Cut 'em off

The city of Grosse Pointe Woods is claiming St. Clair Shores is cutting them short — so to speak.

The Woods considered and passed a resolution last week requesting that "the City of St. Clair Shores reinstate the lawn cutting service previously furnished (adjacent to Lake Front Park)."

Woods city administrator/clerk Chester Petersen, said his city doled out $97,000 in taxes to the city and school district for its Lake Front Park property, and should be entitled to some services.

St. Clair Shores City manager Roy Stype asked why should the Woods be entitled to services that the city does not provide its own residents?

"The funny thing is no other citizen in the (St. Clair Shores) has the city take care of its tree lawn in front of their property," Stype said.

Petersen said his city gets only police, fire and ambulance protection from St. Clair Shores. He said that St. Clair Shores has always maintained the large strip of land from the Milk River Bridge to the Park Entrance.

"We pay taxes and we should get something for our money."

"You don't deserve any special treatment."

Where have we heard that argument rage before?

Cover girl

Dr. Marilyn Wayland of Grosse Pointe Woods got an honor she never expected recently. Her picture was on the cover of a national magazine, PERSONAL. Wayland, who holds a Ph.D. in medical education and evaluation, is the director of clinical research at St. John Hospital. Her likeness graces the cover of the August edition of PERSONAL Computing Magazine.

Wayland was one of a number of professionals interviewed for the magazine for an article on computer graphic presentations. The story was primarily about graphics equipment produced by the Polaroid Corporation. Wayland uses that equipment in her work with medical residents at the hospital.

With this modeling experience under her belt, perhaps Dr. Wayland should be looking to a second career in the glamour business. We'll be looking for her face on Cosmopolitan next.

Slow down

The Farms two-man traffic bureau started operation Aug. 4 and has been working at break-neck pace. Between the two shifts, driving an unmarked car, they have been averaging 20 moving violations a day.

"That's not counting the warnings," said police Chief Robert Ferber.

The bureau was organized in response to complaints from residents that traffic on through streets is moving too fast for safety. Prime complaint areas were Kerby, Moran and McMillan, but the bureau has hit many streets at random.

A meeting of the political minds

State Republican Party Chairman Spencer Abraham chats with 14th District Republican Party Chairman Terrance P. Gilsenan of Sterling Heights. The discussion took place at the state Republican Convention Saturday at Cobo Hall. The 14th district includes the Woods, Shores, Farms and several other surrounding communities. Doctor works to rebuild Mexican hospital

By Nancy Parmenter

As so often happens, it was a chance meeting that spawned the great idea. Their wives brought them together, the Mexican doctor who knew the medical needs of the earthquake-ravaged capital city and the Mexican-American businessman with the means to deliver.

Of course, when Jack Terrazas, the president of the United States Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, first came up with the idea of building a hospital to replace the wrecked ones in Mexico City, he didn't realize he was going to turn to Grosse Pointe Farms doctor Luis Toledo for leadership. Toledo is chief of transplantation at Detroit's Mount Carmel Mercy Hospital, a director of the tri-county U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and, as Mexican-raised and trained, has plenty of connections in the medical community in Mexico City.

Three of Mexico City's largest hospitals, with a total of as many as 10,000 beds, collapsed in last fall's earthquake. One of them, Juarez Hospital, was the teaching facility of the University of Mexico. With their loss went a major research and teaching resource — and one of the main sources of treatment of Mexico City's poor.

"Some of the poor are just out of luck now," said Toledo. Many have had their treatment shortened, a few have probably been turned away.

Toledo is co-chairman of the leadership council of the Mexican American Friendship Foundation, the committee formed to raise funds, formulate the needs of the proposed medical center, conduct an architectural design competition, select a board of directors from among the Mexico City community — all in time for a spring groundbreaking.

Toledo concedes that it's a tall order. "I'm trying to work now with people I know," he said. "I want to utilize local expertise, but without invading the Mexican style and sensitivity. They're very proud. There are some very fine hospitals in Mexico. We want to enhance that and work with them."

The group will not simply transplant American state-of-the-art medicine to Mexico. Much of the thrust of American research is not what Mexico needs, according to Toledo.

"They need research on nutrition and infectious diseases, perhaps some cancer," he said. "My own area (organ transplantation) is a bit too much right now. We must go to the basics — more of a public health function."

The group envisions a 300-500 bed hospital with teaching and research facilities patterned after California's City of Hope. Most of their fund-raising ideas center around operatic tenor Placido Domingo, who has pledged a massive effort and for whom the center will be named. In the works are Placido Domingo concerts, celebrity golf matches, a fashion show with Hispanic designers Herrera and de la Renta and a telethon.

So far, efforts have been concentrated in states with large Hispanic populations. Toledo says it will be important to reach the entire population if the $30 million goal is to be attained.

Toledo has almost a personal stake in the plans. He attended the University of Mexico, did part of his internship in Juarez Hospital and worked in internal medicine at the National Institute of Nutrition, also in Mexico City. His family still live in the capital and in Sonora, in the north.

"The earthquake left a tremendous empty vacuum there," he said. "There's an important space to be filled."

The committee has attracted well-known Mexican-Americans like San Antonio mayor Henry Cisneros. Honorary chairs are presidential wives Nancy Reagan and Paloma de la Madrid (who has not made her participation official as yet).

The existence of presidential co-chairs does not signify governmental involvement, Toledo said. The School district to hire latchkey coordinators

By Mike Andrzejczyk

The Grosse Pointe public school system will try to hire two coordinators for its latchkey programs to bring them into compliance with state Department of Social Services child-care regulations.

Hiring coordinators — one for every five programs — will mean hourly fees for the programs, run at each of the elementary schools, will increase about 25 cents an hour and range from $1.25 to $1.75 an hour, school officials said.

The hiring of the coordinators for the program will end almost two years of haggling between the state and the school system over the district's compliance with the rules for child care programs.

Compliance didn't come without a fight, however. Some board members had asked for an opinion from the district's legal counsel to see if there was any basis for challenging the correctness of a September 1984 state attorney general's opinion which held that latchkey programs were subject to DSS regulations.

A legal challenge to the opinion "would stand very little chance of success," according to counsel Douglas West. West and an associate reviewed the opinion, the statutory provisions interpreted and predecessor statutes, an earlier attorney general's opinion and case law from Michigan and other states.

"Based upon this review I have concluded that while an argument could be developed for avoiding DSS authority over public school-operated latchkey programs, the attorney general's opinion reflects the more sound interpretation of the statutes . . ." West wrote to the board.

Responding to questions from board members, Superintendent John Whritner said the responsibility was not given to building principals for a number of reasons, including the question of liability.

Were each building principal asked to watch over the latchkey program in his or her building — an option acceptable to DSS officials — principals would be on call from 7:15 a.m. to 6 p.m., Dr. Whritner said.

"That, to me, is asking more than we should of our building principals," he added.

The district was looking for a solution that will fit its situation, Whritner said, adding he realized his recommendation was an imperfect solution.

Board members also questioned whether the system would be able to find coordinators given the $10-an-hour rate of pay. A coordinator must have 60 credit hours of educational coursework, with at least 12 hours in child development, psychology, elementary education, physical education or recreation.

The coordinators are to provide supervision, in-service training for care-givers and exert some control over the program, according to state officials.

The system should know by September whether there will be takers for the jobs.

Non-compliance could be expensive for the district, according to Deputy Superintendent Joseph Spagnoli. State officials told him that non-compliance could mean cut-off of categorical grant money the district uses for special education programs and transportation, Dr. Spagnoli said.

Grosse Pointe public schools have offered latchkey programs for children in kindergarten, first and second grade since 1978, responding to the growing number of families in which both parents work. The programs offer structured educational and recreational activities.

There may be a silver lining in the hiring of coordinators. Trustee Carol Marr said the coordinators may mean that some uniformity will be brought to the programs.

Ramp irks neighbors

How offensive can a wooden skateboard ramp be? The question is being hotly debated by Grosse Pointe Farms officials and residents this week as battle lines are drawn over the Muir Road ramp in the back yard of resident Nancy Cawley.

Cawley says the ramp provides a good place for teenagers to congregate off the street. Some of the neighbors said the kids — and the ramp — are too noisy. Officials say Cawley should have taken out a permit, although they admit they probably would have turned it down. One resident has brought charges against Cawley.

"The noise is no worse than a basketball game," Cawley said. "I'm a very straight, organized working mother. I want to keep my kids off the street and away from drugs. I need some help here and the city won't help me."

Cawley, who has been ordered to remove the ramp by Sept. 1, said the city has refused to delineate the ways in which the ramp may violate ordinances. She says that when she asked for help and information, she was told that if she didn't like the violation, she could take the city to court.

Farms Director of Public Service John Defoe says the ramp is in violation of zoning ordinances. As a structure, it should have had a permit.

"We probably would have denied it," Defoe said. "The unit itself is not permitted in that district. We don't consider it the same as something like a swimming pool, which is permitted."

Three neighbors near Cawley have complained to the police about the "terrible racket," saying they are being "plagued by roller coaster amusement park noises." One of them, whose house is 25 feet from the ramp, separated only by

Three cities approve funding for youth program

Three down and three to go. FLEC officials have been successful at obtaining matching funds for the Grosse Pointes/Harper Woods Youth Assistance program at each of the three cities they have visited so far — but with strings attached.

The program to help teenagers in trouble with the law was established nine months ago with a one-year grant from the Skillman Foundation. Half the amount — $21,000 — was offered for the second year of operation, if the participating communities agreed to match it. Cities are being asked to donate funds based on their population, from $959.66 in Grosse Pointe Shores to $5,764.17 in Grosse Pointe Woods.

FLEC officials Rebecca Reedes and Sandra Mignone started their odyssey Aug. 18 at the Farms council meeting, asking the council to contribute $3,204.40. As it did a year ago when the youth program idea was first suggested, the council agreed to contribute the money only if the other communities do so also.

"I'll vote for (that motion), but it would be a shame if it were turned down by one of the smaller communities," said Mayor Pro Tem Joseph Fromm. "I'd be glad to have it up for a revote (in such case.)"

The program is coordinated with the juvenile court system in Wayne County and with six other youth assistance programs. It has been in actual operation for three months and has served 16 local youths. Reedes attributed the current $2,600 per client cost to the start-up and training period.

"The program is too new to evaluate," Farms police chief Robert Ferber agreed. "We only have one client now (a Farms resident referred by the police department), but if we hadn't had this program, we wouldn't have had anywhere to go with that kid. The court would have sent him away."

The Park unanimously authorized its contribution of $4,139.02 Monday night, but on two conditions. The council asked city attorney (Continued on Page 15A)

Building bridges — knocking down barriers

By Nancy Solak

Last June Robert Black returned home to Grosse Pointe after a whirlwind, year-long tour of the world with Up With People, the non-profit, non-religious organization whose aim is to encourage understanding among people everywhere. Black traveled an estimated 32,000 miles.

One of the requirements is good health, which becomes obvious when one considers that the days often start at 6:30 a.m. and end at 1 a.m., seven days a week — with only about two days off each month.

Other requirements include being between 18 and 25, and undergoing an interview. The only applicants who audition are those who play an instrument. Of approximately 10,000 applicants per year, only 600 young men and women from all over the world are chosen. In Black's cast, there were 16 different countries represented.

After a five-week training period in Tucson where Up With People is headquartered, Black began his tour as one of his cast's lead singers.

When you are a part of an Up With People cast traveling overseas, you are bound to get a better understanding of a nation's people. But when you are a member at the time a country's prime minister is assassinated, like Black was, the understanding can be profound.

"Essentially, we watched the Swedish people mourn," Black says of the tragic death of Olaf Palme. "People kept throwing roses at the place of his death until there was a huge mound of them. The rose is the symbol of the party. Palme represented," Black adds.

His experience in Sweden, plus the experience of being in Europe when the United States attacked Libya, gave Black an awareness of other people's perceptions.

"The media here," he says, "gives many viewpoints, but they don't often provide the viewpoints of people in other countries. Americans look at situations very internally."

As a result of meeting and befriending so many people from other countries, Black says he cares more about people globally and his vision has expanded.

"With all the barriers governments put up, it makes it even more difficult to form friendships and to understand why people do what they do."

One of Up With People's goals is to build bridges and to knock down such barriers.

Black, the son of Dr. Robert W. and Rosalie Coleman Black, was a singer in pop groups around Detroit before joining Up With People. Singing with writing is more than an avocation for him. This fall, after he has had a chance to rest his vocal cords, he will be cutting a demonstration tape and arranging his original songs — the start, he hopes, of a professional career in music and voice.

As he recaps the year, he fondly recalls the cold country with the warm heart — Finland; his month-long stay with hosts in New Orleans who came to be a second family to him; and the performance his cast made during half-time of Super Bowl XX last January.

"It was definitely a year that gave me a lot more than sticking my face into a book. I gained a new understanding, and a lot of friendships, and that is something I'll cherish for a long time."

Farms settles with worker

The city of Grosse Pointe Farms has reached a settlement with fired DPW worker Greg Ocelnik. Accordingly, arbitration and a hearing before the Michigan Employee Relations Council were dropped.

Terms of the settlement are not known, but Ocelnik said he is "totally satisfied." He returned to his old position Aug. 21, the day after the settlement was reached.

Ocelnik originally was asking for reinstatement and full back pay, as well as recognition that he is no longer on probation. The city had claimed it was laying him off during a probation period. At one time during settlement negotiations, the city is believed to have asked Ocelnik to accept a three-day suspension and to drop several grievances he had filed. Neither side would state the final terms of the settlement.

Ocelnik said Monday that the settlement of his labor dispute has no bearing on the other issues the union has brought before the council. During July and August, the union asked for and received council assurance that charges of unfair labor practices against some city department heads and administrators would be looked into.

The union considers the current mayor to be "unresponsive," Ocelnik said, and at an Aug. 19 union meeting, pledged support to councilman John Crowley for mayor. Crowley is seen as "intelligent, responsive, middle-of-the-road, fair" and has no political baggage, according to Ocelnik.

The endorsement came as a surprise to Crowley, who hadn't asked for it, Ocelnik said. "We solicited him," he said. Crowley could not be reached for comment.

Ocelnik was laid off more than four months ago. "It's the longest vacation I've ever had," he said, adding that he didn't mind since the city had paid for it.

City clerk Richard Solak would say only that a compromise had been reached and that the details are confidential.

Man charged with assault

A 33-year-old St. Clair Shores man was arrested early Wednesday, Aug. 20, after leading a Grosse Pointe Shores public safety officer on a high speed automobile and foot chase through the village and Woods, police said.

The man, Donald J. Fromm, was charged with assaulting a public safety officer, operating a motor vehicle under the influence of liquor and driving on a suspended license.

Shores police allege Fromm was spotted driving his van west on Vernier at a high rate of speed at about 3:30 a.m. Officer Gary Boudreau pursued the vehicle, which pulled over. As Boudreau walked toward the van it sped off.

Boudreau then pursued the vehicle west on Vernier, north on Morningside and west again on Hawthorne. Fromm's van failed to negotiate an intersection and skidded onto the front lawn of 1313 Hawthorne.

Fromm then allegedly "bailed out" of the vehicle and ran into the rear yard of the house. Boudreau radioed his location and pursued Fromm on foot, the report stated. Boudreau alleges he chased Fromm through several rear yards, and over a six-foot fence. He said Fromm stumbled after jumping the fence, and he was able to grab Fromm's shirt.

Fromm then allegedly struck Boudreau "on the head." Boudreau said he then struck Fromm. With the assistance of a Woods officer who arrived at the scene a short time later, Fromm was subdued and handcuffed.

Fromm claims he never realized he was being pursued by police. He said three people in a car were throwing bottles at his car on Jefferson. He said this car then passed his and turned around on Jefferson and headed toward his vehicle. He claims he pulled over to the side of the road then sped off. He doesn't recall the chase and said he never struck Boudreau.

Fromm was treated and released from Bon Secours Hospital.

Boudreau sustained a contusion below his left eye, according to the police report.

Fromm is scheduled for arraignment Sept. 4 in Grosse Pointe Shores Municipal Court.

Good fences, good neighbors

The Grosse Pointe public school system wants to build a stockade screening fence around its property at the rear of the St. Clair administration building. Neighbors have complained of weeds, dying hedges and the rotting chainlink fence now there.

The Board of Education gave permission to the administration Monday night, Aug. 18, to purchase and install a stockade fence on three sides of the administration building property. Cost was estimated at about $2,500, with workers of the system doing the work.

