Officers save Huey, Louie and Dewey

Police can't be expected to spend all their time cracking narcotics rings and busting jewel thieves. There are humanitarian motives for becoming a cop — and they were amply demonstrated in the Shores two weeks ago.

Somebody with sharp eyes and ears discovered 10 ducklings swimming in a storm sewer on Willison. By the time officers rode to the rescue, four neighbors were gathered around, peering down the sewer, while mama duck watched from a distance.

Borrowing a hammer and chisel from one of the duck lovers, the officers broke the manhole cover off. But when they reached in, the little guys swam back out of reach into the access hole.

The rescuers regrouped and decided to remove the nearby service cover. Borrowing a fishing net from another neighbor, the police held it in the sewer opening, while a resident reached in and pushed the babies into the net.

It worked. An officer carried the netful of errant ducklings over to their mother, who led them to the lake, while officers in two scout cars stopped Lake-shore traffic in both directions. Whew!

They all hear confessions, don't they?

What do priests, policemen and journalists have in common? They are undesirables, according to authorities in some communist countries.

In an interview recently with Lt. Tom Martin of the Park Police Department, he talked about his travels. He said he had been denied a visa to enter Budapest some years ago because the authorities were routinely turning down requests from priests, policemen and jour-

Well, we say that any list of undesirables that doesn't include lawyers is no list at all. And this is not a jab at a noble profession. Why, some of our best friends are lawyers.

of the Woods opened the store at Mack and Bedford across from the Park five years ago tomorrow. They originally were looking for a store that would complement the antique shop they operated next door.

While the antique shop has since given up the ghost, the penny candy shop continues to tempt sweet teeth with its early American interior, ice cream and novelties.

A sky ablaze

They arrived in force - armed with easy chairs, blankets and picnic baskets loaded with goodies. Cool temperatures and high winds didn't dampen the enthusiasm of the estimated 8,000 to 10,000 people who came to watch the fireworks display sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Business and Professional Association of Mack Avenue Inc. at Parcells Field Sunday. The display started at full dark and lit up the sky for about 20 minutes. The crowd was treated to the pre-fireworks sounds of the Austin Moro Band. More photos on Page 8A.

Fox Creek residents disgusted with sewage

High water makes the problem worse

By Nancy Parmenter

Residents of the Fox Creek-Harbor Island area have been complaining for 30 years about the pollution of their waters by the city of Grosse Pointe Park. This year's high water levels have caused the chorus to pipe up again.

"There's dirty, crappy-looking scum on top of the water." says.

John McDougal, a resident of Harbor Island. "It's certainly not swimmable now. The scum is literally in neople's backyards." terally in people's backyards.'

McDougal and his neighbors on Jefferson, Ashland and Manistique have complained to the city of Detroit, to Wayne County, to the health department, the drain commission and the Department of Natural Resources. Most of them are mad at Grosse Pointe Park.

"I don't think Grosse Pointe Park realizes the favor that canal is doing in keeping out the blight,' said Ashland resident Gail Reetz. a former Pointer. "You'd think they'd return the favor."

Five years ago, an ambitious 500-page plan to alleviate the pollution was the latest in a series of abatement proposals. But it sank without a trace following a public hearing in 1982.

"Like so many things in this state, if you're too low on the (state-developed) priority list, you get zilch," said Janis Bobrin, of the Southeastern Michigan Council of Governments environmental planning department. "The list is long, the dollars are few.'

The problem is multi-faceted. Grosse Pointe Park's storm and sanitary sewers are combined. Whenever there is a heavy storm, rainwater overloads the system and the excess is dumped straight into Fox Creek without treatment.

This year's record high water levels on the Great Lakes make the problem worse. The canal's banks and seawalls are eroded. Even in good weather, the water surface is even with the backyards. Wind or rain push the water up over the seawalls and across the vards leaving condoms, sanitary napkins and raw sewage in its wake. In 1973, the last time water levels were high, the Park promised to avoid dumping into Fox Creek. Then-City Manager Robert Slone was quoted in the Detroit News as saying, "We want to do everything we can to keep from pumping water into Fox Creek. If some streets are flooded a few times, it won't hurt anything."

Today, the administration is taking a harder line. "Our basic position is that we're not going to allow our residents to be flooded," said Park City Manager John Crawford. "We have an agreement with Detroit that goes back to 1931 that says we can pump into Fox Creek to avoid having sewers back up into basements in Grosse Pointe Rainstorms heavy enough to cause the sewers to overflow occur about four to six times a year, Crawford said. There were no overflows in 1977, one in 1978, five in 1973, according to Park statis-

Overflows are also caused by equipment failures or shutdowns or repairs. Within the last year the pumping station was closed for repairs three or four times, Crawford estimated. Each time, the city notified Detroit that there would be an overflow into Fox Creek.

Even if Park sewers overflow into the creek only eight times a year, the city of Detroit takes weekly measures to keep the water fresh. Every Friday for two hours, the water board opens the gates at (Continued on Page 4A)

Tax amnesty successful; state taxes to be reduced

By Peter A. Salinas

Michigan's honest taxpayers will benefit from more than $56 million collected through the Tax Amnesty program, through a reduction in the state tax rate from 4.8 to 4.6 percent.

The retroactive reduction that was written into the state's tax amnesty bill will be effective from March 31, 1986, and will show up when taxpayers file next year, according to Robert Kolt, media coordinator for the amnesty program.

The state's goal was $50 million, and on June 26, two taxpayers paid a total of $8.7 million. "Previously, one individual had paid $2 million," Kolt said. "We then had another individual who we didn't even realize was out there pay a total of $2.7 million. The individual wrote us two checks. A Michigan business came through with a $6 million tax payment on June 26.

Kolt said there were no figures available on how much was paid from a specific area, but noted Grosse Pointers were taking ad vantage of the amnesty program.

"Many Grosse Pointers are paying through accountants and tax attorneys," Kolt said. "They are not going into one of the amnesty

Shaker Heights: Same questions, different answers

For a view of how one town has dealt with the changes in suburbia during the last three decades, the Grosse Pointe News went to Shaker Heights, Ohio, once the richest suburb in the United States. Last week, we discussed one of the most dramatic differences between Grosse Pointe and Shaker Heights: the city's stance on integration in housing.

This week, in the second of three installments, we talked to school boosters and critics to learn how the educational system keeps up with the best in the country — and whether the high tax trade-off is worth it.

Shaker Heights and Grosse Pointe face many of the same problems and challenges and have found some different ways to addressing them. To see how Shaker Heights is dealing with the issues of high quality, high taxes and empty classrooms, see Page 12A.

Readers were asked in May to submit names for the vacant Punch & Judy Theatre. Renovation has begun and the building will see new life as an office and retail complex.

The new/old name is ... the Punch & Judy Building. Owner R.G. Edgar said the response he received on renaming the landmark building convinced him not to tamper with tradition. People would continue to refer to it as the Punch & Judy Building no matter what it was called, he was told. And he agreed.

Of the more than 400 entries received during the two-week contest period, 18 were variations of the Punch and Judy name, such as Punch and Judy Plaza, Place, Complex, Center, Mall and even PJ's Alley. All entries were logged in by date and Towar's winning entry was received May 12.

The most popular suggestion, with 47 entries, used the word "Hill," such as On the Hill, Bottom of the Hill, Top of the Hill, Down the Hill, Nob Hill Complex, Hill Pointe and Hill Side. Kercheval. with 36 entries, was next with such combinations as Kercheval Place, Plaza, Korner.

Fox Creek has a berm along the Alter Road side, leaving the other, lower side vulnerable to any Heritage was another popular choice, with suggestions such as Heritage Hill, Heritage Hall and Heritage Landmark Another favorite used Pointe - Hill Pointe, Mid Pointe, Center Pointe, Pride of the Pointe, Pointe East, Pointe Point, the Colossal Point and Pointes of View.

Since the building is on the corner of McMillan, that name was used often by readers.

Suggestions came from Laguna Niguel, Calif; Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Hustisford, Wis.; Sylvania, Ohio; and Harbor Springs and Hastings, both in Michigan.
There was no limit on entries and one man submitted 49; a woman followed with 32. The rest were single entries, however, with a few people submitting several. Other suggestions included Cornucopia, the Pundy Building, Shoppers Alley, Nostalgia Nook, Alligator Alley, Forest Faire and Punchatrain.

Readers inspired by the building's history suggested the Use To Be Building, Punchinello's on the Hill, Bijou Building, Matinee Mall, Balcony Row, Puppet Plaza, Drury Lane and Puppet Tier.

Others were more practical: Browse-n-Biz, Work 'n' Errand, and Across from the Library. Another person thought it should be called simply, Fred.

Along with some of the entries, we received letters. We would like to share two, in particular, with readers. They are on Page 6A in letters to the editor.

Project Hope stands as a monument to their 'dedication.

"Dr. Bloom felt that women could do anything," she said.
Bloom was an oral surgeon and had spent time aboard the Project Hope ship. He was enthusiastic about the prospects of this organization that helps people by teaching them to help themselves and encouraged his wife and her friends to organize a fundraising group for Project Hope. On June 25, the Women's Divisary with a luncheon and silent auction at the home at 920 Lakeshore where Adie, Betty and Bea held their early meetings. At its peak, the Women's Division had more than 1,000 members. Today, a loyal core of more than 400 are working to build membership back to that high.

To me, this is a remarkable example of what can be done in the private sector," Warren said.

Over the past 25 years, the Women's Division has raised millions of dollars, Warren estimated.

Walsh was on hand to thank the Women's Division for the support given to his dream over the years. Walsh founded Project Hope with $150. Today it has an annual budget of $42 million.

"I'm a dreamer," Walsh said of his determination to build a world health education organization from practically nothing. "I had confidence in the American people - that they would support me. The true character of this organization is not to work for people, to work with them. We teach them something useful that they can do for themselves. That's the true spirit of charity — to relieve people of being dependent." Twenty-eight years ago, Walsh went to President Dwight Eisenhower and asked for support for a planned organization to carry health education to the Third filled jobs in the allied health World. Eisenhower responded with a Navy ship that was given to Project Hope and became the symbol of the organization.

The ship was decommissioned years ago - it became too expensive to operate. But Project Hope continues, and if anything, its programs range wider than they ever have before.

Project Hope is currently providing medical education in more than 20 countries, including the United States.

We have a goal to fill 10,000 un-professions in the border areas of the southwest," Warren said. Another recent landmark project for Hope took American doctors to the Peoples Republic of China to train Chinese doctors.

'The significant thing about Project Hope is, we only go where we're invited," Warren said. "It is still our basic philosophy to help anyone who is willing to help himself. We always work ourselves out of a job."

"The importance of the Women's Division," Walsh said, "is that with all that has gone on in the last 25 years, all that we've gone through, they have never stopped fulfilling their role. It is a great hope for the less fortunate. They have never become disgusted with the things that are going on overseas. I've been very gratified to see their interest maintained. Local police split over checklane ruling

By Mike Andrzejczyk

While state police officials ponder whether to appeal a Wayne County Circuit Court judge's ruling last week that killed the state police's sobriety checklane program, three of the four local public safety directors asked said they will stick with more traditional — and more efficient — means of catching drinking drivers.

Judge Michael Stacey's 58-page opinion put an end to the program, which was used only once May 17 in Saginaw County. Two of 126 motorists were arrested for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of liquor.

State police suspended the plan pending the outcome of the legal challenge filed by six state legis-

Woods Public Safety Director Jack Patterson said he really had no opinion about the checklanes or Stacey's ruling, but added he thought the checklane program wasn't a very efficient use of personnel.

It takes a number of people to set up the checklanes and their performance is spotty, he added, saying "I feel there's a better method of enforcing the laws . . . on a road

The Woods assigns an officer five days a week four hours a night to patrol for those who may be drinking and driving, Patterson said. That method appears to work, since the Woods' arrests have increased 263 percent on alcohol-related charges.

A silent auction preceded lunch on the patio of Charles and Sandy Baer's home at 920 Lakeshore.

The house was the original meeting place for the Women's Division of Project Hope. The June 25 luncheon raised funds for the world health education organization.

The Woods is handling the patrols out of its own pocket, Patterson added. Two years ago, a grant was made available for cities to take part in alcohol enforcement task forces, where officers from several departments would work 'together' on road patrols.

The Woods felt there would be too many complications involved, with officers from other cities possibly patrolling the city's streets, so, with the city council's blessing, the special officer was assigned, Patterson said.

One thing the city has noticed since putting its alcohol enforcement officer on the road is the reduction of injury accidents in the city, Patterson said. He added he couldn't say for sure whether the road patrol led to the reduction.

The ruling against sobriety checklanes really doesn't affect Grosse Pointe City and the way its officers enforce the law, according to Director Bruce Kennedy.

While the lanes may be useful in certain areas with high accident rates, setting up checklanes without statistical data to back up their placement doesn't make sense. Kennedy said.

The department doesn't have the manpower available to set up a checklane, he added, saying the its use of traditional road patrol department depends instead on road patrols and observations by

When stopping a suspected drunk driver, officers are bound by the same rules as in any other arrest, Kennedy said. Officers must have probable cause; they can't randomly stop drivers.
Stacey noted in his opinion that, while officers needed to suspect wrongdoing before stopping a vehicle, ". . . under the (checkpoint) guidelines, it is clear that motorists will be stopped without the police having to show any . . . suspicion of wrong-doing.

