

Many chiefs have teepee in Park

Attention jaywalkers, skinnydippers, gold-brickers and others on the fringes of society: You better mind your Ps and Qs when you set foot in Grosse Pointe Park.

The city is now the home of choice for three of Grosse Pointe's finest police chiefs. Besides the Park's Richard Caretti, there is the city's Bruce Kennedy and the Farms' Robert Ferber.

What we want to know is if it's true that Park officials are considering renaming Jefferson to John Wayne Boulevard?

Green splatters

The cops in Grosse Pointe Shores are still snickering over some (admittedly) silly phrasing in the Grosse Pointe News a few weeks ago. We announced that a Shores scout car had seen and pursued a speeding car, without noting that in order for a scout car to "see" anything, it helps to have an officer at the controls. They're still squabbling over who gets to drive the magic car next.

It helps to have a sense of humor in this business - and in theirs, too, as some of the police reports show. Sunday, Officer Gary Boudreau showed a keen appreciation of the role fate plays in the petty affairs of mankind, not to mention the vegetable and manufactured Seems somebody heaved a tomato (how green and firm, we can only guess) at a car — with some amazing results. Who would have imagined that a collision with a tomato would damage a car? It busted the taillight.

Boudreau was called to the scene, where he assessed the situation and drew some conclusions: "It is this officer's opinion that the taillight had met its fate upon contact with the listed projectile."

That's the tomato.

Greenhorn Greenwood

A face quite familiar to us at the Grosse Pointe News was in the spotlight last week. Former staffer Tom Greenwood was one of the celebrities given a polo lesson at Harper Grace Hospital on Aug. 5. We all know that Greenwood got to be a celebrity by writing this column, however, the promoters of the event, a charity polo match to be held Sept. 14 at the Detroit Polo Club Grounds in Milford, Mich., seemed to think his fame had something to do with the Detroit News. How quickly they forget.

An intrepid cadre of nonequine media types had been assembled to take a polo lesson for charity on the lawn outside the hospital that bright morning. Every once in a while, one of them would glance nervously over his shoulder to confirm that, yes, they are real horses. They seemed to think it was appropriate to do this near a hospital. Greenwood was in the second group to mount up. To his credit, he went ahead and went through with it after he saw a reporter from The Automotive News demonstrate the fast way to dismount (one point landing - on the posterior)

"I've never ridden before in my life," Greenwood said nervously before he went to meet his mount. He approached the animal like a man approaching a four-legged land mine. Astride the saddle he spurred the steed to the furious pace of the north-bound Lodge Freeway at 5 p.m. on a weekday

But he did hit the ball. That's not as easy as it sounds. Charlotte Craig (of the Detroit Free Press) one of the first

Cities schedule hearings on diverter plan

By Mike Andrzejczyk

City councils in Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods agreed in concept last week to putting traffic diverters along shared streets in the north ends of their cities to alleviate traffic on residential

The plan now goes to city managers to work out details of cost-splitting and service delivery to residents.

It took the council less than an hour in a joint meeting Wednesday, Aug. 6, to come up with what was called the best solution available to a problem that has plagued the area for more than 15 years.

Traffic diverters will be placed along Canton at Anita, Hawthorne, Hollywood, Ridgemont, Hampton and Roslyn. Old Eight Mile Road will be dead-ended so traffic can't use Brys.

The diverters would eliminate using the streets as throughways from Harper to Mack, A car entering one of the streets would be diverted back to either Mack or Har-

Permanent diverters would be placed diagonally across the intersections. They would be of curb height and landscaped and would be three feet away from existing curbs to allow drainage. Two cars would be able to make the turn at each diverter.

Harper Woods City Manager James Leidlein told the councils he happened upon the diverter plan in a trade journal from the Michigan Department of Transportation.

The final plan was shaped in meetings between city and police officials of Harper Woods, Grosse Pointe Woods and St. Clair Shores, and representatives from the Southeastern Michigan Council of Government. The three cities three years ago agreed to give each other 30 days' notice before erecting signs or trying to change traffic patterns in the area. They agreed to notify each other after the Woods tried signing the most northern four of its streets one-way, forcing traffic in-to Harper Woods, St. Clair Shores and farther south into the Woods.

St. Clair Shores officials at the joint meeting said their city has a plan to erect diverters along all its east-west through streets from Old Eight Mile to Nine Mile Road.

Leidlein said the diverters might be able to be constructed for less than the engineering estimates of $20,000 each.

ings on the plan at their September council meetings to give residents of the area a chance to voice their opinions about it. If there is enough support, the cities will put temporary barricades at the intersections for one year and review the results before erecting permanent

Besides deciding how to split the cost, city officials have to work out who is to deliver rubbish collection, street cleaning, snow removal, fire and emergency medical service to the 20 or so Harper Woods homes that will be on the Mack side of Canton — cut off from Harper.

City Administrator-Clerk Chester Petersen said the two cities should be able to work out details of service delivery, since they now have a similar arrangement in the area around Raymond and Linville near Bournemouth.

Council members from both cities appeared pleased with the plan. Harper Woods Mayor James Haley said the cities have been trying for years to find a solution and Grosse Pointe Woods, Harper Woods to share cost that the diverter plan appeared to be the one that would please the largest number of residents. Grosse Pointe Woods Mayor George Freeman called the diver-ters the best solution he has seen so far to the problem. There is still some bad blood between the two cities, however. Some side comments made by council members during the

50-minute meeting showed there were still some hurt feelings that haven't healed since the last time the cities tried to solve the prob-

Not everyone is going to be happy about it, officials said. Some Harper Woods residents have already asked the council not to undertake any traffic plan in the area because they don't feel there's a problem. But other residents have asked that their street be cul-de-sacked to eliminate its use by through traffic, Leidlein added.

Officials on both sides said they had learned from past experience of trying to solve the problem.

Many of the council members present said they didn't want to simply block one or two of the streets since that would push traffic farther south.

In addition, Leidlein said the cities may have to consider erecting diverters from Vernier to Allard if traffic pattern studies show drivers using those streets to get from Harper to Mack, instead of Vernier Road.

Unlike past plans, where signs in the area required additional police, this plan will be selfenforcing, Leidlein added.
While Woods Public Safety

pleased with the plan, Harper Woods Police Chief Gary Ford said he didn't like it.

The curbs were too low and could be driven over by a fleeing felon, Ford said. Also, a driver fleeing police may drive up onto a lawn to avoid diverters, he added.

Ford said he favored making all Harper Woods northern streets one way from Canton to Harper.

Initially the plan may be inconvenient, but drivers will learn quickly after making a U-turn back to Harper or Mack, Patterson

"After a very short time, people will learn and the problem will be cleared up," he added.

But what does it mean?

Kemp delegates storm Pointes

By Nancy Parmenter Now that the much-ballyhooed primaries are over, what did they mean? The attention of the nation, or at least of political pundits, was focused on Michigan, the state that stole the limelight from Iowa and New Hampshire.

Whether it was all worth it depends on your point of view. Whether anyone understands what happened is an open question.

"To say you've got an idea now (which presidential aspirant won) is ludicrous," said Bush campaign coordinator Barbara Gattorn of Grosse Pointe Shores. "It would have made a difference if the (precinct) delegates had been linked with a candidate on the ballot as they were two years ago."
In the confusion of polling, claims and counterclaims this year, Gattorn said, no one could know with any degree of accuracy which delegate preferred which candidate. Not only did voters not know what the election was about but many delegates ran without a clear idea of their responsibilities or their loyalties.

"The majority of voters are not ready to think about a presidential election," Gattorn said. "They voted for precinct delegates as friends or neighbors. They didn't differentiate this election from any other presidential delegate elec-

They should have. Even though the delegates are elected a long time before the presidential convention, some of those selected Tuesday will find their way through a tortuous process to that convention, where they will make their opinions on issues and candidates felt.

Delegates committed to Bush won fewer slots in the Pointes than Bush people had hoped for. Of 32 Pointe precincts, 12 went for the Bush candidate. Gattorn doesn't think it means much.

"Poll them a year from now and you can make a projection," she

The Jack Kemp faction is ready to make projections now.

"It was a good day," said state-wide Kemp coordinator Clark Durant of the City. Durant was exultant over the number of wins among delegates recruited by him and his wife, Susan. Sixteen of the Grosse Pointe precincts went for Durant-recruited delegates, an especially exciting victory considering that most of Grosse Pointe went for Bush in 1980.

"We have 12 that we know are committed to Bush" Gattorn said. "We do not know that the other 16 are committed to Jack Kemp."

She said the Bush delegates were clearly connected by campaign literature to George Bush, but that Kemp's flyers had implied en-dorsements by President Reagan rather than by Kemp.

Durant said the Kemp campaign had had positive response from that mailing — other than from Bush people. "Because that piece was so good, a lot of Bush people were upset by it," he said.

Statewide, Bush is claiming twice as many delegates committed to him as to Kemp, but Durant sees the election as proof that Kemp can hold his own. He sees his man as the candidate of the future, carrying a message of optimism to all sections of society.

"If we're serious about being a majority party into the next century, we must have a message that reaches into Hamtramck and Melvindale and Mount Clemens. Durant said. "Unless the Republican party is broad-based, we're doomed to be a minority party. I've been with Jack in the ghettos and barrios and country clubs. His message doesn't change with the

What a Kemp victory says about Grosse Pointe is that "it's a mistake to view any community as a monolith," Durant said. "At the bottom line, all it says is that there is a variety of people at the grass

It is significant that more delegates filed than ever before and that so many Republican party activists are young, Durant said. "It's a sign of vitality - and reflective of Grosse Pointe, which has always been an active Republican community that has pulled together to support the party - as long as the party is the party of

On the state level, however, Gattorn, at least, sees Republicans as the party of ego. The whole idea of having an election so early was "silly," she said.

'The goal was to put Michigan on the map. But it was a mistake on the part of the party to get into this in a gubernational year. It drained money from gubernatorial candidates and nearly cost Bill Lucas the election. Political activists spent their energies on the precinct delegates instead of the gubernatorial candidates. I just hope the party leaders will rethink the system and not do this again in four years.

Vote results for precinct delegates are on Page 14A.

The Grosse Pointe Public School System has applied to the state for nearly $4 million it says it should have received for special education and other state-mandated programs, but didn't.

The application is made under a ruling in February by the state Supreme Court. Justices decided, in a combined ruling on two similar cases, that reductions in general school aid were not prohibited under the Headlee Amendment to the state constitution.