The administration has yet to decide whether the fence will be six or eight feet high, according to school officials. Some neighbors have expressed preferences for one size, while opposing another. The system will check local ordinances to see if such a fence is allowed.

The City's building codes do not allow stockade fences higher than six feet.

In sending the matter to the board, Superintendent John Whritner said the fencing at the back and sides of the property is rusting and deteriorating. The hedges have been dying and the area is becoming an increasing eyesore, he told the board.

It was a problem the administration hoped could be put off until a decision was made about occupying 389 St. Clair, but the clean-up of the area just further exposed the eyesore, Whritner said.

Residents of the homes behind and alongside the property have been complaining about overgrown weeds, dying hedges and clutter in the lot area. Seventeen residents sent a petition to the school system and the Grosse Pointe City Council in May complaining of the mess.

The petition cited 10 conditions residents wanted corrected, including removal of debris wedged between the fence and hedge, removal of dead hedge stalks, trimming of flowering bushes, trimming of branches on two maple trees that impede pedestrian traffic, pulling up of seedlings that had taken root along the fence row, some of which were identified as poison oak, and repair of gutters on the truck garage.

One hospitalized in Park accident

An 18-year-old Park resident was in fair condition in Bon Secours Hospital Monday, hours after the car in which he was riding struck a tree and rolled over on Windmill Pointe Drive.

Robert Hutchinson, of Grand Marais, was a passenger in a 1985 Pontiac passenger car driven by 17-year-old Randy Garza of Lakepointe, police said.

The car was traveling eastbound on Windmill Pointe Drive at about 1 a.m. when it left the roadway, glanced off a tree on the east side of the road just north of Lakeview Court, flipped and slid across Windmill Pointe Drive before coming to a rest against the median curb.

Hutchinson was taken to Bon Secours by Park ambulance. He suffered head and hand injuries. Emergency medical technicians believed his legs to be broken. Garza was treated for his injuries and released later in the day. The 17-year-old suffered cuts on his head and bruise over his eyes, according to EMTs.

Police say they don't know why the car left the roadway.

Monday's accident occurred very near where Edward Sullivan was killed in July, 1984, when the car he was driving sped headlong into a tree.

Intruder confused

A family of South Renaud residents was awakened with a start early Sunday, Aug. 24, in the Woods.

The Woods couple had several overnight guests in their home, and went to bed at about 12:30 a.m. Around 12:50 a.m. the couple were awakened by the sound of loud banging from somewhere inside the house, according to police.

While the wife waited in bed, her husband went to find the cause of the noise.

According to the report, shortly thereafter, a young man, possibly 16 or 17 years old, exited from a closet in the south bedroom. He walked past the woman, who screamed.

The husband ran back to his wife, grabbed the young man and dragged him to the front door. The man described the intruder as "confused and high."

Police believe the intruder entered the house through an open patio door.

When the man asked the intruder what he was doing in his house, the intruder replied, "I'm looking for Richard."

The intruder was last seen headed south on Renaud.

Nothing was missing or disturbed in the home, except its residents.

School board approves plan to evaluate administrators

By Mike Andrzejczyk
Grosse Pointe's public school administrators have a new evaluation plan to go along with their salary increase for the coming school year.

The program, titled "Toward an Assessment of Administrative Performance: Strategies for the Utilization of Strengths and the Effective Improvement of the Learning Environment," was presented to the Board of Education Monday night, Aug. 18, by Deputy Superintendent Joseph Spagnoli and unanimously approved.

The report plots out the responsibilities of building and central office administrators, the criteria to be used in evaluating their performance and links future pay increases to attaining a certain score on the evaluation.

Under the plan, an administrator who received an average rating would be eligible to receive a salary increase equal to the percent increase in 13 comparable districts. An administrator who scores 90 percent or better on the evaluation will receive twice the percentage increase of the selected comparable districts.

The evaluation process sets eight standards of achievement — three below and four above what is called "attains local standards." Each administrative group has its own assessment criteria drawn up. "We felt it would be more equitable to have an assessment format for each administrative group," Spagnoli told the board.

Leadership responsibilities have been identified for administrators in the system's nine categories — developed from the administrative salary report prepared last year by the firm Cresap, McCormick and Paget — with building administrators and central office personnel working from common criteria and programs based on their areas of responsibility, according to the plan.

A point range of one to five up to one to 20 has been established for each category. Administrators will be evaluated by the superintendent and deputy superintendent based on accomplishments in each area. A score will be assessed for each area and will be totalled.

Most of the district's administrators are expected to fall into the fourth level — attains local standards — and those falling in this range are assumed to be accomplishing work comparable to that done by highly qualified colleagues, according to the report.

Maximum score on the evaluation is 110 points, with the mid-range set at between 60 and 84 points, according to Spagnoli. For an administrator to exceed local standards, he or she will have to achieve a score higher than 84 and meet the mid-point or above in each of the leadership responsibility criteria, according to the report.

The superintendent and deputy superintendent will meet with each administrator four times in a school year, with an optional fifth meeting possible, Spagnoli told the board.

The first meeting occurs in August and September, when a planning conference is held. The superintendent is to disseminate goals established by the board for the school year. At the conference, the administrator is to discuss his or her job targets, personal and board-related goals. Those goals and job expectations and other specific responsibilities become that year's role expectations, according to the report.

Performance update meetings are held in January, with administrators and evaluators discussing performance progress and the process put into place for goal achievement. Discussed will be any problems or concerns that have been identified by either the administrator or evaluator.

The optional meeting will be held in March or April, with review of progress and discussion of concerns the main topics, according to the report. A report of achievements is to be made by the administrator in May or June, with a final review for the school year held in June.

Once points have been completed for the categories of questions, the totals are converted to a weighting factor of one. The factored salary increase, Spagnoli said.

For instance, an administrator who meets the mid-point has a weighting factor of one. The factor will be used as a multiplier of the percentage increase in salaries of 13 comparable districts chosen in the compensation report. An administrator who meets local standards would receive at least the percent increase calculated from the 13 districts.

If the percent increase was above the maximum salary level set for that administrative category, the administrator would receive a one-time lump sum payment, Spagnoli said.

A probationary administrator must be with the system for one full year in order to receive a two-year contract extension — only after achieving at least the mid-point on the evaluation, Spagnoli said. The system has developed a number of options to deal with administrators who, while on probation, don't achieve satisfactory evaluation scores.

Members of the evaluation development committee include Pierce Middle School Principal Donald Bassett, Poupard Elementary School Principal James Cooper, North High Assistant Principal Kathleen Herschelmann, South Principal Edward Shine, Ronald Tonks, director of personnel and labor relations, Spagnoli and Superintendent John Whritner.

The development of the evaluation plan and its ties to performance were recommended in the Cresap, McCormick pay report.

In Michigan, one good idea leads to another.

William Stubbs, VP
Mannesmann Demag

Good ideas get a state moving. And idea after good idea have led Michigan right to the center of advanced manufacturing. It's how our state has emerged as one of the top three nationally in industrial research and development spending. And why innovators such as Mannesmann Demag are coming to Michigan.

Mannesmann Demag, a West German material handling firm, looked elsewhere to base its North American product development center, but saw its best opportunity in Michigan. William Stubbs, Vice President of Mannesmann Demag, explains: "We chose Michigan because it is where our customers are. Advanced manufacturers. And just as important, because of its stable, highly qualified work force. As a development company, it's important for us to be in a state with top-notch colleges and training programs that supply workers who can master today's advanced manufacturing."

In Michigan, research and development and advanced manufacturing aren't happening independently of one another. They're put in motion by companies like Mannesmann Demag. Companies that can take good ideas and make them better ideas. One good idea after another. It's why more and more companies are following Mannesmann Demag to make Michigan where the action is.

Next: the campaign issues

Now that the Republican Party as well as the liberal Detroit Free Press and the conservative Detroit News have endorsed Colleen Engler as the GOP choice for lieutenant governor, the state is set for a bruising battle for political control of the state in November.

At stake will be not only the governorship but control of the Legislature, now divided between the two parties, and the other offices to be filled in the fall: attorney general, secretary of state, two seats on the state Supreme Court, and two positions on each of the four educational bodies. They are the State Board of Education and the governing boards of the University of Michigan, Michigan State and Wayne State.

After ratifying their gubernatorial nominee's choice of Rep. Engler, 3,000 cheering Republican delegates in their convention in Detroit last weekend heard William Lucas predict he would be elected because he "will be judged by the strength of my character, not by the color of my skin." Whatever the basis for judgment, Lucas would become the nation's first elected black governor if he wins in November.

Not that the Democrats will give up the governorship or any other state office without a fight. In their own party convention in Flint, enthusiastic Democrats picked Lt. Gov. Martha Griffiths for a second term and completed their slate of nominees for the office to be filled in the fall. Gov. James Blanchard pointed to his record in glowing terms and outlined his plans for the future while the party's designated hitter, Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley, attacked Lucas and the Republicans.

Blanchard, it appears, is going to try to claim not only the middle of the road but also the high road in the campaign as well, leaving it to Kelley and other party leaders to take the low road of personal and political attacks on Lucas.

Just as the Republicans gave the impression of party unity by picking a moderate for lieutenant governor and rejecting a right-wing extremist for attorney general, the Democrats patched up some of their own differences. Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit, never a Blanchard fan, told the Democratic convention he "ranks among our great governors" and predicted Blanchard would carry Detroit easily. But Young never has liked Lucas, even when he was a Democrat, because of the challenge the county executive posed to the mayor's leadership in Wayne County.

The best coverage and editorials were claimed by the GOP after the choice of Rep. Engler. The Free Press, which often speaks in liberal Democratic tones, said Lucas "has chosen well" in picking the Mt. Pleasant legislator. The Detroit News, usually dedicated to conservative GOP causes, said in choosing Rep. Engler, Lucas "continues to show he won't be bound by tradition and that he will reach out for the best and the brightest." Readers can't expect such editorial unanimity in the fall when the choice will be between Blanchard and Lucas.

Many questions and issues await attention as the campaign opens. Will race be an important factor? Will blacks, usually Democratic in politics, desert their party to back a GOP nominee who could become the nation's first black governor? Will white Republicans and independents support a ticket headed by a black and including a woman? Will President Reagan and Vice President Bush campaign in Michigan for Lucas? Will the state and national GOP give Lucas the financial support that was denied him until the closing days of the primary campaign?

As for the issues, will there be new ones? Or will the questions revolve around taxes, incentives for business expansion, adequate support for education and other fiscal and economic issues? Will social issues such as abortion, prayer in the schools and state aid for private education arouse campaign controversies? Will both gubernatorial candidates trot out new proposals to improve not only the economic outlook but the quality of life in Michigan?

Our readers say

Accentuate the positive in Pointe schools

To the Editor:

Thank goodness for the retirement incentive program that was recently placed into effect and is now being taken advantage of by public school employees throughout the state. Undoubtedly, the incentive program has enticed many well deserving public school employees to happily retire with reasonable and comfortable financial compensation.

But what we really should be thankful for is that the retirement incentive program has also enticed a few die-hard, disgruntled, miserable and non-contributing public school employees to retire. Hence, these individuals can now focus their misery and frustration toward their own personal lives and will no longer impact hundreds of students each year.

A case in point is Mr. George Sommerville, employed as a teacher at Grosse Pointe South High School. What a sad testimony Mr. Sommerville depicted in his retirement letter printed in the Aug. 21 Grosse Pointe News.

I am the first to admit that the public school structure at the local, state and national levels has its share of problems. Furthermore, it is obvious to anyone even remotely involved with public schools, that the change process is usually very long simply due to the emotional and political impact change has in a people oriented business such as public education.

The answer to dealing with the frustration that most public school employees feel from time to time is to focus all efforts on what is truly best for the students. After all, students are the reason teachers, board members, custodians, cooks, administrators, and all other employees are there. To wallow in self-pity, to constantly complain, criticize, and become frustrated over such incidental issues as copy machines, whether a schedule is seven periods or six, which employees have clerical help versus those who do not, etc., is simply a waste of time and will never lead to any impact for constructive, positive change.

I submit that the school structure, especially in communities like Grosse Pointe, has many more positive attributes than negative. If our public education employees and board members would focus their thoughts and efforts on what is good, the good will get better and the negative will become less important. Of the many Grosse Pointe school system employees and board members I personally know and/or have come in contact with, I believe the overwhelming majority do just that. This is precisely why the Grosse Pointe school system is excellent.

I feel sorrow for the few like Mr. Sommerville who choose to be negative and critical about virtually everything. It truly is a shame he spent 35 "frustrating" years as a teacher. I hope his frustration did not negatively impact the hundreds of students he came in contact with over the past 35 years. I also hope Mr. Sommerville's frustration ends with his retirement.

Lastly, I say to the Grosse Pointe Board of Education, administrators, teachers and support staff — keep up the good work!

A pox on garage sales

To the Editor:

This letter reflects the point of view of a person who has been in retailing more than 40 years.

"A Grosse Pointe matron was shocked when she observed through a hedge three nude couples cavorting on the lawn. In disgust, she called the local police and was told they could take no action, that it was the local house of ill repute and they were having a sidewalk sale."

No this didn't happen, but we are close to this in the uncontrolled pattern of garage sales. It seems we have no ordinance regulating frequency, signing and presentation. Recently, we were embarrassed by two sales that were "sidewalk" sales, clearly 20 to 30 feet from any garage. One party continued the sale for the next two Saturdays.

Any Friday or Saturday one can see a variety of such sales. Some well done, others in the poorest taste. To maintain the beauty and quality of Grosse Pointe living, each council should adopt a uniform ordinance to control sidewalk sales or garage sales, including parking and traffic control.

It is of interest that when council members have been approached there is a distinct look of interest. Perhaps the Grosse Pointe News can pick up the banner and allow some control.

Leave the view alone

To the editor:

I read, with concern, the articles regarding people falling into the lake on Lakeshore drive.

I took a ride down Lakeshore Tuesday. It is a pleasant habit of mine and I usually drive down about three times in a day. This time it was late and dark (9 p.m.) But I did see people in the dark, walking along the water's edge — the water is black and sky is dark, actually there is nothing to see.

I suggest they walk in their neighborhoods. Everyone is quick to jump at the suggestion of barricades, fences, etc. How about using a little C.S. (common sense) and stay away from the edge, and when it is dark, stormy, etc., stay away. I know that body building has the upper hand now, they are either running, jogging, or otherwise.

How about the island between the traffic lanes, walk on that. But please leave our view alone!

Chrysler and the media

In politics as in athletics, it is easy to be a good winner — but more difficult to be a good loser. Thus it is disappointing that Dick Chrysler, who has played the role of the good loser by endorsing William Lucas for governor and even giving him a substantial contribution, now is complaining bitterly about his own treatment by the media. In fact, Chrysler now is beginning to sound like a poor loser.

Chrysler's complaint is against all the news media, and especially the Detroit News which first published the charges by former employees of Chrysler's company, Cars & Concepts, Inc., that Chrysler and other company officials in 1978 urged them to work without pay for several weeks and suggested they could get unemployment checks from the state.

The Detroit News had offered Chrysler several chances to answer the charges and the candidate told the newspaper he had records to disprove the allegations. The newspaper said it delayed publication to give Chrysler time to provide the records which his aides had said would be made available. But the next day Chrysler told the News by phone the records were in storage and there was no time to find them before the primary, then six days distant. So the newspaper went ahead.

In a recent post-election story, the Detroit News reported that Chrysler had declined to make available any of the records he had promised, and quoted him as saying privacy considerations of the employees made it impossible for the records to be examined by the paper's reporters. But then Chrysler attacked the paper, charging, "You already cost me the election and about three million bucks," adding that he was "taking a lot of personal offense at that."

Well, Chrysler's viewpoint may be understandable and yet it is important to remember that he was really the creature of his own television advertising campaign which cost him an estimated $3 million. That campaign pictured him as the successful businessman in a kind of Horatio Alger story in which he promised to create more jobs for Michigan just as he had done for his own businesses.

Earlier in the campaign, the Detroit Free Press had run several stories that raised questions about Chrysler's personal and business ethics. Chrysler responded to those stories by saying they were invasions of privacy or were in error — but he didn't provide specific answers to the allegations made.

Chrysler no doubt preferred his own TV version of his career over the different ones portrayed by the media. But the stories were typical of the kind that tough, investigating reporters write about candidates. And if they dug into Chrysler's personal and business career, it was because he had no public record, never having been elected to or having served in public office. The primary voters were entitled to such information to help them make their judgments at the polls.

