Help get Fr. Pat up in the air again

Father Pat Patten, the missionary priest whose parents live in Grosse Pointe Woods, escaped injury when his medical plane crashed recently near a remote mission in Tanzania. Of his four passengers, a bishop suffered a cracked rib and a priest received a cracked collarbone; the other two were not hurt.

The plane crashed shortly after take-off. The group, aided by Masai villagers, had to travel 140 miles to get medical treatment.

In the meantime, Fr. Pat's plane has to be replaced. There will be a benefit, sponsored by the Queen of Peace Craft Club, Saturday, Oct. 11, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the junior high building, located at 20955 Bourne-mouth, near Harper and 7 Mile. There will be handcrafted items, home-baked goods and a white elephant sale. There is no admission charge.

All proceeds will go toward a new plane. For more information, call Elizabeth Barbour at 881-1059 or Virg Patten at 881-8787.

Not as bad as we thought

Unbelievable as it may seem as frightening crime statistics swirl around us, fewer households have been touched by crime each year for which there are statistics. The U.S. Department of Justice has been keeping track since 1975, and each year a smaller percentage of families is affected.

A household is considered "touched by crime" if it has ex-perienced a burglary, auto theft or household larceny, or if a household member was raped, robbed or assaulted.

This omits at least one pretty serious crime category — homicide. And keep in mind that the statistics are estimates compiled by the Justice Department. Some police don't put a lot of in them — one of the Pointe chiefs told us these guys down in Washington have to do something to justify their exist-

But this is what these Washington guys say.

In 1984, the most recent year for which there are data, 22.8 million households, or 26 percent, were touched by crime down two million from 1982, the peak year. When the department started keeping track, the number of households affected rose each year, but more slowly than the increase in the number of total households. That kept the percentage on a downward trend. Starting in 1983, the absolute number of households affected by crime also began to decline.

The bad news is that certain kinds of households are touched more often than others. Rich people, urban people and black people are victimized in the 30 percent range.

The good news is that even though the Pointes have a healthy household income level, the crime level is nowhere near 30 percent. Police departments don't keep statistics in quite the same form, but the chiefs' seatof-the-pants feeling is that crime is low. 'A lot of us are touched by crime, but it often happens outside the Pointes," said Farms Police Chief Bob Ferber. "You go to work and your car gets stolen — I've had my car stolen twice, but never in Grosse Pointe. If you measure things that happen right here in the Farms, I'd say about 10 percent of the households are touched by crime."

Police impart security — free

By Nancy Parmenter

Did you know that the half-moon latch on your double-hung window is no good for keeping out burglars? That and other tidbits of useful security information can be had free from many police depart-

The Grosse Pointe Park department has been conducting free security checks for residents since 1982. The check takes about half an hour and nets the homeowner useful suggestions that don't have to cost much.

Sgt. Randy Cain knows first hand what it feels like to realize that there are ways for someone to break into your house.

prevention seminar," he said.
"The more they talked, the more I squirmed around in my seat — I couldn't wait to get home and start fixing things.'

Cain speaks to neighborhood groups about security measures, but says the talks don't always lead to requests for checks. He e community tends to little complacent about crime.

'We're still dealing with the feeling that nothing ever happens in Grosse Pointe," he said. "Well, I'm sorry, but things do happen in Grosse Pointe." Cain says small crime is a fact of life not only in urban areas, but everywhere.

Last week, he ran a security check for a family living near Jefferson. They had had window locks and double cylinder deadbolts installed before they moved in, but wanted the check to see if they had overlooked anything.

"Some people with elaborate security systems ask for the check. They have everything and you might wonder why they want an inspection," Cain said. "But some people want it for the peace of mind. They wonder if they missed anything. And it helps to have an independent mind look at things.

The inspection began at the side door, a wooden door with several panes of glass. Cain said the double deadbolt look on the door was a good idea because of the large expanse of glass which would otherwise enable a thief to reach in and open the door from the inside.

"But the lock is only as good as the strikeplate," he said. "The screws that come with them are generally too short. You need screws long enough to reach into the 2x4 next to the door frame."

The door had two deadbolts, but ne resident worried about leaving the door open with only the screen door latched during hot weather. 'It's one thing having protection and another thing making yourself a prisoner in your own home,' Cain said. "This is supposed to be your castle. Leave the door open when you're nearby, but if you go out in the backyard, close the inside door. It's cooler, anyway.

Moving around to the sliding glass door to the patio, Cain sug-gested keeping a bar or broom handle in the slot along the floor to keep anyone from moving the door from the outside. But the real issue with sliding doors is that many of them can be lifted right off their track. A screw or piece of wood fastened in the top track will prevent the door from moving upward, he said.

Now about the half-moon latch on the double-hung windows. It seems it's quite easy to rip them right out of the wood. These windows had locks, but a simple home-make lock can be made by simply pounding a nail into the frame so the window can't be raised. If you want the breeze, pound the nail in a few inches higher so the window will go up a little way.

Homeowners worry that burglars will break a window to enter, but Cain said that isn't the most likely method. "Coming through a broken window is like committing suicide," he said. "Besides, breaking a window makes a lot of noise.

Heavy screening or bars are recommended for basement windows big enough for a person to climb through — and that includes almost all basement windows. Inexpensive bars can be made of electrical conduit, with the ends

Farms couple die in airplane crash

By Peter A. Salinas

Both were experienced, cautious pilots, but on a foggy morning Sept. 23, they were killed instantly when their Cessna 172 crashed in a swampy wooded area a mile north of the Iosco County Airport.

Donald and Sigrid Jones of Grosse Pointe Farms had been staying at their cottage near Oscoda and flew out of the airport at about 6 a.m. They were not reported missing until Tuesday

The wreckage of the plane was found by Wilbur Roach, Iosco airport manager and friend of the couple, after 36 hours after their after he retired he worked with a number of them in construction.

Jones was a licensed builder, and had been doing carpentry restoration work on historic homes in Detroit, Callas said.

He was a commercial pilot, and taught aviation ground school at the War Memorial and Lakeview High School. He also had his own flight service and was an instrument flying instructor.

Sigrid Jones was the supervisor of the Life Stress Center at Detroit's University Health Center in the Medical Center complex. She had collaborated on a book recently about multiple personalities, which is being published and

The plane was moved to the airport Sept. 28 by Federal Aviation Administration officials, and the cause of the crash is still being investigated, according to Austin Fisher, the airport's assistant manager.

"From what I've been hearing, it was toggy when they took off at 6 a.m.," Fisher said. "But I can't say for sure because I didn't get here until 8 a.m. It was foggy Fisher said it is not unusual for an instrument-panel pilot to take off into foggy conditions. Officials said Sigrid Jones, a licensed pilot was found in the pilot's seat of the dual-control aircraft.

