

Clean steal

Three runs, on two hits, and three stolen bases.

There were no errors about it. First, second and third were stolen cleanly last week from the Grosse Pointe North High School ball diamond, according to Woods police.

The bases were reported missing by a school custodial worker, but Woods police later made the tag.

Police located the bases near Vernier Road, and are investigating the foul play.

UFO over Woods

Strange doings in Grosse Pointe Woods last week.

A Harper Woods man spotted a UFO while on Hawthorne.

The man told police he spotted a "dark airplane-type object" at about 2:40 p.m. June 15.
He said the object was travelin at an altitude used for passenger planes, and claimed the object left its horizontal flight path and then traveled vertically at a 90-degree angle.

We've seen similar driving antics on I-94.

Like father, like son

Young Marshall Geltz of Grosse Pointe Woods got his first haircut Monday. A momentous occasion indeed for any little boy. So what, you say. Well, it was exactly 30 years ago to the day that his father, Lincoln Geltz, got his first haircut. In fact, the event was a fea-ture story on the front page of the Daily Monitor Leader (fore-runner of the Macomb Daily) in Mom Mary Beth said her young son had gorgeous curls, but it was getting too hot for him, so the couple decided to get his hair cut the day after Father's Day. They pulled out the article and discovered these amazing coincidences: Dad had his first haircut June 16, 1956; son June 16, 1986. Dad lived on Huntington at the time, the same street the family lives on now. And father and son were both the same age - 21/2 when they lost their curls.

Believe it or not.

Whowuzit whodunnit?

Graduation ceremonies were under way last week at North High School when an airplane trailing a banner circled the outdoor gathering. The banner read: "The real graduation was last night." The plane circled about five times, according to one spectator, interrupting the proceedings.

Since South High's graduation ceremony was held the night before, moré than one person suspects someone from South of doing the dastardly

Center asks equal enforcement at parks

Grosse Pointe News

By Peter A. Salinas

Grosse Pointe's Inter-Faith Center for Racial Justice sent a letter and a copy of its policy statement to each city manager and police chief in the five Pointes asking equitable enforcement of park regulations among all resi-

The policy statement indicated that there may be racial discrimination at parks.

"... incidents of arbitrary enforcement of the residents-only ordinances based on race have periodically been reported to the center and appear to be an ongoing prob-

The letter sent to local officials noted that these occurrences "may be isolated, however, systematic efforts should be made to eliminate them altogether . ."

Vivian Buffington, executive director, said the letter and policy statement was a direct result of the controversy surrounding the Dearborn parks residents-only ordinance.

Buffington noted the executive board decided that with controversy swirling around the residents-only rule in Dearborn, a policy statement was needed from

Council says no to more liquor licenses

War Memorial turned down again

By Nancy Parmenter The War Memorial's latest attempt to obtain a liquor license was turned down Monday, but the center still has at least one arrow left in its quiver. At a hearing tentatively set for July 10, War Me-morial officials plan to appeal the Liquor Control Commission's denial of their request for a Class C resort license.

The Grosse Pointe Farms council voted 4-3 not to increase the number of liquor licenses in the city. Although the issue was framed officially in terms of the Farms policy of issuing only five of the seven quota licenses available, both the council and the audience aimed most of their comments at the War Memorial.

Speakers for and against the War Memorial spent an hour-anda-half talking to a crowd that overflowed down the steps of the council chamber and into the hallway. Comments were punctuated by loud applause and muttered com-

As was the case at a hearing exactly a year ago, liquor license opponent Paul Marco and War Memorial officials vied to emcee the proceedings, introducing speakers and making sure the council heard more comments from their side than from the other. Mayor James Dingeman attempted to close the public comment period after an hour and was dissuaded by residents who had not yet had an opportunity to speak.

Mayor Pro Tem Joseph Fromm

challenged Marco's role as "concerned citizen." "As the sole shareholder of one of the five licenses in the city, you have a vested interest," Fromm said. Marco's attorney had described him to council in April as the current owner of the former Bronze Marco denied that he is the sole shareholder. "The shares are in my name, but I represent others, he said. "For the purposes of the Liquor Control Commission, I have taken title, but it is on behalf of a group of undisclosed investors . . . The question here is totally unrelated to that. It's irrelevant — you're trying to embarrass me." Resident Chris Dodds, a drug and alcohol abuse counselor, made an impassioned plea to council to consider the unspoken message sent by licensing the War Me-

"We hve been focusing on this issue for a long time," she said. "Listen to what our young people say back to us. They don't believe anybody can have fun without alcohol . . . I don't believe alcohol is necessary for every picnic, every funraiser, every wedding."

Resident Ralph McElvenny said, "The problem I have with the application is that they've never demonstrated to me why they can't handle the situation they now have. It's a question of management."

War Memorial board member Alex Suczek explained that the center is "a gracious place, the living room of Grosse Pointe," and that it is difficult to cut off the flow of liquor brought to the center by individuals.

"They require an alcoholic beverage as part of the conviviality of their celebration," Suczek said. 'The service of alcohol is an accomplished fact. The control that licensure would provide is very much in the interest of the citizens of Grosse Pointe.'

Marco charged that the "real reason" the War Memorial wants the license is to attract more acti-

Former Councilwoman Nancy Waugaman suggested that a liquor license would increase activity and create parking problems. "It would cause an influx of people into the community - we're already concerned about that," she said.
War Memorial officials repeated their position that a license would not mean an open bar and that the level of activity would remain the same. They say that a license would give the center more control over drinking and would protect the center's assets against liability suits.

The motion to increase the number of licenses was made by Councilman Bruce Rockwell and seconded by Gail Kaess. Only Fromm joined them in voting yes.

War Memorial attorney John Rickel indicated after the meeting that the center has not yet used up all its options. An appeal to the Liquor Control Commission is now in the preliminary stages.

The War Memorial had tried to buy a Class C resort license from a bar in Hillman, Mich., but was turned down by the Farms council in April. Center officials at that time characterized the request to council as an attempt to get off dead center.

The LCC's Ken Wozniak said he could not comment on the specifics of the resort license case, but that in general, the commission does not override local jurisdiction. "Anybody has a right to appeal," Wozniak said. "And there is a loophole. For example, if (a city) has been sitting on their (unfilled quota licenses) for years and years and won't issue them, then in effect the quota is filled. But in general, the prerogative of the city is domi-

In next week's issue . . .

Thirty years ago, Grosse Pointe, Mich., and Shaker Heights, Ohio, were twin jewels among American suburbs. Blessed with excellent school systems, elegant neighborhoods, natural beauty, among the highest per capita incomes in the nation, both communities represented the kind of goal Americans aspired to.

The three intervening decades have brought pressures on the inner ring of American suburbs. They are faced with aging housing stock, crime imported from bordering inner cities, declining population, flight of the middle class to the far suburbs. Crime, schools and property values have become paramount concerns.

Grosse Pointe shares these concerns. Most of its grand old mansions are gone. Much of metropolitan Detroit's money has flown to Bloomfield Hills. There is more small crime than there used to be. But careful maintenance has kept the neighborhoods lovely. The schools are still ranked near the top. Houses are selling better than ever - at bigger prices.

It is always of interest to examine the approaches others take to one's own problems. Next week the Grosse Pointe News will take a look at Shaker Heights to see how it is handling its version of the suburban blues. Are the schools still good? Is the tax base solid? How are property values holding up? What is Shaker Heights doing about it?

We hope that what we have may be of value, in showing as new possibilities for familiar problems, in pointing up mis-takes we may avoid making, or in validating our own experi-ago, the old man was one of the organizers of rural Solidarity. Today, he is paying for it.

Imprisoned three times previously, the 72-year-old man was singled out recently when the Polish government made a sweeping reduction of prison sentences. Peliga was the only prisoner without a reduction.

"This goes against the grain of Polish culture, where age tends to be revered," said Susan Krolikowski of Grosse Pointe Woods, who has made Josef Peliga a personal crusade. As a volunteer for Amnesty International, Krolikowski has made many cases into personal crusades, writing letters to government officials, court officials - even jailers. Anyone who will listen.

'We don't pretend to understand why the government is so afraid of him," Krolikowski said. "But Amnesty is concerned about his health and whether he is receiving any medical attention. I think the gentleman has a lot of guts.

Krolikowski is the coordinator of Amnesty's Eastern European Regional Action Network. She brings information on prisoners in eight countries to monthly meetings of the local Amnesty chapter, which has a number of members from Grosse Pointe.

> "We have heard, for example, that the Yugoslav bureaucracy is forbidden to throw anything away," she said. "We reckon that at some point it will be cheaper to release the prisoner than to buy another filing cabinet.'

> Grunow characterized the personal pay-off as "small rewards" that keep the members coming back. "Very recently, we heard that a Yugoslav prisoner we were writing about was released after 11 years," she said. "We had never heard from him or the government or anybody — but now we have heard from him in Serbo-Croatian. It was very moving."

The man, a college professor of history and a member of the Communist party, was jailed for dissidence against the Tito government. Grunow said he was charged with organizing antigovernment meetings at his seaside villa and sentenced beyond the maximum.

'As far as Amnesty could tell, he had never advocated violence," she said, "but we could never even get a transcript of his trial."

Between 15 and 20 people attend a typical eastside Amnesty monthly meeting, but there is also a whole apparatus for people who don't attend, but want to write letters. The bulk of Amnesty dues goes to pay the researchers, according to Krolikowski.

"The backbone of Amnesty is their credibility," she said.

The organization, which is 25 years old this year, won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1977. During its quarter-century of operation, Amnesty has helped convince more than half of the governments in the United Nations to ratify a worldwide treaty limiting political arrest, torture and execution, according to an Amnesty statement. But Amnesty wants international supervision and on-site inspections to enforce the treaties.

The local Amnesty group meets at Sacred Heart Seminary in down-town Detroit on the third Monday of every month. "It's a grim topic and the members get discouraged," Krolikowski said, "but on the other hand, when you get news that someone is released and you may

Library system gets boost

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Modernization and expansion plans for the Grosse Pointe library system got two boosts June 10. The Board of Education approved $270,000 worth of computer work and the hiring of consultants to study space needs for the public

The computer work is the first phase of a five-year plan for installation of equipment at school and public libraries. The first phase will permit upgrading the central processing unit, a link-up with the two high schools and conversion of card catalog records at the public libraries and high schools, according to Dr. Charles Hanson, director of libraries.

Of the total, $210,000 will go to computer implementation costs, with $60,000 being used to convert the card catalog records, Han-

Replacement of the central processing unit, which will be able to handle more information quicker, will occur the first week in July, Hanson

There may be a three-or four-day period where computer service is interrupted because of installation of new equipment, but patrons will still be able to use most library services, Hanson said. There is a back-up system that can be used.

Funds to cover the computer work have been allocated in the library budget.

The board did add a provision to the contract that, should a bond issue be made for the library project, the $270,000 would be considered a bondable expense.

The board also approved $23,300 in consultant fees to study the needs of the library system and to decide if a new building is required. The Friends of the Grosse Pointe Library donated $10,000 to pay part of the cost. The library budget will pay

The consultants will be asked to decide what types of services will be needed in the future, what space is needed and whether more staff should be added, how to incorporate non-traditional services into the operation, the need for more personal service and how computerization will fit into the system.

Osler & Milling will also inspect each existing public library build-

Two residents indicted for operating betting ring

Two Grosse Pointe men and a former Pointe resident were indicted along with 11 others June 10 for operating a sports gambling ring, according to a federal grand jury.

Michael Polizzi, 62, of Grosse Pointe Shores, Mario A. Agosta, 58, of the Woods, and former Farms resident Vito "Billy Jack" Giacalone, 63, of Sterling Heights were taken into custody June 10.

Federal law enforcement officials estimate that the gambling ring took in $250,000 weekly during a four-month period in 1982. Giacalone is said to have received a $5,000 payment before anyone could set up an illegal sports betting operation.

John Anthony, a Federal Bur-eau of Investigation spokesper-son, said that there was no tie-in to the gambling operation and the Pointes, other than that two of the men arrested live here.

"They usually don't make a mess in their own backvards when they are perpetrating criminal activities elsewhere," Anthony said.

Polizzi has been identified by the FBI as an important figure in local organized crime, and is the son-in-law of the late John "Papa John" Priziola, a reputed leader in Detroit organized crime.

Polizzi was convicted of six counts of racketeering-related charges a year ago in San Diego federal court. He was sentenced to two years in prison and a $10,000 fine, but is free on a $100,000 bond, pending appeal, according to federal authorities.

Agosta, along with Giacalone and four others, is charged with operating a racketeer-influenced corrupt organization. Polizzi is charged with operating an illegal gambling business.

Polizzi was released on a $50,000 bond, and all of the other defendants were released on $25,000 bonds, after being ordered to surrender their passports.

and the Lions Club of Grosse Pointe Woods donated $1,000 each to be used to buy materials to adapt computers in the visually impaired classroom for use by blind students. The Grosse Pointe Garden Club donated $500 to be used for site beautification at Maire Elementary School.

