Media bad boys

The Detroit-area media were on the receiving end of a learning session from environmentalists last week, prompted by the environmentalists' "perception of media inaccuracy and oversensationalizing," according to conference coordinator Alice Tomboulian, a former state representative from Rochester.

Newspaper and television play a major role in the way the public sees an issue, so the session was aimed at teaching the media to present environmental disasters in a sane and fair light.

Los Angeles television reporter Tom Vacar charged TV with being the most prone to exaggerate.

"Basically, there's not an interest in this type of story until something terrible happens," he said. "Then they go on the air for two minutes and scare the hell out of everybody.

A panel of journalists from Detroit television and newspapers staged a mock press conference with a panel of local experts playing the roles they would be likely to fill in the case of a real toxic spill in southeastern Michigan — followed by a bull session criticizing each other's performance.

It turned out the journalists weren't as tough and rude on their follow-up as the experts expected, and the experts didn't stonewall as much as the media thought they would. Everybody was frustrated at the failure of any agency to be in immediate charge of the imaginary emergency.

The experts complained that the media fail to ask the right questions and the media whined about inaccessibility. But mostly it was a love-in.

At least now we all know each other.

Groups upset by EPA decision

By Nancy Parmenter The decision announced Monday by the United States Environmen-tal Protection Agency to drop action against the Detroit incinerator officially gives the green light to the project. But local environmentalists are reluctant to give up.

"It kind of blows you out of the water," said Grant Ruttinger of the Detroit Audubon Society. "If we can raise the funds, we may still pursue this in court under the Michigan Environmental Protection Act. It's going to take another strategy session to decide.'

Environmentalists had expected an October hearing in federal court to determine whether the EPA has a legitimate role in attempting to require the city to increase pollu-tion equipment on the proposed incinerator. Ruttinger said he had in-klings Friday of the impending EPA decision to drop out. The agency had apparently given the stamp of approval to the project more than a year ago without realizing that the sulfur controls were not stringent enough.

'They made a big mistake and we're all going to have to pay for it," Ruttinger said. Although there is no particular timetable to meet in filing a suit to stop construction, Ruttinger said sooner would be better. "The city sees this as an open road, so we don't want to delay," he said. Ruttinger was one of the attendees at a talk last week by environmentalist Barry Commoner. The message was that it is never too late to stop a project. Com-moner told the audience about the Shoreham nuclear power plant on Long Island, built and ready to operate, but unable to obtain final approval because of the popular opposition.

"Commoner said the idea is to stop it," Ruttinger said. "We have a board meeting Tuesday and we'll see what we can do.'

Neither Commoner nor his audience realized at last week's meeting that the EPA was about to drop out. But his talk was replete with references to the slump in the nuclear power industry.

"People should be encouraged by that," Commoner said. "Even though it is built, it need not open.

The commitment that has been made doesn't necessarily mean that you're licked," he told the au-dience of about 150 eastside residents. "It's not a technical, scientific decision. It's a political, moral decision and nobody can take that away from you." Commoner, the founder of the Center for the Biology of Natural

Systems at Queens College, City University of New York, told his audience that the incinerator industry is in difficulties, that the technology is unproven, and that better solutions to the garbage problem are available. Eighty-eight percent by weight of urban trash consists of materials that can be recycled, Commoner said. But it has to be separated.

'Put it all in the same bag with the Pampers and you've messed up the paper," he said. Some incinerators use a mechanical sorter, but Commoner said he favors source separation --placing the burden of separation on the consumer/resident. He believes the average person is up to the task.

'They made a big mistake and we're all going to have to pay for it.' –Ğrant Ruttinger

"People were willing to separate trash in World War II because the government took the trouble to explain the importance to them," he said. "I absolutely believe that people are not slobs. I believe that when they understand a problem, they will deal with it.

The cost of disposing of garbage should be considered a social cost, Commoner said. Recycling should not have to pay for itself, although it is an economic requirement that it not cost more than landfilling or incineration.

'It costs the average city $50 a ton to dispose of trash in any case," he said, "so it could afford to subsidize recycling. Asking if it is economical to recycle material isn't the issue. I guarantee that when you get done with this incinerator, the cost per ton, including capital cost and down-time, will be in the hundreds of dollars." He estimated that a recycling program could be set up for one-tenth the cost.

Recycling is a good enough idea to stand on its own merits, but there is an aspect that makes recycling imperative, according to Commoner's theory. Burning garbage creates dioxins, which increase the risk of cancer beyond

Commoner challenged the statements by incinerator operators the usually accepted levels.

that burning at high temperatures eliminates dioxins. He said his studies show no significant correlation between temperature and amount of dioxin.

Dioxins did not exist before 1940, when plastic containing chlorine began to enter the market. Burning lignin — found in wood and paper — with chlorine — found in plastic — produces dioxins. Various risk assessments for the Detroit incinerator show that cancer deaths would increase by seven to 38 per one million population. No project with a risk factor higher than one has ever been granted a permit in Michigan, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

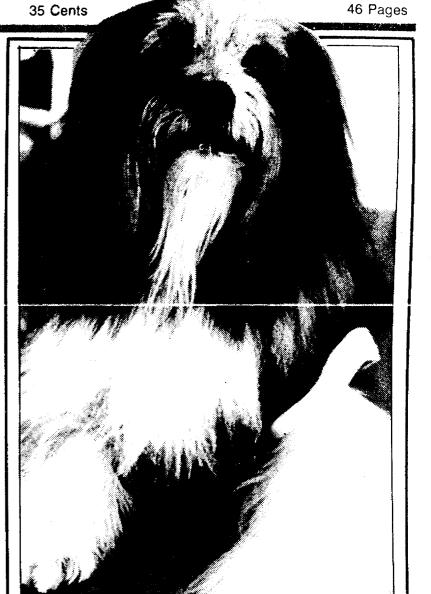

Among the audience were several members of the Grosse Pointe branches of the League of Women Voters and the American Association of University Women. Both groups have been studying incineration and recycling within the context of the Detroit facility and its potential for hazardous fallout over Grosse Pointe and within the context of the Grosse Pointe incinerator as well.

Recognizing that the aging Grosse Pointes-Clinton facility may soon be at its capacity, the groups have been looking at the potential of recycling to reduce both the waste stream and the dioxin emissions.

"We've been studying the prob-lem and hoping to move beyond the study phase," said Joan Hall of the AAUW. She said the groups have tried to look at the whole problem of trash reduction, as well as focus on the separation of hazardous household waste and the need for public education.

Hall said the Grosse Pointers were concerned at Commoner's statement that trying to combine recycling and incineration is economically not feasible because of the incinerator's need for a guaranteed waste stream. But Hall said that conversations with several officials have led the LWV/ AAUW to believe that because the facility is near capacity, recycling in Grosse Pointe could take pressure off the incinerator, adding to its useful life.

All charges dropped in Farms rape case

All charges have been dropped and the case has been closed on the alleged rape of a 14-year-old Grosse Pointe Farms girl over the Labor Day weekend.

Archbishop visits

The Archbishop Joseph Kundukulam of Trichur, Kerala State, India, was a guest at the home of Tom and Philomina Chakupurakal of Grosse Pointe Shores in the first week of September.

The Chakupurakals held a reception for the archbishop, where he told about his work helping the poor, homeless and unemployed of Kerala.

Kundukulam explained that the people around Kerala are living in deep poverty, many in huts of packed mud which wash away annually in the monsoons.

Kundukulam wants to build 10,000 cement or brick shelters with modern plumbing. Four thousand shelters have been constructed, but another 6,000 are needed.

According to Tom Chakupurakal, Kundukulam has been likened to Mother Theresa, and is known as Father of the Poor in Kerala.

Kundukulam hopes to interest Detroit-area people to support his work in India. Donations are being accepted through the Shelters for the Homeless Fund of the Archdiocese of Detroit, 1230 Washington Blvd., Detroit. 48226.

Bedford residents petition council

About 35 residents of the 1000 block of Bedford petitioned the Park council Monday night to investigate what they termed a hazardous traffic situation. According to the petition, there are 22 children under the age of 12 who live on the block.

The residents offered three sug-gestions that they feel would alleviate the problem : relocating the traffic signal at Bedford and Jefferson to Devonshire or Three Mile; making Bedford a one-way street northbound; or creating a cul-de-sac at Bedford and Jefferson.

One woman said the traffic light "acts as a lure" for drivers.

girl's house and with the girl and her mother led to the charges being dropped.

The girl originally charged that she had held an impromptu party Sept. 1 which was attended by about 20 teenagers. She claimed that at about 11 p.m. the girl's older sister sent the partygoers away.

She then charged that four teenage boys remained, coaxed her into the backyard, held her down and raped her. She also charged she was taken to an upstairs bedroom and raped again.

Police took the girl to St. John Hospital when they were informed of the charges later that night.

irinking, but could not say if the girl was intoxicated because no breathalyzer or blood test was performed.

"Drinking was involved, but I believe it was minimal drinking," Jensen said.

"The girl exaggerated the amount of force used. There were five kids - 13, 14 and 15 years of age -- who were experimenting.'

Jensen said when the girl was 'asked why she made up the story of being forcibly raped, she replied that she didn't know.

"There are no charges, nothing," he added. "A lesson learned, that's all. A tough way to learn it though, especially because of the seriousness of the charges."

Farms Mayor James Dingeman dead 69 at

By Peter A. Salinas Flags in Grosse Pointe Farms and surrounding communities were at half staff last week, and officials in the Farms were talking about the loss of a dear friend.

James Herbert Dingeman Sr. Farms mayor since 1975, died Thursday, Sept. 18, at St. John Hospital. He was 69. A family member said Mr. Dingeman's immediate cause of death was a stroke, but that he had acute leukemia for some time.

Mr. Dingeman was first appointed to the Farms City Council Jan. 17, 1966. He was then elected in April 1967. He was a member of the Farms Mayor's Planning Commission since its inception in 1957. He was raised in Detroit's Palmer Park area. His father, Harry J. Dingeman, was a judge with the Wayne County Circuit Court.

Mr. Dingeman attended University of Detroit High School, college and law school. He and his wife, Ann, were married in 1940. Besides his wife, he is survived by two daughters, Patricia Moran and Mary Ann; two sons, James Henry Jr. and Peter J.; a brother, Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Harry J. Dingeman Jr.; and 15 grandchildren.

"It is undoubtedly a great loss to the community," said Farms City Clerk Richard Solak. "The mayor has long dedicated himself to the betterment of Grosse Pointe

Mr. Dingeman's contributions to his city, the community, and the business world are numerous.

At the time of his death, he was St. John Hospital's consultant for legal affairs. He joined the hospital in 1977, when he retired as vice president of administration and secretary of Parke-Davis Company, Detroit.

He was instrumental in the reorganization of the hospital's management system, when it became part of a multi-faceted corporation.

Mr. Dingeman was chairman of the St. Clair Health Corporation Nominating Committee, the Professional Affairs Committee of St. John Hospital's Board of Trustees and was the chairman of the Program Evaluation Committee of that board. He has been a member of the Continuing Medical Education Committee of the Medical Staff of the hospital since 1974.

He graduated from the University of Detroit Law School in 1939, then became a member of the Dingeman & DeGalan law firm in Detroit until 1943. During the 1940s he was an instructor at the Detroit College of Law and Walsh Institute.

He was employed with Federal Mogul Corporation in Detroit beginning in 1943. He was first a legal adviser, then became assistant director of industrial relations, director of organizational planning and executive development and finally, secretary.

president of administration and secretary from 1971 to 1977.

Other corporate memberships include serving on the Michigan Hospital Association Governance Committee and Trustee Advisory Board of the Greater Detroit Area Health Council.

Founded foundation

The Grosse Pointe Farms Foundation has been responsible for a number of beautification and modernization projects in the city.

Incorporated May 23, 1980, the non-profit organization was founded by Mayor James H. Dingeman Sr.

The foundation raises funds through donations and makes municipal improvements in the Farms that are not budgeted items.

Over the six years of its existence, the foundation has completed such projects as the recreation building at Farms Pier Park and the landscaping and installation of benches and a gazebo at Kercheval near Mc-Millan. Most recently the foundation provided funding for a new gatehouse at the park.

Woods residents pick at park plan other than Little League.

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Woods residents got their chance Monday night to ask city officials about the proposed $3.5 million, 10-year redevelopment plan for the city's Lakefront and Ghesquiere parks.

City officials, however, found themselves only able to answer some of the financial and practical questions about the plan.

The city is asking residents to approve issuance of up to $3.5 million in general obligation bonds at the Nov. 4 election. The issue would be financed by an increased property tax millage of one mill that would cost the average taxpayer in the city about $50 a year.

But Mayor George Freeman said the city is considering going at the plan in two phases, with priority items to be done with $2 million in the first four years. The city would review to see if it wanted to continue with the program after that.

What the priority items are is yet to be determined by council, Freeman told the 100 residents who came to North's Performing Arts Center.

Residents also questioned how much extra money would be budgeted annually to properly maintain improvements at the parks.

We do a tremendous job of building in the city, but we do a terrible job of maintaining what we've built," one resident said.

Although Freeman said estimates of extra staff were below what the city expected, Director of Parks and Recreation Donald Hallmann would only say that extra staff would depend on allocations to the budget made by council.

Freeman did say he felt the city's parks were kept very clean. The resident agreed but added, "We're spending all this capital to put all these wonderful things in and we still have an ongoing problem. We don't have a full-time maintenance person down there.'

Residents also questioned other points to the plan, including construction of a new vehicular bridge nearer Jefferson after demolition of the present vehicular bridge. The city may save some money by re-opening the entrance off Jefferson before one crosses the Milk

Freeman said the city was told by its architects that maintenance for that entrance could run $50,000 a year - a statement that drew some snorts of disbelief from the audience.

quire residents to drive nearly a mile before getting to the proposed amphitheater, to be located where the old pool was, a resident said. Such a distance — past boat wells and two proposed pedestrian bridges - constitutes a hazard.

The city has to pay to remove the current bridge so it is able to use more of its docks at the park, Free-man said. The new pedestrian bridges will offer 12 to 14 feet of clearance for boats. As new docks open, sailboats will be put into docks on the lake side of the bridges, he added.

Residents also took the opportunity to complain about current park services and recreational programs.

One resident complained that adding all the new facilities would not help much, since the city had no organized recreational program

East Jefferson plan proposed

By Pat Paholsky

An ambitious development plan for the East Jefferson business district was presented to the Park council Monday night by the Downtown Development Authority. Funds for the project will come from a Tax Increment Financing Plan that will be submitted to the city Oct. 13.

A public hearing on the proposal is scheduled for Nov. 10.

In a half-hour slide presentation, Charles Merz of Schervish Vogel Merz unfolded a proposal for East Jefferson from the city limits to Balfour. The plan calls for small islands of greenery that would turn Jefferson into a boulevard in certain areas

We would have slow down, leftturn lanes," he said. "We don't want to boulevard all the way down.

Other concepts include restructuring Pemberton so that it lines up with Maryland, which Merz said would create more parking and improve the traffic flow. Pemberton is across from city hall

River, several residents said.

The new vehicular bridge will re-

Al Kunert, who chairs the city's Recreation Commission, said a sub-committee is working on the matter. Another speaker during the 70-minute hearing said she was speaking for the city's older residents when she complained that services available for those over age 60 were inadequate.

"We have no place to call our own," the woman said. "We don't have anything for seniors in this beautiful city. I don't think that's fair. We pay taxes, too.

Councilwoman Jean Rice responded, saying the proposed 5,400 square-foot communty center at Ghesquiere Park would be for all residents. The facility would have a caterer's kitchen that would allow a caterer to warm or cool food for up to 300 people, she added.

The program for the community center would be based on that used by the Neighborhood Club. with modifications where the Neighborhood Club's Executive Direcor John Bruce thinks his program could be improved, Rice said.

'We really feel it will be of great advantage to our city," Rice add-

The proposed improvements for Ghesquiere Park include the community center building, exercise station, improvements to the magic square, rehabilitation of the confort station, extention of the hardball diamond's backstop, addition of a multi-use trail, tot lot, two volleyball courts, four platform tennis courts and four tennis backboard courts.

Also to be added at Ghesquiere are two horseshoe and shuffleboard courts and a gazebo.

Improvements at Lakefront Park under consideration are a 300-foot floating fishing pier, a four-foot berm, a tidal basin ice rink, a 10,000 square foot open pavilion, horseshoe courts, a picnic area with a relocated shelter, new vehicular and ramped pedestrian bridges, an expanded tot lot and a overhead sun shade for the area near the pool.

Also to be added are a fitness square, six platform tennis courts. two practice tennis courts, six racquetball courts, new concession, rest room and shelter control buildings and a sledding hill.

Stereo stolen

A Berkshire Road resident woke up Tuesday morning, Sept. 2, to find that a thief had forced open a screen window and made off with a $500 stereo system.

The homeowner told Park police about being awakened earlier that morning by rustling sounds, but dismissed them as being made by an animal rooting in the garbage, reports said. At about 8 a.m. the home discovered a screen on the south the legend, "Another rags to riches side of the home had been removed and a Pioneer AM-FM stereo and speakers had been taken.

His manager rushes in with payment for the modeling performance - a bite of kosher turkey breast. It's another successful job for veteran model Freeway, a performer who truly lives a dog's life.

Freeway was working in Grosse Pointe photographer Paul Mobley's Harmonie Park studio to produce a poster for the Michigan Humane Society. The poster, depicting Freeway's success story, will be sold at specialty stores throughout the area to benefit the Michigan Humane Society. The idea for the poster originated with Mobley, who wanted to do a benefit project for the humane society.

'I got the idea when I was at the Mutt Run, photographing John Kelley and Marilyn Turner (and their dog)," Mobley said: "I wanted to do something to help the humane society.

Mobley took the idea to Sandra Good and Bill Winters, an art director and copywriting team from a Southfield ad agency. Together, they planned a poster, showing a dog as a movie director, with story, thanks to the Michigan Humane Society."

away from the fate of too many strays.