Don Jones was a teacher at Kettering High School in Detroit from 1965 to 1984. He taught carpentry in the school system's only such

"He worked to get the kids into trades," said his daughter, Kathryn Callas. "He had a special relationship with the children, and should be available next spring, according to Callas.

"They flew all over together," said Callas. "They would fly to the coast, Nashville, New Orleans. they loved to travel together."

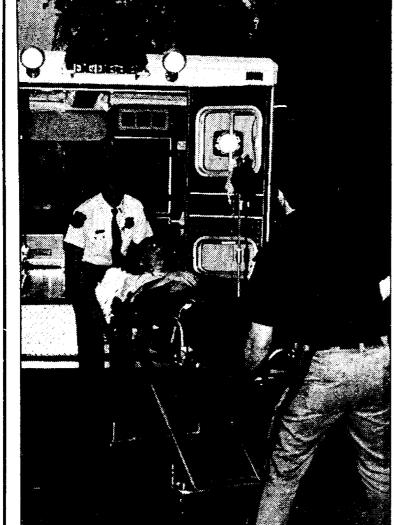

Sigrid Jones was a member of the Fort Street Presbyterian Church Chorale.

The Joneses are survived by three daughters, Pamela Rigney, Kathryn Callas and Ruth Jones: two sons, H. Richard Rigney and John D. Rigney; and two grandchildren.

Sigrid Jones is survived by her mother, Kathryn Tomlin Iben and a brother, Icko Iben Jr.

A memorial service has been set for Friday, Oct. 3, at 3:30 p.m. at Fort Street Presbyterian Church, 631 Fort Street, Detroit, A family and friends hour is planned immediately after the service.

Both were cremated and their ashes are to be scattered over northern Michigan.

Time is of the essence in heart attack treatment

By Nancy Parmenter 9:45 a.m. - A sharp pain in the left arm, followed by numbness spreading upward. A few minutes later, nausea and dizziness. My co-workers help me out of my desk chair and onto the floor. They call Michigan Ambulance, an advanced life support system based at St. John Hospital.

10 a.m. — The ambulance arrives and emergency technicians begin intravenous medication and oxygen.

My "heart attack" was simulated, but most of the treatment was not. In a demonstration of quick-acting emergency medicine in observation of Emergency Medical Services Week, the ambulance service and the hospital teamed up to show off their new aggressive treatment of heart attacks.

There were a few differences between our simulation and the real thing. Because they knew they were dealing with an imaginary heart attack, the ambulance attendants took their time finding a parking spot in front of the office. My "IV" was only taped to my arm - no needle. And the attendants slowed down their procedures to explain to me and to the curious Grosse Pointe News staff what they were doing.

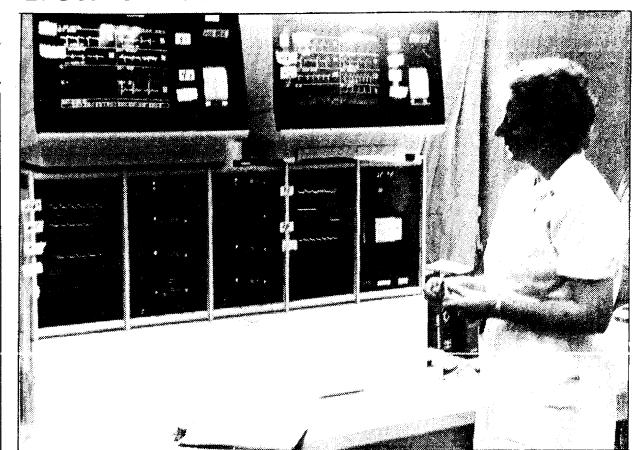

Other aspects were frighteningly real. Being strapped to a stretcher with oxygen tubes in my nostrils, surrounded by watching faces good that he will. They call it 'an impending sense of doom.' If you said that, we would radio it to the hospital - and they'd believe it, too.'

Technicians are prepared to

How fast the arteries get blocked with plaque deposits is genetically determined, but diet and smoking can speed up the process, Somogi said. Once the attack has occurred, breathing, pain, or sweating should go straight to the emergency room.

"We'd rather you come in even if you turn out to have gas, because you just don't know, said Barbara Foggo, the clinical supervisor in the coronary intensive care unit. "We see so many intelligent, well-informed people who deny (having a problem). They lose more heart muscle.

"It's really quite critical to have treatment within four hours of the onset of pain, Southall said.

One of the odd things about heart trouble is that many patients say they have had no pain. It's a matter of definition. A feeling of pressure or a dull ache qualify as pain. It is not necessary that the pain be shooting and severe.

If my heart attack had been real, I would have spent two days in the cardiac care unit, undergone a balloon angioplasty and recuperated for about another week. During much of that time, there would have been medical teams and, later, one nurse at a time, watching over me and participating in my care. The nine to 11 days would have cost a patient without health insurance $11,000, about one-third of the cost of a triple

But it has to be compared to the costs incurred under the conservative style of treatment, Southall said. "Consider the cost of this versus the cost of being in the hospital for a longer time which you'd have to do if you didn't have this done," he said.
"Consider the amount of time spent away from your work.

cardiac rehabiliation, supervised by Davis Sabo, director of the unit.

Cardiologist Dr. John Somogi explains some of the acute intervention options open to the patient.

Some cases are still treated the time-honored, conservative way, with plenty of rest and medication to make the patient comfortable, but the new treatment plans try to intevene and stop — through drugs or surgery — the process of heart muscle death.

and men in white, was enough to raise my usually lethargic blood pressure by 10 points.

Calling the ambulance right away was probably the most important element in my successful recovery, hospital officials said over and over again. Too often, people put off calling until irreparable damage has been done to the heart muscle. Of the 1.5 million people who have heart attacks each year, 600,000 die, many because they waited too long to seek treatment.

It's true that not all chest pains are heart attacks. Some are indigestion or gas or too many martinis at lunch said Jeff White, director of Michigan Ambulance. But why guess, when the consequences could be so severe?

Advanced life support is a fairly new concept in the metropolitan area, White said. In Grosse Pointe, only the Woods has ALS-trained people in the city-operated ambulance department. Besides the Woods and Michigan Ambulance, there are two other ALS services in southeastern Michigan.

ALS means that attendants can administer a certain amount of treatment to stabilize the patient's condition before they even reach the doctors. Although attendants are in radio contact with the hospital, they have been trained to go ahead with medication or an endotrachial tube to clear the airways if necessary. It turned out to be a lucky thing in our case, as the technicians were unable to raise any radio

Once in the ambulance, they radioed the hospital right away so that officials there could monitor my heart as we drove. A printout of my heartbeat was on hand when we arrived. White also continued to ask me questions about my condition, including the trivial-sounding question, "How do you feel?"
"One of the things they teach us is to pay attention to the way a patient says he feels," White said. "If a patient says he's going to die, the chances are take aggressive action in the ambulance. Keeping a flow of oxygen to the brain is of utmost importance, as the cells can die within four minutes, White said. The ambulance carries an array of implements to help the patient breathe. Once in the hospital emergency room, a team of doctors and nurses gathers around the patient, each with a specific duty. Normal ER procedure musters about nine people for the cardiac arrest team, according to Dr. Anthony Southall, director of the emergency center.