In many respects, Chrysler may be a fine man. Perhaps some of the charges made against him were exaggerated or even in error. Perhaps his inability to deal with the accusations reflects his naivete in political campaigning. Whatever the case, the information dug up by the media — and not proved wrong — gave the public another basis on which to judge his character. That was different from the one provided by his TV ads.

In the end, it may have been appropriate that a candidate who had surged into public recognition because of his own media advertising was brought down because of media efforts to find the real man behind his own advertising. The Bible says they that take the sword shall perish with the sword. It's apparently true in politics as in war.

Ending a controversy

Serving as a member of a city council, school board or other public agency often can be burdensome and especially when a controversial issue divides the electorate.

Grosse Pointe school board members found the truth of that statement two years ago during the controversies over the proposed school closings. For the past year or more, members of the Grosse Pointe Farms Council have also learned that making a decision on a controversial issue never satisfies everyone.

We are referring, of course, to the decision by the Farms Council to reject the application of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Association for approval of a Class C liquor license. The council's action on June 16 was the third time in a year that the city had voted to turn down the War Memorial's application for such a license.

The War Memorial is, of course, one of the most highly prized community assets in the Pointes. Yet the strong and continued objections of a number of Grosse Pointers make it appear that the Farms Council made the correct decision in declining to approve the liquor license. Under the circumstances, the War Memorial board decision to drop its fight for the license also appears to have been a wise one.

As is so often the case in controversial issues, there are arguments on both sides here. The War Memorial board originally contended that it needed a Class C license in order to exercise greater control over the intoxicating beverages distributed at the center. Later it emphasized its concern about insurance liability and potential lawsuits under the current system that relies on temporary liquor permits issued to sponsors of center activities.

The opponents, led by nearby residents, feared that the issuance of the license would lead to more activities at the center, increased consumption of liquor, greater commercialization of the area and increased traffic. And, indeed, the opponents had warned the Michigan Liquor Control Commission, which had the final say in the matter, that the War Memorial would not have been qualified to use the license if it had been granted, without obtaining a variance from current zoning regulations in the Farms. An application for a variance would have precipitated another community battle.

We hope that the reiteration by the Farms Council of its opposition to the issuance of the license and the subsequent decision by the War Memorial board to drop its pending appeal of the Liquor Control Commission's denial means that this community controversy finally is at an end. Surely the three rejections of the War Memorial applications in a single year ought to be convincing evidence of the Farms Council's position on the issue.

Next: the campaign issues

With strong candidates at the top of their lists, both parties go into the campaign well prepared to attract support not only from their members but from independents and swing voters. If the campaign develops as expected, it could be a close election with the outcome having an impact nationally as well as in Michigan. As always, the candidates' personalities, charisma and charm will help win votes but a meaningful discussion of the issues, including even a series of debates, would do more to inform the people about the qualities they want in their next governor.

Success in cancer research is good news

To the Editor:

Recently, there was a lot of publicity surrounding an article written by John C. Bailor III published in the "New England Journal of Medicine."

Headlines shouted that "we were losing the war on cancer." The author labeled the past 35 years a "qualified failure," in terms of cancer research and urge that we shift focus away from treatment and cure and emphasize prevention. The American Cancer Society strongly disagrees.

While it is true that the overall cancer death rate has risen by 8 percent from 1950 to 1982, a sensible look at the figures show that this rise is accounted for by the tragic 247 percent increase in lung cancer death rates that occurred in this same time period. When lung cancer is removed from that statistics, there is a 13 percent decrease in the cancer death rate.

Bailor's report does not tell us an important fact — individual lives have been made longer and more productive because of scientific breakthroughs in cancer treatment.

Research in cancer treatment, supportive care and psychosocial needs of cancer patients must not only continue, it must increase.

That's why our American Cancer Society volunteers work so hard in Michigan to make fundraisers successful. We want to wipe out cancer in our lifetime. The American Cancer Society is firmly committed to prevention, research and treatment.

Have we made progress against cancer? Indeed we have. Our success shines in the faces of parents whose children have survived previously incurable cancer. It is demonstrated every time a cancer patient is driven to a hospital for treatment. It is echoed every time you watch Yul Brenner talking to us from the grave about smoking and cancer. It is emphasized every day as researchers at Michigan State University, University of Michigan and Wayne State University work on significant projects that will reshape and make our future a better one . . . thanks to cancer research.

This is real progress. It is a victory . . . and reason enough for the volunteers here in Wayne County to keep up the tempo in the fight against cancer.

Fly the flag

To the Editor:

The President of the United States has proclaimed Sept. 14-21 as Constitution Week. This year, is the 199th anniversary of our Constitution.

Elizabeth Cass Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, suggests that everyone read the Preamble and part or all of the Constitution of the United States of America. We also ask everyone to display our flag during that week.

I say

By Peter A. Salinas

Since the dawn of man the human animal has tried to make the surroundings in which he spends most of his time more attractive and comfortable. Cave dwellers etched huge paintings of animals on the walls. They lined the floors of the cold caves with plant material to cushion and warm their bottoms. Stone tools were used to fashion other creature comforts.

Cave dwellers were very lucky people. Very fortunate indeed.

They may have had to live in cold, dark and bug-infested caves, but they never had to deal with oil-based paint, wallpaper and spackling paste.

Few, if any, people move into a house or apartment, set up the furniture and go about living in the dwelling.

They go to hardware stores and paint departments of major retail chains and purchase the maddening materials of decorating.

Before you can decide what to do with your kitchen or living room walls, you must first go to the paint store and get those little color cards. After placing the color cards next to everything you own, you soon discover the shade you like most is the color of your plastic wastebasket. No color on the cards matches it, so you must carry the waste receptacle with you to the store when you want the paint mixed.

Hate to poke fun at such a fine practice as do-it-yourself decorating. Some actually enjoy painting and hanging paper. It does give a great sense of accomplishment when everything is done and looking neat and clean. The color of the walls matches the curtains. The wallpaper background matches the phone. Everything is wonderful, young and bright.

But oh, that time in between when the decision is made to "do a little fixing up" and completion is sheer horror. Choosing the paint and wallpaper is like deciding to chew glass and drink salt water. It is a self-inflicted sentence of barbaric torture.

Who among us hasn't uttered a curse against all things saintly, when the one spot of dark oak trim not covered with the drop cloth is spattered with white oil-base primer?

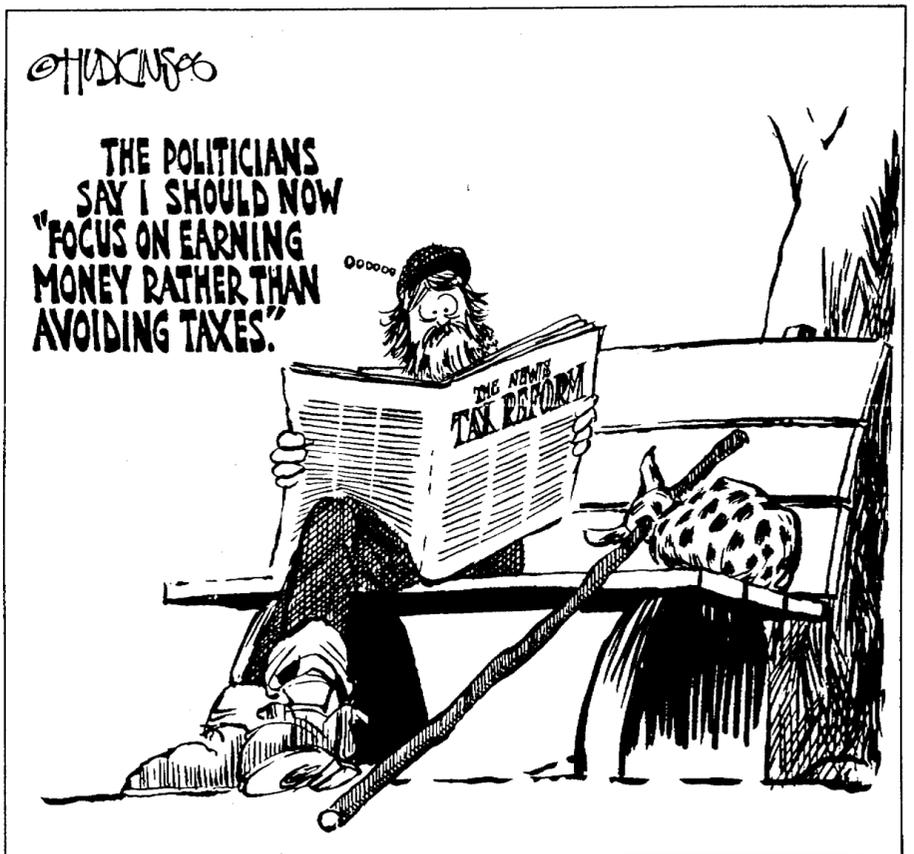

Drop cloths are aptly named. Everything that can drip, drop, flop or flip lands on them — including yourself if you're not careful.

There is not a partition of dry-wall on this earth that hasn't had at least 30 percent of its surface covered with spackling paste.

Spackling paste was first discovered by the Chinese in the mid-200s B.C. The Great Wall of China was built during this period. As you might have guessed, the Great Wall developed a number of great cracks. The Chinese quickly set about inventing spackling. It took some doing, but a combination of chewing gum, candle wax and honey filled those early cracks.

Though the ingredients may have changed — Bit-O-Honey is used today — the results are no less permanent. Spackling adheres itself to anything and everything except the crack or hole which you intend to fill with it. It never remains smooth enough to paint over without sanding, and once it is smoothed and painted over — it sinks in on itself, resulting in re-spackling and re-painting the entire wall.

paper is impractical because it would become sodden with grease from a stove.

Hanging paper is a chore few people do twice. Professionals always laugh when they hear someone is going to "do-it-themselves." Wallpaper must do several things. It must cover all the walls you want papered, its pattern must line up over and over again and the little things like wall socket plates must be covered.

All of the above mentioned items are impossible tasks. No professional ever worries about accomplishing each perfectly. Amateurs don't know this, and they go stark, raving mad when none of them happen. So lawyers are contacted, separation takes place and the married couples get divorced. Single people don't do a lot of worrying about wallpaper. They hire a professional, come home from work one day and it's all done.

Small children and animals should be as far removed from the work area as possible. Anyone who has ever left a three-year-old or a dog in the kitchen when painting knows the sadness of scrubbing the no-wax floor on hands and knees to remove dog paw prints or tiny handprints.

This do-it-yourself work is usually done while on vacation. However, one feels as though he needs a vacation when the work is done.

Mark Rolain, left, and Marcielle Casquejo, center, were among 14 Detroit-area students to win H.T. Ewald Foundation scholarships. Rolain, of Grosse Pointe Woods, plans to attend Wayne State University Medical School. He was a cross-country runner at North High School and at Kalamazoo College. Casquejo, a St. Clair Shores resident born in Manila, graduated from Our Lady Star of the Sea High School with a 4.0 grade point average. She was president of the National Honor Society and the Drama Club and valedictorian of her class. She intends to study at the University of Michigan School of Engineering.

The Ewald Foundation was established in 1928 by the late H.T. Ewald, founder of the Campbell-Ewald advertising company. It is believed to be the oldest and largest privately funded scholarship foundation in the Detroit area.

Shown after the Aug. 9 awards ceremony are Rolain, Foundation Secretary-Treasurer Mrs. Ted Ewald, Casquejo, Foundation President Ted Ewald and Foundation Executive Kristi Ewald.

Coroner calls Frame death undeterminable

By Mike Andrzejczyk
County medical examiners say in their report they aren't sure whether Dr. Boy Frame, head of the Department of Medicine at Henry Ford Hospital and Park resident, drowned in the Detroit River by accident or design.

Frame, 63, was found dead Saturday afternoon, Aug. 16, at the foot of Alter Road. His body was discovered in the river by a pair of fishermen, according to reports. His Mercury Marquis Brougham was found parked at the Light-house Recreation Center near the foot of Alter Road, keys still in the ignition.

Frame was last seen by his family at 2:10 p.m. Saturday. Forty minutes later, they reported him missing to Park police. Frame had admitted himself voluntarily to Harper Grace Hospital for treatment of depression, but checked himself out Saturday.

He was taken by Detroit emergency medical technicians to Bon Secours Hospital at 3:07 p.m., where he was pronounced dead. When the Park broadcast its missing person information at 3:29 p.m. it was answered almost immediately with the report that Frame had been found.

When found, Frame was wearing the same clothes he had on when he left his home.

Medical examiners have said the cause of death was drowning, but classified the doctor's death as undeterminable, because it was unclear whether the death was accidental or suicide, a department spokesman said.

Dr. Frame was an internationally recognized specialist in bone and mineral diseases. His influence in his chosen specialty led to two international symposia on bone and mineral diseases which were held in Detroit in 1972 and 1983.

School system opens bidding on City lot

The Grosse Pointe Public school system plans to sell its property behind Kroger's supermarket in the City to the highest bidder.

The Board of Education Monday, Aug. 18, authorized the administration to advertise the lot as for sale. In addition, a half-dozen invitations to bid have been distributed to parties interested in the lot, according to Superintendent John Whritner.

The bids will be opened Friday, Oct. 3, at 4 p.m., school officials said.

The City lot is one of two owned by the school district that the board is looking to sell. Last month, Cottage Hospital of Grosse Pointe bought the parking lot adjacent to Messner Field from the school system for $118,000.

The sale of the Farms lot was not advertised openly. The district accepted the offer by Cottage because the hospital will continue to operate the lot for parking, the offer made was near the market value and the property may end up back on the tax rolls — a question to be decided by the Farms in December — school officials said.

The lot in the City has an assessed value of $111,000 and serves businesses on the west side of Kercheval from Cadieux to Notre Dame.

One party sent an invitation to bid was Grosse Pointe City, which currently maintains the lot under a now-defunct lease with the school system.

City manager Thomas Kressbach said the City will most likely tender a bid on the property.

The school board decided to sell off the two lots last year. Trustees, after the July sale, said the system should begin advertising for bids on the City property.

Roseville man under arrest for bomb threat

A 19-year-old Roseville man was arrested Aug. 10 in connection with a bomb threat Aug. 9 at the Lochmoor Club.

Grosse Pointe Woods police have secured a warrant against Richard A. Mitrak. A Sept. 10 arraignment date has been set in the case.

Woods police received a call at about 7 p.m. The caller stated he had left a bomb somewhere at the club.

Police advised club officials, who were holding a wedding party that night, that the threat had been made. Police and Lochmoor Club employees made a physical search of the building and turned up nothing. Another call was made at around 9 p.m. stating that the threat was "no joke." The caller made another call stating he had "talked with a priest" who advised him to say where the bomb was located. He told police it was located in the ceiling.

Police made another search of the drop ceiling at the club which turned up nothing.

About 11 p.m. the caller called police again, stating the bomb was set to go off at 11:35 p.m.

In the interim, police had notified Michigan Bell of the situation and the phone company agreed to put a trace on all the Woods' incoming calls. After the last call, it was determined the calls were coming from inside the Lochmoor Club.

Because of the persistence of the bomb threats, police and Lochmoor officials cleared the wedding party from the building. The party was moved outdoors.

Police continued the investigation, and an arrest was made the next day.

Of course Aunt Sara loved the invitation. Who wouldn't like feeling so special that someone had the Governor invite them for a visit. And really, don't worry about hurting anyone's feelings because Governor Blanchard will invite as many people as you'd like to have come. Plus they'll get lots of information on why Michigan is such a wonderful place to spend a vacation. There'll even be a little something in the mail for you — like a copy of Michigan's Travel Planner. Intensive language study offered this fall at War Memorial

The University of Detroit's Division of Continuing Professional Education is now registering students for its fall intensive language classes.

For the first time U of D is bringing the language program to Grosse Pointe. Classes in beginning French and Japanese will be held at the War Memorial on Monday and Thursday evenings from 6-9 p.m., Sept. 15-Dec. 8.

Patterned after the Dartmouth-Rassias method of teaching, developed by Professor John Rassias of Dartmouth College, the classes are small, with students and instructors engaged in rapid fire drill. A student responds at least 100 times per class. Because of the intensity of the learning experience, little homework is assigned.

For further information on other language and locations contact U of D's Division of Continuing Professional Education at 927-1025.

