seasoned guys.

Last Saturday, May 10, Charles M. Bayer, owner of Old Bear, and his seven-member crew received the U.S. Coast Guard Public Service Commendation for saving the lives of Lowry and his crew last July. A formal ceremony in Port Huron aboard the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Bramble marked the occasion.

Lieutenant Commander Lawrence G. Brudnicki, Commanding Officer of the Bramble, presented the award which read, in part To Charles M. Bayer, master, and crew of the sailing vessel Old Bear . . . while participating in Bayview Yacht Club's 1985 Port Huron to Mackinac Island Yacht Race, you and your crew displayed courage, initiative and judgment that saved eight lives

It is because of your crew's love of sailing, deepest respect of the lake, courage and heroism that saved not only your own lives but the lives of eight other shipmates that you are awarded the Coast Guard Public Service Commendation.

All but two of Tomahawk's crew attended the ceremony on Saturday. Crew members in 1985 — and again in 1986 are: John Garr and Jay Patrick Wright of Grosse Pointe, Frank Couzens of Grosse Pointe Farms. Dennis Cazabon of Japan, Mike Cazabon of Detroit, Charlie Steigerwald of Columbus, Ohio, and Bernie Tonowski of Harper Woods.

All of Old Bear's crew were present at the ceremony: A. Gerard Leone and John Cyril Burke of the Farms, Charles M. Bayer, Jr. of Boston, Robert Peter Duker of St. Clair Shores, Timothy John Blachut of Sterling Heights, Dennis Blair Cotter and Earl James Wiley of the Park.

Lowry said he will take two additional safety precautions for this year's race. "The race committee is very thorough about safety measures." he said, "and the safety equipment aboard Tomahawk worked beautifully last year. But I'm going to have two sets of life jackets for each crew member. One set will be the usual Coast Guard-approved type. They're awkward - the horse-collar type — not attractive. They're not user-friendly," said. "I've also bought 10 vest-type, zippered, more fashionable, comfortable jackets. I'll number these and assign one to each

'I want to encourage the crew to wear life jackets, especially at night. The new ones will be more comfortable, they'll look good, and they're more likely to be used." Lowry recalled the mad scramble for life jackets during last year's emergency

'Also, I have attached strobe lights to each jacket. These are high intensity, oscillating lights that make it easier to spot a person in the water at night.

What happened last year? "That continues to be a question mark." Lowry said. Tomahawk suffered major hull damage when it was knocked off its cradle during a thunderstorm in early spring. A large hole in the starboard side, below the water line, was subsequently repaired and at the time, Lowry said he was satisfied and confident that the repairs were well done

The second night of the 1985 race, at about 11 p.m., Lake Huron had whirled itself into eight-foot seas and gale force winds. ' were pushing hard," Lowry said. "We were beating. It's always noisy when you're beating — lots of crashing, banging, fluttering. Two men were below deck changing clothes. Suddenly they yelled that water was pouring into the cabin through a hole in the

"It appeared we'd go down in a few minutes," he said. "The hole was in the same spot where the repairs had been made. We couldn't do anything to stop the water.

The crew barely had time to radio for help, relay their position and launch an inflatable life raft. They abandoned Tomahawk within 20 minutes. It sank within another 20 minutes.

The 'mayday' was answered immediately; which surprised Lowry. In heavy weather, he said, most sailors are not likely to be below deck, monitoring their radios. "Fortunately, we knew where we were, using Loran co-ordinates.'

Fortunately also, Charles Bayer and crew heard their mayday' and knew exactly where THEY were — about 1½ miles behind Tomahawk. Bayer replied that they were coming immediately to assist the sinking boat and crew.

"I was always confident they were coming," Lowry said, looking back on the 45-minute ordeal aboard the raft. Old Bear took the eight men aboard and headed for Alpena.

Lowry calls his new C&C 39 Tomahawk², and he said it looks exactly like the old one - same color, same sails, same design. 'It's an exploded version of the old one, but bigger, nicer, with more room." The old Tomahawk is still under 300 feet of water 20 miles northwest of Cove Island buoy, about 15 miles off the shore of Manitoulin Island. Lowry said he doesn't want it.

He had words of praise for Bayer and crew and he thinks the Coast Guard award is extremely important. "It's a huge decision (for a competitive sailor) to stop a race and help someone in trouble. "When you hear that call, you always hope someone else will do it," he said. "Owners and crew members spend a whole year working toward a race like the Mackinac. They make all sorts of plans concerning vacation time, babysitters, and travel plans for their wives. Old Bear just stepped forward to help. He didn't wait for someone else to respond.