"Let's say you did have a heart attack," Southall said. "You have a clot in an artery. No blood is getting through, so part of the heart dies.

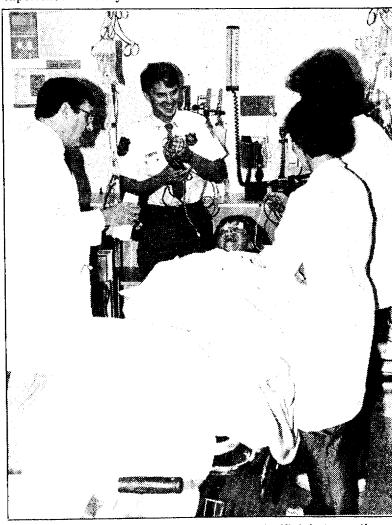

Thus it is decided that I have had an acute myocardial infarction — a heart attack — that can be treated by one of the interventionist procedures the hospital has been using for about two years. Because I am conscious, I am able to agree to go to the "cath lab" for a catheterization. A tiny tube will be snaked through my blood vessels to my heart so that doctors can take a look and determine whether my condition calls for drug therapy to dissolve the clot or for angioplasty to stretch my artery and smash the clot against the artery wall.

Needless to say, the simulation stops here. Cardiologist John Somogi and nurse Pat Ott, manager of the cath lab, demonstrate the procedure through models and

"The body is always making and dissolving clots," Somogi said. "If you have unstable angina and have balloon angioplasty as elective surgery, you can go home in two days. But if you have a heart attack first and have angioplasty to treat it, you'll be in the hospital seven to 10 days.

"What we've accomplished is that there is less damage to the heart than if we didn't do the procedure.

damage to the heart muscle can continue until treatment is started. That's why people who experience difficulty in

A moment of levity when waiting hospital officials tease the patient for making a miraculous recovery. On the left is Dr. Anthony Southall, director of the emergency center at St. John Hospital. A surveyor walked into the bar and asked if someone had the keys to the back lot. No one did, but a couple of employees muttered that if they had them — they weren't sure they'd give them up.

John McElroy, owner of Diamond Lil's Saloon in Grosse Pointe Farms (but not the building which has housed his business for the past 13 years), was visibly upset, but more interested in remembering the good times — not dwelling on the wrecking ball in his future.

The surveyor was there taking measurements for a construction project that is in the planning stages for the southeast corner of Mack Avenue and Kerby. McElroy said the project will include razing the old Bartone Bros. building and the structure that has been home to Diamond Lil's for 24 years, and eight years before that a bar called Ernie's.

The Farms' new mayor

The new mayor of Grosse Pointe Farms, Joe Fromm, exemplifies the public-spirited business and professional people who serve the Pointes so well in elective and appointive positions.

A member of the council since 1973, Fromm last week was appointed mayor to succeed Mayor James H. Dingeman, who died Sept. 18. Fromm will served until the next city election in November 1987.

Fromm brings to the council the expertise in finance and employee benefits that he has acquired in his career at American Motors. He has been with the auto company since 1970 and currently is the assistant treasurer of the corporation.

In his years on the council and as a resident of the Farms, Fromm has been actively interested in all of the Farms problems. As he looks ahead, he still sees many things to be done and believes the Farms will continue to move for-

He sees four matters of immediate concern that will continue to need the council's attention: the completion of the Hill development, begun under Dingeman's regime; the merging of the fire and police departments into a new public safety unit, on which negotiations are currently under way; efforts to halt the deterioration of the Mack-Moross area, and new attempts to get Wayne County to resurface and improve Lakeshore Road.

With men of the caliber of Dingeman and Fromm as mayor, the Farms illustrates that people who are busy and active in their own businesses and professions are among the best public servants the community can find.

new county image?

We are indebted to Richard E. Manning, the new chairman of the Wayne County Commission, for a report on the top 50 counties in the United States that shows Wayne County is the fourth largest in population — but near the bottom in per capita revenue and expenditures.

In specific figures, the report shows Wayne County is 39th in general fund revenue, 49th in revenue per capita, 44th in property tax revenue and 49th in expenditures per capita. Wayne also ranks 48th in the number of employees per 1,000 population. The figures supposedly are based on fiscal year 1986. We're not quite sure why Manning favored us with this material — even after reading his accompanying letter — but apparently it is intended to support his view that we "have slipped seriously in our ability to attend to the fundamental need to encourage public support for financing our destiny." Then he adds:

"The county deficit . . . can be traced to the effects of sending too few dollars at too many problems. When a job is not well done for lack of dollars to support the effort, erosion of public support begins." And he continues:

"The old adage, 'if it's worth doing, then it's worth doing right,' applies equally to government as it does to repairing a roof on a house. Stopgap and halfway measures simply become a waste of money and engender disappointment in the results.

Well, Mr. Manning, for what it is worth we had thought that the county finances and its administration had taken a turn for the better under the new charter and the leadership of the first county Executive, William Lucas. We also had thought that cooperation between the executive and the county commission's recently ousted chairman, John Hertel, had been in part responsible for the reforms put into effect under the charter. But now you say in your letter than "we on the county commission are trying to turn around the image of the county" and that with a new administration coming in January, "we are going to see a real emphasis on positive and realistic goals."

So we offer a few questions, with constructive intent, of course. In what way does the county commission want to change the image of the county? What are some of these "positive and realistic goals" you want to emphasize? What kind of support will you and your cohorts now pledge to continue the reforms the county has been making under charter government? Or was the ouster of Hertel just the beginning of a return of the old guard who in the pre-charter days ran the county for its political and person-al benefit rather than to provide service to the county's citizens?

Perhaps we've misunderstood Manning's letter. Yet the implications of his comments are that he thinks it is regrettable that Wayne County lags behind in its revenues, its expenditures and its employees per 1,000 population. That implication is underscored when he calls attention to "what other people are doing in terms of support of the common effort to create a community.

Yet his letter never indicates in which areas of service to the public Wayne County lags behind. But if the chairman and the commission want more public support — which we interpret to mean more funds — for "financing our des-tiny," perhaps they ought to tell us how and where they would spend the additional revenue they apparently seek.

Otherwise, they're asking the public to buy a pig in a poke. And they're unlikely to get very far, despite comparisons showing Wayne Coun- To the Editor: ty's per capita spending, per capita revenue and number of employees per 1,000 population accounts of the activities engaged are among the lowest of the top 50 counties in the nation.

