Did you see that, Maude?

Drivers passing 2040 Hunt Club in the Woods did a doubletake Monday when they spotted a coffin propped up against a tree. Was it the aftermath of some macabre goings-on over the Fourth?

Well, no. Actually, it was Patty Paquin doing some spring cleaning. Those coffins take up a lot of room, you know.

It was one of the props they used one year for a Halloween party. They loaned it out a couple of times to neighbors for their parties and finally decided it had served its purpose.
We did not ask if there was anything inside.

Bittersweet ending

No good deed goes unpunished. We've all heard that and the Shores was a victim of it.

When Vice President George Bush came to the village a while back, the Shores was requested by the U.S. Secret Service to help with security for the visit.

Shores officers were part of a contingent of Detroit, county and state police that provided tight security for the visit to a private home, which was a fundraising venture.

Soon afterward, the village public safety department got a letter of commendation from the Secret Service for their work. The village council was very proud.

But at the June meeting, trustees got the downside. Bush's 212-hour visit cost the Shores 24 hours of overtime for six officers who handled the special assignment. And Public Safety Director Joseph Vitale told an indignant village council there was no chance of getting reimbursed.

Well, you have to take the bitter with the better.

Lucky ducks avoid trucks

Last week, you may remember, ducks invaded the Shores. well, at about the same time. they were causing trouble in the Woods.

Seems Woods animal control officer Lee Delor was sent on a call to assist a mother mallard and her two ducklings.

The ducks were having a foul time crossing Mack Avenue. Delor assisted the ducks on their short migration, and reported they were crossed without incident.

In other words, everything was just ducky!

Jock talk

When athletes get together they talk about games, practices and the coach who won't let them off the bench, right? Wrong, at least not in Grosse Pointe they don't.

Overheard, two teenaged jocks talking shop:

"Hey, did you hear who was in the Assembly Line Sandwich

"Aaron Krickstein." "Oh, yeah? What did he have

School officials study PCB problem

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Discovery last month of contamination from PCB-containing transformers at a Detroit scrapyard has focused attention on federal guidelines calling for their removal

The federal government has given users of the electrical equipment that contain the carcinogen until October 1990 to replace it. The material was used as a fire retardent and insulator in electrical equipment.

The Grosse Pointe Public School System has six PCB-containing transformers - four at North and two at South, according to Dave King, director of support services. The district complied with federal guidelines calling for identification and tagging of the transformers and has told local fire departments of their existence.

The six transformers are located on roofs and in basements at the schools and have been there for at least 15 years, King said. The four at North have been there since the school was built and one of the two has been there for at least 15 years.

No elementary or middle school has transformers containing PCBs, he added.

The district had originally considered allocating about $250,000 in this school year's budget to cover replacement and disposal of the six, King said. Once it began investigating the matter, it decided to hold off.

The district has until 1990 to either replace the transformers or to modify them in such a way that they will contain less than 50 parts per million of PCB in the oil inside them, King said.

There is a company that offers a leeching service that in 15 months could bring a transformer into compliance with EPA regula-tion at half the cost of replacing it, he added.

There are liability problems with removal and disposal of PCB transformers, King said. Even though equipment is removed and disposed of in an EPA-approved site, the school system retains part ownership and part liability should someone sue because of contami-

The location of the transformers in the schools also means expensive removal and replacement, King said.

There is no real schedule for depreciation on a transformer, King said. Salesmen he has talked to say that anything after 20 years is borrowed time, he added.

There is no leakage or indication of leakage in the transformers, which are used to transform energy from one set or circuits to another, changing voltage and current in the process, King added. The system continues to look at a number of options and hopes in the next six months to have some questions answered and recommendations.

"Retro-filling" of transformers is possible, King said. One company offers the service. Unison is a subsidiary of Union Carbide, which used the process to remove contaminants in that company's transformers and decided to market the service.

Companies other than Union Carbide that have had their transformers retro-filled - a fourstep process — are still in the 15-month leeching period, King said. In the next three or four months, it should be proved whether or not such transformers can meet the EPA standard.

The cost of retro-filling is about half the cost of removal, disposal and replacement of the present transformers, and eliminates any long-term liability problem, King

The school system is also looking into energy efficiency programs for its buildings, King said. It is possible the district should save some energy by using smaller, more modern transformers at the

Should savings be large enough, replacement cost of the transformers could be part of the ener-

TV crew barred from entering Windmill Pointe

By Peter A. Salinas

A Detroit television news crew was denied access to Windmill Pointe Park while doing a story on charges of alleged inequitable treatment of residents at Grosse Pointe's parks.

City officials said no member of the news crew held a park pass or a guest pass, and therefore the crew was asked to leave the grounds.

Bob Clinkingbeard, a producer of WXYZ-TV, Channel 7 news, said there was a confrontation.

Reporter Ven Marshal arrived at the park with a crew," Clinking-beard said. "We showed our press credentials — did everything we had to do, and were not allowed to go on the grounds, not even to use the restroom.

Park City Manager John Crawford said because no one from the television crew held a park pass, entry was denied on that basis. Entry to Grosse Pointe's parks has become a hot topic of conversation of late, given the Dearborn parks residents-only ordinance, now in the courts.

Recently, the Grosse Pointe Inter-Faith Council for Racial Justice and the NAACP have sent letters to the five Grosse Pointe cities regarding what has been described as "ineqitable treatment" of residents at the parks.

The charges claim that black residents are asked for passes at Grosse Pointe parks, while white residents are sometimes allowed in without showing a pass.

What happened at the park to the news crew was "perfectly legitimate," Crawford said. "We are getting complaints because we are enforcing the residents-only rule, not because of lack of enforce-

Crawford maintained if a member of the news crew were a city resident or the crew were guests of a resident, they would have been allowed access.

"I told Channel 7 that they should get ahold of Jerry Hodak (Channel 7's weatherman) who is a resident of the Farms and get into the Farms park," Crawford

Crawford said that if the news crew were there to do a story on high water levels or a boating accident, they would likely have been

"I don't think the Inter-Faith Council or the NAACP's letters are worthy of making this an issue."

Crawford has said that any time a gate guard allows a resident into the park without checking a pass, that is a violation of a city ordinance. He noted that this is difficult to control, since the guards get to know residents who use the park on a regular basis. Without having a mechanical system of entry, there will always be the prob-lem of having some residents allowed into the park without having the passes checked at the gate.

Grosse Pointe Woods City Manager Chester Petersen said that everyone, including himself and the city's mayor, have their passes checked - everytime.

Petersen said that since the Woods' Lakefront Park was built in the late 1950s, it has been residents-only and any comparison to the Dearborn issue is Crawford agrees. "We have been residential only for 50 years," Crawford said. Now someone is trying to make it a racial issue. I think it's ludicrous.' Crawford noted that Channel 7 has been denied entry to his city's parks twice now in six months.

He said that the Grosse Pointe News was allowed into the park on the same day shortly after the Channel 7 crew was denied entry, because a photographer was taking photos of a presentation from the Grosse Pointe Sail Club to the

"The News was covering a pleasant event that had to do with the Tuesday Night Sundown Series which has been going on for 25 years," he said. "That had nothing to do with the Grosse Pointe Park parks, and wash't trying to tie in an issue to Dearborn.

Farms public safety "They are only trying to make is an issue because of the Dear is an issue because of the Dear

By Nancy Parmenter

"Going nowhere" could be the new name for the public safety negotiations in Grosse Pointe Farms. Teams for the city, the police and the firefighters have been meeting since their contracts expired to try to find a way to combine the two departments.

To complicate the issue, at the same time they are trying to negotiate contracts for both departments. Fire employees have been working for a year without contracts; police for six months. We haven't been able to make a final conclusion," conceded Carrol Lock, chief negotiator for the city. "The group has trouble reaching decisions on compromises."

The last firefighters' contract was settled only by arbitration, after more than two years of negotiating. "We may be moving toward that (again)," Lock said. 'We haven't had a problem with

Lt. Charles Backman, one of the negotiators for the firefighters, is hopeful that next week's meeting may bear some fruit. Police and firefighters had been meeting separately with the city, he said, and will be back together for the

"When you're separate, you never get anything settled," he

The Farms is looking at a different model of public safety department. Details on the proposals are scanty, but apparently not all of the current police and firefighters would be required to be public safety officers.

"We're looking at using public safety as a manpower pool," Lock said. "We want to keep the fire expertise. Expert everything is expert nothing."

This approach could satisfy the firefighters, who have expressed concern that public safety officers are insufficiently trained to be good at putting out fires. Farms firefighters have not publicly stated their position on this point, but both sides agree there are still economic issues to be settled.

"The fringe benefits should be the same for everyone,' Backman said. "Police, fire and public safety should all be equal. As to arbitration, Backman arbitration process. "Public safety has never been arbitrated," he said. "It would be something new and different.

The basis of arbitration is a comparison between communities in similar circumstances. Contracts for existing public safety departments have been arbitrated, but, Backman said, moving from separate departments to a combined one has not.

Police negotiator Gordon Evans said the teams have not met often enough to accomplish anything concrete, "We're so far apart that we don't even known where we disagree," he said.

Evans said the meetings had addressed some public safety concepts, but "they weren't what you'd call negotiations. I don't think the city knows where it's go-

Lack of movement should not be seen as a permanent state, Evans

"It's not necessarily discouraging. Things often look like they're not moving, then all of a sudden, they break.

Woods resident is drowning victim

Shortly before 8 p.m. Lugo's son came into the Shores police station to report that he had found his father's car, but that his father was missing, Sgt. Stanley Otulakowski said.

'We started to search then, centering on the area where the dog was found," he said. Police diver David Younk and civilian diver Leon Sehoyan went down into the lake repeatedly, but could find.

The next day, the search resumed, with Sehoyan and Wayne County Sheriff's Deputy Richard Kirk continuing the dive as far as 200 feet offshore. It was not until Sunday that an employee of the Yacht Club discovered the body floating in the lake.

Shores police were waiting Monday for the report from the medical examiner to explain the cause of death. "He may have slipped or fell or maybe had a heart attack," Otulakowski said. "We just don't know. We don't suspect any foul

American politics is part of everyday German life

By Nancy Parmenter

Grace Jeffries Quitzow was not what you would call a political animal when she was in school in Grosse Pointe. Interested and aware, yes, but not deeply involved.

But 18 years of living in Germany has changed that. Not that Quitzow is running for office. But she now sees politics as one of the threads of everyday life.

"You are more touched by politics in Europe," she said this week at the Farms home of her mother, Virginia Jeffries. "You cannot go from day to day without feeling it."

European countries can't isolate themselves from events in countries only 200 miles away," added her husband Wilhelm, a professor of natural science education at Berlin's Technical University.

As residents of Berlin, the Quitzows acknowledge that their life is unlike life anywhere else. "How many cities are there where you are protected by the armies of three countries?" Grace Quitzow said wryly.

The Allied military presence is felt strongly in Berlin, they said. Tanks rumble down the streets and the international school their two children attend has a large enrollment of American military children. During the Libyan terrorist crisis, the Berlin police were brought under the command of the Allied armies. In such an atmosphere, international politics is bound to be felt.

As an American citizen, Grace Quitzow, now working in the law library at the Free University in Berlin, is frequently expected to be an authority on things American.

"People expect me to know about American television stars and about all sorts of places," she said.

They don't know I've never been to California.'

People sometimes also expect her to be able to explain American foreign policy, but on that subject she says she feels at a loss. Like many Germans, she feels that Washington is too quick with its trigger finger and that Americans fail to make the critical linkage between a macho foreign policy and its natural consequences.

One of the natural consequences of the American attack on Libya, for example, is the possibility of increased terrorist activity throughout Europe. But Quitzow fears that American afraid to travel are blaming Europe or Libya rather than Washington.