"I answered a 'mayday,' which is the primary responsibility of any yachtsman," Bayer said. "Because of electronics, we were able to pinpoint the location of the Tomahawk within a few feet.'

Bayer commended Lowry and his crew for their fantastic seamanship during the emergency. "Their boat sank through no fault of their own.

"I'm delighted to receive the award," he added. "It comes out of a sport I love very dearly. It's nice to be honored for something I like so much."

"I'm looking forward to this year's Mackinac Race more than any, so far," Lowry said. "Sailing is a love affair and there's no substitute for it."

Baseball team sees Bi-County league title hopes dim

Leading the North boys' track team to an undefeated season so far has been, among others. the excellent performance of the Norsemen's hurdlers - Baik and Hwan Hur, below - and left, senior Brian Bergeron. Bergeron has won all but one dual meet in discus and shot put this year, and last week, threw his personal best in the discus ---158 feet, 21/2 inches - to beat South Lake. North competes in the regionals this weekend.

Big week wins SH tracksters title share

By Jennifer McSorley South High

South's girls' varsity track team captured at least a share of ne Eastern Michigan League title with wins last week over previously unbeaten Anchor Bay, 75½-52½, and second place Mount Clemens, 76-52. South's record this week was 6-0 in the EML, 9-0 overall. The girls faced East Detroit (after press time) with hopes of finishing a perfect flual meet

According to South coach Steve Zaranek, six new school records were set last week. They included one in the discus by sophomore Dunrie Greiling, whose 100 feet, 3 inches bettered the old mark by three feet: the 1978 800 meter relay record of 1:50, broken by senior Julie Boyt, junior Heather Imel, sophomore Reba Uthappa and freshman Traci Lee running a 1:49.7; the shuttle-hurdle relay team of Imel, sophomore Wendy Berger, senior Carin Seyler and junior Erin Kershaw, who combined for 1:10.6 at the Trov-Athens Relays; the sprint-medley, with freshman Lindsey Haddad, Imel, Boyt and Uthappa running a 1:56.8; the middle distance relay, with sophomore Micha Song and senior Nancy Solterisch running 800 each and junior Myreya Amezcua and Lee running 400s, to finish in 7:08.0; and finally, the discus relay, with sophs Greiling, Kellie Buchanan and Danielle DeLuca, who had combined throws of 261 feet, 1 inch.

Great soccer week

South's girls' varsity track team wrapped up an Expressway League championship and stayed alive in the state playoffs with a pair of victories last week.

On Wednesday, the Blue Devils topped highly-ranked Troy, 1-0, on Kim Wood's penalty kick goal in overtime. "The Troy game was a tough one," said coach John Case, "I'm very pleased with the way we played.

The girls had to come right back the next afternoon to face western division champion Edsel scored on a corner kick, much to Case's delight — got the goals in South's 3-2 win to take the league title in the crossover game.

Seniors June Langs and Claire Busse, sophomore Sara Wasinger and junior goaltender Amy Hawkins were credited with assists.

The girls played Utica Ford in another playoff game on Tuesday (after press time).

South's JV kickers played just one game last week, a 5-0 victory over Chippewa Valley, Freshman Monica Malboeuf and Mary Lou Stone got the South goals.

Tracksters split

South's boys' track team beat Anchor Bay last week, 93-44, but lost to Mount Clemens, 61-75.

Highlights in the Anchor Bay meet were junior Brian Stratton who took firsts in the 100, 200 and 400; junior Kevin English who won the 800; and senior Tom Arbaugh who won both the high and low hurdle races. All four of South's relay teams were victorious — members of the 3200 relay team were sophomore Dave Nicholson, sophomore Dave Sultzman, senior Chris Astfalk, and English; in the 800 are senior Mark Gall, freshman Andy Cox, junior Chris Gross, and freshman Kyle Scho-

The 400 relay team was made up of Gall, Cox, Gross and freshman Scott Shaupeter, and the 1600 team was made up of English, Astfalk, Arbaugh and Sultzman.

Against Mount Clemens, the Devils went one-two-three in a number of events, including the 800, swept by English, Sultzman and Astfalk, and the 1600, which Astfalk, English, and senior Matt Winquist swept. Astfalk and English also took first and second places in the 3200. The Devils also went one-two-three in the hurdles behind Arbaugh, senior Jeff Pfaendter and senior Brant Casaboom.

Stratton was also a point scorer, taking a second in the long jump, and the 100; first place was taken by Shawn Blanchett of Mount Clemens, who won by only 1/100 of a second. Stratton and Blanchett will meet again in the league meet.