Of the 35 recommendations contained in a report by a 1984 Michigan drunken driving task force, ony the sobriety checklanes have been implemented, Stacey said in his ruling. The checklanes catch few drunks, have only a short-term deterrent effect and have been called inefficient in a report by the American Bar Association, he add-

Park Public Safety Director Richard Caretti, however, said he didn't like the ruling because he likes the concept of checklanes.

"We've all seen the ravages of drunk driving," Caretti said. "While the evidence isn't complete, there is evidence that (checklanes) have a deterrent ef-methods against drunk drivers, Caretti said. Also, the municipal court has been successful in its conviction of those charged with operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol, he added.

The Farms sticks with traditional road patrols and observations, according to Police Chief Robert Ferber. While sobriety checklanes have a deterrent effect, he added he's not sure they are the answer.

There are probably more drink-ing drivers caught through observation than through checklanes, Ferber said. The Farms uses a variety of patrol techniques in its battle to get drinkers off the road.

The department's officers have all been taught the more obvious signs of drunk driving, Ferber said. The signs include driving with windows open in either cold or inclement weather, driving faster or slower than the posted speed limit, weaving and lane changes without signaling.

Some departments also beef up patrols in areas known to be frequented by drunk drivers at times they are known to be out, Ferber

The state police, attorney ral's office and Gov. James Blanchard's office are expected to decide in the next couple of weeks whether they will appeal Stacey's ruling, according to published re-

President of two local chapters of Kiwanis say their members supported the origanization's acceptance of women members, even though the International Kiwanis rejected the bid at its convention last week.

The vote at the Toronto convention was 53 percent against and 47 percent for acceptance of women as members of Kiwanis, the

They were either frustrated by their classes or were too distinterested to care. Those two dozen or so students become part of the national and state drop-out statistics.

The local drop-out rate of less than 1 percent is far below that of the major urban districts and well below the state average of about 5.5 percent of total high school students population. A comparable district such as Birmingham, with its 7,500 students and two high schools, has a drop-out rate of about 2 percent, officials there sav.

The reason for the low drop-out rate is because of emphasis of education and the expectations of parents, according to principals and the secondary curriculum director. Children are expected to go through high school and go on to college, according to Robert Welch, director of secondary curciculum for the system.

A study of four years of enrollment figures at South showed that 1.8 percent of high school students left school without receiving a dip-

North Principal John Kastran said he isn't sure increased academic standards are going to pressure more kids out of school. The district is developing more courses to keep kids in class and the school has a superior staff that motivates students and acts as a role model, he added.

South's Edward Shine said his school's drop-out rate is at least comparable to North's less than-1-percent. The host of problems that force students out of school in major urban districts lack of supervision and expectations, poor support and so on just aren't present locally, he he added.

The international board had circulated a letter saying it was in favor of acceptance of women as members of the organization, which does a variety of fundraising and charitable works.

The Detroit chapter sent two delegates to the convention, which was attended by more than 11,000 delegates from around the country and the world.

He retired as head of Uniroyal's research and development division in 1958. He then joined the faculty at Wayne State University for 10 years. He continued working as a faculty adviser and business consultant until he was 80.

"It doesn't solve or remove anything," said assistant director of water supply A.C. Davanzo. "It just freshens the water. The dissolved oxygen in the river water helps stabilize it."

For some residents, the back-flushing is enough to compensate for the pollution. "If the price of having our canals flushed is putting up with some sewage once in a while, I don't mind it," said Ashland resident Don Andrews. "At least it isn't coated with algae. Some of the suburban canals get pretty gamey."

Others are not so sanguine. "It's an absolute horrendous stench, somewhere between raw sewage and chemical pollutants," said Gail Reetz. Recently, Reetz' husband, Richard, developed a rash when he worked in the water while he sandbagged their property. "God only knows what we're being exposed to," she said.

During the last two summers, the Reetzes and others have noticed frequent surges of water coming down the canal, suddenly raising the water level by several inches or a foot. A similar surge several years ago did damage to their property.

"It comes up so fast," added Richard Reetz. "It washes across the seawall and floods the streets. It's full of things that flush. What's so bad is that the kids come out in the streets to play."

The residents are frustrated at the problems associated with living in one community and having difficulties with another. "Not to blame one community, but it seems like the buck is passing back and forth," said resident Lawrence Anter.

As a result, most of the residents confine their complaints to the city of Detroit or Wayne County. Grosse Pointe Park has only filed one complaint from a Detroit resident, according to Crawford.

Two salutes to liberty

Playing politics with taxes

Immigrants from all around the globe have made their way to the United States - and are still doing so - for many reasons. Some seek religious freedom denied to them in the lands of their birth. Others want to escape political persecution levied on them and their families for their political beliefs. Others hope to escape the class system that limits their opportunities at home and thus expect to better their economic lot in the New World.

Whatever their reasons for coming, surely the freedom that is synonymous with the United States of America played a role for almost all immigrants. So it is appropriate this weekend for this country to observe the 100th birthday of the Statue of Liberty in New York at the same time that it marks the 210th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

True, there has been some criticism of the over-commercialization of the salute to the Lady in New York. Yet even the commercial aspects of the celebration reflect one of the characteristics of this country. The economic freedom that prevails here means that even the poorest and least-educated immigrant has a chance to improve his economic status. And many have done so, starting by hawking the kinds of memorabilia now being sold in New York and rising to find room at the top among the nation's captains of finance, industry and politics.

Both Michigan political parties continue to Democratic Gov. James Blanchard last week

started a new round of controversy when he predicted that the state could lower its income tax rate from 4.6 percent to 4.4 percent if the U.S. Senate's federal tax reform bill becomes

Two Republicans promptly fired back, claiming that the governor had stolen that idea from them. GOP gubernatorial candidate William

Lucas said he had proposed a rollback last fall in the state income tax to perhaps 4 percent because of the expected state windfall resulting from the federal income tax reform. And GOP congressional candidate James Dunn claimed he had proposed a general state income tax roll because of the expected federal action.

back two weeks before Blanchard had done so

Blanchard also annoyed Republicans by indicating in a letter to U.S. Sen. Donald Riegle that he would cut the state income tax rate. He could propose such a cut but any such action would require the compliance of the Legislature. It is likely that any such proposal would be approved by the Republican Senate as well as the Democratic House, assuming the federal reform would expand the amount of state income subject to both federal and state taxation, but Republican legislators do not appreciate being taken for granted on such a controversial

In fact, it appears that both parties are jumping the gun on their talk about further cuts in the state income tax rate in view of the fact that the federal tax bill still is not yet approved. Different versions were passed by the U.S. House and U.S. Senate and until the compromise version emerges from the conference committee made up of representatives of both houses, nobody knows what will be in the final federal issue.

For millions of immigrants and their families, the Statue of Liberty symbolizes the United States. They think of the Lady in New York as the first thing they or their parents or their grandparents saw when they arrived in the New World. They still see it in their mind's eye as the symbol of opportunity this nation offers to the "huddled masses yearning to breathe free."

Yet the tribute to the Lady should not overshadow the salute to the Declaration of Independence and the significance of those words: We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness — That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed . . ."

So, despite the glitz and glitter in the tributes to the Lady in New York, the words of the Declaration still should shine through and remind Americans once again of the heritage of freedom and equality handed down to them from their forefathers meeting in the Continental Congress in Philadelphia on July 4, 1776.

It is appropriate to pay tribute both to the Lady and the Declaration, since all of the members of the Continental Congress and all the signers of the Declaration were, of course,

law and whether it will increase state income

Yet the new argument between the Republicans and Democrats over the state income tax rate emphasizes again what a controversial matter this issue has become. It all started when Blanchard, after his election in 1982, proposed a 38 percent increase in the income tax which was passed by a Democratic Legislature.

That action set off a series of recall efforts which led, in turn, to the unseating of two

Democratic senators and to the GOP takeover of Senate control. Even though the 38 percent increase now has been wiped out through a series of rollbacks, the issue remains a controversial one as the 1986 primary approaches.

ing politics with the issue Blanchard has become so sensitive to the charges he was responsible for the 38 percent increase in 1983 that he wants to be the front-runner on suggestions for further cuts in the rate. The Republicans see the possibility of using the issue in the fall to win control of both the House and the governorship.

much attention to the question of whether the state has additional needs that could be met from any possible windfall generated by the pending federal income tax reform. It is popular these days to say that throwing public money at our problems doesn't help solve them.

Yet the needs of the mental health system, the welfare programs, the expanded prison system, and education at all levels ought to be reviewed before the governor and the legislators decide to make a further rollback in the state income

In effect, both parties are trying to buy votes through promises of further income tax cuts, without seriously considering whether the state's fiscal condition would permit such reductions to be made without damage to those

Unfortunately, neither political party pays

Both sides appear to be equally guilty of play-tax revenues in Michigan.

A line was accidentally dropped from the final paragraph of last week's editorial titled 'GOP captive of far right?" and made the paragraph unintelligi-ble. The paragraph should have read as follows:

'The precinct delegates obviously do not reflect state opinion. But their views about the candidates - and the lack of strong support for any single one - may indicate that Blanchard is winning support from some Republican moderates who fear their party is drifting too far to the right."

relying on state support.

Wayne County Community College appears to be emerging from some of its recent academic, administrative and financial woes - but not all of them.

Michigan Schools Supt. Phillip E. Runkel announced last week that he would step down Sept. 30 from his assignment as the college's monitor and therefore was discharging a 20-member advisory committee that had served since he took over in January 1984, as an overseer of the college's operations.

Runkel could have requested an extension of his monitoring duties beyond the September date, but said the college is "on the road to success." In expressing his appreciation to the advisory committee, he said, "Our work is finished." That is good news for both the college and the county.

The state superintendent was named monitor after years of political infighting among the trustees and charges of mismanagement leveled against the college administration. The presidency has changed hands six times since 1980 and enrollment has fallen by approximately 50 percent

But the college's troubles are not over. College trustee Juanita Ford at last week's meeting accused the new president, Ronald Temple, who took office last September, of using college money to pay personal expenses. But apparently Ms. Ford did not know the terms of Temple's contract included a $50,000 fund to pay moving and housing and other expenses over a five-Runkel backed Temple in this dispute. He said the $50,000 fund was "an agreement" Temple made with the board when it hired him. He added that it is not uncommon for colleges to provide funds for "transitional expenses" of presidents. Board Chairman Ollie McKinney Jr. also said the fund was "part of the price we paid to get a person we wanted.

Since Temple's contract and letters to him from former board Chairman Kaye Terzag show no restrictions on the $50,000 fund, the payments made to the new president apparently were in order. It is too bad that Ms. Ford didn't take the trouble to check the facts before she sounded off on the subject.

Overall, however, the ending of Runkel's monitoring assignment and his kind words about the college's improvement ought to help restore public and student confidence in the troubled community college.

Grosse Pointe Woods

A 7-year-old Michigan lad, Matthew Muxlow of Brown City, was complimented by President Reagan last month in a session at the White House for naming all of the presidents in order - and adding that Mr. Reagan is his favorite.

In this day and age, it is apparently unusual for a youngster to be able to name all the presidents in order, let alone to be taught in school the names of all the 40 chief executives. But some of us can remember a day when that was not such an unusual accomplishment.

Back in District 61, in Dakota County, Minnesota, more than 60 years ago, it was, in fact, unusual when any of the two or three graduates of the eighth grade each year could not name all of the presidents in order.

The reason? Very simple. Learning the names of the presidents in order was a required assignment in the seventh grade. In a one-room school, all of the dozen or more students, from the first through the eighth grade, could not escape listening as the seventh graders recited their lists. In fact, by the time they reached the seventh grade, most students had listened to the recitations of the list so many times they knew the names by heart.

True, Matthew Muxlow of Brown City had a tougher task. In the early 1920s, students in District 61 had to name only 30 presidents, ending with Calvin Coolidge. Today Mr. Reagan is the 40th president, if you count Grover Cleveland twice, as the reference books do, because he was the only president to have been elected to two non-consecutive terms.

Well, it is still good to know that one tradition from the one-room school still lives on, if only in the person of a single Michigan 7-year-old. Let's see. How did that list go again? Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Adams, Jackson, Van Buren, Harrison, Tyler, Polk, Taylor, Fillmore, Pierce, Buchanan, Lincoln, Johnson, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Cleveland, Harrison, Cleveland, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge . . .

Prime Time for senior citizens Looking back, looking forward

Suppose there was a space capthat could transport you in time to any era. Would you choose the past, the present, the future? Contemplating today's problems, there are undoubtedly many who would opt to move backwards and others who would prefer to live in what will hopefully be the better world of tomorrow.

Those who would choose an earlier period in our history would argue that the quality of life today has deteriorated. They would point to the seemingly insoluble problems of inflation, unemployment, crime, the drug scene, corruption in government, pollution, the hostage situation, hijacking, as they look back with longing to the tension-free life led by their parents and grandparents.

Mathematically speaking for a retiree of 65, that would put him back about 100 years to a picturesque era of horsedrawn buggies, neighbors who lived and died in the same house in which they were born, the friendly corner grocer, unpolluted air and streams, a utopia of tranquil, leisurely, stressfree living.