The Quitzows come to Michigan for six weeks every other summer and admitted that potential terrorism against American planes gave them second thoughts this year. Wilhelm Quitzow said he doesn't blame people for fearing to travel. "We thought of changing our tickets," he said.

'The mistake is to think that people — just because they are evil want to attack Americans and American institutions. It is the policy they are attacking."

Although Germans, like Americans, differ in their opinions, there is widespread concern about the American foreign policy and the Quitzows say Europeans cannot understand the continuing popularity of Ronald Reagan. "We always hope there are Americans who dislike his policies as much as we do,' Grace Quitzow said.

But the international media do not give any sense of disagreement among Americans. For example, it was obvious during Vietnam that the official policies were not the policies of the people," said

Wilhelm Quitzow. "That is not ob-

The American view of the United States as world savior is "a little difficult for some people to take,' his wife said. "There's a feeling that the United States wants to save people from themselves."

But neither the Quitzows nor most Germans have become anti-American. "You shouldn't mix up our feelings about politics right now with anti-Americanism," Quitzow said. "Our position is not much different from what Senator

Kennedy is saying."
Raising children in this charged atmosphere can be a challenge.
Daughter Leslie, 11, and son Rainer, 8, watch and talk about the television news with their parents. They lived the news after the Berlin disco bombing, when the army escorted their school bus with machine gun-mounted Jeeps.

As students at an international school, riding in buses provided by the military, consorting with numerous American military children, they were an all-too-handy target for "anyone wanting to make a statement," their mother said. But the children get along well in the international atmosphere — except when the other American kids talk about televi-

Children living on military bases have access to an American channel that programs cartoons and action shows. The Quitzow children watch German television, which doesn't start broadcasting until 3 p.m. and is heavy on issue programming. Ask them about Magnum, P.I., or the Care Bears and they're out in left field.

German children tend not to immerse themselves in television and the television culture, which has led to some communication deadends with the American students at the international school. But the bi-cultural opportunities and innovative teaching methods more than make up for that

"The school is wonderful, especially because of the American influence," said Wilhelm Quitzow, a product of a traditional German education. "The teaching method is more open, the teachers try to make it interesting and fun. The German style is more rigid and strict. Now that I have the comparison, I think it's very positive.'

Quitzow said he was delighted with units on space and the oceans his children had done lately. "In Germany, they wouldn't talk about the ocean — they would talk about H₂O for years," he said.

German schools have a shorter summer vacation than American schools do. Because they have a variety of other short vactions, the schools close for only six weeks in the summer. Most people travel, so summer activities for children are less planned.

That gives the Quitzows the opportunity to visit family. Staying in Grosse Pointe and taking part in summer classes or camp lets the children practice their English. They will also have the first tenting experience when the family goes camping in Algonquin Provincial Park in a few weeks - something they never do in Germany because the campgrounds are too

Woods to consider office use study

By Peter A. Salinas

Don't look for any skyscrapers in Grosse Pointe Woods' future anytime soon, but there has been some expressed interest in office buildings on Mack Avenue, and at least one city commission is proposing an office use study.

The proposal was sent to the Woods city council last month, and was forwarded to the planning commission which will give it consideration July 22.

The city's Community Development Block Grant Citizens Advisory Commission recommended having a feasibility study for office use on Mack Avenue performed. The commission did some checking and estimated the cost would be about $2,000 to $5,000

It indicated it would contribute $2,000 toward the study.

Administrative Assistant Jerry McNamara prepared a memo for the city council, which indicated there has been at least two recent inquiries about development of office buildings on Mack Avenue.
"What I did was count up the number of storefront offices on Mack — there are about 130," Mc-Namara said. "There appears to be a growing demand for office space.

He noted that the figure represents about one-half of the commercial district.

McNamara's memo indicated there has been a keen interest in the development of office facilities in the eastside suburbs

While many of the suburban communities are actively planning for the attempting to attract new office developments, the Woods has no viable strategy for locating new office developments, McNamara said.

McNamara said that storefront offices tend to detract from the vitality of a commercial district. and represents an under-utilization of land.

"Offices break up the interest in a commercial district," McNamara said.

He noted that the Village shopping area in the City has few storefront offices, and this makes for a more appealing shopping center

'In the Village, you can go from store to store. Offices tend to make you lose interest.

"There has been interest in office development in the past, and suggestion by the block grant commission is a new field for it. It is saving that there may be some fertile ground out there to plow. Let's there has been little response. This us. We're just trying to be on top of developing trends.

McNamara indicated that if the planning commission doesn't give a favorable recommendation to explore it, and see where it takes the city council, the idea may die.

The story of two suburbs

In a series of articles concluding in today's issue of the Grosse Pointe News, reporter Nancy Parmenter has written about the differences and similarities between two highly publicized American suburban communities, Grosse Pointe and Shaker Heights, Ohio.

Some readers, concerned about the stories detailing the problems of Shaker Heights in integration, maintenance of standards in its schools, the declining quality of some of its housing and other civic issues, have asked us, "What is the purpose of such a comparison?"

In her introduction to the series, Ms. Parmenter provided an answer to that question. She wrote, "We hope that what we learn may be of value, in showing us new possibilities for familiar problems, in pointing up mistakes we may avoid making or in validating our own experience.

She pointed out that 30 years ago Grosse Pointe and Shaker Heights were "twin jewels among American suburbs." The evidence? "Blessed with excellent school systems, elegant neighborhoods, natural beauty, among the highest per capita incomes in the nation, both communities represented the kind of goal Americans aspired to.

Yet the inner ring of American suburbs such as Grosse Pointe and Shaker Heights now, in Ms. Parmenter's words, "are faced with aging housing stock, crime imported from bordering inner cities, declining population, flight of the middle class to the far suburbs. Crime, schools and property values have become paramount concerns. In examining these concerns, the News realizes that different communities develop in different ways, just as people as they grow older. Yet we think it is helpful as the Pointes look toward the future to examine the changes that have occurred in another older, if smaller, community, to see whether the Pointes can profit from the experiences — both good and bad - of that Ohio suburb.

As a Grosse Pointer who has lived in Shaker Heights told Ms. Parmenter, "Shaker is more diverse economically. There are many distinctly working and middle-class people. It's more of a melting pot." It is also much more integrated, with blacks now making up a quarter of its population and 44 percent of its school enrollment. Shaker's schools, seen as the gem in the city's crown, and its housing and city services are the major assets that make Shaker an attractive place to live.

Like Shaker Heights, the Pointes, too, have changed and are still changing. The Pointes have lost population as well as many of the fine old estates that once bordered Lake St. Clair and are now being developed as new residential areas. But the public schools in the Pointes, while declining in enrollment, have not declined in quality. The community services provided by the five municipal governments are still improving. And the beauty of the lake, the treelined boulevards and the many parks still delight local people and serves to attract new residents.

To a limited degree, all communities can oversee their development through zoning, planning and similar activities. Shaker Heights appears to have used its official clout as well as the input of volunteers to a greater degree than have the Pointes in planning for the future. But whether that is a route that the Pointes would follow to their advantage is still a question for Pointers themselves to decide.

The News published the series as a community service and would welcome comments. We believe Ms. Parmenter did a first-rate reporting job in pointing up the differences and the similarities between the two suburban communities and in examining some of the problems both face in the future. Some readers may disagree with that opinion. But we would appreciate reactions, whether pro or con.

In the controversy aroused by charges of possible racial discrimination in the parks of the Grosse Pointes, critics seem to have lost sight of the reason the residents-only rule was adopted in the first place.

The point is that the comparatively small parks in the Pointes could be overrun by the population of Detroit and Wayne County outside of the Pointes if there were no residents-only rule in effect. Detroit, after all, is a city of about 1.2 million while the Pointes' population is on-

Since the first of the residents-only rules was adopted in the Pointes years ago, well before blacks became a majority in Detroit, it is obvious that the rules were not inspired by racial bias but, instead, by fears the Pointes' own residents would find themselves outnumbered in their own parks by outsiders, whatever their

True, the Grosse Pointe Inter-Faith Center for Racial Justice may have a point in sending a letter to Pointe municipal officials asking equitable enforcement in park regulations among all residents. It contends that "incidents of arbitrary enforcement of the residents-only ordinances based on race have periodically been reported to the center." Unfortunately, this kind of vague and unsubstantiated criticism is not very convincing. More specific information as to when, where and under what circumstances the incidents occurred would be

to relate the Pointes' park policies to those in Dearborn, the facts appear clear that the Pointes do not use federal or state funding for their parks and thus are not in the same category as Dearborn whose exclusionary policies in parks financed in part by state and federal aid are being challenged in court.

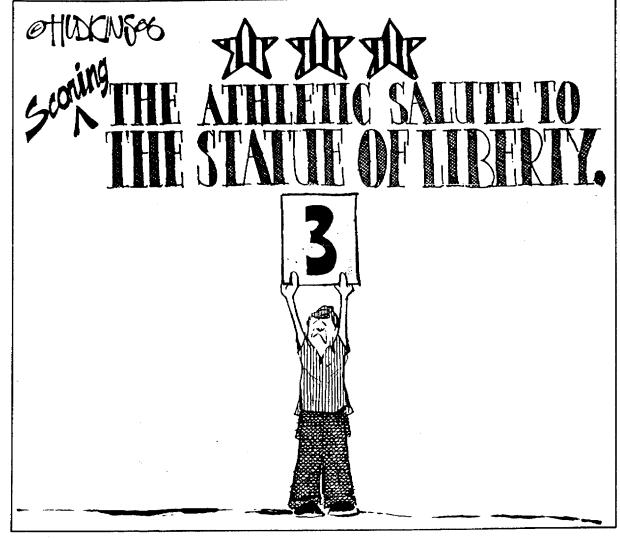

City and park officials in the Pointes contend that they are getting a bad rap on the admissions issue, because all of the Pointes require entrance checking of passes issued to all residents. But the problem does arise when people who use the parks regularly, including those leasing boat wells, become so familiar to the gate attendants that they are not asked to display their resident passes. Yet asking for the entrance pass of people — white as well as black — who are not known to the attendants hardly seems to be strong evidence of racial

We do think, however, that news people, whether from downtown TV stations or the Grosse Pointe News, ought to have access to the parks at least as guests. The city manager in each Pointe could easily authorize the admission of press people without making an issue of it, regardless of the purpose of the media visit.

Otherwise, the implication of the recent denial to the TV crew from Channel 7 of access to Windmill Pointe Park is that admission is dependent on whether the media intention is to provide a "good" or "critical" story. That becomes a form of censorship abhorrent to all the news media.

Why is Reagan so popular?

Our readers say

More flower shows, less horticulture

To the Editor:
I want to thank you for your articles on the beauty of nature — the rose garden at the library and other positive things when all too many horrible things are printed in the city papers.

I have always wondered why the papers such as the Free Press with Betty Frankel, etc. always have articles on horticulture but have never discovered the beauty of the flower shows which have more than horticulture, which show the beauty one can create with the arranging of the flowers so carefully grown the Crosse Pointe Rose Show had the most beautiful arrangements that I have ever seen anywhere, just 10 days ago. I have never seen in print any kudos given or photographs of the ar-names mentioned of the winners. One member won the Best of the Blues, the second of the Blues Arrangements, and the Best of the Miniature arrangements. I understand the top winner was a retired Grosse Pointe School teacher who has lived in the Pointe for most of one. her adult years. It would be much more interesting for the public to hear about her success and that of the others than the publicity given to outsiders who give programs on how to grow roses or how to judge the shows. I felt the beauty of that show for so long, I had to tell some-

Alice Schromm

Be wary of generalizing

To the Editor:

The remarks of the executive director of the Grosse Pointe Inter-Faith Center about the discriminatory enforcement of entry into the parks provided more heat than light. I have entered the park without showing my pass on many occasions. However, my wife and 15-year-old son are virtually never given that privilege. Since neither rangements printed, nor the one of them is black, are we to assume the presence of sex and age discrimination? A less sinister explanation makes more sense. It is not uncommon for me to make three or even five trips to the boat through the gate of the park. My wife and son are much less frequent

It is troublesome when one encounters generalizations which are not only inaccurate but also inflammatory. Scapegoating the Grosse Pointes will not improve of the past but it may disturb the Mark Brewster, Brandon Morkut, future.