Softball splits

South's girls' varsity softball team had an up and down week, peted in the Fraser Tournament topping North weekena, High, 8-5, and Lake Shore, 10-5, but falling to Fraser, 7-5, in the championship.

Senior Lynn Vismara was the winning pitcher against Anchor Bay, striking out six. She was also the game's leading hitter, with a homer and three RBI.

South turned in what coach John Bruce called "a well played" game in the loss to East Detroit. South's run came on a Vismara sacrifice, scoring junior Katy Turner.

Sophomore Erin Bruce got the pitching win against North, striking out five. Junior Patty Hess and Vismara each had two hits, including a homer by Vismara. Mary King beat Lake Shore, getting help from Holly Asmus, with two hits. Turner also had two hits against Fraser.

South stands at 5-3 in the EML, 10-8 overall, for third place in the league. Port Huron is in first and East Detroit, second in the EML standings

Ups and downs

By Stephen Ebner South High

The varsity Blue Devils began the week with excitement, shutting out Anchor Bay, 1-0, and East Detroit, 9-0, and winning a close battle with Bishop Gallagher, 11-7, but then losing four straight to Port Huron, 5-2, North 6-5, Roseville, 5-0, and Fraser, 8-3. The varsity sits at 7-2 in the EML, one game behind leader Port Huron Northern.

The highpoint of the week was a no-hitter against East Detroit. Starter Rich Leonard (4-0, 1.73 ERA) struck out 14 batters and walked three. "It felt pretty Leonard commented. 'Around the fifth and sixth inning I felt I'd get it. I've wanted one (no-hitter) for so long." Helping out at the plate were leftfielder Pete Muer, two-for-three with three RBI, including a homerun; shortstop Sean Bruce, batting two-for-two and two RBI; and first baseman Tom Fellows, twofor-three

Against Bishop Gallagher, catcher Steve Kinsley slammed a bases loaded pitch over the fence, and then centerfielder Mike Mac-Michael blasted another grand slam in the seventh inning. Gallagher went ahead with its own

North's varsity baseball team stumbled in Bi-County League play last week, seriously jeopardizing its chances for an eighth straight league championship. Disaster struck for the Norsemen as they dropped a twin bill to the Clintondale Dragons, 7-3, and 3-2, in extra innings. North has lost four league games and will really have to bear down to salvage any hope of winning the title.

In the Fraser Tournament last weekend, the Norsemen managed to snatch defeat from the jaws of victory. Colin MacNeil took the mound in the first game against South High, pitching a gutsy game in leading the Norsemen to a 9-5 win

Senior Steve Pochmara ripped two homers, one a solo shot and the second, a grand slam, to insure the win.

Errors and walks killed North in the second game, against host team Fraser, 9-4. North had seven errors, seven walks and five unearned runs in the loss. The game's only bright spot was senior Bill Miller's two-run single.

North's JV baseball team was also in a rut last week, losing three out of four. They are 9-5 overall, 4-4 in the BCL.

On May 5, North was shut out by the Lancers, 2-0. Todd Tyson (2-1) took the loss despite a fine pitching effort. Rick Regalado had two hits. North also ran into problems against Clintondale, losing 8-2, and 5-3, in extra innings. In the first game, Regalado allowed just three earned runs and struck out six, but suffered the defeat. Kevin McCarron had

In the nightcap, the JV dropped a nine-inning marathon; Russell Rice (2-1) pitched an outstanding game, striking out nine and giving up six hits in going the distance. Jason DeYonker and Don Rashid had two hits apiece.

The next day, North ended a four-game skid by beating South Lake, 13-9. Matt Stevens had three hits and 4 RBI, Marty Pochmara had two hits and three RBI, and Rice added two hits, including the JV's first homer of the season. Freshman pitcher Eric Zenow got the win in his first start of the year; Dino Vento notched the save.

Runners still on track

East Detroit and South Lake were the victims as North's girls' and boys' track teams continued to destroy all competition. The undefeated boys' squad knocked off the Cavaliers, 108-29, on May 6. Senior Brian Bergeron threw his personal best in the discus, 158 feet, 21/2 inches, to win. Freshman Bob Straske ran a personal best in the 800 (2:02.01.). Junior Marc Loosevelt (high hurdles) and sophomore Brian Maniere (100 meter dash) won their events.

Then on May 8, the Norsemen beat East Detroit, 91-44. Junior John Van Syckle highlighted the win with a first - and personal best — in the mile (4:38)

North's girls also defeated South Lake, 109-19. North took 15 out of 16 events, as Barb Labadie and Jill Dornbrock were involved in four firsts and junior Barb Loeher and sophomore Monique VanAssche had a hand in three.