The Foundation for Academic Enrichment will contribute up to $1,500 toward the cost of fine arts programs for elementary schools next school year. Principals will request PTOs to donate a like amount for the program.

The $3,000 will bring Guan Hong-Jun, a master performer with the Peking Opera, who will present an educational program appropriate for all grade levels about the history, costumes and performances of the opera as well as Chinese culture and lifestyles.

Alternatives to salt

High blood pressure affects more than 60 million people in the United States and is a major cause of heart attacks, strokes, and kidney dis ase, according to the American Heart Association. Sodium intake has been shown to be a contributing factor in high blood pressure.

A people sodium intake for adults is about 3,000 mg. daily, according to Crittenton Hospital's Chief Dietician Ann Greer, yet Americans average about 4,000 to 6,000 mg. You can cut your sodium intake, and lower your risk factors, by getting to know a few "userfriendly" seasonings:

For poultry: Garlic, oregano, rosemary, savory, sage; For pork: coriander, cumin, garlic, ginger, hot pepper, sage, savory, thyme; For fruit: anise, cinnamon, coriander, cloves, ginger, lemon verbena, mint, rose geranium, sweet cicely; For vegetables: basil, curnet, chervil, chievs, dill, French tarragon, marjoram, mint, parsley, pepper, thyme.

Lieutenant hangs up badge after 36 years

By Pat Paholsky

On his first day of work as a Grosse Pointe Park policeman, Tom Martin had to come in with $50 in cash as a down payment for his uniform. The city then took $10 out of each pay until the total of $500 was paid off. He earned $285 a month.

That was 36½ years ago, and Martin, now a lieutenant, reflected over the changes that have occurred in law enforcement since

There were no police academies. "We arrived for work, were sworn in, handed a gun and badge and told to go be a policeman," he said.

"It was all on-the-job training." Now the city supplies officers with a complete set of uniforms.

And where years ago, there were policemen who hadn't completed grammar school, today almost all police departments require at least a high school diploma or its equivalent. Most departments require at least two years of college, Martin said.

The restrictions and various court decisions have also changed law enforcement. "The officer is much more liable today," Martin said, "and he has to be concerned with lawsuits. Certainly the city and departments are very con-cerned about lawsuits."

Martin, who will be retiring from the department soon, moved to the Park with his family in 1931. He had two years in at the University of Detroit when, he says, "I got tired of going to college and I de-cided to take a little sabbatical."

He said he had always been interested in police work and his original intention was to work for the Park for two years "for experience and then go to the U.S. Department of Treasury. The two years stretched into five and then into seven when he was promoted to corporal and became a platoon quickly. "It's just unbelievable," he said. "There've been an awful lot of faces. It went by fast."

He was nicknamed Black Cloud, because of all the disasters that took place while I was on shift."

Martin said the most enjoyable aspect of the job is dealing with people. "Most people are most appreciative of what you're doing or attempting to do. You deal with people in stress and you're doing something for them.

For people who want to get into law enforcement, Martin said, besides a college degree, a person should have an interest in people 'not emphathy or sympathy, but an interest in people. People are your stock in trade, whether a criminal or resident.'

He says, with some satisfaction, that he's never shot anyone. "I've very much enjoyed working in this community." His co-workers, he said, are of the finest caliber.

Over the years, Martin, who isn't married, traveled all over the world with relatives. He's been to Europe six or eight times, he said. naming about 14 countries. Other off-time activities include golf and coaching. Martin coached baseball for the Catholic Youth Organiza-tion and Detroit recreation leagues for about 25 years.

After spending almost all of his life in law enforcement, he is planning, literally, to put himself out to pasture. He has 20 acres near Yale where he hopes to build a house soon and do some farming. And his thoughts nowadays wander to farm equipment and such.

Make plans

By Mike Andrzejczyk Planning to go the fireworks Sunday, June 29, at Parcells Middle School? Well, it's time to plan what you're going to pack in the picnic basket. And it's a good thing to put two things high on that list; common sense and courtes Your only limits on the opulence and breadth of the picnic you pack comes in the amount of time you have to prepare and the limits of your imagination, according to Candy Hartson, who teaches a classes in panache picnicking at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

"Picnics used to be dead, but there's a new interest there, Hartson says. And the variety of thermal containers and plastic dishware and utensils make putting together a picnic easy, she

Planning, care and packing are what make a picnic, but there's one thing essential to all of them, Hartson says; a garbage bag for clean-up afterward.

When you're planning what to take to the fireworks, however, you should leave behind the wine, beer, hibachi and sparklers, police say.

The evening begins at 8 p.m. at the school at Mack and Vernier. Last year, the event drew an estimated 10,000 people to the area. With the crowd espected to be near the same size, plan on getting an early start and leave a lot of time at the end of the display for getting

Those who do park on residential streets should show their appreciation by not littering lawns after the diplay. They can also keep from walking across lawns and ask before parking on private property, police say.

There are a number of municipally-owned lots in the area of the school. Because it's a weekend, there's no need to feed meters, police add.

There are two lots that will be closed to public parking. The two school lots will be reserved for band members, special guests and others. Sunningdale will be closed to traffic from Vernier to Lochmoor that evening, police say.

When looking for a place to spread out the picnic, stay away from the medians. They belong to Wayne County. Public safety officers and auxiliaries will be on hand to route spectators to safe, legal sitting spots.

If you're sitting on Parcells grounds, don't bother to break out the bubbly. Consumption of alcohol is forbidden on public school pro-

Officers circulate throughout the crowd during the evening to dis-suade parents from allowing children to play with fireworks, like sparklers. Users of unauthorized fireworks may find their evening cut short with possible arrest and fine for violation of the city's ordinance against unauthorized pyrotechnics.

Because the authorized display begins at full dark, it might be wise to bed the young ones down for a streets near the school may want few minutes, fireworks organizers to put their cars in the driveway to say. The pyrotechnics company will fire test volleys during the evening, but won't begin the display until full dark, when the rockets will be most visible.

Last year, the display got off about 30 minutes late because of an unusually high ceiling and a full moon, display organizers say. This year, the full moon comes a week before the display, but keep the blankets for the kids on hand, just

Gene Taylor, the emcee who had to fill that 30 minutes last year, comes back this year for a repeat performance. Taylor has a number of radio, television and personal appearances to his credit.

Taylor's work will come before and during intermissions of the Austin-Moro band, a 17-member dance and jazz band that has appeared at the Detroit Jazz Festival and the Montreux, Switzerland Jazz Festival. Austin-Moro plans an evening of big band, jazz and traditional American tunes, according to music coordinator Jim Hohmeyer, who also teaches music at University Liggett

If a lot of this sounds like the same stuff as last year, you're right. Also the same as last year is the display's need for donations. Send checks or money orders to Mack Avenue USA, 17401 Mack Avenue, Detroit 48224.

When it's over, people leaving the area are asked to use a little extra caution and patience.

Those who have to get around are urged to take Lakeshore Road or Harper, since the Mack-Vernier intersection will be crowded before, during and after the display. For east-west trips, try Moross and Nine Mile Road. Remember, speed limit on residential streets is 25 miles an hour.

If foul weather cancels the fireworks Sunday, the whole affair goes off Thursday, July 3.

No surprise in school vote

The re-election of Jon Gandelot to the Grosse Pointe Board of Education was no great surprise. The Pointes have a tradition of re-electing board members unless there are compelling reasons for a change. This year there weren't any such reasons in the minds of the majority.

Gandelot saw the results as evidence of community support for what he and the board majority have been doing. He had run on his two-term record, emphasizing his experience, leadership and contributions to the board's fis-cal policies which have kept school tax in-creases at a minimum. The results obviously support his view.

Cindy Pangborn saw the results somewhat differently. She received 41 percent of the vote and carried Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods, factors which she regarded as giving credence to some of the things she had been talking about during the campaign. She is right in at least one respect. Competition for elective posts is beneficial because it tends to sharpen the issues during the campaign.

There is also something to be said for Mrs. Pangborn's suggestion, in her call to congratulate Gandelot on his victory, that the two sides the candidates represented in the campaign begin working together for the system. Working together, of course, means different things to different people.

It does not necessarily mean that the loser in the election can impose her views on the board. But it could mean closer working relationships if both sides are willing to agree on some things, disagree on others without being disagreeable and perhaps even compromise on still other issues on which full agreement cannot be

Prior to the election, the Grosse Pointe News said that the two candidates have many things in common. And they have. Above all, they share a common interest in maintaining the excellence of the Grosse Pointe school system. There are, of course, different ways of achieving that goal and different ways of interpreting excellence. But if the candidates and their backers can unite on the overall aim while continuing constructive discussion of issues on which disagreements still exist, the board and the system will benefit.

One election disappointment was the small voter turnout. Fewer than 10 percent of the eligible voters went to the polls, hardly a compliment to a community that prides itself on taking its citizenship duties seriously. On the other hand, the low turnout also reflects the fact that the challenger was not able to make a convincing case against the current board chairman. As a result, many satisfied people simply stayed home.

deserved tribute to Soapy

One of Grosse Pointe's most distinguished citizens was honored in Lansing last week to mark two occasions: his more than 50 years of public service and his impending retirement as chief justice of the Michigan Supreme

We refer, of course, to G. Mennen Williams popularly known as Soapy or Mennen — who has held public office longer than any other Michigan resident, in memory and perhaps in the state's history, and in a host of Democratic administrations, state and national.

Many Pointers joined in the celebration even though the Pointes consistently vote Re-publican while Williams always has been a Democrat in politics. But Williams and most Pointers have felt they could disagree without being disagreeable. And so it has been that Democrat Williams won substantial support in Republican Grosse Pointe, even though he still has his critics in this community.

In this era of anti-heroes, it is remarkable that a man could serve as long as Williams has in public life. Yet he has had to survive some disappointments, too, along the way. When he was defeated in 1966 for the U.S. Senate in his only political loss, political observers said that Williams had been forgotten by the younger generations who could not remember his six terms of service as governor from 1948 to 1960. But he bounced back into public life as U.S. ambassador to the Philippines and in 1970 showed that he could still win statewide support by being elected an associate justice of the Michigan Supreme Court, where he has served ever since.

Under the Michigan Constitution, no one older than 70 can run for a judicial post and soat the end of December he will retire from the state's highest court. He has served the last three years as chief justice, a position to which he was elected by his colleagues on the high

In its story on "Soapy Williams Day," the New York Times recalled that Williams was one of the Democratic Party's "class of 1948," an election year that elevated Adlai E. Stevenson to the governorship of Illinois and Hubert H. Humphrey and Lyndon Johnson to the U.S. Senate. Williams, then a member of the state Liquor Control Commission, upset the Demo-cratic as well as the Republican establishments to win the governorship. That election converted Michigan "from a one-party, conservative Republican state to a two-party state that was more socially conscious," in Williams' opinion.

Over the years Williams has won many other titles, including assistant attorney general for Michigan, U.S. Navy lieutenant commander, state liquor control commissioner, U.S. ambassador to the Philippines, justice of the Michigan Supreme Court and, finally, chief justice of the state's highest court.

It's truly a remarkable record and one well deserving of commendation on "Soapy Williams Day." Yet the New York Times erred in the headline on its story about the event when it said, "Soapy Williams to get a last hurrah." He'll continue to get many more hurrahs from his friends and admirers in the Pointes as well as in the nation as he returns to private life at the end of the year.

Say no to smoking

The U.S. Army has issued a ban on smoking and smokeless tobac-co on all its installations worldwide. The policy was designed out of concern for the health of the soldiers. An army spokesman explained that a person who smokes impairs his physical fitness, is sick more often, absent more frequently, is less efficient and dies earlier. If the U.S. Army can ban smoking worldwide, maybe as parents, teachers and administrators, we can do the same at our Grosse Pointe high schools out of concern for our children's health. I'm sure there are many parents, teachers, staff and students who agree that smoking should be banned on our high school campuses. It's time to stand up and say no to smoking!

Humility is admirable, but ...

When this letter appears, the much-debated election in Grosse Pointe Park will be history. Its result is not the topic of this letter.

What surprised me was that in your last issue (June 12) a resident of that city, Emanuel Tanay, should have been willing to reject the right of the people to "vote on an administrative decision . . . this" (i.e., such a vote) "is contrary to democratic traditions." An amazing statement!

Tanay says that he does not "consider himself sufficiently knowledgeable on this issue of consolidation to make an informed

He goes on to say that "I HOPE (emphasis mine) that the elected officials have the information and judgment which I lack. I will therefore vote in support of their decision." Well, such humility is admirable; but the right of the people to override their elected or appointed officials is even more basic in the great history of democratic traditions. There's a marvelous proverb that I read once that is very apt here. It goes like this: "There is one who knows more than anybody, and that is everybody.