But Freeway isn't your average stray. He is a bearded collie, a breed only recently recognized by the American Kennel Club, and still quite rare.

Volpe took Freeway in and trained him to be a model. He does runaway modeling for fashion shows, (human models wear the clothes, Freeway adds atmosphere), commercials and televiion work.

But Freeway hasn't forgotten his humble beginnings. All his modeling fees go to the Michigan Humane Society. All he gets for his work are those bites of kosher turkey breast

As W.C. Fields might have told Mobley, had he been on hand for the poster photo session, even a well-trained dog isn't the easiest subject for the camera. The poster is the result of two days of work in the studio. The first day, Mobley experimented with poses and props. The second day, he shot three rolls of film as well as numerous Polaroid test shots, to find the perfect composition and arrangement

By the second day, Freeway was getting wise to the routine, and would drop props, relax and change his position after he saw the flash. Volpe urged him along with exclamations that "Daddy's coming!" and "Did you see that kitty?" (There was not kitty or daddy in the area, but Freeway's ears and eyes perked up just the same.)

The poster will be available for sale within a few weeks at local specialty stores. Printing was donated by Peach Printing.

"We wanted to do a quality, gallery-type poster," Mobley said. "Not one of these $2 roll-up jobs." Ron Blauet, director of education and public relations for the Michigan Humane Society, was on hand for the photo session. He said the humane society hasn't decided what to do with the money from the poster yet.

He explained that cruelty investigations, educational programs and a fund for replacing the Detroit shelter building would all be possibilities.

The Michigan Humane Society operates three shelters around the metropolitan area and generally has between 300 and 600 animals in its care at any given time.

"I've always wanted to do something like this for the Michigan Hu-mane Society," Mobley said. "I wish I could do a lot more."

Barrington for some new development.

Under the Tax Increment Financing Act (TIFA), a business district is defined and any increase in taxes in the specified area can be 'captured'' and used for improvements in the area. All the taxes on any new development in the district would also be used for improvements.

The amount that can be retained by the district includes all taxes intended for the county, such as Wayne County Community College and Huron Clinton Metropolitan Authority, local schools and other taxing agents, over and above the base tax they received the year before. They would receive the same amount, in other words with the business district receiving any increase. Craig Hupp, assistant city attorney and counsel to the Downtown Development Authori-ty, said that a TIFA plan could not be adopted without the knowledge of the schools and county.

"They do not have a vote, but they must be consulted," he said.

The council would also set the length of time such taxes would be used by the business district, according to how long it would take to pay for improvements. The Authority will submit its TIFA plan at the next council meeting Oct. 13.

Diverter plan gone, but traffic remains

By Mike Andrzejczyk

The joint traffic diverter plan by Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods may have been shelved, but heavy traffic on Brys and Roslyn in Grosse Pointe Woods will force that city's hand.

That's according to Woods City Administrator-Clerk Chester Petersen, who with Harper Woods City Manager James Leidlein, had been working out the details of a plan to turn the six streets the cities share between Harper and Mack into courts.

The plan would have put diverters along Anita, Hawthorne, Ridgemont, Hollywood, Hampton and Roslyn along Canton. Brys, which cuts through Grosse Pointe Woods, would be blocked at Helen, effectively dead-ending Old Eight Mile Road.

In two of public hearings last month, however, the plan was blasted by Harper Woods residents. In packed council chambers, only one person spoke in favor of the plan at the September hearings.

It was a plan presented by the city, but not one it wanted at any cost, Leidlein said. If residents didn't want it, the city wasn't planning to go ahead.

"We want to be responsive to our residents," he added.

The plan was meant to eliminate the use of the streets as thoroughfares from Harper to Mack and would have been very effective in putting traffic back on main streets, Leidlein said. But residents of the Harper Woods streets, with one exception, don't feel they have any traffic problems along their streets, he added.

The problem, officials say, is on Brys and Roslyn in the Woods. And the city council in that city has said it will take whatever steps are necessary to relieve the amount of traffic that follows Old Eight Mile from Harper down Brys to Mack, Petersen said.

One suggestion proposed at the last hearing in Grosse Pointe Woods was for that city to erect diverters to protect Brys and Roslyn. That would only move the problem down or into the adjoining cities, officials say.

An attempt to solve the problem three years ago by making the four northernmost streets in the Woods one-way from Mack to Helen taught the Woods, Harper Woods and St. Clair Shores a lesson: The problem has to be addressed in all cities, since doing something in one place only moves the problem.

In the case of the one-way streets, the three cities set up such a conflicting battery of signage to keep the diverted traffic out of their cities that the incident became known as Sign Wars.

To keep such an incident from occurring again, the three councils got together and decided they would advise each other of any proposed changes in traffic signage in the affected area, according to St. Clair Shores City Manager Roy Stype

Any action taken by the Woods and Harper Woods to solve their problem would have required the reactive solution by St. Clair Shores to ease what would be increased traffic along its southernmost streets, Stype said.

The city did have a plan ready to go, but Stype said he would rather not discuss what it was.

St. Clair Shores has no reason to consider putting in diverters if the other two cities don't, Stype says. Expense and inconvenience make them an unpopular choice, he added. The plan the city would have adopted was "certainly dif-ferent from anything they (Harper Woods and Grosse Pointe Woods) had planned," he added.

Residents of streets in Harper Woods said during public hearings that they don't have a traffic problem, either, Leidlein said. Residents of Anita, the first street north of Vernier, consistently have said there is heavy traffic along their street. The city is continuing to look at ways to alleviate that problem, he added.

Were the Woods to seek to limit traffic on Brys and Roslyn, that displaced traffic will go somewhere, farther into the Woods or into Harper Woods, Leidlein says. Residents who don't feel they have a traffic problem now may find they have one if only one city seeks to do something about the problem, he added.

One big unknown in the traffic problem equation is what a completed Old Eight Mile bridge will do to traffic in the area.

While an environmental impact study completed for the project said there would be no significant impact on surrounding residential areas, Woods officials contend that, with the bridge twice as wide, more traffic will be able to get through to Old Eight Mile and Harper and more traffic will end up in the north end of the city.

There's no easy solution to the problem, not without some cooperation by the cities, Petersen said. It's been a thorn in residents' sides for at least 10 years "and we'll probably be fighting about it in another 10 years," he added.

Enter Freeway, canine model extraordinaire.

Freeway's story is truly a rags to riches tale (or tail, as the case may be).

Connie Volpe of Bloomfield Hills found Freeway wandering on I-75 four years ago. He was cold, lone-ly, abandoned and just minutes

A representative for a traffic engineering firm presented a proposal to the Park council Monday night to study the area bounded by Mack and Jefferson and Wayburn and Somerset. The firm, Goodell-Grivas, Inc., was there at the recommendation of councilman James Robson, who has been pressing for a professional study of the traffic problem in that area.

Traffic studies of the Park, divided into six zones, were made recently by the city under the direction of Craig Hupp, assistant city attorney and former traffic engineer.

Councilman John Prost said hiring Goodell-Grivas to collect similar data and make recommendations would be like "reinventing the wheel." The study would cost $7,500 and take from three to four months to complete.

The council tabled action on the proposal to give the traffic firm time to inspect the data collected by the city and decide if it could make recommendations at a lower rate. The matter may be brought up again Oct. 13.

Mayor will be missed

It is often said that the public is a hard taskmaster. Yet Jim Dingeman never found the job of serving the public onerous, whether he was doing so as mayor of Grosse Pointe Farms, as an active worker in civic and charitable organizations or through his membership on corporate boards.

Whatever the issue under discussion, he was always courteous, soft-spoken and considerate. It is no wonder that Andrew Bremer, Grosse Pointe Farms city manager, described his friend and boss this way: "I think when they put the word 'gentleman' in the dictionary, they had him in mind." The mayor's many other friends in the Pointes and elsewhere in the area would agree with that tribute.

In his 11 years as mayor and prior terms as a councilman, he served as a leader in many Farms activities. True, he often worked quietly behind the scenes to resolve problems that came before the council. But he also took public stands on controversial issues. And he was one of those responsible for organizing the Grosse Pointe Farms Foundation, a non-profit organization that raises funds to make improvements in the Farms that are not financed by the city budget.

He served his community in many other ways. As a consultant for legal affairs to St. John Hospital, he was described as instrumental in reorganization of the hospital management system. He served on the hospital's special corporate boards as well as on its board of trustees. Prior to joining the hospital, he had been vice president, administration, and secretary of Parke-Davis, and had served on its board as well.

He also had been a director of a long list of corporations, banks and other enterprises as well as a board member of such organizations as the Detroit Area Council of Boy Scouts, Citizens Research Council, Detroit Science Center, Cardinal Club of the University of Detroit, the Business Education Alliance and the Grosse Pointe Farms Foundation. He had been a local chairman for the United Fund, member of the Republican Party finance committee and a director of the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce.

All of these organizations and others will miss his service, but he also will be missed by the many Pointers who regarded the Farms mayor as a loyal friend who was always available for advice and help in solving their problems as well as those of the community.

Will Lucas self-destruct?

It was another one of those up and down weeks for Bill Lucas, the Republican nominee for governor.

On the up-beat side were the enthusiastic fundraisers at which Vice President Bush again expressed his support for Lucas and the Michigan Republican ticket. There also were warm words of praise from the Rev. Jesse Jackson, even though Jackson refused to endorse the GOP nominee in order to preserve his own position as a national Democratic leader.

Lucas could even draw a measure of satisfaction from the flap over the release of income tax returns because the GOP embarrassed the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, Martha Griffiths, when she refused to make her returns public as the two top GOP nominees had done.

But on the down side were the results of two more polls, by Detroit TV stations, which showed Lucas trailing Gov. James Blanchard by a substantial margin. A WJBK-TV poll showed Lucas trailing by about 30 points, even though his name identification had increased. A WDIV-TV poll was equally discouraging for Lucas, showing him trailing Blanchard by 61 percent to 21 percent among blacks and by 44 percent to 32 percent among whites.

Perhaps even worse were the candidate's straight Republican ticket in November. Asked whether, as a former Democrat, he had voted for Blanchard in 1982, Lucas conceded that he had done so because he thought Blanchard would be a good governor but that he had been wrong. Then Lucas was asked whether he would be a straight-ticket voter on the GOP ticket this year, and replied he didn't think he had to be.

In view of the fact that the polls show Lucas has not been winning the support of as many self-described Republicans as he needs to win, his response quickly caught attention - and quickly led to a reversal of his position. The next day Lucas said he had been speaking philosophically the day before and that, of course, he would vote the straight GOP ticket in November.

The campaign is not over for Lucas but he does need to run a tighter ship than he has to date if he is to win. Even the start of his impres-sive new $700,000 TV and radio advertising campaign won't be able to help him if he confuses his listeners and readers about what he thinks and believes now that he is the GOP nominee for governor.

Lucas usually is an eloquent spokesman not only for his own candidacy but for the GOP. As the underdog, however, he does run the risk of self-destruction unless he keeps a close rein on his own tongue and on his campaign staff.

Educational decisions up to all of us

To the Editor:

After reading Mr. Sommerville's letters on the editorial page (Aug. 21, Sept. 12), I wanted to respond from one school board member's perspective. Mr. Sommerville is to be commended for his years of teaching in this community. His concerns about who makes educational decisions for our children is a valid one. I have completed my first year on the Grosse Pointe Board of Education. There has been so much to learn this past year. It has been very challenging, but also somewhat disappointing.

The Board of Education meets the first two Mondays of every month. The board must (legally) and does conduct all their business in public. Unfortunately, it's rare to see the public - parents, stu-dents, teachers. I've yet to be invited to a teachers association gathering, a PTO meeting, a classroom or even been interviewed by civics or journalism students. (I ty were discussed and developed in individual groups. The goals for 1986-87 for the school system are a direct result from the input obtained at this dinner meeting.

The League of Women Voters holds a public forum to meet school board candidates every May. Their forum is dependent on questions from the audience. This is an excellent opportunity to discuss educational issues in our community. However, other than candidates' spouses, campaign mana-gers and present board members, nobody is there.

As another school year begins, may I encourage citizens to be informed on issues affecting their schools. The Board of Education is the ultimate decision-making body. We need your interest and your input.

attendance procedures at the high schools, determining if to ban smoking and how to enforce such a regulation, implementing a substance abuse program, strengthening suicide intervention programs, curriculum review procedures, preparing for teacher and administrator shortages, negotiating a teachers' contract, reviewing counseling programs, improving latchkey services - these are only some of the tasks at hand. The answer to Mr. Sommerville's concern about who makes educational decisions for our children must be all of us - board, administrators, teachers, parents and students working together.

own comments about whether he would vote the

Widening the GOP field

Even though the 1988 election is more than two years away, two presidential hopefuls last week took steps to get into the race for the GOP nomination and thus widened the field philosophically as well as numerically.

In one move, Pat Robertson, the TV evangelist from Virginia, announced he would run for the GOP nomination if three million registered voters petitioned him in the coming year to do so. In the other move, former Delaware Gov. Pierre (Pete) DuPont formally announced his candidacy, becoming the first GOP entry to do

Neither of the candidates has had much of a following in Grosse Pointe - this GOP island in the Democratic sea of Wayne County - but Robertson ran second to Vice President George Bush in the number of precinct delegates supporters who were elected in the August state primary. In fact, Robertson's backers claim he had the support of more than 40 percent of the delegates at the recent GOP state convention.

Michigan is not the only state in which Robertson has built up a following, however. He reportedly is organizing in Florida and North Carolina as a base for a campaign for support in the 1988 Southern regional primary in which 10 or more Southern states will vote on the same day. As founder of the cable Christian Broadcasting Network and host of the "700 Club," a news and talk show broadcast from studios in Virginia Beach, Va., Robertson claims one of the largest, if not the largest, of the electronic ministries.

Robertson is supported by some of the other TV evangelists, notably the Rev. Jimmy Swaggert who broadcasts from Baton Rouge, La., but he does not get their unanimous support. The Rev. Jerry Falwell, for example, has endorsed Vice President Bush.

No one questions Robertson's right to campaign for the presidency if he wishes to do so. Some critics, however, oppose his candidacy on the grounds he is using his religion and his following for the benefit of his political ambitions and perhaps threatening the freedom of religion guaranteed by the First Amendment.

Some Republicans also are concerned that Robertson's candidacy could divide the party, or, as Remer Tyson recently put it in the Detroit Free Press, "create an image of far-right radicalism that will make millions of voters suspicious of the GOP." Other GOP leaders believe, however, Robertson would bring millions of new voters into the GOP fold.

Robertson is said to echo the Reagan agenda of lower taxes, reduced federal spending, a strong defense, prayer in the public schools, and strengthening the family. He also opposes abortions, new sanctions against South Africa and society's permissiveness. But he has no experience in public office.

In contrast to Robertson, who has received wide publicity in Michigan because of a half dozen or so campaign visits, little has been said in this state about DuPont. The New York Times, however, last week front-paged his announcement and in a long story outlined his record and his campaign strategies.

DuPont is difficult to classify ideologically, according to the Times. In three terms in Congress, various ideological groups rated his record as moderate to moderately liberal but, according to the Times, he has seemed to become more conservative as his national ambitions grew.

Among the planks in the platform he announced last week were mandatory drug testing of all teenagers, work programs to replace welfare, an end to any government involvement in the "agricultural marketplace" and a program of government loans to anyone who wants a college education or job training.

It is perhaps significant that the two candidates who made the news last week were from two extremes of the party. Robertson is a leader of the right-wing Christian movement that has in recent years played an increasingly active role in the GOP. DuPont comes out of the more moderate wing of the Republican Party which has been somewhat in eclipse under President Reagan.

In Michigan, however, Bush still appears to be the early leader in the GOP presidential derby. He won the 1980 presidential primary in this state over Ronald Reagan and in the 1986 primary his candidates for precinct delegates who will start the process of picking the state's 1988 GOP national convention delegates — won more contests than did those supporting either Robertson or Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

But it's still a long way to 1988 and Michigan voters have plenty of time to evaluate the records and programs of the various candidates in both parties. They should take the time and trouble to do so because their votes could help elect the president who occupies, in the minds of many political scientists, the most powerful position in the world.

did visit every school last year).

There has been some criticism that the board "ran off" to western Wayne County (Intermediate School District) in June to formulate a five-year plan for the school system. What is never mentioned is that the night preceding that meeting another dinner meeting was held at North High School with over 100 people in attendance (board, administrators, teachers, parents and community leaders). At this meeting, goals and priorities for the schools and communi-

No to gambling

To the Editor:

Casino gambling is a controversial issue in Detroit right now. The Sept. 4 issue of the Grosse Pointe News states that Mayor Young believes it will help bring more jobs to the city

It seems that Mayor Young is being intimidated not to vote on casino gambling by people who are opposed to it. Casino gambling may bring more crime and law enforcement costs not only in Detroit. but in the east side area also. Detroit is well aware that crime is very high and casino gambling will only add to it. I believe this project is something we can all live without.

Re: Red Barons football and your article, "Coaching, competition: How do they affect kids?'

Enclosed please find a letter I am sending to Mr. Rick Moore, president of the Red Barons Football Program. We usually refrain from this type of response because life is full of disappointments. However, in this instance, I cannot ignore Mr. Moore's actions.

For your information, our son recruited of his own initiative four other boys for the Red Barons Program. Of those boys, two have been asked to quit, including our son. The other two boys are not happy and the parents are currently waiting to see if the situation improves before making the decision to stay or quit.

My question is: Is Red Barons fun or is it an ordeal for many kids?

My question is: Does Red Bar-Barons value providing good experiences for kids? My question is: Does Red Baron support the view that coaches

Change in climate at South with Shine

To the Editor:

You may have noticed that despite my resolution to the contrary, criticism of the educational bureaucracy sometimes slips into my letters. Not this time, however; I promise.

The teachers immediately noticed a change in the climate at South when Ed Shine became principal last year. For one thing, he did not arrive on the scene with ready-made answers for the school's problems; nor did he have the answers by the Friday of his first week or even after several months. Strange behavior, indeed, for a principal!