The Reagan endorsement

Will President Reagan's strong endorsement of William Lucas and Colleen Engler in Detroit last week help elect the Republican ticket in Michigan in November?

Nobody knows whether Lucas can close the gap with Gov. James Blanchard but the president's appearance surely should help the state GOP campaign. The significant question is just how much the president will boost Lucas' chances.

Most politicians believe that even presidents as popular as Reagan cannot transfer their popularity to other candidates merely by the laying on of hands. There is support for that belief in a recent Time magazine poll showing that 70 percent of the people would be unmoved by a presidential appeal for them to support a specific candidate.

Yet it is also true that earlier Michigan polls had shown that Lucas had not attracted as much support from rank-and-file Republicans as had been expected and that as many as a third of them were drifting over to support the incumbent Democratic governor. So perhaps those Republicans will be drawn back to support the GOP nominee now that the President has spoken out in such definite terms.

Still open to question, however, is the President's comment that the Lucas-Engler team symbolizes the political realignment that is creating a national conservative Republican majority. If the GOP wins in Michigan, captures a significant number of governorships elsewhere and retains control of the U.S. Senate in November, such a conclusion might be justified. The election surely will give us the answer.

But the President was correct, however, in pointing to the fact that the nomination of a black for governor and a woman for lieutenant governor does illustrate that the party is now trying to be, in Reagan's words, "the party of all the people."

Yet the GOP obviously needs to do more to appeal to minorities and the economic underclass in American society. That was brought home to those attending the Reagan rally by the demonstrators who protested outside Cobo Hall against the Reagan administration policies.

Some of the demonstration stemmed from the effort of U.S. Rep. John Conyers of Detroit to denigrate Lucas' efforts to win votes in the black community and thereby challenge Democratic domination of such districts. But some of the demonstrators no doubt were honest critics of Reagan administration policies on such matters as civil rights, nuclear testing and foreign policy as well as economic issues including unemployment and aid for the needy.

Convers' vitriolic attacks on Lucas, however, have not been supported by Blanchard himself and they have, in fact, been strongly criticized by blacks who support the GOP nominee in his effort to become the first elected black governor in U.S. history. In fact, the violence of the criticism of Lucas by people like Congressman Conyers raises the suspicion that the GOP nominee is winning more support in the black community than the polls indicate.

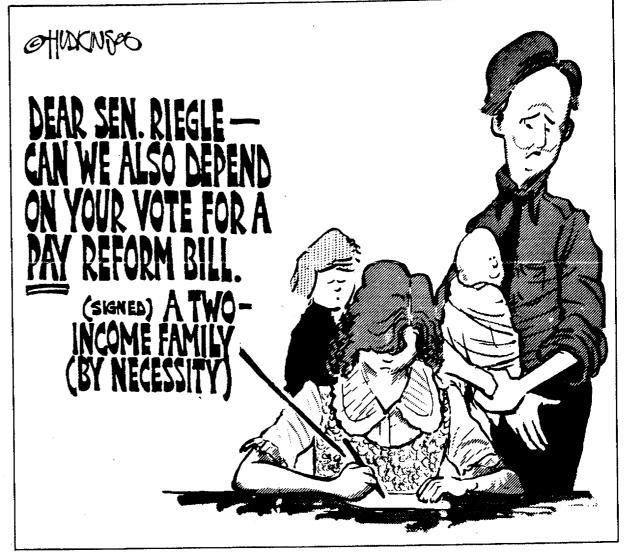

The Michigan Chronicle, a weekly newspaper serving the black community, has raised the question as to "whether Lucas will find the administration's support an albatross or whether the Reagan Teflon will be able to attract enough white support across the state to help him realize his dream . . . "That question won't be answered until Nov. 4, of course, and it may be that Lucas will find Reagan support of some benefit among blacks as well as whites.

To the Editor:

In regards to Mr. Gusmano's letter in the Sept. 18 issue, he was upset that his son, who was a member of Grosse Pointe Red Barons football team, was not getting playing time. I agree with you, Mr. Gusmano, that your son should get more playing time if he practices 15 hours a week and paid $25 fee. That $25 is very reasonable considering all of the expenses the league must meet. Equipment, field rental and maintenance, as well as the cost of officials for each game gets very costly.

I have been coaching in the Pointes summer, fall, winter and spring for seven years. No matter the team, my practices usually lasts two hours. I do my best to play each athlete in every game,

Doctors built; DIO remodeling

There is one thing that is overlooked by many parents and that is that their child does not cooperate. Does your son exhibit a positive attitude? Is he on time for practice? Does he work hard? If vour answer to all three is ves. then you have a legitimate complaint. Too many parents side with their child who can do no wrong. That is when the fun of coaching ends for many coaches. Renovation of DIO's facility will e completed by December 1986. It will house teaching programs, research, administrative offices and the Friends of Vision, the volunteer corps of the DIO who work with the Visually Impaired Support Group. A much-needed resource center named in honor of Martha F. Gorey will provide aids, supplies and information for the visually impaired. Current resource material for ophthalmic students, technicians and professionals in the ophthalmic field will be available at the James R. Marshall Jr., M.D. Memorial Library.

The DIO and the physicians (Grosse Pointe Ophthalmology) have always been two separate entities even though they shared space since 1974. Now each has its own facility.

Coach thanks supportive parents

The Grosse Pointe News Opinions and Letters section in the last two issues have printed articles from parents who probably can appreciate what decisions coaches have to make concerning football players, especially young, inexperienced players. I'm sure they have taken the time to personally become involved with their son's football program. They must also know the Red Barons is not a babysitting service for boys who do not want to learn or work.

Football, unlike many sports, is a hard contact sport. It requires its participants to be mentally alert and physically capable of receiving and giving aggressive bodily contact. In the Red Barons program, there are non-aggressive players, generally at the freshman level, but not exclusively, who are learning about the basic fundamentals and more importantly they are learning how to have selfdiscipline and commitment. Coaches cannot expect to teach players who cannot learn to perform basic assignments or who are unwilling to learn. We have found that the disgruntled parents are those who have a hard time accepting their sons are not physically or mentally capable to play football at this time in their young lives. Whether it be lack of certain abilities or self-discipline or whatever, all boys are not cut-out for football.

Red Baron coaches do not take a boy's enthusiasm for football and purposely transform it into rejection. Decisions to leave the program are based mainly on whether the child can commit to the training schedule and execute his function so as not to injure himself in practice or game situations.

Money aside, C. Gusmano and Christopher, who is an excellent Pat Lowry (to which you devoted a paragraph in your letters), perhaps your sons have avoided unnecessary injury because they either missed training, for various excuses, or were unable to perform various assignments, blocking, tackling, etc.

As a footnote, my 12-year-old son

How about some flowers?

For several seasons now, I have noticed the sparsity of flowers in the Village shopping area. Flowers are relatively inexpensive and yet add color and attractiveness to neighborhoods and commercial areas.