A coach to be emulated

To the Editor:

We would like to take the time to publicly thank an outstanding gentleman who coaches in Little League. William Eldridge, who coaches the Buffalo Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores Little League team should be observed so that other coaches may emulate his philosophy and approach in fair play. He attempts and succeeds in meeting the needs of each player and also the special needs of several.

Winning by forfeit is not his style and it's surely never a win by any coach. Twelve games played is needed.

We congratulate you, Bill! We congratulate our team as truly the winners and in first place!

Praise for two coaches

To the Editor:

At a time when there is much criticism of Little League baseball, may I say a few words of praise for two outstanding coaches — Tony Braun and Denny Campbell.

As role models for our children, they have been the finest. Never did I hear a harsh or unkind word for any of the players — the boys learned through kindness and praise. Fielding positions were faithfully rotated in every inning of every game of the season (including the World Series) so that each child was given equal learning op-disagree with the president, in urging the United States to stick with the terms of the Salt II agreement.

Time magazine attempted to answer the question that puzzles many politicians and observers: What makes Reagan so remarkably popular a president? Time's answer runs five pages and offers a multitude of reasons. One is "the relative success of the Reagan presidency and the grace with which he has accomplished it." Another is the fact that he has "reasserted the force of in-dividual leadership" in the presidency. Still another is that his amiable being "seems to transcend his policies, to immunize him from the poisonous implications of some of his own opinions.

In its tribute to President Reagan last week,

Time also finds that "something about Reagan soothes and unites — even though the effects of his programs may repel." The result is that a recent Gallup Poll gives Reagan a 68 percent approval rating, and, in addition, according to Time, "Reagan has consistently higher ratings over a longer period than any other second-term President since polling be-

The continuing economic recovery, according to Time, "is undoubtedly the chief reason for Reagan's popularity now - that and the absence of war and the general atmosphere of national self-confidence." It is sometimes forgotten that midway through his first term, the president's approval rating fell to 37 percent at a time when almost 11½ million people were out of work and there was more questioning of the Reagan support for huge military budgets and the cutting of social programs.

Yet it is clear from another perspective that the American people are not yet ready to accept all of the Reagan nostrums. A Washington Post ABC News Poll shows that 55 percent of the public think the president has not done as much as he should have to limit the build-up of nuclear weapons in the United States and the USSR, and 61 percent agree with critics, and The public also remains opposed to military and other aid to the Nicaraguan contras, or counter-revolutionaries, by a 62 to 29 margin, even though the president did get his $100 million aid package through the House of Representatives last week. As for the Senate tax bill, warmly endorsed by the president, the public favors it by a margin of only 22 percent to 15 percent, with a whopping 63 percent not having an opinion.

Under the circumstances, it is difficult to agree with Reagan administration leaders who claim the public endorsed the president's policies in his two sweeping electoral victories. Instead, the people, it seems to us, liked Reagan personally when they saw and heard him in 1980 and found it easier to vote for him rather than for Jimmy Carter, widely viewed as a failure as president. In 1984, the people found no reason to change leadership because they still liked Reagan, and the economy was still going well.

But the record on specific issues advocated by the president is still to be written. Even the president's major aim - to reverse the course of government help for the individual that was charted by FDR — has not yet been achieved in full and, indeed, it is conceivable that federal aid could be restored for many domestic programs after the Reagan Revolution has run

But there is little dispute that Reagan is one of the most popular presidents of recent time, that he has restored the authority of an ailing presidency and that he has made many Americans feel better about themselves and their country.

Prime Time for senior citizens

By Marian Trainor

How would you feel about having a birthday party and having someone else designated as the guest of

Well, that's exactly what hap-pened to the good old U.S.A. this

America celebrated its 210th birthday and the venerable Lady

Liberty got all the honors.
That's OK, because Liberty stands for everything that America fought to win and has fought to keep - freedom and opportunity.

There were celebrations galore to honor her restoration. Operation Sail brought tall ships and more than 200 smaller sailing vessels to the Hudson River. On Thursday, July 3, more than 30 naval ships from 14 countries anchored in lower Hudson.

While it was a gala event, and certainly the most publicized, Liberty's unveiling was not the first time that the nation shared its

On July 4, 1882, the United States Military Academy was opened. The first shovelful of earth was dug for the Erie Canal in 1817 and in 1828, Charles Carroll, the last surviver of the signing of the Declaration of Independence performed that honor to begin construction of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

The cornerstone of the Washington Monument in Washington, D.C. was laid in 1850, and in 1876 the 100th anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence was celebrated. That occasion was hedl in Philadelphia, then the capitol, and lasted six months.

A feature of the centennial, and one that many citizens felt strongYorktown in 1781; again when the United States signed a peace treaty with Britain in 1783 and when the United States Constitution was adopted in 1788.

It kept on ringing on important occasions until July 8, 1835. On that morning it was tolling for the funeral procession of John Mar-shall, chief justice of the United Supreme Court, when it cracked

It was silent until 1846 when the cracks were filled in and it rang for George Washington's birthday. At first it gave out loud, clear notes but then the crack spread and it never rang again.

But it still lived as a national symbol. It was first called the "Liberty Bell" in an anti-slavery book published in 1839. In 1852 the Liberty Bell was put on display in what is now known as Independence Hall.

As part of the centennial celebrations, a wealthy merchant donated money for a new bell to be installed in the tower of Independence Hall. It was made from four Civil War cannons, melted down. It chimed for the first time on Ju-

To honor the 200th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, Queen Elizabeth of England presented a Bicentennial Bell to the people of the United States. On its side are inscribed the words: 'Let Freedom Ring.

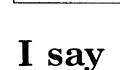

There were other events also scheduled to share July 4 celebra-

In 1903, President Theodore Roosevelt opened the first trans-Pacific cable with a message around the world in 12 minutes. In 1956, the Philippine Islands became and independent republic; Alaska became a state in 1959 and Hawaii in 1960.

The next big July 4 celebration came in 1976 when the United States celebrated the 200th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. Plans for that began 10 years earlier in 1966 when President Johnson established the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission to In. the next few years, more than 20 million Americans helped to get the country ready for the event. Historic areas were restored and new civic centers and museums were built.

When the great day arrived, there were celebrations throughout the country. In Seattle, five boys re-enacted the raising of the United States flag on Iwo Jima. The Battle of Gettysburg was recreated in Pennsylvania. President Ford delivered the keynote address in which he said: "Liberty is a living flame to be fed, not dead ashes to be revered, even in a Bicentennial Year.'

The Fourth of July, with its history, symbols and ideologies, will forever be a day of celebration, a day to show our love for our country, to examine ourselves as Americans, and in true American spirit, have fun doing it.

Why I like sports

I've got a two-week vacation

Well, okay, it's not the traditional pack-up-the-car-and-headfor-the-nearest-waterfall-orpretty-landscape vacation, but it's almost as good. Because, dear readers, while our illustrious sports editor Peggy O'Connor shakes off the ill effects of a year of toil, I will cover the sports desk.

I happen to like sports — to watch, to write about and to participate in. I especially like the watching and writing part when it comes in two-week stints, roughly daughter did.

Okay, it means more work. It means opening mail, editing press releases and parents' submissions, proofreading 300 names in miniscule type in Little League round-ups, laying out pages and fielding complaints from people who carry sticks, bats, clubs and rackets or wear spikes, cleats or

I like sports for a number of rea sons. The first one is because this year, for the first time. I can put my fledgling photographic skills to work. I have been using them once in a while, but I've got a chance to do things like photograph the start of the Port Huron-to-Mackinac

Talking about sports with people is a whole lot easier than getting other kinds of information.

I found that out a couple years ago at a Little League game. I happened to see a police lieutenant I knew watching from the sidelines. so I sidled up and casually began asking him about the week's events in the city. He clammed up and fed me the party line all the way.

The minute I asked him if he was watching a friend's kid or his own playing, he opened up like a rose. I have never heard the man talk so much — before or since — as when he was telling me about his son of the field, the other kids in his family, other sports they played and where they went to school. Sports, unlike scandal, often gets people to talk. There isn't a person out there who doesn't feel a little swell of pride or a little rush of adrenelin when someone asks about the play they've made or the fish they've caught. There isn't a person out here I've met who doesn't open up if you talk about boating, fishing, Little League, soccer, football or hockey and how their son/daughter/grandson/ granddaughter/godson/goddaughter/neighbor's son or

Some people think the sports pages are the couple we use to hold the classified advertisements in one section. Sorry, folks.

If you're ever going to get your name in a community paper, chances are you're going to get it in the sports section, unless you die or commit a crime. There are close to 100 kids every week who get their moments of glory because they play Little League, soccer or perform on the swim team.

That's really what sports is about. It's about people and what they do.

Admittedly, the writing style in sports is often lighter than news. I happen to like it that way. Sports writers write the way people talk. Reporters write the way people

I look forward to writing sports stories because I can quit with the subjective contrary-to-fact constructions and all the other pompous writing tools they taught me in school. Sports writing isn't sloppy; it's clear, concise and hits you

Okay, so I also have to write a couple sports columns. To tell you the truth, that's probably the most fun of all. Not only do I get to show off my writing ctale, but I get my off my writing style, but I get my new picture (sans 30 pounds of pudge) in the paper.

Finally, sports is fun because it's as close as I'll ever get to actually being an athlete again. It's fun to talk about being the first 30-yearold drafted in the National Hockey League, but deep down, I know that vicariously is the closest I'll ever get to knowing what it's like to play in a hockey game.

Maybe that's why we all like sports. It sort of fills the gap between our delusions of grandeur and our reality of drudgery. Who wouldn't love to come home from a 9-to-5 flight behind a deck and go out and smack a couple over the center field fence?

I've never understood parents who pressure their kids to play the same sports they played, though. That's not filling a gap, but stuffing a childhood full of bad memories and pressures that just don't belong there.

Anyway, see you all in a couple weeks. If you want to still read what I'm writing, turn to the classified ads, then back up a couple pages. You can't miss it.

President Reagan boarded the battleship Iowa to pass naval vessels which fired a 21-gun salute as the Iowa passed, The Navy's Blue Angels flew over from Governor's Island. President Reagan unveiled the restored statue and 40,000 fireworks from nine countries were fired from 40 barges anchored off lower Manhatten.

It came to America from Engin land in 1752. It was called the State House Bell, since it had been ordered for the new State House in Philadelphia. Before it was raised to the top of the town, it cracked. It was recast but the sound was not that of a bell. Again it was recast and finally hung in the State House Tower. It bears the inscription from the Bible "Proclaim Liberty throughout the land to all the Inhabitants thereof" (Leviticus 25:10) - appropriate, yet it was carved 23 years before the Declaration was written.

In 1777 when the British army approached Philadelphia, the bell was removed because the people feared the British would melt down the bell for ammunition.

It was returned to Philadelphia in 1778. It rang when General Cornwallis of Great Britain surrendered to George Washington at

Shaker Heights runs on people power

City services — and service to the city

Ohio doesn't have the tradition of an appointed city manager that prevails in so many Michigan cities. The elected mayor is the person in charge of the everyday detail as well as the overarching

How can a city of affluent residents, with a budget of only $20 million, afford a salary attractive enough to lure professionals away from their offices and into city ser-

"It can't," says Shaker Heights Mayor Stephen Alfred, a partner in the Cleveland law firm of Squire Sanders & Dempsey. "They pay me $41,000. Most of the department heads make more than I do." The rest of the lure is the tradition of civic service - and, of course, the fact that Alfred's position allows him the luxury of time spent out of the office.