What a romantic view. Actually 100 years ago, there was a surplus in the U.S. Treasury (can you believe it?). Because of the taxes and tariff levied to meet the enormous needs for funds during the Civil War, government borrowing was reduced and unemployment threatened the economy. The theory behind the restriction on borrowing for private investments was that swollen revenue would be devoted to extravagant expenditures. These fears were not unfounded. The swollen federal funds were tapped for "pork barrel" bills providing for useless projects.

There were disasters then, even as there are now. In 1883 a coal mine in Illinois flooded and 70 lives were lost and another in Virginia claimed 112 lives.

In 1896 a tornado hit St. Louis destroying much of the city, killing 306 persons and leaving 5,000

The presidential campaign in 1884 was waged on the basis of personalities rather than political issues, Slurs, slander and scandals made the campaign between James Blaine, who was denied candidacy in 1880 because he had used his influence as congressman rather than break a strike, to no to do favors for certain business avail. There were strikes too. In Chicago in 1884 at the McCormick Reaper plant, a bomb was thrown after pickets were fired on by police. Ten civilians were killed and 50 wounded. That same year, the American Federation of Labor was founded with Samuel Gompers as president.

President Cleveland called out federal troops to quell the violence and Jacob Coxey, leader of the unemployed who marched to Washington to protest conditions, was arrested for trespassing on government property.

In 1896 William Jennings Bryan wrenched the Democratic leadership away from Cleveland who was threatened with impeachment. Bryan then lost to William McKinley whose campaign manager, Mark Hanna, financed the campaign with huge sums of money from bankers, corporations and in-dustries. Employees were ordered to vote McKinley or be fired.

In 1898 the battleship Maine was blown up in the harbor of Havana, Cuba and marked the beginning of the Spanish American War. When it ended with an American victory, Cuba became a sovereignty and America was recognized as a world power.

The grandma and grandpa era ends in a time frame not unlike our own, one marked by political wranglings, a war, disaster, depression and strikes.

Did the new century bring a more stress-free life? Not so you could notice...

In April 1901, President William McKinley was shot, huge trusts in steel, railroads banks and financial institutions were formed and coal strikes headed by John Mitchell caused a serious coal shortage.

In 1907, after years of business prosperity, the United States fac-ed a serious financial panic as big business became increasingly alarmed at the policies of President Roosevelt. The root of the problem was the weakness of the banking and credit system. Unemployment soared and wage cuts were widespread.

An epidemic of flu struck, and before it ended in 1919, 500,000 persons died.

The good news was that the Armistice was signed bringing to an end World War I.

And now in 1920, give or take a few years, we come to that period covering our own lifespan. Those who have lived through those years have seen notable changes both for the good and the worse.

We have experienced a "day of infamy" that triggered World War II and the Vietnam fiasco. We have witnessed the Teapot Dome oil scandal and Watergate.

We were thrilled when Charles A. Lindbergh made his solo flight to France and saddened when our young, vigorous President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in

We enjoyed the prosperity of the New Era under Coolidge when big business boomed, the stock market soared and prosperity reigned and we endured the depression years when half of the labor force was out of work and those who had jobs worked for 10 cents an hour.

We saw the dawn of a new lifestyle as unions gained strength and working people began to live a better life. There were good years, the Era of Peace after the war when Americans went on an unprecedented spending spree. Our hopes rose in the early Johnson years of the Great Society when education, housing and medical care for the aged were top priorities.

The hope faded in 1967 when riots of unprecedented intensity tore over 100 cities and hippies dealt a blow to the American way of life with their protests against American values.

Life got a lift when Neil Armstrong planted his boot firmly on the moon in 1969.

We look to a better future, but it will be a confusing one as the world revamps itself to new idealogies and technology. The threat of annihilation hovers, powerful computers will touch every aspect of our lives and our natural resources continue to dwindle.

Looking back, an optimist could say we have seen the best of times, certainly not the worst of times. Our generation in retrospect has been no more beset by problems than those of our parents and grandparents.

Looking forward presents a future better left to a younger generation reared to deal with it.

Woman foils possible rape

An 18-year-old Farms woman was the possible victim of an assault with intent to rape June 25, police said. It is believed that the attacker is a man she had met earlier in the week at a party.

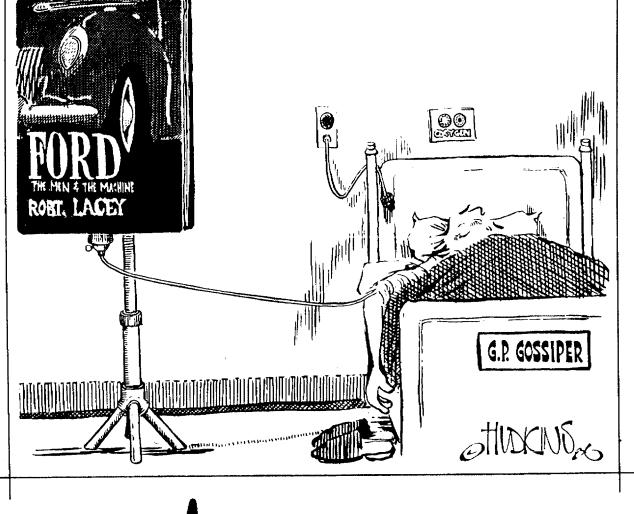

At about 1 a.m. Wednesday morning, the woman heard the horn of her Jeep, which was parked in the driveway of her parents' home on Hall Place. Without waking her family, she went outside to see who was beeping, she told

A man got out of the car, grabbed her around the throat and covered her mouth with his hand. He told her that if she cried out, he would hurt her sisters and parents.

He then started dragging her down the street and punched her in the stomach and right eye, according to the police report. Three or four houses away from her house, he pushed her down on the grass and began to tear at her pajamas.

She told police that she kicked him, knocking him down, then ran away through the backyards to the public telephone at Perry's drug store on the Hill. She found a quarter near the phone and called a girlfriend, who picked her up. They drove to the home of a third friend in Grosse Pointe Woods and then to the police station to report the

No arrest has been made, but police are investigating leads.

I say

Don't ask

What was it that Henry Ford II was supposed to have said: "Never complain, never explain"? That's easy for him to say. After all, what's he got to complain about anyway? And, being the guy he is, there are plenty of other people who will do his explaining for him. They probably get a nice hef-ty pay check for it, too.

Me? I love to complain. Folks who know me well say that I'm not happy if I don't have something anything — to gripe about. That's true, I guess, but I sure wish ididn't have friends who say things like that about ine, you know?

One of my chief complaints is that I don't like explanations. Period. If you stop to think about t, we probably spend half of our lives explaining something to somebody, no matter what Hank the Deuce says. Why we were late for work, why our shirt is wrinkled, event to lift our spirit to face the why we didn't show up on time for 1970s marked by inflation, unem- dinner. You know, your run-of-themill explanations.

Those I expect, since it stands to reason that occasionally, people (like your mother, and later on in life, your boss) have a right to know certain things. I can even tolerate the next highest level of explanations. Things like why you never responded to an invitation from your nutty Aunt Agnes (causing her to reserve too many spots at her weird daughter's wedding; telling her you just don't like her is one explanation, but it probably isn't the most prudent one); or why you ran over your neighbor's kid's Big Wheel (because you finally had enought of that incessant tikka-tikka-tikka noise outside your bedroom window at 6 a.m. on Saturdays); or when you are going to mail in your credit card payment (when pigs fly is usually not an acceptable explanation for your major credit companies).

No, the kinds of explanations I really resent giving are the ones in response to questions I didn't like being asked in the first place. For

I got a haircut recently and ever since then, people have been asking me - at the rate of about once per hour - if I have a permanent wave. People on the street, people I work with, the checker at the grocery store, and even the woman who cut my hair, for heaven's sake. In fact, having to explain "no, I have naturally curly hair" 168 times per week, is what got me to thinking about all the things I hate to explain. I seriously considered shaving my head, but since that would lead to even more explaining, I'm thinking of just sticking with cute answers like "yes, my hair is permanently like this"

Beer stolen

The day manager at the Irish Coffee arrived to open for business on June 27, only to find the building already open. The steel door to a storage area at the rear of the building was standing open and 15 cases of bottled beer were missing.

The roof of the storage room had been pried open, according to Farms police reports. An 11 x 14inch hole was apparently the point of entry. Once inside the room, the thief was able to open the deadbolted steel door without a key.

or "no, a highly contagious disease caused my hair to get like this" or merely grabbing the sides of my head and running away screaming

"Aaaarrrrgggghhhh" when folks ask me if I have a perm.
One I always hated was the one I used to get all the time when I was a fat, funny-looking teenager. Whenever I'd go to a family event, one of my less-than-tactful aunts would ask, "Where's your boyfriend?" Since I didn't have one at the time, I'd usually just slink away in search of a hole into which I could crawl. Then I hit on the perfect explanation: I just told her 'he's in prison; should get out in another month or so. When should we come over for dinner?" She quit asking me for boyfriend explanations, for some odd reason.

Now that I'm a working stiff, I get one rather odd demand for an explanation every other summer or so. I'm entitled to three weeks vacation and usually, I just spend the time taking short day trips around the area, or painting various portions of my house in need of immediate aesthetic upgrading, or just sitting in the sun, reading trashy novels. Every two years, I take a bigger trip, like to New York or Boston or into Canada or however far my savings will take me. But it never fails that in the year that I just lie around, not doing diddly, 47 people ask me what I'm going to do on my vacation. I dread telling them that I'm just going to sleep late, laze around the house and relax a lot, because they get that funny look on their faces and I can tell they're thinking "Hoo boy, isn't she the jet-setter."

Why don't they ever ask me where I'm going when I've planned an extensive camping trip through Ontario, or a theater trip to Stratford or a luxurious two weeks on Cape Cod or Mackinac Island? But there I go complaining again. And I just don't have the time for it. See, this is one of my "off years" in terms of exciting vacations. I've got to dream up a really inventive explanation for when the questions start.

I think I'll just tell them I'm vacationing with the Fords. You know, the ones who never complain or explain.

Park project keeps him involved

By Pat Paholsky

Douglas Graham, former mayor of Grosse Pointe Park, has this thing for parks. It's what first got him involved in local politics 20 years ago and it's what involves him now, still on the local level but in a non-political position.

As chairman of the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation for 1986, Graham is leading the effort to raise funds to renovate the bathhouse at Patterson Park to an activities center. The project will cost $200,000 and the foundation is about one-fourth of the way to its

Most of the money was raised through memberships, and a renewal drive should increase the coffers. Graham said the group will concentrate more effort on attracting large donations. A cocktail party last year raised about $3,000, he said.

We plan to have, from time to time, little affairs to make people aware." Graham said. "We're looking now to have an architect develop plans so we can show people what we have in mind, and perhaps go out for bids.

Plans for the bathhouse include a kitchen, air conditioning and plumbing. Graham said the work can be done in segments, so residents can see the progress.

tivities," he said. "We have marvelous parking there and a marvelous park."

The renovated building, about 2,500 square feet, would include day room activities for senior citizens and game room activities for youth as well as kitchen and restroom facilities.

Graham reminisced about using the bathhouse as a young boy when swimming in the lake was allowed. With the boys on one side and the girls on the other, the large doors were tongue and groove constructed so the kids couldn't peek through the cracks at the opposite

"The building itself is a very sound, well-built structure," he said. "It shold be a quality facility once it's done.

One advantage to making a contribution is that it is tax-deductible. "It's a fully qualified non-profit corporation and the deduction applies just as if a person gives to any charity or to a church," he said.

Another advantage is the foundation can do extra things for the city that residents would not like to see funded by tax money, but would enrich their quality of life, he said. Donors can also earmark funds for specific projects, he said.

The foundation meets about once a month in the evening and the meetings are open to the public. "We have seen over the years an interest in our city for group action," Graham said. "Most of served as public officials. There are 15 trustees on the board. The other officers are George A. Nicholson Jr., vice president; Leonard W. Smith, secretary; and Robert J. Hutton, treas-

Some of the other projects on the foundation's wish list are expansion of the Windmill Pointe Park parking lot, installation of an enclosure to the Windmill Pointe Park swimming pool to allow yeararound use, installation of an enclosure (bubble) at Patterson Park tennis courts to permit yeararound use, Christmas and other holiday decorations to decorate Jefferson Avenue at various times of the year and a music shell at Patterson Park.

The first priority, however, is the bathhouse renovation, which Graham hopes can be started soon. The project brings him back to square one in serving the city. He first became involved 20 years ago when he was appointed chairman of a citizens advisory committee charged with investigating remodeling Windmill Pointe Park and what was then known as Three Mile Park.

From that, he was appointed to the city council in 1967 to fill a vacancy. When the term was up, he ran for the seat and won and was consequently re-elected every term until 1981. When former Mayor Matthew Patterson decided not to run for re-election, Graham filed for the seat and was elected. In his bid for a second term, he was defeated by the current mayor, Palmer Heenan.

Graham said he would not run for office again, but that he is enjoying serving as chairman of the foundation.

'We are all enthused about this. It's certainly one way to serve your city in a way that's non-political and you can have fun without being involved in controversy.

Shores Public Safety Director Joseph Vitale announced June 24 he will retire from his post Feb. 1, 1987, after 321/2 years with the department.

Vitale said he had planned to notify the council in writing 90 days before leaving the post and added he doesn't expect to change his mind about retirement.

Grosse Pointe ranks 12th in spending on students

Grosse Pointe public schools spent an average $4,492 to educate students in the district during the 1984-85 school year, 12th highest in the state and far above the $2,912 state average.