Health screening

Wayne County residents 60 years or older are eligible to participate in the senior citizens health screening program. The program is sponsored by the Detroit Health Department and the Detroit Area Agency on Aging. There is no charge for this service. Call 876-4294 for an appointment to receive your free health tests. Blood pressure, urine, vision and hearing will be checked. In addition, a nurse will be available to review your medical history. Back to school dance

Students in grades 6-8 can start the year off at a War Memorial dance on Friday, Sept. 5, from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. The theme for the first dance of the new school year will be Back To School and students are encouraged to wear their school's colors at the dance. Tickets cost $3.75 per student and must be purchased in advance at the center, 32 Lakeshore Rd., Grosse Pointe Farms. Students are limited to two tickets and must present a park pass or school I.D. at the time of purchase.

The War Memorial depends on volunteer chaperones for the youth dances and the need for adult chaperones is most urgent at this time of year when the school term begins. Parents who volunteer to chaperone for a dance will receive a complimentary dance ticket for their student. The center suggests that parent groups volunteer to chaperone at one dance.

The War Memorial youth dances are open to all students in middle school who reside in or attend Grosse Pointe schools. Tickets are for sale at the front desk of the Alger House, Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. For information call 881-7511.

Study says housing is more affordable

The ability of the typical family to purchase an existing single-family home showed a healthy improvement last month as the National Association of Realtors' Housing Affordability Index increased a full percentage point to 101.4.

"With the index at this level, more than half of the families in this country could qualify for a mortgage to purchase the median-priced existing single-family home last month," said Clark E. Wallace, president of the association.

A $900 May-to-June drop in the median existing single-family home price to $82,300 more than offset a slight increase in interest rates last month. Association economists said the June price drop likely was a correction for the huge $3,000 increase to $83,200 in May. Economists do not expect further price declines in the months ahead.

In fact, median existing-home prices in June was 7.6 percent higher than a year ago, and they expect median resale home prices to show an 8 percent increase for all of 1986 and a 5 percent increase for all of 1987.

This has been good news for families who waited years for interest rates to fall to a point where they could make their move into the housing market," Wallace said. "Prior to December last year, the index had been below 100 since December of 1978," he added.

When the index is 100, a family earning the median income has exactly enough income to qualify for a mortgage on a median-priced resale home.

"The improved affordability index in recent months has translated into more existing-home sales. In fact, for the first six months this year, home resale activity was up 12.5 percent from the same period last year," Wallace, a Realtor from Moraga, Calif., said.

Last December, the index broke above the 100 mark to 100.2. In January, this year it rose to 101, in February it went to 100.9, in March it was 99.9 and in April it was 101.9.

The direction of the index has closely followed the direction of interest rates, Wallace observed. The index peaked in February 1972 and 153.1, when mortgage interest rates were less than 8 percent. Conversely, the index hit its all-time low in September 1981 at 63.9, when mortgage interest rates were about 16 percent.

With the interest rate used to compute the index at 10.21 percent in June, up from 10.15 percent in

May, the monthly principal and interest payment on a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage for $65,800 (80 percent of the median resale home price) would be $588, down from $592 the previous month, association economists said.

The interest rate used to compute the index is the average effective rate (including points) on loans closed for previously occupied homes as reported by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Based on lending requirements set by the Federal National Mortgage Association, principal and interest payments by a borrower making a 20 percent down payment should represent no more than 25-28 percent of yearly gross family income. The National Association of Realtors calculates its index assuming that a borrower devotes 25 percent of family income to principal and interest payments.

In June, the income needed to qualify for an 80 percent loan on a typical resale home was $28,226 — $399 less than the median family income. The June index meant that a median-income family had 101.4 percent of the income needed to qualify for a $65,800 mortgage.

A family earning the median income last month could have qualified for a loan covering 80 percent of an $83,500 home, $1,200 above the median-priced resale home in June. This was about the same as May but was significantly improved from June 1985, when a typical family could have afforded a $70,100 home.

With the index at its June level of 101.4, a family earning $20,000 per year could have qualified for an 80 percent loan on a $58,300 home, while a family with a $30,000 income could have afforded an $87,400 home. A family with a $40,000 income could have qualified for a mortgage on a $116,500 home, and a family with a $50,000 income could have afforded a $145,600 home.

The National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association, represents nearly 700,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

District fills teaching positions

By Mike Andrzejczyk

When Grosse Pointe students report back to classes Wednesday, Sept. 3, they will find each room has a teacher. The school system expects to fill all its available teaching positions this week, according to Ronald Tonks, director of personnel and labor relations.

Positions the school system has yet to fill are its director of guidance counseling, who will work half-time at each of the high schools and its substance abuse facilitator.

The counseling directorship was just posted last week, so it's too early to have gotten a response, Tonks said. The position was created earlier this year by the Board of Education as a way of improving the system at the high schools.

During budget deliberations in May, school officials said the position would start as half-time at both schools, but could expand to full-time, depending on a year-end review.

The district is currently clarifying to the state its job requirements for the student assistance facilitator, after being told that person will have to have a counseling endorsement, which means having a teaching certificate.

Board members last month has asked Tonks to contact the state Department of Education about whether the person hired would need a teaching certificate.

Tonks said that, within three weeks of making his request, he had his answer; the facilitator needed the counseling endorsement.

The state may have made its decision while not understanding the position fully, Tonks said. The district is clarifying its request and asking the state to reconsider its decision. If not, the system will have to look into appeal options, he added.

The facilitator's job description calls for a person who will provide assistance for students with substance abuse problems and students at risk; evaluate treatment services; assess individual needs for referrals; conduct substance abuse education for school personnel, parents, the community and students; consult with staff concerning students in need; assist in curriculum review as related to the student assistance program; develop and facilitate student support groups; and any other duties assigned by the program coordinator.

Grosse Pointe Education Association officers said in July such a person should be required to have a valid certificate because a component of his or her duties will be teaching students.

In its preliminary job description, the district said it wanted the person to have a valid teaching certificate, along with a master's degree in a human service area; training, education and experience in substance abuse fields; ability to work with students in a school setting; ability to work with staff, parents and the community; and the ability to facilitate support groups for students and parents.

The board worried that, by requiring an applicant to have a teaching certificate, it was narrowing its field of available candidates.

Requiring the applicant to have a counseling endorsement will narrow its available pool of applicants even further, trustees said.

The district hopes to hear by mid-September from the state on its reconsiderations, Tonks said.

One position the district will need to fill for the coming year will be director of the planetarium at North High School. Current director Timothy Skonieczny announced his resignation in the August personnel report for the school system.

Skonieczny leaves the system after being director at the planetarium since its dedication in 1982. He is now at Macomb Community College.

The system is still looking for his replacement for the planetarium post, school officials said.

North principal John Kastan said he was sorry to lose Skonieczny, adding he was a good teacher.

A position filled this month is that of reading specialist who will be assigned half-time at each of the two schools to work with freshmen who have difficulty reading.

Joyce Warner, who brings 18 years of experience with her, will be ready to start the new reading program this year. The program is aimed at incoming freshmen whose chief hurdle to further learning is an inability to read well, according to Robert Welch, director of secondary curriculum.

The reading program is a compromise between those offered last year at the high schools, Welch said. Each school handled students with difficulty learning in different ways, either through a core curriculum or an alternative education set-up.

Sayonara, Grosse Pointe

By Nancy Parmenter

Leavetaking is always difficult. Noel Berry said she sat in her empty bedroom in Grosse Pointe Farms last week and felt sad.

"There were some tears," she admitted. "The bedroom looks so bare. I always had posters and pictures of friends on the walls..."

Berry's leavetaking is more monumental than most. While other friends packed their bags for college, Berry was getting ready to spend a year in Japan as an exchange student — a good-bye complicated by the fact that her family will move to Chicago while she is away.

"I guess I don't know what I'm in for," she sighed, "but it's exciting. My friends are all sitting me down and talking to me, telling me they're proud — it's like talking to your parents."

Taking a year off after graduation is something Berry, 18, has planned since she was in middle school. She sees it as a testing and growing time.

"I need direction," she said. "I think it's going to mature me a lot."

Berry will spend the year in three or four Japanese homes, enrolled in a private Japanese girls' school under the exchange program sponsored by Rotary International. She has already attended two Rotary-sponsored meetings in Ohio this summer.

One held recently at Ohio's Otterbein College was primarily social, giving new students the opportunity to meet students who were just completing an exchange year.

"They told us so many things," Berry said. "Little things, like what to wear. The Japanese don't sit around in sweats like we do. Girls wear skirts and dresses."

Rotary also provided students and their families with an intensive weekend-long seminar on politics, religion and culture at Wittenburg University. "It led me to expect more intense competition there," Berry said. "The kids there just study and study. They try to be the best at everything they do. I'll be going to school six days a week."

Because of the language barrier, Berry will study fine arts, calligraphy, and some independent projects rather than try to keep up in a classroom situation. She also expects to be on a call as an aide to the English teachers. Tennis, her favorite sport, should be less affected by language.

"At first, I planned to really study the language this summer," she said. "But I talked to a lot of kids who had been there and they all said that within a few months they had picked up enough to carry on a conversation. So I relaxed."

She will try to conform in as many ways as possible, giving up makeup, straightening her hair and honoring the Japanese ideal of harmony. "They respect you more if you go there and try to learn their ways and fit into their culture," she said. "Everybody has told me that."

Berry has already met several Japanese. Last week, at a farewell party in Greektown, a Japanese couple at a nearby table became interested in her journey. They told her about the weather (very cold in winter — bring lots of long underwear) and the attractions in the Kyushu area, where she will live. And they invited her to their home in Tokyo.

"It's been all talk for so long," Berry said. "I've been rambling on about going to Japan — it didn't seem real. Now it does."

Family origins

As of 1985, 60 percent of women maintaining families were white, 28.8 percent were black, and 8.9 percent were of Hispanic origin, according to a fact sheet on working women published by the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Learn a foreign language

During the week of Sept. 15, local residents who wish to begin to learn a foreign language may enroll in one of 16 non-credit, leisure-time classes for adults scheduled through the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe public school system.

Two classes in beginning Spanish will be offered this fall. An evening class, "Spanish-Phase I," has been slated for Monday nights beginning Sept. 15. A daytime class in beginning Spanish, which meets twice weekly, begins at 9:30 a.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 16. Called "Phase I-Intensive," it will be followed by "Phase II-Intensive" on Oct. 21.

Classes for beginners will also be offered in French, German, and Italian in the evening beginning Sept. 15. In addition, a continuation of the popular daytime class, "French-Phase III," will also be offered as will be "French-Phase VI."

"French-Advanced" has also been scheduled for the fall.

A full complement of German classes beyond the beginning level include "German-Phase IV," "German-Intermediate" and "German-Advanced." New-for-fall is a four-week offering, "Italian for Travelers." Other classes in Italian include "Italian-Phase IV" and "Italian-Advanced."

"Swedish" will also be offered again this fall.

The cost of the 10-week classes is $35, with the text extra. Full details of the fall program in foreign languages and other Community Education offerings are contained in the booklet mailed to all residences in the Grosse Pointe school district the week of Aug. 25.

Business series

Michigan State University's Wayne County Cooperative Extension Service will begin "Business Talk," Tuesday, Sept. 9, a six-part series for people interested in starting or already operating a small business.

The series will feature videotapes on business management, how to secure financial aid, establish a good recordkeeping system and how to set prices and more.

Resource speakers with expertise in the areas of business plan development, taxes and marketing will give current information to participants to assist them with making sound business decisions.

The series is designed to give practical instruction in starting and operating a successful business. There will be several opportunities for hands-on experiences during the series.

Fee for the series is $20 per person or $35 per couple or business partners.

For information, call 721-6550 or 563-2400.

Ford Hospital will host meeting on neurofibromatosis

The Elephant Man is dead, yet others who suffer the same disorder as John Merrick are living today. Neurofibromatosis, also known as Von Recklinghausen's Disease, is a genetically determined neurological, progressive disorder which affects one in every 3,000 people. It is characterized by tumors that form unpredictably on nerves anywhere in the body, affecting any of the body systems. While Merrick's case was unusually severe, many today experience multiple skin tumors, disfigurement, bone defects, scoliosis, tumors of the brain and spinal cord, deafness, blindness, learning disabilities, and other problems. In most cases diagnosis is confirmed by the presence of six or more cafe-au-lait (light brown) spots. NF has no known cure or effective treatment other than surgery on

A Neurofibromatosis Lay Symposium will be held on Sunday, Sept. 15, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at University Hospital, Ann Arbor. It has been planned to increase public awareness of NF and to provide information and support to individuals and families affected by this long-overlooked disorder. This event is sponsored by Ohio and Michigan chapters of the National Neurofibromatosis Foundation in cooperation with University of Michigan Hospitals and Detroit Henry Ford Hospital. Both medical centers have NF clinics.

Topics to be presented at the morning session of the symposium include an overview of NF, management of children with NF (emphasis on school problems), neurological complications, surgery for neurological complications, reconstructive surgery, searching for the NF gene, health care services, insurance issues, second opinions, and community and state resources. The afternoon session will feature workshops presented by specialists who will focus on the psychological and social effects of living with NF. The day will conclude with a tour of the new University Hospital.

The registration fee of $8 for adults and $4 for teens (family rates available) includes a continental breakfast and lunch. Reservations are requested by Aug. 29. For more information call 525-5581.

Carillon concert

In a traditional last recital of the Christ Church Cranbrook carillon season, the four hands and four feet of Beverly Buchanan and William De Turk will play "Music for Two Carillonners," at 4 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 31. A tour of the bell tower will follow the concert.

The public is invited at no charge to listen to this sixth annual duet from the church lawn, at Church and Lone Pine roads, or across Lone Pine in the Cranbrook Gardens. Buchanan and De Turk will perform Ronald Barnes' "A Carillon Concerto for Two to Play," commissioned for the Mayo Clinic carillon in 1981, and "Three Classical Country Dances for Carillon Duet." They also will play Buchanan's arrangement of Handel's "Musical Clock Tunes" and De Turk's arrangement of Prokofiev's "Prelude for Piano (op. 12, no. 7)," among others. Call 644-5210 weekdays for more information.

More single moms

The number of families maintained by women grew almost 90 percent between 1970 and 1985. The growth is attributed largely to more marriages ending in divorce and more women having children without marrying, according to a fact sheet on working women published by the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Brain injuries — a long road back for victims

By Nancy Parmenter

A sunny acre of lawn slopes down to the woods, where purple loosestrife blooms along the moist margin. A deck and patio surround the pool; picture windows overlook the inviting scene.

Most Americans never get the opportunity to live in a house like this. The people who live here wish they could leave.

"It's a natural thing to want to go out on your own and be independent," said Grosse Pointe Woods clinical psychologist Jeffrey Ditty and his associate, Kevin Lynch, were early birds in the new field of treatment of the brain-injured.

Ditty and Lynch came together three years ago following a long professional association as consultants on problems of the mentally retarded and brain-injured. Their experiences in university research and sheltered workshops led them to devise a treatment plan using simulated work environments and to establish residences in Troy and Livonia for long-term stays. The treatment approach has proved so successful that Ditty-Lynch Associates is now marketing it to others in the field.

The brain-injured population has only been treated as a separate entity for research and treatment for about five years, Ditty said. Before that, they were mixed with the retarded population.

Many of the houses' 12 residents will need to stay for years. Long-term treatment of the brain-injured is still feeling its way. Seatbelts, airbags and medical advances in recent years mean that many people with severe brain damage are surviving their accidents.

But that doesn't mean they can expect to return to their previous levels of achievement.

"I wish people understood the consequences of having a couple toots and driving a car," Ditty said. "They think a little surgery can patch you right up. Most people don't realize that that person is never, ever going to be the same."

Therapy and repetitive practice of skills can bring about a dramatic improvement after a closed head injury, Ditty said. But improving performance from 20 percent of the norm to 40 percent still leaves a person unable to function in a job.

Most of the residents in the two Ditty-Lynch houses are young and male and almost all are there as a result of automobile accidents. The majority are victims, rather than causers, according to Ditty. Although national statistics indicate that four times as many men as women are brain-injured in accidents, Ditty said in their experience it is closer to nine men to each woman.

The young men are gathered around the table in the breakfast nook. On the doors and drawers of the cupboards behind them are hand-lettered notes reminding them what is inside.

They are here to discuss banking and budgeting. One is wearing a paper necktie colored for him by his three-year-old daughter. They have been taken through steps from computer models to workbooks to simulated banking and shopping. Now they are ready to plan their actual budgets and purchases.

This is a session to go over the details of the anticipated supervised excursion to the bank and the store. In a few minutes, they will go to their bedrooms to inventory their stock of shampoo and deodorant. We all occasionally have lapses of memory and buy soap and the training relate to each other."