And how about some benches to break up the large area of concrete at the corner of St. Clair and Kercheval? This area could be more peopleoriented and patterned after the nice plantings and benches on the

I believe that Grosse Pointe is capable of providing a more attractive and inviting shopping area and hope these suggestions will be acted upon.

New should learn from old

To the Editor:

As a taxpayer in Grosse Pointe Park, I feel that during the course of the years, the interaction between our residents and law enforcement agency has diminished. Being a one-time resident of Indian Village for two years and a 36-year resident of Grosse Pointe Park, I find no difference between the Detroit Police Department which is a "robot-like force" and the new tactics of the Grosse Pointe Park

In the last three months, I have requested the services of the Grosse Pointe Park police one, to eliminate the youths of Detroit off of my property and second, to assist me in retrieving my keys which had been locked inside of my vehicle. Both times I have been ignored. On the first occasion, the police officer asked me "what my problem was in complaining" and secondly, I was told over the phone to wait until Monday to get a locksmith. Unfortunately it was Saturday evening at 9 p.m.

The professionalism and personal attention which was once part of our police force is now being channeled into other segments of our society. I do not feel that at 9 p.m. on a Saturday evening that the crime rate in Grosse Pointe Park is in full operation as to prevent our police from answering calls from residents.

I would suggest that your new force look back to the police of Grosse Pointe Park 10 years ago and learn through them on how to be professional as well as personable police officers. The law enforcement officers of 10 years ago displayed more professionalism than the new rookies of today's say

Things my mother never told me

I blame my mother. She was just too good to be true.

Way back in 1953, she had exactly 10 days in which to plan her wedding. And when I say plan, I mean plan, execute and enjoy - everything from buying a gown, ordering a cake and flowers, having a bridal shower, finding a church and two reception halls and rounding up family members by telephone to participate in the whole

And everything went off perfectly, including the impromptu living room reception my mother invited 150 people to attend between her wedding breakfast and the reception later that evening (after my grandmother and my aunt recovered from the shock of my mother's surprise announcement at the breakfast, they went scurrying around to a few stores, rushed home to clean up the house and that part of the day went off without a hitch, too). In fact, some of my relatives still recall my mom's wedding as one of the nicest they remember.

Which places a pretty big burden on me, let me tell you. Even though times have changed more than just a little in these 33 years since my mother's fantastic feat, and even though I have something like six months (yikes!) left in which to plan my wedding, I feel this tremendous pressure to pull off a miracle, just like mother's.

Sure. It took me 10 days just to get in touch with the priest in order to set a date to meet with him so we could set a date for the wedding. See what I'm up against?

When the topic of marriage came up, my intended (or whatever Ladies' Home Journal calls them these days) and I were guests at the wedding of a friend. We were dancing when the question was posed: "Would you want one of these?", he asked, gesturing in the general direction of the festivities going on around us. "I think so," I answered naively. 'Maybe not quite as large.

Hah. What I didn't realize at the time was that the wedding I thought was big turned out to be for about 150 people, or roughly equivalent to the number of aunts, uncles and first cousins I have on one side of the family.

That was in June. Since then, we've managed to handcuff the priest long enough to give us a wedding date and tell us what we must do to get married within the Catholic Church, and thumbed through the Yellow Pages in search of a reception hall large enough to accommodate our families (about the size of a Chinese army barracks), classy enough to entertain our friends (not a primary concern, however) and cheap enough to accommodate our budgets (does Emily Post say it's improper to charge admission to wed-

I haven't given a single thought to flowers, invitations, bridal showers, attendants' gowns, honeymoon destinations, rehearsal dinners, gifts for wedding party members, housing for out-of-town guests, marriage licenses, music, cakes, my trousseau (my what?), limousines, personalized napkins and matchbooks (PERSONALIZ-ED MATCHBOOKS?) or gift registrations . . . all the things brides' magazines tell me in authoritarian tones that I should have taken care of long ago.

And speaking of brides' magazines, I'll just bet that they weren't around back when my mother was putting her wedding together. If they had been, my poor mother would probably still be reading the "Engaged Woman's Guide to Fitness" and "How to Have Fun at Your Wedding", two typical offerings in magazines of that ilk. And my brothers and sisters and I would be, well, you get the picture.

If I did all of the things those glossy brides publications told me to do, I'd spend about $10,000 on my wedding, alienate my fiance and my family and wind up anorexic and wearing a bridal gown resembling Tina Turner's costume in "Mad Max: Beyond Thunderdome.

No. I think I'll just plod along in my slow, steady way. I've already learned lots of things I can pass along to someone else, since I'm never, ever going to do this again.

• Never check with more than one person when making out your wedding invitation list. If you do, you'll find out just how many people you've forgotten and the list will grow faster than a charge card bill in December.

• Don't believe bridesmaids when they say "Oh, I don't care what kind of dress we get. I'm agreeable to anything, really." Uhhuh. They're usually about as agreeable as oil and water.

• Try not to attend too many weddings before your own nuptials. You find yourself trying to combine the best elements of each and your wedding ends up looking like a scene from a Cecil B.

DeMille epic.

• And finally, tell as few people as possible about your upcoming marriage. The more you talk about it, the more everybody who is anybody will call, write or stop you on the street to tell you of their latest brilliant idea for your day, or about the deal you can get on wholesale wedding cakes from their Uncle Leon.

In fact, about the only thing worse than telling people you're getting married is . . . writing about it. Oops.

"Pills Do All the Work"

According to the clinical study, "Super Pill II itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO special exercise, NO hunger pangs, and NO messy fresh half grapefruit to eat at every meal." You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

Pregnancy Aid marks dozen years of service

By Pat Paholsky

For 12 years now, Pregnancy Aid has been operating out of the same tiny office on Mack Avenue, without any federal or state funding. The agency depends entirely on volunteers to staff the office and private donations to keep it oper-

Last year the agency administered 190 free pregnancy tests, saw and helped 350 girls and women through their pregnancies and answered 1,800 phone calls.

While impressive, the statistics do not take into account the handknit baby outfits, diapers, crib sheets, receiving blankets, sleepers, undershirts, bottles of baby shampoo given to needy mothers. Or the cribs. Or the maternity clothes.

Then there are the intangibles, such as finding housing or helping a girl complete her education, getting her medical treatment or financial assistance or legal ad-

It takes a heap of volunteers to keep such a program going and it costs from $800 to $900 a month to provide all these services, according to Mandy Scranton, president of the organization and a Grosse Pointe resident.

About 30 volunteers staff the office, and since some of them hold full-time jobs, the group is always looking for more. "We ask them to work twice a month," Scranton said. The office is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., and from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays.

All volunteers are trained. They develop listening skills through a crisis counseling course sponsored by Ebenezer Baptist Church. There are always speakers at the monthly meetings and the group helps sponsor workshops.