Even then he did not see South's main office each day; nor did he attribute the decline in SAT scores to the teachers leaving the building during a planning period to cash their paychecks once every two weeks. He did not seek to improve the learning environment by ordering the cleaning of the cafeteria's fireplaces. He did not try to ingratiate himself with any element of the faculty or the student body. He was fair, direct, and honest with all and, most important, he was not omniscient. It was almost as if: "For better or worse, here I am, warts and all." In short, Mr. Shine is returning a dignity and a professionalism to South that has been absent too problems being caused by the failure of the teachers to pick up and return their school keys in the

More goodwill in Detroit?

What's New on

THE HILL

To the Editor:

I wonder if amidst the crime and poverty of Detroit there still might not exist more goodwill there as compared to that which exists amid the serenity and affluence of Grosse Pointe.

A recent incident I witnessed brought that idea into mind. A friend and I were bicycling in Grosse Pointe City. My friend had just purchased her bike and was an inexperienced bicyclist. A nearmiss occurred between her and a motorist obviously on his way home from work. An altercation ensued between the two and the driver did have the right to explain the rules of the road. However, he proceeded to drive his luxury car into my friend in attempts to push her into the curb. He yelled, "Do you want me to teach you a lesson?'

Such ferocity and malice I have never witnessed before during my time in the Detroit area. For those Detroiters who aspire to move into Grosse Pointe, please beware. You may gain a nice house, but lose your civility.

and razzle-dazzle, are united in his support. Hopefully, South's parents will recognize that under competent leadership, a renaissance has begun. No longer will the teachers have to go it alone.

I must add, however, that the teachers are not all that optimistic about the duration of Mr. Shine's tenure. What if his principles and professionalism come into conflict with 389 St. Clair? If worse should come to worse, South could follow the example of the Confederacy and secede . . . from the Grosse Poine school district . with Mr. Shine as president-

Get to heart of problem

To the Editor:

In a recent article about the lifeguard situation at the Woods pool, Donald Hallmann was noted as saying lifeguards in the pool area were professionals. This is certainly far from the truth.

These so-called professionals have absolutely no control over the main pool area. They have no means of communicating with swimmers and as a result are not heard or listened to.

Simple logic would suggest that a whistle and a blowhorn are standard equipment for every life-guard, especially in a pool of that size. It's no wonder that accidents have occurred at the pool.

As a former lifeguard and WSI (water safety instructor), I urge the city to get to the heart of the problem and not blame flotation devices for what is clearly the mismanagement of a manageable situation.

Opposed to casino gambling

To the Editor:

I would like to express my opi-nion on the article titled "The casino gambling delay" located on page 6A of the Sept. 4 edition of the Grosse Pointe News. In the article, you imply that you are against gambling in Detroit. I am also opposed.

Should Mayor Young and the city council agree on the proposed bill to legalize casino gambling, the city and its suburbs will suffer in many ways. Other cities with legalized gambling, such as Las egas and Atlantic City, have high crime rates. I feel not only the city crime rates will increase, but so will the surrounding suburbs, such as Grosse Pointe. Secondly, the revenue from the Detroit casinos will be offset by the increased law enforcement costs. Belle Isle, the sight which has been proposed for the casinos, is now a family park. Gambling and drinking on the island would certainly ruin the family atmosphere. After all, the island is one of the few places residents can go to get away from the city. I feel that the majority of the people of the city and suburbs are against the idea of bringing gambling to Detroit, since they have voted against it twice. Really, if Mayor Young is for gambling, why is he delaying the proposal until after the city election. Could this be for votes? In my opinion, it is definitely political.

I say

Many among the flood of letters protesting the Sept. 4 Grosse Pointe News "kill the abortionists" cartoon have invited us to respond. It has been suggested that to ignore the storm of protest is to be arrogant.

Arrogance is not our intent. The space on our editorial pages allows for the free flow of readers' opinions, not, in general, for an editorial "last word.

But since you asked . . .

We anticipated some protest when we ran Arkie Hudkins' cartoon. Abortion is, after all, a heavily emotional social issue. The cartoon was in no way intended as an endorsement of abortion, however.

The Grosse Pointe News, as our readers know, does not take positions on social issues, preferring to leave these decisions to our readers. We limit our editorial endorsements to local political issues

We saw - and still see - the cartoon as an indictment of extremism, not of pro-lifers. There are those within any social or philosophical movement who carry measures far beyond reasonable limits. To decry the methods of some extreme pro-lifers as Hudkins did is not to tar the pro-life; belief or the majority of moderate pro-lifers. As Don Marquis once sagely noted, "An idea is not responsible for the people who believe in it."

At least one letter has accused us of running a highly charged political cartoon with no bearing on cur-rent events. It is true that no one has bombed an abortion clinic in Grosse Pointe. On the charge of running a cartoon without a news hook, we plead guilty. But that does not change our opposition to violent extremism within the prolife movement and elsewhere.

Most of the letter-writers have demanded an apology or a retraction. In the tradition of ancient Eastern sages, allow me to tell a story instead.

Only three weeks ago, I had the experience of walking a few steps in our angry readers' shoes. Although the topic that angered me is different, the parallels are instructive.

My hometown newspaper runs a regular humorous feature about life on the farm. On this particular occasion, the writer was frustrated because some predator was eating the ducklings on her pond. To

since you asked shorten the story, she learned to shoot a .22 rifle and proceeded to stalk the predator, which she expected to be a snapping turtle or a fox.

To her surprise, the predator was a great blue heron, a protected species. She popped away at it and missed, but closed her column with the warning that if the heron came around again, it would be "a dead duck.'

I was furious. A letter to the editor ensued, in which I wrote that the column had failed in its humorous intent, that shooting herons is illegal and that to suggest doing so in the newspaper is irresponsible.

The editor replied, in part, "An error in judgment was committed on the part of this newspaper in neglecting to remember that everyone does not view things in the same way. For this we apologize."

A gracious retraction, one might think. Perhaps the response some of our readers are looking for. But after my anger cooled, I decided it misses the point.

The fact that readership is diverse is a good thing. But the implication is that if a remark offends a segment of a diverse readership, the remark shouldn't be in the paper. The trouble with that is that, having excised every possible offending comment, one is left with pap.

Better the roar of clashing reader disagreement than a paper filled with inoffensive oatmeal.

We believe that the Grosse Pointe community is a diverse one. It has political liberals as well as conservatives and honest, well-intentioned people on both sides of the abortion controversy.

Although we are sorry to have offended anyone, we do not regret running a statement against violence. We are in fact delighted to see yet another manifestation of one of the strengths of Grosse Pointe: an outpouring of passionate and reasoned argument. Keep those cards and letters comin', folks.

Everyone should wear them

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to an article on back seat safety belts in the Grosse Pointe News on Sept. 4.

The writer is pointing out that the idea of back seat shoulder harnesses only confuses people into not wearing seat belts at all. Some people believe that the back seat belts don't help save lives, but the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says this is not true at all.

I believe that seat belts anywhere in the car will help save lives. I have just recently been through drivers training and it convinced me that wearing seat belts is a priority. I agree that the National Transportation Safety Board's recommendation that shoulder harnesses should be made standard confuses people, because there is uncertainty of the effectiveness of lap belts because the safety board is pulling so hard for the harnesses.

I believe that if everyone wore seat belts, they would soon realize that they do save lives and they should wear them every time they climb into a car.

Prime time for senior citizens Maintain Belle Isle — a precious landmark

By Marian Trainor One of the pleasures of living in the Detroit area is, and always has been, the opportunity to visit Belle Isle. Childhood memories are made there from picnics by the lagoon, watching the canoes glide by, the freedom of running through enormous expanses of green grass, the fun of swinging through the air up toward the sky on the swing sets, or zooming down the slide with the earth rising up to meet your feet, or your seat.

And don't forget the pony rides, those adorable stubborn little beasts who would take you halfway 'round the island and then stop dead, refusing to go another inch unless you turned around and pointed them back toward the barns

And there was the stop at the aquarium to see the fish, big and little, swimming aimlessly and leisurely in the tanks, staring back with their cold glassy eyes at you, but with what always seemed like a little grin, making you wonder if they were happy in their restricted, sheltered area or if they longed for the freedom of the adventurous water of their birthright. And then it was on to the bath-house and the beach where you could splash and play in the river. the greenness of trees and grass bordered with bright and beautiful We didn't think much about it then, but it was an unusual setting. Here we were on a beach that could have been miles away in a country setting, and across the river we could see the bastions of industry - concrete symbols of a busy, industrial noting new attractions.

For city kids, the opportunity to spend a few hours actually being in a body of water and feeling sand under feet hardened and calloused from walking barefoot on concrete sidewalks was a real treat.

It was special and better than a trip to the firehouse where the firemen would rope off the street and turn the hydrant on for us to enjoy the coolness and fun of playing in the gushing stream — although that could be a treat, too, on a hot steamy, summer day. At the end of the day when we were making our weary way home, it was a toss-up whether the beach or the casino had been the highlight of the day.

We had enjoyed all of the special treats in a generous picnic basket packed with our favorite foods minced ham sandwiches, chocolate cake, real lemonade - simple foods that disappeared into our bottomless stomachs, but the day had two special events left to make it memorable.

One was stopping off at the Belle Isle casino for a cook drink or a quick pick-me-up snack. It was such a grown-up feeling sitting on the porch at a table looking out at that knew them. Detroit and its environs have grown and sometimes choked on its growth, but Belle Isle remains an untouched jewel, an oasis for those who seek relief from a city that is too often cruel and hazardous

It has changed but not basically. In some ways it has improved. Note the giant slide, the children's zoo and the refurbished casino where senior citizens and other groups gather for recreation and friendship.

It has been well maintained, largely due to the Friends of Belle Isle. It is still a pleasure to either drive the perimeter or to go through the wooded areas. Where else so close to a metropolis will you see white deer roaming unafraid, making a lovely picture as they stand at attention in the green leaves of the trees?

And is there any more beautiful sight than that of the rising Detroit skyline shadowed in the glow of a setting sun about to disappear into the darkening waters of the river? Shall we talk, too, of the pleasure of sitting on the riverbank and seeing powerboats cut through the waters or cabin cruisers moving gracefully and sedately down the river?

This piece of land, this island is ours to enjoy, to brag about to those not lucky enough to live near the water, and to show off to visitors. We want to keep it. We don't want it jeopardized by selling our birthright to casino gambling. Detroit will survive and prosper by other means than raping one of its main attractions under the false hope it will help the city economically.

Atlantic City tried it in 1971. Last year 28 million people passed through the city, attracted by 11 gambling casinos. But despite the massive influx of visitors, the city is still not back on its feet and is reeling under a new blow — an increase in crime. Atlantic City is known as Crime City U.S.A., according to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. It has the highest crime rate in the nation, leading in both the rates for violent crime, larcenies and thefts.

Would Detroit's future be any different than Atlantic City's if casino gambling near or on Belle Isle came about?

It's not something we want to find out the hard way — not when we can simply say 'no' to any movement that would undermine our quality of life or destroy one of our most precious landmarks -Belle Isle.

New face, new job

Dale Krajniak, the new comptroller at the Park, has been on the job now for about a month. He was city clerk/comptroller at Harbor Springs until he was hired to replace Nunzio Ortisi, who retired after 28 years of service with the Park. Ortisi's position was split and Pam Kondziolka, below, was named city clerk. She has worked for the Park for 71/2 years, most recently as city treasurer.

Woods will fight blight with maintenance ordinance

It's taken a couple years, but the Woods will have a property maintenance ordinance at last.

The proposed ordinance will be up for second reading and final adoption at the first council meeting in October.

The proposed ordinance sets minimum standards for maintenance of exteriors of homes and buildings in the community. Buildings include sheds, garages, out-and accessory buildings and businesses.

Flaking paint exceeding 5 percent of the painted surface area of the buildings, rotted or hanging gutters, loose or peeling siding exceeding 5 percent of the surface, rusted railings, trims and overhangs, leaking roofs, collapsing walls and broken or cracked windows and glass will be considered violations of the ordinance.

The city's building inspector, who will enforce the proposed code, will notify violators in

Writers conference

An Oct. 3 manuscript deadline has been set by Oakland University's Division of Continuing Education and Detroit Women Writers for individuals wishing to have their writing critiqued by professionals at the 25th annual Writer's Conference to be held Oct. 17-18 on campus near Rochester.

Manuscripts to be discussed at the Friday, Oct. 17 lab sessions will include categories in fiction, nonfiction, religion, juvenile, mystery, poetry, short stories, and articles.

Manuscripts submitted for evaluation must adhere to stringent requirements and be received by OU's Continuing Education office by Oct. 3. To submit a manuscript, one must be registered for the conference. For a brochure detailing manuscript requirements, fees, and conference, call 370-3120, between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m., weekdays

On Saturday, Oct. 18, the Writer's Conference will offer 32 workshops, including best-selling author William X. Kienzle's session on Keeping the Mystery in Mysteries. Kienzle also will speak on "The Invisible Writer" at the Friday evening dinner at Meadow Brook Hall.

Book of the Month Club general editor William Zinsser will speak writing. They will have 60 days to correct the deficiency or ask for an extension — no more than 60 extra days. Appeals will be made to the city council.

It's taken the city about three years, but it will finally have a legally enforcable ordinance, according to Paul Beaupre, the councilman who first proposed the property maintenance idea. Such an ordinance will go a long way to help fight residential blight in the city, he added. "When you have a mature community, aging housing stock is an important factor that needs to be addressed," Beaupre added.

There have been some complaints about the problem, and the only remedy the city has had until recently has been through health and safety codes. But court cases decided recently have given the city the ability to do something to enforce minimum standards of appearance for homes and businesses, he said.

vard. After running through a number of rear yards and down side streets, the man was apprehended east of Cadieux on Water-100.

Witnesses called police when the man was spotted allegedly trying to steal a 1986 Ford Escort from the city parking lot. He was reportedly trying to rip the metal around the steering column with a screwdriver.

He fled when police arrived at the scene.

Public Safety Director Bruce Kennedy said he issued departmental commendations for four officers involved in the chase.

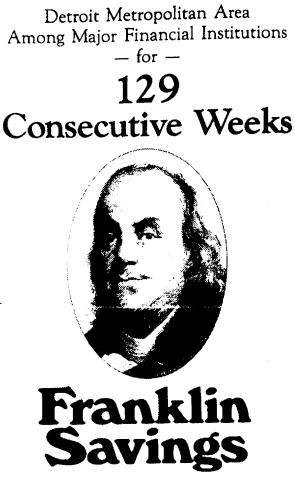

B&B directory is free

A new Bed and Breakfast (B&B) and Historical Inns directory is available from Michigan Travel Bureau.

The new directory lists more than 100 B&B establishments and historical hotels throughout Michigan. The 43-page booklet provides detailed information on the number of rooms, activities, reservations information, and a brief description of each home or hotel.

Not all Michigan B&Bs are just quiet country inns. They are located in resorts, tourist spots, college towns, small villages and even big cities.

In the bureau's directory, a Bed and Breakfast is defined as a small home with up to seven rooms in which the host treats the visitor more like a guest than a customer. A continental breakfast is always included. An inn has eight to 20 rentable sleeping rooms; breakfast is generally included in the price of the room, but not always. Historic hotels have 20 or more

These children need someone to turn to

By Nancy Parmenter Katie Leiser is looking for a few good people.

When the children at the Children's Home of Detroit, in Grosse Pointe Woods, progress to the point where they can benefit by returnno Grosse Pointe families for them to go to. So the kids, who need stability more than anything else, are yanked out of the schools here to go to Macomb or Oakland counties to live with a foster family.

Leiser is working to change that. 'It's a big commitment, but it can be very satisfying," she said. "We are looking for people with inner strength, people who will persevere and have the patience to keep on going.

Requirements for foster parents have changed over the years, says Leiser, who coordinates the foster care for Children's Home and several other mental health agencies, as well as a few neglected children who come to her attention through the juvenile court system.

Now single or divorced people can be foster parents, as can twoing to a family situation, there are career families. "The thing we want is that someone be home most of the time after school and on weekends," Leiser said. "We wouldn't want a single parent who works the second shift."

> The program is aimed at children who have made good progress to the point where they can fit into a family, but their own family is, for various reasons, unable to take them back. The children need help with socializing and with trusting adults. Frequently, they have a low self-image. And, they'd like to stay in the school system they have grown up in.

"They may have only one or two years left," Leiser said. "They have already been shipped around a lot. They need stability."

Of the approximately 50 children currently living at the home, six are ready for foster care. They range in age from 12 to 17.

A typical foster-care candidate probably saw his parents divorce when he or she was young, Leiser said. He probably has lived with each parent separately and may have lived with grandparents as well. His parents are involved in their own personal problems. The child lacks stability, feels rejected and is likely to blame himself for the moves he has had to make. He suffers from low selfesteem and may physically act out his frustrations.

"People always say that sounds just like every kid, and it's true, it does," Leiser said. "But other children don't suffer these problems as often or as extremely." This typical child has often been removed from his family, sent to a psychiatric hospital for stability and structure, evaluation and therapy, and then moved to a residential care facility like the Children's Home.

"It's a continuum of care, from the hospital to residential care to a foster home," Leiser said.

During this period, the child has started his studies at Barnard Center, a special education facili-ty operated by the Grosse Pointe schols on the grounds of the Children's Home. He has then progressed to special ed classes and sometimes to regular classes at the public schools. About half of the Children's Home high school students take no special education clsses at all, Leiser said.

"We're very selective about the children we place," Leiser said. "They often need long-term care, so we are carful about the match. It affects everyone in the family.

Foster parents are allowed to request age and sex of their foster child and have the right to refuse any placement after studying the child's background. Although the children have emotional problems, Leiser says she screens them to avoid placing physically aggressive children.

"We give them what they're ask-ing for as much as possible," she said.

The home has received a few inquiries over the years, but Leiser says foster parents are hard to find.