But, the justices said, the state has to continue paying to local governments the same proportion of state revenues as was paid in 1978-79 for certain programs mandated by law, like special education programs, bilingual education, driver's education and school lunch programs. The ruling could potentially cost the state hundreds of millions of dollars, according to Doug Roberts, assistant state schools superintendent.

The two cases, Durant vs State

Board of Education and Waterford School District vs State Board of Education, involved the same premise, Roberts said. Both cases argued that the state was mandating education and should maintain they are owed, Roberts said. They its proportion of funding of general education programs. The Supreme Court was asked to rule on the matter, since it involved the Headlee Amendment to the state constitution, Roberts said. The court said that the state could reduce its general education aid, but must maintain its portion of payments for programs it specifically mandates through statute, he added. The state maintains only four such programs, Roberts said. They are special education programs, drivers' education, bilingual education and school lunches.

The court ruled the state was to pay those costs for programs that were essential and indispensible, Roberts said. The program for which the state would be liable for the largest award would be special education, he added.

tion for underfunding to the Local Government Claims Review Board.

Districts have two options in trying to reclaim the dollars they say may make application through the Local Government Claims Review Board and use public money to pay for the request

They may also file suit against the state Board of Education, but must then do so as individuals, not using public money, he added.

Going through the review board has its own drawbacks, Roberts said. The board faces a number of administrative questions about its formation and operation, he added.

But for districts like Grosse Pointe that are out of formula, there's nothing to lose in applying for the education underfunding, he

About 200 school districts have made applications to the state review board, according to the Michigan Association of School Boards, which advised member districts of the options available. Another 30 have decided to go to court.

While the MASB's legal trust fund helped pay for the case while it was at the Supreme Court, the association will most likely not repay districts for going to court to win the underfunding, a spokesman for the MASB said.

Local school officials say they don't know how much, if any, of the underfunding dollars will be re-

Roberts said there is one other issue that districts should look at: Should the award for the underfunding cost the state hundreds of millions of dollars, it may be forced to either raise taxes or cut other programs.

The courts have already ruled the state needn't maintain its portion of general education aid, Roberts said. Should the dollars awarded be large enough, the state may simply cut that part of the budget back to pay off the settlements under the Durant ruling.

The local government claims review board probably won't begin working on the applications by school districts until sometime next spring, Roberts said.

Historical society moves into Mason

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society has a new home: Room 110 in Mason Elementary School.

Society President Lisa Gandelot said the organization will soon be back in business after completing its move to the school building at 1640 Vernier in the Woods. The society's phone number will remain 884-7010, she added.

The society was asked by the school system to move out of its Monteith Elementary School room, which it had occupied under an informal agreement with the district, because Monteith's population increased and the room was needed as a class-

The room at Mason is almost the same size as the Monteith quarters, Gandelot said, adding she was "very pleased" the society had a new home.

Winners start run for November

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Last week's primaries gave Grosse Pointe voters some things to look forward to in November; a race for county commissioner between a candidate with an old political name and a new one, and a replay of past state Senate races.

Residents will decide in November whether David Cavanagh or Phillip Andrews II will represent the area on the 15-member Wayne County Board of Commissioners. Cavanagh survived the crowded Democratic half, while Andrews took the Republican portion of Tuesday's election.

Cavanagh, the son of the late Detroit Mayor Jerome P. Cavanagh, said he's not taking the November election for granted, even though the district of close to 160,000 people is near two-to-one Democratic. It includes a large portion of northeast Detroit, Harper Woods and the Pointes.

Cavanagh says he plans to work just as hard as he did in the primary. "I feel I have a very formidable election in front of me," he added.

Having the name of a former Detroit mayor may have helped, but Cavanagh says he feels he's stepped past the name candidate label. "I feel I established myself as a viable young candidate . . . who feels I can undertake the tradition of excellent public service of my family . . . I have what it takes to continue that."

The Democratic half of the county commission race was one containing two other political names. George Fitzgerald finished with about 2,300 votes, behind Katherine Barnhart with about 2,500 and Judith Stopczynski with Barnhart, the only candidate in the commission race to receive Civic Searchlight's preferred and well-qualified label and the candidate endorsed by the Detroit Free Press, was unavailable for comment last Friday and Monday.

Fitzgerald, who got into the race early and had his organization up and running before other candidates had filed, said he felt he had run the most decisive campaign that he knew, and added that, although it may not be this year, he's 27 years old and has many years to seek elected office — something he plans to do.

He said he was disappointed he wasn't able to carry more of Grosse Pointe, even though he did carry a majority of Detroit and Harper Woods, precincts.

Judith Stopczynski is the wife of Ted Stopczynski, who represented northeast Detroit in the state House for 10 years. She also worked on the campaigns of Stephen and Stanley Stopczynski.

The number of candidates for the Democratic half of the race split the party, and Cavanagh said ie would like to see others get behind him so the party makes a strong showing in November.

Fitzgerald said that, as a good party member, he will throw his support behind the party's nominee in the race.

Andrews outpolled David Pochmara from Harper Woods to win the GOP slot for the county commission. He said he plans to put out a hard effort to win in November.

His primary race, however, was mostly done through word of mouth, he said. He wanted to set an example by running his campaign on a balanced budget and. since he didn't take in any money, he didn't spend any either, he add-

The general election will require him to hold some fundraisers, he

Andrews isn't conceding the seat to Cavanagh, saying he's going to work hard to get his message out

While the county commission race features new faces, the race for the First District state Senate seat features two men who have run against each other before. Incumbent John Kelly was unopposed in the Democratic primary for the seat, while John Lauve outpolled accountant A. Jack Boland for the GOP half.

Kelly and Lauve met in 1982, with Kelly the victor. The two-term state senator from Detroit said he's hoping for a similar finish this time around.

Boland said he took 46 percent of the vote against an opponent with name recognition for past political activities. He added he had run for precinct delegate against Lauve and took that race.

Both men registered at the last minute for the GOP half. Boland said he was convinced by party officials to get into the race, since Kelly had been unopposed in the primary and no one had filed in the Republican half. Lauve filed after renouncing his candidacy for governor and throwing his support behind Dick Chrysler, who finished second to William Lucas in the governor's race.

Another person who forsook one office to run for another was John Hertel. Hertel passed up making a third run for the county commission and entered the Democratic race for county executive. He finished fourth in the race which was won by Livonia Mayor Edward McNamara.

Hertel has been a tradition in eastside politics, representing the area first as a county commissioner, then for eight years as a state senator, and finally for two terms as a commissioner on the reorganized county board.

This was the first election loss for Hertel in his political career. It was followed two days later by his ouster as chairman of the county board. Staffers said the Harper Woods resident was taking some time off to collect himself.

Campaign workers for Hertel said he ran a strong campaign, even making a last-minute mailing and pitch for votes. But precincts that in the past have gone to Hertel went to other candidates in the race; Samuel Turner and Robert Ficano, who finished second and third in the CEO race.

Although Robert Murphy won the Republican half of the race for the CEO spot on November's ballot, it was the Democratic race that observers say chose the next county executive in traditionally Democratic Wayne county.

Another race considered settled by the primary is that for 13th District state representative' seat. Bill Bryant is looking to return to the state House for his ninth term and face Democrat Nancy Resowski in November in a district that is almost 80 percent Republican.

Resowski said it's going to be difficult to unseat Bryant. There's a lot of work to do, strategies to develop and issues to put together, she said, adding she was jumping right into campaigning for the seat, starting the weekend after the primary.

She plans to do as much door-todoor campaigning as possible, Resowski said. "It's a good way to meet voters and talk... about issues," she added.

Bryant, while not conceding his return to the House, is thinking about his future political plans.

Should the GOP capture a majority in the state House, at which they have a good shot, Bryant says he may try for the speaker position. He is the dean of house republicans and minority leader emeri-

In his eighth term, Bryant says politics is still exciting for him. While he has outside projects — including writing a book about how to be an effective representative -Bryant said he's "still very much interested in" politics.

Another possibility for Bryant is a run for the governor's chair in four years. Were Lucas to lose to incumbent Gov. James Blanchard in November, Bryant said he may consider making a run for the office in 1990

Sister Barbara, who will manage Grosse Pointe's first group home for mentally retarded adults, enjoys a cup of coffee Monday morning. About 150 people attended an open house later in the afternoon. The home was scheduled to start operating with its first resident Tuesday. Not all of the residents have been selected yet to live in the house, but it's likely that five of the six will be from the Grosse Pointe-Harper Woods area. Besides Sister Barbara, there will be an assistant manager and from eight to 10 full- and part-time employees. The Association for Retarded Citizens of Grosse Pointe-Harper Woods bought the house at 615 Lakepointe in the Park for $91,000 in March. It was the culmination of an effort begun by ARC in 1980.

Two injured in accident

A Grosse Pointe man and woman, both 22, were undergoing facial plastic surgery at St. John Hospital Aug. 11 after their car drove full speed across Mack Avenue and smashed into the post office in Grosse Pointe Farms. Neither was wearing a seat belt.

"They came down Warren and never stopped," said Farms De-tective Earl Field, "There were no skid marks.' The two, who are apparently friends at Michigan State University and who live on the same Grosse Pointe street, had gone out for the evening and were returning at about 3 a.m. The car, a red Mustang, belongs to Ford Motor Co. and is leased by the woman's father. The man was driving. When the police arrived after being flagged down by a pedestrian on Mack near the Cracker jax club, the woman was lying across the front seat, bleeding profusely from the face and neck, according to police reports. A witness told police that she had seen the driver, a man, jump out of the car and run away. A man answering the same description was seen at several locations and left bloody footprints during the next hour. He then apparently went home and was taken to the hospital by his parents.

Police found a possible marijuana cigarette in the car, which had blood on the windshield, front seats and left exterior. They have asked for search warrants to check the blood and urine of both people. Police said they could issue warrants for leaving the scene of a personal injury accident, for allowing an intoxicated person to drive, and for drunk driving.

The door and frame of the employee entrance to the post office was destroyed in the accident. The car was completely smashed and had to be towed away on a dolly.

'The only thing holding it together is the muffler and the doors,' Field said.

Administrators' pay increases 6.2 percent

Grosse Pointe's school administrators will get a 6.2 percent pay increase, according to Super-intendent John Whritner.

The increase was approved last month by the Board of Education. Cost will be $115,000. Administrative salaries and benefits cost the school system $1.9 million this budget year, according to the district.

The percent increase for each of the 42 administrators was developed using the system's administrative compensation plan, Whritner said. The process involves contacting 13 districts selected in the report as being comparable to Grosse Pointe, calculating the median increase and applying it to local pay scales, he added.

This is the only year the flat increase will be used. Whritner said. By next year, the system will have an administrative evaluation plan that will determine salary increases and any performance

The pay-for-performance plan is included in the administrative evaluation plan that goes to the board this month.