There will be an all-day work-

Topic is depression

Dan Guyer, M.D., psychiatrist, will discuss the causes, diagnosis, types, treatment methods and prognosis of depression in a free community program at Cottage Hospital on Wednesday, Oct. 15, 7 to 9 p.m. The program will be held in the lower level boardrooms of the hospital, 159 Kercheval.

He will discuss the relationship between depression and stress, the impact of aging, how to recognize when depression is severe enough to require outside help, and the variety of treatments used, from counseling to medication.

For reservations, call 881-1800.

Looking over some of the maternity clothes available for needy mothers-to-be are volunteers Beth Stack, holding her son, John Jr., and Mandy Scranton, president of Pregnancy Aid.

shop at St. John Hospital Saturday, Oct. 11, beginning at 9 a.m. Potential volunteers and others are welcome to attend, Scranton said. The cost of the workshop is $12 ($15 at the door) and includes lunch. For information or reservations, call

Among the volunteers are an adoptive mother, single mothers, a young man who is working toward a master's degree in social work and a black volunteer. The majority of them are from Grosse Pointe, with others from St. Clair Shores, Harper Woods and Detroit.

"You have to be really interested in this work," Scranton said.
"It's non-glamorous and sometimes saddening and we just see the tip of the iceberg." But, she added, "It's really rewarding, wonderful work."

One of the youngest volunteers is 22-year-old Beth Stack, who is pregnant with her second child. Her son, John Jr., is almost 2 years old. She became a volunteer, she said, after listening to a radio in-terview of the president of Birth-

"She talked about the services and I didn't know they existed," Stack said. "I always wanted to do something for pro-life and I called the station and they referred me to Pregnancy Aid."

The Oxford

Institute

Stack and her husband John live near the office.

"It's so gratifying," she said. "In the beginning a girl is so fright-ened. It's so hard for them to believe at that age that their parents really love them. Very few parents kick their children out."

The women and girls who come to the office for help are about equally divided according to race, Scranton said, with half of them black and half white. The majority of the women they see are 18 to 24. Girls as young as 12 have been helped, and last year, the agency counseled two women past 40.

'Grosse Pointe mustn't think their daughters are immune from this situation," she said. "I see girls from Grosse Pointe and this is something people would rather not address. None of us wants this to happen to our daughters."

Besides the office volunteers, there are others who sew and knit items for layettes. There are volunteers who go to garage sales to buy cribs and other needed items. Volunteers also include doctors and other professionals who donate their services. Pregnancy Aid gets diapers and layette items from the Christ Child Society as well as volunteers who help at the office. And St. Ambrose Parish has a baby shower for the agency every year around Christmas.

"Everything we do is free, totally confidential and non-judgmental," Scranton said. "The last thing we want to do is make a girl feel bad or evil."

Pregnancy Aid was formed in 1974 in response to the U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion.

"Some people in the area decided they should try to do something for the women who feel abortion is the only answer," Scranton said. "They got this little office and a phone and they got themselves trained.'

The purpose of the organization is to inform mothers-to-be about alternatives to an unwanted pregnancy, such as adoption.

"After our best efforts to explain that there is life in the beginning, if the girl decides to have an abortion, we don't say you are a bad person. At least you made an informed decision."

Pregnancy Aid does not show photos of aborted fetuses, she said. Instead volunteers concentrate on fetal development.

'We are non-denominational as well and we don't proselytize," she said. "The one thing we want to do with these girls is love them and help them and not judge them. If they're given a chance, they'll make something of themselves."

Installation of the new 16-foot diapason and 61-note Trompette en Chamade to the existing 29-rank Moller pipe organ at the Grosse Pointe Baptist Church was completed recently. At the left, Byron Arneson of the Moller company plays chords on the organ console, while Philip Robertson, above on the scaffold, tunes the individual pipes. The organ expansion will be dedicated with a special concert by Diane Bish, an organist with a national reputation, at 7:30 p.m., Friday, Oct. 10, at the church. The concert is open to the public and a freewill offering will be made. The pipes extending perpendicular to the curtain are the Trompette en Chamade, a set of bronze pipes that add a brilliant, trumpet sound to flourishes played on the organ.

Harper Woods man bound over for trial

Harper Woods, was bound over for trial Sept. 24, on charges of first degree murder and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony in the shooting death of Stacie Scherz, a 1986 graduate of North High School. preliminary examination in whether he wants to stand trial or sicker said the shooting was an accident. But witnesses told the court that Aussicker said he would have to kill them, too.

Don't ignore tornado siren

Last weekend's double false alarm of the Woods' tornado siren raised some questions on procedures, Woods police said. The siren was activated twice on Sunday because of electrical storm activity.

The incidence of false alarms is actually very low, said Woods Officer Sally Beghin. So the thing to do is believe it, except when it is tested the first Saturday of each month at 1 p.m.

"Don't take a chance," Beg-hin said. "Take cover."

The siren is only sounded when a tornado is sighted. It wails up and down for several minutes and can be heard in some of the other Pointes, Beghin said. It does not sound for a tornado watch, which only indicates that weather conditions are ripe for the formation of a tornado.

"When you hear the siren, go for cover," Beghin said. "It rarely sounds by accident, so be on the safe side. And don't call the police. Everybody calls the dispatcher, the lines get swamped and she can't take emergency calls.

Once you have heard the siren, if you want further weather information, turn on your radio or television. The police do not have more information than the weather bureau.

And be cautious. Don't stand on the porch watching a tornado approach.

Gun applicants face training

Beginning Oct. 1, any person who applies for a concealed wea-pon permit in Wayne County must adhere to new standards and successfully complete a four-hour training course. Gun permits are within the discretion of the county Gun Board, which is composed of the sheriff, the prosecutor and the director of Michigan State Police.

Instruction will cover all aspects of firearm ownership and the safe handling and familiarity of a firearm. Instructors shall be National Rifle Association (NRA) and/or Michigan Law Enforcement Officers Training Council (MLEOTC) certified.

A list of county-wide training locations is available. Prospective applicants may call the Sheriff's Department at 224-0414 or 224-2233 for further information.

Several hundred members of the assistant dean of Alumni Relations and Placement, University of Dejudiciary and the bar, representing all religious faiths will invoke God's assistance in their administration of justice during the University of Detroit's annual Red Mass, beginning at 12:15 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 7, in SS. Peter and Paul Church, 629 East Jefferson.

Celebration of the Red Mass is a tradition of the legal profession the Law School are also assisting dating back to 13th-century England. The English legal year at that time was divided into four terms, the first called "Michaelmas," after the Feast of St. Michael, Sept. 29. On a date close to Michaelmas, as the courts, Parliament and the university began the year's legal activities, the entire bench and bar would attend the Red Mass, named for the color of the vestments worn by the officiating clergy. More than 700 years after the inception of the Red Mass, attorneys and judges in many countries continue to renew their commitment to truth and justice prior to the opening of court each year. The chairman for the 1986 Red Mass is the Hon. Walter P. Cynar, a 1949 graduate of the University of Detroit School of Law. He is being assisted by Mary M. Barden, Cain warned that it is easy to kick a dryer vent out of a basement window. "We've seen people crawl through these windows," he said.