The simulated environments are the key to the Ditty-Lynch approach. The clinic where the work environments are usually located is in the process of moving to new quarters at 15 Mile and Telegraph, so the work stations are temporarily set up in the walk-out lower level

Clinical psychologist Jeffrey Ditty joins direct care assistant Cyn-dy Stephenson and resident Brian Moore as they look over budgeting records. Moore has achieved a measure of local fame and a new profession as the Detroit-area spokesman for Mothers Against Drunk Driving. He has become a veteran of contacts with the media and with large audiences. "Thank God I've improved so much," he says, but years after his accident, he still uses a walker and needs memory aids.

every single time we shop; for the brain-injured, it is a never-ending problem.

"They can tell you what they're supposed to do, but they can't follow through," Ditty said.

In their eagerness for independence, the clients constantly push to be allowed to do things by themselves. The staff let them try, but stand by to rescue them if they become confused.

Recently one of the men wanted to do his own shopping. House manager Patricia LaBella helped him organize his list and allowed him 15 minutes to complete his purchases.

"At the end of the time, I went in and found him still in the second aisle, hopelessly confused," LaBella said. "You and I can go to the store with a list that isn't organized in the order of the aisles, and our brain will do the organizing. They can't."

"Because of the brain injury, they lack insight," Ditty said. "They don't think they have any problems. All day long, we hear 'what am I doing here? why do I have to do this?' We have to explain over and over how the skills of the Livonia house. All procedures resemble as closely as possible a real-life work situation. The men are paid simulated paychecks, from which they do their budgeting — including the monthly expenses of a house or apartment which they select from a real estate book. The simulations have enough of the reality of life that real-life problems crop up.

Three of the men once decided to share their imaginary apartment. But in a matter of a few months, their budgets were all out of whack. One of them had been spending all his money on other things and hadn't made any rent payments at all.

The staff deal with such situations by bringing real-life type penalties to bear. One man, in spite of many lessons about the basic food groups, continued to budget only $4 a week for food.

Instead of lecturing him, the staff sent him a notice that he now had a nutritional deficiency which had caused him to have a fainting spell, which in turn required a trip to the doctor and two days off from work. They then docked him two days on his simulated paycheck.

"And you have to remember that this man was operating at a high level," Ditty said. "But if you repeat (a lesson) often enough, it may be retained."

Very few of the brain-injured are restored to a normal life. Of the few whose doctors certify that they may return to work, more than a third lose their jobs within months. By the end of a year, Ditty said, many of the rest are out of work.

The problem is that the brain-injured lack insight and awareness into their problems. They tend to believe that they are functioning well, even in the face of evidence to the contrary. They suffer short-term memory loss. They also frequently say and do inappropriate things and have temper tantrums. The personality problems make them hard to live with.

Friends drift away. Married clients experience a high divorce rate. Family roles are reversed. A wife must now take care of her husband, make decisions for him, read the menu and cut the meat when they go out to a restaurant. He probably can't get along with his children.

"He's not a spouse any more, he's another child," Ditty said. "It's infantilizing for him."

"Their families feel so much guilt. But family members can't be 24-hour therapists."

It was these problems that prompted Ditty and Lynch to open the clinic and residences. "There was something missing between release from the hospital and return to the community," Ditty said. "But we continue working with the hospitals so our clients can maintain contact with familiar therapists."

Ditty and Lynch chose to emphasize the work environment because that is what their clients hoped to return to. "The basic work skills are generic skills," Ditty said. "Can you pay attention? Can you work at the same speed your peers can?"

Clients start out at an entry level and are "promoted" to more complex tasks, with simulated paychecks to match. Then small glitches, criticisms and pressures are added, so the clients can practice coping under less-than-perfect conditions.

The practice and repetition have enabled some of the residents to take classes at the local community college or jobs at semi-supervised projects. But, although many of them were functioning at high levels, with jobs at management level, none have been able to reach that level again.

"You'll have a former honor student doing third-grade level work," Ditty said. "He may never return to work. Forty-five percent of them have been placed in an entry level job — that leaves a huge percentage who can't go back to anything."

The work environments have turned out to be an excellent measure of performance. "How they perform in the clinic is exactly how they perform in the community," he said.

There is hope for the traumatically brain-injured. With long-term, repetitive treatment, there is usually substantial improvement, according to Ditty. But he keeps returning to the same message, one that many victims of brain injuries heeded too late: Don't drink and drive.

Cub scouting open to first-graders

Beginning Sept. 1, boys who are 6 years old will have the opportunity to become active in cub scouting as a result of the Expanded Cub Scout Program.

Membership requirements will be based on grade in school rather than age, which has been the primary membership requirement since scouting's inception. Age, however, will be retained as a backup requirement.

This fall, membership requirements will be moved to first grade for Tiger Cubs and second grade for Cub Scouts. Call 897-1965.

Trainer Kathi Kempf looks on as Paul Hicks, 28, demonstrates assembling a Bendix bicycle brake. The 16 parts require 26 steps and 150 discrete movements to assemble; learning the task requires consistent training methods and as many as several hundred repetitions — especially when the learner is partially paralyzed on one side, as Hicks is. Hicks was injured in a car accident in 1981 and moved to the house in Livonia to be closer to his family.

Census Bureau to survey area households starting Sept. 2

Local representatives of the U.S. Census Bureau will revisit selected area households beginning Sept. 2 to conduct its Survey of Income and Program Participation (SIPP).

SIPP is a major nationwide continuing survey introduced in the fall of 1983. It is one of the nation's largest household surveys with about 30,000 households participating.

The Census Bureau publishes periodic reports providing information from the survey. Subjects covered include jobs and earnings, the economic effects of unemployment, disability, and retirement, how taxes affect personal spending and participation in programs such as Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid, and food stamps.

Information from SIPP helps policy makers and administrators determine how well government programs are serving the public and how changes in programs and policies will affect the public.

Prime Time for senior citizens

Helping older adults cope with grief

By Marian Trainor

It was a long and happy marriage, one in which two people had grown close together as the years went by. They had gone through good times and bad. Looking back it seemed as though the joys had outweighed the troubles. They had their differences but none that were serious enough to change their feelings for each other. In fact, it seemed as they grew older those differences became fewer. Adjustments and compromises had finally settled into mutual agreement. So in tune were they, that oftentimes decisions could be made without discussions. Each knew what the other would decide. They were in perfect accord.

Even so, because she valued his opinion, she would turn to him for an answer to a problem. She knew that it pleased him for her to ask and that is what their daily life had come to — pleasing each other. It was not only in the daily routine of life that they turned to each other. They liked to take drives together, shop and go out to dinner as a special treat. They always went early because of the special prices from 4 to 6. They spent many evenings watching television, laughing and enjoying the same programs. Sometimes they would take in a movie, before five, because after that time the admission went up.

They liked going to movies, not only because they were fans, but because it made them feel young again. Their courtship had progressed in stages on trips to the movies. Even now they sometimes held hands just as they did when the world was filled with glory and each day a dawn of delight, because they were in love.

And so it went, a daily routine, shared pleasures and the grateful realization that love, peace and tranquility hovered like a benediction over the home they had made.

They had weathered the battering waves of time and were safely anchored in a cove, safe from all storms. Serenely they looked across the horizon to years together.

But no one lives in a time warp. Time is a beach of shifting sands and one wave can wash in and wipe out anyone's dream.

And so it was. One day he was gone and she was left alone to live in what was once a haven, free from life's buffets but now was a barren empty existence.

It had been so sudden — one minute they were laughing and talking and the next he lay prostrate. Life's fragile thread had been cut.

What to do? Where to turn? Who would she talk to? Who would listen to her? Terror haunted her as she found herself looking for him, setting the table for two, asking a question and waiting for an answer. She became almost immobile, so weighted down was she with grief.

And yet, a small voice of reason kept nudging. "I am not the only wife to lose a husband," she told herself. "Others have suffered that loss. They survived and so must I. He would be disappointed in me if I didn't."

Gradually she came back to living a life, not the same as before, but a courageous try at building a new one, all the time sustained by the memories of what had been and how lucky she was that they were such happy ones.

It was not easy. Pushing back grief never is. But it can be reckoned with if the bereaved can get some help in dealing with it. Realizing that there are many who need help, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan is offering a new program, "Healing and Growing Through Grief," to help older adults cope more effectively with grief.

The program helps older adults realize that there is a natural cycle that must be gone through before they are ready to begin life alone. Those who refuse to go through the steps will find that problems arise not from the grief itself, but from the avoidance of grief.

The program begins with a film that shows how older people have come to accept their loss and how they have begun to live again.

Donna O'Toole, in cooperation with WJBK, Channel 2, created the documentary. Donna is a writer, teacher and consultant specializing in loss, grief and growth counseling.

She has experienced grief and knows the hurt, but she believes that it can be turned into a source for learning, challenge and growth. She has been through a divorce, the death of an infant daughter and a son who died at 21 of a long-term chronic illness. She says that through her losses, she has been moved to a deep sense of spiritual wonder and connectedness to all.

Along with the film comes an uplifting book. Each page begins with a comforting quote, such as "The soul would have no rainbow if the eyes had not tears," (author unknown).

In the booklet she explains how understanding grief can make it less frightening and she outlines the common patterns of grief.

She also describes reactions which an individual might experience and mistake as being caused by something other than grief. They can be physical, emotional or behavioral. The list is long and comprehensive, and in case you are worried about such symptoms, reassuring.

There is another list containing helpful suggestions designed to help people help themselves in times of grief. And finally there is a baker's dozen of hints on how you can help others who are grieving. Most grieving people do not need professional help — they need a friend.

The film and booklet are available to senior citizens through The Blue 2 Health Express, which takes the presentation to senior citizen centers in the tri-county area. The Blue 2 Health Express is a mobile program developed two years ago for senior citizen centers in the Detroit metropolitan area.

An important feature of the program is the counselor who goes out with it. The counselor is a senior citizen who has gone through a period of training at Oakland University.

After the film is shown, she elicits audience reaction. If the audience is reluctant to talk, the counselor will begin the discussion by relating some incident in her own life when she has had to deal with grief. Encouraged, the audience opens up and out of the comments comes help and reassurance to others.

This program is the second one offered by Blue Cross. The first, "Coping with Change in Later Years," focuses on the stress that comes with aging and the changing relationship within the family and outside world.

Senior groups may reserve either program by calling Cathy Moxham at 225-0211.

Blue Cross also brings seniors other health education programs, including the Brown Bag Prescription Drug Program, which educates older adults on the safe use of prescription drugs; an introductory course in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), and nutrition education.

Two speak out at tax hearing

Grosse Pointe's Board of Education hearing on next year's tax rate only drew two speakers Monday, Aug. 18. Only one of the two talked specifically about school taxes.

One Farms homeowner opened the 8 p.m. hearing by telling the board he hoped it wouldn't interpret June's millage election win as a signal to declare "open season on taxpayers in Grosse Pointe."

The system is proposing a 4.9 percent average tax increase for December bills to fund the $42 million spending plan this school year. The tax increase will mean residents with homes worth $100,000 will pay an extra $80 in school taxes this year.

That amount may vary, however, depending on the increase in assessment in a given community. Although Grosse Pointe property values increased an average of 5.2 percent, the true increase varied from city to city, according to Christian Fenton, director of business affairs.

Armand Carpentier, who said he'd lived in the Farms for more than 30 years, told the board "it strikes me strange you would talk about an increase when I came here expecting to hear about a reduction."

Enrollment had fallen, the number of buildings had dropped, yet spending and taxes continue to increase, Carpentier said. Residents of the school district living on fixed incomes are being forced to leave because they can no longer pay the property taxes, he added.

A second resident, who identified herself as Mrs. Smith because she claimed her children had been retaliated against when she had spoken out previously, said she returned to Michigan recently and has "just been shocked and appalled to find . . . the outrageous taxes of Michigan."

Property tax rates in this state have increased six-fold since last she was here, while taxes in California had been controlled through amendments to the state a privacy fence, has stated that he wishes to prosecute, Police Chief Robert Ferber said.

"I'm asking for a measurement and photographs to take to the prosecutor," Ferber said.

According to the complaint, there were 12 teenagers skating on the ramp from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Cawley said there are usually only six boys and that they are only permitted to use the ramp between noon and 8 p.m., with time off for dinner.

The ramp is built over a cement pad from a three-car garage that Cawley had torn down a month ago. She is still in a dispute with the city over the removal of the debris from the garage demolition and has charged that the city treats its less affluent residents unfairly.

She said she wants to bring the question of the skateboard ramp to the city council for consideration, but was told there will not be a meeting before the removal date. She was trying Monday to get a stay or the removal order to Sept. 8, the date of the next council meeting.

Cawley has not been fined for the ramp. Violation is an order for removal only.

"If she removes it," Defoe said, "that's the end of it."

Herold McC. Deason to investigate whether the city could legally make a contribution to a non-profit organization. Its contribution was also predicated on whether the four other Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods made their contributions.

Park councilman Vernon Ausherman noted that historically Grosse Pointe Shores did not contribute to such programs. He asked Reedus whether the program would fly if there were one community that did not participate.

Reedus said that FLEC had several options if the money needed to get the $21,000 in matching funds were not granted from the communities. She said if one community did not participate the center could take the money from elsewhere in its budget, hold a fund raiser or seek funding from sources other than the cities.

Deason said he would give a full report to the city at its next regular meeting. He noted his counterparts in the other communities are also researching this question, and would want time to confer with them.

Ausherman was the most vocal in support of the program.

He said juveniles sent to the Wayne County Juvenile Court get "lost in the labyrinth and limbo" of the county juvenile court system. He also said citizens from the Pointes pay large sums in the form of county taxes and there is little they get back in the form of Having it all — so who really wants it?

By Nancy Parmenter

Doesn't it seem like only a short time ago that women were being told they could have it all? Features touting the New Woman blared from every newspaper and magazine: The woman of the '80s had figured out how to get everything she always wanted. All it took was a little work.

What happened? All of a sudden there's a rash of articles telling us how to deal with not having it all. (This is called goal-setting. Were our eyes bigger than our stomach? "Yes," says Dr. Arleen LaBella, co-founder of Professional Resources, Inc., a training institute in Reston, Va., and one of the expert proponents of knowing your own limits. LaBella, the author of "Personal Power: The guide for today's working woman," will speak on "Overcoming the Superwoman Syndrome" at a Sept. 11 conference sponsored by Bon Secours Hospital.

"Today's woman is a pioneer in juggling a personal and professional life," LaBella said. "She has no guidelines to measure whether it's working — she only finds out after she's in it whether it makes sense."

Too often, she finds out it doesn't make sense. Women misguidedly thought that men had it all (the only reason it looks that way is that men have a support system at home) and thought they could do the same. And now that more people are realizing that having it all isn't what it was cracked up to be, comes a flood of newspaper and magazine stories telling women how to organize their time so the new lifestyle will work better.

"That's just a band-aid on the problem," LaBella said in a telephone interview last week. "There's no such thing as having it all. We need to learn what we love and value. We need the courage to establish priorities."

LaBella, a working mother of a five-year-old, says her message is "heartfelt" and means more to her audiences because she is living the same problems they are.

At first, women are "like kids in a candy store," with a wide range of choices. Like kids, they take as much candy as they can hold. But the time comes when they realize that what they've selected takes a lot more time and energy than they planned.

"So what do you do? You stay up later and get up earlier, make lists, try harder, and you end up burned out," LaBella said. "You suffer from lowered self-esteem, despair, a short fuse with your family. You lose your sense of joy in life."

Women respond to that feeling in several ways. Some drop out of the work force. Some start their own businesses where they can set their own expectations and limits. Some look for that meaningful part-time job (practically impossible to find in a society that doesn't value part-time work, LaBella said.)

But many women just keep plugging along, figuring that's the price they have to pay. "They think success means wearing yourself out," LaBella said. "And women continue to feel inadequate. The feel they have to prove themselves. They don't want to let anybody down. For some reason, we feel like we crawled under the circus tent without a ticket, as though we are somehow not entitled, that we have to prove and overprove."

It is when women reach the re-assessment and restructuring phase that LaBella's expertise comes into play. Her program is geared toward "making something happen."

"Women have to learn to identify their strengths and successes," she said. "One of the internal barriers women face is that they tend to wait (for promotions, for example). They tend to identify with luck rather than their own skills. They need to start speaking up for themselves and recognize that they bring a special voice to the workplace."

The special talents that women have been socialized to show are sharing, cooperation, collaboration and teamwork, LaBella said. Increased technology in the workplace puts these qualities at a premium. In fact, team-building and collaborating for creativity are the focus of the consulting and training work LaBella's firm does — with both men and women.