"People tend to go into it idealis-tically," she said. "But it takes a lot of perseverance. People don't change overnight and you have to learn to be content with small gains.'

Those interested in the challenging job of foster-parenting may call Leiser at 886-0800.

Con men hit Mack businesses

A pair of con men hit two north Mack businesses last week, ac-cording to Woods police.

The proprietor at a hardware store and an employee of a bar were duped by the pair. The hardware store loss was $20, the bar employee's, $25, according to police.

In each incident, which occurred on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 17 and 18, a man purporting to be the owner of a roofing company called the business and convinced the person answering the phone he was either a regular customer or a friend of the owner.

In the hardware store incident Thursday afternoon, the caller convinced the proprietor he was a regular customer by naming off employees at the store, reports said.

In the Wednesday afternoon call to the bar, the con man convinced a bar employee that the caller was a friend of the owner.

The caller then said he had a roofing worker in the area whose truck had broken down. The driver needs $20 or $25 for repairs, the caller says, asking the person answering to lend the money to the driver. The caller added he will settle up the next time he was in. Shortly after the call was made, a person came into the business to pick up the money. He identified himself as an employee of the com-pany and filled out an IOU.

The man who picked up the money at the hardware store was described to police as being in his mid-20s, about 5 feet, 11 inches tall and weighing about 160 pounds, with blond hair and blue eyes. He was wearing tan pants and a white shirt, according to police.

Picking up the money from the bar was a white male in his early 20s, wearing jeans, a jean jacket and tennis shoes. He was about 5 feet, 4 inches tall, weighing 120 pounds, with brown hair and a dark complexion, according to reports.

Police say the two probably alternate calling a business, with the other person picking up the money. The two businesses hit were in the same block and both cons occurred at about the same time each day, police said. Investigation continues.

School thefts

About $4,500 worth of computer equipment was taken from a Grosse Pointe South High School computer room Sept. 15, according to Farms police.

Entry to the building was believed to be gained through a window Taken were two printers, two computer keyboards, two disk drives and two computer monitors. The burglary is believed to have occurred after 4 a.m. Another Grosse Pointe school system building was broken into Sept. 12 — Richard Elementary School.

Entry, again, was through a win-dow, police believe.

At least $50 was taken from two different classrooms.

Farms police are continuing an investigation.

Paper thieves caught

City police have arrested two men wanted for stealing a bundle of the Sunday Free Press from in front of a drugstore two weeks ago.

One of the men was walking to the car with an armload of Sunday papers when the store owner tried to stop him Sept. 14. He told the owner he was an employee of the Free Press and had accidentally left too many papers. He then drove away, but not before the store owner got a description of the car.

Three days later, the police got their men. A cop on patrol spotted the car and arrested a Park man, 21, and a Detroit man, 22, police reports said.

Thief takes cash

A thief apparently broke into a house on Nottingham while the residents slept Sept. 16. A purse containing $150 and credit cards was reported missing in the morning, according to Park police reports.

The thief apparently gained entry through a rear window by standing on a bench. The storm window was open and the inside widow unlocked.

The purse was later found in a dumpster behind Wayburn, according to the report.

Ring stolen

A woman visiting friends in the City reported a cocktail ring missing Sept. 13. The white gold and diamond ring was last seen on a tray on a vanity with a necklace and another ring, not missing, City police said.

The ring was valued at $750.

The city sent a second letter dated Aug. 25 asking for line item breakdowns on the number and cost of personnel assigned to the facility, a breakdown of maintenance costs and a justification of the type and cost of two lawn tractors the drain board plans to purchase for the facility, Catlin said. The letter, addressed to Youngblood, was not received by the county, Didur said. Estimates contained in the tentative budget include increased spending for maintenance of the aging facility, costs for consulting fees, liability insurance and utili ty costs, Didur said.

It doesn't appear to be that unrealistic," he added.

The city charges that, were the drain board to buy the same type lawn tractors used by the county's Office of Public Service, it could halve its costs to about $24,000.

Fromm named Farms mayor

By Peter A. Salinas The Farms council voted unanimously Monday night to name Joseph Fromm mayor, but only after a lengthy discussion. Fromm will serve as mayor until the next city election in November, 1987. The council voted to wait until the next meeting, Oct. 6, to fill the seat that remains vacant on the council.

Several of the councilmen wanted to wait until Mary Ann Ghesquiere returned from being out of town.

Councilman Bruce Rockwell said he felt leaving the position vacant for several weeks was not in the best interests of the city. Gail Kaess, John Crawley and Harry Echlin all indicated in an informal poll of the council's wishes that they wanted to wait until Ghesquiere returned.

Both Fromm and Rockwell said they would like nominations and a vote, but would wait if the majority of the council desired. Kaess later changed her mind about waiting. Rockwell then nominated Fromm for mayor, the nomination was seconded and Fromm's nomination was approved unanimously

Earlier in the meeting Fromm asked that a moment of silence be held to honor Mayor James H. Dingeman, who died Sept. 18. Later a resolution honoring Dingeman was read and passed

Farms garage burns

It took firefighters 45 minutes to completely extinguish a fire in a garage on Manor Road in the Farms Sept. 5. The Farms department sent out the ladder and pumper trucks, but had to call a second alarm for manpower, according to Fire Chief Sam Candela.

"We're down to four men here, with vacations and sick time,' Candela said.

The fire, which was ruled accidental, started in a corner of the 50-year-old garage where paint and solvents were stored. Candela said the fire should serve as a reminder to residents of the danger in storing flammable liquids and oily rags.

The resident suffered about $5,000 in property damage, which was insured, according to the report.

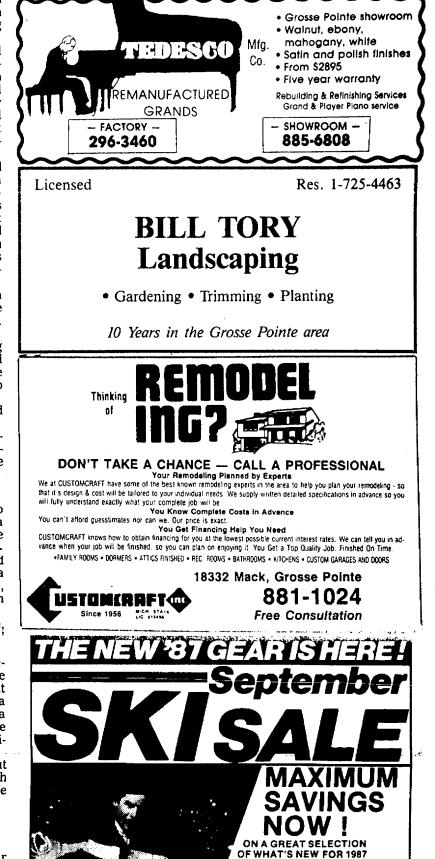

Dieting seminar

A "Head-First Dieting" seminar will guide participants to take off eight to 12 pounds betw and last session scheduled from 7 to 9 p.m. on Mondays, Sept. 29, Oct. 13. and Oct. 27, at Lakeview High School, 21100 11 Mile Road. Based on a behavior modification plan and original recipes from the recently released "The Head-First Diet," the seminar will be held by behavior counselor Lenore Bechtel, who co-authored the book, subtitled "How to Lose Weight and Be Happy Not Hungry." The book is available at Grosse Pointe Book Village, All Pointes Bookshop and New Horizons Book Shop, or may be purchased for $9.95 the first night of the seminar. Man shot by Park police

Park went to the Bon Secours hospital room of Derrick Dexter Sept. 16 to arraign him on charges of auto theft, receiving and concealing stolen property and attempted auto theft. Dexter, 17, of Detroit, was allegedly stealing a car two days earlier when Park police caught him near Windmill Pointe ment. Park. Dexter was shot in the buttock and leg during the arrest.

Dexter's companion, Detroiter Alfonso Jordan, 20, has been arraigned on the same charges. Jordan is being held in the Wayne County jail while he raises bond. A preliminary examination is

Alzheimer aid

Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association, Detroit area chapter, has developed an inhome respite program for families who have a member afflicted with Alzheimer's disease or another irreversible dementia. This program is servicing Wayne, Oakland and St. Clair counties.

Families will be allowed a designated number of service hours each week. Services are available at this time between 9 and 5 weekdays. However, beginning in October, services will be extended on Tuesdays and Thursdays until 10 p.m. In most instances, no fee will be charged; in other cases, a nominal fee will be assessed according to a sliding fee scale.

Volunteers will donate their time for this service. They will be provided extensive training by highly skilled professional people. Volunteers will be reimbursed for mileage during the training and also for mileage traveled to and from placement sites. Lunch will be available during training at no cost and a small monetary donation will be paid to the volunteer to cover minor expenses of being trained.

The program will also feature pieces by Brahms, Mozart, Handel and Verdi.

Tickets are $9, $12, $15 and $100 for a box of four seats. For infor-

Costs for maintenance are increasing because the facility is outdated, Didur said. "It's just an old place.

Catlin said he will send a copy of the Aug. 25 letter to the county along with his letter, again requesting the information and noting the council's action in authorizing him to file suit under the Freedom of Information Act.

Ironically, the Woods will end up not only paying Catlin's costs to file, should a lawsuit be necessary, it will also have to pay 60 percent of the cost of the defense bill for the drain board.

WCISD to celebrate 25 years; educates in many ways

By Peter. A. Salinas It touches the lives of each of the 390,000 students in Wayne County, but many county residents know little about the organization which commands a $65 million annual budget.

Next month the Wayne County Intermediate School District will kick off a year-long celebration of 25 years of service to its local school districts — currently there are 34 in the county.

In 1962 the state legislature passed a law which mandated that Michigan's 83 counties be consolidated into 59 regional intermediate school districts.

These intermediate school districts operate programs that local school districts would be unable to afford on their own. They provide services such as data processing, special education, career and occupation adult education, Head Start and consultant services for all areas of education.

In short, an intermediate school district is a clearinghouse of information and services, for its constituent local districts.

An intermediate school district is funded by three primary sources — local, state and federal money. The Wayne County Intermediate District levies a total of 1.1 mills county-wide. This generates about $20 million. The federal government provides the district with $21 million and the state contributes $24 million to the intermediate district.

Of those local dollars, about $1 million is raised from the Grosse Pointe school district.

Pointe school district. The WCISD is a huge organization. Consultants are available to the districts for such programs as transportation, general education, curriculum planning, data processing, grant applications and other educational areas.

The intermediate school district is perhaps best known for its statemandated job of providing educational services for people with physical handicaps.

There are a number of handicaps that occur with enough frequency so that a local school district will have sufficient students to develop a program to train them according to state and federal mandates. Other handicaps occur less frequently, and the community may not be able to develop a program — that's where the intermediate district comes in.

There are about 700 students in special education programs for the severely mentally or severely multiply impaired, run by the intermediate district.

In recent years, the Grosse Pointe school district has developed programs of its own for students with multiple disabilities and for other less severe problems. Most local districts, however, utilize the services offered by the in-cost to the local districts.

One of the unique programs offered by the intermediate district is of special interest to those students who have handicaps which do not allow them to speak on their own.

Greg Turner, an intermediate district data processing consultant, has a staff of two. Together they build and program the WOLF, a small computer which is programmed to speak phrases when various buttons on its face are pressed.

Saying these simple phrases would be of no great importance to most people, but to children and young adults who have a hard time communicating their needs, the box is a miracle.

Although, these kinds of computers are available commercially, they are expensive. Turner said they cost about $2,500 on the market.

The intermediate district has its large data processing staff. When not repairing equipment for local districts or working with the inter-mediate's large computers, the staff helps build the components of the talking box. Turner and his small crew then put the machines together and program them to meet the individual needs of each student. The intermediate district charges just enough to recoup its material costs — about $275.

Joyce Willis, an administrative assistant for the intermediate district, said the program is likely the only one of its kind in the country.

Outside his cramped but colorful office, Turner has a set of small golden arches. Underneath reads a small sign, "Over 450 sold."

Turner noted that by giving children who cannot speak a voice, their scope of learning and the interaction with the world around them is enhanced.

Turner and his employer have been sending the "talking boxes" around the country. The boxes weigh only one-and-one-half pounds, and contain miniaturized computer equiment. They are shipped off in boxes that literally fill the small workshop where the components are put together.

Willis said it is this type of program that brings the greatest sense of achievement to the staff of the intermediate district.

At any given time, dozens of administrative personnel may be at Wayne center or at the four satellite offices around the county. A seminar may be being given that would aid transportation supervisors or secretaries may be receiving training on a word processor.

Teachers may use the center's materials facility. This facility provides teachers the raw material for student projects. Staff are on duty to train the teachers in the use of the various kinds of equipment necessary to make buttons, to laminate or develop another kind of craft project.

another kind of craft project. The intermediate district also has a huge printing plant. Some 75 million pages of print were run at the plant last year. The facility has the capability of running off copies of a typewritten letter, or reproducing color photographs for the cover of a sizeable magazine.

There are a number of Grosse Pointers involved inmaking the intermediate school district run. Joan Hanpeter, a Park resident, is president of the intermediate's elected board of education. Daniel Manthe, also a Grosse Pointe resident, is the district's legislative consultant.

Clare Ebersol, an associate superintendent, summed up what the intermediate school district does for its handicapped students.

"People in the county just don't know what it is we do," Ebersol said. "part of what we do is to help 10,000 kids to become selfsufficient, productive members of the society."

termediate district.

The one mill levied throughout the county does not cover the costs of running the intermediate district. Even with the federal and state funds, the intermediate district charges back costs to the local districts.

For instance, the intermediate district has two powerful computers. These computers provide local districts in Wayne and surrounding counties with a network for both administrational and instructional needs.

The computers help with finance, payroll, inventory, attendance, records, class scheduling and even school bus routing.

Each district is charged $5.75 per student enrolled for use of the computer network. Grosse Pointe's district paid about $42,000 for this service in the 1985-86 school year.

Some 28 of the 34 school districts use the intermediate district's computer network. The intermediate district has 31 employees in the data processing department. The department has an annual budget of about $4 million.

One of the ways the intermediate district saves the local district money is by providing services such as data processing. Four million dollars is a lot of money for an annual budget, but that doesn't include the capital outlay for the purchase of such high tech equipment. The kind of expenditure would be beyond the means of most school districts.

Another way the intermediate district helps to make local districts run more efficiently is through group purchasing. The intermediate district can buy payroll checks, paper, cleaning materials and other products in huge quantities, thereby reducing the unit

Law for lay people

The Michigan Trial Lawyers As-sociation, through its Macomb County Chapter, is offering a series of eight lectures by local judges and lawyers on topics of interest to the general public.

Topics to be covered are: Wills and Estates; Personal Injury; Courts and How They Operate; Drunk Driving; Consumer Protection; Real Estate: Buying, Renting, Investing and Financing; Domestic Relations and Visitation Rights; Business Law and Taxation; Investing in the 80's.

Lectures begin Monday, Sept. 29, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., and will continue for eight consecutive weeks. Students will receive a course booklet with outlines covering each of the topics to be discussed and will receive a diploma upon completion of the series of lectures. A fee of $10 will be charged for material.

The class is geared toward lay persons with a question and answer period following each lecture. Registration is limited to the first 200 registrants. All classes will be held at Macomb Community College, South Campus, 301 K Building, 14500 East Twelve Mile Road, Warren.

To register, forward name, address and telephone number with a check for $10 to People's Law School, 19900 East Ten Mile Road, St. Clair Shores, Mich. 48080, or call 779-7810.

Woods will hit bond market in big way

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Grosse Pointe Woods will sell almost $4.5 million in revenue bonds in the next couple of months to finance major road, water and sewer projects throughout the city.

The city council approved sale of $1.8 million in revenue bonds to the Michigan Municipal Bond Authority to finance a capital improve-ment program for the city's streets Sept. 15.

The bonds are the same type bought by Grosse Pointe Park in 1983. That city used the $1 million to resurface 15 local streets.

Fixed interest rate on the 15-year issue is 6.95 percent, according to City-Administrator Clerk Chester Petersen. Tax dollars will not be directly devoted to pay off the bonds, he added. Payments will come from money the city receives from state gas tax revenues.

Among the projects the city will undertake with the money will be resurfacing all lanes of Vernier Road from Mack to the Western city limits. The city will also resur-face Marter Road from Vernier to Aline.

Perhaps the largest price-tag project - about $500,000 - will be the city's work in conjunction with Wayne County for repair of Mack Avenue throughout the length of the city, Petersen said.

A number of local streets will also be resurfaced under the program, Petersen said.

The city decided to sell the bonds because interest rates were low and the proceeds would give the Woods a chance to speed up its six-year capital improvement plan, he added.

Interest rates from the bonds will remain at 6.95 percent no matter what happens with lending rates as a whole, Petersen said.

The city had the option to purchase bonds with a floating rate, which was about .9 percent lower, but there is no assurance interest rates will stay low, he added. In October, the city will seek to sell $2.5 million in revenue bonds to fund water and sewer projects throughout the city, Petersen said. Those bonds - also to be sold to the Michigan Municipal Bond Authority — will be paid off using the $4 surcharge residents pay on their water bills, Petersen said.

The state bond authority was established to help smaller cities borrow at lower rates and costs by pooling their needs, according to its executive director, Carol Walters

In the case of the Woods' issue, the city combined its sale with 28 other cities to get a share of $420 million that the bond authority received through sale of its own notes. Walters said.

The Woods will seek yet a third Department of Health and Human Services. Klein had offices on Gratiot in Detroit. Should voters approve issuance of the $3.5 million in park bonds, the city will have its current rating re-evaluated, Petersen said. The better the rating a city receives, the more interest banks and lending institutions are in buying that city's issues.

Chiropractor sentenced

Chiropractor Alan Klein of. Grosse Pointe Park was sentenced Sept. 12 to two consecutive fiveyear terms in federal prison for 39 counts of mail fraud. He also received five years' probation, to start after the 10-year sentence. In addition, he was ordered to pay restitution in the amount of $308,235.40, according to the United States Attorney's office.