Alfred got started in Shaker politics at the grassroots level in the 1960s when he started a move to keep For Sale signs off lawns. He later served on the city council.

Even non-officeholding residents tend to get involved in what's happening in their city. "If you stumble, they'll call it to your attention," Alfred said. "They'll organize to do something about it. It keeps people in government on

'We have a lot of marathons here because the community is so beautiful," Gray said. "We had two-and-a-half miles of Hands Across America. And where else do you have two presidential candidates visit the same street on the same day?

Gray says the guts of his program is community involvement. These people have been talking to each other for 25 years," he said. "All I did was ask if we could join."

Shaker Heights has been served by rail transit since the 1920s, when the Van Sweringen brothers developed the planned community as an adjunct to their rail empire. Community boosters tout "the rapid" as one of the city's main assets; ridership in the metropolitan area has fallen drastically during the '80s and is down 3 percent this year on the Shaker lines.

Former Councilwoman Kathleen Barber, who campaigned carrying a cross-section of encrusted water pipe, defended the city's move to fund the project with a taxpayer-supported bond issue.

"I was proud of Shaker for doing it," she said. "It's hard to get excited about things like sewers, but many cities have this problem and don't know it.'

Currently, a multi-million dollar commercial development is drawing the ire of merchants who fear displacement by the project. In what the city feels is a bold, futurelooking move, the planning department put together publicly owned land for an 18-story twin-tower speculative building for office and retail use. It would involve replacing the rapid transit terminal and rerouting Van Aken Boulevard.

"We're a totally built-up community and we need the tax-base relief," said city planner Philip Heintzelman. "The area is now divided by roads and the rapid (transit). This project would tie it all together.'

Opponents are convinced it would have the opposite effect, and critics say the city has failed to consider the extent of vacant office space in the metropolitan area al-

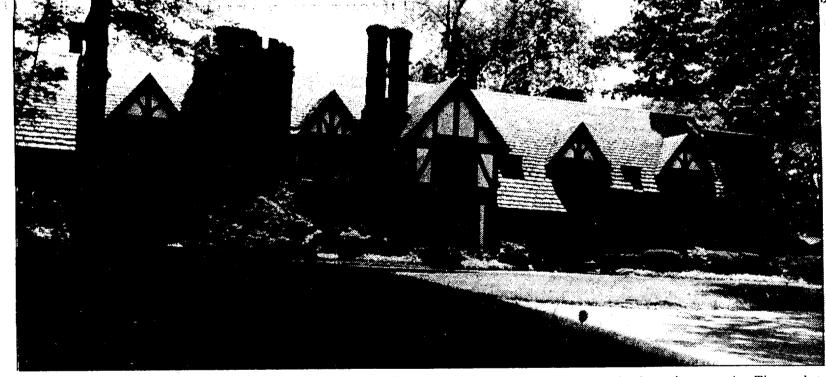

"There are a lot of local naysayers," Heintzelman conceded. "The majority of local interests say the market isn't there, but the out-of-town interests say we've got something unique here (at the interface of the rapid and five major bus lines. We're going after downtown businesses, not small of-

Beautiful housing — a valuable community resource ment information. City inspectors teach home improvement classes

Shaker Heights' founding fathers, actually bachelor brothers Oris and Mantis Van Sweringen, built this house overlooking one of the lakes as their first home in the new community. Developers of Cleveland's Terminal Tower and owners of the Nickel Plate Railroad, the Van Sweringens bought the land in Shaker Heights to provide riders for their transportation empire. They hired planners and architects

Architecturally diverse, mostly old, the housing in Shaker Heights is nationally known for its beauty. Four square miles — two-thirds of the city - was named to the National Register of Historic Places in 1984. The Shaker Village Historic District is the largest in Ohio.

But what can a city do to maintain its aging housing stock?

Some prospective buyers are already complaining that the quality inside fails to match the beauty outside. Wiring and plumbing may not meet today's more stringent codes, floors may sag, the wall-paper may have seen better days.

'It's one of the most critical areas in this community," says Patricia Mearns, a Shaker Heights councilwoman and chair of the city's building and inspection com-

The Shaker Heights real estate market remains hot. In a year that has seen volume and price increases in almost every part of the country, Shaker is keeping pace.

Grosse Pointe real estate agents, for example, sold 786 houses worth $96.9 million in 1985, for an average price of $110,550. Individual cities' average prices ranged from $211,992 in Grosse Pointe Shores to $98,823 in the Woods, with the Farms ($139,866), City ($123,941) and the Park ($113,962) in between.

Shaker Heights agents sold 463 houses totalling $56.5 million. The average house price was $122,168. About three-quarters of Shaker houses sell in the $90-$200,000 range, according to an estimate by Dr. Thomas Bier of Cleveland State University's urban affairs department.

The city has a commitment to maintaining quality, which it shows by enforcing ordinances through the courts, if necessary. And it is "fairly effective," says city Planning Director Philip Heintzelman. But the city can't legislate beauty.

'Housekeeping is not a factor,'' Heintzelman said. "Holes in the wall can be cited, but worn wallpaper can't. It's too easy to get into a matter of personal judgment. At what level does the wallpaper, need to be redone?

to design the nation's first entirely planned community. The marketing brochure featured the Terminal Tower in a halo of light with the architectural gems of Shaker Heights floating above in an attainable heaven on earth. The Van Sweringens overextended their leveraged empire and died bankrupt.

Mearns, who describes herself as "an activist in the traditional-list mold," is working on providing residents with home improve-

The city does legislate architectural standards, however. A Landmark Commission passes judgment on any exterior change to a residence in Shaker Heights.

Nothing but personal taste can stop a resident from painting his house purple, but if he installs new siding, the commission wants to know about color, width and texture. It can and does refuse permission for certain changes.

"If you want to put a picture window in a colonial house, nine times out of 10, they'll say 'no,' " Heintzelman said.

Commission approval is required in order to get a building permit. Residents or contractors who make changes without a permit are required to rip them out or face prosecution, and Heintzelman says the city will make it stick.

The key to the city's enforcement is the point-of-sale inspection, instituted in 1977. Supplementing it are annual exterior inspections, an array of guidelines and a home improvement pro-

aimed not only at developing handyman skills, but at helping people key in to tool rentals or a system of references "Sometimes people don't know how to access the system," Mearns said. "This can prevent people from being taken — elderly people, for instance, who don't know how to evaluate contrac-

Mearns views the program as "a significant carrot" to go along with the stick of ordinance enforce-

A little less popular may be the city's brochures suggesting paint and roof colors and appropriate fencing types. City officials are enthusiastic about the publications, which they say will work to benefit the appearance of the entire community, but some residents have snickered — and resent the

The point-of-sale inspection in Shaker Heights was the first in Ohio. It does not constitute a warranty, Heintzelman cautioned.

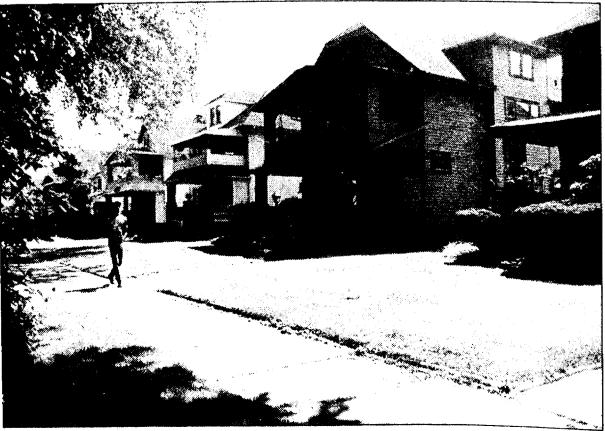

"No tests are run," he said. "We don't fire up boilers. We do turn on the tap to see if there's hot water. We look at electrical panel boxes and appliance connections. If it's there, it's supposed to work. If it's been added or modified, it has to be up to code.'

The inspection covers only what can be seen on the day of inspection. "You can't see if the roof is leaking if it isn't raining," Heintzelman said. But if the wallpaper is stained from leaks, the homeowner had better be able to convince the inspector that the repair has been made.

The annual exterior inspection - which actually is on a four-year cycle before the city's seven ordinance inspectors can complete the rounds of the more than 10,000 single-family houses — checks for deteriorating driveways, peeling paint, cracked sidewalks.

Violations are misdemeanors of varying levels. The city works with the homeowners on referrals for financial assistance, if needed, but the end result of the process is prosecution if the resident refuses to make repairs.

Imposed standards are nothing new in Shaker Heights. In the earliest days of the planned community, the Van Sweringen brothers "knew that money alone does not always buy good taste,' according to a city publication. Their promotional booklet included "Shaker Village Standards," emphasizing distinctiveness of design and detail, often in the specific: "In English and French houses the color scheme requires that the color of the sash be in har-mony with the trim." Or, which might not occur to modern builders, "In all leaded glass work, genuine lead bars should be used instead of zinc. The effect of zinc is flashy and therefore not in good premium jumped 10.6 percent to $437,000 this fiscal year, but coverage decreased by almost 40 percent.

Last year the Woods doled out $395,000 for $1 million of liability insurance with a $5 million umbrella. The Woods will again have the $1 million liability coverage, but only a $3.5 million umbrella.

Woods Councilman Ted Bidigare, a member of the insurance commission, said there was some disagreement on the council as to which form of insurance the city should have purchased.

Because of the skyrocketing cost of liability insurance, the council had sought quotes from non-traditional insurance concerns, such as Michigan Municipal Risk Management Authority and Michigan Municipal League. These insurance concerns are set up as a pool into which premiums are paid

Members usually pay less in pre-Grosse Pointe Woods' insurance miums compared to traditional insurance, but there are a number of technical differences in coverage.

Bidigare said there is a difference in the amount of coverage available and that claims cost the city more "up front" than with traditional insurance.

"The vote was three to three," Bidigare said. "One of the members was absent. The mayor (George Freeman) had originally voted to go with the self-insurance, but changed his vote after the tie.'

Bidigare said the insurance commission spent a great deal of time looking at various plans and recommended the traditional insurance at least for one more year.

"I understand the city of Flint can get only $1 million in insurance," he said, "and it will cost them $1 million. We will have to go to another form of insurance in the future. With 100 percent increases - well, we just can't keep doing it."

Women sought for honors

As part of the annual Women's Equality Day celebration on Aug. 26th, the Women's Resources Subcommittee is looking for Michigan women who have been the first to ahiceve accomplishments in the field of politics/government; science/medicine; sports; business; labor; and education. Summer school enrollment even despite change

You might think that offering a different format in a different location would throw off summer school enrollment. Think again.

Enrollment in regular summer school sessions at South this year is almost identical to last year's despite different location and class offerings, according to program director Dr. Kathleen Herschel-

The program was moved to South because North High School is scheduled for major roof work, expected to continue until mid-

The program this year is running well, with 783 students enrolled in classes that began in mid-June and runs until the end of this month, Herschelmann said.

Although enrollment was almost identical to last year's some new courses didn't garner enough students to be offered, Herschelmann said. In one case, some juggling was done to create a new class to satisfy students who enrolled in two otherwise cancelled classes to help them get the necessary credits, she added.

Computer classes continued to fall off in enrollment, with some BASIC computer-language courses cancelled this year, Herschelmann said. Last year's enrollment in summer computer classes was half that of the year before.

Academic courses appear to be outdoing their vocational counterparts in the summer season, but new college-preparatory classes in English composition and business had to be cancelled for lack of enrollment, she said.