LaBella believes that Americans' obsession with perfectionism actually gets in the way of success — and that women are more obsessive than men. Her iconoclastic advice:

"Not everything in life is worth doing well. The wisdom is to know where to put your energies."

LaBella's talk is only one part of the Womens Health Day forum to be held 1-3 p.m. at Thomas Crystal Gardens in Mount Clemens. For information or registration, call 343-1665.

Artistic and management principles merge for MOT's prima donna of the business office

By Elsa Frohman

Melodee DuBois' business is the nuts and bolts of creation. As vice president for administration for the Michigan Opera Theater, she provides the fuel that allows the artistic vehicle to become airborne.

"It (the opera) must be run like a business," DuBois said. "But an affinity for the art form is essential. Revenues must meet expenses, but there is a wonderful flexibility in this type of organization. The people involved make it worthwhile."

DuBois became a Grosse Pointe resident at the beginning of the summer when she married her sweetheart, James Huntley, an associate producer for Corporate Public Affairs for Ford Motor Company, and they moved into a home in Grosse Pointe Park.

DuBois spent the summer settling herself, her husband and her four cats into their new home, without missing a beat in the rhythm of her administrative duties at the opera. The couple plan a belated honeymoon during September.

DuBois is enjoying her new lifestyle in Grosse Pointe.

"I love the quiet," she said. "We've been taking long walks along the lakeshore. I love being able to walk around." DuBois previously lived in Detroit, where she said she always took her car when she left home.

Though Huntley now works in the automobile industry, he was the music director for WQRS-FM radio when he met DuBois. "He has a master's degree in music theory," DuBois said. "The strong bond between us is our love for music."

Loving music is the first requirement for a career in opera management. DuBois holds a graduate degree in arts management — in many ways the equivalent of an MBA, tailored to arts organization.

Managing an opera company requires a special sensitivity to the people involved.

"You must work with the diverse personalities involved in producing what goes on stage," DuBois said. In the day-to-day operations of the MOT, DuBois is Artistic Director David DiChera's lieutenant, handling the details. She supplies the common sense to balance the creative aspirations of the artists in the organization.

"It (the opera) must be run like a business. But an affinity for the art form is essential. Revenues must meet expenses, but there is a wonderful flexibility in this type of organization."

— Melodee DuBois

"A few years ago, someone suggested we could make a lot of money by having Paverotti at Cobo Hall," DuBois said. "But you have to consider what the acoustics are, what the environment is and would the performer even consider doing it. You have to have solid business skills, but sensitivity to the art form is imperative or it doesn't jell."

DuBois has been with MOT in a full-time capacity for about a year. Previously, she worked with the performing arts department at the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Campfire Council and the Detroit Grand Opera Association.

"I will never work a nine to five job," DuBois said. "That's a given. But that's true for most of us (in the arts). There's nothing like when the curtain goes up and you played part in it."

DuBois has seen a great deal of growth in the opera since she started consulting for the organization (several years before she joined the staff).

"When I started, the budget was $2.3 million. It's $4.7 million now," she said. "This is the 10th largest among the opera companies in the country."

The struggle for all arts organizations is to make ends meet.

"Of the 100 top opera companies in the nation, 50 of them are probably operating at a deficit," DuBois said. "We have to work to make the opera more productive. To maintain our position and to be worthy, every facet of the operation must perform to the best of its ability."

MOT recently acquired a computer system that DuBois says will help the opera streamline its operations.

"This has really catapulted our growth potential," she said. "It will put our mailing and ticketing in our control."

Saving money is always on the top of the agenda for MOT.

"It's a continual challenge," DuBois said. "Costs are up and many of them are out of our control. There are sets, unions and performers. The pressures are greater (for financial economy) than in many corporations. We have to operate efficiently so we don't fall into a deficit."

But working for MOT isn't all ledgers and adding machines.

"We have to run a tight operation to present the best possible art to the public," DuBois said. "But there is also the camaraderie. You wouldn't find that in a corporation. Most people who gravitate to the arts would say the same. We have a very special working environment."

Melodee DuBois has the job of keeping the Michigan Opera Theater on sound financial footing. She and her new husband, James Huntley, moved into Grosse Pointe Park in June.

Public gardens are gentle respite from city life

A recent visitor from England expressed the opinion that Grosse Pointe seemed like one vast garden situated on the shore of the beautiful lake. A nice thought. And very nearly true. How fortunate we are to be also surrounded by many beautiful public gardens within easy driving distance. Late August is a good time for visits to some of them.

The lovely Cranbrook Gardens at 380 Lone Pine Road, Bloomfield Hills, surround the house of the founders, Mr. and Mrs. George G. Booth, and include sunken formal gardens, sculpture courts, fountains and cascades, terraces overlooking the lake, meadows and wooded walks, a Greek theater and a pool.

The gardens are open every day from May 1 to Oct. 31, but during August you may take a tour of the house as well.

Nearby Belle Isle has the Henry A. Johnson Memorial Gardens and the Anna Scripps Whitcomb Conservatory. Constantly changing blooms as well as a permanent collection of tropical plants and orchids promise a feast for the eyes on any visit.

The Moross House, 1460 E. Jefferson headquarters of the Detroit Garden Center, offers a garden in the manner of the 1840s. Much research went into the planning of this garden and historical accuracy prevails so that the garden is appropriate for the lovingly restored old house.

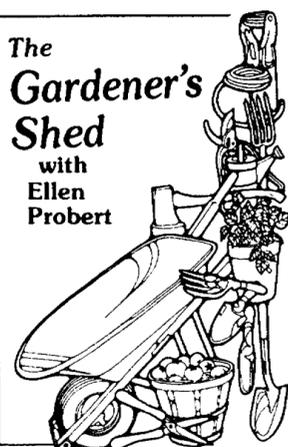

Just across the Detroit River, too, the many lovely public gardens in and near Windsor are worth a visit.

The spectacular gardens at the Henry Ford estate at Fairlane on the campus of the University of Michigan, Dearborn, and the equally spectacular gardens at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores, both designed by famed Landscape Architect Jens Jensen, are really must-sees. Both of these beautiful mansions are open for tours as well.

Clara Ford led hundreds of the country's Garden Clubs through the gardens at Fairlane when she was president of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association.

And the farmland setting of Meadowbrook Hall on I-75, 25 miles north of Detroit, has rose gardens, topiary and woodland paths. This enormous house, too, has tours.

The Michigan State University College of Agriculture and Natural Resources has revealed some exciting news. Plans are being made for a new horticultural garden at the university which will replace the present one and will be much larger totaling 25,000 square feet, allowing more room for test plots. It will be a constantly changing, working garden.

The Gardener's Shed with Ellen Probert

The old garden will be taken care of by the department of campus parks and planning, and will be transformed into lawns embellished with the existing trees and shrubs. All these plans will become a reality within the next two years.

During the hot weeks of August air conditioners become a way of life for some of us, and we all become familiar with the transition between an air-conditioned house or car and the reality of the hot sun outside. But there is a side benefit to be gained from your dehumidifier or air conditioner. The water that they draw out of the air is wonderful for watering house plants.

Plants don't really like air conditioners. In the summer we like our homes at about 70 degrees — and so do our plants — but air conditioners draw the humidity out of the air, and that is what harms the plants. But if you were to put 40 percent moisture into a room for the sake of the plants, the air conditioner would wilt.

The Michigan Dahlia Association promises spectacular blooms at its show on Aug. 30 and 31 at Westland Mall at Warren and Wayne Roads in Westland, and on Sept. 6 and 7 at the Southeastern Michigan Dahlia Society Club will host a giant Dahlia show at the Tel-12 Mall, 12 Mile and Telegraph Road, in Southfield.

All this may be a delightful preview of some fancy chrysanthemum shows which are to be featured in late September and October. More about chrysanthemums will appear later on in this column.

Did you ever wonder about the round stone which forms the hub of the wheel-shaped Trial Gardens which the Grosse Pointe Garden Center maintains at the War Memorial? It has a most fascinating history.

The earliest records show that a mill was built at Presque Isle by one of the first settlers in the area. It was used by farmers and Indians residing on both sides of the river who brought grain to be ground. The first recorded mill on this site was erected about 1750 and was built out of stone.

Many legends grew up about the mill. At various times it was deserted for a time and was said to be haunted, and many Indians considered the ground to be sacred and haunted by the spirits of the massacred Indians.

In 1846 the property was owned by Magloire Beaufait who improved it by repairing the mill and adding a log house and barn. In 1865 the mill was torn down and a large house was built using the stones from the mill.

In 1876 the Windmill Point Land Company was formed and the area named for the old mill whose foundations could still be seen. In 1916 the Windmill Point Land Company subdivided the area and developed the lake front after filling in the land on either side of the point where the mill had been, and the last remains of the foundations were removed.

The millstone itself is of a very fine, hard granite that is found only in France. Just when this stone was brought here is a mystery, but it was undoubtedly before 1763 when this was still French territory. It weighs nearly two tons.

Descendants of the family which operated the mill in the early days and who pushed the stone into the lake to keep the British from using the mill when they attacked Detroit still live in Grosse Pointe.

The stone was recovered from the water after the War of 1812 was over and purchased by the Lauhoff family with whom it remained until presented to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial by George Lauhoff in 1952. The last family to own and operate the mill were the LaForest family whose descendants still live in this area.

Question of the week: Are all varieties of elm trees prone to Dutch elm disease, or are there some which are resistant if not immune?

Answer: Hybrid elms (Ulmus Americana) is very resistant to Dutch elm disease.

A noted authority on the history of Detroit's architecture, Farrell will lead participants backwards in time, from the Omni, Detroit's newest hotel, to the original heart of Detroit. The same lecture will be offered on three different dates following noon lunches at 333 East: Monday, Sept. 22; Saturday, Sept. 27; or Monday, Oct. 6. The price for the luncheon and walking tour is $28.50. Reservations are necessary. Telephone 333 East at 222-7700 for reservations or information.

Farrell, associate professor of art history at the University of Windsor, serves as Adjunct Education Curator at the Detroit Institute of Arts and the Staten Island Institute of Arts and Science, Staten Island, New York. An elegant variation on a barbecue celebration

As Labor Day approaches, most of us are gearing up for that last barbecue of the year. But a barbecue doesn't have to mean paper plates and silly aprons. Try this china and crystal version from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Menu:

- Plum Sauced Barbecued Chicken
- Crunchy Barbecue Rice
- Green Beans in Sherried Mushroom Sauce
- Pineapple-Beet Mold
- Special Hot Rolls
- Flaming Fruit Delight

Plum Sauced Barbecued Chicken

1/4 cup plum jam or preserves
1/4 cup finely chopped chutney
1/4 cup chili sauce
1/4 cup light brown sugar, firmly packed
1/4 tsp. garlic powder (optional)
1/4 cup cider vinegar
1/4 cup minced onion
1/4 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
4-1/2 pounds chicken parts
2 Tbsp. finely minced fresh parsley
Combine plum jam, chutney, chili sauce, garlic powder, brown sugar, vinegar, onion, and Worcestershire sauce. Stir well to blend in small saucepan. Cover and simmer for about 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Brush chicken pieces with sauce. Place on grill and cook, brushing with sauce and turning occasionally. Grill 15 to 20 minutes on each side or until chicken is fork-tender and cooked through. Serve to six, sprinkled with minced parsley.
Calories about 488 per serving. Cholesterol about 65 mgs. per 3-1/3 oz serving, if skin is not eaten.

Crunchy Barbecue Rice

Toasted, nutty wheat germ adds flavor and texture enrichment to this hearty barbecue go-along, plus a zesty, nutritional bonus.
1/2 cup long-grain converted white rice
1 cup water
1/2 tsp. salt
1 cup minced parsley
1 cup grated skim milk Black Diamond cheese
3/4 cup wheatgerm

1/2 cup skim milk
1/2 cup minced green onion
1/4 cup egg substitute, well beaten, or one large egg
3 Tbsp. melted margarine
1/2 tsp. dried marjoram
Heat rice, water and salt to boiling. Reduce heat, cover tightly, and simmer 25 minutes or until water is absorbed. Remove from heat.
Stir in remaining ingredients.

Spoon into 1-1/2-quart oiled casserole. Bake in preheated 375-degree oven for about 30 minutes. Garnish with diagonally sliced green onions. Makes six servings.
Calories per serving about 382. Cholesterol 0.

Green Beans in Sherried Mushroom Sauce

A glamorous company dish that will bring you compliments a-plenty.
2 pounds fresh green beans
2 Tbsp. margarine
1/4 cup onion, minced
1/2 pound mushrooms, thinly sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
2 Tbsp. flour
1/2 cup beef broth, heated
1/2 cup evaporated skimmed milk
2 Tbsp. dry sherry
Salt and pepper to taste
Wash beans, snip off the stems and tips. Place beans in steamer basket and cook until crisp-tender, about seven minutes. Remove to saucepan and keep warm.
Melt margarine in medium-sized saucepan. Saute onion and garlic until onion is soft, about five minutes. Add mushrooms and saute about five minutes more until limp.

Remove pan from heat. Stir in flour, salt and pepper. Slowly stir in broth and skimmed milk until sauce is smooth. Return to heat and simmer until the sauce thickens. Add sherry and cook two minutes more. Pour mixture over beans and toss gently. Turn into large serving dish. If desired, garnish with toasted almonds. Makes eight servings.
Calories about 90 per serving. Cholesterol — a trace.

Pineapple-Beet Mold

1 can (16 ounces) shoestring beets
1 can (8-3/4 ounces) crushed pineapple
2 pkg. low-cal lemon gelatin
2 cups boiling water
2 Tbsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. grated fruit ginger
Drain beets and pineapple, reserving 1-1/2 cups combined liquid. Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add reserved liquid, lemon juice and grated ginger. Mix well. Chill until partially set. Fold in drained beets and pineapple. Pour into well oiled six-cup mold. Chill until set. Serve with horseradish-spiked mayonnaise (optional). Makes 10 servings.

Special Hot Rolls

Wickedly delicious — these light as a feather rolls are a cross between a flaky biscuit and a yeast roll. What's more, they can be made, baked and served in less than 20 minutes. They make any meal extraordinary.
2 cups self-rising flour
1/4 cup mayonnaise

Pride of the Pointes

Three brothers graduate

Calories about 101 per roll. Cholesterol less than 1 mg.

Racking your brain and thumbing the cookbooks for an unusual dessert? Here is a truly dramatic one that everyone will adore.
6 cooking apples
2 Tbsp. chopped nuts
3 Tbsp. crushed pineapple
3 Tbsp. peaches
3 Tbsp. dates or figs
5 Tbsp. light brown sugar
Water
1/2 cup sugar
1 Tbsp. cinnamon
3 Tbsp. confectioners' sugar
1/2 cup cinnamon candies

Bake in lightly oiled casserole with 1/4-inch water in preheated 375-degree oven for about 30 minutes or until apples test done. Sprinkle tops with the 1/2 cup of sugar which has been mixed with the cinnamon.
Heat red hot candies in 1/4 cup water until dissolved. Pour over apples. Sprinkle with the confectioners' sugar. Heat Kirsch, pour over the apples and ignite. Serve aflame. Makes six servings.

That's some sucker

Steve Jamerino and son Mike, 6, right, show off Mike's catch at the 38th annual Farms-City Fishing Rodeo at Grosse Pointe Farms Pier Park last Saturday. At least 150 kids participated in the popular event. When they were done catching fish for an hour that morning, everyone headed over to the cook shack for some free hot dogs and pop and the day's big attraction: prizes. Below, Katherine Kleinert, 5, of the Farms, checks on the possibility of a nibble while her unidentified fishing buddy looks like he has one. (Photos by Peter A. Salinas)

The only game in town is also the best one

This spring, several parents of local Little League baseball players, apparently angered at — among other things — poor coaching, inequities on team rosters and what they felt were biased All-Star selections — voiced their disapproval through letters to the editor and telephone calls to the Grosse Pointe News.

As a newspaper, we have the responsibility to provide a public forum for our readers: that's our letters to the editor column. There we printed letters which dealt with complaints about poor coaching and about "unfair" All-Star selections.

I really didn't think much about either letter; choosing instead to rely on my experience, which has taught me that you can't please everybody and these were just a few examples of some very displeased folks.

Then I got a couple of calls from some equally disgruntled folks... people who said they didn't have kids on sports teams, but had watched other people's children play and from this, had observed that the system wasn't all that they thought it should be.