Kelin was convicted July 10 of mail fraud involving a scheme to defraud Blue Cross/Blue Shield and Medicare through fradulent patient billings. For a period of three years, he billed the insurance plans for X-rays on people who were never his patients, according to testimony.

Plan holiday trip

Reservations are requested by Oct. 15 for the Winter Wonderland trip that the War Memorial will sponsor on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 5 and 6.

Christmas shopping lists should be included in the luggage of all those who plan to travel to Charlevoix and Petoskey, meccas for northern Michigan shoppers. The villages will be decked in their full Christmas finery to add to the spirit of the occasion.

A special highlight of the excur-sion will be an evening of unique dining at the Rowe Inn where guests will partake of the inn's Christmas Madrigal Dinner. The inn is noted for this annual feast, where costumed singers accompany the traditional English repast.

Accommodations for the night will be in the Lake Michigan wing of The Weathervane Terrace Hotel in Charlevoix. Lunch at The Doherty in Claire on the way up north, and dinner in Frankenmuth at Zehnder's on the return trip, will be included in the package price of $150 per person (double occupancy). The price also includes trans-portation, coffee and pastries prior to the 8 a.m. departure, a welcome reception, one breakfast, baggage handling and all taxes and tips. A single supplement is available for an additional $30. The group will return at 10 p.m. on Saturday.

Full payment is due at the time of the reservation which may be made in person or by mail to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. For additional information, call 881-7511.

Forty years of Soviet domination doesn't tamp their spirit recently traveled about 2,500 miles on land, visiting five countries in central and eastern Europe. Among them were three Sovietbloc countries - Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary. Following are her observations of life behind the Iron Curtain.

The setting is an intimate cabaret in Prague, the capital of the Czechoslovakia Socialist Republic, and the audience's attention is focused on the comedian on stage, who says, "Capitalism is on the abyss - and socialism is one step ahead.'

When the laughter subsides, he tells the story of one man describing to another the different stages of the world from the beginning to the present. "... the Stone Age, the Bronze Age, the Iron Age, slavery, feudalism, capitalism, alcoholism, socialism" The second man interrupts: "I don't understand alcoholism." The first man responds, "Well, who the hell would go from capitalism to socialism sober?

The political satire contrasts with the landscape: large red stars on the Gothic and baroque buildings, denoting state-owned property and slogans everywhere, on banners and signs, deifying an ideology.

On Aug. 29, small red flags are placed in holders above the portals of all buildings. They are faded from years of use. On a narrow street in Brno dominated by buildings on both sides, the little flags stand out against the very plain, clay-colored structures. They mark the anniversary of the Slovak national uprising in 1944 against the German occupation.

But another anniversary has been silently observed a few days before on Aug. 22. Instead of flags on buildings, this one is marked by Czechs laying flowers at a memorial in Wenceslaus Square, located in the heart of Prague. The memorial honors one of their young countrymen who set himself on fire to protest the Soviet inva-sion in 1968. The tribute takes place every year, quietly.

The church and the government

There are other notable contrasts to the ruling government. With Roman Catholicism the major religion, there are altogether 18 faiths practicing in Prague. The one sobering fact is that all of the churches — buildings and property — are maintained by the state and all of the clergy are paid by the state. There is an irony here: priests and rabbis and ministers supported by a form of government that opposes them.

Yet a chamber music concert performed last month in a medieval chapel consisted entirely of religious pieces sung in Latin. The chapel was rebuilt after the war

News editor Pat Paholsky the actors on stage. It's highly sophisticated. It opens with a nativity scene both on screen and on stage.

The references to religion in a country where the government controls all religions are puzzling. Is it an act of rebellion or are people simply speaking through other media? Or is it encouraged by the government for tourist consumption?

The black market

The black market in Prague is more rampant than in Poland and foreigners are constantly approached on the street by men who ask, "Change money?" For the prized American dollar, they offer double the tourist rate. If the tourist decides to do business, nobody stops to count. All the dealing is done while walking. The moneychanger's eyes are constantly sweeping the street, because they currency, the same Fiat costs $1.700 cash with immediate delivery. According to the guide, there is one car for every 17 Poles.

Poland's answer

Poland has the second highest birth rate in all of Europe. "The strong will of the Polish people to have more children is to preserve their nationality," says a historian. This is their unconscious answer to the whole system." Another person says, with a humor that seems to be a national trademark, that it's because of the storks. "We have many storks. That's why we have so many children."

They are also deeply religious. Since Solidarity first appeared in 1978, there are 2,000 more churches in the country and a professor says it is now popular for young people to attend. The country is 94 percent Roman Catholic, and historically, the church has stood with the peo-

The shortage of goods is especially frustrating to a Westernvisitor, who is accustomed to walking into a store, inspecting the merchandise and perhaps doing some comparison-shopping. In Poland, if the merchandise is available, it's behind the counter or roped off and a salesperson has to be summoned to get it. This is after the customer has waited in line, however. The customer doesn't tarry too long, deciding whether or not to buy; there are still people in line.

The rest rooms are an oddity in Poland. Instead of signs that have the equivalent of ladies and gentlemen in Polish, they are marked only by a circle or a triangle. The tourist who has trouble remembering which is which can associate women as round and men as pointy, and have no fear of walking into the wrong room.

The marketplace in Krakow starts to fill up every day in the late morning.

risk imprisonment if they're caught.

The black market thrives in Poland, but somehow it isn't as urgent. The street people, the waiter in the restaurant, all appear more relaxed.

It's not surprising, therefore, to hear that the second-best paid job in Poland belongs to waiters. It's because they have access to foreigners and hard currency, i.e. American dollars, French francs, German marks.

The best job in Poland, according to a professor, is gas station attendant. They earn more than the top scientists and the prime minister. Gas in Poland is rationed to about 10 gallons a month, depending on the size of the car. One gallon will cost about $1.25. On the black market, a gallon brings triple that amount, or about $4.

The third and fourth highest pay-

ple. "We go togther with the Polish church all the time," is one matter-of-fact statement. observer says, Another Through religion, the people are able to preserve their nationality and it's a means of escaping their ordinary lives.'

Shortages and lines

The Polish citizen is easy to spot. They carry plastic bags and when they see a line, they get in without mowing what is being sold. Such behavior is uncomprehensible to an American. But in a country where there is a constant shortage of goods and what is not available today may be in limited supply tomorrow, it's logical.

The resistance

Of the countries in the Soviet bloc, Poland is one of the most independent, and according to the observer, pays a big price for it. The majority of the farms - 88 percent - are privately owned.

The resistance to collective farming, along with the Solidarity movement, has caused the Soviets to put their thumb down harder on the people who are heavily taxed - anywhere from 20 to 80 percent of their income.

"Big Brother has a big ap-etite," says a Pole. "We must pay petite," big money for the Russian army. We have a Polish army, too, but the ammunition is in Moscow. We have guns, only guns, no ammunition.

Another observer says the Poles had to make a choice between having Solidarity and the Russians or no Solidarity and no Russians, meaning more freedoms. In 1981, union leaders made a quiet agreement that Solidarity would disappear from the scene.

While it hasn't disappeared, it has gone underground. A little Polish boy outside of the Wielicka salt mines wears a T-shirt with the iron-on letters, Lech. An adult, spotting the youngster, salutes the boy with a clenched fist, the symbol of power, and smiles.

The economy

The economy is such that 37 million people hold 53 million registered jobs. "They can't sur-vive on one salary," says an observer.

An interesting bit of trivia, according to a guide, is that 25 percent of the movies shown in Polish theaters are from Russia, with the popular U.S.-made films totaling 75 percent.

It points up the fact that the friendship between Poland and Russia exists mainly in the media of the two countries. Even so, the Polish and Russian borders are closed to each other, except for members of Russian-Polish friendship clubs, according to a guide.

The real friendship, he says, is between the Polish and American people. It's obvious, too, judging from the eager acceptance and admiration for anything American.

The American influence is surprisingly strong in these countries, at least in the large cities, where American rock is almost always available on the radio and the young people wear blue jeans and American T-shirts.

Budapest

A shock is in store for the tourist who travels from Poland to Hungary, one of the freeist countries under Soviet domination. It's a wonder to walk down one of the main boulevards in Budapest and window-shop. There are things to buy and not only that, there's thought given to the displays in the windows. The merchandising is not as creative as it is here, but here it's an industry. There it's not necessary.

On this bustling, very cosmopolitan street, the local people who lightly brush past or walk in front of someone say, "pardon," pro-nouncing it as the French do. The guide says the word pardon has been adopted by the locals in lieu of the Hungarian word for please and excuse me.

The street is definitely Old World, with lots of beautiful buildcapitalist than communist. The street sign brings it back in focus: It is Lenin Krt. The famed New York Cafe, meeting place for writers, journalists and artists, is still there, but it, too was renamed after the war. It's now the Hungaria Cafe.

There are churches, but the guide says few young people attend. Churchgoers are mostly women and older people, at least in the city, he says. There is much pride in their architecture and history, however.

In exchange for being allowed to remain open, church leaders made an agreement that they would never say anything against the government, the guide says.

Differences

An observer sums up the differences between the three countries. Hungary is the most prosperous and most enthusiastic of the Soviet-bloc countries, he says. "They have seem to have found a way to get along with the Rus-sians." Indeed. Hungarians can travel abroad.

The Czechs have a relatively high standard of living in comparison to past times, but the people are depressed.

Poland, which owes $30 billion to Western banks, is in great turmoil, with ups and downs, depending on the international situation, he says. We must remember one thing, he tells us. "What exists now in

Arts Bazaar

The Grosse Pointe League of Women Voters' 10th annual Arts Bazaar will be the biggest and best ever thanks to three Grosse Pointe residents. The Arts Bazaar committee met recently at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial to discuss plans for the fund-raising event. Pictured, left to right, are: Mary Hebert, candidate chairman; Leila Lynch, president, League of Women Voters-Grosse Pointe; and Gloria Stonisch, chairman, 1986 Arts Bazaar. The event is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 4, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Over 60 artists and craftsmen will exhibit. Elected officials and candidates will be on hand to meet residents and guests.

Recital set at local church

First English Lutheran Church in Grosse Pointe Woods will present the first public recital on its newly acquired Steinway piano. This piano, built in 1980, was dedicated for use in the church in July of this year.

The program will feature the well-known pianist Maria Meirelles playing works by Beethoven, Franck, Schumann, Liszt, and others. There is no charge for admission, but donations toward future musical programs will be accepted.

Maria Meirelles, who makes her home in Detroit, is one of Latin America's new generation of piano virtuosi. Born in Brazil, she began her musical studies with her mother, concert pianist Nicia Roubaud, and graduated from the Brazilian Conservatoire at the age of 13.

She received her bachelor's,

On Sunday, Oct. 5, at 7 p.m., the master's, and doctor of musical arts degrees from the University of Michigan, where she was the recipient of many awards and several scholarships. She was a student of Dr. Charles Fisher and concert pianist Gyorgy Sandor.

Meirelles' project for her doctor of musical arts degree was the complete 32 Beethoven piano sonatas. She has performed the entire cycle in Mexico City, Ann Arbor, Detroit, and in New York's Carnegie Recital Hall, all of them garnering outstanding reviews.

She is very active in recitals and as a soloist with orchestras, both in the United States and Latin America. She is continually praised for her eloquent musical style, beautiful tone, and brilliant technique.

State of the art DIA director to speak in Grosse Pointe for Council of Sponsors' Week of Art

By Elsa Frohman There will be great things in the future of the Detroit Institute of Arts, if Sam Saks has anything to say about it. After a year as direc-tor of the DIA, Saks is ready to talk about the present and future of the museum. He will be at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial on Tuesday, Sept. 30, at 8 p.m., as part of the Week of Art II, put on by the Council of Sponsors.

Saks' lecture is titled, "State of the Art, and Art of the State." He will be recaping his year at the DIA and putting forth some of his plans for the future.

"We set the title nine months ago," Saks said. "I'm going to give an overview of what I think is going on at the DIA.³

Saks came to Detroit in September 1985 to become director of the art musuem. He was previously director of the Minneapolis Insti-tute of Arts, having been asso-ciated with that museum since 1964. Accepted the position in Detroit because of the reputation of the DIA, he said.

"Maybe you hear of it (the reputation of the DIA) more when you're outside Detroit than when you're here," he said. "It is held in high repute. It's collections are among the best in the nation.'

For Saks, the DIA offered a chance to preside over an institution headed for growth and improvement.

"It's a challenge," he said. "A great opportunity to take a museum through a few years and on to a bright future.'

Saks attributes the strength of the DIA collection to the level of private support the museum receives. "It has gone on unabated through 100 years," he said. "All acquisitions come from private funds."

Saks emphasizes that while the museum is a division of the city of Detroit, it is also for everyone in Michigan. "There is no question that the museum is operated by the city of Detroit," he said. "But in funding, us is our permanent collection and enthusiasm and audience, we re- the programs that surround it,' cognize the people of the state of Michigan as well as Detroit. It hasn't always been so smooth. There was a period when the relationship was not so clearly defined. But the city regards the museum as one of its treasures." The future of the DIA includes a strengthening of the collection, as well as some improvements for the physical plant.

'The most important thing for Saks said. "That includes our very active performing arts programs and the film theater. But we have a very serious need to restore our physical facilities and expand. We're running out of space for staff, exhibitions, storage and preservation. We've got to get on with our second century.

The long and winding tale of a potted plant

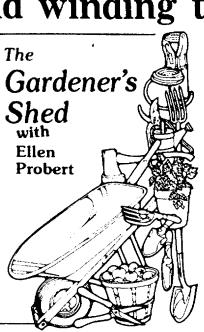

If you have been in the Grosse Pointe Garden Center lately you may remember the enormous Hoya Carnosa plant by the window. It was given to the Garden Center several years ago by Adele Welch in memory of her mother Hazel Lintern.

At the time, the plant, which Lintern had started 25 years earlier, had to be repotted. The young horticulturist who repotted it unwound the long, long vine which was wound around and around upon itself, and when it was all stretched out it measured 36 feet

Three flats of small potted cuttings were obtained from the plant to be sold at a Garden Center event. Now all over Grosse Pointe there are flourishing Hoya plants from this parent one.

After it was pruned and repotted the original plant was placed in the sunny window at the Garden Center and now, some years later, it is again wound around and around upon itself in a great mass of green foliage and undoubtedly measures many feet in length.

Hoyas are fascinating plants. They are native to South Asia, Borneo, Australia and India, and commemorate Thomas Hoy, onetime gardener to the Duke of Northumberland, who grew them in the mid-1800s when they were a nov-

They are now grown and loved world-wide. The Hoya Society International was founded in 1979 by Christine Burton, of Atlanta, Ga., and now has chapters in many countries and provides a link between Hoya fanciers and collectors in many lands and languages.

varieties of Hoyas in her own collection. She has documented them all and her slides of each variety are mini-works of art.

No one really knows how many varieties of Hoyas there really are. New ones are frequently discovered, and many of the latest ones have not even been named yet only numbered.

Hoyas have many different eaves, heart-shaped, round, oval, long and narrow, curly, crinkled, smooth, spotted, fuzzy, and everything from very, very large to very, very small. The blossoms are of many shapes and colors as well. They release their fragrance only at night because there is a certain species of night-flying moth which is attracted by the spicy scent and pollinates the plants.

Hoyas are sometimes called Wax Plants because most varieties have a waxy sheen on the somewhat fleshy leaves.

The Grosse Pointe Bonsai group which is affiliated with the Grosse Pointe Garden Center is well along on its fall program of workshops and events. This month's work-shop was held at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial on Sept. 18 and dealt with Hinoki Cypress miniature trees under the direction of noted expert Ray Boardman and his assistant teacher Barbara Forgiell.

Another very active Bonsai group in this area is the Bonsai Kenkyu Kai of Macomb, located in East Detroit, whose lavish show was a mid-September highlight for bonsai enthusiasts.

On Oct. 23 the Grosse Pointe group will meet at the War Memorial to discuss the winterizing of outdoor bonsai and the planting of small indoor bonsai. Preparations for a Bonsai Show and Sale to be a November event will be discussed.

Did you know that this year marks the 50th anniversary of the Michigan Blueberry Growers Association, whose headquarters are in Grand Junction, Mich., world headquarters for blueberry production?

Michigan blueberries are shipped to Europe and Japan, but the major markets are in the United States. Even California, which ships more fruits and vegetables to out-of-state markets than any other state, buys Michigan blueberries.

We are trending into fall these days and the evenings are often more than a bit chilly. Now is the time when a cheery fire in the fireplace is a welcome sight and the scent of woodsmoke can add a pungent tang to the air. Save your wood ashes. They are a valuable commodity.

In 18th century America they were worth 10 to 15 cents per bushel and could be used as cash. They were used in soap and glass making, for bleaching fabric and as an insect control material.

The Hopi and Navajo Indians use wood ashes instead of salt in flavoring foods. This is sensible when you consider that wood ashes contain calcium, magnesium, and potassium.

We are not suggesting you use ashes this way, but to use them as fertilizer in your vegetable garden and on your lawn. Don't use coal ashes in your garden. They are better used in a muddy driveway or to improve clay soil

Give the grill one more chance

Though Labor Day has come and 1/8 tsp. salt gone, there still may be a few 1/4 tsp. pepper weekends left for the barbecue grill.

Entertain graciously, but informally, in your own back yard with these recipes, knowing that both taste and eye appeal are well represented. The hostess always adds the little touches of relishes. condiments and garnishes that makes the simple meal become a feast. A gourmet approach is to include both pork and beef for a blend of flavors and to offer a choice to the guests.