Giamatti makes the majors

By jumping from the Ivy League to the National League, A. Bartlett Giamatti, the former president of Yale, has aroused consternation in the ranks of intellectuals as well as sports enthusiasts. All seem to be asking the same question: "What is going on here?

We don't pretend to know the answer to the question, but we do see many similarities between the two jobs. Both the presidency of Yale and the presidency of the National League are jobs that require good administrators. Both institutions deal primarily with young people, both require good attendance and both insist on adequate receipts. Both are hoary with tradition and both are concerned with payment of ath-

True, colleges and universities are trying to retain at least the aura of amateurism in athletics - and the Ivy League has come closer than most to achieving that goal — while baseball's owners are more concerned about the level of payment to individual players. The colleges worry about why and how the student athlete is paid, while baseball's moguls worry about how much the pro athlete gets.

Giamatti is not the first Ivy Leaguer to wind up in baseball. Several players who started out in the Ivy League made it to the major leagues. Several owners have been Ivy League graduates. And Bowie Kuhn, the former commissioner of baseball, was an Ivy Leaguer as a graduate of Princeton. But the Ivy League doesn't seem to have left much of a mark on the major leagues.

Nor can much hope be held out for Giamatti. He is a Boston Red Sox fan who failed to make the South Hadley (Mass.) High School team as a second baseman even though he later became its manager. But everyone knows that Boston is in the American League and what self-respecting fan of the Bosox or the Tigers or the Yankees or any other American League team would ever be willing to serve as president of the National League?

As a professor of Italian literature and a Renaissance scholar, perhaps Giamatti could improve the language and grammar of National League manager and even empires. What a cultural contribution Giamatti could make if he could persuade an umpire to sing out, when a player's desperate slide fails to reach home plate, "Out! Out, damned spot!" And maybe the example could even help Sparky Anderson correct his shattered syntax.

Would like to use pool To the Editor:

I read with interest and dismay the possible plans to tax by one mill or issue a bond spread out over 15 years. I strongly object to the money being spent on Lake-front Park for Grosse Pointe Woods. Years ago, when Lakefront Park was a nice place to lunch and swim (at the old small pool), I enjoyed going for the relaxation. Since the larger new pool was built, there is no area for older people to swim. You may be jumped on, and most certainly heavily splashed, from the antics of those uncontrollables in the pool. Too

Two years ago I went back. It was quiet in the pool house and I sought out a person in charge, to ask about swimming for older people. The person I spoke with informed me the pool was for teenagers and younger. We bus them in, he said, the buses run all day and are free.

I have paid taxes for 30 years, also paid school taxes all this time, and did not have a child in the school system. It would be great if I could use the pool. Why not have hours for adult swimming?

Instead I have to go somewhere else to swim and relax.

Women and the vote

Prime Time for senior citizens

By Marian Trainor

More than 100 years ago, 15 women led by Susan B. Anthony marched into a barber shop in Rochester, N.Y. They were not there to get haircuts. The boyish bob came much later. Nor were they there to audition for a barbershop quartet. They were there to register to vote, a privilege that is now so accepted that many fail to exer-credit laws are examples of policies that affect women in which women had little say.

Women's lack of representation makes a difference when tax or retirement programs are funded or cut, and in health care.

Ironically for many years thousands of volunteer hours contributed by women have helped to elect men. Although many have demonstrated strength and skill in formulating a successful political campaign for men, they them-selves have been reluctant to step forward as a candidate.

Money is often perceived as a problem. It is tough raising money to run for public office, but not any more so for women than men. It takes hard work, resourcefulness and a realization that no matter how much is pledged, only about one-third will be realized.

Politics is a rough business. Why do women want to get into it in the first place? There are many other avenues to power if that is what they seek and many that pay more money if financial gains is their purpose. Helen Boosalis, Democratic nominee for governor of Nebraska, says, "Women get into politics for umn two weeks ago about the odiousness of mowing the lawn. Well, I have one word to sum it up. Bunk! We're all Grosse Pointers here can we talk? We all know that there are only two kinds of people in the world — people who like to work in their yards, and, well, the other kind. I moved into a house with a yard last fall. I have to admit that for the last few years I've been living in apartments. But through that trying time I yearned for a yard of my own where I could get dirt under my fingernails and a sunburn on the back of my neck.

There wasn't much that could be done in the fall, past planting several bushels of spring bulbs. But in late February, when the promise of spring was just too tantibit. The seed catalogs came out. After a while the pages were starting to stick together from being drooled on.

I started seeds in flats in the house. It was one of those things that sort of gets away from you. Before long, every surface within a yard of a window was completely covered with cookie sheets covered with peat pots. Every day I would come home from work and sit down next to my seedlings to give them a pep talk.

"Come on now. Stand up straight. Be good and Mommy will take you outside to see the sunshine when it is warm."

As soon as the ground was warm enough to be worked, I was outside spading up beds for my dear little seedlings. I worked in manure and sand to lighten the heavy clay of our yard.

Then came that wonderful day when the season had progressed enough to put a delicate green blush on the lawn. I looked out the window and sighed in pleasure. Then I took a closer look. It wasn't grass - it was dandelions!

So began the battle of the century. I dug out dandelions with a trowel. I poisoned dandelions with broadleaf weedkiller. I scratched the little buggers out of the ground with my fingernails. We raged up and down the yard — sometimes I would have the upper hand, then the little buggers would retreat and mass for another attack, driving me back against the house.

Several bags of weed and feed later, I seemed to have won a partial victory. But then I looked over the fence into my neighbor's yard

— it was a sea of yellow. I wept.
But the yard did deliver its rewards. The grass turned a lush green and the bulbs I planted last fall bloomed in wonderful profusion. The strawberries in the borders produced big, lush red berries and the vegetable garden we planted sprouted in ordered rows of tender green shoots. The roses bloomed and the annual flowers I had painstakingly planted displayed bright, jewel-like colors.

I love to work in my yard. On the typical weekend, I go to bed early on Friday night in anticipation of getting up with the crack of dawn to weed the flowerbeds before the dew dries and the ground gets hard. As the sun rises in the sky,

Then I go around with a leaf and lawn bag, picking up all the debris of the day's work.

My brother finds me caught in the front door, trying to get out to the front with the vacuum cleaner, hung-up on the cord, a glassy expression in my eyes, whimpering something about messy trees.

Developer plans office building on Kercheval

By Pat Paholsky

A developer, who wants to put up a two-story office building on Kercheval in the Park, met with some resistance from nearby residents at a council meeting June

James Ferriole Jr., president of Ferriole-Petrie Properties, Inc., presented his proposal to the council and asked for a variance to the city's parking requirements.

He wants to erect an 11,000-square-foot building on the southwest corner of Kercheval and Beaconsfield. A gas station that has been vacant for years occupies the site.

Residents objected because of an already tight parking situation in the area. A combination office/ retail building will bring more people and more cars competing for the same residential street parking, compounding what is now an intolerable situation, they

"I hate to see this building not built," one man said, "but the city is at fault. The city should come up with parking on both sides of one spot for every 400 square feet the street."

James Ferriole Jr. stands next to the property on Kercheval where he hopes to construct a twostory office/retail building.

350 square feet of retail space and of office space. Using a formula of

City Manager John Crawford said the ordinance requires one off-street parking spot for every of the space. Using a formula of deducting 20 percent of total square footage as non-usable space, Crawford said the ordinance requires one of the space.

nance would require 29 to 33 offstreet parking spaces for the building. Ferriole said he could provide eight in the back of the building. Street parking of the side of the structure would yield four spots and another three in front, for a total of 15 spaces.

The ordinance, however, specifies off-street parking.

The nearly hour-long discussion among the council and members of the audience prompted Darrell Finken, owner of Sparky Herbert's, to speak in favor of the project.

Seven years ago this area was a ghetto, let's face it," Finken said. "Your lives are more secure because of the tax base and because of these projects. I live in the area and park there, too."

Councilman James Robson responded that the area was never a put in, the faster it leases." ghetto.

The council asked Ferriole to look into obtaining more off-street two weeks. It's scheduled to be discussed again Monday, June 23.

The building, according to Ferriole, will be a $750,000 structure of brass, glass and wood. "I want a signature building there, so when people drive by, they'll stop and wonder what's going on."

One-half of the first floor in the back would be on pedestals for parking, providing 13 spaces, he said. He is also discussing the possibility of valet parking with the variance."

another business in the area.

Plans provide for six offices upstairs and three down. Ferriole said he would reserve one office on the first level for his company, and he said he would like to lease the other two spaces to low-profile retail businesses, such as a coin collector or art dealer.

"Retail brings a little jingle to the area," Ferriole said. "On a commercial street, you want a lit-tle bit of activity; it brings a cosmopolitan air."

Ferriole said that his partner, Walter Petrie, "has been doing this type of development for the last 15 years and has won an award in almost everything he's put up. He's successful in leasing because he spends so much on detail and architecture and doesn't skimp on expense. The more you

Ferriole said he admires the copper awnings that Jacobson's has on its building in the Village parking and tabled the matter for and plans to have a brass 15-foot awning surrounding the building, with mahogany, glass and brass doors. The building would be gray

Ferriole, whose office is on Mack Avenue in the Park, said this is the second building he plans to develop in the city.

OTTAGE HOSPITAL'S

E'VE DISCOVERED THREE HIGHLY TRAINED EMERGENCY CARE PHYSICIANS.

John L. Stephenson, M.D., earned his medical degree from the University of Michigan Medical School. An experienced medical director, Dr. Stephenson says about Cottage Hospital Emergency Care: "There is more of a direct patient relationship than exists at many higher-volume emergency rooms. We take the time to see people, to question them, to check their medical history and to do an in-depth physical exam.

Laura Benedetto, D.O., earned her medical degree from the New York College of Osteopathic Medicine. Prior to joining Cottage, Dr. Benedetto was an emergency care physician in Macomb County. She feels that, "No emergency is too small to warrant our full attention. If a person feels an injury or illness is significant enough to get checked out, that person deserves prompt professional treatment."

Michael McMillin, M.D., earned his medical degree from Wayne State University Medical School. An experienced primary care physician from Bon Secours and St. John hospitals, Dr. McMillin thinks, "Cottage Hospital's emergency department offers high-quality medical care along with a high degree of personal care for each patient. Patients are treated here in a friendly and efficient manner, without undue delays, and I think they appreciate that.'

In addition to our new additions, Cottage Hospital's Emergency Care Department has 12 registered nurses and specialists in anesthesiology, radiology, cardiology, internal medicine, surgery, pediatrics and psychiatry who are always on call.

Vou'll discover SPECIAL CARE ... AND SPECIAL CARING.

We select our emergency care staff for their skill with people as well as for their skill in medicine. So any emergency, minor or major, receives intensive caring at Cottage Hospital. As part of that caring, our emergency physicians will contact the doctor of your choice and follow up with him or her.

OU'LL DISCOVER THAT OUR CONNECTION TO HENRY FORD HOSPITAL AND THEIR 550 SPECIALISTS CAN BE A VITAL LINK.

When you need extraordinary medical care, your Cottage Hospital Emergency physician is just a phone call away from Henry Ford Hospital's world renowned experts in more than 40 specialties. It's this partnership with Henry Ford Hospital that helps Cottage Hospital make a big difference in an emergency. It's what makes Cottage Hospital the community hospital with the specialty connection. And it helps make Cottage Hospital a great medical discovery for you.

District kills retirement incentive idea

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Retirement incentives don't seem to offer enough financial or other benefits to make them worthwhile for the Grosse Pointe Public School System at this time.

That's the finding of an administration report sent to the Board of Education June 10.

The report is in answer to a proposal by the Grosse Pointe Education Association, which represents the district's teachers, that the district consider setting up a program to encourage teachers near the top end of the pay scale to retire earlier than originally planned so they could be replaced with lower-

The union proposed that teachers aged 55 with 15 years of service in the local district receive a $400 monthly payment and life insurance benefits equal to active members should they retire. The payments would continue until the teacher is 65.

In a June letter to GPEA president Doris Cook, Superintendent John Whritner said he couldn't support an incentive plan for three reasons; there's no support from other districts with plans that they offer sufficient benefits, there aren't any real financial benefits and now doesn't seem to be the time to encourage teachers to re-

Cook, however, contends that this is exactly the time to en-courage teachers to retire, while enrollments continue to drop at the high schools and the pool of available replacements is still large.

The state's new retirement law has opened up a three-year "win-dow" that will close in December 1988. The school district estimates that almost 100 teachers will retire during the window period.

If the district doesn't get an incentive plan in place by 1987, it may be forced to look at ways to keep older teachers teaching come 1988 and 1989, Cook says. That could mean hiking salaries at the upper end of the pay scale to keep experienced teachers in classrooms and out of retirement.

Financial benefits of a retirement plan are limited to those teachers who retire in the first or second year, according to Ronald Tonks, director of personnel and labor relations.

"It is doubtful that a teacher who is not planning to retire for three to six years will retire now in order to receive an incentive," Tonks writes in his report. "Yet, these are the ones we would have to get in order for the plan to be financially successful for the board."