The process will set up a formula by which annual percentage increases of the 13 comparable districts will be figured with administrators' performance to calculate future pay raises.

Because there weren't many pay-for-performance programs in place for school administrators, "we had to kind of invent the wheel here," Whritner said.

Administrators appear pleased with the evaluation and compensation plan because they are clearer about what's involved in the process, Whritner added.

Ring missing

A Grosse Pointe Shores woman reported to police that a ring had apparently been taken from a safe in her garage sometime between March and July of this year. Missing was an amethyst and diamond ring valued at $3,800, according to police reports. Police are investigating the possibility that a former employee may have taken the ring and pawned it.

Older women

Learning not to shoulder all the burdens

By Nancy Parmenter

Women have it tough. They try to work and raise families, triumph professionally while washing and ironing, write proposals on the dining room table while nagging the teenagers to carry out the garbage. They have to remain svelte and young through it all — and be a gourmet cook.

In a way, they have themselves to blame for the travail. Society is full of stereotypes about women, and "sometimes we buy into them," says Mary Anne Collinson, a counselor who for five years has been leading group sessions for women trying to come to terms with their own expectations.

"Stereotypes are all around us and we don't even see them," Col-linson said. For instance, "The youth culture does bad things to women. For men, gray hair and wrinkles say 'power, ability, experience.' For women, they say it's all over.

Women's expectations may be too high. Their ability to accept blame is 'way too high.

"Women's self-esteem isn't all it should be. We shoulder all the work and social situations. Why should men ever need to blame themselves when we jump right in and say it's our fault?" Collinson

Collinson's group, "Older Women/Double Jeopardy," of-fered through the Northeast Guidance Center, has been helping women cope with their problems at the rate of four sessions a year. She says the title means that the very fact of being an older female puts a person in double jeopardy.

But women come for hundreds of reasons. Some want to go back to work, some want to quit. Some are divorced or widowed, but half are married. Some have older children living with them, some face problems with older parents. About a quarter of them feel their lives are bogged down in trivia.

But what the problems boil down to is learning to control one's life. Deciding what is important, finding independence, becoming assertive, setting goals are issues that cut across all of society, and being in a group seems to help. "We have women from Lakeshore to the projects," said Collinson.

Although the sessions are billed blame. We accept guilt in both as appealing to older women, participants are frequently as young but thinks one of the main reasons as 40. "An older woman is anyone who thinks she is an older woman," Collinson said. "I used to publicize this as 55 and up and somebody sent me an irate letter objecting to classifying 55 as 'older.' Some of the 40-year-olds come to find out what lies ahead

Lucas off and running

Now that President Reagan has congratulated William Lucas on his nomination and offered to do whatever is necessary to help him become the nation's first elected black governor, Michigan Republicans are euphoric about their chances of unseating Gov. James Blanchard in November.

Sooner or later, however, both Lucas and the party will have to come down to earth and admit they still face an uphill battle to capture the governorship. Blanchard will be no pushover, whatever the issues become, and Lucas still faces the problem of attracting outstate support from voters who never heard of him or his record as Wayne County executive.

Yet just the nomination of Lucas has saved the Michigan GOP some embarrassment. It was no secret that he had been strongly wooed by leading state Republicans after he let it be by leading state Republicans after he let it be known he might join their party. But the party did not provide as much financial support as he had expected. And after the state delayed its campaign payments, Lucas had to run the early part of his campaign without adequate financing. Finally, the state came through and so did some GOP contributors. And then, with some help from Dick Chrysler's campaign miscues. Lucas did win a convincing victory. miscues, Lucas did win a convincing victory.

Now some Republicans think he's a cinch to win in November, especially after the Reagan pledge of support and a possible Reagan visit or two to Michigan during the fall campaign. Unfortunately, even presidents as popular as Reagan find it difficult to transfer their backing to someone else. If Lucas wins, he'll really have to do it chiefly on his own, assuming, of course, adequate support from the Michigan Republicans, the national party organization and the White House.

Lucas does start on a high note. The three

Lucas does start on a high note. The three defeated candidates pledged their endorsement at a unity breakfast and Chrysler even contributed $5,100 from his family to Lucas' campaign fund. Vice President Bush's Michigan organization made a $5,000 contribution, too, which should serve as effective advice to the Bush backers and especially those newly elected precinct delegates committed to Bush. Blanchard, as the incumbent, must be strongly favored but he is not a certain winner. The Democrats have their difficulties, one of which is that Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit and leading blacks have felt Blanchard has not supported their programs as well as he should have. In an interview with the Free Press, Young made it clear that as a Democrat he would go with the Democratic nominee and that he felt it will be a "contrast between a Reagan program and a Blanchard program." But his support for Blanchard still appears to be tepid.

Now that the primary is over, observers will watch Lucas carefully to see whether he will move closer to the middle of the road on issues. If he doesn't, he may meet the same fate that befell Richard Headlee who in 1982 became the darling of the far right but lost much of the moderate GOP and independent support to Blanchard. The governor is attempting to stake out those same positions for himself and for his 1986 foe in his early statements accusing the GOP of having been captured by the far right. That leaves it up to Lucas to define his own positions on the issues in order to make a broader appeal, than Headley did appeal than Headlee did.

Rep. Colleen Engler of Mount Pleasant, who came in third in the gubernatorial derby, has said publicly she would not accept the GOP nomination for lieutenant governor. Perhaps she means what she says, even though former Gov. George Romney thinks she would be an excellent choice. But inevitably the GOP convention, acting on a Lucas recommendation vention, acting on a Lucas recommendation, will nominate someone to "balance" the ticket, which probably means the choice will be a white man or woman from outside the Detroit metropolitan area. Many will agree with Romney that Rep. Engler would be an outstanding choice in view of her performance on the stump during the primary campaign.

Rep. Engler proved, among other things, that she was the most moderate Republican among the four GOP challengers. Her nomination for lieutenant governor — or the choice of someone else with similar positions on the major issues — would guarantee that the party is not ignoring its moderate wing this year as it appeared to do in 1982. In the end, such a nomination would benefit Lucas and the entire GOP slate.

A setback for George Bush

If Vice President George Bush really won a majority of the GOP precinct delegates in the Michigan primary —as he claims to have done he did it without carrying the Grosse

Instead, it was Rep. Jack Kemp of New York in the Pointes, winning 16 delegates in the 32 Pointe precincts, with 12 going to the vice president and the other four uncommitted or pledged to other presidential candidates.

Several factors apparently contributed to Kemp's victory. One was that W. Clark Durant was Kemp's local as well as his statewide coordinator. Durant's family long has been active in Michigan and 14th Congressional politics and indeed Clark himself was re-elected a precinct delegate in Grosse Pointe City.

Barbara Gattorn, Bush campaign coordinator in the Pointes, said it would have made a difference if the precinct delegates had been linked with a presidential candidate on the ballot as they have been in some past primary elections. She contended that many citizens simply voted for friends or neighbors without considering the presidential connections. She herself, however, was elected in the Shores where she was known to be a Bush backer.

Yet the Bush people can't have it both ways. They can hardly claim victory on a statewide basis and then minimize the loss in the Pointes on the grounds the voters didn't know what they really were doing at the polls. To Ms. Gattorn's credit, however, she was not among the Bush backers who had claimed the statewide victory.

For Bush, it was something of a setback to fail to carry the Pointes. He easily defeated Ronald Reagan in the Pointes — and in the state - in the 1980 presidential primary which, some observers claim, helped him become Reagan's choice for his running mate.

Nationally, the columnists tended play down the importance of Michigan's primary. From George Will on the right to Tom Wicker on the left, the columnists made fun of the primary and of the claims made afterward by supporters of the three presidential hopefuls -Bush. Kemp and the Rev. Pat Robertson - who fielded slates of precinct delegates. In general, they argued that the results were meaningless because so few voters really knew which - if any - presidential candidates the precinct delegates were supporting.

But Spencer Abraham, state GOP chairman, disputed such comments. In an article in Sunday's Detroit News, Abraham defended the Michigan process on the grounds that it made Michigan a much more important state on the nation's political map, because of the national candidates flocking here. That fact, he contended, is helping Michigan Republicans raise more money than ever before in a non-election year.

Abraham also saw the Michigan process as having significant impact on future presidential campaigns because candidates will have to visit the state, learn about the state's problems and get acquainted with its people. In effect, the state will help define national issues and test national candidates, he said.

Well, maybe so and maybe not. The whole process occurs so early - two years before the party conventions that pick the presidential nominess - that many voters are surfeited by national politics and may not regain their enthusiasm in 1988.

Pointes for Lucas

If voting in the Pointes apparently did not reflect the statewide results in the presidential derby, it did reflect the statewide support given to William Lucas, Wayne County executive, who was easily nominated for governor on the Republican ticket.

The five Pointes gave more than twice as many votes to Lucas as they gave to Dick Chrysler, the Brighton businessman, who ran second statewide and in the Pointes. In the Pointes, Lucas won 4,442 votes to 1,608 for Chrysler, with the City and the Farms giving Lucas three times as many votes as they gave to Chrysler. Dan Murphy, Oakland County executive, ran third and Colleen Engler, Mount Pleasant, fourth in the Pointes.

For the Pointes, it was an overwhelming Republican election, as it usually is in this GOP island in Democratic Wayne County. But, as usual, there was plenty of competition for the GOP support all the way from precinct delegate to governor. Yet the Pointes did give to Gov. James Blanchard, who had a minimum of opposition, more votes than they did to Chrysler by a margin of 2,259 to 1,608.

What will that mean in the fall? It's far too early to say.

Parents decry all-star selection

Opinions & letters

By late afternoon and hours of sitting near the phone it was almost certain he would not be picked for any major team. I was letting Eddie stay up late that night trying to console him with the understanding that he would be on a minor league team, so when the call finally came, very late Sunday night, he jumped on the phone like a lion on his prey. In the usual little-boy fashion, I listed to the monotonous guttural non-verbal conversation - at least that was what I was able to hear of Eddie's conversation -

"hello, huh? yep, yep, ok, ok, thanks! and bye," and click, the call was over. Then he screamed "Mom! I made it! I'm on the St. Louis Cardinals!" What a relief I thought, now at least I won't have a depressed kid on my hands for the next week. But quietly I said a little thank you prayer to Jesus for Eddie and for me.