The Lady Norsemen were also winners over East Detroit, 110.5-17.5. The girls won all 14 running events and swept the 400, 800, 1600 and 3200 meter runs.

The freshman track team nipped South High last week, 70-63. Greg Donahue took first in the 100 and 300 hurdles, Alex Mourtos long-jumped 16 feet, 2 inches to win, and Bob Straske, Peter Mourad, Brad Bartos and Derek Lawson combined to win the mile

Playoff tune-up

North's varsity soccer team tuned up for the state playoffs with a 4-1 win over Ann Arbor Pioneer on May 6. Senior Shannon Armstrong had yet another hat trick and sophomore Stephanie Schaefer added the other goal.

On May 10, the Lady Norsemen dumped Warren Woods Tower, 2-0. Armstrong scored both goals on assists from junior Bridget Brierly. Sue Bond notched the shutout in goal for North. The wins upped North's record to 10-2. They played Bishop Foley in the playoffs on Monday, losing 2-1 in four overtimes.

JV improves

North's JV softball team continued to improve last week, standing at 4-1 in the BCL, 9-6 overall.

On May 3, North took part in the first annual South High JV Tournament. The Lady Norsemen split two games, losing 4-1 to Regina before beating South High. 7-3. The girls finished in a second place tie in the final standings.

Sophomores Janet Dunlop and Angela Dominiek and freshman Lucy Barry were named to the All-Tournament team.

On May 8, North destroyed South Lake, 16-6, as North's Barry belted a grand slam to lead the squad to victory.

Hard work pays off for South High graduate

By Cheryl Kaelin

Dedication, determination and a lot of hard work have been the keys to success for Murray State University Thoroughbred baseball player Steve Groehn.

Groehn was not recruited after completing his career at Grosse Pointe South High, but he decided to give collegiate baseball "the old college try" anyway. As a walk-on at Murray State, Groehn had to prove both his baseball skills and his attitude were worthy of a berth on a team which, coached by NCAA Baseball Committee Chairman Johnny Reagan, has a longstanding tradition of excellence.

A pitcher in high school, Groehn switched to the outfield "because you get into the game offensively as well as defensively," he said. "I like to hit, so I began playing in the outfield.

It's a switch that's paid off for the 'Breds. In his fourth year at Murray State after redshirting his first, riding the bench his second season, and hitting a mere .200 his third, Groehn is among the top batters in the Ohio Valley Conference this season, peaking at .370 with a slugging percentage of .790 while leading MSU in home runs with

"He was a long way from be-coming a good player," Wurth said. "He couldn't possibly be where he is now without desire. He's a great example of what hard work can do.

"Doc" (short for "Doctor Detroit," the nickname given Groehn by his teammates) opted for Murray State for a variety of reasons. His two sisters graduated from MSU, and the climate and competition both appealed to him.

"I wanted to play where there was good baseball competition," he said, "and Murray fit in very top-notch opponents. Staying on schedule academically has left Groehn with an important decision. Because of his redshirt season, he will have one year of eligibility remaining after receiving his bachelor's degree in criminal justice this month. His course, though, may already be set. "I owe coach Reagan and coach Wurth a lot," he said. "I'd like to come back and play and start work on my master's de-

All Pointes finishes season with silver medal

The All Pointe Swim Club finished off a successful 1985-86 season by capturing second place in the league championship meet April 12. By bringing home the silver, All Pointes tied its all-time best record, set in 1971. Along the way, swimmers posted several excellent performances, including two (club) record-setting relays.

All Pointes opened the championship meet with a strong third place finish by Steve Swan, David Reinke, Tony Vallan and Andy Bucciero in the boys' age group medley. The girls' age group med-ley of Hallie Evans, Charlotte Jarvis, Suzy Buydens and Cheryl Jamerino placed fourth.

The 8 and under mixed free relay team of John Spain, Emmett DeGuevara, Molly Butterly and Emily Evans posted a time of 1:04.66, good for second place. Following that was the record-setting performance of the 10 and under mixed free relay team of Paul Reaser, Len Cugliari, Marsha Zeller and Kim Higel. They completed the 200 yards in 2:04.72, but were beaten out by the champions from Clarenceville.

The 12 and under mixed relay also scored a second, paced by Craig Williams, Chris Mourad, Tina Higel and Lisa Vallan. The 14 and under crew posted a record time (1:45.61) thanks to the efforts of Mike Bucciero, Craig Wininger, Stacy Williams and Nora Brooks.

Capping off the meet in the 18 and under event was the team of Scott Tenkel, Drew Dungan, Brigid Brooks and Pam Reinke, which finished in the No. 2 spot behind the Clarenceville tankers.