Students interested in enrolling in the mini-sessions, which run Aug. 12 to 22, can contact South High at 343-2179 for course availability and enrollment information.

If you trusted us with your heart attack, why go anywhere else for a sprained ankle?

Saint John Hospital has always been considered one of the finest emergency facilities on the eastside of Detroit for major injuries or serious illnesses.

One of the problems with having this kind of reputation, however, is that so many patients with serious problems come to see us that those with minor emergencies are sometimes left waiting.

No one likes to wait and we know that . . . which is why we established our new Express Care Center.

With Express Care, you receive the same expert medical attention for minor ailments such as coughs, colds, earaches and sprained ankles, as you would for the treatment of major emergencies...without the wait.

So, the next time you are faced with an emergency of any kind, keep us in mind. After all, if you trusted us with your major emergencies, why go anywhere else for those minor aches and pains?

Traffic plan moving ahead, cities say

A preliminary plan and cost estimate for traffic diverters in the north end of Harper Woods and Grosse Pointe Woods should be ready for council review in a couple weeks, according to Harper Woods City Manager James Leid-

The cities' jointly funded project would construct diverters at Brys and Helen and along Canton at the intersections of Roslyn, Hampton, Ridgemont, Hollywood, Haw-thorne and Anita. The diverter would direct traffic back to the main street - Harper or Mack from which it came.

Rough estimates put the price at $21,000 an intersection, Leidlein said. How the project will be paid for and what each city's share will be has yet to be determined.

Leidlein said he would hope to have something to show his city council in the next week or two. Plans could then proceed for either holding public hearings or a joint city council meeting to make a final decision on the project. He would like to have that done by August, Leidlein added.

The traffic diverter plan was proposed about two months ago as a way to decrease traffic through residential areas, a problem that has plagued the two cities and St. Clair Shores for years.

In a related matter, work began recently on the Old Eight Mile bridge. The state Department of Transportation will spend $670,000 to have the bridge widened from two to four lanes.

The widening of the bridge, coupled with commercial development along Harper in Harper Woods, have led to residents' complaints of large volumes of traffic using the streets as throughways from Harper to Mack.

No idle hands here Physics teacher keeps busy

Wearing more than one hat my programs have received." seems to be par for the course for North High School physics teacher Roy Matchko even though he says he can't think of anything else he'd rather be doing than teaching.

The founder of his own computer software company, and most recently, one of three named a summer associate in the U.S. Army High School Science and Mathematics Faculty Program at the Tank-Automotive Command in Warren, Matchko downplays his expertise and calls himself "just a teacher.'

It was in preparing for his own physics classes that opened the door for Matchko to develop software that teachers across the country are able to use. Most of the programs that his new company, Devonshire Software, offers have been developed in the wee hours to answer the needs that Matchko has seen in his teaching at North.

In his "spare" time, however, Matchko has also developed programs to organize record-keeping in sports and analyze course performance by students. "My wife, Sharon, handles the marketing for the company. We've both been pleased with the initial reaction man to teach a lab in his junior

Accepting the summer associateship at the Automotive Tank Command in Warren offers Matchko a new challenge this summer. He'll be working on a white light holography project under the direction of civilian research physicists. A part of a nationwide program for high school and college teachers involving 32 army research facilities, the summer associateship is full-time summer employment.

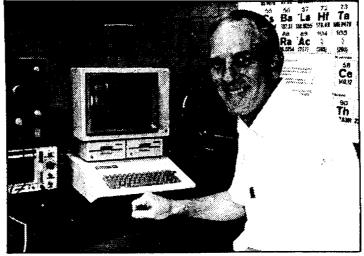

Matchko is one of three Detroitarea high school teachers chosen. An Army spokesman explained, We've found that involving teachers in our research has been significant in benefiting our program and conversely, it offers these participants a stimulating summer experience from which their students will eventually pro-

Matchko earned a B.S. in applied science at Eastern Michigan University and an M.A. in physics while studying under a graduate fellowship at the University of Kansas. After having been approached by the department chair-year, it was a natural that he'd given teaching a strong consideration after graduation.

One of the biggest drawbacks that Matchko has seen that keeps students from enrolling in physics classes is their complete misunderstanding about what the class will be studying.

Matchko said, "A lot of young people assume they'll be working with a lot of machines or equipment. Since physics is the application of math concepts to naturally occurring phenomena, the course surprises some students.

He is a firm believer in the importance of his class to the students who opt to take physics. "Because almost all of my students go on to an advanced course, I see this class as preparation for the future.

Matchko has seen several changes since he started teaching in 1968 — today he has about eight or nine girls enrolled in each of his five classes (earlier, he had only two or three); he senses a more positive attitude among his students; and he thinks the opportunity to use the computer in the classroom to simulate "what if?" experiments has been valuable.

'We are restricted from doing some experiments by the equipment we have. The computer, through the use of spreadsheets, makes data processing available to us that broadly expands our capability of analyzing experiments," Matchko said.

He has a number of other interests outside of his formal teaching career, but finds it hard to fit them all in. A student introduced him to photography a number of years ago, and coping with a long-term illness provided the time for him to become interested in astrology. In addition, for a number of years he coached the Norsemen J.V. basketball team and taught astronomy at Wayne County Community Col-lege. All of these have taken a back seat to computers and research, at least for this summer.

"While I enjoy all these things, being in the classroom is where I feel I belong. I like being a teacher.'

Asked for help, Henry doesn't monkey around

National Geographic News Service

"Henry, light," Sue Strong says. Instantly, Henry, Sue Strong's "partner, associate, companion who shares my apartment," leaps up and flicks on a light switch. Sue Strong is delighted.

"Good girl," she tells Henry—short for Henrietta— and allows her a swig of orange juice.

"Henry, tape," she says a few moments later. Again, Henry leaps up, plucks a cassette from a rack, takes it to a cassette players and inserts it in the proper manner. Again, Miss Strong praises her and gives her some juice.

when she was struck by the possibilities of training dogs to push switches, open refrigerators and fetch prepared sandwiches, push elevator buttons, pull wheelchairs, and perform a variety of other

"The dogs are taught 89 commands, and they can be combined to make more," says Janet Herring-Sherman, marketing director of the nonprofit organization. "Now we have our own breeding stock of German shepherds, golden retrievers, Labrador retrievers, poodles, and border collies, depending on the kind of work they are trained to do, and we place about 60 dogs a year, mostly which cassette, magazine, or book they want. But it also includes tiny backpacks that contain an electrical device operated by remote control. When a monkey misbehaves, the quadriplegic can activate the device to sound an unpleasant tone and deliver a mild

"We don't motivate by punishment, because all the helping behavior is food-motivated," Dr. Willard emphasizes. "But we teach them that if they go up on that stereo or hang around the medicine cabinet, they're going to get that tone and that shock. It works; it's like magic.'

The problem, Dr. Willard says, came into her life. A 1971 van accident had left her without the use of her limbs. Today, she has only a slight range of movement in her right arm, with which she operates the controls on her wheelchair. When someone suggested a monkey as an aide, she laughed.

Before Henry, I could be left alone for some periods of time, but it was a hardship, to say the least,' she says. "I had to be stationed next to the telephone, and I could have a book to read, but we had to remember to do things like turn on the lights in case someone was out longer than expected. It took a lot of planning.

"The freedom Henry gives me is that we don't require as much planning. As long as someone can get me set up with whatever equipment I need, Henry can handle most of the variables. We've been alone together as long as eight hours, and we average six.

'She'll pick up anything I drop or that falls off my lap. Most of the things I do, I need a mouthstick to do them with; if I drop it and she's not here, that would cut off most of my activity. So the difference she makes is I can eat, drink, and be merry when I feel like it. I can change my mind, do different things. It makes the idea of being home alone much closer to a pleasant idea than a form of imprison-

Dr. Willard's nonprofit group, Helping Hands: Simian Aides for the Disabled, now has its own breeding colony. Baby monkeys are placed in homes with volunteers who accustom them to living among humans. After 3½ years, when their teeth are extracted to avoid the possibility of their biting anyone, they are brought to Einstein College for six months of training. The first three "graduates" of the breeding program should be placed with quadriplegics in the next few months.

Dr. Willard says that with enough financial support — the research phase of the project has been aided by the Veterans Administration — she could eventually place as many as 100 monkeys a year. The experience of Sue Strong and the few others who already have monkeys suggests that over and above the specific tasks those monkeys perform, their companionship, entertaining quality, and the way they function as conversation starters make them invaluable partners. 'If I'm out without her, people I wouldn't ever spot twice stop me and ask about her," Miss Strong says. "If I'm out on the street with her, we have a crowd in 30 seconds. Having a monkey almost makes a wheelchair invisible.

Henry, short for Henrietta, sets a plastic container of juice in a holder for Sue Strong, a quadriplegic for whom the capuchin monkey functions as an additional set of arms and legs. On command, Henry will place a straw in the bottle so that Mis Strong can drink from it while reading the magazine Henry has fetched and placed in a rack. Henry's reward for successfully performing a task is a sip of juice from a bottle of her own.

To most people, these are simple in northern California.' tasks, hardly cause for notice, much less for praise or reward. But to Sue Strong, who lives in a 12th-floor Manhattan apartment, Henry is the difference between a measure of independence and total reliance on others. Sue Strong is a quadriplegic, and Henry is a tiny, curious, active, and exceedingly well-trained capuchin monkey.

Henry is one of eight such monkeys who have been placed as aides to quadriplegics in the eight years since Dr. M.J. Willard, then a postdoctoral student in behavioral psychology at Tufts-New England Medical Center in Boston, began experimenting with the idea of training monkeys to do useful tasks for people who have lost the use of their arms and legs.

It is not the only attempt to train animals to aid disabled human beings. Guide dogs for the blind have been in use since the early 19th century, but in recent years there have been a number of experiments to use dogs for something besides pets.

Many have moved from the experimental to the operational stage. For example, "hearing dogs" are placed with hearingimpaired people to alert them to everything from a knock at the door to a fire alarm.

One of the biggest programs is Canine Companions for Independence in Santa Rosa, Calif., which trains dogs to serve as aides for the physically disabled, the deaf, and the elderly. Its founder, Bonita Bergin, was working as a special education teacher 11 years ago

So far as she knows, however, Dr. Willard, now affiliated with the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in the Bronx, is the first to train monkeys to help the disabled.

"I've met two peole who had thought of the idea," she says, "but the technology to make the whole thing practical has only been around fairly recently."

That technology includes electic wheelchairs and chin-operated lasers, by means of which quadriplegics can tell their monkeys just

Colonial Dames bring history back to life

Col. Henry Clitz would probably be pleased to see the work that is going on in his former home on Officer's Row at Historic Fort Wayne. Clitz commanded the fort ficer's Residence overlooking the Detroit River.

The fort, first built to defend vasion in the 1830s, was turned over to the city of Detroit as a historic landmark in 1949 and over the years of disuse, the houses of Offi-in the 1880s and was the first officer to live in the Commanding Of-vasion in the 1830s, was turned cers' Row fell into disrepair. A fire destroyed most of the Commanding Officer's Residence leaving little but the foundation.

However, Col. Clitz' home was destined to rise again. Grants from the Kresge Foundation, the Detroit Historical Society, the Michigan History Division through the National Register Grant Program of the U.S. Department of the Interior and the National Society of Colonial Dames of America have paid for rebuilding the exterior of the building to match its original appearance. The exterior work is nearly complete.

Inside the house, the local chapter of Colonial Dames, mostly Grosse Pointers, have been working to recreate the original atmosphere. This has not been a distant fundraising project. Two days a week, members of the chapter gather at the fort to work restoring, cleaning, polishing and painting antique furniture for the house.