Those figures were contained in rankings released two weeks ago by the state Department of Educa-tion. Overall, the Whitefish Town-ship school district near Paradise in the Upper Penninsula, spent the most — $5,505 — to educate each of its 67 students last school year. Birmingham ranked second, but was the highest in the metro Detroit area, according to published reports.

The figures cover the costs of classroom instruction, counseling. libraries and other education services in the state's 525 school

One might consider being the 12th highest spender in the state excessive, but taxpayers in Grosse Pointe are actually getting a bargain, according to Superintendent John Whritner.

"Academically, we've been in the top five districts in the state in the last 11 years in a row," he said.

The administration has been culling through the figures to discover its rankings in the number of areas, according to Whritner. For 'instance, the cost of operating the system's business and finance department comes in 29th in the state. Teacher's salaries in Grosse Pointe are the fifth-highest in the state, Whritner added.

"Given the salaries and the call for the high quality of education that's demanded . . . that's where we fall," he said of the statistics, adding that it costs money to provide quality education programs. Other statistics in the report show that the Bridgeman school district in western Michigan has the highest local property taxes base behind each of its student at $674,518. Grosse Pointe has $147,716 in property taxes base behind each of its students.

The lowest property tax base per student total from Muskegon Heights, which had only $18,660. Detroit came in 520th with a perpupil tax base of $25,222.

Highest paid teachers in the state were in the Lamphere school district in Madison Heights last school year, where the average teacher earned $38,482. The lowest paid teachers were in the Burr Oak district in St. Joseph County and earned $15,535.

Grosse Pointe's teachers earned an average $35,535.

VE'VE DISCOVERED THREE HIGHLY TRAINED EMERGENCY CARE PHYSICIANS.

John L. Stephenson, M.D., earned his medical degree from the University of Michigan Medical School. An experienced medical director, Dr. Stephenson says about Cottage Hospital Emergency Care: "There is more of a direct patient relationship than exists at many higher-volume emergency rooms. We take the time to see people, to question them, to check their medical history and to do an in-depth physical exam.

Laura Benedetto, D.O., earned her medical degree from the New York College of Osteopathic Medicine. Prior to joining Cottage, Dr. Benedetto was an emergency care physician in Macomb County. She feels that, "No emergency is too small to warrant our full attention. If a person feels an injury or illness is significant enough to get checked out, that person deserves prompt professional treatment.'

Michael McMillin, M.D., earned his medical degree from Wayne State University Medical School. An experienced primary care physician from Bon Secours and St. John hospitals, Dr. McMillin thinks, "Cottage Hospital's emergency department offers high-quality medical care along with a high degree of personal care for each patient. Patients are treated here in a friendly and efficient manner, without undue delays, and I think they appreciate that."

In addition to our new additions, Cottage Hospital's Emergency Care Department has 12 registered nurses and specialists in anesthesiology, radiology, cardiology, internal medicine, surgery, pediatrics and psychiatry who are always on call.

VOU'LL DISCOVER SPECIAL CARE ... AND SPECIAL CARING.

We select our emergency care staff for their skill with people as well as for their skill in medicine. So any emergency, minor or major, receives intensive caring at Cottage Hospital. As part of that caring, our emergency physicians will contact the doctor of your choice and follow up with him or her.

YOU'LL DISCOVER THAT OUR CONNECTION TO HENRY FORD HOSPITAL AND THEIR 550 SPECIALISTS CAN BE A VITAL LINK.

When you need extraordinary medical care, your Cottage Hospital Emergency physician is just a phone call away from Henry Ford Hospital's world renowned experts in more than 40 specialties. It's this partnership with Henry Ford Hospital that helps Cottage Hospital make a big difference in an emergency. It's what makes Cottage Hospital the community hospital with the specialty connection. And it helps make Cottage Hospital a great medical discovery for you.

Changes in store for schools' special ed department

By Mike Andrzejczyk

It has been a tough couple of years for the special education services department.

First, there was a wholesale rewriting of administrative rules by the state Department of Education. Then, as schools geared up for the 1985-86 school year, the U.S. Supreme Court handed down a decision that forbade special education teachers from public schools to provide services in parochial schools to parochial school

But the department is already planning for the fall, when kids return again to classrooms. When they arrive, there will be a number of new programs waiting for them at all levels, according to Dr. Claire Hunt, director of the local special education services depart-

"We are hoping to meet the needs of as many children as pos-sible in their home school next year," Dr. Hunt said. To do that, the system is expanding its elementary resource room program from the single pilot program at Monteith, to all the elementary buildings.

Five schools will have full-time elementary resource programs, with the other four having half-day programs, Hunt said. Middle schools will also have resource rooms established, she added.

The resource rooms are part of the newly created programs in the state's approved but yet to be implemented administrative rules. The optional programs are designed for students who need to spend more than half their instructional day in special classes.

Locally, students will be assigned resource rooms and also take part in certain activities in general education classrooms, Hunt said. Resource rooms will be used for direct instruction and tutorial works, she added.

By combining the concepts of self-contained classrooms with that of teacher-consultants, elementary resource rooms give the district greater leeway in assignment of services and allows better delivery of service, Hunt said.

"Resource rooms are a more efficient way of meeting students' needs," she added.

The district will also offer a second high school-level self-contained classroom, this one for emotionally impaired students who spend three periods of their educa-tional day in specially designed

The district will add a half-time aide at the high schools to help general education teachers who have a large number of mainstreamed students in their classrooms, Hunt other programs, she added.

Students who require two periods or less of special instructions or programs should be able to have their needs met through

It is hoped the aides, who will be under the direction of high school principals, will help alleviate problems general education teachers face when confronted with a class that contains a significant number of mainstreamed students.

It was a problem brought before the Board of Education early last school year by Grosse Pointe Education Association President Doris Cook, who spoke of certain classes at the schools which had deceptively low enrollments.

Total enrollment figures were deceptive because in some cases, 80 percent of students in certain classes were mainstreamed for that period, Cook argued. The large percentage of mainstreamed students put special demands on a teacher's time and skills, she told the board.

The school system will have other programs in place in the fall for low-achieving students at the elementary and secondary levels, but they will fall under the auspices of general education depart-

The system will have a modified curriculum ready for high school freshmen who need remedial or tutorial help, Hunt said. Beyond the freshman year, high school administrators believe their course offerings are diverse enough to offer classes for every achievement

At elementary schools, a language art specialist will be added. who will help non-special education students with work in any language-related area, Hunt said. The language arts specialist, however, will be under the direction of the director of elementary curriculum, Hunt added. The system is going to add an hour in the schedule of its vocational education placement director to allow follow-up on students. The director will have time to see if students are holding jobs or going to school and will help the program keep track of its placements.

'The district is really beginning to understand and do something about low-achieving students. Hunt added.

Variance requests not granted

By Pat Paholsky

It was three strikes and almost out for three citizens who requested separate variance to zoning requirements from the Park council

The only one who fared better than the others was James Ferriole whose request was tabled until the next meeting. The hearing June 23 had been tabled from the previous meeting.

Ferriole is the developer who wants to construct a two-story office/retail building on the corner of Kercheval and Beaconsfield. He is seeking a variance to the off-street parking requirements that calls for 24 to 33 spaces, depending on the type of business that would lease space in the building. There is a different formula for different businesses.

During his first hearing June 9, Ferriole's proposal was not received well by neighboring residents. He said he could provide eight parking spots and with on-street parking, bring it to a total of 15 spaces. Residents complained that his building would compound an intolerable parking situation that already exists in the area.

At the June 23 hearing, Ferriole presented the council with plans

At 3 a.m. a Shores scout car saw for an additional eight off-street parking spots in the back of the building, for a total of 16 off-street spaces. According to his calculations, the ordinance would require

24 spaces. Residents again opposed the project and the council decided again to table it. The second request for a variance came from John Wonway IV of Audubon who wanted to erect a six-foot high stockade fence in the yard along one side of his property. The reason, he said, is to protect his two small children from a large dog owned by his neighbors and to improve the apperance of his home.

The council vote 5-2 against the request after hearing from Con-way, his neighbors Nicholas and Lee Coraci, and residents attending the meeting who spoke for and against the fence.

The third person asking for a variance, Douglas Cheek of Audubon, was also turned down by the

"They took off like jack rabbits," said Shores Sgt. Daniel Healy.

Meanwhile, officers from the Farms and the Woods joined the pursuit on foot. Two hours later, at a.m., police were called to the Yacht Club where a man matching the description of one of the alleg-ed car thieves had stopped to use the telephone. On being refused, he ran away and jumped into the harbor, trying to hide under a dock.

For the moment, the man has been charged with prowling. Police believe they know the identities of all three and are continuing to investigate the case.

One of the men was probably iniured when he was thrown against the Trans Am's windshield during the crash on Ballantyne, Healy

The car had been reported stolen in Clinton Township only three hours before it was stopped in the Shores. It received $5,000 in damage in the crash and is being held for fingerprint checks.

The residents of the house on Ballantyne were asleep at the time of the crash and were not injured. Their house, however, sustained damage to the front door area, where face brick was broken off, and to a front bedroom, where a wall was cracked. The underground sprinkler system was severely damaged as well, police Healy said the three alleged thieves are from Macomb County.

Carrying on the dream in Shaker Heights

Community safety: Prevention is the best cure

Shaker Heights has a feature you don't usually expect in an affluent suburb: It is terrorist bombproof.

With good reason. Fifteen years ago, a former mental patient blew the old building and himself to smithereens — and did it with a Hitchcockian twist. He shot his psychiatrist and when the wounded man's family called the police, the radio waves of the subsequent dispatching call set off the dynamite planted earlier.

That is in the past. Only the unfortunate mental patient was kill-

> The building construction symbolizes the emphasis on prevention at both the police and fire departments, which stress physical fitness, training and preventive programs in the community. City commitment to public safety is demonstrated by the fact that 40 percent of the $15 million general fund is devoted to police and fire.

Under contracts negotiated five years ago, new police and fire-fighters are required to guarantee that they will not smoke and will stay in physical shape during the period of their employment.

Every afternoon at 3 p.m. — barring a fire — fire trucks can be found parked outside the middle and high schools while firefighters jog, climb and lift weights. Both departments are also equipped with weight rooms.

Personnel are tested for percentage of body fat and must continue to meet running, walking, pull-up and sit-up requirements. "We had to do something to assure fitness," said Fire Chief Ronald Specht. "It's a strenuous job. The fitness program has had a good carryover to the other guys — some of them stopped smoking and they

Prevention is the main thrust of the fire department's program. Local code requires day care centers and other institutions serving children to have an alarm system directly linked to the fire station. The ordinance covers any facility caring for more than five children.

The department also conducts what Specht calls an "aggressive" inspection program: commercial inspections three times a year, home inspections on request, multi-family dwellings every six months, schools every two months.

Police officers work out their mental powers as well as their bodies. The department conducts all of its own in-service training, including shoot/don't shoot stress situations at the basement shooting range.

"I believe in training," said Police Chief Peter Gray. "If you don't pay for the training, you pay through the courts and improper procedures. Or you pay up front. And it's cheaper to pay for the training.

So far this year, the city of 33,000 has experienced one homicide, seven rapes and 158 car thefts. "We're always comparing to other years," Gray said. "This year we're down in most of the major categories, but up by a small amount in car thefts.

"The word is out on the street that if you have a chop shop, we'll close you down," Gray said. They recently closed one in Lima, Ohio, 70 miles away, when plain clothes officers caught the operators in the act of delivering stolen parts.

Last year the department handled 83,000 emergency calls with a response time for life-endangering situations of one minute. The 6.6 square mile city is divided into five patrol zones with at least one car in each zone at any given time.

Gray himself wears police blue. "This uniform says I'm a policeman," he said. "I'm proud to be in this department and I want the of-

High tax, high quality are hallmarks of Shaker schools

Student-painted murals line many of the corridors at Shaker High School. Each year, art students present mural proposals to the student body for a vote. There are more than 50 murals - with a little wall space to go.

Every community depends on the quality of its schools as an important selling point. Shaker Heights is no different.

Every change, every advance, every influence at the schools is monitored. The school system has a long tradition of excellence and wants to keep that reputation.

So far, so good. The schools continue to show up on the important lists and receive commendations from the state and federal govern-

But the minority population in the schools has reached 44 percent. Taxes are the highest in the state. Declining enrollment has left schools underpopulated. Last year one school was closed.

The Shaker Heights school system levies a tax of 103 mills on school district residents — and is planning to request a 7.5 mill increase. Because of a system of state rebates and property assessment at 35 percent, the effective tax is less than it appears at first to Michigan eyes, but not low enough to still Shaker school

The owner of a house that would sell for $100,000 is taxed $1,630 for schools in Grosse Pointe. In Shaker Heights, the owner of the same house must pay $2,639. The high school tax has caused several storms, but so far, voters continue to approve the requests and fund a $30 million budget with a perpupil expenditure of $5,382. (Grosse Pointe spends $4,492 per That's because "grassroots organizations can't raise enough money to fight (the frequent requests)," says school critic Barbara Drossin. She charges that the high tax rate is a subtle tool against integration.

"As long as property taxes go up, there is the possibility that undesirables can't come in or will be forced out," she said.

Drossin ran for school board two years ago and lost by a small margin — though, as she points out, she got more votes than the mayor. Bringing the issues of school costs and building closings to the public's attention made the election worthwhile. She does not share the commonly expressed view that Shaker residents are well-informed and civic-minded.