Highlighting the individual efforts was the first place finish of Ashley Wolter in the 25 yard butterfly. Kim Higel brought home a silver in the 50 fly and a gold in the backstroke. Stacy Williams finished third in the 14 and under fly.

Other top finishes came from Christine Jamerino, Tina Higel and Craig Wininger, second place finishes, and Paul Reaser, third, in the backstroke. On Saturday, May 10, the team found itself at Macomb County Community College competing for the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference championship. Again, foiled by rival Southfield Christian, the Knights took a solid second among the five teams with 70 points.

The Knights' performance was highlighted by a series of personal bests, scorers included the 400 and 800 meter relay teams, (see below) which won a pair of second places, along with the 3200 meter relay team of Dundas, Hill, Brigolin and Hardy which was second, and the 1600 meter relay team of Knudson, Hill, Listman, and Dan Shanle, which placed third. Ristic again won both hurdle events, while Schmidt took third in the 100 hurdles, second in the discus and first in the shot put. In field events, Prus and Dundas shared second place in the high jump, and Bill Listman also won a second for a pole vault of 9 feet, 6 inches. Back on the track, Pete Hardy placed third in the 1600 meter run (4:58), freshman Paul Brigolin broke his own school record in the 3200 meter run (11:13.1), and Chip Davis placed second in the 400 meter dash, tying the school record of 54.1 set in 1975.

All-Conference selections included Ristic, Schmidt, Prus, Dundas,

Davis and Listman. On Thursday, May 8, the Knights traveled to Southfield Christian where they met Southfield and Plymouth Christian in the Knights' only away meet of the year. Despite valiant efforts, the Knights lost to Southfield 86-72, although they did beat Plymouth who scored 19 points.

The Knights' scoring was led by Chip Davis, who won the 400 (50.1) and placed second in the 800. Blasko Ristic won the 100 and 300 meter hurdle events, Mike Prus won the high jump with a jump of 5 feet, 6 inches and Davis placed second in the 100 yard dash (10.8). The 1600 and 3200 relay teams, of Tony Hill, Lars Knudson, Brendan Dundas, Prus, Paul Brigolin, Peter Hardy, and Matt Schwartz each placed second. The ULS girls' varsity soccer team tied Dearborn Fordson 2-2 on Tuesday, May 6. At halftime ULS led, 2-0, on sophomore Kim Owens' goal and a penalty kick by sophomore Lynne Connor. Fordson came back to score two quick goals in the first 10 minutes of the second half, but ULS held them the rest of the game.

On Thursday, May 8, the team traveled to Ann Arbor Pioneer to play in the East-West Divisional game, and came home with a 5-0 loss. Three goals were scored in the first half and two in the second

On May 9, Coach David Backhurst's team again took on Dearborn Edsel Ford. Dearborn is the East Division Champion team, but ULS played an impressive game, losing 2-1. ULS's lone goal was scored by junior Laurie Khelokian, on a superb pass from Connor.

Edsel Ford scored the winning goal on a penalty kick after a handball within the goal crease.

ULS played Royal Oak Kimball in the regional game (after press time). With a win, ULS plays Rochester on Friday, May 16, in the continuation of the state tournament. ULS finishes its regular season of play with a home game against Garden City on Thursday, May 15. (By Susan Judge)

In Russ Hepner's 18 years of coaching football at South High School, he has worked hard to perfect that winning combination of people, skills and talent that results in a championship team. For his fine record of professional accomplishment and for the example he has set for students, his alma mater, Bowling Green University honored him as the Outstanding High School Coach of the Year on Thursday, April 17. Also honored at the event were graduating seniors and the alumnus chosen as the Outstanding College Football Coach of the Year.

Hepner's association with South High began in 1968. He left a coaching spot at Western Michigan University to replace Ed Wernet, who had moved to newly ailt North High School as athletic director. Since then Hepner has accumulated nine Eastern Michigan League championships. He credits his success to the quality of students he has been able to recruit at South — "dependable, well-educated and intelligent

Although Grosse Pointe's student population has experienced a marked decline in recent years, Hepner still has well over 100 boys turning out for football each fall. He attributes this strong interest in part to the good working relationship he has with assistant coaches Jon Rice, Al Moebus and Bob Schroeder. Hepner, Rice and Moebus have worked together since 1968 and can rib Schroeder about being a newcomer -Schroeder has been a part of the team for only the last 13 years. In his 18 years, Hepner, his coaching staff, which includes George Duditch, Hank Lewandowski, Dan Wyers, John Whelan, Tom Steer, and Dan Griesbaum, has a 112-54

Hepner adds that his close working relationship with athletic director Chuck Hollosy has been a key to "my lasting this long as a head football coach.