'We're concentrating on furniture that was fashionable at the time," said Virginia McMillan, chairman of the project. "We're using Eastlake and Renaissance Revival pieces.'

Furnishing the home has presented research problems because there are no photographs of the interior of the home in its original condition. The Colonial Dames are concentrating on finding pieces that might have appealed to Col. Clitz tastes.

Charlotte Giltner, Ethel Burwell and Jean Dodenhoff are researching the life of Col. Clitz. They report that prior to his post at Fort Wayne, he served in the Civil War and was wounded twice at the Battle of Gaine's Mill in 1862, where he was captured and imprisoned in the notorious Libby Prison in Rich-

Janice Wright is heading up a committee to sew curtains for the house. Style will vary from unbleached muslin in the bathrooms to calico in the maid's room.

Technical advice in the project is coming from James Conway, architectural curator of Historic Fort Wayne. With Conway's help, many pieces of furniture for the house have been located within the large collection of antiques of the Detroit Historical Museum - in storage at

James Conway gives Dorothy McMillan some advice on the best way to remove old varnish on the front of a bureau drawer. The women of the Colonial Dames of America are working two days a week to prepare antique furniture for the opening of the Commanding Officer's Residence at Historic Fort Wayne on Aug. 15.

However, many pieces have been purchased by the Colonial Dames. For more than four years the group has been holding fundraisers and visiting antique shows and auctions to find pieces for the project. McMillan's co-chairmen include Sis Walton and Ethel Burwell. Lucy Hamilton was secretary. and Anne Berry was treasurer.

"We've been working on this for

The group researched the project by taking all-day trips to other restored houses of the 1880s in Michigan to learn about the way of life and decor of the period. They consulted a military expert on how a colonel might have furnished his home, bearing in mind the possibility that he might be transferred and would have to transport all his belongings. Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Yates

Unger-Yates

Susan Unger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Unger, formerly of Grosse Pointe Park, currently of Big Pine Key, Fla., and Christopher yates, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Yates of La Jolla, Calif., were married on June 14, at Horizon Fellowship Chapel, San Diego, California.

The Rev. Ronald Smith of Hawaii and Glenn Hirashiki of San Diego officiated at the 10 a.m. ceremony which was followed by a reception at the Horizon Christian Fellowship Hall.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of off-white satin, with a square neck finished with Spanish lace. The skirt extended into a peacock train. She carried a bouquet of white roses, carnations and gardenias.

The maid of honor was Karen Unger, sister of the bride, San Diego, Calif. Bridesmaids were Delia Escebell, friend of the bride, El Centro, Calif.; Wendy Wolf, friend of the bride, Leucadia, Calif.; Suzette Swanson, friend of the bride, Plymouth, Minn. They wore lavender flowered chiffon dresses and carried bouquets of white roses. The flower girl was Amy Gorsuch, niece of the groom, Escondido, Calif.

The best man was Charles Yates Jr., brother of the groom, Newport Beach, Calif. Ushers were James Dalessio, friend of the groom, La Jolla, Calif.; Peter Zion, friend of the groom, La Jolla, Calif.; Troy Sanderson, friend of the groom, Leucadia, Calif.

The mother of the bride wore a buttercup yellow linen dress. The mother of the groom wore a soft lavender chiffon dress. Each wore a corsage of white roses

The couple honeymooned with a trip to Puerto Vallarta, Mexico. They will live in San Diego.

Music for the ceremony was provided by John and Lisa Wickham of San Diego and Steven Unger, brother of the bride, Marquette,

Holt-Pepper

Jonathan William Pepper and Kary Lee Holt were married on June 7 at Ruggles Baptist Church in Boston, Mass. The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson S. Holt of Mystic, Conn., wore a white taffeta gown with a lace bodice. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Pepper of Bonita Springs, Fla., and formerly of Hawthorne Road in the Woods.

The maid of honor was Kim Holt, sister of the bride from Washington, D.C. The best man was Dr. Steve Klein of Chapel Hill, N.C. The couple wrote their own vows while the groom sang a love song he had composed for his bride.

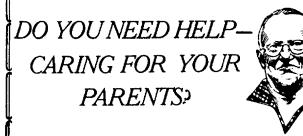

A luncheon reception followed the morning ceremony at the How-

Cooks' cookout benefits symphony

An interesting experiement in alchemy will occur Saturday, July 12, when members of the Instrument Committee of the Grosse Pointe Symphony Women's Association will attempt to convert hamburgers into tympani, sometimes known as kettle drums.

The Instrument Committee is committed to buy instruments for the symphony that few musicians can afford or use except at symphony concerts. How many people do you know who keep a set of tympani or a pair of cymbals in their homes for personal amusement?

So on that Saturday afternoon the members of the committee and their friends will meet on the lawn of the Louis Cook residence at 665 Bedford Lane, in Grosse Pointe Park, to remedy an acute drought in the instrument fund.

In addition to hamburgers there will be a cornucopia of hotdogs, cole slaw, baked beans and beer. Dorothy Cook's primroses and Louis's Kentucky Wonder pole beans will provide a suitable setting, complete with a bosky dell.

Attendance will be limited to members of the Association, the Grosse Pointe Symphony Society, members of the orchestra and kindred souls. Dorothy is chairman of the Instrument Committee. The Cook-Out Committee includes Helen, Cope, Marge Fahim, Molly Flintermann, Anna Lazar, Mary Lou Moser, Silvia Rutkowski, Mary Evelyn Self, Martha Smith, Mary Whitley and Helen Wiseman.

Fresh produce is here now

July's food outlook shows prices for pork trending upward, while prices for beef, poultry and eggs hold their own. But it's the wide variety of fresh Michigan fruits and vegetables that provides the zip to July food shopping.

While planning their food shopping and other food activities, shoppers need to keep in mind that the 1986 season for Michigan fresh fruits and vegetables is approximately one week ahead of a normal year but one week behind last

Black and red raspberries will be harvested during the first three weeks of the month. Look for picked berries in pint containers at farm markets on the west side of the state. Shoppers may have to go to a U-pick operation to get the very limited supply of these berries on the east side of Michigan.

Sweet cherries and red tart cherries are other July specialties which will no longer be available fresh at month's end.

Early varieties of blueberries are coming to market now. This year's larger size berries are one of the benefits of the wet summer. The supply peak for blueberries will occur the last week in July this year, but they will continue to be available through mid-September.

NAIM

The Macomb chapter of NAIM (Widows and Widowers) has its monthly meetings the third Wednesday of each month. July 16 is the next meeting at St. Barnabas on 10 Mile and Phlox (between Hayes and Gratiot). This month there will bee a card party at 7 p.m. Refreshments and prizes will be available. The donation is $2. Alumni are invited. For further information call Stella at 892-6458 or Frances at 526-9356.

American Business Women

Belle-Biscayne charter chapter of the American Business Women's Association (ABWA) is holding its July 10, meeting at the Polish Century Club 5181 E. Outer Drive, Detroit. Cocktails at 6 p.m., dinner at 7 p.m.

According to President Judy Heitman the event will revolve on orientation for the new and veteran members, also focus on personal and professional growth opportunities for women.

Nina Deland is the vocational speaker

American Business Women's Association was founded in 1949 as an influential National Organization. Currently, it has over 2,100 chapters and more than 112,000 members throughout the United States and Puerto Rico. Women who are employed or self-employed are eligible for membership — if interested, contact Kay Wyszczynski, 293-3759, home, or 468-1488 office. Member-

One example of the care being taken in detail at the house comes from a member who found a picture of a Confederate officer who helped Clitz during his imprisonment. On the assumption that the colonel would have wanted a picture of the man who saved his life, a duplicate was made and a framed portrait will be displayed.

Reh installed at Grace UCC

The Rev. Harvey William Reh was installed as minister at Grace United Church of Christ, located at Lakepointe and Kercheval Avenues in Grosse Pointe Park, at a special service on June 22. He was issued the call to become Grace Church's 11th minister in its 62 year history on March 2, and officially began his work at Grace Church on May 5.

The following guests had part in the service: Nancy Schinning, representing the Detroit Metropolitan Association of the United Church of Christ, welcomed Reh to the area; the Rev. Ralph Brown, chaplain of the Evangelical Home in Detroit and former pastor of Grace Church, gave the charge to the congregation; the Rev. George Allen, pastor of Peace United Church of Christ in Detroit of which Reh was a member as a youth, gave the charge to the pastor; and the Rev. Jack Richards, an associate minister for the Michigan Conference of the United Church of Christ did the installa-

Some Grace Church members and friends also assisted with special music, scripture readings, a prayer, and a report. A reception served by the Women's Fellowship in the Fellowship Hall followed the Reh received his ministerial degree from United Theological Seminary in 1959 and he was ordained by the Evangelical and Reformed Church in the same year. Twenty years following ordination were spent in pastorates in Presbyterian congregations in Wisconsin and Iowa. Rev. Reh returned to Michigan in 1980 to accept a call from the UCC church in Imlay City. It is from that church that he comes to serve Grace Church.

Reh, in accepting the call to Grace Church, told the congregation that he would have Grace Church be a witness of their faith in and to the community and that he wants "growth and challenge" in his new congregation. He soon will be calling on businesses and homes in the Grace Church area to acquaint the community with Grace Church and his role as its minister.

His wife, Virginia, is also a former Detroit eastside resident who is currently working full-time at Chrysler Corporation but is trying to become involved in church activities as much as she can within her schedule.

Grace Church invites all to come to visit the church and meet the new minister and his wife. Services are held every Sunday at 10:30 a.m. Sunday School sessions, starting this fall, meet at the same time. Communion is served the first Sunday of each month, as well as on other special Christian dates.

Marching to 'beet' of a vegetable

The modern beet thrives in cool countries and is featured in their cuisine. This handsome vegetable appears on the table in some guise at virtually every meal in some locales.

There are several different kinds of beets, including some that are developed for the high sugar content of their tuberous root, and others for their sizable foliage, making them a prized potherb, often in iridescent shades of red, green and yellow which are planted as spectacular ornamentals in the flower garden.

Fresh beets are available in leafy bunches in our produce, and canned in a variety of forms. They are nutritious vegetables and contain abundant supplies of vitamins, including their tops which should always be utilized by the good cook.

The following recipes for beets are from the low-calorie, lowcholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Vegetable Lover's Delight

Large Beets — do not wash them and leave an inch or two of the stem on. Place in either a large pottery casserole with a cover or wrap them in foil. Bake the beets in a 450-degree oven for 2 hours. Remove, cool slightly until you can slip off the skins — slice and serve hot with margarine, salt and pepper.

Calories per 1/2 cup of beets and 1 teaspoon of margarine about 61. Cholesterol 0.

VARIATION: At same time bake large brown onions, with skins on in a 450-degree oven until soft. Remove from oven, remove skin - serve alone with seasoning or blended with beets.

Calories per 1/2 cup of onion about 30. Cholesterol 0.

VARIATION: While beets and onions are baking, boil some potatoes, with skins on. When tender, cool slightly, remove skins. Slice and blend with sliced beets and onions. Flavor with olive oil and seasoning or your favorite vinaigrette sauce. Serve hot or cool not cold. Sweet basil is a pleasant compliment to this vegetable blend.

Beets with Beet Greens Sauteed

Select only very young, small beets with very fresh, tender tops (preferably just pulled from the garden). Cut tops leaving at least an inch attached to the beets. Scrub beets with a vegetable brush; rinse and drain: Steam over boiling water until tender which takes only a few minutes. Wash the young tops and stems thoroughly (discarding any tough ones); rinse; and drain. Cut leaves into thin chiffonade. Slice stems into 3/4-inch lengths.