"What I did was arouse an apathetic, disinterested, uninformed community," she said.

School officials say the millage increases are necessary to maintain the high quality of the academic program. Critics charge that the children of the most affluent families flock to private schools, doing nothing for the public system.

Sixteen percent of the students of school age attend the 10 private and parochial schools in the community, according to C.A. "Al" Zimmerman, principal of Shaker Heights High School. That is down from 18 percent a few years ago and compares to 16 percent in Grosse Pointe Park, 19 percent in the City, 21 percent in the Woods, 36 percent in the Farms and 44 percent in the Shores, according to the 1980 census.

Zimmerman says the private schools are not a serious drain. 'Our kids fare as well as the private school students in getting into colleges," he said. "Money won't get you into college. Colleges want a diverse population." The top 25 percent of Shaker graduates go to schools like Harvard and Yale and private Ohio colleges, with 70 percent of those applying to Johns Hopkins last year being accepted.

The public school offers opportunities not available at private schools, Zimmerman says. "An integrated high school is a rarity in upper-income suburbia." He listed major programs in drama, music, art and sports. "Private schools can't compete with that."

Shaker students have access to five years of four foreign languages, five years of high school math plus college calculus in advanced placement, an "awesome" arts program, and a summer exchange in Germany. There are also three elementary school magnet programs, in science, computers and French. They are located at the three schools with the largest minority enrollment, in order to encourage greater racial balance.

Last year, approximately 600 students participated in voluntary busing for racial balance. At the elementary level, 275 minority and 181 white students took part.

But population decline is straining the integration plan and leaving several elementary schools with fewer than 200 pupils. Last year, amid controversy, one junior high was closed and its student population combined with the area's attractiveness to upscale buyers.

other to form one 7th and 8th grade middle school.

Neighborhood schools are a thing of the past, says critic Drossin. "People have the idea that if you don't have neighborhood schools, your children will suffer," she said. "Old things die hard — people have to realize that times are changing."

School Superintendent Peter
Horoschak agrees. "We'll have to take a look at elementary reorganization," he said. "We've had re-commendations for closing two elementaries. One possibility is (to establish) a primary K-3 and an intermediate 4-6 and close some schools. It's becoming more and more evident that we'll have to do

What has come as more of a surprise to Shaker school officials is the finding that a disproportionate number of the system's underachievers are minority students. Western Michigan University was invited in to do a study, which resulted in some new reading programs designed to head off academic problems before they oc-

"Underachievement is a national frustration," says Zimmerman. One of the consequences of the WMU study was that high school students formed their own network to help each other with academic problems. Teachers are also available after school hours for inschool tutoring. And the administration is looking at the study habits of every student with less than a 2.0 grade average. One of the theories under consideration is that black students somehow tie lack of academic achievement to racial identity. 'There are some real concerns about peer pressure, especially in the upper level classes," Horoschak said.

Why black kids don't perform better is a special concern of city Councilman Peter Lawson Jones. He is black, a graduate of Shaker High School, Harvard and Harvard Law, a lawyer in private practice and a product of a family that values education as a means to upward mobility.

"Everything I do is a statement of me as a person," Jones said. "I'm somewhat of a perfectionist." Jones has pondered the under-achievement problem: Frustration, subtle racism, lack of expec-tations are all elements. "The Jewish and the Asian-American communities are fine examples of valuing education," he said. "We in the black community need to emulate that. Probably the biggest deficiency is the lack of proper role models, Jones says. "Young people can only think that if you're going to be successful you'd better sing, act or play ball. They're intimidated by the system. They're cynical. They don't believe the system will allow them to succeed. Jones hopes some day to implement a role-model program at the school. "It's particularly sad when you see those with opportunities unable to take advantage of them because of their self-limitations,' he said.

Part and parcel of the underachievement problem is the racial polarization that exists at the high school. Three years ago, the Student Group on Race Relations formed "because the students feel that polarization isn't to their benefit," said SGORR coordinator Marcia Jaffe. The group now involves more than 100 students.

Students formulate a curriculum and take it on the road to sixth grade classes. They discuss things like the non-verbal put-down, the laugh as a put-down, peer pressure, self-image. The first measure of their success will occur this fall when the first class of sixthgraders reaches the high school.

'When people ask how successful we've been, they really mean have we dispelled all discrimination in the secondary schools," Jaffe said. The answer, of course,

'The problem is obvious, but my eyes weren't open to it at the time," Bond said. "It's a problem you don't want to think about."
Progress is hard to measure but the group hopes it is at least creating awareness. "I know I'm making a big difference in myself," Bond said.

"I've always had black and white friends as long as I can remember," said Janet Blair, a black senior planning to attend the University of Southern California. "It bothered me that Shaker was together in name only. There was no meaningful interaction. One problem even SGORR has is that whites dominate the leadership positions, Blair said. Nevertheless, "I wouldn't want to live anywhere else." The student population is one of the things that makes Shaker stand out," said Superintendent Horoschak. "We're not satisfied, we're not complacent, but we should be able to achieve (successful integration). If it doesn't work here, where will it work? The population has changed over the vears, but the standards haven't, the quality hasn't."

Schools Community Relations Director Joseph Szwaja gave a cheer for Shaker Heights' diversity. "You name it, we've got it," he said. "Rich, poor, cosmopolitan, radical, conservative, Jew, Gentile. So many communities have given up on race. They throw their hands up and say, oh God, what's going to happen to us? This community didn't wait to be told what to do. Race is the biggest concern bothering potential Shaker residents. To assuage their worries, Szwaja is putting together a brochure detailing the advantages of the community: the proven track record of the schools, comprehensive city services, the civic-minded population, the area's natural beauty, and the easy access to downtown. Families, perhaps especially white families, thinking of moving into the district are given VIP tours of the facilities. 'Whites may have heard that Shaker isn't what is used to be,' Szwaja said. "We want them to see the community without prejudg-

Amusez-vous bien au Marché Français

Or - have a great time at the French Market

By Elsa Frohman

What better place to have a rendezvous? Eh?

The 14th annual French Market at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial will offer everything a budding Francophile could ask for — Can-Can dancers, French food, French singers, French atmosphere and more on July 12 and 13.

"We put this on to raise money," said Warren Wilkinson, president of the market association. "But it also gives visibility to our French heritage and reminds people that this place was founded by the Funds raised by the French Market have furnished a French ethnic room at Wayne State University, outfitted a "French army" for the re-enactment of Cadillac's landing in Detroit during the Bi-centennial, and provided historic markers in several locations around the area, including the bilingual plaque at Hart Plaza. Another project funded by the group was a historical diorama at the Detroit Historical Museum.

"The money goes for the good things we do," Wilkinson said.
"But we also do it to make people feel good. It's a pleasure to come to the market - even for those not particularly interested in French language and culture. There is good entertainment and good

Many people mistakenly believe that the market is a program of the Alliance Française de Grosse Pointe. Even though many of the people in the French Market group are also in the Alliance, there is actually no connection.

"They are interested in French culture and language," Wilkinson said. "We're interested in historical France.'

Wilkinson's interest in French comes through his wife, Mireille, a native French speaker. Other members of the group came to the interest through different paths, but they agree that learning the language stimulated a desire to know more about the culture and history of the country.

"It's interesting what an interest in a language can get you into," said Denise Controulis, food chairman for the affair. "It think I first became interested in French because of my first name, which is

The French Market was first or-ganized by Nicole Stroh in 1973 to raise money for the proposed French room at Wayne State University. It took three years to raise the money for the room and afterward, the group moved on to other projects.
Over the past 14 years, the market has been a consistent money-maker, though some years have been better than others.

"It could be a disaster," said Vera Axsom, vice president of the market. "It could rain — one year it was so cold we had to work in sweaters.'

This year, for the first time, all the food will be sold inside the Alger House. That will partially "rain-proof" the festival.

"I have a feeling this will be a good year," said Wilkinson. Admission to the festival is free. It opens at 11:30 a.m. on Saturday and run until 8 p.m. On Sunday the hours will be 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

"Actually, we start when the customers get there," Axsom said. 'We have had people coming through before we're completely

Visitors will find a festive French ambiance and lively entertainment. There will be the traditional Can-Can dancing by the Jazz Co. Troupe. The menu on Sunday morning will include fresh-baked croissants and brioche and jams. "A lot of people come early for brunch on Sunday," said Controulis. "The food is always marvellous."

Snacks will include pastries baked by members of the market, French bread, cheese, Salade Nicoise and crepes. There will also be beer, wine, champagne, lemonade and coffee. "We'll even have hot dogs," said Controulis.

"It's a family affair," said Axsom. "It's a fun place to go for everybody."

"I'd guess we get about 3,000 people each year," Wilkinson said. "There must be about 150 of us who work. The food is really good and its all prepared by hand in the kitchen that day. It takes a lot of de-dicated workers to put this on."

a success. The market will be held on July 12 and 13 from 11:30

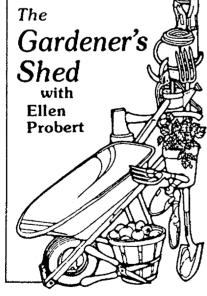

Now is the time of year when cut flowers from the garden can be used to great effect in every room in the house, providing color, scent and coolness on hot summer days. (Did you ever notice that flower petals are always cool to the touch?)

And now is the time to get out your prettiest vases and to think about other containers that might be used in original ways. Try a silver gravy boat as a vase for a magnificent arrangement of roses. That idea was a prizewinner at the Grosse Pointe Rose Society's Spring Show last week at the Neighborhood Club.

Flowers can be combined in original ways to enhance the color scheme of a room, bring out the blues or reds in an oriental rug or complement a painting on the wall. Anything from miniature roses in a demitasse cup-andsaucer to three-foot-tall hyacinths or larkspur in an umbrella stand are possibilities.

The Grosse Pointe Garden Center has many books on flower arrangements of all kinds in its garden library in addition to such helpful volumes as 'How to Make Cut Flowers Last," by Victoria Kasperski, who for many years did the flower arrangements at Mount Vernon; several books on how to make corsages and boutonniers, and everything from Williamsburg's "An Eighteenth Century Garland" to "Contemporary Flower Arrangement" by Rae Goldson. There are also books on Japanese flower arranging and books on table settings, church decorations and party centerpieces. It's not necessary to be a member of the Garden Center to browse in the center's library on the second floor of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, although new members are always wel-

More about roses: Karen Vogel of Grosse Pointe Woods is a specialist in antique roses — the lovely old-fashioned ones that were found in Colonial gardens and were used in Victorian nosegays. Her trellised garden contains such nostalgic examples as Rosa Rugosa, Nancy, the Bourbon Rose and Damask roses, the latter two popular in the 18th and 19th centuries. Karen, who is a member of the Heritage Rose Group, would like to offer cuttings of her special roses to anyone interested in adding antique roses to a garden. She is interested in acquiring other old roses if anyone has cuttings to trade. Call 881-5836.

The new wildflower garden near the Garden Center's Trial Gardens at the War Memorial is a must-see. Grand Marais Garden Club members have planted a charming variety of herbs and flowers in an approximation of their natural woodland habitat.

Among the delicate young plants are wild herbs such as basil, thyme and sage and wild ginger. Flowering plants include Jack-in-the-pulpit, Solomon's seal, wild geranium, rue, bleeding hearts, buttercups, and as-

A special feature is a group of very rare red trilliums which were the gift of Doris Weaver.

On Tuesday, July 8, from 10 a.m. until noon, Mr. and Mrs. Monte Edelin will host a gathering of local bonsai enthusiasts for a garden meeting of the Grosse Pointe Bonsai Association which is affiliated with the Grosse Pointe Garden Center. Esther Edelin has long been recognized as an expert in the "living art" of bonsai. Anyone interested in participating in the many programs offered by the Bonsai Association can obtain more information by calling the Garden Center on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Question of the Week: What is water dowsing and how does it

Answer: Water dowsing, or water witching, is an age-old method of determining the presence of underground water and was used for centuries to find a likely spot to locate a well, a very important matter in early America as it had been for earlier generations in Europe.

If you would like to find out if you have the ability (not everyone has) find a forked tree branch, shaped somewhat like a wishbone. Hold the two ends of the forked branch with the palms of your hands facing up. Walk slowly holding the branch so that it points straight up. When you approach a source of flowing water (even if it is an underground water pipe) you will feel a strong pull on the branch as it begins to Highly nutritious, sweet potatoes form an extremely important item of daily diet for countless millions of people in the tropics, from Brazil to New Guinea. Sweet potatoes contain rich stores of complex carbohydrates (burns energy slower than sugar for longer lasting pep), vitamins A, Beta Carotene, C, potassium and calcium

Clothing styles define our roles as both men and women of our time

Smithsonian News Service

Why do we wear the clothes we do, where we do, when we do? Why is it that women wear trousers, but men won't wear skirts (yet)? How and why has our appearance changed so much in the past two centuries? Just what is the relationship between who we are and the way we choose - or are told - to look?

These are among the questions being asked by Smithsonian Institution researchers working on a project titled "Men and Women: Dressing the Part' that explores the relationship between appearance and gender identity.

'We are born male or female, but we learn to become men or women, how to look and play the part," says project director Claudia Brush Kidwell, curator of the Division of Costume at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C. Today, "power-dressing" is an issue for both sexes. And though both men and women dress to please themselves, they do so within the limits set by society, or by their segment of it.