Hepner's wife, Stephany, and their two children, Chad and Kimberly, joined him at the April ceremony, as did many old friends including Doyt Perry, the football coach at Bowling Green when Hepner was there.

'Sweet Liberty' is pure, enjoyable Alda

By Pat Paholsky

The audience applauded when Alan Alda's movie, "Sweet Liber-' ended. It's that kind of movie. One hour and 45 minutes of pure entertainment aided by a tightly written script that moves the action along at a nice clip. There was no noticeable fidegting by the audience and the movie house was packed.

Alan Alda, who wrote and directed the movie, stars as a college professor and Pulitzer Prizewinning historian who has written a book about the American Revolution. The book is sold to Hollywood and when the movie company comes to town to film the Gould, played by Bob Hoskins, is story, Alda gets caught up in a wonderfully wacky summer.

He's at a crossroads in his personal life — another professor at the college, Gretchen, played by Lise Hilboldt, is content having an affair with him, but refuses to live with him unless they are married. And he wants to live with her, but he doesn't want to get married. So when Hollywood takes over the small town in North Carolina, the frustrated professor gets involved with a fervor. The fire is lit when he learns that the script bears little resemblance to the

a hack and a sycophant who will do anything for recognition. Hoskins gives the character a human quality and makes him a loveable liar.

The movie within the movie is written to appeal to moviegoers between 12 and 22, who comprise the majority of the audience, according to the director, played by Saul Rubinek. It's essential to do three things to make a successful movie, he says. They are 1) defy authority; 2) destroy property; and 3) take people's clothes off.

The American Revolution certainly defied authority, he says, and there was a lot of property destroyed. So the only thing left is to take people's clothes off and the movie will be a hit, he feels.

And while the young director is determined to follow his formula, Alda is determined to preserve the integrity of his book. What fol-lows is one funny scene after an-

Other cast members include Michael Caine, who plays the leading man in the movie, Michael Pfeiffer, who plays his leading lady, and Lillian Gish, who as Alda's dotty mother won't go into her kitchen, because she believes the devil has moved in there. Gish, who will be 87 years old, gives her role a broad humor.

'Sweet Liberty" is pure Alda and it's enjoyable from beginning to end. One would not expect less from the star of M*A*S*H, the hit TV series that ran for 11 years. Alan Alda is one of those rare actors who knows how to be genuinely funny and intelligent at the same time.

After a succession of films, he made his debut as a screenwriter with "The Seduction of Joe Tynan," and followed that up with "The Four Seasons" which he wrote, directed and starred in.

The only fault with "Sweet Libery" is the ending — it's too pat and somewhat corny, but that's only a minor aberration in an otherwise entertaining movie. It's rated PG.

Ben Jabituya (Fisher Stevens), Dr. Newton Crosby (Steven Guttenberg) and Stephanie Speak (Ally Sheedy), who believe that Number Five is alive, try to coax the robot into trusting them.

'Short Circuit': A film to enjoy

By Michael Chapp

Number Five is a robot - a Strategic Artificially Intelligent Nuclear Transport, to be more specific. He was built, along with four others just like him, to be impervious to harm. The army says he's able to go behind enemy lines and blow up the bad guys without getting destroyed himself. During an outdoor demonstration, Number Five is struck by lightning. He gets shoved out of his Army base with the trash, and is unleashed on society.

Needless to say, the army brass is worried. They want him destroved before he can harm anyone. But they need not worry. Number Five wouldn't touch a fly: During the storm, something happened to his circuitry.
He thinks he's alive. And darn it all if the audience won't feel the same way

"Short Circuit" owes a great deal to "E.T." That's obvious. The film takes some of the best ideas from Spielberg's classic like the interaction of an innocent newcomer with an even more innocent human compatriot while The Establishment tries to foil their friendship. Likewise, it borrows from last year's "Explorers," in which the "aliens" found mimicry of human TV shows to be very amusing.

But the material is still just fresh enough to be enjoyable for viewers, despite some obvious flaws in the storyline.