The following selection of barbecue recipes come from the lowcalorie, low cholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Barbecued Spare Ribs

5 pounds very lean small spare ribs

- 1/2 cup Cointreau
- 1/2 cup soy sauce
- 1/2 cup honey
- 1 cup crushed pineapple, drained
- 1/2 cup wine vinegar
- 1 lemon thinly sliced
- 2 tsp. ground ginger
- 2 cloves garlic, crushed
- Black pepper

Place ribs which have been very lightly rubbed with salt in shallow broiling pan. In a small bowl, thoroughly blend all the barbecue sauce ingredients. Pour sauce over the ribs and let stand at least one hour at room temperature. Turn ribs every 15 to 20 minutes, brushing the sauce well into the cracks between the ribs. Broil ribs 20 minutes on each side, basting often with the sauce in the pan. Makes six very generous servings.

Barbecued Pot Roast

- 1 chuck roast, 2 inches thick (about 2-1/2 pounds)
- 1/3 cup soy sauce
- 1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar 1 Tblsp. lemon juice
- 1/4 cup bourbon or brandy
- 1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- 1/4 tsp. garlic powder (optional)

Place meat in a large shallow non-metal dish. Combine soy sauce, brown sugar, lemon juice, bourbon, Worcestershire sauce and garlic powder and pour over meat. Cover and refrigerate for at least eight hours, turning meat two or three times.

Grill five inches from hot coals for 10 to 12 minutes on each side for rare, brushing with marinade once on each side. To serve, slice on the diagonal. Serves six to eight.

Calories per serving about 293. Cholesterol for 3-1/2 ounces about 70 mgs

Superlative Onions

Words elude the best of authors when trying to describe these very delicious onions. So quick and easy, and can be prepared early in

1/2 tsp. tarragon 2 oz. shredded low-calorie Mozzarella cheese

2 large tomatoes, sliced or cubed 1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs

Heat two tablespoons oil in a large skillet and stir-fry onion and carrot for about three minutes. Add cabbage and pepper and con-tinue stir frying vegetables for two more minutes. Add zucchini and cook one minute longer.

Add salt, pepper, tarragon and cheese. Place mixture in lightly oiled casserole. Top with tomato slices or cubes. Combine bread crumbs with cheese and sprinkle evenly over vegetables. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven for 20 minutes. Makes six servings.

Calories per serving about 193. Cholesterol about 9 mgs.

Dutch Baked Corn

4 large ears fresh corn
1 Tblsp. unsalted margarine
2 Tblsp. flour
1/2 cup evaporated skimmed milk
1/2 cup skim milk
2 tsp. sugar
Salt and pepper to taste
2 eggs, separated
Dash of paprika
Cut corn off cob. Melt margarthe mit with flour and nour in the ine, mix with flour and pour in the evaporated and skim milk gradually. Bring to a boil stirring con-stantly. Add the corn, seasonings and yolks of eggs, well beaten. Carefully fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Put in well oiled casserole. Sprinkle lightly with pap-rika. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven for 30 minutes or until a knife inserted comes out clean. Makes 10 servings Calories about 88 per serving. Cholesterol about 52 mgs.

Grecian Tomato Slices

6 medium tomatoes, sliced 1/4 pound feta cheese, crumbled 1 small onion, thinly sliced 10 ripe olives, thinly sliced 1/4 cup olive oil 1/3 cup red wine vinegar

- 4 Tblsp. finely minced parsley 3 tsp. granulated sugar
- 1/2 tsp. basil 1/4 tsp. salt

- 2 Tblsp. poppy seeds 2 cups chopped sweet onion 2 Tbslp. unsalted margarine 1 egg

3/4 cup sour cream Salt and pepper to taste Paprika

Blend well beaten egg with biscuit mix and poppy seeds. Lightly press into 9x9-inch greased baking pan. Saute chopped onion in re-maining two tablespoons margarine until tender and lightly browned. Spread on dough. Beat egg with sour cream and season with salt and pepper. Spread over onions. Bake in preheated 400-degree oven for 25 minutes. Cut into squares. Sprinkle with paprika and serve very hot. Makes 16 servings.

Peaches on Rice Mold

An elegant company dessert that everyone will rave about. Luscious looking, divine-eating, and oh, so easy to prepare.

1 cup uncooked converted longgrain white rice

4-1/2 cups skim milk

1 Tblsp. fresh grated orange peel 1 envelope unflavored gelatin 1/4 cup orange juice

- 1/4 cup granulated sugar

1/4 tsp. vanilla extract 8 Poached Peach Halves, well drained

1/4 cup Apricot Glaze

In a medium-sized saucepan bring rice, milk and orange peel to a boil over moderately high heat, stirring constantly. Reduce heat to moderately low, cover and simmer about 25 minutes, until rice is tender.

Meanwhile, sprinkle gelatin over orange juice and line the bottom of an 8-inch round cake pan with wax paper. When rice is tender, remove pan from heat. Add sugar, vanilla and gelatin mixture and stir one to two min-utes, until sugar and gelatine are thoroughly dissolved. Pour mixture into prepared cake pan. Cover and chill several hours, until firm. Unmold rice mixture onto a serving plate. Arrange Poached Peach Halves on rice and brush with Apricot Glaze. Cut in wedges to serve to eight.

Calories per wedge about 229. Cholesterol about 4 mgs.

Poached Peach Halves

Poaching is a marvelous way to use underripe peaches, pears, plums, apricots and nectarines. 4 freestone peaches Water

1/4 cup granulated sugar

1/2 tsp. vanilla extract (optional) Lower peaches into a pan of boiling water and boil for one minute. Lift out with slotted spoon, peel, cut in half and discard pit. In a small skillet bring two cups water, the sugar and vanilla to a simmer over moderate heat, stirring to dissolve sugar. Simmer, uncovered, five minutes. Add four of the peach halves, cover mer over very low heat about five minutes, until peaches are just tender. Lift out peaches with a slotted spoon and cook remaining peach halves the same way. Return all peach halves to syrup, cool, then chill until serving time. Syrup may be used again if refrigerated or peaches may be served with syrup. Makes eight peach halves.

'Women Look at Women' exhibit set at CCS

"Women Look at Women," a Library of Congress touring exhibit of works by American women photographers of the past century, will be the featured show for October in the Sarkis Galleries of the Center for Creative Studies-College of Art and Design, at 245 East Kirby in the University Cultural Center area, with the opening set for Wednesday, Oct. 1.

"Women Look at Women" in-cludes more than 65 photographs depicting the American woman from the 1890s to the 1970s, as captured by such artists as Imogen Cunningham, Laura Gilpin and Frances Benjamin Johnston. The exhibit offers insights into society's changing perception of women and into the artistic and technical evolution of photography.

Emma Farnsworth and portraitists Gertrude Kasebier and Doris Ulmann are among the romanticera photographers recalling the period from 1890 to 1920. The social activism of the Depression era and World War II years is reflected in the work of Dorothea Lange, Marion Post Wolcott and others.

The diversity of the post war years is represented by the fashion and society portraiture of Toni Frissell and Roberta Booth, the news photography of Margaret Thomas and Linda Wheeler, and the personalized expression of ex-

Remove any dry skin and stem. Working from the top, core the onions generously, leaving a cavity about one-inch across and almost to the bottom. Lightly salt and pepper the cavity; then fill with unsalted margarine. Wrap in foil, making a tight twist at the top. Cook in a closed grill about 1-1/2 hours over steady medium heat. Open foil about 10 minutes before serving and leave on smoking grill for a wonderful smoky flavor.

Autumn Medley

This exceptionally tasty vegetable casserole is made from bits of this and that from the late largesse of the garden. Actually, there are no set specifications as to the quantity of each item, the idea is to make a tasty, vitamin filled, healthful dish from garden odds and ends.

1/2 cup vegetable oil, divided 1 cup onions, chopped 2 carrots, sliced in rounds 2 cups shredded cabbage 1 green pepper, sliced in strips 4 small zucchini, sliced in rounds 2 cups biscuit mix

1/4 tsp. cracked black pepper Lettuce leaves

Place tomato slices, feta cheese. onion and olives in 13x9-inch baking dish, set aside.

In small bowl with fork, mix olive oil, vinegar, parsley, sugar, basil, salt and pepper. Pour dressing over tomato mixture; with rubber spatula, gently lift tomato slices to coat with dressing. Cover baking dish and refrigerate at three hours before serving.

Line platter with lettuce leaves and carefully arrange tomato slices on bed of lettuce and pour dressing over top. Makes eight servings.

Corrections

In the Sept. 18 edition of the Grosse Pointe News, in a notice of the 25th anniversary of the Five Pointes Garden Club, Mrs. Edward Weber's name was incorrectly listed.

Also in the Sept. 18 edition, Randall Koczara's name was misspelled in a Pride of the Pointes item.

In the Sept. 11 edition, Lee Lemick's name was misspelled in a notice for the Money Makers investment club.

All three of the above errors were the result of incorrect information supplied to the Grosse Pointe News. We would like to ask everyone submitting personal items including many names to check the spellings of all names carefully.

The Third Section

Grosse Pointe News Section C Thursday, September 25, 1986

Instead of spending last weekend the way I usually do each fall — going from South to North and back again — I took the two days off. But because old habits are hard to break, I did go from south to porth — only this I did go from south to north . . . only this time, it was from down south to "up north." As in Upper Peninsula.

For various reasons, I found myself packed into a four-door with some warm clothes and a box of granola bars after work last Friday. We were headed for Houghton, or as I told my family (who obviously failed grade school geography) "the as-far-as-you-canget-and-still-be-in-Michigan Houghton, not Houghton Lake."

It was my first trip over the Mackinac Bridge (or as I laughingly call it "The Acrophobiac's Last Stand,") and I really liked what I saw. It's peak color time above the 45th Parallel and the country up there is wildly beautiful.

The thing that really got me, though, was that that portion of the state is so very different from the "mitten" we're used to. I guess I knew that all along, but it hit home on Saturday afternoon when I happened to run into a kid of about 12 who was trying to win some tickets to an NFL game by selling newspaper subscriptions. Pretty common stuff, I thought, as I thought about subscrib-ing to yet another paper.

Only it turned out the newspaper he was peddling was the Milwaukee Journal and the tickets were for Green Bay Packers' games. It was about then that I realized that that part of Michigan was less interested in the Tigers and Lions than it was in the fate of the Chicago Cubs and the Green Bay Packers.

The kid was having a hard time taking no for an answer, though, even when we explained that Detroit was a little out of the Journal's primary target area. "I think that we deliver in Detroit," he said not-very-con-vincingly. We finally got him to believe that it probably wouldn't be very prudent of us to pay for the Milwaukee Journal or for the Journal to worry about getting a paper to us and he went on his way and he went on his way.

That's when it hit me: that folks up there don't know any more about us than we do about them. For all that kid knew, Detroit was just a couple of miles over the bridge and Detroiters were practically starving for news of Milwaukee and Green Bay.

It bothered me a little that the two parts of the state were so ignorant of one another. Then I perused the sports page of the Houghton Daily Mining Gazette. It's the little local paper that caters to the citizens of the "Copper Country" - that gorgeous por tion of land that juts out into Lake Superior - and gives folks there what the Milwaukee Journal can't.

But cost of product liability insurance may price preps out of athletics

High schools put premium on safe sports

By Peggy O'Connor and Mike Andrzejczyk

Worries about liability and lawsuits don't have the sports programs at Grosse Pointe's high schools on the ropes yet, but the rising costs of product liability may hit home in the near future, according to athletic directors at North, South and University Liggett School.

"It's becoming a national crisis . . one of the biggest problems to face coaches and athletic directors at both the high school and collegiate level," says ULS coach and athletic director Bob Wood, who is also the current president of the National High School Athletic Coaches' Association (NHSACA). Carey McDonald, executive director of the NHSACA, concurs. "The question of product liability is one of the premier problems facing high school sports today. It's a sneaky one because it's more of what it doesn't do than what it. problems does. It doesn't allow us to provide sports opportunities for kids because the cost is becoming prohibitive because of the high cost of product liability insurance," McDonald says. That increased cost is added to the price of sports equipment. Then when budget cuts come to school programs, the extra ex-pense of sports equipment is often the first item to go. "As a result, the schools can't buy as much equipment and the bottom line is that the kids who want to play don't get a change the today . . ? don't get a chance because the schools just can't bear the cost," McDonald says. - Carey A typical example of rising equipment costs can be found in the manufacture of football hel-McDonald mets. "Only two or three companies are even bothering to manufacture helmets any more because of lawsuits," Wood says. "And the result is that a helmet that should cost around $45 costs $110 because $65 to $70 goes for liability insurance.

ditionally had little problem passing millages, the school system hasn't felt the crunch as much as other districts. "It hasn't put us in a position where we cannot offer adequate sports programs," says North athletic administrator Thomas Gauerke. "But unfortunately for more than a few other districts, it's a real problem." North, South and ULS each have been the target of just one lawsuit apiece over the last 20 years. Overall, athletic administrators say that the threat of lawsuits has been minimal. But nationally, ULS's Wood says, lawsuits have become the or-der of the day. "We live in a sue-happy society and when you have some of these big settlements handed down, that tends to affect sports in a big way," he adds. It isn't that the NHSACA doesn't want to see justice served in cases where an athlete is injured because of negligence or an inferior product. "Everybody wants to take care of a (injured) kid, help the family. But some of these set-tlements are so outrageous," says the NHSACA's McDonald. Among possible solutions, according to McDonald, is that the government place some sort of ceiling on settlements, or at least not require that the award be made in a lump sum. The group also looks favorably at not charging equipment companies with punative damages, especially in cases where the equipment in question met all the safety standards when it was manufactured, but is still in use despite not meeting current safety requirements. In general, the NHSACA is satisfied with the manufacturers' safe-ty requirements, McDonald says. "It's imperative that the manufacturer protect his own interests these days. To come up with an inferior product only increases chances they will be liable for damages. Locally, the biggest safety pre-caution has been the elimination of trampolines in all the district's school buildings. Mini-trampolines used by cheerleaders are also no longer used. The safety record for trampolines was not good, accord-ing to South High's athletic admi-nistrator Charles Hollosy. There are state regulations that say the trampolines may be used if there is a certified trampoline instructor present, he adds.

"No one has bothered to define what a certified trampoline instructor is," Hollosy says. Among other safety precautions taken by the schools: • The diving board at South has been removed because the water isn't deep enough for safe use.

 Padding on South's basketball backboards has been changed after state and national organizations recommended a different type.

• North High is one of a few high schools in the nation to supply knee

Hospital, which runs the program.

Safety has become a standard topic for discussions at forums and coaches conferences, Gauerke says. The system is constantly receiving research data from the Michigan High School Athletic Asso-ciation (MHSAA) on a variety of safety related questions, he adds. "In fact, we just instituted a program at both North and South at the recommendation of the MHSAA. We've enrolled all of our coaches in the National Federation of Interscholastic Coaches Association. We did this specifically be-cause of the question of liability," Gauerke adds.

It was a precedent-setting move, since the schools traditionally do not fund coaches' participation in coaching associations. But the $6 per coach membership gives each coach $1 million in liability coverage. "Our coaches are thrilled . . . we didn't want to take the

It isn't much of a paper, but I liked what I saw in the sports section. There was a lit-tle bit of everything — from a story about former Michigan Panther coach Jim Stanley returning to face the Detroit Lions as an assistant coach at Tampa Bay, to briefs about baseball, Kirk Gibson's dog bite and an upcoming appearance by the Detroit Red Wings — to how the local teams fared in high school football.

That's what I liked the best: that the local paper cared that it took Calumet two overtimes to beat Ontonagon, 10-3. And that the Marquette boys' and girls' cross country teams took home the Calumet Invitational championship. Not to mention that the Calu-met Golf Banquet is scheduled for Sept. 27.

It made me feel a little bit better, knowing that we really aren't all that different down here, after all. Oh, we worry about the Tigers and the Lions and the Red Wings. And we have ESPN to tell us about no-hitters and the pro golf tour. But that what we really care about - and I'm talking about individually, here - is how many points the local high school team won by, or how many bas-kets the star forward got last Friday.

And it's nice to know that our neighbors up north feel the same way.

John Case's South High soccer team starts out at 4-0 and plays North to a hardfought 0-0 and tie and all people can ask him about is his Oldtimers soccer team. Case says he spent most of Saturday's game between North and ULS answering queries about the over-30 kickers.

That's not really all that unusual, considering the entertaining brand of soccer played by the Oldtimers — a collection of "over-30 but not over-the-hill" soccer coaches from North, South and ULS.

The Oldtimers beat Lake Orion, 4-1, last Sunday and will host the Clinton Corinthians at 4 p.m. this Sunday, Sept. 28, at ULS's Cook Road field.

By then, ULS athletic department secre-tary Reba Torongo should be back to normal, Reba displayed her true colors on Monday when she walked into her office (which she shares with athletic director Bob Wood, by the way) decked out in green and white. She told Wood in no uncertain terms that Michigan State (which we're guessing is Reba's favorite team) beat Notre Dame worse than Michigan did.

All I can say is where was Reba when I was giving up MSU and seven points last week in a friendly little office wager?

Boating

By Margie Reins Smith

Weather

Boaters don't have to master the causes of tropical depressions, track warm and cold fronts, or even know a dew point from an isobar. In-depth analysis of local, regional, and national weather is not necessary for prudent pleasure boating.

Weather savvy is an accumulation of experience, careful attention to forecasts, and - most important - knowledge of your own boat and its capacity to handle a variety of conditions brought about by winds and waves.

'Any boater who goes out without checking the wind and the weather forecast — well, it's like going out without checking your fuel tank," said Mal Sillars, chief meteorologist and weathercaster for Detroit's WDIV-TV. "When you go out in a boat, you're matching wits with Mother Nature. What you do depends on what she does. You wouldn't go far without charts, so don't go without checking the weather.'

Sillars is also a boater, the owner of "Diva," a 36-foot slooprigged sailboat. He's been sailing since he was a youngster in New York, and this is his eighth year of boating on the Great Lakes. He recently returned from a 17-day cruise in Georgian Bay and the North Channel.

Wind is the most important factor to consider, according to Sillars. Wind direction and speed can be checked visually by observing the water: ripples, wave height, direction, crests; and by watching flags, sails, trees and clouds. "The prevailing winds in our area are from the west, which is nice for us because it usually gives us a nice offshore breeze," said Sillars.