Districts that have had a significant number of retirements in the past year have had them because of improved benefits under the state retirement law for school employees, not because of incentive plans, Tonks adds.

The union contended in its May proposal that retirement incentives could induce up to 10 percent of the work force to retire. The district did offer an incentive plan, but only drew a large number of retirements when the plan was scheduled to end, school officials

The district doesn't have any experience with an incentive plan as large as the union is proposing, Cook says. The district's plan, phased out at the end of the 1983-84 school year, only paid a monthly bonus for early retirement.

The union says the district can save more than $3.2 million over 10 years in salaries if enough teachers are enticed into retirement under the proposed incentive

But, according to the school system's finance department, the district won't see any real savings until the third year of the plan, assuming that a teacher who retired under the incentive plan would have retired anyway without one.

"The GPEA stated that we would save $3,264,000 over 10 years. This is the maximum optimum number and, I believe, unrealistic given the new retirement options offered by the state retirement board," according to Christian Fenton, director of business affairs for the school system.

Reworking figures provided by the GPEA, Fenton says the system will only save between $420,000 and $840,000, depending on the number of teachers lured into early retire-

"We should wait for natural retirements that will result in savings to the school district and a more orderly process," Tonks con-cludes in his report. "Incentive programs have a tendency to produce a large number of retirees at one time, which creates a problem in assuring quality replacements.'

With issuance of the report, the idea of retirement incentives is essentially dead, according to Whritner, that could change should board members wish the district to continue to pursue the matter, he Retirement incentives are on the back burner for now, Whritner adds. That could change in two or three years, he adds.

When labor and management attack a problem from both sides, the results are easy to see.

Communication barriers between labor and management can stand in the way of progress. But once they come down, it doesn't take long for good things to happen.

Chairman of the UAW Bargaining Committee at the Bay City Plant, UAW Local 362 says the key to success is simple. "We realized we have more in common with management. than in conflict. Thanks to good daily communications here, our workers can become masters of change, rather than victims of change.

Michigan companies have come a long way. Across the state, they have recognized the need to change — to communicate. And together, they're learning ways to adapt to the future of manufacturing. Patricia Carrigan: "We require a different kind of worker today. One that is more highly educated and technically skilled. Our people must have access to the business information that will help them understand this challenge." The fact that CPC's Bay City plant consistently registers superior ratings on GM's Quality Index illustrates the obvious benefits of working together.

Not long ago, the problem of labormanagement relations had us all knocking our heads against the wall. But today in Michigan, a lot of companies are breaking through and breaking new ground.

Following the C.C. Golf Tournament there will be a gourmet dinner and special address on child abuse by Wayne County Executive William Lucas. Tickets for the fun-filled day and evening are $135 and include lunch, golf cart, locker room privileges, dinner and valet parking. A raffle, including a chance to win a weekend for two at the Westin, will also take place that evening.

The Christ Child Society of Detroit works to restore some of the happiness in a child's life diminished by poverty, neglect, abuse or a learning disability regardless of race, creed or national origin. Established in 1912 as a non-profit association of lay volunteers, the Society operates the Christ Child House, distributes layettes to babies of needy families and provides volunteers and funds for several youth-oriented projects.

Center asks equal enforcement

(Continued from Page 1A) coming back to use the park. There were many complaints by residents about the inconvenience. We then instructed the guards to check passes if they were not sure about a park visitor.' Kenyon said he wouldn't go along with a policy that would allow nonresidents to use the parks.

"Who would determine when lowuse is?" Kenyon asked. "Who would we let in? That policy would never fly around here. I gave the council the letter and policy statement, just for its information."

Richard Solak, Farms city clerk, said the policy at the Farms is to check all passes at the entrance gate — without exception.

"Obviously, some employees fol-low regulations better than others,"

Solak said. "Our recreation director has been informed of the policy statement, and the letter was included under the correspondence section of the council agenda."

John Crawford, Park city manager, said that unless there is some type of mechanical entry method to the parks, there will always be a problem with letting some residents through the gate without a pass.

"Guards get to know people on an individual basis," Crawford said.
"He may not ask to see a park pass because he knows them on sight."

Crawford said that an instance where a black had a pass checked while the white person did not was

"The white people may have been known to the gate guard, while the black person was not," Crawford said. "The only way to make sure that won't happen is to have a machine. With a gate guard you have a human element.

Crawford said there isn't a racial problem in the city's parks.

"We have minority residents in our city, and I don't see the concern about the appearance of segregation," Crawford said. "Because of our proximity to Detroit, many blacks use the stores, as well as our black residents.'

As far as the non-residential use of the parks goes, Crawford doesn't see it as a reasonable suggestion.

"We have two parks, and both parks combined don't meet the needs for our own residents. I don't see non-residential use as a feasibility, unless there is a substantial reduction in population."

Buffington said her organization is not trying to cry racism, but would like to see equal enforcement of policy among all residents as a first step.

She noted that segregation is a problem in the parks and throughout the cities. She pointed out that in at least one of the Pointes, police had to be given a photo of a young black resident so he wouldn't be stopped regularly at city playgrounds.

"It hurts when people are treated differently for no reason," Buffington said. "We're not crying racism, but let's avoid another time when someone feels like they're not being treated first class. Let's get on top of this now at the beginning of the summer. Grosse Pointe doesn't need bad publicity, especially publicity it doesn't deserve."

For women trying to enter politics, there is the cliche barrier. Chief among them is the vision that Mom belongs home taking care of the kids while Dad takes care of everybody.

One of the silliest is the raging hormone theory. Edgar Berman, a physician, presents the argument that females are genetically and hormonally a non-aggressive follower, rarely a leader. And for only one reason — not enough of the 'hormone of champions,'' the male testosterone. "Real women can't lead." But then he is obviously biased. He is the author of "The Compleat Chauvenistic: A Survival Guide for the Bedeviled Male."

This theory is only bested by the snickering jokes and name-calling among those who downgrade women seeking political office. It started in 1924 when Miriam A. "Ma" Ferguson ran for office. She was elected one of the first women governors in the country. But the jokes continued. "Which state has a governor that never shaves?"

Such means of downgrading any candidate can only be regarded as a last defense. The competency, the ability, the qualifications are rall in place. What's left? Riddle it with ridicule. Sad.

GPN - 6-19-86

Another obstacle for women seeking office is, surprisingly enough — women. There are many women who are of the mind that men are the best bosses, doctors, lawyers, politicians. This concept is slowly dying out as more women enter fields formerly dominated by men but not fast enough in the political field. Women comprise the majority of the voters but there are only 4 percent female governors, 2 percent female U.S. senators and 5 percent congresswomen.

In spite of the odds, women are making inroads. In Nebraska, for the first time, two women are candidates for governor.

In Arizona a woman is running for governor. If she wins and the incumbent secretary of state wins, Arizona's two highest elected offices would be held by women.

The slogan, "Go West, young man," seems to be a good one to adapt for women who want to succeed in politics. Wyoming along with Texas was one of the first states to elect a woman governor in 1924.

This year is a particularly active year for aspiring female candidates. On the state level, across the country, there are 16 running for governor, 33 trying for other top offices. On the national level, eight are running for the Senate and 64 are running for the House.

Looking at the picture subjectively, women are needed to have input into decisions affecting the welfare of everyone. When that privilege is withheld, we are cast-ing aside the skills of half the country's population.

Women can make a difference. Look what Margaret Thatcher and Golda Meir have done for their country. The United States has had its share of great women, though none have reached the high positions of those ladies. Many have devoted their talents to advancing their husbands. Now many of them are willing and able to step forward on their own. They deserve that opportunity.

a lot to be proud of. Last week, they got out the stories they have been writing ever since school began — and what a change.

In September, the students told their stories to the teacher. They tended to be brief, often only one sentence. Based on an "I can" theme, the first stories tell the world "I can read," "I can walk far," "I can pick a flower."

By Sept. 20, Buterakos had already assembled the Fourth Class Book, with complex and fantastic tales. "I thought I saw a man break-dancing on a car," Chuck's story ran. "He was doing a headstand spin. Another guy was doing the worm. I was holding a rope. A man grabbed it and was swinging around on it like Tarzan. There

But now "we're in the tenth month," as one of the boys said in wonderment. Now they can write their own stories.

Learning to write a story isn't: easy. For one thing, young authors get hung up on spelling. They freeze at the first word.

Buterakos spent weeks encouraging them to relax, to sound out the word and realize that others would be able to read them if they just got close.
"It's hard," Buterakos said.

'Other exercises stress spelling and the importance of getting it right, and then we write stories and I'm telling them it doesn't matter.

She read to them every day and the class discussed characterization and the creative use of vocab-

Their most recent story effort stemmed from a trip to the Detroit Science Center. When they returned, Buterakos gave them a story title: The Space Mission — and let them run with it. Science, science fiction, far-out fantasy and fact emerged.

The children read their own stories aloud last week. Amid cries of "we should concentrate!" they stood and heard their own words

Greg opted for a rodeo atmosphere with sound effects. "Lift off pughghgh here we go seventeen miles an hour yehaw!" he wrote.

Michelle's story juxtaposed the friendly and familiar with technology. "Once there was a place called cat and kitty land . . . One cat really wanted to be an astronaut . . . She got to the place where she could ask if she could have the job (and) the man said her first trip will be in two weeks."

The freedom of an author appeals to the kids, Buterakos said. I tell them, you can take a style and make it yours. They work to get their stories longer and to improve the intensity. There are a lot of sensitive thoughts expressed."

There is also a love of excitement and adventure.

Charlie's four-chapter story was in a factual newspaper style. "One sunny morning the seven astronauts were up early and they were ready for the space mission, when they entered the space stashon everyone was Chiring, Claping, shoting, wisling, the seven astronauts bowed and smiled." Sparing no feelings, following chapters tell how the rocket "blue up . . . and they looked everywhere even in the ocains . . . They found the bodys two." The nation mourned. The class now has access to a computer every day to write their stories. Seeing them on the screen and watching them print out has added a new dimension to the fun of writing. But the most fun was a few weeks ago when one of the mothers brought a video camera in to record the storytelling live. The class clamored to tell the reporter how exciting and embarrassing it was to see themselves on TV. And the stories were better then ever.

Psychologist Elkind talks about 'hurried' children in U.S.

By Nancy Solak

Across our nation there's a rush to raise super kids. Children are being taught to read as early as three months old. Parents are even starting to educate their children while they're still in the womb.

Dr. David Elkind, the author of "The Hurried Child," told a nearcapacity crowd at North High School's auditorium May 27, "It would be amusing if people weren't so serious about it. Parents don't create geniuses, God Psychologist Elkind, who was brought to Grosse Pointe by SAC² and a number of private and public schools, went on to say that "hurried children are forced to take on the physical, psychological and social trappings of adulthood before they are prepared to deal with them.'

One of the contributing causes of hurried children is the disappearance of markers, as he calls them. He likens markers to the rungs of a ladder that adults climb in their careers. Studies show that people who experience a vertical progression of accomplishment in childhood and/or adulthood tend to have more stable family lives and are more integrated into the com-

Similarly, children used to have markers which clearly demonstrated their progression through childhood. For example, there was a distinction between what children and adults wore. Today, though, small children are dressed in designer clothes just like mom and dad, and even when modeling the clothes on TV and in magazines, they are posed like adults. The loss of such traditional markers, like girls not wearing stockings and high heels until eighth grade, results in hurrying our children.

Likewise, there used to be a time when children had to wait until high school to join an organized sport with an adult coach, and the highly anticipated perk, uniforms.
The dying tradition of a pick-up game of basketball or baseball robs children of the opportunity to learn mutual respect. Spontaneous play, sans adults, allows children to make up, change or vary the game's rules according to their needs. When the rules are made for and by those involved, Elkind more control over what youngsters says, self-respect and personal decision-making skills are pro-

Elkind does not, however, dismiss all organized sports. What bristles him is when a child is involved with one organized activity after another all week long, whether it is ball, gymnastics, swimming or ice skating. Adults, he says, are too quick to fill every minute of their children's time. His recollection of his childhood in Detroit was that kids didn't even want adults around when they played.

What troubles him is when 8year-old Canadian children must sign a hockey contract in order to play, or when a game is called off because a coach is ill. It is in instances like these that the playful aspect of games is lost.

There are one million fewer students in college athletic programs today, primarily, he says, because they are burnt out from all the years spent in organized sports. Another factor we must consider is the overuse of youngsters' bodies by some coaches which has contributed to a thriving new branch of medicine - pediatric sports medicine. More than 600 children a month are injured in organized sports activity. Elkind emphasizes that such activities are all right if coaches are sensitive and the kids are having a good

Also disappearing because adults are over-organizing kids' activities, is the remarkable language and lore of childhood as embodied in jump rope songs, riddles and jokes that have been passed down for hundreds of years.

Ask Elkind what is music to his ears, and he'll say the sound of children playing hide and seek. That's not frittering away their time," he adds. "They are learning to use their imaginations, to cooperate with others, and to be physically active."