Number Five is befriended by Stephanie Speck (Ally Sheedy), a pretty young woman who runs a catering service and takes care of animals. When the two of them discover that the army intends to flee. Indeed, the only officials who want to keep Number Five alive are its creator, Newton Crosby (Steve Guttenberg) and his assistant Ben (Fisher Stevens), but only if they can be convinced Number Five really is alive, and only if this can be done before the army hit-men, led by Scroeder (G.W. Bailey) get to Number Oh, yeah. There is one other obstacle: Number Five's counterparts, the ones who were supposed to be impervious to any harm. When Number Five gets ahold of them, they end up doing a Three Stooges routine. They report back to the brass, with crossed wires — courtesy of Number Five — and crossed eyes, because of some Stooge-esque twanking. Eventually, Crosby is persuaded that Number Five really is alive, and a climatic standoff with the hit-squad ends in a fiery explosion. But the "E.T." style magic is here, and one can feel confident knowing the film will not end sadly. Number Five, along with Crosby and Stephanie, heads off to a home in the country — and a life of fun and happiness as a human Sure, there's some holes in the plot: How did Number Five incapacitate three indestructable robots? Why did Crosby invent killing machines if, as he says, he completely disagrees with any killing for war purposes? The list goes on and on. But, luckily for viewers, so does the enjoyment. There are some prime one-liners in the film, as well as a story that, if one can suspend disbelief long enough, is captivating and fun.

deactivate Number Five, they Children will be especially pleased with the film, since they won't notice any problems, and will focus instead on the charming personality of Number Five. One can expect to see Number Five Robot toys in children's departments very soon.

Guttenberg, though a bit stiff at times, is still a congenial actor who knows how to get a good laugh from his audience. And Sheedy has a great time as the quirky Stephanie, adding just enough eccentricity to her innocence to come across Crosby's Indian sidekick, Stevens is asked to do nothing but spit out misworded cliches - "It's time to slap the pavement," he says as he pulls the truck out of the garage — but in such a role, timing is everything. And Stevens has everything in his appearances.

One could do an analysis of the picture. One could say that its message is about the sanctity of life, that everyone should be given a chance to be who they are. etc. And one would be right. These are honorable themes for a

But more fun will be guaranteed if viewers just enter the theater with defenses down and sense of humor up. See the film from a kid's point of view. Forget themes, messages, plot problems and stolen premises. Just have a

March of Dimes-Sponsored Research Looks Into Later-Life Birth Defects

by Vassilis I. Zannis, Ph.D. Section of Molecular Genetics Boston University Medical School

When we think of "birth defects," the image that comes to mind is of sick newborn babies and disorders present at birth. But that is only a part of the picture.

Perhaps even more common are birth defects that don't reveal themselves until later in life. These include the biggest killer in the U.S. today: cardiovascular disease, including stroke, heart disease, and some kinds of senility.

Many people who develop early arteriosclerosis (hardening of the arteries) where born with an inherited disorder, transmitted to them in their genes. Some of these disorders affect the way fats and cholesterol move from one tissue to another, which causes an increase in the amount of those substances in our bloodstream.

High levels of fat and cholesterol lead to a buildup of fatty materials on the walls of our arteries. This blocks the flow of blood to the heart, brain, and other vital organs, causing damage to them and even leading to death.

With support from the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation, first at Children's Hospital in Boston and now at Boston University, my colleagues and I have been studying some of the genetic defects which result in increased amounts of cholesterol and fats in the bloodstream. We are looking for ways to identify persons at risk for expressing inherited diseases of "old

If caught early enough, a low- fat, low-cholesterol diet and in some cases drugs can prevent or slow down the development of cardiovascular

HIGH CHOLESTEROL PROBLEMS

A routine test performed by physicians during physical examinations can measure the amount of cholesterol and fats in the bloodstream. The amount of these substances in normal people varies substantially, depending on age, sex, and diet.

Increased cholesterol concentration in the bloodstream increases the risk of heart disease. For instance, a doubling of the normal cholesterol level (from 200 to 400 milligrams per deciliter of blood) has been shown to increase the risk of heart disease 10.6 times

How frequently are these diseases inherited?

Based on the work of the last 30 years, we estimate that at least one percent of the population inherits an abnormal gene for one of the proteins that transports fat and cholesterol to the tissues.

When the gene is defective it produces a defective protein which fails to perform its proper role. This results in a disorder which may eventually cause early cardiovascular disease.

Some of these disorders are rather common in the population. For instance, a disease called by the unwieldy name of familial hypercholesterolemia (FH), affects about one in 500 persons. Persons with it have a strong predisposition for early arteriosclerosis.

Far less frequently, someone inherits a "double dose" of the FH gene-that is, one from each parent-and usually suffers severe, often fatal heart disease before age 20. Another common disease which we have been studying, known by the abbreviation of Type III HLP, affects about one in every 1,000 persons and also causes early arteriosclerosis.