So, I started making phone calls. And the result is a two-part epic — which begins next week and continues the following Thursday — on the way the youth sports programs in Grosse Pointe operate.

Now, I've been covering sports in Grosse Pointe for nearly seven years and in that time, I thought I knew just about everything about the Neighborhood Club, the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association, Grosse Pointe Soccer Association, Pointe Girls' Soccer Association, the Grosse Pointe Red Barons and the Little League organizations in each city.

But I learned a lot that surprised me, particularly about the variety of methods used by Little League to choose teams and pick All-Stars, and especially about the philosophies employed by each sports organization.

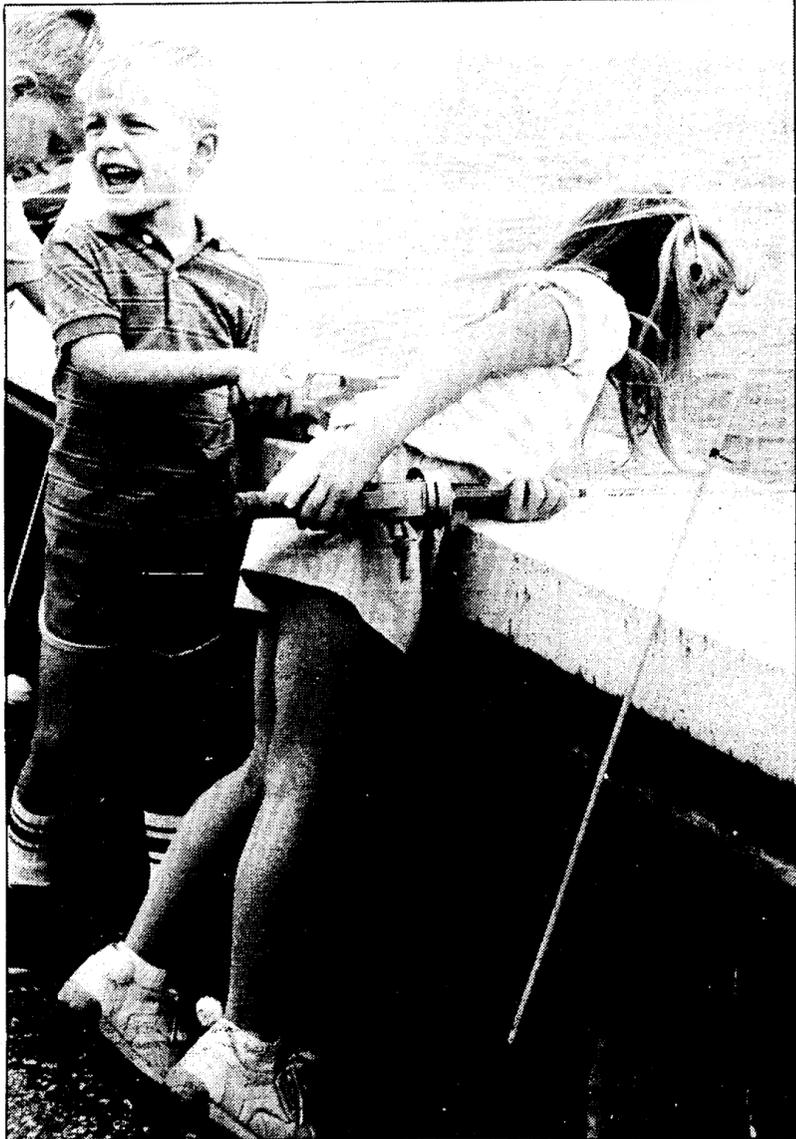

I found out some pretty run-of-the-mill facts, like fees charged and how tryouts are conducted; but I also had a chance to ask the folks in charge — the league presidents — to address some of the questions posed in the letters written by those angry folks.

The responses I got, although each league official declined to speak about specific cases, convinced me that the only game in town — Grosse Pointe's sports programs — is the best game in town.

What I found out is that we're pretty lucky here in Grosse Pointe. Thousands of dollars and even more hours are spent to provide some pretty darn good sports programs for this community's children. There are some beautiful fields, excellent equipment, and most importantly, some dedicated coaches, managers and league presidents to administer the programs.

Oh, these folks are by no means perfect. There are kids who don't get to play as much as they should. And sometimes, not everyone who deserves to be on an All-Star team or travel team gets picked. There are problems and inequities. And parents — rightly so — can and do complain. After all, there must be checks and balances for programs in which children are involved.

Boating and alcohol

BOAT/U.S. Foundation, a national, non-profit boating safety organization affiliated with BOAT/U.S., does research into boating accidents and fatalities. The Foundation published three million pamphlets called "America's Cup?" this season, stating these sobering facts: More than 1,200 people die in boating accidents every year. And, over 50 percent of these fatalities involve alcohol.

No Coast Guardsman in our area would venture a guess as to the percentage of alcohol-related accidents in the Detroit River-Lake St. Clair-St. Clair River, but representatives from three nearby Coast Guard stations agreed that alcohol-related incidents are definitely a problem.

Petty Officer Turner of the St. Clair Shores Coast Guard said incidents involving alcohol occur every weekend in the south-central portion of Lake St. Clair. A recent accident took the pleasure out of pleasure boating and sent several boaters to the hospital after their boat crashed into a seawall. Alcohol was involved, Turner said.

The U.S. Coast Guard does not conduct breathalyzer tests as local police do when confronting drivers who are suspected of operating an automobile while under the influence of alcohol. If a boat operator is cited for negligent operation of his craft, and if the officer believes the operator is intoxicated, the boater may be detained and turned over to the sheriff's department, where a breathalyzer test will be administered. The offender may then be arrested, jailed and/or fined.

Boatswain's Mate Henrikson of the St. Clair Flats Coast Guard, said the U.S. Coast Guard is in the research and development stage concerning the problems of alcohol and boating. Henrikson said statistics are not yet available about the problem, but added, "All boaters should be aware that sun, wind, and the motion of the water intensify alcohol's effect. A measured amount of alcohol consumed aboard a moving boat will have triple the effect as the same amount of alcohol consumed at home in one's own living room."

The BOAT/U.S. Foundation pamphlet calls these effects "boating stressors," and notes "Research shows that four hours' exposure to noise, vibration, sun, glare, wind and other motion on the water produces a kind of 'boater's hypnosis' or fatigue, which slows reaction time almost as much as if you were legally drunk. Adding alcohol to boating stress factors intensifies their effects — each drink multiplies your accident risk."

One drink (12 oz. of beer or 4 oz. of 12 percent wine or 1 1/2 oz. of 86-proof liquor) is enough to impair the judgement of a person weighing 100-130 pounds, according to research; two drinks for a person 130-160 pounds; for someone over 160 pounds — three drinks is a dangerous amount.

Henrikson added, "On a boat, when things go wrong, they go wrong FAST." A clear head is necessary to make quick decisions.

In addition, a disorientation called "caloric labyrinthitis" can occur in an intoxicated person when water enters his ears. Should an intoxicated boater fall overboard (more likely because alcohol interferes with balance, an essential skill aboard a moving craft) he can become disoriented and swim downward instead of upward to the water's surface. This may explain accidents in which good swimmers who have been drinking drown for no apparent reason after they fall into the water.

Intoxicated or not, a trouble spot is lurking for boat operators — especially inexperienced boaters — unfamiliar with the area near the entrance to the south channel of the St. Clair River. The St. Clair Flats canal and the St. Clair cutoff meet at the tip of Seaway Island, marked by a flashing white light, No. 2. The light sits on the slender tip of a point of land that is part of Seaway Island. Because of the high water, the tip of Seaway Island is under water — but not by much. Boatwain's Mate Henrikson said 90 boats have gone aground on that submerged point this season. The depth of the water over the tip of the island varies from 1 1/2 feet to 4 feet, he said. "I've seen a skiff get hung up on it. Yet a few feet away, a 36-footer will pass over it untouched." So, don't try to cut between the St. Clair Flats Canal and the St. Clair Cutoff without rounding Light No. 2.

Plans are underway to add a red buoy, designated No. 2A, as soon as possible, he said.

C & C 35 champions crowned

The 11th annual C & C 35 Women's Offshore Sailing Championship was held last Sunday on Lake St. Clair. The event was sponsored by the C & C 35 Association in cooperation with Bayview Yacht Club and the North American 40 Fleet Detroit.

Competing boats were nine C & C 35s and five NA 40s skippered by top Detroit-area female sailors. Weather was variable with 5 to 15 mile per hour winds out of the northeast.

"Pradel," skippered by Midge Kinder and her crack crew out of North Star Sail Club, took the coveted "Bikini Cup." The win gave Pradel the first three-time winner status in the race; crew members included Dawn Riley and Judy Meier. (Riley's family, incidentally, sailed their 36-foot Fred Ford design "Firefly" to Grenada and back when she was just 16).

According to race chairman Rick Grow, the duel between "Walloon," skippered by Debbie Stormes and Tina Grow, and Pradel was a match race all the way around the eight-mile Olympic course. The lead changed four times, with the final margin of 10 seconds.

Third place went to "Rogue," skippered by North Star's Virginia Stuart. Maggie Wake, the only female member of the Mackinac Old Goats Society (25 or more Mackinac races), was first in the NA 40 class, just beating out "Disruption," sailed by Kathy Oswald. Taking third was "Crisis" with a dramatic port-starboard crossing at the finish.

In the other class — C & C 35 with a male tactician — the Rumons' "Scrimshaw" sailed to a win, defeating second place finisher "Shamrock," with Lisa Keys at the helm.

The regatta party at Bayview was attended by the 100 contestants and 100 spectators.

Peggy O'Connor

But as one long-time observer of the youth athletic process in Grosse Pointe said, it's very often the parents who complain the most who, when asked to coach or in other ways help the program, respectfully — and sometimes not-so-respectfully — decline.

The problem, as I see it, is that neither side — the folks who provide the sports programs and the parents who take advantage of it — does the most it can to see that the program succeeds. The youth sports program always have room to improve . . . and parents can always take the extra step to help out and to be a little more accommodating when it comes to understanding when their kid doesn't make an All-Star team or isn't batting lead-off.

Take a look around. Grosse Pointe is special. I've never seen a community that offers so much in the way of youth sports for its kids. Detroit doesn't. St. Clair Shores doesn't. Even Birmingham doesn't.

My suggestions?

We've got to keep working at it. What we've got is good, but it can be better. Little League, the soccer and hockey organizations, the youth sports programs offered by the Neighborhood Club must constantly be on guard, making sure that the best possible sports experience is afforded the community's kids. Sometimes, that means that state championships and All-Star titles might have to be forgotten, tough as that might be to take.

And parents have to make an effort at volunteering more, at understanding that maybe, just maybe, their kid isn't as good as they think he is. But that if he's happy, enjoying being with his friends and learning a skill to boot, maybe that's enough.

Nice finish

The Neighborhood Club's Invaders, who finished 9-3 and were first-time entrants in the state's Special Olympics softball tournament in Midland Aug. 15-16, finished fourth in the tournament's Division I. The boys were originally screened against Division III teams, and elevated into the No. 4 position in Division I. In first round competition on Aug. 15, the Invaders came back from a 16-4 deficit after 1 1/2 innings, to get close before falling 24-20 in six innings. In the consolation round on Aug. 16, the Downriver Whalers

G.P.Y.C. wins coveted Scherer Trophy

Grosse Pointe Yacht Club's Justin Palm and Caitlin Murray took two firsts and a third place finish to capture the J. Otto Scherer Memorial Trophy series held Sunday, Aug. 24, at the Crescent Sail Yacht Club. The victory marked the first win for the G.P.Y.C. in the 23-year history of the popular event for top area sailors between 12 and 18 years of age.

Ideal sailing conditions and a fleet of 10 Flying Junior boats representing five area yacht clubs provided an exciting showcase for all participants to display their best boat handling skills and sportsmanship.

Second place finishers Andrew Den Baas and Dean Balcirak of the Bayview Yacht Club exhibited exceptional ingenuity and skill after an equipment failure in the second race threatened to put them out of the series. Despite falling temporarily to last place, they were able to make sufficient repairs during the course of the race to continue sailing, take a fifth place, and thereby remain in contention for a top spot in the final standings.

Host C.S.Y.C.'s team of Suzanne Scoville and Nate Peterson took 3rd place, a mere 1/4 point behind Den Baas and Balcirak. Bayview's second entry, skippered by Paul Hulsey with Melissa Cavanaugh as crew, finished fourth.

Fifth place went to Matthew Dennis and Bradford Valka of the Detroit Yacht Club, while Robert Cowles and Erik Pavelka, also flying the D.Y.C. burgee, took sixth. The Grosse Pointe Club's entries of Gus Grodzinsky — Patrick Jarvis and Stephanie Vititoe — Jennifer Davies finished seventh and eighth, respectively. Ninth place went to Erik Garr and Eric Deeds of the C.S.Y.C. Sarah Morrow and Matt Moroun representing the G.P.Y.C. finished in the 10th spot.

Past Commodore Herbert Mainwaring chaired the race committee consisting of Mrs. Marie Mainwaring, Commodore Maynard Rupp, Vice Commodore William Strigley, Past Commodore William Herbert, Edwin Boothroyd, William Sadler, Bernard Tonowski, Jo Dan Hartingh and Jody Hartingh.

The series honors the late J. Otto Scherer of the Park for his contributions to the junior sailing program in this area. Mrs. J. Otto Scherer was on hand to present the awards and congratulate all of the participants. "All of you who sailed here today are winners, no matter what your finish place," she commented.

Summer great . . .

. . . great sports photos, that is. And those we ran right away in the Grosse Pointe News' sports section. But because space doesn't always permit us to run all the photos we take — even the cutest, funniest, nicest ones — we usually reserve the last "unofficial" week of the season for the ones we couldn't run before. A visiting West German soccer team had fun and learned about the American brand of soccer at University Liggett in June. Another thing the Germans learned is that American players drink lots of water on hot playing days. But it didn't take this guy (above) too long to pick up that practice.

. . . summer

. . . not as great, but pretty interesting, nevertheless. And because we know how much folks like interesting photos, there's no better time than the last week of summer to show you those photos of summer fun that didn't get in . . . until now.

Mann brings splash, flash to Manhunter

By Marion Trainor

One of the most original and one of the most penetrating, gripping thrillers to be seen on the screen in a long time is "Manhunter." Adapted from Thomas Harris' novel, "Red Dragon" and directed by Michael Mann whose flash and splash directorial style made "Miami Vice" such a hit, "Manhunter" is a taut psycho thriller that puts the viewer right in the middle of the action. The clues are there to be seen and evaluated and to tease. Every move the murderer has made and why is known — even when he will strike again. The question is, where is he?

To answer that question Will Graham (William L. Peterson) is asked to work on the case.

Will is an expert on tracking down psychotic killers but his success comes at a price. He has a peculiar genius for entering the mind of a killer and re-enacting the crime emotionally.

It is a method that enabled him to track down a serial killer previously but in the process Graham slipped over the edge himself and became one with the killer he apprehended. After months of therapy he regains his sanity and is given an early retirement from the police force although he is still a young man. When we meet him he is living in Florida with his wife Molly (Kim Greist) and son, Peter (David Seaman).

Reluctantly, and mindful of what could happen to him again, Graham agrees to work on the case.

The killer, who works on a lunar cycle, has just murdered an entire family, including the pets. Tormented and frenzied, he apparently stalks his victims, cuts them up and performs weird rituals. He leaves behind blood-smeared walls and because he leaves teeth marks on his victims, he is dubbed the "Tooth Fairy."

Graham is a meticulous investigator. He finds clues and fingerprints where no one else thought to look. And as he searches, he begins to mentally pose questions to the killer and to answer them within his own psyche. The programming is beginning. It is a fascinating procedure to watch, made even more so because Graham is a tense, silent man who operates without fear.

"Manhunter" is a film that never rests. It has room in its urgency to give us a feeling what Graham is risking. We see him finding peace with his wife and child in a lovely Florida setting. We go with him on a shopping trip where he chats with his son about the bad things bad men do to people.

Center stage belongs to Peterson in the film, but he is supported by a superb cast. Tom Noonan, as the psycho, gives a controlled appealing performance in his day-to-day activities and then rises to a frenzy of indiscriminate and unspeakable brutality as the mad killer.

The photography is outstanding. In many instances, clean stark scenes contrast boldly with the confusion of the evil mind at work. There is an assertive rock sound track featuring "In-a-Gadda-Da-Vida."

"Manhunter" is a mesmerizing experience and one that is not easily assimilated. It has so many twists and diversions to ponder even after leaving the theater — that is, when you're not looking over your shoulder or checking the calendar for the next full moon.