Saute stems and leaves in a wok or skillet in a little margarine (about one teaspoon per cup). Cook for several minutes with a sprinkling of sliced green onions with tops, until beet stems are tender. Add beets which have either been sliced or cut into wedges; continue cooking until beets are heated through. Serve either plain or with lemon juice or vinegar.

Beets with Onion Rings

4 to 6 small to medium beets 1 Tblsp. margarine

1/4 cup green onions with tops, thinly sliced

1/4 tsp. salt

1/8 tsp. pepper

Steam beets until tender. Remove and cool for a few minutes.

French Market set for weekend

The 14th annual French Market, sponsored by the French Festival of Detroit, Inc., will be held on Saturday, July 12, 11:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Sunday, July 13, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., indoors and outdoors at the beautiful Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore Rd., Grosse Pointe Farms, on the shores of Lake St. Clair.

The event will feature food and fun with a Gallic flair. Food will include such favorites as Salade Nicoise, crepes, quiche, vichyssoise, pastries, French cheese, wine and bread. Entertainment will include Can Can dancers, a French Canadian folk singer, a juggler, a magician, a chanteuse, a witty master of ceremonies, a group of Dearborn youngsters who entertained in France and cooking demonstrations by chefs from area restaurants.

There will also be a boutique, flea market, epicerie, fresh flower cart and raffle.

The proceeds of this two-day event are traditionally used to further the interest of the people of Metropolitan Detroit in the area's French heritage. Some of the projects which have benefited to date include: the furnishing of the French Room at Wayne State University, two plaques at waterside to mark the place of Cadillac's landing, helping to find ance the reenactment pageant of the Cadillac landing during Detroit's Bicentennial celebration, a mural in connection with the Moran Cottage at the Detroit Historical Museum, the purchase of a bust of Lafayette for public display, funds to the library for French and French-interest

Warren S. Wilkinson is the current president of the French Festival of Detroit, Inc.

GP AAUW donates to Resnick Scholarship

When the Grosse Pointe chapter of the American Association of University Women meets July 15, it won't be for just another garden

Proceeds of the summer dinner party will go towards the newly-established Dr. Judith Resnick American Fellowship Endowment, an award given annually to a woman who is completing her doctoral dissertation or conducting postdoctoral research, with preference given to candidates in engineering and the natural sciences.

Resnick, killed in the Jan. 28 Challenger shuttle disaster, was a member of the Clear Lake City, Texas AAUW branch. She received her BS degree in electrical engineering from Carnegie-Melon University in 1970 and with the help of an AAUW fellowship in 1975-76, she was awarded a doctorate in electrical engineering from the University of Maryland in 1977.

Selected by NASA as an astronaut candidate in January 1978, Resnick worked on projects in support of orbiter development. She conducted experiments aboard the shuttle Discovery in electrical current and suspended proteins at zero gravity.

In June, the Grosse Pointe
AAUW board of directors voted to earmark 20 percent of each dinner reservation for the new endowment fund. The dinner party will be hosted at the home of AAUW member Sybil Jaques and Kathleen Nickerson, an instructor at St. Clair Community College, will speak on "Current Trends in Modern Literature.'

Anyone interested in contributing to the Resnick endowment should contact the Educational Foundation chairman, Fran Schonenberg, 264 McMillian, Grosse Pointe Farms, 48236.

AAUW is an organization of graduate women, who through seminars, programs, and fund raisers support educational goals and work for legal, social and economic equity for women. The AAUW educational foundation funds given nationally and internationally, have exceeded $1 million dollars for the sixth year.

Founded in 1881, AAUW is the oldest and largest national organization working for equity in education. And like Judith Resnick once said in an interview, AAUW believes that breakthroughs in nontraditional careers such as hers are but a first step for women. Resnick believed that "firsts" pave the way for women in the future, but that all women must pursue their own goals to reach full equality.

Schuck to help MCF Circle of Fellows

John Schuck, more commonly known as Sgt. Enright from "McMillan & Wife," will "En-chant" Michigan Cancer Foundation's special friends and guests at the Circle of Fellows party July 19, to be held in the Grosse Pointe Shores home of Ron and Mary Lamparter. MCF promises this party will be "some Enchanted Evening."

"Some Enchanted Evening's" mood has been set as Hawaiian. The Lamparters are making arrangements, from Hawaiian music and entertainers, hula dancers, to a complete Hawaiian luau. Schuck will attend the festivities as special guest celebrity. The party starts at 7 p.m.

Sugar glider

The sugar glider, a small mar-supial of Australia, can glide up to 124 yards, says National Geographic World.

The Circle of Fellows is a very special group of concerned and dedicated supporters of Michigan Cancer Foundation programs in cancer research, cancer control and cancer home care programs. This generous group assumes the responsibility of making annual donations to MCF of $500 per Schuck will "Enchant" friends and guests with quips and anecdotes describing what life is really like as "Sgt. Enright," as Broadways "Daddy Warbucks" and as "Painless the Dentist" in "M*A*S*H*." Schuck is currently in production on a major motion picture, starring opposite Bette Midler, Shelly Long and George

Mike Andrzejczyk

On top of the world, Ma!

Here it is, my second-ever sports column. You (singular) raised such a ruckus, sports editor Peggy O'Connor relented and said I could do a couple while she's on vacation. Thanks, Mom. (Send money.)

This is my second season with a fullyequipped boat for tracking walleye across Lake St. Clair. I haven't been out as often as I'd like, but I'm beginning to pick up the pat-

We haven't had the success we had last year, Dad and I. I know, however, that somewhere out there, there's a salesman in a tackle store lurking, waiting to sell me some-thing that's going to knock 'em dead. Anyway, if you've got a favorite pattern or bait, give me a call. I've seen hand-liners, chuggers and even some guys that look like they are laying mines out there this year, so I know somebody's catching fish.

Fishing's my life

I caught the fishing bug early. My grandfather and father turned me into a river brat before I was able to read the hands of a clock. To this day, I think, had they waited until I could tell time, they never would have gotten me out of the house at the ungodly hour they did.

Anyway, a day at the river down here means the Detroit River. My grandfather for some reason scorned the nearer and instead headed for the farther flow off Algonac.

We'd throw the 7½-horse Elgin in the back of the 1962 Dodge Dart and head for the boat livery, me sleeping on a wool blanket pulled out of the trunk for just such an emergency. My grandfather knew the man who operated the livery in Roberts Landing. At least I hope he did. He would bang on the door of the marina at 3:30 or 4 a.m., get his boat, haggle about equipment and then head for a deep hole he knew about just off the state park.

Meanwhile, my father would be trying to coax me to consciousness with a bowl of Cheerios (lots of sugar, a little milk) at the diner next door. It wasn't a real clean spot, as I recall, but they were friendly enough.

(A couple of years back, Dad and I cruised up the river and looked for the old livery. It had been turned into a bar. The diner next door is now a parking lot.)

Anyway, with life vest firmly wrapped about me, the three of us headed for the hole. We'd anchor above one, and, using tackle we could have winched freighters in with, paid out our offerings back into the spot. It's called "the whipping method" today, but we used to call it "watching the freighters go by and complain that the fishing isn't very good."

I hooked my first walleye out there, what at the time looked like a monster but probat the time looked like a monster but probably wouldn't have gone more than a couple pounds. Years later, (about 21, to be more exact) I hooked my biggest walleye chugging on the river in the early spring.

Note I said "hooked" and not "landed." I manhandled the buggerer up to the side of the boat and, to my eternal chagrin, my father tried to net the fish tail-first.

Well sir hook or no book, that six or

Well sir, hook or no hook, that six- or seven-pounder took off like someone hit him with a cattle prod. He spit that hook and headed off, leaving me hanging over the side of the boat, hand clasping spasmatically.

Let me tell you ...

A couple of my favorite fishing stories happened on the river.

One day, my grandfather set up a rod for me and playfully said it was his favorite tackle and such, so be sure to catch a fish and be careful. Well, somehow, working the line back and forth, the snap came loose and the tackle fell off in the water, leaving me near tears. Two weeks later, he and my father returned from a fishing trip. My grandfather, a big grin on his face, said he had a surprise. Out comes the set-up I'd lost.

What he told me was, there he was whipping near the same spot we were, when he felt something hit his line. He jerks back and starts reeling like crazy. Finally, up come the spinners, sinker and the extra set-up I'd

I still have that sinker, by the way.

My second favorite story happened the year before we got our boat. Dad and I were chugging the river one slow day. It was about 10 and we'd gotten nothing.

Suddenly, Dad stiffens. He rears back on his line. The boat starts to swing around in the current and, he informs me, he hit a

I start the outboard and head upstream slowly while he tries to work his line free. It's coming, he says, it's coming.

What comes up is a length of anchor rope.
On a whim, he gives it a tug, and I ease us upstream as he pulls the line.

We finally get a little ahead of where the anchor is obviously stuck and he gives one good yank, I give the boat some gas and there we are with our very own Dansforth

Anyway, we get back to the boat livery and ask the man if he's lost any anchors. No, he says, but he'll give us $5 for the one we hooked. Well, we say, we think we'll keep it, maybe buy ourselves a boat to go with it.

You go ahead, he laughs. I've still got that anchor.

Hockey playing trio rolls away summer

Three 15-year-old hockey nuts were showing their stuff for a photographer in a city parking lot last week when a passerby remarked, "Boy, they must really like hockey... practicing in the summer!'

South High sophomores Patrick Clavet, David Rivard and Andy Busse really do like hockey - enough to overcome the obvious lack of ice during the summer months by shelling out $100 apiece for roller hockey skates. The three get together daily for hours of roller hockey games and skating practice in Princed's healward. It's fire them tice in Rivard's backyard. It's fun, they say, and helps build up their legs and keep them in shape.

There's another reason for rolling, however. Clavet, Rivard and Busse have skated on Grosse Pointe Hockey Association teams since their first grade days. In more recent years, it's been their dream to play together on the Grosse Pointe South varsity hockey team. That'll come true this fall, since all three made the cut at South's summer tryouts last month.

"Yeah, it'll be neat," Clavet says of the prospect of joining his friends on the Blue Devil hockey team in December. "It's better hockey," adds Busse, when asked whey the three decided to forego the GPHA's travel season for high school play.

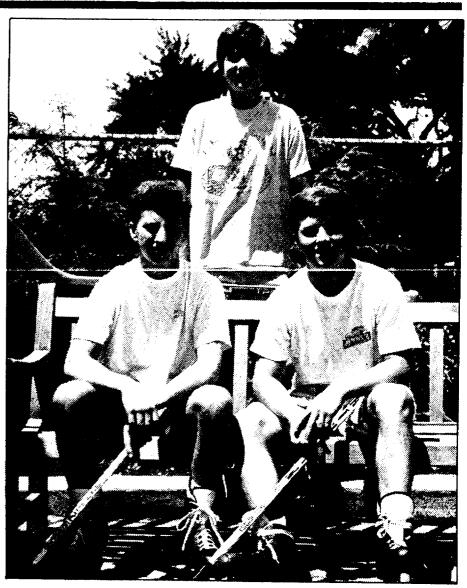

According to Clavet, several of South's players keep in shape by playing roller hockey in the summer. The skates have hoots just like hockey skates, with a "blade" made of rollers. The roller skates enable the skater to do just about anything that's possible to do on ice, except slide to a stop.

"Everybody's doing it . . . it's fun,"

Clavet is a right winger, Busse a center and Rivard, a left winger. All three grin and shake their heads when it's suggested they might make a nice starting line for South this fall. "Sure, but we're new to the team so it might not work out that way," Clavet says.

"We're just glad we made the team," Busse adds.

Expos take 2nd title

The Expos defeated the Cubs two straight July 2 and 3 to win their second consecutive Babe Ruth title.

The Expos gained the berth in the series by posting a 19-2 season record, easily the best in the Pointes. Late season highlights included a June 18 victory over the Cubs as well as out-slugging the Astros June 20.