That year, the Cardinals won the World Series again, with Eddie leading the league in clutch hitting, but sitting the bench instead of starting for the first few games of the season, before proving himself and playing every game thereafter. At the age of 10 and one of the best players on his team, the Cardinals won the playoffs, but lost to the Orioles in the World Series. He wanted to try out for the All Star Team then, but he was only 10 and was told he would have to wait until he was 11. The rules said you had to be at least 11 — and only 11- and 12-year-olds could try out. But trying out wasn't all that mattered, he was told. Your stats had to be good, you had to have proven yourself to be a responsible boy by attending all the practices and in season games, and lastly, you had to attend both of the All Star tryouts and do well in them.

Eddie was all those things and then some. He never missed a game in the three seasons he played with the Cards. He attended both All Star tryouts - in fact, he was on the field waiting for an hour before each tryout.

He led the league in home runs - 11 in all - more than any other boy who made the All Star Team, and he led the league in RBI's.

There was no doubt in anyone's mind that Eddie would make the team — his teammates thought so — the other parents thought so his coach and manager thought so games remarked jokingly, "If the men who run the league, the Eddie doesn't make the team, it's men the boys and girls are sup-

Eddie did not make that All Star Team.

In fact, as Eddie ran to read that list which wasn't posted until after the World Series game — ending two weeks of anticipation, his manager, Mr. Pat Coffee, took my husband aside to tell him himself that Eddie had not made the team. All Mr. Coffee could say was that it was a "damn shame if anyone should have made that team, it should have been Eddie.'

He told us that another boy — a 12-year-old Yankee, had been picked.

He went to catch up with Eddie at the concession stand, where the list had been posted. It was also where the children received their reward for a game well played from their coach and manager a dollar to spend on a hot dog and pop. I didn't know what to say to him. My heart was aching and it was very hard to explain so great a disappointment to a boy who so wanted to make that team and had earned all the credits!

I watched how he reacted to the whole situation with such great pride. He was congratulating the other boys who made it - four boys from his team, and one or two from the Orioles and White Sox, but mostly those from the Yankees. He was saying thanks to the parents who were congratulating him on hitting two home runs that day and for making the great double-play to end that game — and he fought hard to hold back the tears. Only to lose to one big tear drop that showed his heartbreak. Then without saying anything he threw his hot dog, uneaten, into the trash can.

We comforted him as much as we could. We told him that both his coach and manager thought he should have made the team. We told him what Mr. Coffee had said. We told him that next year he would make the team.

So now two weeks later, when Eddie was asking me for the thousandth time, why he didn't make the team, I snapped "that's life — stop thinking about it — it's

Well it was over, until I heard that the men doing the choosing did not go by the usual rules to pick the boys. Help support lupus victims

To the Editor:

There is a disease that is more common than muscular dystrophy, leukemia, or multiple sclerosis. An estimated 1,000,000 Americans have this disease and 5,000 Americans die from it each year. Although anyone of either sex, any race, or any age can get this disease, it most often affects young women, especially young black women.

The disease is not contagious and is not a form of cancer. The disease is systemic lupus erythem-atosus, or SLE or lupus for short.

Lupus can affect any organ, or multiple organs in the body. Symptoms vary but can include joint pain, muscle aches, skin rash, photosensitivity, hair loss, inflammation of the membranes around the heart or lungs, anemia, fatigue, blood abnormalities, kidney involvement, and others.

Paradoxically, 'lupus' patients often look very healthy and well, even when they are very ill. This frequently creates problems with family and friends who cannot understand how anyone who looks so good can be seriously ill. Many lupus patients feel isolated because of the lack of understanding encounter.

The L.E. Support Club is a nonprofit organization that publishes bi-monthly journal, the L.E. Beacon, to help victims. It is cited for its work with lupus patients in the latest edition of "Lupus Ery-thematosus," the textbook by the great lupus expert, Edmund L. Dubois, M.D. and his co-worker

Daniel J. Wallace, M.D.

The L.E. support club is a nation-wide organization with members in all states and several foreign countries. Its originated in Isle of Palms, S.C., and is an offshoot of Leanon, the oldest of the national lupus organizations. The founder of Leanon serves on the advisory board, along with a staff of medical advisors who screen all articles for medical accuracy.

Anyone who would like more information about the L.E. Support Club should send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: L.E. Support Club, 3103-N Hartnett Blvd., Isle of Palms, SC 29451.

Install ladders in seawall

I read with interest and alarm the July 30, Grosse Pointe News story concerning the death toll that drives and walks the shores of Lake St. Clair. Of course the lake is an attractive nuisance, just as a swimming pool or firecrackers sold near the Fourth of July can be equally an attractive nuisance. People will insist on walking along the lake shore. And some will fall

I say

I like sports. I like to play sports and I love to watch sports . . . with the possible exception of Australian Rules Football. And even the utter mayhem the Aussies call football is a change of pace whenever I'm feeling in the mood for a little blood and gore My fondness for at new choleavors comes in handy, I suppose, what with me being a sports writer. It helps to have a more than passing interest in ice hockey when one must stand in a freezing ice rink 30 or 40 times per year to cover high school hockey.

For some reason, however, lots of people think that my entire interest lies in the atmetic field the it?). In other words, they believe that when it comes to have anything to do with the real world, I am a virtual idiot.

At family gatherings, my relatives think that the next sentence spoken to me after "Hi, how are should automatically be Hey, how about those Tigers?' And at work, my fellow scribes wear stunned looks whenever I choose to comment on current events which have absolutely nothing to do with field goals, foul balls or French Opens.

I remember one day, when a coworker in need of information from one of the local high schools, turned to me (because I was the only one in the room), then quickly turned away without asking for help. She began to mutter something about how I couldn't possibly have known the information she was seeking since it didn't have anything to do with sports.

As it turned out, I did know the answer to her question, which sort of left her feeling a little shocked, if not absolutely embarrassed. In sports lingo, I think I kind of blew a fastball by her on the outside corner for strike three.

Okay, so I probably contribute to the overall belief that sports writers all look, act and think like Oscar Madison - and possess President/Editor about one-fifth of his IQ - by saying things like that. But the nature of sports has a little something to do with how sports writers, and athletes, too, are perceived. After all, sports are fun, not work. They are not as important as the question of apartheid, or the fate of the Third World, or as crucial as President Reagan's economic policies.

Greetings from the toy department

Nor should they be, since sports provide respite from the pressures of everyday life.

But then again, I think folks sometimes get the idea that we in sports writing — sometimes known as a newspapers' toy department don't have to take our jobs as seriously as other journalists. They believe that we can afford to approach journalism in a little looser manner than other writers. No way, Jose. Try explaining to a Little League father whose kid's stats aren't right that you just didn't "feel like" checking things out. Or telling an amateur athlete that sure, you'll try to write a pretty accurate story about him, but not to be surprised if things don't quite come out the way he wants it because after all, nobody really cares if you take a loose approach in sports.

In six years in this job, I've found that in writing about sports, I've had to call upon knowledge from just about every discipline imaginable. From medicine to law to geography, to physics, to mathematics.

That's because I've written about athletes challenging eligibility rules in court, and about sports injuries and injury prevention, and about mathematical and physical applications to sailing, cycling and baseball pitching.

"But I don't want to brag. Partly because it's silly, but mostly because that's what the folks do who turn those condescending looks on whenever I pipe up with some nonsporty tidbit.

They say things like "Actually, the word pentacle means a fivepointed symbol and is derived from the root word 'penta' or five

Teen apprehended in armed robbery

A 15-year-old Detroit boy was arrested in Harper Woods in connection with a purse-snatching Aug. 5. He was later turned over to Grosse Pointe Woods police in connection with an armed robbery July 28.

Detective Robert Kwiatkowski said a 15-year-old Detroit Free Press carrier was robbed at gunpoint at about 6 a.m. on Allard Avenue in the Woods. The thief also demanded the carrier's Moped.

The carrier later gave police a good description of the assailant, including an identi-sketch composite. The portrait was turned over to Harper Woods police the morning of Aug. 5.

Later in the day a purse-snatching occurred near Eastland Shopping Center. The Detroit boy was picked up, and found to have a .45 caliber eight-inch barrel gun.

"Harper Woods officers did a great job connecting their suspect to the identi-sketch," Kwiatkowski said. "The news carrier later picked the guy right out in a line-up Aug. 6.

The Moped was later recovered when Harper Woods officers saw two black males riding a Moped "in a reckless manner." Police stopped the pair, and the passenger ran away. The driver was questioned. The serial number matched that of the steller Mener matched that of the stolen Moped, and the driver, a juvenile, happened to live next door to the individual alleged to have taken the Moped.

Kwiatkowski said the juveniles involved have been petitioned into probate court.

Window-bashing Vandals had a field day in Grosse Pointe Farms last week. Police report that on Aug. 8, a safety glass window inlaid with chicken wire in the door of a candy store on Kercheval on the Hill was broken by bricks, a stone and a bottle. The same day, at Kercheval and Carrington, five cars suffered broken windows, apparently shot out with a pellet or BB gun. A sixth car parked on Provencal while its owner took a walk along the lake also had a window shot

On Aug. 7, the window of a trailer parked at the Bologna construction site on the Hill was broken out with rubble from the site. Police said the site is fenced and locked after business hours.

A day earlier, a street sweeper temporarily in the Farms as a demonstration model received a broken window. The sweeper was stored in the fenced DPW area on Chalfonte, according to police.

Board will hold tax hearing The Grosse Pointe Board of crease is still under the 5.2 percent ing at its Monday, Aug. 18, meeting on increasing the district's tax levy 4.9 percent.

The increase, if approved by the board next month, would cost owners of a home with a market price of $100,000 about $82 more next year in school taxes.

The increase would raise about $1.7 million in revenue for the system to fund its 1986-87 budget, which forecasts about $39 million in spending.

Director of Business Affairs Chris Fenton said changes in revenue and expense since the budget was approved in June helped the system cut its proposed tax increase from 6.6 to 4.9 percent. He added he didn't expect bills. any significant changes in the system's fund equity account, which will start the year at close to $2.3 million.

Middle schools are assigned three assistant principals

The Grosse Pointe Board of Education last month approved appointment of three assistant principals to the middle schools. The positions were created during the May budget hearings to replace the administrative interns at Brownell, Pierce and Parcells schools.

The three new assistant principals are former administrative interns. Dr. Suzanne Klein, assigned last year to Pierce, will be at Parcells this year. William White Taylor, at Parcells last year, moved to the assistant principalship at Brownell. Nancy Salamas, who was at Brownell last year, moves to Pierce for the coming school ministration and special educavear.

"These were the three we felt were the best qualified for the positions," Superintendent John Whritner said. The system had a large number of applications and interviewed 16 candidates before selecting the three, he added.