"It is fascinating to see the changing definitions of masculinity and femininity and how appropriate behavior varies according to circumstances," Kidwell says. Edwardian ladies wrapped themselves in wool at the beach and bared astonishing decolletages in evening dress. Modern businessmen who would not think of relinquishing coat or tie during the week spend weekends lounging in outfits that a few decades ago were the sole property of cowboys. Punk, like the "careless" dress of the '60s, has its rules, though they may be indecipherable to the outsider.

Some of the most interesting moments in fashion history arise when one sex adopts — or tries to adopt — an aspect of appearance usually associated with the opposite gender. Varying degrees of ridicule and of fear that one sex will become dangerously like the other result from such assaults on the bounds of propriety.

'The Victorians were not nearly as prudish as our stereotype of says fashion historian Valerie Steele, author of "Fashion and Eroticism." The length of a lady's skirt said as much about her social position or age as her modesty: Short skirts were for servants or little girls. At a fancy dress ball, with her own set, a respectable lady might have no qualms about showing her "limbs." But to dress like a man? That was something else entirely, as museum specialist Shelly Foote's research reveals.

In 1851, a group of women's rights activists proposed a "rational" dress consisting of pants worn under a shortened — but still well-below-the-knee-skirt. decried contemporary fashion, which burdened women with tight-laced corsets and several pounds of petticoats and skirt; these weighed them down and picked up mud and debris, swathing the wearers' legs in damp, filthy fabric.

When women appeared in the outfit, they created a sensation. 'It was a major news event." Foote says. The question: "Do women have the right to wear trousers?" A common answer: "It is an abomination unto the Lord!" The press christened the new costume and the women who wore it after women's rights activist Amelia Jenks Bloomer. The specter arose of the aggressive, unmotherly, manlike woman. "Bloomers" Caricatures of showed them smoking, drinking and making passes at different young gentlemen on the street, on their knees proposing to shy beaux or bossing hapless, henpecked husbands.

Many bats

Bats are the only mammals that fly, but they constitute almost a quarter of all mammal species, says National Geographic.

"The public pressure was more than the average woman could take," Foote says. "Women were taunted in the street, and even staunch supporters gave in because the ridicule was damaging the cause of women's rights.

The "New Woman" of the late 19th and early 20th century faced widening horizons, in work and leisure. Secretarial work — originally considered too strenuous for women - became an acceptable occupation for a lady. Appropriate dress was an important consideration. "A girl in toofeminine finery gives the impression of being more interested in men and in ice cream," the Ladies Home Journal admon-ished in 1907. The working girl's uniform, a tailored suit or skirt and white blouse, appeared.

The new woman was allowed more practical clothing for her sporting activities, but practicality had its limits. "Masculine" dress was still deplored. Like her intrepid grandmother, she climbed mountains in skirts. Bicycle manufacturers developed a "safety" model, which a lady could ride without resorting to knickers.

Two Wold Wars required 'men's work" from women, putting them in dungarees, uniforms, helmets and combat boots. But in the late '40s, women found themselves "back in civvies," as one ad described it, civvies being the tiny "wasp" waist, push-up brassiere and long skirts of an ultrafeminine new look. Women also found themselves firmly placed back in the home, kitchen and nursery. Even the working girl got a clear message about priorities: "Capture a man and a career in Betty Rose coats and suits," a 1955 ad in Mademoiselle advised. In the '50s, strict conformity was not only a woman's role. An ad in Life warned men: You're being watched! Dress Right — you can't afford not to!"
When the Beatles appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show in 1963, many older viewers were as much shocked by their "long" hair as by their music. There was worse to come in the fall of 1964, when returning students brought the new look back to their college campuses and high schools. Headmasters took shears in hand and suspended the defiant. Justifications included the danger of obscured vision (apparently girls were magically immune). But Foote says the essential concern was betrayed in the ruling of one local judge who ordered a boy to have his hair cut "because he looks too feminine."

Humorists performed variations on the mistaken identity theme, but "the press and media never really put pressure on; the resistance came from an older generation already some missed by the young." Unlike the Bloomer ladies, who had a place to maintain in society and no wave of social upheaval to ride, the rebellious youth of the '60s thrived on criticism. Long hair became part of the generation gap, social protest and rock music; embodied in the musical "Hair," it became a symbol of a generation.

Curiously enough, 1964 also was the introduction of the first true trouser suit for women. The event raised a furor of debate about the propriety of such clothing, which was promptly banned by office managers and restauranteurs

Steele's research into the history of uniforms reveals how control of an individual's dress and control of his/her role can go hand in hand. Until the mid-1970s, women police officers were handicapped by high heels, gloves, skirts, pillbox hats — and purses to carry their weapons in. The genteel outfits made it almost impossible to do more than the searching and olerical duties to which women were restricted. "Then came the 1972 Civil Rights amendment, and in 1973 uniforms became identical," Steele says. Today, the message is power. A young New York policewoman reports: "To most people, I'm a uni-

Similarly, Eastern Airlines found that the introduction of a military-style flight attendant's uniform coincided with a significant drop in in-flight assaults— at least on female attendants. Ironically, Pinkerton's had less success with a uniform change. A macho, commando-style dress on their male security guards actualy provoked violence.

Cabaret will raise funds for education and support for Parkinsonians

By Elsa Frohman When eastsiders gather at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club on July 9, they will be entertained by several of the area's most talented doctors, as well as a nice variety of regular entertainers. But more important, they will be supporting the efforts of the Michigan Park-inson Foundation to set up support groups for victims of Parkinsonism and their families throughout the state.

The MPF Cabaret will be one of several fundraisers this year for the fledgling organization. MPF was organized just three years ago in July 1983 and the group is still struggling for the kind of stabili-ty, effectiveness and recognition enjoyed by other groups, such as the Michigan Cancer Foundation, the Lung Association, the Heart Association and the March of Dimes. Yet, for its newness in the field of medical fundraising, its tight budget and its low recognition level, MPF is gaining a foothold. After just three years in operation, the group operates more than 20 support groups for Parkinsonians throughout the state, publishes a newsletter and holds regular physician symposiums to educate practitioners about treatments and management of Parkinson's Disease.

"I got involved in this because the services are so much needed' said Marce Haney, director of the cabaret. "So few people know about the disease, how to handle it and how to recognize it."

Behind the foundation is Raymond Bauer, a neurologist who saw the need for such an organization when a patient was referred to him by a similar group in the Chicago area.

"The history dates back to 1979," Bauer said. "A patient was referred to me by the United Parkinson Foundation in Chicago. I said, wouldn't it be nice if we had something like that in Michigan."

However, the formation of the foundation was delayed when Bauer became ill in 1981. In 1982, the first workshop was organized through Harper Hospital and the plans were in the works for a foun-

After an open forum on Parkinson's in January 1983, the founda-tion was off the ground. Incorporation papers were filed in July of that vear.

The forum was more popular than anyone could have imagined. After preliminary press exposure, so many people called to find out about the forum that two sessions had to be organized.

The first support group met at the Whittier. The foundation was official and was developing programs, but the problem of money remained. The foundation's first windfall came from a Parkinsonian, Lillian Fischer, who gave a memorial to her mother to the group. It was a small endowment, but enough to get a primarily volunteer organization off the ground.

At first, the annual forum was named the Jenny Fischer Memorial Lecture. After the death of Lillian Fischer, the name was changed to the Jenny and Lillian Fischer Memorial Lecture.

For Bauer, the foundation was more than a sideline. His illness prevented him from going back to work and MPF provided him with a healing activity.

'My two specialties were stroke research and Parkinson's research," Bauer said. "I couldn't get back to work. This has kept me

The foundation operates on a cliffhanger budget, always trusting that next year's money will materialize. So far, they have been successful. Currently, the group operates on a $112,000 annual budget.

"We have no assured income," said David Nesbitt, executive director and one of only two full-time employees of the foundation. "We hope money will come in again, but theoretically, we have zero for Bauer would like to see a stable endowment for the foundation.

"I dream of something like that," Bauer said. "An endowment we won't be secure until we know we can operate off the interest from our assets. We're only beginning to touch base for that sort of thing."

. The foundation concentrates its resources on education and support. Currently, it has no funds to give out for research, like many of the other medical foundations do.

MPF is especially handicapped by the lack of a single, national foundation for Parkinsonism. While local cancer groups and heart disease groups and muscular dystrophy and multiple sclerosis groups can rely on national organizations for financial support, there is no such resource for Park-

'There are four organizations that deal with Parkinson's," Bauer explained. "These four cannot get together to form one organization. They are all doing similar things, but they all have their little personal domains. That makes a difference.'

MPF is the only statewide Parkinson's organization in the United States, Bauer said.

"With the Cancer Society, there is a national thrust," Nesbitt said. Bauer believes that the lack of a national spokesperson for Parkinsonism has made their task more

'The National Parkinson's Foundation (based in Miami) has Bob Hope for a spokesperson," Bauer said. "They have the abili-ty to raise money but they don't give it to other organizations.'

On the other hand, the Parkinson's Disease Foundation, based in New York, has given the MPF a grant for this year, for the first time. MPF hopes that the grant will be a continuing one, but has no guarantee.

Bauer and Nesbitt count education as the most important function of MPF. They would like to have funds to allocate to research, however, currently the group works to help Parkinsonians in immediate ways.

"It's important for people to have the feeling that something is being done," Bauer said. "But we want to do something for the people here and now.'

Education is an important part of the treatment process for Parkinsonians. The disease is a slowly progressive disorder of the central nervous system, causing tremor, rigidity, slowness of movement. Without treatment, it can be severely disabling. With treatment, Parkinsonians can expect many years of useful life. Since the late 1960s Parkinsonism has been treated with a drug, not unlike the administration of insulin to diabetics, to replace the missing substance that is causing the nerve damage. Bauer explained that he is still treating some patients who started the treatment when it was new. While their condition continues to deteriorate slowly, the limit to the effectiveness of the drug has not been reached yet for many patients.

However, Parkinsonians must learn to live with their disability. They must overcome inhibitions about appearing in public and learn to make up for the functions that are impaired.

"This kind of day to day knowledge is best passed from person to person," Nesbitt said. "It provides an emotional release.'

Next Wednesday's cabaret will provide a substantial portion of the operating funds for the coming year for MPF. Tickets are $75 per person and include drinks and hors

How I know when it's time to go

My dog-eared little dictionary tells me that a vacation is defined as a "period of rest from one's work or study." Don't I know it. So, while I take a two-week period of rest from my exhaustingly-difficult job (which includes such tasks as traveling to Montreal for the National Hockey League draft; sitting in the sun from mid-April through July soaking up rays, er, covering softball, baseball and soccer; wandering down by the waterfront to keep up with the aquatic action), reporter Mike Andrzejczyk will wear my sports editor's hat. (Be nice to him. He's dealt with soccer parents before . . . he takes no prisoners).

How do I know it's time for my vacation?

... I start using terms like "aquatic action."

. . Most of the sentences I write these days feature a precariously dangling participle. A sad state of affairs I apologize for.

... I use words like precariously. And like it.

. . . I spend hours cleaning out and reorganizing my photo file. You know things are getting pretty desperate when I'm amused for well over five minutes with the discovery that I am the proud possessor of no less than six - count 'em, six - photos of University Liggett School tennis coach and athletic director Bob Wood. My favorite is Wood's casual shot, which has him posing in his tennis togs.

. . I actually begin to worry about such things as the Woods-Shores Little League not submitting any results this spring. Normally, I pray that the folks who are doggedly determined to help me set a record for "most Little League results crammed into one page of a newspaper," develop writer's cramp or short out their typewriters. But this year, while the Farms-City and Park leagues have been more-than-adequately represented by those nice people who submit results every Monday, I've heard nada from the Woods-

I know you're out there, Woods-Shores. I can hear you furning. (Now watch somebody from the Woods-Shores Little League try to submit an entire season's worth of highlights in one week.)

Good thing I'm getting out while the going's good.

... I worry about psyching myself up for backyard volleyball games. (Unless you don't think that reading "Eat to Win" before every game is going too far.)

But then you've never seen me play. I've been known to spike the ball in the general direction of an 8-year-old who was just that much too slow.

Hey, there are no friends in backyard volleyball.

And what am I going to do on my vacation? Check this out . . .

. I'm going to laugh at the sports columnists on the big daily papers and at the radio DJs and TV news anchors who moaned and groaned about the Tiger season being all but over a few weeks back. Over, as in kaput. Finished. Outta here.

Well, won't they have lots to crow to eat when the Tigers' current hot streak rockets them past Milwaukee, Toronto and — dare I say it Cleveland? - straight into third

. . . I'm going to try not to miss big sporting events on TV. Or at least, not the crucial portions of big sporting events, like I did while watching last Sunday's World Cup

I hadn't really paid much attention to the World Cup (it kind of lost its luster for me when the Canadian team was ousted, eh?) until the final. But after I watched a team of German kids play a friendly game against University Liggett School kickers on Saturday, I was all pumped up to watch the German national squad take on Argentina the

I didn't even worry with Argentina went up, 2-0, knowing all the while that Germany could come back. And they did, too. Only they did it while I was in the kitchen, mak-

... All kidding aside (is that what this is?); one thing I WON'T be doing on my vacation is diving. And Pointer Ronald Gilbert, chairman of the Aquatic Injury Safety Group (AISG), hopes that everyone else

The peak swimming season is now. Unfortunately, it's also the peak season for fatal and/or paralyzing spinal cord injuries sustained in diving accidents. Gilbert warns all swimmers to refrain from diving. He adds that a copy of his 10-by-14-inch "Danger — No Diving" sign for pool owners to display is available by contacting Ronald R. Gilbert, AISG, 1555 Penobscot Bldg., Detroit, MI

As for me, I'm going to "dive" right into my two-week period of rest from dreaming up columns and figuring out ways to spend my vacation.