Another marker giving way is that some churches now allow children of any age to receive communion without benefit of classes. Elkind says he is not passing judgment on this practice, but is merely taking note of it.

Time was when there were information markers too. Adults had heard and saw. In addition to the media's bombardment of the senses, part of the egalitarian 1960's philosophy has spilled over to the '80s, whereby kids are told how much the family earns, what the mortgage or rent is, and are permitted to join in what used to be considered adult conversations.

Again, Elkind emphasizes that he is not saying that this is right or wrong. However, if children are to hear and see more, particularly via television, adults should talk to them more about it, and should not be afraid to express their values as they relate to what the children see and hear.

Also, the manner in which a group is portrayed in media should concern us since it affects how that group sees itself and how others see them. A preponderance of programs portray adults as bumbling and inept, "Silver Spoons" for one, and children act the role of super-wise adults. Outside of "The Cosby Show," where adults are adults and children are children, viewers cannot see adults portrayed this way unless they watch reruns of programs like "Leave it to Beaver." Today we're embarrassed to see how women and minorities were once portrayed on TV. We should recognize that parents are falling into the same stereotypical roles in media today.

We should be equally concerned with the images we're receiving about teenagers, as obsessed with sex and violence. These images, too, do not reflect society accurately. On TV and at movies, as well as in real life, children should not be thrown into the role of peacemaker when parents fight, and children should get help from adults, instead of giving help to them, when there's a crisis in the family, like death or divorce.

So, are children better off when they're exposed to everything and anything? Is the best preparation for bad experience a bad experience? Elkind says no. Children in northern Ireland amidst hatred and violence, and children who live in slums around the world who see among preschoolers, depression, attention deficit, suicide attempts, everything, are not better off. The kids who have one leg up on the rest are those who are loved, feel secure, are protected to the best extent they can be, and have a aggression, substance abuse, pregnancy, crime and obesity.

It's not all bad news though. Elkind says that the saving grace for our society is that when we recog-strong sense of self-esteem. The bottom line is that we live in a poverty of abundance, giving so much materially to our children and so little in the way of our-

The National Council for Child Health reports that 40 percent of children today suffer from one or more stress symptoms: headaches, stomach aches, eating and sleeping disorders, nail biting nize a problem we do something about it. Churches, now that they are accepting single parents and blended marriages, are making a comeback with youth ministries. Numerous rock stars are coming out against drugs. Organizations like SAC² are sprouting up all over the nation, and there are more family TV shows scheduled to start this fall.

In addition, individuals can do something too. They can become their children's time.

more aware of how we're hurrying our children, and put pressure on those who may inadvertently contribute to the hurried child syndrome. For example, on an airplane with passengers as young as 2 aboard, the R-rated movie "An Officer and a Gentleman," was shown. When Elkind pointed out that there were very young children on the plane, the flight attendant, in all seriousness, said that headsets were not sold to children or teens.

Also, he says, don't allow your school system to teach reading in kindergarten. "Kindergarten is the active involvement with materials, not symbols," Elkind says.
According to Dr. Alfrieda Frost, director of Elementary Curriculum for the Grosse Pointe school system, the groundwork is laid for 'reading readiness' kindergartens, and official policy warns against the premature introduction of formal reading programs during the kindergarten year. Some children, however, inevitably will be reading when they enter kindergarten, or will learn during that year, and their needs must also be met. Materials are available for such children.

Finally, parents can assert their adultness without going to the opposite extreme and becoming authoritarian; they can express their values; set limits, talk and listen to their kids more; give them what they need, not necessarily what they say they want; get involved in their schools, in scouting, in civic church clubs, and the martial arts where the role models are disciplined and good to their Parents can get kids to con-tribute to society rather than to compete in it by encouraging volunteerism; they can reassert the age-old marker that the oldest child can stay up later than the younger ones, receive a larger allowance, etc.; they can appreciate their child on his or her level: they should refuse to allow any alcohol to be served at their teen's parties; and, they need not be concerned with occupying all of

District looks at curriculum development

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Another Board of Education goal for the school year was met June 10 with the completion of a curriculum development and review process for Grosse Pointe public

A 32-member committee of teachers and administrators has been working on the process. A draft report was presented to the board by six members of the committee.

Development of a process to study and update curriculum was one of seven goals set by the board for the 1985-86 school year. The board will continue work on curriculum development next school year and also work on staff evaluation, supervision and evaluation and implementing recommendations in the substance abuse report unveiled June 16.

The curriculum review report sets out who may make a proposal, a definition of curriculum, what is needed in a proposal, who reviews the proposal and how it finally acted on. Any group of four residents or school employees may make a proposal for a change or addition to the curriculum by completing the necessary form and submitting to a curriculum coordinating council at least two weeks before its regular monthly meeting.

Curriculum will consist of those "educational experiences and encounters associated with the content and subject matter of the various disciplines and teaching areas," according to the report.

Proposals for new courses, new student course requirements, graduation requirements, grading procedures, system-wide textbook adoptions and other issues and broad revision of programs are all under the curriculum heading.
Items outside the purview of the committee are budgetary proposals, contractual issues, textbook adoption for individual courses, classroom processes of teachers and student disciplinary procedures.

'It is recognized that there will inevitably be different definitions of curriculum ranging from nar-row to broad and that decisons about proposals appropriateness must be made," according to the report. "All proposals considered to be curriculur will be discussed by the curriculum coordinating council which will determine their disposition."

The council will include nine teachers - three from elementary and middle schools, two from high schools and one special education instructor — six administrators, two parents and two high school students.

The committee will review and decide what's to be done will all curriculum proposals. Options include sending it to an assessment committee or returning it to a proposer for more information.

If the proposal is returned, the committee may make suggestions for revisions.

If accepted, the committee will announce the study and ask for staff volunteers to serve on the assessment committee.

The committee will publish a monthly newsletter summarizing the status of proposals received and acted on. The newsletter will also contain a section that can be detached and mailed in by interested staff for service on assessment committee.

The assessment committee will vary in membership depending on what level of curriculum they are studying. Elementary committees will have nine to 14 members, middle school committees will have 10 to 13 members and high school committees will have nine to 13 members.

The committee studying K-12 proposals will have 15 or 16 members, depending on whether the director of special education services is a member.

Committees contain teachers from appropriate departments, administrators and the appropriate director of curriculum. Committees may also include counselors and teachers from other schools and levels, depending on the issue being studied. Assessment committees will set a time line for their work, review proposals, request additional information if necessary and eventually submit a report to the coordinating council. Assessment committees may recommend pilot programs and appropriate in-service training and, through consultation with the office of Research and Development, set up evaluation criteria to determine success of the proposal. The written report sent to the coordinating council may contain a minority report if opinion is mix-

When the report comes back to the coordinating council, it checks for curriculum conflict, adds its supporting comments and forwards it to the superintendent. The superintendent may then approve or disapprove of the proposal.

The proposal then goes to the board of education for its review and approval. The board may modify proposals.

If it is disapproved, the coordinating council is told why and reasons are relayed to the staff.

If approved, necessary review and evaluation procedures will be put in place and in-service, if necessary, given to staff. The assessment committee remains in place until final action on the proposal is taken.

The coordinating council then makes a final report to the staff about the proposal.

The curriculum development process won't have an impact on the system until the 1987-88 school year, according to Dr. Joseph Spagnoli, deputy superintendent for instruction.

Shores switches to daytime court

The Shores will hold municipal court during the day starting in July. The village council May 27 approved a proposal to begin holding morning instead of evening sessions of the court.

Municipal Judge Beverly Grobbel asked trustees in April to consider changing court time, calling the day court a more professional operation. Village officials said they would have no problems making the switch.

The cost for the day court will be slightly higher, village President Gerald Schroeder said. The increase is because of higher judge fees, an increase in legal fees for attorney services and the employment of a full-time clerk.

Village attorney William Killebrew, whose firm provides attorney services for the court, said the move would mean increasing the charge to the village from $325 to $500 a month.

The increased costs will probably be partially offset, however, by increased revenues the day court will be able to bring in, village officials said.

Lace – Knotted threads from women's pasts

By Elsa Frohman

Trenna Ruffner of Grosse Pointe Park holds a thread that leads back through history to women who fed their children by spending long hours weaving the lace that queens and noblewomen wore. In the fine knots and webbed figures, there is history, art and beauty.

Next year, the U.S. Postal Service will issue a set of commemorative stamps honoring lacemaking. Ruffner's work will be one of four examples of lacemaking featured on the stamps.

Ruffner is an expert at making bobbin, or pillow lace. The lace is woven on a gently curved pillow, secured with straight pins. Each thread in the pattern winds off a wooden bobbin that dangles from the piece as it is being worked. A complex piece can involve more than 200 bobbins.

"It's a form of off-loom weaving," Ruffner said.

This piece of lace is a painstaking reproduction of the gates on the Fort Street Presbyterian Church. Ruffner works her lace for exhibition, not sale. She seldom sells any of her work.

"It may involve 200 bobbins, but you still only work with two pairs at a time." The bobbins are pencil-thin, carved wooden sticks, each with a set of glass beads at one end, for weight and to keep the bobbins from rolling around and becoming tangled. They can be simple, with just enough shaping to keep the thread in place, or they can be elaborate — carved with figures and painted with messages. Many lacemakers collect antique and unusual bobbins.

"For a long time, we had to send overseas for bobbins," Ruffner said. "Now there are American suppliers." Other women press their husbands into service to make bobbins.

Ruffner teaches classes in lacemaking and produces the newsletter for the Great Lakes Lace Group. She travels extensively to learn more about

"I've always been facinated by the lacemakers in their cottages in Europe," Ruffner said. The opportunity to pursue her interest about 15 years ago while she and her husband, Jim, were living in England for a year.

I saw a course was being given on pillow lace and I took it," she said.

Ruffner's avocation and her husband's vocation dovetail curiously. He is a science historian at Wayne State University. He has taken sabaticals to study industrial history in Europe and the British Isles. As he was studying coal mines in Ireland, his wife found much to study in her own field of lacemaking in the same areas - for it was the wives of the Irish coalminers who took up lacemaking to supplement the family income.

"It was characteristically a trade for poor women," Ruffner said. "It was rarely a hobby." Today, almost no one makes handmade lace for a living. It is almost exclusively a hobby, with the ex-

Above, Trenna Ruffner works on a piece of bobbin lace that she hopes to exhibit in a British lace show. At the right, more than 200 bobbins are necessary to work the intricate design. However, Ruffner explains that as complicated as this mass of bobbins and thread looks, the work is really quite simple and logical. Only four bobbins are worked at a time and the progress of the design determines which bobbins are to be picked up next. The bobbins themselves are not marked or color coded. The pins hold the threads in place until the design has progressed to the point where it will hold its own shape.

Everything's coming up roses in Grosse Pointe these days.

The Grosse Pointe Rose Society's Spring Show at the Neighborhood Club on June 20 and 21 promises to be a notable event replete with color and scent. This is always a must for local rose enthusiasts - and doesn't that category include almost everyone? Rosarians will be on hand to answer questions and give advice and the show will be judged by accredited flower show judges.

There are so many beautiful rose gardens in this area that it would be virtually impossible to list them all but some especially lovely displays of bloom include the colorful and fragrant plantings in front of the Grosse Pointe Central Library, the graceful tree roses in the War Memorial formal gardens and the lavish rose garden at Forrest Geary's home on Cadieux Road.

by the Grosse Pointe Rose Society and almost any day a dedicated volunteer may be seen caring for the plants. The Rose Society's plot in the Garden Center's Trial Gardens at the War Memorial offers a charming array of minia-ture roses which were donated and are cared for by the members of the Village Garden Club. Have you thought of making candied rose petals to decorate cakes or use as an elegant dessert garnish? It's easy to do. Beat the whites of eggs until foamy. Dip the petals into the egg white; shake to remove excess and lay on waxed paper. Sprinkle lavishly with granulated sugar and let dry. Shake off excess sugar and the petals are ready to use. A drop of red food coloring added to the egg whites enhances the rosy color. This technique can be used for vio-lets too, or mint leaves, (with appropriate food coloring, of course.)

Don't forget to dry as many varieties of rose petals as you can to make potpourri later on.

The garden reference library at the Grosse Pointe Garden Center has no less than 25 books about roses in addition to many flower encyclopedias with chapters or sections about rose culture, as well as copies of the American Rose Annual going as far back as 1945. Fascinating facts can be culled from some of these books.

Did you know that in ancient times a rose was hung from the ceiling of council chambers as an indication that everyone present was sworn to secrecy "under the rose" (sub-rosa) since the rose was the symbol of silence, secrecy and privacy? The rosette some-times used to decorate the center of the ceiling of our rooms today is a survival of this ancient symbol of secrecy and privacy.