For Klein, the assignment to Parcells is a bit of a homecoming. She worked there for a number of her 16 years with the school system.

Klein has been with the school system since 1970, when she was hired to work in the special education program, Project Genesis. A master teacher trained in developmental learning, she helped establish the early learning materials center in the Woods library branch.

She attended the University of Michigan and earned a master's degree in special education and a doctorate in educational administration.

The education administration degree is a combined curriculum offered throughout the psychology and education departments at U of M, Klein said. Her education and experience gives her a strong background in psychology, ad-

Many of the duties assigned the new assistant principals are ones they have performed as interns, Klein said. Additional duties include supervision of personnel and discipline.

Klein was a member of the review committee for the system's substance abuse master plan and also worked in developing its plan for dealing with teen suicide. The curriculum to go with that program should work its way through the curriculum development process this school year, she added.

Another homecoming is in store at Brownell for the new assistant principal. Brownell was Taylor's initial assignment when he first started with the school system in

In his 14 years at Brownell, Taylor was a social studies, science and environmental studies teacher. He and two other instructors at the school developed the curriculum for the environmental studies course.

Taylor earned a master's degree in history at Oakland University.

The new assignment is a challenge, Taylor said, adding he's "looking forward to it. I wouldn't

There will be a luncheon cruise on the Star of Detroit Friday, Sept. 19, from 9:45 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Following the buffet lunch, the group will travel to Greektown, to explore the unique shops and sights of Trappers Alley. Tickets are $37 each.

On Saturday, Sept. 20, travelers will visit the 7th Annual Renaissance Festival. An experience for young and old, the festival is a recreation of the 16th century village marketplace, complete with trumpet fanfares, duels, roving entertainers, pageantry and parades.

Tickets are $21 per person and include transportation and festival admission. The group will leave the center at 9 a.m. and return at 5 p.m. On Thursday, Sept. 25, the center will sponsor a trip into Canada to explore the early quest for black gold at the site of North America's first oil well.

Lunch will be served in the 1890's decor of the Oil Rig Restaurant before a tour of Canada's first oil boom town. The Victorian architecture that remains will be a tangible reminder of what was once the hub of an intercontinental refining empire in the 1890s.

The ticket price of $25 per person includes transportation, museum tour, lunch and guided tour. The trip is scheduled for 8:45 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

A trip to Stratford, will complete the September offerings. Set for Saturday, Sept. 27, the day trip will include lunch at The Old Prune restaurant, shopping, a matinee performance of Robert Bolt's "A Man For All Seasons" at the Avon Theatre, and dinner at the Vic-

Competition for the position was tough, Taylor said. He kept a positive outlook when the administrative intern program was eliminated, noting he had wanted to make administration his career

"I like working with kids at this level," he added.

Salamas has been with the school system since 1967. She was a teacher of fourth-and fifthgraders and a skills/talent and resource teacher. She earned a master's degree in teaching from Wayne State University in 1966.

Salamas said she is very excited to be heading to Pierce, adding 'Pierce has quite a reputation and heritage to it." She taught at Trombly when she first came to the system.

Gaining the administrator's tag means former interns will be assigned administrative duties besides the tasks they once peformed, Salamas said. "We will be doing the same things, except more so," she added.

inventor's knee and listen for hours to stories of engines, spark plug advance, limiting factors to engine efficiency and probably fishing

All this was heady stuff for an Appalachia-born son of a doctor, but no less interesting than playing ball or listening to the radio.

"Knock is the principal obstacle to improving efficiency of the internal combustion engine, McDougal said as his voice took on a tone of seriousness. "Tetraethyl lead used to help cut down engine knock, but tetraethyl is no more."

So McDougal, 65, a freelance engineer with his own company, invented a system he calls Electronic Octane which prevents knock in a car's engine.

McDougal, a resident of Harbor Island on Detroit's eastside, is scheduled to speak to the Grosse Pointe Senior Men's Club this week about his invention. An invention that a number of automobile companies are using and hasn't earned him a cent — yet.

To understand the value of his invention, it helps to know something about the workings of an internal combustion engine. If not, the bottom line is that the invention could save the average car owner money, and over the course of several years — a lot of money, McDougal says.

Engine knock is caused when the compressed fuel and air mixture inside an engine cylinder explodes all at once — rather than gradually burning after being ignited by a spark plug. Knock is undesirable. It limits the efficiency of gasoline engines. And beyond a slight trace, it's harmful to an engine. It can cause an engine to prematurely wear out or in turbocharged engines, just two or three minutes of heavy knocking can burn holes through the pistons and destroy the engine. No knock is good knock.

The problem is that 80 percent of McDougal would climb atop the the time a car is driven, it doesn't knock - nor does it need higher octane gasoline. Knock is only a problem when the engine is under heavier loads, such as accelerating, climbing hills or sustained high speed driving.

McDougal figures that for each gasoline octane number, a customer pays between four and five

'During the perhaps 80 percent of normal driving times the engine is lightly loaded," McDougal wrote in a speech, "any money that was spent for refining octane in your gasoline is totally wasted. You pay for it and it amounts to simply sprinkling pennies on the pave-

"To a person of Scottish ancestry, this is a genuinely horrible situation," he added.

So he devised a way to avoid knock electronically. His system is a microphone that actually listens for knock in each cylinder of the engine. When the sound is detected, a message is sent to the car's on-board computer. The spark plug in that cylinder is delayed for an instant and knock is avoided the next time that cylinder burns.

It is a simple solution to a problem that has been around since internal combustion engines were in-pects to McDougal's invention, which was first patented in 1975, that the average person wouldn't understand. But the average car owner knows that premium unleaded fuel costs about 25 to 30 cents a gallon more than regular unleaded and he could save $3.75 on a fill-up.

McDougal said that the car companies have decided that their customers would probably like the savings, too. He says these car companies have infringed on the patent rights to his invention.

He is currently in the middle of litigation with Ford Motor Com-

"I have been trying to sell this invention since 1975," he said. "I have several patents in engine electronic knock control. Right now Ford is using it, Chrysler is using it. The infringer I am most proud of is Porsche.'

McDougal worked for General Motors for a number of years before resigning to start his own company.

"I have talked with many of the engineers who work for these companies," he said. "Individually, they are a great bunch of guys. It's the bureaucracy though. The bureaucratic ooze went right over it (his invention). I intend to cut through this ooze."

McDougal's attorney has been with him since the original patents, and is fighting the major automobile company lawyers. It is no simple chore, he said, but in the end he feels he will prevail.

McDougal is most proud of an award he received from Research and Development Magazine. Each year the magazine awards the top 100 inventions in the country. In 1985 the list of honorees read like a list of Fortune 500 companies. Argonne National Laboratories; AT&T Bell Laboratories and Dow Chemical were among the corporate giants.

"McDougal Engineering is the only one-man outil on that list," he said with a smile. "I'm proud of

Study proves it's hard to quit smoking

No wonder people have a hard time giving up cigarettes. A new study from the University of Minnesota lists no less than 11 different signs and symptoms of tobacco withdrawal, none of them plea-

The study involved 50 smokers who were observed and tested during two days of smoking and four days of abstinence.

It was a difficult four days. The researchers say the frequency and intensity of symptoms of distress brought on by tobacco withdrawal appeared to be quite similar to those observed in psychiatric outpatients.

In addition to a craving for tobacco, the subjects showed irritability, anxiety, difficulty in concentrating and increase in restlessness. Other symptoms were bradycardia (a slowing of the heart-beat), impatience, physical complaints, insomnia, increased hunger and increased eating. Individually distressing, the symptoms take on added significance in combination. Seventyeight percent of the group studied reported experiencing four or more such complaints.

Oddly, subjects who reported the most severe withdrawal discomfort were those who smoked the fewest cigarettes per day - and they were easy to spot, according to the researchers. They were the ones who smoked soon after arising and said the first cigarette of the day was the hardest to give up.

One final point: The severity of withdrawal discomfort had no effect on whether or not the smoker could quit. Those with the worst withdrawal symptoms did as well as those with milder discomfort. From: CNS Newstips

A horse and his boy

Shasta, portrayed by Michaels Marks, right, runs to meet with King Lune in Archenland, a friendly neighbor to Narnia, a magical land where animals talk. For five days, the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church summer Bible study group has been enacting a play adapted from C.S. Lewis' "Chronicles of Narnia." At left, a central character, the Lion, played by Ben Trombly, meets with Shasta (Marks) and Shasta's horse, played by David Hatch. The play depicts the life of Christ and teaches moral lessons. Kathleen Peterson directed the play and Nancy Dundas, Juliet Mazer-Schmidt and Carol Marks helped coordinate the daily events.

Girl injured in accident

A Clinton Township girl, 11, was injured Aug. 7 in a tubing accident, Grosse Pointe Shores police reported. Her family was taking turns riding a tube behind their boat. When her turn came, she jumped into the water while the motor was still running and hit the propeller. The girl was brought back to shore, where the Shores EMS treated her for extensive lacerations on the legs and feet and took her to the emergency room at St. John Hospital.

It might have been any picnic at Patterson Park - an office outing, a family reunion, or just a group of friends getting together to enjoy a warm, sunny afternoon by the lake.

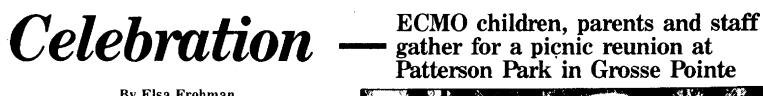

But this was something different. This picnic was a reunion of parents and toddlers with the medical professionals who made a life-or-death difference to them. The children at the center of this gathering are living miracles and the annual reunion is a chance for the Children's Hospital staff to see the results of their work, as well as for the parents and children to get together.

The children were ECMO babies. ECMO stands for extracorporeal membrane oxygenation — an artificial lung machine for infants. Children's Hospital operates one of less than 20 ECMO centers in the United States.

"These children were sick enough, that without the machine, 80 percent of them would die," said Dr. Lin Sell, the ECMO Fellow at Children's Hospital. Sell is a resident working toward certification as a pediatric surgeon. She is one of four full-time members of the ECMO team.

Dr. Michael Klein of Grosse Pointe Park is the founder and head of the ECMO program. Klein established the program 2½ years ago at Children's and Center, Andrew Flannery and Bradley Myhre get to know one another over a bowl of potato chips. Bradley is one of the oldest children in the group. Above, Dr. Michael Klein and Kevin Gersten, a research assistant in the program, keep watch on a grill full of hot dogs. The picnic is a reunion of children, parents and staff from the ECMO program at Children's Hospital. ECMO is the initials of the name of an artificial lung machine for infants.