TESTS PREVENT DISEASE

Most of the time, these disorders are not detected by tests until later in life, when cardiovascular disease may already have set in. Instead of waiting to see the symptoms of the disease, it would be better to detect the defective genes or the abnormal proteins responsible for the disorder when the patient is a newborn.

Tests to do this have now been developed for a number of these disorders, including FH and Type III HLP. So if a baby is born into a family with a history of one of these disorders, we can determine early in the child's life if he or she will develop the same problem.

And that means we can intervene with a diet, or possibly drugs, to prevent or at least slow development of cardiovascular disease.

Although cardiovascular diseases are called "diseases of the aged," some of them are, in a very real sense, birth defects. Fortunately, the March of Dimes has recognized the need to find out more about these disorders—how to detect them in the young and how to treat them in persons of all ages. Today, we understand well only some of these diseases. But scientific progress promises that in the near future we will be able to identify most of the genes and the corresponding proteins responsible for genetic disease-a giant step towards their conquest.

Vitamin Use During Pregnancy: Moderation is the Key

True or false: If small amounts of vitamins are good for you, very large amounts must be even better.

The answer is 'false' especially for pregnant women, according to the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation.

Excessive doses of certain vitamins, taken for a long time, may be as harmful as vitamin deficiencies, and could have lasting effects on unborn babies.

There is doubt about whether the average American needs to take vitamins to stay healthy. Most nutritionists believe that Americans generally meet their vitamin needs through diet alone. But individual vitamin needs can vary. Pregnant and nursing women may run short of vitamins despite diets that would be adequate under other circumstances.

Vitamins are chemicals needed in very small quantities to trigger certain essential metabolic functions in the body. Without them we develop deficiency diseases such as scurvy, rickets, and night-blindness.

While pregnant and nursing women have an increased need for almost all vitamins, the additional requirements are small and most can be met by a wellbalanced diet. Folic acid, one of the B complex vitamins, is an exception. It is needed for normal production of red blood cells and other fast-multiplying cells, such as those of a developing fetus.

Because folic acid requirements double during pregnancy, most obstetricians recommend that pregnant women take a multivitamin supplement containing folic acid to support fetal growth and to prevent maternal anemia.

Multivitamin supplements that include folic acid also may play a special role in prevention of neural tube defects (NTDs) such as spina bifida. NTDs are defects of the spine and brain that affect about one in every 1,000 births in the United States. Several studies have suggested that women with poor diets, and low levels of folic acid in their blood, are more likely to have babies with NTDs.

Additional studies are now under way to compare vitamin use by mothers of NTD children and by mothers of normal children and those with other types of birth defects.

Despite their value, vitamins may carry substantial risk to the fetus if taken by the mother in very large quantities. This is particularly true of fat-soluble vitamins, especially A and D, which build up in fatty tissues of the bo intake exceeds need. Pregnant women and others have nothing to fear from naturally vitaminrich foods in ordinary amounts, or from ordinary vitamin supplements such as the pregnancy formulas often prescribed. Harmful effects of vitamins are likely to occur only with overdoses of artificially concentrated vitamins-liquids, pills or capsules-especially in combination with an unbalanced diet.

Vitamin A in large doses was one of the first substances shown to cause malformations in newborn test animals, producing defects of the brain, spine, eyes, and urogenital system. The same types of birth defects have now occurred in several babies whose mothers took a potent vitamin A derivative, known commercially as Accutane, early in pregnancy. Because of earlier animal experiments, Accutane, which is approved by the F.D.A. for treatment of severe acne, carries strong warnings against its use during pregnancy. Most physicians require a pregnancy test before prescribing the drug.

Until recently, the water-soluble B complex vitamins and vitamin C were considered harmless in large doses, since amounts in excess of the bodily needs are lost, mostly in urine. But megadosing still can be dangerous. High doses of vitamin C during pregnancy can make a baby dependent on these abnormally high doses, leading to scurvy after birth. Vitamin B6, which is recommended by some vitamin enthusiasts for treatment of depression and premenstrual syndrome, and for body-builders on high-protein diets, can cause numbness. le walking, and other symptoms similar to those of multiple sclerosis if taken at high doses for a long time. Although some studies suggest that pregnant women may not get enough B6 through diet alone, adequate amounts are contained in the multivitamin preparations recommended by most obstetricians.

According to the March of Dimes, sensible nutrition alone is no guarantee against birth defects.

Taken in ordinary amounts, vitamins may prove to be a remarkably simple means of preventing many cases of neural tube defects, but in megadoses they may cause temporary or permanent problems for newborn babies. Until further research provides a precise blueprint of vitamin needs, moderation is the key-unless a physician prescribes a specific vitamin for a diagnosed vitamin-deficiency problem.