The first game of the series went to the Expos 11-3. Jamie Acore went the distance for the win with Kevin McCarron and Wayne Houle driving in two runs each. Jason Deyonker, Jay Tobias, Eric Zenow and Charlie Stumb all had an RBI. Bob Tiderington also came through with a crucial hit.

The second and decisive game of the series saw Zenow start for the Expos against the Cubs' Scott Collins. Zenow shut out the Cub's for the 4-0 victory and the title. Tobias had two RBI and Zenow and Jaboro drove in the other two.

Manager Jim Tobias said he was excited with the second consecutive title. Other team members include Adam Tenelian, Steve Craparotta, Steve Stander, Frank Lucido an Brian Ashid. Expos coaches were John Laskerides and Fermin Peinado.

The 1986 Woods-Shores tournament team for the 14 and 15 age group will include Kevin Endres, Scott Schorer, Houle, Tobias, McCarron, Jaboro, Delita Reb Zenow, Acore, Jim Poulitz, Bob Stratske, Scott Bernhardt, Scott Leech and John Cartwright.

'Big Trouble' is big

By Elsa Frohman

Let's face it, Jack Burton (played by Kurt Russell) is a jerk. He makes bad racial slurs in front of his Chinese friends. He drives a hog truck. He talks in a steady stream of bravado cliches. He's kind of a raunchy John Wayne. But when you strip away that rough exterior, you find out that underneath

. . he's still a jerk. But it works. After "Raiders of the Lost Ark," and all the other recent films that do respectful satire on old movie cliches, we're almost to the point where cliche satires are cliche. But not quite, and there is still room for this high-spirited send up of everything from trucker movies to kung fu movies to monster movies

The action is non-stop. From the first moments of "Big Trouble in Little China," when Jack's friend, Wang, (Denise Dun) has his bride, fresh from China, kidnapped at the airport, to the slam-bang finale, played out in sort of a Buddhist-Taoist discotheque, nothing is to be taken for granted. Every outrageous situation is topped with something even more outrageous. No movie cliche is left to moulder in peace.

Early on, Jack and Wang drive into an alley chasing the kidnappers of Wang's fiancee. They are blocked by a rather ordinary Chinese funeral. But wait, out of shadows comes a gang of red-turbaned kung fu killers, rivals of the tong holding the funeral. But wait. out of the shadows comes a small army of the supporters of the first tong, armed to the teeth with automatic weapons. But wait, out of the sky come three kung fu fighters that crackle with blue electricity and can't be killed by normal means. But wait, around the corner . . . Never mind, you've just got to see it.

The plot quickly dives into the imaginary tunnels under Chinatown and Jack is plunged into a topsy-turvy, silly world of such places as "The Hell of Upside-Down Sinners.''

The villian of the piece is kind of a cross between the old man, Jack Crab, in "Little Big Man," and Darth Vader. James Hong brings a light touch of humor to the 2000-year-old ghost, David Li Po. Along the way, the film is populated with a looney variety of old movie characters. There is the crusading woman reporter, whose writing sounds more like a romance novel than journalism (Kate Burton), and the ditsy, fasttalking woman lawyer who provides Jack's love interest (Kim Cattrall), and the old tour bus driver who knows more than he's telling (Victor Wong).

For those of you who hate reviews that tell too much of the plot of the movie, rest assured, what is written here is a mere hint of what happens in the film. It would be difficult to tell more than a few brief snatches of the plot in the space allotted in a newspaper. It's just too full of twists and turns and red herrings to be retold in a few

One warning — if you abhor movie violence, pass this one by. It is ultra-violent. On the other hand, none of the violence is taken seriously. Director John Carpenter is making fun of the current trend toward violent movies. (Keep a sharp eye out for a sly send-up of Rambo in the opening moments of the final sequence.) The violence in this film is caricatured. Everything is there except the cartoon balloons saying "Biff" and

This is a good movie to see on Saturday night in a packed theater. There is something to be gained from sitting in the middle of a crowd of people laughing, shouting and applauding the sillier moments of this movie.

Carpenter and Russell teamed up before in "Escape From New York." There will be inevitable comparisons drawn. Both films are highly atmospheric and utilize fanciful settings. Both are stunning action pictures with body counts in the hundreds. But "Big Trouble in Little China" has a dimension that was missing in "New York." It is genuinely funny, while still de-livering its action punches.

To celebrate National Ice Cream

Week, Tom Davis, Grosse Pointe resident and president of Tom Davis and Sons Dairy, will give away free ice cream cones and animal stickers at the Detroit Zoo Saturday, July 12. The company is the maker of Ashby's Sterling Ice Four special flavors have been created for the event - Razzybear-ry, a raspberry-vanilla swirl; Rocky Rhino, chocolate with marshmallows and peanuts; Zany Zebra, a white and dark chocolate combination; the Monkey Madness, vanilla with a blend of peanut butter ripple and chocolatecovered peanuts.

Free ice cream at the zoo The first ice cream cone was made at the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904. Currently 98 percent of all households in the United States consumes ice cream with 86 percent buying it at least once a week. The biggest consumer is a male between 15 and 18 who eats ice cream at least once every three days. Consumption is highest in July with more ice cream eaten on Sunday than any other day of the

'Psycho III' more mad slasher than Hitchcock

By Michael Chapp

"We all go a little mad some-

 Norman Bates The above statement may have a little bit of validity to it, but certainly not in the context the speaker intends. When Norman "goes a little mad," he doesn't fool around. In "Psycho," he killed a pretty young girl who's only offense was using too much water in the shower. In "Psycho II," he killed an old lady who stopped in to have some coffee. And in "Psycho III" III"... well, suffice it to say that Ma Bates' favorite son is still up to his old tricks.

"Psycho III," directed by Norman himself, Anthony Perkins, veers a little bit from its predecessors — which at times is good and at other times is bad - but ultimately it is neither as engaging or as satisfying as the first two episodes.

Viewers may recall that at the end of the second installment, Norman had killed the woman who claimed to be his "real" mother (not to be confused with his "mother" in the first movie) and brought her upstairs to the corner room of the old mansion, where she could keep an eye on things. In "Psycho III," Norman is still fighting the divergent personalities inside him. As himself, Norman is a gentle, rather naive loner trying to keep occupied. As his mother, Norman is a violent, possessive killer who will stop at nothing to rid the world - or at least her little corner of it - from the filth and perversity which abound.

Indeed, "Psycho III" is nothing if not a constant chronicle of the schizophrenic mind of Norman Bates. Viewers see both sides this time, in more definitive terms than ever before. Perkins as actor handles the by-now-familiar characterization of Norman with flair and ease. When he tells his new assistant manager Duane (Jeff Fahey) that he prefers the night shift, there is no doubt in viewers' minds exactly why; such is the precision of Perkins' delivery

Perkins as director also demonstrates considerable ease with the material, using slick camera techniques and surrealistic shot compositions to add to the mood. And in this film, there are religious undertones and a more detailed study of the sexual aspects of Norman's problems.

Both things are developed in the character of Maureen Coyle (Diana Scarwid), a young nun who leaves the convent during a crisis of faith. Wandering about, she winds up at the Bates Motel. Norman, finding himself aroused, dons wig and grabs knife, planning to put an end to such feelings. But when he throws back the shower curtain, he finds the girl with slit writsts, half-dead in the tub. He rushes her to the hospital, and becomes a hero for thwarting her suicide attempt and saving her life. How's that for irony?

The two of them eventually develop a relationship, and, for the first time, Norman feels loved by a woman rather than threatened. One of the most tender scenes from the film shows Norman and Maureen together — simply holding each other. Audiences feel happy for Norman. Perhaps he's finally turning the corner.

Then again, maybe not. Before long, Norman is doing more slicing and carving than the counterman at a delicatessen, and all hope seems to be lost. The climactic seporter (Roberta Maxwell), who's been pushing too hard for too long, and the mother side of his own personality. Indeed, Norman seems to be completely over the edge this time, even though he declares at the picture's end that he is free of his problems. Could this be a hint at "Psycho IV?

One hopes not. For every good thing that this movie does — like attempting to explore Norman's character further — it does at least two things wrong. This time for example, when the killing begins, viewers see, in quite graphic detail, every aspect of the violence. Perhaps this is because audiences are more sophisticated now, and demand to see detail. But interestingly, the famous shower scene from "Psycho" is spliced into "Psycho III," and it looks as convincing now as it did in 1960. The remarkable thing about that scene is that it was done entirely through implication. Not once did viewers see knife touch flesh; a strong accomplishment indeed for those in both options — the graphic and the implied - "Psycho III" does itself more harm than good. It points to a much larger problem, and presents a strong argument that the best work was done in the original - causing all sequels to lack the ingenuity of the first film.

What "Psycho III" adds in character dimension, it lacks in horror and cohesiveness. There is no more horror left in the saga of Norman, only a dark humor. Perkins, to his credit, realizes this and plays more than a few scenes for their campish quality. But the final product is a mess, more resembling a mad slasher movie than something Alfred Hitchcock would have put on the screen.

Here's a motion that we let the "Psycho" films, like the great master of the macabre himself, rest in peace.

The state of the s

The Grosse Pointe Rebels, coached by Mike Fozo and assistant Chuck Cartwright and Ron Austin, finished first in the premier division of the Michigan Youth Soccer League and were the first Grosse Pointe team to make the state cup finals. Troy, the eventual champion, got off to a 2-0 lead but the Rebels held them scoreless the rest of regulation time. John Cartwright scored the Rebels' first goal in the second quarter and Scott Austin tied it up in the third. After two scoreless overtimes, the Panthers scored on a shootout and won the championship. "The Rebels are special because the boys grew together as a team and had fantastic support from the parents. They learned to respect and depend on each other," coach Fozo said. Rebels are, kneeling from left, Matt Smucker, Gavin Howe, Paul Fozo, goalie Scott Nesom, Andrew Bond, Brad Kime, Patrick Bond, Steve Fine; top row from left, Jacob Durakovic, Scott Austin, John Cartwright, Dave Birnbryer, Joe Caldwell, coach Mike Fozo, Jim West, Anthony DeLuca and John Karabetsos. Not pictured is Bob Beltz.

Captains Matt Agnone and Paul Megler led the Express to another GPSA under 10 championship, the third in the last four years for the squad coached by Gene Agnone and Dan Megler. Tim McPherson, Mark Brewster, David Bonkosky and Nicky Lionakis led the offense; Chris Howson, Mike Schmidt, John Gleason, Bill and Bob Stevenson and Marty Martin were strong on defense, Joe Hanna and Nate Cook played well in goal. The team included, left to right (front row), B. Stevenson, M. Agnone, T. McPherson; (middle row) N. Lionakis, M. Schmidt, N. Cook, P. Megler, M. Brewster, J. Hanna, M. Martin; (top row) coaches Megler and Agnone.

The under 8 Lasers finished the regular season in first place with a 6-0-1 record. The squad scored 25 goals, led by C. Nicholas Rutan, who had eight goals and nine assists. Ryan Robson has seven goals and four assists, and Jay Lytle had six goals and two assists. Andrew Warner chipped in two goals and three assists and Chris Ford and Ryan Scofield had one goal each. Leading the defense were goalies Robbie King and Scofield, who allowed five goals and stopped 25 shots. Playing well were Eli Wulfmeier, Christophe Heinen, Matthew Shirilla, Ellie and Libby FitzSimons, Mia Schricker, John Andrew Starr and Betsy Turnbull. The Lasers are, from left to right (front) Turnbull, Schricker, Shirilla, Heinen, Starr, Wulfmeier; (top) King, L. FitzSimons, E. FitzSimons, Rutan, Ford, Lytle, Scofield and coach Ric Rutan. Warner and Robson were not pictured.