The signals for threatening weather are displayed at some yacht clubs and large harbors and at a few Coast Guard stations throughout the Great Lakes. During the day, a red pennant denotes a small craft advisory, indicating winds up to 38 mph (33 knots) and sea conditions that could be dangerous to small craft with little freeboard and/or small engines.

Small craft advisories, however, do not distinguish between a fresh all-day-long breeze and a forecast for isolated, short, localized squalls with brief high winds. Individual boaters must use their own experience and nautical knowledge, and if necessary, obtain more weather information before they make a decision to leave the harbor when a small craft advisory has been issued.

The gale warning consists of two red pennants, one above the other. A gale involves winds from 39 to 54 mph. A storm warning is a single square red flag with a black center, indicating winds 55 mph and above. A hurricane warning is two square red flags with black centers. These mean a hurricane has been forecast, with winds 74 mph and up.

At night, when the flags and pennants are not visible, a small craft advisory is a red light above a white light; a gale warning is a white light above a red light: a storm warning is two red lights, one above the other; and a hurricane warning is a white light between two red lights.

When winds whip up on Lake St. Clair, its shallowness causes waves to build fairly quickly. "It gets choppy very fast in Lake St. Clair," Sillars said, "but I've never seen anything more than six feet or so.'

Lightning is a concern for boaters, especially for sailors who find themselves alone on the lake during an electrical storm on the sine such advised sanors to make sure their mast is grounded to the keel. "The manufacturer's ground is not always big enough. Some sailors use an ordinary car jumper cable. They clamp it to the rigging and throw the other end overboard. Or they'll connect a jumper cable from the boat to a metal deck. With lightning, however, there's so much energy involved there's no guarantee anything will work.'

Pleasure boaters can tune their VHF radios to 162.55 MHz for a 24-hour-a-day weather forecast boardcast by the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Weather Service. This is usually found on Channels 1 or 2, or by tuning into a special weather channel built into the radio. It includes local weather data and area forecasts as well as a marine forecast for the near shores of the St. Clair River, Lake St. Clair, Detroit River and western Lake Erie.

The USTA/Volvo Women's 4.5-rated tennis team from the Grosse Pointe Indoor Tennis Club is headed for Las Vegas this week, where it will represent the area as one of 147 teams from seven states at the national championships. The team, which includes (left to right) Trisha Gaskins, Elizabeth Kinard, Kathy Hidel, Sherrin Shehan, Bonnie Wachter, Carron Conway, Martha Rumora, jan Van Fausen and Nancy C. Schmidt, (Susan Shanley and Judy Flowers are not pictured), advanced to the nationals by winning the Michigan state championship in Lansing in early August and the Western Sectional title in Kalamazoo late last month, Bill Demeter, of Grosse Pointe Woods, ended the Sports Car Club of America's regular racing season in third place in the central division, after qualifying third and finishing third in the Mid-Ohio por-tion of the Road America series Sept. 6 and 7. Demeter also qualified third in his class in the Milwaukee National race Aug. 30 and 31 but had engine problems in the finals. Currently ranked around 12th place in the Porsche Cup standings, Demeter says he's getting his car ready to compete in the Road America national runoffs in October in Atlanta, where he will drive against the top four runners in each division from across the U.S.

Leslie Weller, of Grosse Pointe Woods, rode her horse "Deadline" to a championship in the Intermediate Adult Hunter class at the Michigan Hunter Jumper Association-sanctioned horse show Aug. 9 and 10 at Stoney Creek Farms in Rochester Hills. Weller and Deadline also won the Primary Adult Hunter championship in the final event of the year Aug. 22-25.

Pete Bolos just keeps on running. The Grosse Pointe Park resident competed in two local events recently, says he will race in the Sept. 27 Grosse Pointe Fun Run and is tuning up for the Detroit Free Press International Marathon in October. Bolos finished first in the 70 and over age group in the Sept. 13 Emily-Detroit Run; his time was 56:17. Then on Sept. 14, he was again first in his division in the Lions' Club Friendship Run in Detroit with a 53:24. "I feel like running again today," Bolos said after the races.

Bob Kaiser, 29, of Grosse Pointe Farms, has piloted his G-K Systems 'Cougar Cat'' to a No. 1 spot in the national offshore boat circuit. Cougar Cat was in the top spot as of Sept. 15, with just a few races left in the season.

Listed as a starting forward on the Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville women's soccer team is 5-3 freshman Shannon Armstrong, of Grosse Pointe. A second-team All-Stater at North High, where she led the Lady Norsemen in scoring, established a career assist record, and was team captein and first-team All-District and All-League as a senior, Armstrong is expected to give the SIUE Cougars additional scoring punch on the front line.

Red Barons win, tie

The Red Barons football teams came out of last weekend's encounters with the Shelby Lions and Northeast Detroit with two ties and a victory.

The freshmen played to a hardfought 13-13 tie. Ryan Rouls took the opening kickoff and returned it 55 yards for a touchdown to open the scoring for the Red Barons. Derek Ottewaere scored the extra point to make it 7-0. Shelby tied the game midway through the second quarter on a 33-yard scoring pass, then late in the third quarter took a 13-7 lead on a 45-yard run around end. The Red Baron defense -- led by Kris Erickson and David Tipple - stopped the point after attempt.

As time wound down, the Barons mounted a 52-yard drive, led by the outstanding blocking of tackle Jay Harrington, end Marty Leehr and Mike Tipple. Paul Gentile capped the drive with a run around end to give the Barons the tie.

The junior varsity tied Shelby's JV, 0-0, in the second game of the day. In a game dominated by strong defensive play, the Barons got an outstanding effort from Mike Haskell, who was the leading ground gainer on offense and led the defense as well. Also playing well for the Red Barons on defense was David Applegate, C.C. Quarnstrom, Alex Brinker, Ryan Mc-Cartney, Tom Kolojeski and Adam Hogan.

The Red Baron varsity came back to the Northeast Detroit Shamrocks, 13-12. The Shamrocks took an early lead when they scored on a 45-yard sweep and added another touchdown on a 38-yard run off tackle to make the score 12-0. Just when it looked as though the Shamrocks were going to blow the game open, the Barons' defense, led by linebackers Jim Kutscher, Steve Craparotta, Tim Meinig and Mark Cespedes got tough and shut down the Shamrocks' offense. Also key to the effort was the play of tackle Frank Lovasco and end Tim Dinverno.

In the second half, the Red Barons' offense took control and mounted two long drives behind the blocking of Danny Watkins, Jed Maliszewski, Brian Czarczynski, Matt Fowler, Jeff Thomas and Matt Winstanley. Brad Cromar was a workhorse, carrying the ball for close to 100 yards and scoring one touchdown and an extra point. Craparotta scored the other touchdown for the varsity, which is now 2-0 this season.

Celebrity Walk-a-Thon A "Celebrity Walk-A-Thon," conducted⁶ by Starmaker Talent Agency to benefit Children's Hos-pital of Michigan, is set for this Saturday, Sept. 27, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Belle Isle. Former NBA stars Dave Bing and Spencer Haywood will be on hand for the fivemile jaunt around the park. Refreshments and entertainment will ronow the walk: Darticipants should gather at the Belle Isle Casino.

In addition, Channel 83 broadcasts Canadian weather information for boaters cruising in or near Canadian shores. The Coast Guard broadcasts emergency weather data on Channel 16 and 22 when necessary. Most local radio and TV stations include a marine forecast as part of their weather programs during the summer months.

LSSC closes Sunset Series

The final race in the Lake Shore Sail Club's six-race summer Sunset Series was sailed under brisk southeasterly winds on Sept. 15. A total of 52 boats participated in the regatta. Winners were selected on the basis of the four best races in the series. The top three in each division are:

PHRF A: Sure, D. Naples; Tigress, E. Niederbuehl; Hokusai, D. Miner.

PHRF B: Eliminator, P. Vantol; Bravo, F. Tenkel; Asylum, D. Lootens.

Ski Club meets Oct. 1

The Grosse Pointe Ski Club will meet Wednesday, Oct. 1, at 7:30 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. A film of skiers at Steamboat Springs, Colo., will be followed by refreshments and trip information. Guests are welcome.

Among the trips on the G.P. Ski Club's schedule this season - and they are starting to fill up, members say – are Boyne Highlands in January, Blue Mountain in Canada, and a jaunt to the "finest powder snow" at Steamboat Springs.

PHRF C: Marksman, B. Lang; Time & Tide, G. Murry; Frenzy, F. Porter.

PHRF D: Invincible, J. Lavine; Bodacious, M. Kunzman; Cricket, T. Macro.

PHRF E: Windy III, J. Rapelje; Wild Rover, M. Dumenjich; Zao, F. Kunick.

MORC: More Trauma, M. Goran: Prime Time, D. Grover: Kahuna, J. Tepel.

The Norsemen football march -19 consecutive regular season victories - rolled on through Waterford Kettering last Friday, as North dumped the Kettering Captains, 10-3, to improve its 1986 record to 3-0.

Waterford looked strong in the early going, taking the kickoff and moving on a good mix of running, passing and North penalties. On a third-and-goal from the 1, senior safety Dave Justice saved North by pouncing on a fumble. The defense dominated in the first half, but Kettering finally went on top, 3-0, with less than a minute to go. North answered with a 27-yard Bob Belser field goal to tie things up after junior quarterback Bruno Giglio hit tight end Rob Olds and wide receiver Paul Altobelli with a pair of long gainers to move the Norsemen from their own 30.

Neither team could sustain a long drive in the second half, until North started to click late in the half. Starting on its own 11, the offense used a pair of Mike Miller first-down runs to get to midfield. 2-0 win. North's next game is Thursday, Sept. 25 at Mount Clemens. (By John Guibord). On a key third-and-four from the 31, Giglio hit Altobelli for 19 yards and a first down. After a 10-yard dash by Giglio, Miller punched it in from the 2 with five minutes to go to ice the victory.

Miller led North with 122 yards in 22 carries, to run his three-game total to 325 yards. Giglio was five-for-12 and completed key passes. Justice led the Norsemen on defense, with two interceptions for 61 yards, one fumble recovery and eight tackles. Juniors Karl Schultz and David Van Dale had eight tackles each; senior Terry McDougall chipped in with seven tackles and one sack.

'Our defense bent, but didn't break. coach Frank Sumbera said. "The offense had a tough time, but put it together when it had to." Sumbera called Kettering "our toughest opponent so far. I feel our conditioning was very important, as we seemed to wear them down in the final quarter," he added.

Then on Sept. 9, North picked up three wins in one meet, beating Fraser, 15-46, topping East Detroit 15-33 and Utica Ford, 15-44. North took five of the top 10 spots, including Sandy Smith's time of 20:24, first place. At the Holly Invitational on Sept. 13, North finished third out of 21 teams, including three in the top 25. North's girls' varsity swim team is taking up where it left off in 1985, when it finished 11-1. The girls opened the year with a 47-36 win over Dearborn in a meet highlighted by Kathy Kish's school record in the 500 free; her time of 5:20 also qualified her for the states. Sophomore Katie Young won the 200 Individual medley and the 100 fly, qualifying for the states in the 100 fly. Senior Sandy Smith won and qualified in the 100 breaststroke and Heidi Mader won the 100 back. Patti Roustemis beat Dearborn in diving.

North was edged out in its own Fall Sports Invitational, finishing second to highly-rated Andover. Among the highlights: 200 medley relay, pool record and state cutoff time of 1:54:89; 4x200 relay, third place, 8:23.26; 4x100 IM, second, :25.32; 4x25 relay, second, 49.25; a fourth place in diving; 4x50 butterfly relay, first, 1:55.28; freestyle relay, fourth, 1:48.13; 4x50 back-stroke, fourth, 2:04.91; breaststroke relay, first in a record time of 2:13.83; and in the 4x100 freestyle, seventh in 3:59.20. The tennis team began the season with a second place tie among 12 teams in the Monroe Invitational. Andrea Thomas and Lynda Rayos were second at No. 2 doubles, losing a tough three-set match to Notre Dame of Ohio, 6-2, 3-6, 3-6. Christine Baretta at No. 2 singles and Mary Garcia at No. 3 singles came in third, as did the No. 1 doubles team of Nicole Leh-man and Beth Keys and the No. 3 doubles duo of Heather MacDonald and Nancy Giftos.

The netters fell to ULS, 5-3, on Sept. 9, despite victories by the No. 2.3 and 4 doubles teams. The girls bounced back to beat Country Day, 5-3, and top Sterling Heights and South Lake, 8-0, as every North girl won her match, including Jennifer Friedline at No. 1 singles and sophomore Kathy Sanom and Jennifer Orr at No. 4 doubles. At the Fall Invitational, North finished fourth. Keys and Lehman finished first at No.'1 doubles, Thomas and Rayos were second at No. 2 and the No. 4 singles player Kristin Deisler received a third place medal.

Jp and down week for No. 1-ranked soccer team

The University Liggett School varsity soccer team, ranked No. 1 in the coaches' poll for Class D, experienced the highs, lows and inbetweens that are associated with a win, a loss and a tie.

The tie came first. On Sept. 16, ULS traveled to Oakland Christian for a Michigan Independent Athletic Conference (MIAC) game. From the opening kick-off, the Knights controlled the play, but failed to find the net. The defense held strong, but the frustration built. When time ran out, the Knights had to settle for a disappointing 0-0 tie, despite outshooting the opponents, 25-9. The shutout was the ULS's fourth in eight games, but it was also the first MIAC game the Knights have not won since 1983.

ULS journeyed to Troy to take on another MIAC opponent, Zion Christian on Sept. 18. This time, the attack clicked. ULS dominated the game, winning 5-1. Senior co-captain Bob Williams tallied four and senior Blasko Ristic added the other. Two of the goals were set up by long throw-ins from senior co-captain Steve Schmidt. The shutout bid was spoiled when Zion Christian scored on a free kick from 25 yards out, over the wall and beyond the outstretched hands of senior goalkeeper Brian Curtiss.

ULS's first loss came on Saturday, Sept. 20, when the Knights hosted Grosse Pointe North. The games between the two schools over the last four years have been hard-fought and extremely close contests and this was no exception.

The Norsemen scored the game's first goal on a questionable call. Goalkeeper Curtiss partially trapped a shot and it trickled off his foot back toward the goal line. Reacting immediately, Curtiss lunged back for the ball and stopped it. The opinion of spectators near the goal was that the ball had not gone over the goal line but the referee saw otherwise and awarded the goal to North. The Knights allowed a second goal just seven minutes later.

In the second half, ULS picked up the tempo, as the team fought desperately to get back into the game. The solid defensive efforts of Mike Fozo, Bob Jewett, Chip Davis, Ristic, Schmidt and Curtiss, kept the Norsemen at bay. North's defense was equally good, however, and the Knights failed to score. "It's too bad two mistakes had to decide the game, but North is a very good team and we played them tough. It was a very promising team effort from us; coach David Backhurst said.

With a record now of 8-1-1, the Knights play two road games this week before returning home to host Plymouth Christian in another MIAC game on Friday, Sept. 26, at 4:30 p.m.

On Saturday, Sept. 20, the ULS junior varsity soccer team played a tough North squad. Coach Jeff Healy felt that his squad played exceptionally well, despite their 4-2 loss to North. Scoring for ULS were sophomores Mike Niccolini and Mark Sullivan.

ULS takes on Lutheran North at home on Thursday, Sept. 25, and hosts Inter-City Baptist on Friday, Sept. 26. Both contests start at 4:30 p.m

Netters second

The ULS girls' varsity tennis team, with a 4-0 record in dual matches, traveled to Grand Rapids on Sept. 20, for an eightschool tournament. ULS, missing its No. 3 singles player, placed second to Marian in a tiebreaking decision for first place.

Both Dawn Martin at No. 1 singles, and Pam Ali at No. 2 singles, placed first in their flights. Amina Ali, playing at No. 3 singles, along with Laura Rizzo and Lesley MacLeod at No. 2 doubles, were in the finals of their flights, but lost in close matches. Lexi Crain, playing at No. 4 singles in place of Elena Hunt, added a point to ULS' 12 points

On Saturday, Sept. 27, ULS will travel to the Kingswood Tournament, where the eight best teams in the state will compete. (By Kathy Bianchi)

Cleek leads cagers

The University Liggett School

girls' varsity basketball team suffered a heartbreaking loss to Oakland Christian, 28-23, on Sept. 16.

ULS put up a good fight on both offense and defense, with baskets being made by Susan Cleek, Sarah Cleek and Phan Lam. Other players who made valuable contributions were centers Lisa Beizai and Rachel Kneeshaw, guards Diann Imbriaco and Sophia Park and forward Christina Tarrus.

Hockey team wins two

After an eye-opening 1-0 loss to Ottawa Hills on Sept. 20, the ULS varsity field hockey team bounced back for two solid wins. ULS defeated Ohio independent school rivals Laurel and Hathaway Brwn 7-1 and 3-0, respectively.

Hathaway Brown was the more formidable of the two Ohio teams, but coach Muriel Brock's Lady Knights outplayed them with a solid, fast-paced passing game.

Maitland first

The ULS varsity cross country team suffered its first loss on Tuesday, Sept. 16, falling to Southfield Christian, 29-26.

Junior Gordie Maitland paced the Knights with a time of 17:34, only six seconds off a personal record. Junior David clifton was fourth (19:39), and Dale Werkema came in fifth (20:01) with a personal record. Sophomore Tony Hill set a personal mark of 21:04.

The next meet for Coach Eric Linder's team is at Ann Arbor Greenhills on Sept. 26. (By David Chilingirian)

'Blue Velvet' offers a strong challenge to movie viewers

By Michael Chapp

It's a strange world. This catch phrase is repeated four times in "Blue Velvet," and each time the point is driven home just a little bit further. Indeed, this film, the latest piece of work from director David Lynch, is nothing if not a chronicle of all that is surreal, sensual and, perhaps most of all, strange, in this world.