Consider a visit to the Garden Center library. Everyone is welcome to come and browse, but if you are a Garden Center member the library is a circulating one. Two new books of note are "The Complete Guide to Midwest Gardening" by Denny McKeoun which has been given by the Grosse Pointe Park Garden Club in Memory of Mary Margaret Sweeny; and "Trees" which is volume one of the Garden Club of America series called "Plants That Merit Attention," edited by Janet M. Poor. This lovely volume is the gift of the Garden Club of Michigan.

No admission will be charged to .

Speaking of Garden Clubs, mention should be made of the latest organization to join the roster of Grosse Pointe gardening groups, the newly-formed "Garden Society." Martha Murphy, one of the organizers, predicts great things for this enthusiastic new club.

Here's a helpful suggestion to program chairmen of Garden Clubs and other groups who may be thinking about next season's meetings. The Garden Center has a voluminous Speaker's File offering speakers, slide programs, field trips, deomonstrations and other good things guaranteed to educate and entertain. You don't have to be a Garden Center member to have access to this file.

Question of the Week: There is a special Pear Brandy which contains a beautiful full-sized ripe pear inside the narrow-necked bottle. How do they get the pear inside

Answer: The bottle is slipped over the baby pear early in the season while it is still on the tree. The bottle is then fastened securely to the branch and the pear goes on growing to maturity inside the bottle. The pear and the bottle are harvested together and the brandy is added afterward.

Incidentally, wouldn't it be amusing to try this technique on a zucchini or a cucumber in your own vegetable garden?

Choose a clear glass bottle with a smallish neck. Salad oil bottles are a good kind. When the zucchini fruit is about two inches long carefully slide the bottle over it being careful not to bruise or break the stem, a small part of which will go into the bottle too. Place the bottle on the ground under the leaves. It should not be in direct sunlight all day since the bottle increases the heat. Let it grow as big as you want - perhaps almost filling the bottle. What a conversation piece centerpiece for a cookout party! Or a marvelous gag present for a fellow gardener! The newest issue of "House Beautiful" magazine (July '86) seems meant for Grosse Pointers. Its principal feature is an article entitled "Essence of Roses" and the cover promises that inside the pages "Roses run riot on chairs, pillows, walls and china.

Here we are talking about roses aain, and this column seems to have come full circle.

Lutheran Ladies Auxiliary

Summer is lull time for the Lutheran Ladies Auxiliary for the Deaf - Detroit. In reviewing the accomplishments so far this year, the treasurer reported a sum of more than $9,000 in the treasury so the members were able to pay off the balance of a yearly scholar-ship fund (of $6,000) leaving a balance in the treasury sufficient enough to pay for the refurnishing of the school's reception room totalling about $3,000.

Bakeless Bake Sales, Card Parties, Auction Sales, Lutheran Ladies Society donations of Detroit and Suburbs, Christmas Envelopes and Dime Folders, are just a few of the sources that make this donation possible.

The generosity of the Auxiliary Members and their continued support has brought success in all their endeavors. Any Lutheran interested in helping this Christian activity may join. Contact Mrs. M. Moellering, 582-6258.

On Aug. 5, the Ladies Auxiliary for the Deaf, is planning a picnic at the school grove, 6861 E. Nevada, Detroit, at 10 a.m. Bring a brown bag picnic lunch.

Lacemaker . . .

ception of handmade lace that is currently coming out of the Orient.

Ruffner explained that lacemaking was first introduced in Europe as a vocation for women with children, that they could pursue in their homes.

'The first real lace was needle lace introduced in the late renaissance in Italy," Ruffner said. "Needle lace is done with buttonhole stitches, with a single thread and needle."

Needle lace and bobbin lace were developed at about the same time and grew up as competing industries. Bobbin lace was developed from an earlier form called fillet lace, which was done with balls of yarn worked into braids. The bobbins allowed the use of finer threads and more elaborate

Through the 16th, 17th and 18th centuries, bobbin lace and needle lace went in and out of style, depending on what was in demand at the moment, Ruffner explained.

"It was always a business and it was always organized," she said. "But the which one was popular was solely dictated by fashion."

While lacemaking was introduced as an industry to put poor women to work, the lot of an experienced and skilled lacemaker was not so bad, according to Ruffner.

"They would keep their best lacemakers busy, even in slack times," Ruffner said. "The good lace houses knew the value of an experienced worker.'

Even for an experienced lacemaker, working full-time, making lace takes a lot of time. As cheap as the female labor was, handmade lace was not affordable by the middle and lower classes. The women who wove the lace could seldom afford to

In response to the demand for affordable laces, tatted, crochetted and knitted laces were devel-

"This was something poor women could do for themselves," she said.

By the 19th century, lacemaking machines had been invented that could make highly detailed laces in much less time. The hand lacemaking industry started to die out — handing on primarily in mining areas, Ruffner said.

The first machine lace was Nottingham lace. "It was the first attempt to exactly duplicate hand-made laces, Nottingham lace could be produced in much greater quantities.

Alencon and Chantilly laces were produced in France. However, neither has been produced by hand, other than very small demonstration pieces, for the last 50 years.

"World War I wiped out those industries," Ruffner said. "Alencon lace came from northern France, and there is still a lacemaking school there. But all they produce is small sprigs.

Chantilly lace was a true bobbin lace, not unlike that Ruffner makes today. However, it was easily imitated by a machine, so no true Chantilly lace has been made for the last 100 years, she said.

Handmade lace is a rare treasure in this day. Even most of the antique examples people have are reproductions rather than the real thing. "I have had many people come and show me their grandmother's 'Rosepoint' handkerchief,'' Ruffner

ing skill. It is a handkerchief corner. said. "But there hasn't been any real Rosepoint lace since the 18th century, and nobody has that." One type of lace that many people have examples of is Battenburg lace. It was developed as a homecraft. A machine-made tape was basted to a backing cloth in the general shape of the pattern and the spaces inbetween were filled with handmade lace. In her travls in Europe, Ruffner has found many misrepresentations in the lace industry. Brussels lace is highly prized, but very difficult to come by. There are lace shops throughout Belgium, but what they sell is generally not genuine Brussels lace. "The Belgian government tags some things to indicate authenticity," she said. However, much more of what is displayed will have been made in the Orient. "The only contemporary Belgian lace is small figures. If you go into those shops and indicate that you know what you are talking about, they bring out the stuff from under the counter, the real

For Ruffner, lacemaking is an art, not a business. She refuses to sell any of her work and most pieces are produced for exhibition. A piece just a few inches square can takes months to complete, even though she spends four to five hours a day working on her lace.

"You don't do this unless you like it," she said. Ruffner's students begin by making a small lace border design, less than an inch wide. Even that takes some 36 bobbins.

I start them out with three dozen bobbins, but I find they immediately want more," she said. "All my students can do a nice edging with the first group of lessons."

Ruffner's patterns often reflect deep research. "I enjoy making one-of-a-kind pieces," she said.
"I like research pieces where I can push it farther than it has been before. We use the same stitches over and over. The problem to invent a new way to use the stitches to solve a problem. It's a problem solving type of thing.

There is a mathematical logic to working out lace patterns. Ruffner says when whe is demonstrating her work, often it is men who will watch here for a while and see the logic of what she is doing.

'It's all math when you're doing a geometric pattern. Men frequently understand it better and see the logic better than women. Engineers have no trouble understanding it," she said.

Hard working committee puts spirit in the music festival

morial's Summer Music Festival will begin its 29th season Monday evening, bearing the fruit of many months of dedication and hard work by the War Memorial staff and the committee chaired by Johanna Gilbert.

The committee is comprised entirely of volunteer supporters whose numbers include Regina Gersch, a teacher at Kerby school, Hixie Sanford, a long-time Summer Music Festival supporter and former general chairperson on several occasions, and Mel Stander, a retired business man who plays the saxaphone in the Senior Men's Club "Music Makers."

Bill and Joann Quinlan have actively promoted the festival to his dental patients and her colleagues at Signet Communications, where she is employed.

"Although the War Memorial has held the festival for years, and hundreds of music lovers have enjoyed the casual atmosphere of the lakeside picnics on the grounds preceding the concerts," said Gilbert, "our aim this year is to make the entire community aware of this opportunity to enjoy professional musical performances in their own neighborhood.'

Thus was born this year's slogan: "One of Grosse Pointe's Best Kept Secrets is Yours to Enjoy This Summer," which appears on the festival brochure.

The popularity of the outdoor concerts was instrumental in the decision to present a majority of lakeside concerts this year, with concert pianist, James Tocco, as

The Grosse Pointe War Me- the only scheduled indoor per-norial's Summer Music Festival formance. A lighter musical repertoire was also incorporated into this season's festival to reach a wider audience.

The Summer Music Festival will open with Hugh Borde's Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band on Monday, June 23, with successive per-formances of the Russian Balalaika Orchestra and Dancers, June 30; Michigan Opera Theatre Quartet, July 14; New Reformation Dixieland Jazz Band, July 21; James Tocco, July 28; and the Grosse Pointe Symphony on Aug.

'We're looking forward to an exciting and successful season," said Gilbert, "and our ticket sales so far have shown a great response from the community.

Tickets are available at the War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, Monday - Saturday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Reserved seats are $10 per person, $6.50 for lawn admission, and half price for children under 12 years old. Several ticket packages, ranging from $40 to $300, may be purchased at a savings for those who plan to attend several concerts or have a group for one concert.

Picnic suppers will again be of-fered through the War Memorial at $6.50 each and require a paid reservation at least three days prior to the performance. People may also bring their own picnics to enjoy before the concert. Grounds open at 6 p.m. The Monday night concerts begin at 8 p.m.

David Ludwig: Spontaneously enjoying a musical lifestyle

By Elsa Frohman

David Ludwig of Grosse Pointe Park has chosen a career that will never afford the security of regular hours and a company pension plan. However, he says he likes it that way.

"That's the way I enjoy life, spontaneously," he said. "I have high goals in mind. I love the stage and entertaining. There is a big variety in my life.'

Ludwig is a freelance singer. He is in the Christ Church-Grosse Pointe Choir, he is a regular per-former with the Michigan Opera Theatre "Overture" series that introduces opera to public school students, and he sings in a variety of area concerts and choral productions - including with the Rackham Choir which will be pre-senting its annual Summer Cabaret at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House on June 28. David will be one of four soloists at the perform-

At the cabaret, Ludwig will be performing selections of Cole Porter and George Gershwin with soprano Glenda Kirkland, mezzo Rochelle Rosenthal and tenor Michael Pavolich. Ludwig is a

Though Ludwig's background is in classical music, he said he enjoys the chance to perform some-thing a little more popular, every now and then.

"I think that the classical field is a little more steady, as a career," he said. "I'm not sure I'm completely suited to popular music. However, I enjoy Rogers and Hammerstein, Cole Porter, Gershwin and Broadway music. I like jazz, country and folk music. I don't like rock.

At 27, Ludwig is just coming into the productive period of his career. He explained that male voices develop later than female voices and while a soprano may start singing professionally when she is in her early 20s, a tenor, baritone or bass will probably not develop a marketable voice until his late 20s. 'My voice didn't really develop until four or five years into college," he said.

Those years before his voice matured called for patience and faith. Developing an operatic voice takes years of practice and training. However, when the singer begins his training, there is voice will ever develop. "When I started out, my teacher asked me, do you have any other interests? Are you a mechanic? Can you type? When you're young, you don't know what will happen with your voice. My thought was always, I want to

In the past few years, Ludwig's determination has begun to pay off. He has had several good singing roles in area opera produc-tions, including Amantio di Nico-lao in "Gianni Schicci," a main stage production of the Michigan Opera Theatre this past season. He also played Giuseppe in "The Gondoliers," a Gilbert and Sullivan production put on at Christ Church recently.

These are "compromario" parts, Ludwig explained — supporting roles with more importance that the chorus or extras, but less important than the lead roles. In most operas, the hero role goes to a tenor.

"More often than not, the hero is a tenor," Ludwig said. However, he is not dissatisfied with the roles he is suited for.

"I would like to play the Count in the marriage of Figaro," he said. "That's one example.

The question of vocal range is one that is settled by physical structure, not training, he explained.

"That's the voice you're given," he said. "Your voice may go up in range over the years, but 'il always be a baritone."

Ludwig intends to continue his musical training in New York. Though he is a native of Grosse Pointe and has thus far managed to stay close to home, he realizes that to advance his career, he must widen his contacts.

"You have to travel to keep busy," he said. "You can't stay with one opera company. It's not enough. The MOT may only put on six main stage operas a year. People don't want to see the same singer again and again. They want new faces."

Ludwig hopes to find a place in a young singers program with a major opera. He would also like to sing in Europe.

"I would just like to be always working," he said. "I like to be on the big stage with the big audi-

In the cabaret on June 28, Ludwig will be singing selections from Cole Porter, including "Begin the Beguine," "Night and Day," and "Let's Do It." He will also sing several selections from

"Porgy and Bess."