"The harder we can make it, the more noise they have to make and the more time it takes to get in, the better the chance of getting caught."

Exterior doors should be installed with the hinges on the inside, but if they aren't, there are ways to install a screw across the top of the hinge so that the pin can't be removed.

A lot of crime prevention is common sense, Cain said. Homeowners should photograph their valuables as a record for police and insurance companies. Driver's license numbers should be engraved on the back of stereos and other expensive equipment. Many police departments have engravers to lend to the public.

Lights on timers, lights outdoors, locked doors, locked garages should all be routine precautions. A large percentage of burglaries take place through unlocked doors - and it only takes an average of seven minutes for a thief to break in, find the valuables and leave.

'They know where people keep things," Cain said. "They know the guns are in the husband's closet and the money is in the top lefthand drawer.

arvard — still unique after 350 years in business

By Nancy Parmenter

"Fight fiercely, Harvard! Fight, fight, fight!/Demonstrate our prowess, do!" - Tom Lehrer, underappreciated shirttail Harvard off-

Real Harvard men might not like the exclamation marks.

'Harvard is not a gung-ho place in a fraternity-type sense," says Dr. Peter McCabe, Harvard College class of 1961. But that isn't to say that Harvard men don't get excited about the right issues.

Take the Latin riots of '61. That was the year Harvard dropped Latin on the diplomas in favor of English - an affront to the tradition-minded students.

"The students poured into Harvard Square, chanting 'Latin, si — Pusey, no,' "McCabe remembered. "The fire department hosed everyone down," but university President Nathan Pusey didn't relent on the language change.

Some real Harvard men are women now. In a change that has gradually evolved over several decades. Radcliffe College has been - almost - assimilated into Harvard.

"It's a bit in a state of confusion," says "Cliffie" Janet Moon. "You'd need an administration official to tell you how it works."

New grads pride themselves on the Harvard connection, grads from a few years back prize the Radcliffe identity. But for now, it's the men's school that's in the limelight, celebrating the founding 350 years ago of Harvard College for young men.

That's older than almost any other American institution, but not to be too impressed. The oldest building on campus is only, oh, 200 or 250 years old. The truth of the matter is that Harvard wasn't founded by John Harvard. When the college was a few years old, Harvard, a local minister, died and left it some money and a rather impressive library of several hundred vol-

Only one of those books still survives. A fire in the library destroyed the building and all the books - except one overdue one, according to Dr. Billy Ben Baumann, recent president of the Harvard Club of Eastern Michigan.

Harvard got off to a rough start, Baumann says. "The first master flogged the students with sticks and his wife adulterated their food with goat dung." When the trustees fired the couple, they ran away with half the money John Harvard had left.

"They were a hard pair," Baumann said. Harvard, of course, went on to produce such luminaries as John Adams and Leonard Bernstein and George Plimpton, Franklin Roosevelt and the Aga Khan, who sat next to Baumann in chemistry class. It was this sort of proud history that the school celebrated last month and will continue to celebrate — on a smaller scale - throughout the year. The eastern Michigan club will hold its bash in April.

The university pulled out all the stops for the affair, hiring Hollywood-style producers and worrying true-blue Crimson styles, who were afraid that Harvard would fall on its face with 100 Elvis Presley lookalikes, as Baumann put it.

There are a lot of Harvard critics wherever you go," he said. "They feared, or probably hoped, that we would have something in poor taste." He laughed. "We came perilously close with fireworks showing the moving hand of John Hancock signing his name.'

the university live up to it? "A lot of people wonder if Harvard is still top-notch," said Thomas Gentile, class of 1986. Three of my five roommates were valedictorians of their class.

I was a National Merit winner, but

With such a big reputation, does group and the line of National Merit winners picking up their money stretched out the door. There were 600 of them."

Smart - and liberal, goes the reputation. Radcliffe, even in the days when women's colleges wrapped their students in cotton wool, gave the girls their head.

"The rules were very liberal if your marks were good," remembers Janet Moon. "You could pretty much do what you wanted. Their attitude was that you're in college; if you can manage your academic schedule, you can manage your

"The impression of liberalism comes from diversity;" says Elliott Phillips, Harvard College 1940, Harvard Law 1947. "Harvard has everything from French horn players to jocks, esthetes to surfers. It's deliberate - and one of the great strengths."

Harvard's commitment to diversity is apparently still very much in evidence. Baumann says one of the main activities of the alumni club is recruitment: "We're vigorously recruiting minority and lower-income students. The university has a huge financial aid program, so the admissions is financially blind." The college has changed over the years. Elliott Phillips, who attended over a decade interrupted I had the lowest SAT scores of the by World War II, noticed the dramatic changes wrought by war.

Before the war, "we wore ties and jackets . . . and ladies came in and made our beds," he remembered. "We had menus and china. It was a very civilized way of 'Going back to law school after the war was entirely different. People were serious about working hard and finishing school. They were very competitive; they didn't help each other any more.'

'Serious" is the way Charles T. Fisher remembers the business school, too.

"There wasn't the college at-mosphere," he said. "It wasn't fun and games. People were there with a serious attitude.'

Although the business school doesn't have the liberal reputation that sticks to the college, it favors the same kind of diversity. "The business school has a very broad representation internationally and geographically," Fisher said. "It's harder for a Bostonian to get in than it is for a kid from Detroit."

What hasn't changed is the alumni enthusiasm for the school. Not just vague enthusiasm, either. McCabe just attended a reunion there. Janet Moon visited a month ago. Baumann and Phillips hit some of the 350th celebration. Gentile can't wait to go back.

'We didn't drip tears when we sang the alma mater, but two-thirds of the class came to the reunion," McCabe said. Part of the reunion tradition involves writing an autobiography and, according to McCabe, "probably 90 percent of them actually do it.

Gentile likes to remember the time when the coach made the rowing crew practice in Boston Harbor.

We rowed out through the locks on the Charles," he said. "Guys were muttering, 'what's to stop him from making us row to Europe?' We rowed out past the Constitution to the airport. Jets were flying low over us. It was kind of surreal, out on the freighter swells, looking back at the whole city of Boston spread out. That was memorable.'

Even more memorable than the Harvard-Yale game, which, after all, recurs every year. Around here, that's another way of keeping in touch with the little of Harvard that is rah-rah. Every Saturday before Thanksgiving, there is a closed-circuit television airing of the Big Game at the Country Club of Detroit.

McCabe goes to it sometimes. "Harvard always sits to the left and Yale to the right of the aisle,' he said. "Make sure you get that straight.