At once a potboiling mystery and a psychological character study, "Blue Velvet" covers a lot of filmic ground in its two-hour running time. Some things are covered more thoroughly than others, but everything in the film has a distinctively disturbing quality. This quality, in the final analysis, is what makes "Velvet" worth recommending, but not to everyone. It should be noted right at the outset that those who like their movies neat, clean and easily understandable will not like even one frame of this picture. Convesely, those who don't mind being challenged right down to their moral and psychological core by a film will be completely entranced Rossellini) is a singer in a sleazy by "Velvet.

The subject matter is that strong. The way it's handled is that intense.

The movie takes four main characters and puts each of them into their own corner, if you will; corners which represent the far reaches of mankind's psyche. Jeff (Kyle MacLachlan) is a naive college student. While he's fundamentally good, he becomes increasingly aware of the evil which exists in the world. Dorothy (Isabella nightclub. She walks a fine line between darkness and light, between what should be and what is. Sandy (Laura Dern), is a high school senior in Jeff's hometown of Lumberton. She is the prototypical "good" within everyone. Frank within everyone. Frank (Dennis Hopper) is the antithesis of Sandy. He represents the evil and darkness within everyone. Through a seemingly innocent series of events, the four characters - and everything they represent - become entangled in a very unsettling episode.

Jeff, home from college to visit his ailing father and take care of the family hardware store, hap-pens upon a severed ear in a field behind his house. A detective tells him that it looks as if the ear was cut off by scissors. This piques Jeff's curiosity.

Sandy, the detective's daughter, shows Jeff the apartment building where Dorothy, a suspect in the 'ear'' case, lives. Jeff's curiosity is piqued even more.

Snooping around in Dorothy's apartment one night, Jeff gets caught by her. Instead of harming him or calling the police however, she attempts to seduce him. But their interlude is cut short by another visitor, Frank, who fuels his sexual fantasies by slapping around Dorothy and pretending to make love to her. All the while, Dorothy is completely submissive. Now Jeff is really curious.

He repeatedly goes back to Dorothy's apartment and eventually becomes emotionally involved with her. Quickly, Jeff becomes mystified by Dorothy's life. Her husband and child had been kidnapped by Frank, who tells her that nothing will happen as long as she does what he says.

Jeff, falling more and more into Dorothy's perverted sexual world, begins to lose touch with what is right and wrong, good and evil. His one and only tie with goodness is Sandy, with whom he's falling in love. In one final burst of emotion, Jeff breaks down and cries. And the world comes tumbling down around him.

'Best Little Whorehouse' opens tomorrow

"Blue Velvet," with all its con-voluted psychosexual meanderings and graphically sadomasochistic encounters, is still, in essence, nothing much more than a contemporary story of good vs. evil. The mystery in the story is not really that mysterious. Actually, it's downright predictable. And the Freudian goldmine that lies at the film's nucleus is so completely chock full of psychological hodgepodge that viewers are quite likely to damage themselves if they try too hard to understand what it all means.

This is not to say that viewers won't have a challenging time trying to decipher what it's all about. In it's own way, "Blue Velvet" is a lot of fun. There will most certainly be stimulating discussions between moviegoers as they leave the theater. But there will not be one definitive answer as to the nature of this film. Just as there is not one exact answer as to the nature of man. Perhaps it's such an existentialistic theme that Lynch tried to deal with in this film. If so, it worked

'Eighth Commandment' is a page-turner

By Marian Trainor By Laurence Sanders Putnam, 381 pages, $18.75

Reading Sanders' latest offering (he has written 16 others) is a literary smorgasbord.

The author serves up a bountiful array of mystery, suspense, a love story that involves a rivalry of two eligible suitors for the affection of one attractive girl; a view of elegant New York neighborhoods and its shoddier, more dangerous ones. We go inside the best restaurants and also enjoy vicariously the delight of carry-out food from neighborhood delis.

We visit the loft where young, rebellious revolutionaries are hatching plans to change the world and we learn that the best people do not always live in the best houses; that sometimes their wealth has provided them with the means of leading dissolute, sordid lives. And we acquire an enormous amount of fascinating information about coin-collecting. All of this is told to us by an engaging and witty young lady, who is 6 foot 2 and who goes by the nickname of Dunk, a label she earned by mastering, what else, the dunk shot.

Mary Lou Bateson is her real name. She has come to New York from Des Moines to seek fame and fortune and a man — a tall man. What she finds is a job as a numismatist and becomes fascinated with the beauty and Fall activities abound history of old, rare coins. In one of the valuable collections she is assigned to appraise, is a rare specimen, a Demaretion, an ancient

> When the owner decides to sell the collection, Dunk is assigned to supervise the transfer of the coins from the apartment to the auction house where she works

> In the process of moving the collection, the Demaretion mysteriously disappears and Dunk comes under suspiction. She is given an indefinite leave of absence without pay until the case is solved.

Furious, she resolves to find the thief herself.

Although the plot has enough surprises and twists and turns to rivet the reader's attention, it gains much from its narrator. She is such an honest, witty, upbeat person that it is a joy to spend a couple of hours with her.

at Henry Ford Museum With the reds and golds of autumn comes a bounty of family activities at Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village in Dearborn.

On any fall day, one can discover 300 years of American history and innovation under the roof of the museum. Or, step outside and back in time among the quaint homes and buildings of Greenfield Village, awash in fall color.

The Autumn Harvest Festival, held in the village Oct. 3, 4 and 5, gives a real sense of the changing seasons and eras. The three-day celebration of a bountiful harvest overflows with 19th century food, entertainment and farming activities.

Threshing wheat, cider making, wood-stove cooking, canning, ap ple preservation and squash and pumpkin preparation are just some of the tasks visitors can observe at the 1880s Firestone Farm. "Streamlining America," on view through December 1987, examines how streamlining, originally a design concept of speed and efficiency, was adopted as a symbol of modernity used to sell consumer products. A variety of goods - from cars to toasters - developed in the years from 1919 through 1959, offers examples of how streamlining shaped the way our world looks today.

"Yesterday's Tomorrows," a Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibit, presents whimsical and serious visions of the world of the future, as imagined by past gener-ations of Americans. This exhibit will continue through Dec. 31.

The museum's Activities Center daily offers visitors a chance to experience first-hand some of the implements of times past. Pedaling a highwheel bicycle, working on an assembly line and operating an 1828 flat-bed printing press are just a few of the things visitors can try. Throughout the fall season, Henry Ford Museum's unmatched collections, representing such diverse categories as transportation, home arts, agriculture, lighting and communications, decorative arts and power machinery are open to the public seven days a week, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Likewise, in adjacent Greenfield Village, the restored homes and workplaces of unknown as well as famous Americans can be explored daily.

The artists' spaces movement is now over a decade old. These spaces function as a vital component in the visual arts community and are recognized by the very organizations against which they sought to rebel: major museums and commercial galleries.

This exhibition was curated by Martha Winans, director of the Herron Art Gallery, at the Herron School of Art in Indianapolis as part of a special NEA (National Endowment for the Arts) project which linked alternative spaces in the midwest.

Winans selected installation artists Rick Paul and Ron Markman whose work shows their attitudes about the ephemeral nature of art as projected by certain art mediums. When installed these constructions exist as complete works of art for brief spans of time, unlike painting, sculpture or printmaking.

Both artists reveal their work in a theatrical manner, blending fantasy, incorporating metaphors and historical references. Markman's three dimensional wood surfaces

Detroit Eastern reunion Detroit Eastern High School, Class of 1941, interested in a reu-

By Marian Trainor

It opened on Broadway in 1981. Now, five years later, "Dreamgirls" has come to Detroit, the birthplace of the music that inspired this stunning, stirring musical that fills the theater with the beat of rhythm and blues. It tells a story familiar to an audience who remembers a group from the Brewster housing project who pioneered a new sound that took them to the top of the charts. That group was "The Supremes."

Although director-choreographer Michael Bennet (A Chorus Line) says that "Dreamgirls" is the most complicated show he has ever worked on, the sets are clean and spare. The time and period are filled in for the audience by costumes of the period and range from showy but cheap dresses worn when the girls started out to the gorgeous elaborate gowns they wear at the height of the success. The music makes the show. While many of the numbers could stand by themselves, they are never out of context with the story of a girl group who create a local sensation with their rhythm and blues style and go on to win national recognition when they combine that style with pop music.

Their road to success is charted by an oily, ambitious promoter, Curtis Taylor Jr. (Wehman Thompson, a former Detroiter) who is determined to hit the top charts at any cost. His story is one that turned the record industry upside down with the exposure of payola.

A casualty of the group's rise to fame is Effie (Sharon Brown) who is replaced as lead singer and then dropped altogether. Unlike Flo Ballard who suffered the same fate as a Supreme and died broke, she becomes a star in her own right. As the girls reach stardom, they grow and mature into sophisticated performers, but it is Effie who is outspoken and troublesome, who has her heart broken, hits bottom and comes back as a successful woman in charge of her own life. She is a dynamo of a performer with a voice range that lets out the pain of rejection in a screeching, shattering song, "And I'm Telling You I'm Not Going" in a scene that tears at the heart to the restrained appeal of "I Am Changing" as she tries for a comeback. Her delivery reaches right out and grabs the audience.

Deena Jones, the leading lady (Alisa Gryce), who resembles Diana Ross, stands out for her poised beauty and clear, lovely voice in such numbers as "When I First Saw You.'

Herbert Rawlings, another former Detroiter who plays the ex-huberant James Thunder Early, puts a lot of humor into his role. He hits a peak when, cast as a black Perry Como, he breaks into a rhythm and blues number.

"Dreamgirls" is a solid produc-tion with no let-downs. It's difficult to point out numbers that stand out from a smorgasbord of eye-andear-catchers. "Cadillac Car" is re-membered for its rhythm and its contrastcing presentations as it underscores a slick versus a lively rendition. Another, "One Night Only," contrasts the popular and

Laterna Magika comes to the Hilberry

Josef Svoboda's internationally celebrated Laterna Magika (Magic Lantern Theatre) comes to the Hilberry Theatre Saturday, Oct. 11, when the mixed-media production, "The Black Monk," opens the Hilberry's 1986-87 season.

Laterna Magika is the creation of Svoboda, the internationally acclaimed scenographer who is dedicated to the use of modern scientific and technological innovations. It combines live performers with the elements of panoramic film, mobile screens which appear and disappear, and film produced specifically and solely for the given production. "The Black Monk" opened in 1983 at Laterna Magika, the experimental stage of the National Theatre, in Prague, Czechoslovakia, and it has continued to play there to sold-out houses ever since. It is the dramatization of an Anton Chekhov story which Tolstoy call-ed "breathtaking." The Hilberry production is the first to appear elsewhere and is the English-language premiere.

Evald Schorm and Jindrich Smetana, the director and soul versions and points out how much is lost in the transition. "Hard To Say Goodbye, My Love" accents a moving scene in which Effie is reconciled with the group just as they have decided to break

"Dreamgirls" is a splendid show. It has everything; a good story that is even more intriguing for Detroiters who followed the designer of the original Prague production, have come to Detroit to direct the production here. Schorm is better known outside Czechoslovakia is a prize-winning film director, creator of such films as "Courage for Every Day" and "End of a Priest," which will be shown at Wayne State University while he is here. Smetana, trained by Svoboda as an architect and scenographer, has worked with him on designs for several theater buildings, has designed such pro-ductions as "Swan Lake" and "Othello," and is a designer of international audio-visual exhibitions.

Svoboda will arrive in Detroit for the final dress rehearsals and the opening night performance Oct. 11. He will also give a public lecture at the Hilberry during his stay.

Heading the Hilberry cast are Ronald Allan-Lindblom, a new member of the acting company, Lynne Kadish, a third-year veteran of the troupe, and Anthony Dobrowolski, who has moved from Hilberry costume designer to actor. The cast also includes Hilberry veterans Dinah Lynch and Steve McCue, and newcomers Anita Barone, Michelle Felton, Marilyn Mays, James Vezina and Kenneth Umland.

The production is being prepared with the help of translators, with Robert Emmett McGill as coordinating director and Russell Smith and John Wade as technical directors. Lighting is by Gary M. Witt, costumes by Robin Ver Hage, the Hilberry's new costume designer, and sound by Russell Sumner. The english adaptation is by Christina Hladysh, an undergraduate theater student.

Performances continue through Nov. 21, rotating with "The Glass Menagerie," which joins the repertory Oct. 24. For tickets and information, call the Hilberry box office at 577-2972.

Badminton

... isn't just a backyard game anymore, as this photo of smiling Grosse Pointe Badminton Association member Barbara Orton plainly shows. Orton was at the group's new playing quarters - the Grosse Pointe Indoor Tennis House - to paint court lines. The Grosse Pointe Badminton Association is beginning its 57th year of play in Grosse Pointe and welcomes new members teen-aged and older. Members play from 8 to 10 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays and from 9 to 11 a.m. on Sundays. For more information, call association president John Lizza at 884-7944.

Great year for GPSC tankers

The Grosse Pointe Swim Club had its most successful long course season ever. More than 70 swimmers aged 8 to 20 swam in the pre-dawn at the Woods municipal park.

First meet of the season was the Dearborn Different Strokes A-B meet in the United States Swim-ming Circuit. GPSC took fourth place with notable performances coming from Wendy Mader (13-14), Jenny Smith (9-10) and Jenny Oleksinski (15-18).

Next stop was the Ontario Cup IV in Toronto, Ontario, Canada. Nine swimmers from this meet went on to the World Championships in Madrid, Spain. Grosse Pointe finished 12th, with only nine swimmers. Finalists included Sandy Smith (100-200 breast), Ron Howard (100-200 back), Katie Young (50 free-100 fly), Matt Smith (100 fly). Ron Yokubison (200 fly), and Bill Thompson (100 back).

The following weekend, GPSC's best age groupers went on to Midland, Mich., for the state Junior Olympics. Having one of her best meets ever was Anne Llwellyn (13-14). Anita Warner (9-10), Robert Naiman (13-14), Camey Mader (17-18), Mike Owens (11-12) and Sue Llwellyn (11-12) turned in best times.

The first week of August had the tour stopping in Ann Arbor for the state championships. GPSC fin-ished fourth, with 21 swimmers making the finals.

They were Pat Kirchner (9-10), Camey Puidokas (11-12), Mike Kirchner (11-12), Karen Dundon (13-14), Leah Puidokas (13-14), Heidi Mader (13-14), Jim Singelyn (13-14), Thompson (15-16), Yokubison, Greg Cooksey (15-16), Jeff Williams (15-16), Kathy Kish (15-16), Dick Clarke (17-18), Matt Smith (17-18), Leon Maulem (17-18), Tracy Cunningham (17-18), Sandy Smith (17-18), Anne Verona (17-18) and Camey Mader (17-18).

The team then headed for Indianapolis, Ind. for the Central Zone championships. Twelve local swimmers were part of Team Michigan, which beat eight other teams for the title. A high point was Jim Singelyn winning both breast stroke events and setting a 1:11.55 state record in 100 meters. Clarke won the 100 fly and the 400 free and several GPSC swimmers. were on winning relays.

Finalists included Heidi Mader (100 fly, 200 back), Kish (200, 400, 800, 1500 free), Tracy Cunningham (400, 800, 1500 free), Matt Smith (100, 200 fly) and Mike Kirchner (200-400 free).

Other zone qualifiers included Jim Boutrous, Yokubison, Camey Puidokas, Leah Puidokas and Dundon.

Ron Howard became GPSC's first national champion with an impressive win in the 200 back at the 18 and under nationals in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He also finished third in the 100 back. Sandy Smith was consolation finalist in the 100 breast stroke. Katie Young, Thompson, Heidi Mader and Kish also attended.

The swim club is co-sponsored by the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe public school system.

Prevent injury with conditioning

When an injury puts a high school athlete out of commission for the season, or even during an important stretch of the schedule, dreams of championships may not be realized.

While there are no sure-fire ways to prevent injury, there are precautions worth noting, says orthopaedic surgeon David J. Collon, M.D., director of Henry Ford Hospital's Center for Athletic Medicine and team physician for the Detroit Lions.

'You need to be in good condition at this time of the year, you must have the right equipment and you should be properly coached," Dr. Collon said. He also is orthopaedic consultant for the Detroit Tigers and was team physician for the Michigan Panthers of the United States Football League.

The center, which specializes in injury prevention, orthopaedic surgery and rehabilitation for athletes, also provides athletic medicine services for Birmingham Brother Rice, Grosse Pointe North and South (in cooperation with Cottage Hospital), Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher, Royal Oak number of the following: providing trainers and physicians, physical exams and educational programs on a variety of sports-related subjects.

"Along with providing services, we try to educate the coaches and athletes," Dr. Collon said. "Coaches should follow the same precautions as the athletes. They should be sensitive to the concerns of the players and doctors, and listen to their complaints. They should be sure they have adequate conditioning drills, as well as getting support from the school administrators so they get the proper equipment.'

Another important concern is the return of the injured athlete, who should be fully rehabilitated before attempting a corneback. In the event of an injury, good common sense should be practiced. Athletes should be careful that they've taken the time to totally recover.

"Every year, we see some high school athletes come back before they are fully rehabilitated, and some don't get hurt again," Dr. Collon added. "But, the risk of re-injury is significantly increased if they come back too soon. A knee injury is the one we worry about more than any other because it is so difficult to recuperate from.

'It's a lot different at the professional level. Professional athletes can devote a greater amount of time to rehabilitation. Therefore, their rehabilitation is much more intense.

Dr. Collon spends a majority of his time working with professional athletes. He attends 84 Tiger home games a year, seeing the players who need medical attention before and after games, and 20 of his 52 weekends are spent with the Lions. He also spends time with the Tigers at spring training in Lakeland, Fla., and with the Lions at preseason camp at Oakland University in Rochester. Henry Ford Hospital's Center for Athletic Medicine is part of the new Henry Ford Bone and Joint Specialty Center. For more information on the Center for Athletic Medicine, call 876-3595.