Ludwig will be singing along side two women with considerable reputations in the Detroit area. Glenda Kirkland has been a soloist in many Michigan Opera Theatre productions. Rochelle Rosenthal has most recently been seen on the MOT stage as the beggar woman and Lucy in "Sweeny

Peggy O'Connor

My favorite things this spring

Before we get into the best parts of summer — heatstroke and fish flies, natch — \mathbf{I} thought I'd just reel off a few of my favorite things of this nearly-past spring (and a couple I wasn't too crazy about) . . .

Boat 144 is back. Every year, I get lists of sailing results from the various regattas around town. Most of the boats have colorful names, like "Jabberwocky" and "La Boheme." There's one boat, though, which doesn't have a name listed and goes merely by "Boat 144." Gotta meet the guy who hasn't picked out a boat name yet.

Cutest sight of the spring: South hockey goalie Bill Tecos on the sidelines at a girls' soccer game, patting the head of a tiny soc-

Saddest sight of the spring: The nearlyempty stands at the baseball districts at North High. Fans redeemed themselves the next week, though, by filling the place up for the regional finals.

Biggest chuckle: The way some of the kids' names are spelled in the Little League results submitted to the News. Seems that some weeks, the poor kids' names are never spelled right twice in a row. Luckily, I'm familiar with many of the names and can usually get them right. I'm not knocking the hard-working folks who submit results, though. Keep it up!

Weirdest Little League story: The one in this week's paper, about a replay of a pro-tested game. They've got protests in Little League? Somebody explain, please, and don't tell me they have strikes, too.

Hey, I went through my desk drawer last week and found that my button (you know, those snappy little metal and plastic things that organizations have made up for folks to wear, really believing that they will?) collection has swelled to nine. I've got a Neighborhood Club 75th anniversary button (which I really did wear, just in case my friends at the NC are wondering); two—count 'em, two—yellow Detroit Sailing Grand Prix buttons, which I am told will get me anywhere at the site of tonight's event: the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club (and they are orettiest, too); a Huron Doubleh Challenge button (second place in the prettiest category); a Chicago White Sox button given to me a few years back when North graduate Bill Babcock signed with the Sox; and three "Helping Children Be Good Sports" buttons (I used to have six of those, but I figured that I should keep helping child-ren be good sports and give some of them the buttons, not the children - away), and a Michigan Panthers button (worth more now than the old USFL team ever was.)

What I really want is a button like the one I saw somebody wearing last week. It read: "If you love someone, set them free. If they don't come back, hunt them down and kill Fastest Moving Umpires: The guys at the Class A softball semifinals in Lansing last weekend. It only took them two pitches into the game to notice that somebody had left a rake on the field, behind home plate.

Second cutest sight of the season: The Chewbacca "action figure" which sat on the South softball bench all season. Chewy even earned a trip up to Lansing for the semis, and was only a little disappointed when his girls didn't make it into the finals. He held his South banner (sold separately) proudly, just the same.

I know we don't cover Harper Woods (boy, do I know, thanks to all the phone calls I get from less-than-pleased Harper Woodsians to that effect), but it was nice to see two HW teams make it into the state baseball finals: Bishop Gallagher in Class B and Harper Woods High in Class D. Harper Woods High ended up winning the D title.

Just as nice is the impression I get that the factions in the North-South hostilities must have declared a cease-fire this spring since I heard mostly good things FROM both sides ABOUT both sides. Makes my job a lot nicer and, when everybody remains calm and remembers that sports are supposed to be fun, not vital to the existence of mankind, life's a lot easier.

I don't know if it started with the North-South JV softball team, which supported one another so well in tournament competition, or the closeness of the members of the North and South soccer teams. It doesn't matter

Just as long as you keep it up.

Ecstatic Waterford Kettering players crowd around home plate as South coach John Bruce walks to the mound. Left, senior shortstop Katy Turner — who had an excellent day for South -makes a tough throw to first.

Grand slam ends South title hopes

By Peggy O'Connor The amazing thing about South High's varsity softball team is that after petite Waterford Kettering pitcher Julie Vachon blasted a Lynn Vismara pitch against the leftfield fence for the game-winning grand slam homer, South's girls could still smile. Then again, maybe it isn't all that amazing.

"That's what's so great about this group of athletes, that they remained every bit as gracious and classy after a defeat like that as they did after every one of our victories this year," said coach John Bruce. South ended the season at 20-10, tying for first in the Eastern Michigan League and winning district and regional championships. Waterford Kettering lost in the state semifinals, 1-0, to Livonia Franklin.

'You know what is amazing? That at this moment, I don't know any more about what happened on plays in that game than I did when they happened. There was no second-guessing, no questioning of whether somebody should have swung at a pitch or caught a ball. The girls were just happy with their schizupre put and provided the statement of their achievements and proud of what we accomplished this season," Bruce added.

"That's what I call real class." South senior Vismara took her 19-9 record into the game against Kettering sophomore Vachon, and the pair settled into a pitchers' duel that lasted into the sixth inning. Heidi Albrecht led off that inning with a pop fly single to right and Vismara followed with a base hit to left. Junior Patty Molloy was safe on a nice bunt when the Kettering catcher's throw to first was late. Albrecht scored to give the Blue Devils a 1-0 lead.

With runners at first and third and no outs, a passed ball scored a second South run. Barb Van Wingerden's bunt was mishandled by the second baseman and Vismara crossed the plate to give South what seemed like an insurmountable 3-0 lead going into the bottom of the sixth.

But even Vismara refused to believe that South had the game safely put away; when a teammate asked her in the top of the seventh if she could believe what was happening, Vismara just shook her head and said "not yet I don't." As it turned out, the storybook ending would belong to Kettering. Leftfielder Kraft beat out a grounder at first. After a force out, Vismara walked a pair of batters, setting the stage for sophomore Vachon's dramatic grand slam to win the game and the semifinals.

More than 100 South fans journeyed to Lansing to watch South participate in the playoffs a first for a South girls' softball

Park Majors

YANKEES-INDIANS The Park Yankess rallied for five runs in the last two innings, but still fell to the Farms-City Indians, 8-7, in this inter-league contest. Dan Teranes put in a strong pitching performance for the Indians; he also scored three runs. Tom Kolojeski was three-for-four with two RBI, Ryan Messacar, Matt Stentz, Chris Oliver, Jay Strobl, Robby Tiede. and Gary Campbell contributed on of-fense for the Indians. For the Yanks, Danny Minadeo and Matt Recht shared the pitching duties. Sean Recht, Minadeo, Kyle Hoye, M. Recht and Carl Melchior scored the runs.

Park Minors

NOTRE DAME-WISCONSIN Notre Dame ripped Wisconsin, 19-11, behind the pitching of Cory Schroeder, Justin Braun and Andy Crowley. Don Leal and Chris Hyatt led the scoring with extra base hits; Chad Andrus and Robbie Bacon played well defensively.

For Wisconsin, Richard Spencer, Jeff Nyenhuis and Terry Campagna pitched and Brian Brenner (triple, double) and Ken McIntyre (double) led the offense. Scott Stans and Alex Doran played well defensively.
NOTRE DAME-MICHIGAN STATE

ND topped Michigan State, 13-0, as Crowley, Mike Cambell and Kevin Schroder shared the shutout. C. Schroeder went three-for three, Bacon was two-for-two and Brad Crowley chipped in with a key base hit for the winners. Jamie Whitehead (four innings) and Mike Johnson pitched for Michigan State, which got offensive help from Chris Machechnie, Matt Mozer and Charles O'Loughlin.

Boating

By Margie Reins Smith

Seasickness

A classic seasickness scenario: a fisherman sits in a slowly moving boat, trolling for marlin. The boat rolls with the sea's gentle swells. The air is still; the sun hot. The angler's head begins to ache. He yawns, perspires, feels tired; his stomach is queasy.

Suddenly, a marlin strikes. All the fishermen aboard dash around in a frantic burst of activity. They rally to play out the line and plan a strategy to bring in the big fish.

The seasick fisherman's nausea vanishes with the excitement of outwitting and landing his prized marlin.

Most experts agree that seasickness is the result of random, unpredictable, multi-directional motion. The fisherman's brain was receiving scrambled, confusing sensory stimuli. His semicircular canals, the organs of balance in the inner ears. were transmitting conflicting signals to his brain because they could not make sense of the disturbing information generated by the boat's motion. The fisherman's total system response to the confusing stimuli caused a flu-like feeling, including the upset Seasickness victims become pale and nauseous. They perspire, develop headaches. They may exhibit signs of depression. For some people, these symptoms appear only after hours of rolling and pitching in heavy seas; for others, that queasy feeling starts as soon as they board a boat, even while it's tied to the dock.

But the symptoms of seasickness magically disappear when the victim returns to shore.

"Motion is the primary cause of seasickness," said Richard Mertz, M.D., a longtime boater. "But there is a strong psychological component.

"You can talk yourself into being sick. Your frame of mind can enhance sickness. You can become sick if you see someone else getting sick, or if you're scared, or if you're not feeling up to par for some other reason. Some foods make you more susceptible. So does a hangover."

Some people are more apt than others to react adversely to choppy seas and brisk winds. Dr. Mertz said you can't predict with any certainty whether someone will or will not become sick. Novice sailors, however, are more likely to suffer. Experience on the water seems to condition a person to withstand and adapt to random motion. Often, parents may project their own fears (or confidence) onto their children, predisposing the children to react like the parents.

Preventive measures are the best defense against seasickness. Several suggestions:

•Stay on deck in fresh air. Focus on the horizon, which is stable and constant and counteracts the random nature of the boat's motion. Face oncoming waves, so you can anticipate movement. Don't go below deck, where everything is moving and you can't relate to any stable object.

•If you are going to sleep, choose a berth as low and as centrally located in the boat as possible. The bow, the stern and the flying bridge are places of maximum movement aboard a boat. Sleep on your back to provide more support for your

•Be sure you're in good physical condition. Don't drink alcoholic beverages to excess just before a boat trip. Avoid greasy foods.

Stay away from others who are sick.

If you feel the beginning twinges of nausea, Dr. Mertz suggests an over-the-counter antacid, a cola drink or other carbonated beverage, or saltine crackers to help settle your stomach.

Some folk remedies include acupressure, eating a spoonful of ginger, and cleaning your ears — so the inner ear balance mechanism can work efficiently.

Two types of medication are commonly sold for the prevention of seasickness. Both must be taken well in advance of your boat trip and are not effective once the symptoms begin.

Over-the counter anti-motion drugs usually contain dimenhydrinate or meclyzine, which promote a feeling of calmness and usually cause drowsiness. They're marketed under several brand names and are best used when the boater doesn't need to be alert, such as at night, or when he is not expected to be on deck performing navigational chores. They're available in pills, chewable tablets, and in liquid form.

Another approach to seasickness prevention is available only by prescription. The drug scopolamine acts on the central nervous system, blocking receptors from receiving seasickness impulses. It's sold under several brand names and is administered by skin patch, so that the drug is released very slowly over a long period of time. Scopolamine may cause dry mouth and sinuses, dialated pupils, blurred close vision, and may also cause some drowsiness.

Dr. Mertz said scopolamine is the most effective remedy he's found. It's also easiest to take, since the patch lasts from 48-72 hours, and you don't have to keep remembering to take pills.

Whatever drug you choose, he added, "Be sure to follow package directions for dosage and frequency, and get a doctor's advice if you're in doubt. Be sure to take the medication several hours before your boat trip, before seasickness symptoms are

PHHLS-TIGERS

The Phils broke open a tight ball-game with 10 runs in the top of the seventh to defeat the first-place Tigers. Jason Chevalier, Steve Keating, Jamie Mertz and Brett Brownscomb led a balanced hitting attack for the Phils: pitcher Matt Hix got the win. David Auld pitched six strong innings and reached base three times for the Tigers, Van Almen, Tracey, Barfield and Tucker had Tiger hits

DODGERS-ORIOLES The Dodgers beat the Orioles, 7-6, June 14 in a game in which the last two innings were replayed due to a protest. Prather pitched for the Dodgers; Matt Jacklyn threw for the Orioles. For the Dodgers, Mike Miller had three singles. Jacklyn and Osborne added homers. and Crane. Donnelly and Ollison singled. Leading the Orioles on offense were Jessie Jarvis (two singles, a double), Jacklyn (double, single) and Tim Jogin, Scott Lupo and John Promm

INDIANS-CARDINALS

The Indians defeated the Cardinals, 14-9, behind the pitching of Kevin Brennen and Kolojeski. Excellent defensive plays by R. Tiede and a double play by Scott Rice helped stall Cardinal rallies. Kolojeski had four hits and four RBI; John Jungwirth, Tiede and Messacar had two hits apiece. The victory raised the Indians' record to 9-5.
PHILS-WHITE SOX

Erik Lindsay and Mertz pitched nearly flawless baseball as their Phils beat the White Sox, 12-3. Turning in some outstanding baserunning and fielding were Denny Egan, Scott Cairo. Steve Young, Kevin McCracken, Peter Gracey and Dan Henry. Fritz Coyro, Geoff Everham, Charlies Lickfold and Andy Bramlage led the Sox' attack.