Did you know that this is the Year of the Sunflower? The National Garden Bureau, a non-profit organization based in Willowbrook, Ill., is responsible for this decree. Perhaps it really is time to pay a tribute to a native American plant that grows in 48 states and whose seeds, high in protein and vitamin C, are enjoyed equally by human beings and birds, and whose showy flower heads grow to monumental proportions.

Of course a sunflower, with a bloom a foot or more across, is hard to miss, and fully spectacular enough to warrant national atten-

Francisco Pizzarro, arriving in Peru in 1532, was amazed at the giant sunflowers he saw there, which were venerated by the Indians of the Inca Empire as the sacred image of their Sun-God. The priestesses, the Maidens of the Sun, wore on their breasts large sunflower disks of gleaming gold.

The North American Plains Indians considered sunflower seeds as sacred food. They placed ceremonial bowls of sunflower seeds on the graves of their dead for food to sustain them on their long and dangerlous journey to the happy hunting

Sunflowers make wonderful natural bird-feeders in your gargen. The Russian Mammoth variety is a good one and produces : flower heads more than a foot across growing on 10- to 12-foot stalks. During the growing season the sunflower's practice of turning its head toward the sun as the sun's position shifts in the sky makes it an interesting plant to watch. And the bird population of your garden will markedly increase with cardinals, finches and sparrows feasting on the maturing seeds. If you are a birdwatcher as well as a gardener you will have other bird-attracting flowers in your gar-daisy family, the dahlia grows wild in Mexico, and is named for Dr.

Once you start finding out about organizations of enthusiasts about various plants and flowers, such as the Dahlia Society, the Hoya Society, the Lily Society, the Rose Society, etc., more and more of them seem to surface. And new ones appear on the scene from time to time. The latest one is a new society dedicated to ornamental crabapples and pears. If you love crabapples and would like more information write to Dr. Tom Green, Morton Arboretum, Lisle, Ill.

And speaking of trees, a wonderful source of information about them is the lavish collection of books, publications and material in general in the Grosse Pointe Shade Tree Council's permanent loan collection which is part of the Grosse Pointe Garden Center's library of garden reference books.

All of us are too familiar with two plants which encroach upon our lawns no matter how zealously we try to keep them out — the dandelion and the clover.

Dandelions originated in ancient Greece. Historians believe they were one of the Bitter Herbs of the Old Testament. The botanical name for dandelion "Taraxacum" used it medicinally. In Italy, dandelions are much used in salads with chicory, and the French grow dandelions commercially. In Russia, some experiments have been made to create a rubber substitute from the milky juice of the dandelion. Dandelions have been scientifically proved to have a beneficial effect upon the liver and kidneys and are very good sources of vitamins A, B, C, and E as well as calcium, potassium, magnesium and iron. Clover traces its long history back to the days when St. Patrick used it to demonstrate to the peasants of Ireland the unity of the Trinity. The peasants used to put clover leaves in their shoes to protect them from evil spirits and to find a four-leaf clover was — as it still is — a sign of great good luck. The clover was used by the Greeks and Romans to mark festive occasions - as garlands to decorate banquet halls and to flavor wine. It is the state flower of Vermont and has long been used by gourmet cooks everywhere for its unique honey-like flavor.

Try making clover butter, a delicate spread for tea sandwiches.

Pull the petals from the flower head. You will need two heaping tablespoons of them. Blend with 1/4 pound (one stick) of sweet butter and one tablespoon of clover honey. Refrigerate about an hour before serving.

ECMO patients come to Children's Hospital in desperate condition. They are transferred from other hospitals when their lungs have been weakened so normal ventilators can't help.

'This is an extreme treatment,'' Sell said, "though it is not considered experimental at all. We look for certain types of patients who will get better in a short

The treatment is used for children with normally formed lungs who have suffered lung damage from any of a number of diseases.

"They can't get enough oxygen," Sell said.
To benefit from the artificial lung, the child must be able to recuperate enough to come off the machine within four or five days.

"It lets their lungs rest and heal," Sell said.
"Seventy percent of our children survive, and it's really quality survival. They don't develop lung diseases and they don't have other problems. They develop normally.

The oldest of the ECMO children at the picnic was Bradley Myhre, 2½, one of the first children to receive the treatment. A healthy, active toddler, Bradley ruled as the "old man" of the ECMO group.

The reason for holding the reunion is two-fold. First, the children were evaluated on Friday at Children's Hospital, so the staff can keep tabs on the development of the children.

"This is one way to get people back to see the doctor," said Klein. "But the real reason is neither scientific or public relations. It's a chance for all the people who work with the program to see the kids afterward. Many of them work in the lab and don't have contact with the patients. The number of people who work on this program are many compared to the patients. It gives them a chance to meet the parents and the patients.

'Ode to Orchestra Hall," a specially commissioned quilt, has been donated to Orchestra Hall and will be raffled at the hall's annual ball in March 1987. The quilt was conceived of and commissioned by Merry Silber, of Birmingham, and was crafted by noted quiltmakers, Gwen Marston and Joe Cunningham. Silber and her husband, Albert, donated the finished work to the hall.

The quilt, which incorporates many of the interior decorative motifs of Orchestra Hall, will be on display at various art fairs, craft shows and corporate headquarters throughout the Detroit area and at Orchestra Hall during the coming months until it is raffled at the Hall's annual ball on March 10, 1987. Tickets will be available at the various display sites and at the Hall for $1 each and in books of 10

Marston and Cunningham work out of their in-home-studio on Bever Island, in Lake Michigan. They transformed 34mm slides of the designs to be included for the quilt pattern. Their first glimpse of the motifs, in the studio, showed them to be impractical for designing the quilt. Only when they set up the projector in the local high school gym could they project the designs to a practical scale.

With a working concept they made preliminary drawings, refined them on their computer and sent the printout to Silber for approval. Back at the gym, the quiltmakers taped large sheets of paper to the walls and began the process of constructing a full-size pattern. Each large-scale motif took hours to refine, alter and overlay onto the final pattern. After two full weeks of working on paper, they began the long process of transferring the pattern to 90"-wide unbleached cotton fabric. Ten days later they were finished drawing and were ready to quilt.

The quilting took six weeks. The finished quilt contains more than 50,000 hand stitches and represents hundreds of hours of work.

Merry Silber, internationally known quilt authority and collector, was inspired to commission the quilt during a concert perfor-mance of the Cleveland String Quartet at Orchestra Hall in 1985. When the quilt was completed she and her husband, Albert, purchased it and donated it to the Hall for fundraising purposes.

For information about ticket purchases, display locations or to arrange to show the quilt, please call 833-3362, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. week-

Volunteers to be honored at luncheons in August

RSVP (Retired Senior Volunteer Program) of Wayne County proudly honors the modern day champions. Local citizens who are 60 or over have volunteered countless hours of their time, unlimited talent and tenderness beyond compare.

RSVP volunteers have a strong commitment to others. They see a need in the community and respond to it. Their accumulated years of experience are shared with thousands of people in our local communities. Though some of the RSVP volunteers are physically handicapped, they overcome all obstacles in order to help others. The volunteers range in ages from 60 to 96.

You will see our RSVP volunteers working as: tutors of adults with reading and writing problems; teachers of pre-schoolers who learn through pup petry about the dangers of substance abuse; care-sharing companions to homebound ailing citizens; information specialists in our libraries and museums; readers on the radio for the visually handicapped; counselors in hospitals for the mentally impaired; teacher aides in our schools; resource people in our police mini-stations; longed-for companions for nursing home residents; organizers of activities for the seniors; and lobbyists for senior causes. The list of activities is endless.

Once a year, we honor these RSVP volunteers. In order to comfortably accommodate more than 1,500 people, there will be three separate recognition luncheons. On Aug. 19 and 21, the luncheon will be held at the Polish Century Club, Detroit; and on Aug. 27, it will be held at the Conference Center of Mercy College. The Rev. Lloyd Thiel, director of the Capuchin Soup Kitchen, will be the guest speaker. Certificates in-dicating the cumulative hours of service will be awarded. Special recognition will be given to RSVP volunteers who are celebrating their fifth and 10th year anniversary with the program.

If you are 60 or over, you too, can join RSVP volunteers. Call 883-2100.

Widow's Organization goes 'Back to School'

Dr. Stuart Bundy, president of Henry Ford Community College, was the main speaker at the Widow's Organization's Wednesday, Aug. 13 meeting, starting at 7 p.m. in room 111 of the Henry Ford Centennial Library on Michigan Ave., one block east of the Southfield freeway.

"Let's Go Back to School" was the theme of the meeting, and a night school principal of the Dearborn school system spoke on the courses available in the evening, also, the adult classes that a widow can attend during the day, even to secure her high school diploma.

A representative from J. C. Penney's gave a few beauty hints that will make a widow more attractive, when looking for a job, or just in her social life.

An after-glow followed the meeting at a popular restaurant near the library.

if anybody ever put a stopwatch to folks who gush "Hey, how about MY Tigers" in order to time how quickly they switch to muttering "Lousy, x*$%¢$#@@$%¢ Tigers!". Somebody should; the folks in these parts must be setting world records for jumping off the bandwagon this week after the Tigers' "Quick, give me the Heimlich, I'm choking" performance of last weekend.

. . how come no Grosse Pointe high school football team gets the jump on the season like Orchard Lake St. Mary's High School? OLSM began practice at 12:01 a.m. Monday — the first minute the state officially permits prep teams to begin football practice in the lower peninsula.

Hey, it would be a natural. We've got some pretty gung-ho high school football coaches, players and fans around here. Beginning practice at 12:01 might be a real fan attraction. They could even open up the concession stands and make it an annual thing. The University of Detroit basketball team used to do it and it was often the hit of the collegiate basketball season.

... with the favorite sport of the over-50 male population in the Grosse Pointes is. Golf? Tennis? Sailing? Probably get lots of votes for all three. But I think that their favorite sport is getting up at the crack of dawn on trash day and hurrying out curbside to supervise the cities' trash collection. I can't tell you how many guys I saw lined up on Hampton Road in the Woods this past Monday, making sure that the Woods' DPW guys didn't miss anything.

Heck, I was waiting for a couple of those guys start scoring the trash removal process. You know, holding up cards with "9.5", "9.4" etc., on them.

I can hardly wait for winter, when they get out there in 3-below temperatures to make sure that the snowplows do their stuff.

. . what's the next sport the courageous Grosse Pointe News staff will blunder into, er, take on. Talk around 96 Kercheval is that we'll want to do something-really challenging and very Grosse Pointe, like jai alai or polo. (I'm holding out for a really hot game of Chinese checkers.)