Sondheim musical to open

The Detroit Center for the Performing Arts will open its 1986-87 season Friday, Aug. 29, with the musical, "Side by Side by Sondheim."

This celebration of the work of Steven Sondheim, who has been called the most adventurous composer working in the musical theater and a genius with lyrics, is a scintillating romp through the songs that Broadway made famous, including musical excerpts from "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," "Company," "Gypsy," "West Side Story," and other Broadway originals.

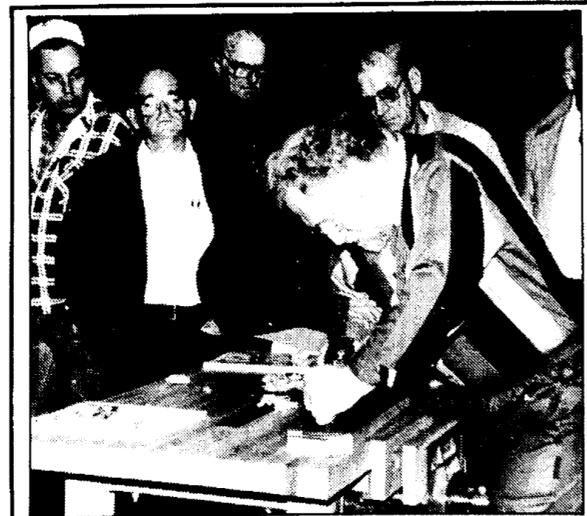

Featured in the musical are Aden Russell, Brian Schultz, Rose Randall, Heidi Anderson, Michele West-ton, Raymond Jordan and Bethany Carpenter.

Housed in the newly-restored, 2,000-seat Eastown Theatre, the Detroit Center for the Performing Arts offers a full season of main-stage productions, as well as tours to schools and group homes and an ambitious theater workshop program.

The Detroit Center for the Performing Arts is located at 8041 Harper at Van Dyke, two blocks north of I-94, and has ample well-lighted parking. Show time is 8:30 p.m. each Friday and Saturday night, Aug. 29 through Sept. 27. Tickets are $8 for general admission, $6 for seniors and students.

For reservations and more information, call 925-7138.

Ford theater schedules comedy

"Nothing But The Truth," the comedy by James Montgomery, will be presented at Henry Ford Museum Theater through Sept. 13.

The plot concerns a young stock broker who bets big money and the heart and hand of his boss's daughter that he can tell "nothing but the truth" for 24 hours.

"Nothing But The Truth" opened on Broadway in 1916. It became so popular that it was followed by two musicals and five films using the same story line. The most memorable movie version starred Bob Hope in 1941.

Performances of "Nothing But The Truth" at Henry Ford Museum Theater are Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $6 each for reserved seats, available daily at the information desk in the entrance to Greenfield Village, at the museum theater box office one hour before each performance, or by calling the reservations center at 271-1620.

A combination dinner and theater package, at $19.25 per person, is also available.

Franklin Village fair

The Franklin Community Association's 42nd annual Labor Day round-up will take place Labor Day, Sept. 1, in historic Franklin Village.

For the sixth year, "Art on the Green" will also be a part of the festivities. This juried art show will feature more than 60 local and out-of-town artists.

The line-up of events begins with the art fair. Then at noon, the biggest little-town parade commences on Franklin Road in the center of the Village. There will also be a midway with many games of chance; the 'greatest' horse show on earth; annual water battle between the fire and police departments; bake sale and contest; garden produce contest; raffle with prizes donated from art-fair artists; and — of course — cuisine de carnival. FCA Annual Labor Day Round-Up promises a day of fun for the entire family!

'Stand by me' is best of the season

By Michael Chapp

Poignant, thoughtful — and easily one of the best films of the summer — "Stand By Me" is a beautiful reminiscence of the joys and pains of growing up. The film is based on "The Body," a novella by Stephen King, but it is a far cry from anything scary or macabre. Instead, it is the chronicle of one event in the lives of four adolescents — an event which did nothing less than change their lives and help define who they would be as adults.

On the outside, the action follows four youngsters who are each considered outcasts by the society in which they live. Among them are Gordie Lachance (Wil Wheaton), the smartest and most sensitive of the group; Chris Chambers (River Phoenix), the tough guy with a big heart; Teddy Decham (Corey Feldman), the maladjusted son of a war veteran, and Vern Tossio (Jerry O'Connell), the fat kid and butt of everyone's jokes.

Ever trying to prove themselves and gain acceptance in the eyes of others, the young adventurers set out to find the dead body of a teenager who was reported missing. That body, they feel, will be their claim to fame. The four of them will be heroes for finding the corpse that has eluded everyone else.

The boys set out on foot to the place where the body is rumored to be — some twenty miles from their small town of Castle Rock, Oregon. It is on this journey that each, in his own way, grows up. Foremost in this maturation process are the realizations that Gordie comes to. The story is told in retrospect by him thirty years later, and, as he admits to himself as an adult, he learned more during that journey than at any other time in his life. Gordie's brother (John Cusack) was a football star and the apple of the town's collective eye before his premature death in an automobile accident. Gordie is treated like dirt by his father, who constantly tells Gordie that he is worth nothing and that it should have been him who died instead. With the help of his friends, he comes to the conclusion that he is indeed worth something, no matter what his father tells him. Gordie has a talent for storytelling and he will go far some day.

So far, in fact, that he will eventually make more of himself than any of the others. Even in the childhood scenes, viewers sense the great potential of this reclusive and quiet kid. The other three, by contrast, though they may be more outgoing, end up in far worse circumstances three decades later.

But this is not a film that cuts back and forth between childhood occurrences and adult repercussions. The film is, except for a brief introduction and closing by Gordie as an adult, a constant and uninterrupted account of the boys' exodus — from Castle Rock to the body, and from boyhood to manhood.

The picture's main triumph, and the thing that sets it apart from all of the other movies which have dealt with kids and their growth, is the simple and sensitive way that director Rob Reiner deals with the subject matter. Instead of coming down heavy, which would have been easy to do given the gist of the story, he moves it along at a satisfying and entertaining clip, taking time, as the boys do, to stop and smell the proverbial roses along the way. Conversations about the meaning of Gordie's life and the unfairness of Chris' life are intermingled, sometimes simultaneously, with discussions about whether Mighty Mouse could beat up Superman or just what kind of animal Disney's Goofy really is. In handling the story this way, Reiner manages to successfully blend some intense emotional material with some lighthearted — and at times hilarious — comedy interludes, without ever once losing the gripping immediacy of the situation.

Reiner, who had a hit last year with "The Sure Thing," is quickly becoming one of Hollywood's most bankable directors. Like Stephen Spielberg, John Hughes, and especially like Ron Howard, Reiner is able to take adequate material and make it something special. He has a wonderful ability to find the more human — and realistic — nuances to a story and put them on film in an honest and straightforward way. From his actors in "Stand By Me" he elicits exceptional performances. The youngsters are all well-developed, complete characters who demand that the audience care about and respect them. Also to Reiner's credit, the 90 minutes spent watching this film will be the fastest 90 minutes you will ever spend at the movies. The story is that gripping, the characters that engrossing.

"Stand" has an R rating, somewhat odd for a film which contains no sex and only a minuscule amount of violence. The rating is a result of the constant barrage of four-letter-words used by the kids, and a sequence which plays out one of Gordie's tales — that of a fat kid who gets revenge on his cruel town during a pie-eating contest. Though it's conceivable the film could have done without both, each adds an interesting dimension to the characterizations.

"Stand By Me" is the movie of the summer. It is recommended for anyone who remembers — or who wants to remember — what it feels like to be 12 years old again. It is at that age, the film asserts, that one has the best of times and the worst of times.

Certainly seeing this movie merits as one of best of times.

'Navigator' is space magic

By Marian Trainor

Films billed as family fare have been circumspect lately because, while basically they are suitable for the entire family, they have some objectionable language or a scene which parents wish had been edited out.

Not to worry! "Flight of the Navigator" is clean fun all the way. The youngest child could go to see it and not be jarred by profanity nor have to close his eyes against violence.

This new Disney offering is an exciting, original film about a boy who gets to navigate a real honest-to-goodness spaceship. That's just got to be the ultimate dream of any adventuresome boy.

The boy is David Freeman (Joey Cramer) who lives with his mother Helen (Veronica Cartwright) and father Bill (Cliff De Young) and his punky little brother Jeff (Matt Adler).

When we meet the family they are about to go down the river on their boat for a picnic. David is sent to the woods to get Jeff. He falls down and is knocked out. A short time later, he regains consciousness, gets on his feet and returns home.

But something has happened in that brief time. The house looks different, the people in it are not his parents. Only David is the same 12-year-old who went into the woods.

When David does find his family, his mother and father look careworn and older. They have spent five years looking for him. Brother Jeff is now 13. He is David's older, younger brother.

In the meantime, a space ship has landed. It is apparently unmanned. In the course of a battery of scientific tests, it is discovered that David's brain is programmed to receive messages from the mysterious spaceship.

David is whisked off to top security at NASA. While the scientists are intent on decoding the messages, David's only concern is breaking out of the place.

Contrary to the scientists' theory, there is intelligence on the space ship: one of the funniest, kindest robots ever devised.

But the robot on the space ship has more than fun and games in mind. The boy's brain has been imprinted with the star charts necessary for the ship's return to home. David needs the spaceship to go home too and maybe return to his childhood status.

Everything works out, but in the meantime, the good-natured sparring that goes on between David and his robot friend is really humor at its best.

In one funny scene, David sets the ship down besides a gas station on an out-of-the-way road. He hops out, begging the station for money to call home. Mechanically, the man hands it to him. As David takes off again, without moving, without blinking an eye, still stunned and riveted in place, he mutters "He said he just wanted to call home."

"Flight of the Navigator" should join some other older Disney classics as one that audiences will not tire of. It is a precious, magical film.

Pets are a blessing, so bless your pets

Each year for the past several, students from the Christ Church Vacation Bible School have carried their dogs, kittens, gerbils and goldfish to class.

Parents are asked to bring the larger Fidos and Sylvesters when the final day of class is over. Then the congregation congregates on the church lawn — pets in tow.

This year Reverend Edward Cobden gave the pets their blessing.

Pet blessings are designed to teach the children something about responsibility in the caring of God's creations.

"Owners and children should be responsible for their pets," Reverend Cobden said. "Then they can continue to bless their pets throughout the year by caring for them."

Bible school teacher Patty Fox of the Farms said the pet blessing is one of the most well-liked events in the week-long Bible school.

"Kids just love it," Fox said. "It is the highlight. They get to show off their pets to the other children, and this year each student was given a purple t-shirt to commemorate the event."

They came in droves. Dogs were barking at cats, and the cats, through preferring to be running free, found sanctuary in their owners' arms.

Goldfish found the hot sun a mite tropical, but the gerbils and hamsters romped freely in their glass-walled cages.

Much to the parents' delight when Reverend Cobden asked if there were any reptiles in the group, no one answered in the affirmative.

Community education sets fall sports program

Local residents who wish to maintain their summer level of physical fitness may be interested in the offerings of the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe Public School system. Although some classes are slated to begin the week of Sept. 8, many others are offered throughout the fall at convenient times and locations.

In addition to the usual 12-week class in "Aerobic Dancing by Jacki Sorensen," a new-for-fall "lite" class has been scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday mornings for those wishing a less strenuous form of exercise. The popular Vital Options classes will resume with a 10-week schedule of classes at a variety of locations. "Main Event" is the theme of this fall's program.

New-for-fall offerings include "English Horseback Riding Lessons" and "Western Horseback Riding Lessons," scheduled in conjunction with Sugarbush Farm in Mount Clemens. Classes are available for all levels of interest.

"Biking for Fun" has been scheduled for bicycle enthusiasts this fall.

For those who wish to improve their skills on the dance floor, three levels of ballroom dancing will be offered: beginning, intermediate and advanced. Community Education will also co-sponsor "Square Dancing" and "Round Dancing" with the Grosse Pointe Council of Square Dance Clubs.

Other Community Education offerings this fall include "Ballet," "Basketball," "Board Sailing for Beginner," "Boating Safety," "Jazz Dance," and "Racewalking." "Self-Defense for Women" is a new-for-fall daytime class starting on Sept. 18. Two sections of "Meditation and Relaxation" have been scheduled.

"Tae Kwon Do" is in the fall schedule, as are "Tap Dancing" and a full complement of tennis classes for all levels. The ever-popular "Yoga" classes taught by Anne Ingalls will resume on Sept. 16. Three sections are scheduled, including an afternoon session for "Beginners," "Boating Safety," "Volleyball - Swim" and two sections of "Volleyball" are also on the roster for fall.

Call 343-2178 for further information on the fall program of activities in sports, dance, and exercise offered through the Department of Community Education.

Dedication . . .

... eventually pays off for athletes, at least that's what members of the Detroit Boat Club's rowing team will tell you after their daily 5 a.m. practices resulted in some great finishes in top-level competition. At right is the eight-man team which finished fourth at the recent nationals, scoring top times. Team members include, left to right, South High senior John John Skupien, 1985 graduate Rich Devine, senior Jeff Douglas, sophomore coxswain Jeff Barry, North junior Linc Bessert, Tom Goodrich, North junior Dave Glancy, and South senior Mike Irwin. Devine, Irwin, Barry Goodrich and Dossin were also on the four-man squad which finished fourth in the nationals and fourth in the prestigious Henley Championships in St. Catherine's, Ontario.

Sports people

A pair of Grosse Pointe tennis players turned in outstanding performances in the prestigious Ann Arbor Open tennis tournament recently. Shannon Byrne, of Grosse Pointe Park defeated Diana Ospino, 6-3, 6-1, to win the girls' 10 and under title. Andy Loredi, of Grosse Pointe Park was the consolation champ in boys' 10 and under; he beat Peter Gatchalian and Andy Watts before losing in the quarterfinals to Steve Schubert, 6-2, 6-1. In the consolation finals, he topped John Shapiro, Todd Kosta and Brian Troxler to take the title.

Bill Demeter, of Grosse Pointe Woods, is an admitted "small time" race car driver who is doing things in a big time way. According to Demeter, a Mac Tool distributor, he's the No. 2 driver in the Central Division of the Sports Car Club of America. Last weekend at a Blackhawk Farms, Ill. event, he qualified fourth and finished second. Already Demeter, who races a Porsche and is ranked No. 12 in the Porsche Cup Series, has qualified for the Road Atlanta Series in October, where he'll race against top drivers from across America.

Rosalind Kalvelage, of Grosse Pointe Woods, got a hole-in-one Aug. 20, on the 17th hole at Partidge Creek Golf Course. Kalvelage is one of many Grosse Pointe women who are members of the Suburban Women Golfers, celebrating their 25th anniversary this year.

Listed on the 1986 Hope College football roster is South High graduate Terence Ayrault. The 6-1, 190-pound sophomore is a quarterback. He played under Blue Devil coach Russ Hepner.

Want a safe holiday? — don't dive

If national averages hold true, dozens of recreational swimmers may be paralyzed this Labor Day weekend in diving accident across the country.

Many will become lifetime quadriplegics due to spinal cord injuries suffered from dives into four feet of water or less, according to the Aquatic Injury Safety Group, (AISG) a Detroit-based, non-profit organization dedicated to increasing public awareness of the dangers of diving.

"From the beginning of their lives children are taught a head-first dive into water is perfectly safe," says Grosse Pointe Ronald R. Gilbert, chairman of the AISG. "This is simply not true. Any head-first dive into four feet of water or less can result in crippling injuries."

Gilbert points to statistics released by the National Spinal Cord Injury Data Research Center in Phoenix that show close to 1,000 spinal cord injuries resulting in paralysis or death are suffered by recreational divers every year. Diving is the fourth major cause of spinal cord injuries in the U.S., behind auto accidents, falls or jumps and gunshot wounds.

The center reports spinal cord injuries from diving are evenly split between open bodies of water such as lakes, and swimming pools, including above-ground and in-ground pools. Swimmers most at risk, according to the statistics, are 15- to 29-year-old males.

A nationally respected expert on diving safety, Dr. M.A. Gabrielsen compiled a list of common findings in diving injuries, including the following:

- The majority of diving spinal cord injuries occur in four feet of water or less.
- In most cases, there are no adequate markers or warning signs prohibiting diving.
- Spinal cord injury victims think they are executing "safe dives," which they have done many times before.
- None of the victims are aware of the potential danger of diving in the areas where they perform their dives.