ORIOLES-DODGERS The Orioles beat the Dodgers, 7-4, in a rain-postponed game on June 14. Jacklyn and Aaron McNally pitched for the Orioles; Andy VanDeweghe and Prather threw for the Dodgers. Jacklyn (double, single), Jogin (double) and Joey Michael (single) led the Orioles; Crane, Prather and Osborne (doubles) and Molitor (single) hit for the Dodgers.

CARDINALS-BRAVES

The Cardinals topped the Braves, 9-2, as winning pitcher Jason Rolka notched his first complete game, striking out seven and giving up two hits. Rolka (two doubles), Kris Erickson and Jo Dan Hartingh (two singles each), Eugene Agnon (triple) and Brian Clute (double) led the offense; Lawrence De-Luca made two good outfield catches and Geoff Prysak, Chris Fox, Tom Rhoades and Agnon played well on defense. Black and Owens singled for the Braves.

BRAVES-CUBS

The Cubs moved into a tie for first with the Braves with this 17-2 victory. The Cubs' Jay Ricci pitched his second complete game of the year for the win. Ricci struck out nine and gave up just two hits. Ricci, Mike Uznis, Bob Gray, Jason Santo, Nino Melchiore, Kevin Elliot, Matt Kramer, R.C. Colombo (two) had doubles. For the Braves, Casey Ho singled and Skye Ho tripled; Tom Best and Scott Cook scored the runs. BLUE JAYS-CUBS

The Cubs got by the Jays, 13-8, in extra innings, moving into sole position of first place with the win. Michael Formolo pitched four innings and left the game with his Cubs ahead by three. The Blue Jays rallied in the fifth to tie it up, before Brian Nugent entered the game in the seventh and pitched the Cubs to the win. The Jays' Tom Heasley singled in the tying run in the fifth and Ryan Allard and Tim Frendo were perfect at the plate. For the Cubs, Nino Melchiore was two-for-three, scored two runs and got the game-winning RBI-double. Gray and Matt Kramer were perfect at the plate.

CARDINALS-ANGELS

The Cards scored six runs in the top of the sixth to beat the Angels, 10-5. Chris Johnson started the rally with a single; he was followed by doubles off the bats of Matt Spicer, Geoff Prysak and Eugene Agnon and singles by Chris Johnson, Jo Dan Hartingh and Jason Rolka. Prysak pitched his first complete game, striking out 12 and giving up hits to Louisell, Wortman and Whitney. Mike Hendrie pitched five strong innings for the Angels.
BREWERS-EXPOS

The Brewers edged the Expos, 10-8, as Pat Brennan paced the victory with three strong innings on the mound and two hits - including a home run. Allan Leitch also pitched well. Kelly Sanders and Gabe Eriksen had two hits apiece for the Brewers. Cugliari pitched three strong innings for the Expos.

BREWERS-GIANTS The Brewers outslugged the Giants, 28-15. Sanders pitched a complete game. Teddy Hill paced the offense with five hits; Bob Hostetter and Sanders had three hits apiece. Law, Mertz and Kisskalt had three hits each for the

BRAVES-BREWERS

Clutch relief pitching by Tommy Best highlighted the Braves' 12-8 win over the Brewers. Best came on in the fifth to shut down a three-run rally. Skye Ho's bases-loaded triple in the first inning gave the Braves an early lead; Jeff Adams added a run with a second inning single and Ben Black scored another in the third. Chris Ollison and Hill had two hits each for the Brewers; teammate Leitch had an RBI-triple in the third. Sanders, Hostetter and Billy Gehrke had singles.

Scores from the GPSA

The Grosse Pointe Soccer Association's under 8 and under 10 House League finished the spring season with a round of single elimination playoffs. The Lasers, coached by Charles Rutan and the Gerbils, coached by Bob ZurSchmiede, placed first and second after the regular season, but the Gerbils won the playoffs tourney. Craig Black's Scorpions finished second.

In the final game, Adam Rouls scored the hat trick to give the Gerbils a 3-0 lead before the Scorpions came back with goals from Sean Schotthoefer and David Degutis. Paul Long scored the Gerbils' insurance goal in the 4-2 final. Chris Tiede and Aaron Zur-Schmiede did an excellent job on defense. In the under 10 division, the Express, coached by Eugene Agnone and Don Megler, finished in first after the regular season. Steve Dannecker's Panthers were second; they also lost to the Kicks in the final playoff game, 6-1. John Graffius and Tim Reynaert scored two goals and three assists apiece in the tournament game; Paul Sandercott and Tim Riordan added single goals. Peter Mertz played a strong first half in goal. Performing well on defense were Bill and Mike Sheppart and Kate and Frank Blake. Don Reynaert coached the champion Kicks.

It was certainly some spring, with teams and North, South and University Liggett School combining for one state championship, and several district and regional titles. Not all the excellent sports photographs resulting from this spring's competition got into the paper at the right time, however, and here are a few interesting shots which have now earned a spot . . .

Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band

Sizzling steel to start music festival

The opening of the 29th Grosse Pointe Summer Music Festival will feature the return of the sizzling steel drums of the Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band in an outdoor concert, Monday, June 23, at 8 p.m. at the War Memorial. Tickets are available at $10 for a reserved seat and $6.50 per person for lawn admission.

The group, all family members under the direction of Hugh Borde, will perform with the customary excitement and vitality that has made them a popular attraction at the festival for three years.

From Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, where discarded oil drums were transformed into musical instruments during hard economic times to play the beloved calypso music, the steel band has grown into a significant musical movement of the

The combination of the unusual instruments and West Indies dancing and chanting provide a real island experience for the audience.

Monday's performance will range from the vibrant calypso, reggae and soca numbers like "Rup Up" and "Bahia Girl" to Stevie Wonder's "Part-Time Lover" and "In The Mood" by Glenn Miller, among other selections, all on oil drums.

As with all the concerts, the grounds at the center will open at p.m. for picnicking. Concertgoers may choose to bring their own fare or let the War Memorial staff prepare a box supper for them, for $6.50 each with a paid reservation, three days in advance.

Besides the steel band, the lineup for the Summer Music Festival will include the Balalaika Orchestra and Dancers, June 30; light operettas by the Michigan Opera Theatre Quartet, July 14; New Reformation Dixieland Jazz Band, July 21; indoors with James Tocco, July 28; and an exploding finale from the Grosse Pointe Symphony,

For information or a brochure, call the center at 881-7511, Monday-Saturday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

'Ferris Bueller's Day Off' -

By Michael Chapp

Here's the scenerio: It's 85 degrees outside. The sun is shining brightly in a deep blue sky speckled with billowy white clouds. A gentle breeze is blowing through the trees and birds are chirping their cheerful cadenzas. How in the world could anyone be forced to go to school on such a glorious day? It's a good question. And Ferris Bueller has the answer. "They can't." It's an old trick called hooky, and it comes in mighty handy on a day like this. "Ferris Bueller's Day Off" is a comedy about what happens when a slightly atypical high school senior decides that school can function without him for 24 hours. He calls in sick, gets his girlfriend out of class and his ailing friend out of the sickbed. The three of them hit the town. No school, no worries, no homework. Just a no-holds-barred day of fun. John Hughes ("The Breakfast Club," "Pretty in Pink") directs this film from his own screenplay, so one can expect something more than just mindless comedy from "Ferris Bueller." Quickly estab-lishing himself as THE filmmaker for the teenaged crowd, Hughes makes movies which touch not on-ly the funnybone of his target audience, but the heart as well. Not right away on the heart though.

The first half-hour of the movie is a non-stop laugh riot. Most not-able among the funny techniques used is the point of view. Bueller, played by the intensely likeable Matthew Broderick, is not afraid to look at the camera and deliver little asides to the audience. When he explains how to feign illness to parents for example, he outlines a three step process: 1) fake cramps, 2) moan and wail and 3) lick your palms. While he narrates this, graphics come up beside him on the screen, providing a visual checklist for those who wish to take notes. It's a side-splittingly funny gag, and it endears the character to the audience. Pre-teens and adolescents will love Ferris; he's destined to become a folk hero for all who want to defy their teachers but have neither the guts nor the prowess to do so.

Eventually, the film settles into an appreciatively slower mode, becoming a light-hearted — yet at the same time very definitive -- romp through a day in the life of a few kids. The three truants head downtown to eat an elegant lunch, visit the art museum, catch a Cubs game, and see the world from a different perspective — from atop the Sears Tower.

By the end of the day, they really do see the world from a different perspective - philosophically speaking. Bueller's friend Cameron (Alan Ruck) is the most changed, resolving to stand up to his father and the world; to be his own person. But Bueller himself also learns a few things about life, and he orates them to the audience. Using the same one-on-one technique that was so funny earlier, he now seriously discusses his worries about college, his worries about his girlfriend Sloane (Mia Sara) and his worries about friends in general, especially Cameron. Indeed he talks directly to his audience. He counsels them. To the more sophisticated viewer, such espousings are heavy-handed. But to a young viewer, the words are probably right on target.

A movie for everyone

The film has its share of typical problems — problems which have come to be expected from a picture in this genre. The adults in this movie are either extremely gullible, like Bueller's parents (Lyman Ward, Cindy Pickett), or extremely stupid, like the school's devious disciplinary dean (Jeffrey Jones). Moreover, everyone under 15 is an electronics genius, and a rock soundtrack, although it's peppy at times, serves more often to cover up for the script's weaknesses.

Adults will, for the most part, have a good time at this movie, if they can tolerate the generic problems they will encounter. Some of the sequences in the school, for example, in which the stereotypical quirks of the teachers are blown into hyperbolic exageration, are as funny as anything seen this year at the movies. In fact, adults will probably find a few of these scenes more amusing than younger

All in all, "Ferris Bueller" plays like a combination between "The Breakfast Club" and a toned-down version of "Risky Business" The language is a bit stronger than its PG-13 rating would indicate, but, parents have little to fear if their youngsters want to see this movie.

Parents might even ask their kids if they can go along with them to see "Ferris Bueller."

But they shouldn't skip work to

Spring high school athletes earn post-season honors

Athletes in five sports had barely put their spring gear away when post-season honors came rolling in. Members of the varsity squads at North, South, University Liggett School earned recognition of various All-League, All-District and All State teams. Following is a list of the honorees as we have

NORTH HIGH — Track: Tom Augustitus, Larry David, Jim DeYonker, Baik Hur, Dan MacDougall, Tony Meier, Allan Thomalla, Mike Wujek, Lee Carrasco and Brian Bergeron, All-Bi County first team; Shannon Andrews, Ann Finlan, Kristin Gast, Katie Kohler, Tina Wendy Claggett and Laura Ferguson, All-League honorable mention.

Softball: Julie Cook and Melissa Preston, All-Bi-County first team; Lynda Rayos, All-Bi-County second team; and Amy Dominiek, Ellen Gouin and Virginia Sanders, All-Bi-County honorable mention. Tennis: Fred Kaleal, Drew McSkimming, Ralph Barbier, Chris Colfer, Roger Eger, John Grierson and Chris Herman were named to the All-Bi-County

League first team. Baseball: All-Bi-County first team and All-District first team, Pat Kilcline; All-Bi-County second team and All-District first team, Mike Miller and Steve Pochmara; All-Bi-County at Tiger Stadium. Selected as All-Stars by the Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association for the fifth annual event are North outfield Steve Rick Leonard, according to association president Frank Sumbera.

Leonard (6-2, 185) led South with eight pitching victories this spring. South, coached by Dan Griesbaum, was 21-10 overall.

Pochmara (5-10, 170) was among the Norsemen's leading

YMCA plans summer fun

The Lakeshore Family YMCA will offer several activities this summer.

Swim classes will be held during the day and evening hours; other classes include Gymnastics and Pre-School Gym, Parent & Tot Together Time, Pre-School Sport Readiness and Wigglin' Book Worms.

Horseback-riding lessons are arranged through Sugarbush Farms and a new Teen Health and Fitness class is for girls ages 15 through 18. Teen drivers' training and Karate and Judo are also offered.

Woods-Shores Expos riding high, now 12-1

After the first 13 games of the season, the Expos of the Woods-Shores Babe Ruth League find themselves in first place, riding a 12-game winning streak.

The Expos have hit their stride behind the strong pitching of Jamie Acord, Wayne Houle, Eric Zenow and Jay Tobias. Supplying the offensive power this year are Kevin McCarron, Jason DeYonker and Tony Jaboro, as well as Tobias and Houle. Other team members of the defending champion Expos are Frank Lucido, Adam Tanie-lian, Steve Stander, Charlie Stumb, Steve Craparotta, Brian Rashid and Bob Tiderington.

Volunteers

Tennessee is called the Volunteer State because of the spirit it showed in the War of 1812 and again in 1846, when Tennessee was asked for 2,800 men to fight Mexico - and 30,000 volunteered, says National Geographic.