Hey, but no matter what it is, we'll be

Why? Well, it's just my opinion (remember this when you start writing me scathing letters and making angry phone calls), but I think that women can bring a perspective to sports than most men can't. Despite the fact that more mothers work, women still deal every day — all day — with their kids. As a result, they know kids better and are better equipped to deal with them and their problems.

Since moms must fix bruises — and bruised egos — and make sure that kids get what they need in every aspect of life, they seem naturals to apply those same techniques to the youth sports experiences of children.
I know, I know. I can hear some male members of the population asking "But what do women know about baseball?" and some female members sighing about how this would be "One more thing to do." I don't (Continued on Page 3C)

Born to ride

Van Acker lives to race — and win

By Peggy O'Connor

It's a good thing that Gary Van Acker has always wanted to be a jockey. At 49, 102 pounds soaking wet, he fits the bill not to mention the uniform — perfect-Right now, though, the jockey the other Ladbroke DRC riders all call "Shorty" isn't quite a real jockey. He's about 18 victories short of shedding the title known in racing circles as "bug jockey" - that's jockey talk for apprentice — and becoming a full-fledged rider. And even though he's only got about another two months to accomplish the feat, the confident Grosse Pointe-born horseman is sure he'll make it.

The 26-year-old Van Acker, who now lives in Livonia not far from the race track, says he's "won at every track he's raced at." After a slow start this season, things have picked up and Van Acker has won several races in the last three weeks. If he wins 18 more by Oct. 25 one year to the day after his apprentice-ship commenced with his fifth professional victory — he'll become a pro rider. If not, he can appeal to the track stewards for an extension or go back 'down on the farm' for more work.

"Either way, it doesn't matter to me . . I know that I'll be up there some day," Van Acker says, standing by the track in warm-up clothes and shower clogs, about an hour before race time. "I was born for this. I like the competition and I like horses a lot, too. You have to like horses.'

Van Acker's uncle works at the parimutuel windows at DRC, and after years of hanging around the track with him, Gary was a natural for a horse racing career. He began working the tracks at 17, walking horses and cleaning barns. He joined Reed Gross' stable in Michigan, working out on the farm with the young horses. But he broke his leg and didn't return to 100 percent fitness in time for Gross to offer him a job as a rider in his stable.

'I quit Reed because I didn't want to go back to the farm. I thought I was ready to ride."

He joined Paul Hanby's stable, but left rather than travel south last year. Now, the frequency of Van Acker's mounts depends upon a number of things. He's got an agent, who approaches the owners and trainers at DRC and "sells" Van Acker's services. But the impression Van Acker makes, his physical attributes, and his record in previous races all combine to help owners and trainers decide to choose him to ride.

"I didn't want to go south last winter and lose my bug, so I tried it on my own. Things were tough for a while, but then I popped a 99-1 shot and stuff picked up. After that I had three straight winners and really got on my way.

"Hey, riding is just that way. When the chips are down, I can't let it bother me. Some weeks I can make $800 or $900, other weeks I don't so I just learn to cut back. You've just got to flow with it,' Van Acker says with a grin.

VAN ACKER is a fixture around the track from its April 4 opening to closing day on Nov. 9. Daily, he gets there at around 6:30 a.m., gallops horses, visits all the barns and shoots the breeze with owners and trainers. "You've got to keep buttering them up," he says. He works horses again from 10 to 10:30, then heads home for lunch and a nap before coming back to the track around 1 p.m., for the 2:30 post time. Van Acker's schedule varies; last week, he had three mounts each day of the week except Friday, when he had five.

There are a lot of politics (in choosing riders). I come on as a cowboy, what with the way I talk and dress. But my attitude helps, 'cuz the trainers know I ain't afraid to ride."

Trainers try to choose the riders they feel are best matched to the horses, says DRC publicity assistant Damon Thayer. "It's very competitive, but someone like Gary has an edge sometimes because bug riders are given five-pound weight allowances because of their inexperience. That helps him get picked a lot of times," Thayer adds.

But Van Acker insists that it's his style that wins him mounts . . . and races.

"They know me real well here. They know I'm gonna go out there and do the job. I push for every race. And they know if they've got a horse that's too sore, I'm the right guy because I ain't afraid to ride a sore horse. A lot of guys are because they're afraid the horse will stumble.

'But I've been on so many bad horses, I know when they're just sore and when Apprentice jockey Gary Van Acker weighs in.

they'll really take a fall.'

Describing his style, the Lake Shore High graduate says he's ". . . relaxed on the front end and get aggressive when I have to come from behind. I'm willing to spill my guts, to put it all out. That's what trainers like. He says he'll keep at it, since he's never really wanted to do anything else but ride horses. And then?

"If I can, I'd like to keep racing until

I'm old enough to keep my own stable and train and own my own horses. But that's a long way off," Van Acker says. "Whatever I end up doing, I kind of

Nautical 'Sniglets'

A Sniglet is a word that should appear in a dictionary, but doesn't. It's a word coined to describe the funny foibles of human nature that we've all witnessed and participated in. Writer/Actor Rich Hall created the term, and Sniglets are a regular feature on HBO's "Not Necessarily The News." Hall has published several books of viewer- and reader-contributed Sniglets.

Perhaps it's time for a collection of Nautical Sniglets — words that describe the unique indescribable experiences both fun and foolish — of pleasure boaters as they pursue their favorite sport.

Some of my contributions to a collection of Nautical Sniglets:

Blurps — the soft, splashy sounds of water slapping against the boat's hull when it's anchored or docked in slow-moving water. Blurps are best appreciated in the V-Bunks.

Dipterinversity — a phenomena whereby flies are attracted to the ceiling on the inside of a boat's cabin at the end of the day.

Diskaput — the practice of not believing the weather forecast when it reports 40 m.p.h. winds and 6-foot waves, saying, "Let's just stick the bow out of the harbor here and see for ourselves what it's like out there.

Flingfoolish — the act of throwing a mooring line to a person on the dock, then realizing you've forgotten to secure the line to the boat.

Genderbefuddle — the inability to decide — quickly — while in a waterfront restaurant, which cute name on the bathroom doors refers to women and which refers to men. (Gulls or buoys? Mates or Skippers? Outboards or Inboards?)

Kreeches — those squeaking sounds made by a boat's mooring lines when they rub against a piling or a part of the boat as it bobs gently up and down. Kreeches can keep you awake at night, or they can be soothing, sleepy sounds, depending on your mood. They're often accompanied by blurps.

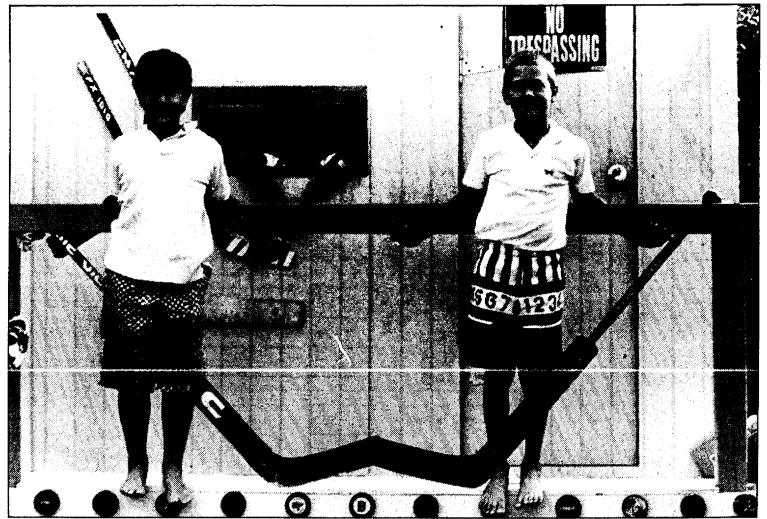

Mustoidy — the smell of canvas boat covers after they've been crumpled tightly and stored in a small space for several weeks.

Pollute-polloi — for power boaters, pollute-polloi is the clanging sound of sailboat halyards that are not secure. For sailors, pollute-polloi is the sound of twin diesel engines anywhere, but particularly when they reverberate off the rocky cliffs of a secluded northern anchorage.

Poop deck — any of several places aboard a boat where groups of ducks or gulls congregate during the hours the boat owner is Rubicwaves — a certain configuration of waves seen at the entrance to Jefferson Beach or anywhere along the Detroit River on a sunny Sunday evening just as every boater in the area is returning from the day's cruise; waves that have no predictable direction or frequency.

Thighwacks - horizontal bruises that appear on the front of a first mate's thighs. Thighwacks are incurred by repeatedly. leaning against the lifelines between deck stanchions, as the first mate assists the captain with docking maneuvers.

Their favorite sport?

Hockey, judging by the decor on the backyard fort built on Saddle Lane by Jim Pendalino and decorated by hockey dies (left to right) Jamie Bufalino, Joe Lucido and Kevin O'Malley, is the sport of the trio's choice. When they aren't up this shrine to Hockey Night in Canada, the three are playing hockey on Grosse Pointe Monroe team.

Produced by the Michigan United Conservation Clubs, the "MUCC Outdoors Update" is a weekly 10-minute radio program anchored by Don Weeks, a veteran broadcast and print journalist from Traverse City. The public affairs program airs weekends on a network of more than 50 radio stations serving all of the state's 83 counties.

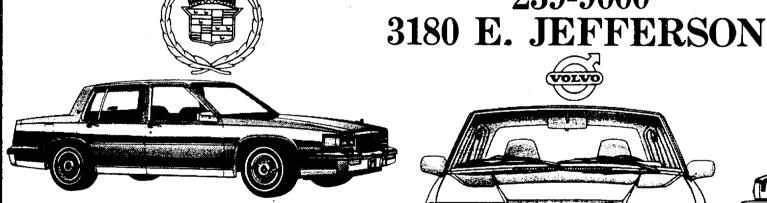

'We think that an outdoorsoriented radio program, focusing on conservation and recreation issues, is long-overdue," declared Thomas L. Washington, MUCC executive director. "There's a long-standing conservation ethic in this state. Michigan residents are deep state. Michigan residents are deeply concerned about the quality of the air, water, natural resources, and wildlife in this state, and that's why I think they'll respond with great interest to our radio proAlthough the bulk of the program is devoted to the impact of legislation and public policy on the state's environment, the show also concentrates on wildlife, habitat, and outdoor recreation activities across the state, according to Weeks.

Each week, the feature segment allows us to leave behind the agencies and commissions in Lansing, and get out into the field to use the medium for what it can do best: bring an outdoor story to life for our listeners," Weeks noted.