Gearing up for life in the fast lane

By Peggy O'Connor

Chip Secor had always loved big boys' toys: fast boats and sleek cars. But he'd gotten married at 19, and business and family obligations restricted his participation to the occasional racing of offshore boats.

Then came the first Detroit Grand Prix back in 1982. He got turned on to auto racing in a big way. By 1984, he had organized his own Detroit-based racing team, Magic Racing, to help new drivers. And when Grand Prix V rolled around last month, three of Magic Racing's drivers - including the 43-year-old Secor — were participants in support

"I'd always loved racing as a kid, but when I finally began to have time to enjoy it, I thought I was too old to race cars," says the Trombley Road resident. "Then I saw the first Detroit Grand Prix and watched as Paul Newman and some of these other guys were out there . . . and they were older than me. That's when I realized that anybody can do it as long as they race at their own level."

Secor, who works full time as owner of the M. Sterling Company, makers of business brochures and industrial films, among other things, started at the low-est level: the Skip Barber Racing School. There he met Hank Chapman, one of the instructors, and got the inspiration to start his own racing team.

'Hank really impressed me. He's got that intangible inner quality that is so important for a good driver. When he gets in a car, he flows. It becomes part

"But he wasn't racing because he needed financial backing. So I thought, 'why don't I see if I can put a package together, get some backing and benefit both of us," Secor recalls. "We did that and this year we added Rocky Eversman. It's been a rough haul trying to get money, but we're on our way.

Chapman drove in the Super Vee portion of the June 22 Grand Prix lineup, finishing 11th. Eversman and Secor, each with one year experience in racing Formula Fords, competed for the first time in Sport Renault. Eversman finished 24th and Secor, 27th.
"It's a whole new ballgame. The Detroit course is really different; not as bad as everybody says. It's a little bumpy, but the layout is nice," Secor says.

That's probably the last time that Secor will race Sport Renault. Sport Renault was the only level open to him and he desperately wanted to drive in the Detroit Grand Prix.

About as much as he wants to build up strong sponsor support for Magic Racing. Without it, there really isn't much of a team. "If you could make a living at racing, it would be terrific. And you could, if you could get enough major sponsors. But that's what everybody is looking for, so they're few and far between.

"So far, the money has come from my friends, and from a few of the sponsors I was able to get through those friends. We want to make ourselves attractive to the kind of sponsors we need to be successful," Secor said. "They look for the fact that we're young, that we're trying to improve, to be winning racers."

Winning, of course, is what it's all about. "Everybody wants to be associated with a winner," Secor adds.
Right now, Magic Racing is confining itself to building that winning image, remaining at its own level. Secor says Magic will try to compete in four or five major races this year, as well as eight or nine Formula Ford races. The schedule includes the Midwestern Series, RoadAmerica and the Mid-Ohio

"I'd like to be able to drive endurance races next year," Secor says. "And then step up to TransAm the following year. Ideally, the organization would flow with Secor said he'd like to see Eversman, a rugged individualist who seems to fit the image of the 1980s driver, end up driving Indy cars. "He's the epitome of a driver; he says almost nothing, but he fits the image. He's the eyes and teeth you don't want to see in your rearview mirror," Secor said, borrowing a phrase from racers' lingo.

Secor, who describes himself as a "perfectionist with a little bit of an ego problem," has the difficult task of seeing to it that the career goals of his drivers are met, while making sure that his own racing efforts don't go neglect-

Chip Secor, next to his Lotus

"Racing is a culmination of a lot of things in my life . . . it's therapy, really. Every time I get into a car, I take myself to the edge. I have to control myself — control the fear, the tendancies to make mistakes — or I lose control of the car. And you don't want to do that.

"It's amazing what you learn about yourself that way."

Secor says his family takes it pretty much in stride. His children are proud of their father's newfound career and his mother and girlfriend confess to being a little worried about his safety.

In fact, Secor spun out twice and was involved in a minor accident in the practice runs before the Grand Prix. "It's (an accident) in the back of your mind, but you tend to worry less about what you do and more about what other drivers can do to you.'

By next year, Magic Racing hopes to have a sponsored car at each level of racing in the Detroit Grand Prix, including Formula One. It's a lofty aspiration, but Secor, aware of how far he's already come in a relatively short time, says he feels he can do it.

"Idealistically, I'd love to be like Roger Penske. What team manager wouldn't? All I know is, if you love something the way I love racing, you set goals. And you don't quit if you don't reach them.

"You just keep on striving."

Pointers challenge in Mantle League

Grosse Pointe snapped a four-game losing streak, defeating Ro-chester E.F. Hutton, 6-3, in a Mickey Mantle League game played at Elworthy Field, June 22. The Pointers fought back from a 3-2 deficit with four runs in the fifth, aided by four Rochester errors. Grosse Pointe pitcher Rusty Knowles turned in a sparkling performance giving up no hits or runs in a four-inning relief stint, raising his record to 3-0. Catcher Mike Paul and first baseman Russ Rice led the hitters with two singles

After jumping out to a 7-1 record and first place, the Grosse Pointe entry in the 15-16-year-old Mickey Mantle League lost four straight games to Sterling Heights Team Tire and Utica TSI, dropping to third place in the American Division of the traveling league, which is composed of teams from Lake Orion, Mount Clemens, Utica, Sterling Heights, Warren, Roches-ter, East Detroit, Romeo and Troy.

Grosse Pointe manager Mike Johnson, who led the South High JV team to a first-place finish in the Eastern Michigan League and a best-ever South record of 19-3, credits a solid defense, timely hitting and consistent pitching for the Pointers' success. Johnson is assisted by coaches Matt Reno and Phil Guastella.

Composed of the top 15-16-yearold players from the Park, Farms and Woods, the Grosse Pointe team plays a 22-game schedule, with all teams finishing with a .500 record or better qualifying for the league playoffs and tournament beginning July 15.

The Pointers opened the season on the road with a 7-3 win over Mount Clemens. Starting pitcher John Joliet held Mount Clemens scoreless for the first four innings, allowing only two hits and no walks. Mark Belanger finished on the mound for Grosse Pointe and allowed only one earned run. Third baseman Bryan Jones led off the game with a home run; Belanger had a two-run single in the second.

Grosse Pointe extended its record to 3-0 with a doubleheader win over Sterling Heights M.T.H. on June 15, winning 2-0 behind Marc Wysocki's second hit shutout in the opener. Allowing only a single in the first inning and a double in the seventh. Wysocki struck out nine and walked four batters. Paull and Rice led the hitters with two singles and one RBI each.

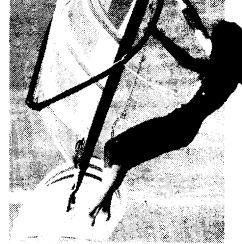

Trailing 5-2 after four innings, the Pointers erupted for 12 runs in the fifth to take the nightcap, 15-5. The hitters were led by team co-captain Marty Saad, Wysocki, outfielder Chuck Thomas and Jones, with two hits each. Jones and Thomas each had key two-run singles in the fifth. Kevin Barnes singled and Ed Dorda doubled him home, but the Yankees retaliated when Dan Minadeo, Chris Nixon and Kyle Hoye crossed the plate in the bottom of the first.

The Cards took the lead again in the third on Danny Commer's homer, but the Yanks got back in front on homers from Matt Recht and Kevin Rauch (a two-run shot), a double by Sean Recht and a bases-loaded sacrifice fly by Minadeo. The Yanks cinched the win on K. Hoye's homer and an RBI single by S. Recht which scored Rauch, who had Hoye, who struck out five, and M. Recht, who fanned six, split the pitching duties. Commer struck out six in four innings for the Cards; Dorda relieved in the fifth, allowing no hits and striking out two. In the sixth, Dorda and Ryan McCartney scored in a Chris Holley double with one out, but Recht struck out two of the next three to preserve the victory.

The playoffs begin this week, with the No. 1 Yankees facing the White Sox and the Cardinals playing last season's World Series champion Orioles.

The Park Orioles beat the Farms Tigers, 15-8. Matt Jacklyn and Matt Bentley pitched for the Orioles; David Auld and David Tucker were on the mound for the Tigers. The women are revving up for their fourth Port Huron to Mackinac Race in mid-July, anticipating their first victory with Joss. They're looking forward to some tough competition from the more than 275 boats owned by men.

Shields and Thompson and their crew of six women could NOT be described as "ladies who lunch."

These are eight women who are not afraid to break a fingernail, or ruin a hairdo, or sit in the rain for three days straight in a shapeless suit and bulky boots. They'll wear gloves that reek of mildew. They'll inch out onto a slippery deck in 45 mph winds to adjust a sail until it's just so. They'll forego mascara, warmth, dryness — even a conventional toilet — just so they can sail.

These are women with stamina, smarts and courage; women who take challenges head on, who are proud they're pulling their own weight and blazing their own trails. They're a feisty, gutsy, tough-talking group of hardy competitors.

You couldn't assemble a more dissimilar group if you tried. Thompson, 37, is a bookkeeper. Shields, 38, sells computers. Joyce Wynn, 27, is a bartender. Joan Blair is 40, an attorney and a concert violinist. Jane Sherry, 23, is a systems analyst. Kim Kelly, 16, a high school junior, is the proud owner of a brand new drivers' license. She also plays the clarinet and races Sunfish. Arlene Darick, 34, is associate director of Health Management Services, and Kathy Nutter, 30, a dental hygenist. They're single, married, divorced, mothers and daughters.

The core of the group has sailed together for about three years, and most have crewed on other boats. Thompson and Shields have owned Joss for four years. They've gradually assembled this remarkable crew and they're all setting their sights high for the 1986 Mackinac.

'Last year we made a couple of mistakes because we were extremely exhausted," Thompson said. "This year we'll race smart. Women have better stamina. We showed that last year."

Last year's Mackinac sailors faced weather that was the toughest in memory as one-third of the fleet dropped out of the race and one boat sank. Of 13 starters in their class, Joss placed sixth out of the seven that finished. "Just finishing made us winners," Shields said. "That brought us more respect than anything else so far.

"Men are stronger. That's a fact," Thompson said. "But we've geared this boat to the physical limitations of women. An NA 40 would be too much boat for us.'

She recalled the last few wet, miserable hours of the 1985 Mackinac when nobody could sleep even though they were exhausted, and every single item aboard the boat was wet. They were huddled together in the cockpit, joking about their next Mackinac; in 1986, they said, they were going to do their nails and fix their hair and sit on the balcony of the Iroquois Hotel, sipping daiquiris, to watch the fleet come in.

"Less than an hour after we finished the race," Thompson said, "I heard someone talking about how we could improve our strategy in 1986, what new gear we should buy, and how we could outsmart the competition the next year." Nobody really wanted to sit on the balcony and sip daiquiris.

On a recent Thursday evening most of the crew headed into Lake St. Clair for a race in the Sunset Series, a weekly competition for NA 40s, Tartan 10s and Catalina 38s. Because of stormy skies, light rain and 25 mph winds that were gusting up to 30 or so, they decided not to race. Instead, the crew practiced some maneuvers and checked out the rest of the competition.

They reefed the main and sat shoulder-to-shoulder in their foul weather gear, enjoying the wind and rain, sharing a bottle of champagne. They talked about incidents at work, about personal relationships, about individual successes and failures of the past week. They networked, they supported each other, they enjoyed each other's diverse experiences. They evaluated and criticized the strategies of the men who were racing that Thursday: who put up a chute and why, who rounded the wrong mark, why the 'kumquats'' were in the wrong place again. (Kumquat is their nickname for a Catalina 38. "It's a word that just evolved because those 38s are always in the way. They're just always where they shouldn't be," someone explained.)

Joss is not intended for luxurious cruising. Some basic accommodations, such as bunks and toilets, are absent. The cabin is a jumble of tools, spare parts, clothing and sailing gear. Nobody goes below anyway.

"We bought this boat because we weren't accepted on other boats unless we were someone's girlfriend," Thompson said. "That has changed in the last five years, though.

Darick said that most men sailors respect their efforts. "Some are not pleased. Some are uncomfortable about us. But I don't let that bother me. I'm having fun and I think most of the men respect what we're doing.

Warren Titans at Bishop Foley High School on June 17. Three errors in the third inning led to two unearned runs and a victory for Warren. Joliet pitched a strong game, allowing only two hits and four walks. Grosse Pointe collected only five hits, including two singles by Thomas.

Grosse Pointe came back to avenge its only loss with a 10-0 triumph over Warren in a game played at Elworthy Field on June 18. Belanger won his first game of the season, allowing only one hit in his four shutout innings, walking only one and striking out four. The hitters were again led by Thomas, who had three hits. Saad added two singles and three RBI.

A June 22 doubleheader victory over the Sterling Heights Braves increased the Pointers' record to 7-1 with a 5-4 extra-inning battle in the opener and an 11-1 trouncing in the second game.