To do this, Weeks relies on reporters from around the state, some of whom work for MUCC Outdoors Update network stations, and others who report for television stations, newspapers, and other news gathering organiza-

It's Fishing Rodeo time

The 38th annual Grosse Pointe Farms and City Family Fishing Rodeo is set for next Saturday, Aug. 23, at the Farms Pier Park. The rodeo was organized for many years by the late Dick Graves.

According to general chairman and coordinator Dick Graves Jr., this year's event will begin with the distribution of prize tickets at the Pier Park Gate (participants must show park pass) and free coffee and doughnuts at the Farms concession stand. The rodeo itself will be held, rain or shine, from 9 to 10 a.m. Free refreshments — including hot dogs and pop — will be made available at 10 a.m., followed at 10:30 a.m. by the presentation of awards and prizes to winners and free prizes for all participants. There will also be a free prize drawing for parents.

All boys and girls, 17 and under, who live in Grosse Pointe Farms or City are eligible to enter the rodeo. Awards will be given for biggest, most and first fish, as well as in many other categories. Fishing is not permitted near the boat wells. No overhead casting will be allowed and all fish must be alive

This annual — totally free — event promises to be lots of fun, Graves says. He encourages all Farms and City residents eligible to come out to the Pier and enjoy the day.

'Howard the Duck" is more adult fare

By Marian Trainor

It's a bird! It's a plane! No, it's Howard the Duck, an urbane, acerbic character hurled from Duck world to Earth in a cataclysmic, cosmic error.

Set down in Cleveland, in a district where punk-rock blares and neon lights flash, he is confused and a little frightened.

He has come from a world where he enjoyed all the perks of a successful career. A well-paid advertising copy writer, he lived in an expensive high rise, shopped in exclusive stores and read "Play-duck," pausing to admire the airbrushed beauties of duckdom.

Dressed to the hilt, he is rather an unusual figure wandering through the streets searching for a way to get back home.

What he can't understand is why people either run in terror from him or harass him, treating him like a freak.

He finally finds a friend in Beverly (Lea Thompson), a punkrock singer. She takes him home after he rescues her from a couple of bullies. Howard is small, just three feet tall, but he is a whiz at Howard and Beverly get along great, but Howard still wants to get back home.

In an effort to help him Beverly puts him in touch with a group of scientists led by Dr. Jennings (Jeffrey Jones). Howard is not impressed by the doctor and his team - after all, it was their snafu that brought him to where he is and doesn't want to be.

Gradually he is convinced that Dr. Jennings can help him, but by this time, he has mixed feelings about leaving Beverly.

Science errs again, however, and instead of blasting Howard off to duckdom, a monster is let loose in the form of what was Dr. Jen-

At this point, the film stops being cute and winsome and explodes into a series of wild chases as the monster careens through the streets crashing into cars and buildings or creaming human beings with his laser beam eyes. Suspense builds when the monster comes close to letting loose an army of warlords who will destroy the world and Howard is faced with a dilemma. He can abort Jenning's plan, but if he does he will destroy the only means he had of returning to his native land.

"Howard the Duck" is a good-natured film. Howard is an engaging little character as he struts his stuff, whether he is putting down snooty scientists with his intelligent but scathing remarks, or physically convincing a group of hoodlums that they should pay

Beverly the money they owe her. He can be pathetic as he takes up refuge from a hostile, confusing world in a garbage can or lies pleading for his life on a butcher

He can even play the part of a lover as he does in a bedroom scene with Beverly.

Howard is not a new character. He was once a Marvel Comics cult hero and also enjoyed fame as a newspaper comic strip created by Steve Gerber.

Howard is not an animated character. He is a real actor, less

By Michael Chapp

Notwithstanding the irrepressible charm of Ted Danson, the zany wit of Howie Mandel and the crazed lunacy of Richard Mulligan, "A Fine Mess" is exactly what its title indicates. Except it's not so fine.

Director Blake Edwards has assembled a wonderful cast of characters for this project, none of which are given even a morsel of substantial material with which to work. Everybody's talents are wasted in this film, right down to the stuntmen, who do as much work in this so-called comedy as the actors themselves. And it's a sure sign in the movies that something is wrong when there are squealing brakes and shattering glass instead of real substance at the center of a film. But that's only the beginning. "Mess" is the story of a struggling actor (Danson) and his goingnowhere friend (Mandel), and the trouble they get into when they bet on a race horse that was doped by the mob. Being pursued by bumbling bad guys (Mulligan and Stuart Margolin), the two friends try to get onto their own feet financially so they can get out of town and let things cool down.

Along the way, Mandel gets involved with an auctioneer's assistant and Danson plays footsies with the mob leader's wife. Meanwhile, Danson's brother-in-law is peeved because Danson sold him a car that didn't even belong to him. And, oh yeah, the police are after Mandel and Danson too.

If that sounds confusing, it is There are so many divergent storylines in the picture, one feels for sure this must be a blooper reel from some of the all-time worst slapstick films. There is no co-herency to the film, only a neverending string of car chases and frenzied running. Both Mandel and Danson have shown on television and elsewhere exactly what they can do given the right material. In this film, they're left to wing it on their own, since the direction by

Edwards is so tarnished. Actually "tarnished" is being generous. The artistic leadership for this movie is nonexistent. Unfortunately, so too are the laughs. Except for a sight gag that Mandel does on eating Indian food and an editing trick that has Mulligan running like a stallion at mating time, there is nary a laugh in the entire picture. It's a safe bet there have been happier USFL post-trial parties.

To be fair, one should give credit where credit is due. The horses at the race track turn in really good performances. One, in particular, really sinks his teeth into a bit part. Perhaps there will be bigger and better things ahead for him in

Kirtland's warbler population remains stable, DNR says

The world's pint-sized population of Kirtland's warblers is holding its own this summer on the birds exclusive nesting grounds in north-eastern lower Michigan, and state and federal wildlife biologists see new hope for this endangered species as the result of their special habitat work since the late

Recent survey work which tallied 210 singing male warblers also revealed that several special management areas in that part of the state are starting to offer the right kind of nesting conditions for a large share of the tiny, yellowbreasted songbirds.

This year's census was conducted in Kirtland's warbler "country" by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, the U.S. Forest Service, and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, with key support from citizen volunteers. Here, by county, are the number of singing male birds recorded during the June 6-15 survey: Crawford, 84; Oscoda, 81; Ogemaw, 17; Kalkaska, 16; Roscommon, 8; Iosco, 3; and Alcona, 1, for a total of 210. A year ago, census takers counted 216 of the male warblers in those same counties.

Bearing the brightest results under this June's census counts were the Mack Lake area of Oscoda County and the Bald Hill area of Crawford County. For the first time since a wild fire occurred there in 1980, 14 male warblers drawn to jack pine stands now reaching the Christmas-tree size which they prefer most for nesting. Those stands result from natural regrowth triggered by the 1980 Mack Lake fire.

The Bald Hill area stands out on this year's survey sheets for its gain of 14 representing an increase of about 50 percent over its recorded nesting numbers in 1985. To the benefit of birds there, this area comes under a new cooperative management agreement recently signed by the Department of Military Affairs and DNR.

The Mack Lake and Bald Hill areas make up the bulk of more have taken up home in the Mack Lake area. The birds have been than 15,000 acres of jack pine cover which is just starting to come into the nesting picture for Kirtland's warblers as prime habitat. The first area covers about 10,000 acres; the Bald Hill area takes in about 3,000 acres. In addition to these larger areas, there are a number of smaller management tracts, embracing several thousand acres in northeastern Lower Michigan, which are growing into the choice nesting stage for the rare warblers.

The U.S. Forest Service since 1976 has set the stage for the current production of new nesting habitat by first cutting older-growth jack pine stands, then con-ducting controlled burns in those areas, and finally by planting the cut-over and burned-over lands with young jack pines.

Such work began to show results in this June's annual census of singing male warblers, reports Bill

Gunners do it again

The Grosse Pointe Gunners recently completed their second straight undefeated spring soccer season. What makes this such a special achievement is that the boys accomplished the feat despite moving up this year from the Adidas under 16 division of the Michigan Youth Soccer League, to the tougher Premier under 19 division.

Members of the league champions are boys from the varsity programs at both North and South High schools. They were coached again this spring by Abe Vanderwyngaard, whose assistant is Charlie Johnston. Most of the boys will return to their high school teams this fall.

Players include Rudolfo Cruz, of Lewiston Road, Jim Fets, of Kerby Road, Michael Finch, of Muir Road, Brendan Keating, of Balfour Road, Jeffrey Johnston, of Bishop Road, David Morinelli, of Nottingham Road, Joseph Page, of Yorkshire Road, Eric Restum, of Hillcrest Road, Sam Steinhebel, of Fisher Road, Bill Thompson, of Barrington Road, and Steve Trowern, of Berkshire Road, all from South High.

North High players on the squad are Lorenzo Cavaliere, of Lakeshore Road, Christopher Colfer, of Regal Place, Rob Koehler, of Anita Avenue, Elias Melham, of North Brys Drive, and Brian Metry, of Oxford Road.

CHEVROLE'

Huron-Manistee National Forests. "Of the 73 male birds counted, 43 had staked out their nesting territory on habitat we have developed in management units within the Huron National Forest," he notes. To put it another way, those management units in Alcona, Crawford, Iosco and Oscoda counties accounted for six of the nine areas within that forest where the liquid, bubbling song of male warblers was heard during the June 6-15

The DNR's efforts under the Recovery Plan were hindered in the early going by budget problems, but since 1980 it has covered 800 to 1,000 acres annually. For the most part, the DNR's work has focused upon jack pine plantings.

Commercial timber cuttings and prescribed burns have also figured prominently in the DNR's habitat management efforts which, in 1985, amounted to $190,000 worth of work. Of that total, some $18,000 were used from Michigan's Non-game Wildlife Fund to earn $172,000 in federal matching monies to cost share the DNR's habitat improvement efforts.

Under that work, Montmorency, Otsego and Clare counties will be ready to re-enter the nesting picture for Kirtland's warblers, starting next year.

"Those counties once had nesting populations of the birds, and we hope our jack pine plantings on state lands in recent years will pay off there with the return of warblers," explains Jerry Weinrich, DNR biologist from the Houghton Lake Wildlife Research

As officially set into motion in the late 1970s, the Kirtland's Warbler Recovery Plan is aimed at rebuilding the birds' nesting population to 1,000 pairs. In the professional opinion of state and federal biologists, that is the minimum level needed to stave off possible extinction of this endangered species. The plan's basic drive comes from a special recovery team made up of state and federal experts and private citizens, including notable ornithologists. Members of the team were appointed by the federal government.