The Pointers' record dropped to 7-2 with a 4-3 loss to Sterling Heights Team Tire, on June 24. S.H. scored three runs in the fifth to overcome a 2-1 Grosse Pointe lead. Three Pointe errors plus two Sterling Heights hits and two walks accounted for the runs. Rice and Dino Vento pitched well for Grosse Pointe; Wysocki, Saad and Dudeck led the batters with two hits each. But the unearned runs were too much to overcome for the Pointers, despite two sparkling, inning-ending double plays turned in by the Pointe keystone combination of Dudek and Saad.

Disaster struck in a doubleheader loss played in blistering heat and humidity at Utica last Saturday, as the T.S.I. team took Grosse Pointe 4-0 in the first game followed by a 10-6 extra inning nightcap loss for the Pointers.
Joliet started for Grosse Pointe in the opener and threw four shutout innings before allowing all four runs in a disastrous fifth inning. Vento finished for the Pointers with scoreless relief. Leftfielder Matt Montagne collected two hits.

Grosse Pointe jumped out to a 3-0 lead after two innings in the nightcap, only to lose it when Utica came back with three runs in both the fourth and 5th innings. The Pointers fought back to tie it with three runs in the bottom of the fifth, and held on until the ninth inning when Utica scored four runs on two walks, two singles and an error to win the game, 10-6. Wysocki led the Pointe batters with two singles; Saad added a double, sacrifice fly and one RBI and Montagne had an RBI single. Belanger and Vento handled the Grosse Pointe pitching chores.

The four-game losing streak came to an end with the 6-3 win over Rochester on Sunday, upping Grosse Pointe's record to 8-5 and third place, two games behind the league leaders.

Grosse Pointe's upcoming schedule includes a July 3 game against Lake Orion at Elworthy Field in Grosse Pointe. The Pointers then face the Sterling Heights Mets in a doubleheader beginning at noon on Sunday, July 6, at Elworthy Field, followed by a July 8 game at Elworthy against Mount Clemens starting at 6:15 p.m., and July 9 game against Rochester at Oakland University beginning at 6:30 p.m. The regular season concludes with a July 13 doubleheader on the road against Second place went to the Red Sox (12-7); third place, to the Orioles (9-9); and the final spot to the Blue Jays (8-11), who had a strong second half. Overcast skies and storm warn- finished the morning event oneings didn't faze the 14 skippers and crew who showed up for the Crescent Sail Yacht Club's Fleet 51 Invitational Lightning Regatta June 14 and 15. Some of the participants came from as far away as Bay Ci-two-three.

The afternoon race was cancelled because of the dead air and after the Saturday evening steak roast organized by dinner committee skipper Maureen Konon, the crews met again on Sunday morning to face shifting winds. Park finished first in this leg of the race, followed by Nickels and Bill Seaman of Lake Fenton.

The final race followed almost Nickels of Lake Fenton, who immediately, under stable winds

The final standings: (from first to 14th) Park, (second, first, fifth); Vickers (first, seventh, second); Nickels (third, second, sixth); Dave Marriott of Pontiac (fifth, fourth, seventh); Mathers (10th, sixth, first); Seaman (sixth, third,

Best saved for the last in 'Running Scared'

By Michael Chapp

When all is said and done, "Running Scared" is a pretty decent comedy and an even better drama. It's really a shame though, that audiences will have to wait 90 minutes before finding this out; because while the last half-hour of "Running" is tight, clear and exceptionally well handled, the first and Gregory Hines as tough-guy Chicago police officers. Neither of these guys looks tough enough to rid a house of mice, let alone purge an entire city of its criminal element. Crystal has such a baby face that one is apt to think the beard he sports in this picture is of the novelty store variety. And Hines, though more adult-looking, is still too cutesy to be one of the boys-in-

But there's an exception to every rule, so write off their appearance as an exception to the rule which says that cops have to look like the riots were fought using their bodies as battering rams. There's still another major faux pas to this film, and it has to do with a little thing called the script.

The film is about the partners' struggled to put a drug kingpin behind bars, their struggle to make people respect the job they do and Crystal's struggle to keep his per-sonal life in order. There's an aw-ful lot of struggling going on in this movie, most of which could have been avoided had the picture been Finding that they're getting clumsy at their jobs, Crystal and Hines take a vacation to sunny Key West, Florida, where the most strenuous thing they have to do is pick up girls, and the only deadline they have is getting to the beach in time to watch the sunset. Both unmarried, they decide to eschew their life in Chicago and buy a bar in Key West. But when they go back home to give their 30-day notice, they are told the gangster they nabbed before their vacation has been released, and is looking for them.

Meanwhile, their captain is all over them for their somewhat offthe-cuff police tactics, and Crystal's ex-wife has announced she's going to marry a dentist.

mentioned above is more than a little bit unclear, it is. And for a large part of the movie, audiences sit and wait for some sign of where everything is going. There are hour-and-a-half is sloppy, un-focused and terribly ineffective. Tantamount to the problem is the believability of Billy Crystal numerous chase scenes and shootouts, throw-away lines and unnecessary sequences - all of which make the film too bulky for its own good. Obesity leads to heart trouble, and, indeed, the film's cor-

Crystal, for his part, is nowhere near as funny in this movie as his stand-up act or even his work on T.V.'s "Saturday Night Live." He does two impressions — one of which is over all too quick, the other of which is played too long. The rest of his material is delivered weakly and somewhat stiff.

There are exceptions, however, to every objection made above. And all of them occur in the last sequence of the film — a dramatic rescue attempt of Crystal's ex-wife in a downtown office building. It's apparent the best was saved for last: The action is heart pounding, and the comedy, inserted in in the right moments, is perfectly timed. This sequence is so good, in fact, that it makes up for much of the earlier inconsistencies. Nowhere in the film are the characters more endearing than during the rescue. And, after two hours of questioning the characters' motives, viewers will finally come to understand who these flippant fellows are.

The best advice that can be given to viewers on their way to see "Running Scared" is to stick with it. Like the city in which it's based, the movie blows around a lot of hot air. But is one remains patients, there's a breath of air at the end that's as refreshing as a cool breeze off Lake Michigan on a summer night.

Labyrinth loses by trying too hard

By Elsa Frohman

Hey, I've got this great idea. What if the guy who made that great science fiction film, "Star Wars," gets together with the guy who created all those lovable Muppets, and they get this fabulously popular rock star to write some songs and play a demon, and they make this wonderful fantasy film. It can't lose, right? I mean, it's got everything!

Think again. Odgen Nash said it best, "Search the parks in all the cities, you'll find no statues to committees.'

The idea must have sounded really great to the guys who dish out the money. After all, George Lucas is a genius at state-of-the-art special effects. And Jim Henson is a genius at creating lovable puppet characters. Furthermore, his first fantasy film, "The Dark Crystal," set a new standard for fantasy production design. And David Bowie is popular with the teenagers; and no mean actor at that. Add Brian Froud who designed the fantastic landscapes and creatures of "The Dark Crystal," and you have a combination that can't be beat, right? Sorry.

But let's be fair. Though film is an art, most moviegoers spend their ticket bucks on the basis of whether they believe a film is going to be entertaining. Does "Labyrinth" deliver the chills and thrills? Well yes, with reserva-

The film is colorful. It introduces some nice cuddly characters. It has a pretty teenaged girl for a protagonist. It has a fanciful storyline. Bowie delivers a slickly sensual performance that will have the young girls swooning in the

So why am I kveching? Because this film is devoid of any spark of life. It is dead as the proverbial doornail. The shortcomings of "Labyrinth" can best be illustrated through the three films I consider to be the classics of the fantasy - "The Wizard of Oz. genre "Star Wars" and "The Dark Crystal." "Labyrinth" borrows heavily from all three.

"Oz" was made in 1938, before any of today's special effects teniques were developed. However, its non-human characters were more lifelike and human than any of the characters in "Labyrinth." We believed in the Tin Woodman, ly astounding film which never lost sight of its human feelings. Characters were always at the center of the story. In "Labyrinth," the single human character, Sarah, is often eclipsed by the gee-whiz effects that surround her. Jennifer Connelly tried hard to deliver a performance. Unfortunately, the script gives her very little to do other than follow along the storyline. She has few memorable lines and little emotional range.

Jareth (David Bowie) tells Sarah (Jennifer Connelly) that she only has 13 hours to rescue her baby brother.

the Cowardly Lion and the Scarecrow because of the affecting performances of the actors portraying them - not because of a complex hydraulic mechanism working the face muscles. There is too little articulation in the faces of "Labyrinth's" puppet characters. They look like — puppets.

Hoggle, the dwarf who helps Sarah, suffers the worst from this malady. He looks as if his head were made of rubber and papiermache, and his hands look useless. Hands are important on a reallooking character. Henson should know this. His Muppets often have gloved, human hands.

"Star Wars" gave us a technical-

"The Dark Crystal" opened up new possibilities for technical achievements in fantasy. Without any human characters, the film created a completely believable world. The setting had a palpable quality. You felt you could touch them and they would be cold and clammy or warm and soft. The puppet characters moved and spoke like real characters. Though supposedly more sophisticated, the puppets in "Laby-rinth" never achieve that dimension of reality. They move like puppets, often jumping long distances without moving their feet — like marionettes. The wires are even visible in some scenes.

Some of the most highly touted puppet scenes look like scenes from the old "Muppet Show" on television. However, what looked slightly tacky and wacky on television only looks fake on the big

Then there's the music. I'm probably going to face some opposion on this one. Bowie's songs are perfectly respectable Top 40 material. They just don't belong in a fantasy movie. They will appeal to young people — the younger the better. But their contemporary patina will eliminate any vague chance that this movie could be a classic. As musical styles change, those Top 40 songs will start to sound archaic and date the picture. Furthermore, the songs make no sense in the context of the story.

They are completely extraneous. "Labyrinth" is the story of Sarah and her battle against the Demon King, Jareth (Bowie), to rescue her baby brother. The story is reminiscent of "Alice in Wonderland" and "The Wizard of Oz." But unlike many recent movies that have paid tribute to their predecessors, such as "Gremlins" and "Raiders of the Lost Ark," it is easy to imagine Lucas and Henson in their workshop, filing the serial numbers off little bits of business from other films and presenting them as original work.

"Labyrinth" has occasional flashes of sharp wit. The sight of the gobblins huddling together, just in the next world, eager for Sarah to say the fateful words that will allow them to steal her brother, is compelling. Occuring in the first moments of the movie, it whets the appetite for some biting humor. The promise is never ful-

Should you spend the money to see "Labyrinth?" Well, try this. Add up the ages in your moviegoing party and divide by the number of people. If the average is over 16, forget it.

'Karate Kid II' repeats charm of first film — Kid III?

By Marian Trainor

In the "Karate Kid Part II," the audience expects a repeat of the magic and muscle that made "The Karate Kid" such a hit two years ago. In that film, the magic of a special bond between a lonely, intense boy and his wise old teacher endeared to viewers of all ages. The other attraction of the first film was the display of disciplined muscle-power that the boy learned under his teacher's guidance, a power that enabled him to compete at the karate championships

The same scenario with some variations makes "The Karate Kid, Part II" a winner. It opens with flashbacks showing Danny (Ralph Macchio) winning the championship and Miyagi's (Pat Morita) deftly ducking two punches thrown near a car window by his rival coach in the first picture. beloved become betrothed to an-

Miyagi continues the role of the wise and kindly guru as he lectures Danny on the need to focus and then sets him to work pounding nails into boards which eventually become a lovely room. The room is incidental but the boy learns to focus with a vengence as he precisely aims at the head of each

He teaches the boy a breathing exercise that calms and soothes and allows him to gather strength in stressful situations.

He gives Danny a rule for every situation. "Never put passion before love," he tells him, and "The best way to avoid a punch is not to be there.

When Danny expresses his reluctance to take on an adversary who is big and mean, Miyagi tells him. "It doesn't matter who's stronger, but who's smarter."

This last axiom is proved true in a final showdown when Daniel must fight the adversary.

Morita plays Miyagi to the hilt, enjoying every minute of it. He brings the same expertise to the sequel that won him an Academy Award nomination for "The Karate Kid." He doesn't miss a gesture or expression, as he brings to life the wise and often witty Miyagi. The humor with which he flavors the role is not something newly acquired. He was once a stand-up comic.

Macchio remains the sweet, sensitive boy in "The Karate Kid." He brings a genuine boyish sense of wonder to the sights of Okinawa. In his relationship with a young girl, we see a boy experiencing the beginnings of love in a gentle, tender

Much of the charm of the film romance, a romance that looks like it will continue in "The Karate Kid III" since Kumko is a ballet dancer who wants to come to America to study.

Another 'Karate' film would be welcome news to fans who like to see this pair, Miyagi and Daniel, triumph again over terrific odds in a new tale and probably a different setting.

few friends

. got together for a soccer game last Saturday. It was all in fun, the meeting of the University Liggett School varsity soccer squad, coached by David Backhurst, and their visitors from West Germany, TV Lampertheim. But as evidenced by the photos at left and below — TV Lampertheim's goalle reacting typically to letting in a goal — even friendly competiton can get intense. The 16 players ranging in age from 14-19, and their chaperones, stayed at the homes of ULS soccer parents, and spent their fourday visit to the area enjoying the sights. It was, as TV Lampertheim's Jurgen Weis said, "very much fun." Photos by Mike Andrzejczyk