Massachusetts Hall, Harvard's oldest remaining building, was built in 1720. It has held student rooms, lecture halls, drama workshops and even Massachusetts troops during the American Revolution. Freshmen still live on the top floor above the president's office.

Julia Darlow

First woman elected president of the State Bar of Michigan will emphasize social issues

By Elsa Frohman

Julia Darlow is a soft-spoken and gentle woman who has earned the respect and confidence of her colleagues in a male-dominated, highly competitive profession. She is the first woman ever to hold office as president of the State Bar of Michigan, the professional organization representing all the attorneys in the state.

A resident and native of Grosse Pointe, she takes her new responsibilities in stride, speaking of herself as more a player on a team, than the captain.

"For a couple of years now, I have been focused on being bar president," Darlow said. "I've

"I've been doing public service academic life too removed. Later, and education. As president, I'll when women's prospects opened have a role in keeping track of everything. I'll be coordinating efforts. There is a little more administration involved.

Darlow's legal specialty is business law. She counsels businesses and non-profit corporations setting up new projects and joint ventures. "I'm in the preventative end of the business," she said. "I work from the planning stages through negotiations and closing."

During her year as president of the bar, she will be cutting back on her regular work. However, she isn't giving up her practice.

"I'll be continuing my practice, but on a less intense basis," she job as an officer."

Becoming president of the bar is the end of a progression that takes several years. Darlow was elected vice president in 1984, and followed by becoming president-elect in 1985. Each office follows as a matter of course in the bar hierarchy.

'The officers are elected from members of the Board of Commissioners," Darlow said. "I've served on that body for 10 years." The Board of Commissioners has 28 members, she explained.
As president, Darlow is the main spokesperson for the bar, however, she will also have administrative been thinking about how to do the said. "I will have to cut back and balance my work."

Darlow has been a practicing at-torney for 15 years. She has been with Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen & Freeman since she graduated from Wayne State University Law School in 1971.

The road to becoming a lawyer was a long one for Darlow. Growing up in Grosse Pointe, she attended Grosse Pointe University School through the 10th grade, before going away to finish high school. She earned an AB degree at Vassar College in 1963 then went on to Columbia University Law School where her studies were interrupted in 1965.

"At first, I was interested in history," she said. "But I found the up, I focused on earning a living and having an independent career."

In 1969, Darlow moved back to Grosse Pointe from New York, and started back to school at Wayne State University to earn her juris doctor degree. She was divorced, with a young daughter to raise. She graduated, cum laude, in 1971. Darlow says she owes much of her success to the feminist movement of the late 60s and early 70s.

"As I started, feminist ideas were coming to the fore," she said. "It was a very exciting time. I couldn't have been more fortunate. I learned from the others and we supported each other, telling each other we could do it. Law is one of the traditionally male dominated professions and when Darlow started out, women often had a difficult time.

'I've never been disillusioned,'' she said. "I never thought it wasn't worth it. There have certainly been walls to climb over. They used to say that a woman couldn't be a lawyer because women are too emotional — she couldn't ever convince a jury. Those ideas sound ridiculous now, but back then, they were real walls. Certainly, people have made discouraging com-ments to me, but nobody who was really important to me.

Darlow acknowledges that even though there is now a woman head of the bar, there are still areas in the legal profession, and all professions, where women still need to make progress.

"There are still challenges ahead," she said. "We have to be sure we are as effective as we should be, and women are still not paid as well as men and promo-tions come slower."

However, Darlow says many of the challenges will have less to do with conditions on the job than with the way the working woman fits into the world at large.

Julia Darlow specializes in business law, however, for the next year, she will be the main spokesperson for the State Bar of Michigan. Darlow is the first woman to hold the office in the history of the organization. Darlow lives in Grosse Pointe with her husband, John O'Meara.

"Some of the real challenges ahead are in terms of parenting, she said. "The main responsibility for children still rests with women. It's important to fulfill the role of a parent. Young women still have to work harder than men. Solid sensible child care is an issue and so is maternity leave.'

As president, Darlow hopes to put emphasis on the social issues that most affect women in the work force and in the home. "I certainly plan to speak of the sensitive to. I plan to speak of the problems of child support and family law. They deserve a lot of attention.' But Darlow doesn't intend to be the bar president for women law-

"I hope to be a good representative for all lawyers," she said. "But there are certain areas that have more of an affect on women, like the rights of the elderly

Among the elderly disadvantaged, more are women. There is also legal aid. A lot of what the bar does relates to women'

Darlow's role is primarily one of a spokesperson, however. It is not her role to dictate the policies of the bar.

"As a spokesperson, I have the opportunity to influence legal matters," Darlow said. "I help form the public perception of lawyers. But I'm part of a team. I'm a

The Winders are Presbyterian laypersons who travel full time in a teaching, healing, evangelistic ministry. Their aim is to restore the healing ministry to the church and to equip clergy and laypeople within their own gregations. During the spring of 1985, Bill and Delores spent four months ministering in the churches of New Zealand.

Delores personally knows what it means to be healed by God. She spent 19 years in constant pain eased only by a tight fitting corset bodycast and by surgery to sever the nerves in her spinal cord. Near death in 1975, she was completely healed at a Kathryn Kuhlman service of the osteoporosis of the spine, and her severed spinal cord was restored. A familiar struggle

A nice lady called me last week to talk about the problems faced by little girls who like to play sports. She was particularly concerned about her little girl.

Among other things, she asked: was I aware of the difficulties girls had in finding places to play baseball? Did I know that after Little League, there was no place period - for girls to play baseball? And how did I feel about the idea that girls who liked to play baseball had to resign themselves to fast-pitch softball?

The nice lady said she'd like to see something written about how few sports opportunities there are for girls. Well, I'm not really sure that the woman is going to like what I write, but here goes.

First of all, I really am aware of the lack of sports opportunities for women when it comes to what have traditionally been thought of as "male" sports. It was a painful realization to me at the age of 9, when I didn't understand why I couldn't play football like my big brother did. Or baseball or hockey for that matter. And it's just as uncomfortable for me today to hear about a girl who really wants to play, but just doesn't have the opportunity.

Sure, if a girl in Grosse Pointe wants to run, swim or play soccer, basketball, tennis, softball or even hockey, there are ample opportunities at nearly every level from first grade through high school. But when it comes to girls who — despite what stereotypes dictate - want to play football or baseball, they might as well be asking to play pro tiddly winks on the moon.

In fact, we were just talking about it the other day here at the News. JoAnne Burcar, the paper's resident baseball nut, was recalling what it was like for a baseballcrazy teenaged girl when she was growing up. She played hardball, and it was not something that a lot of girls her age did. Which sometimes made it tough for her.

"But I played the game for love. I really loved it. You don't see that today," she said.

So, hard as it may be for some folks to believe, girls really like baseball, sometimes as much as boys. And while girls have access to T-ball and Little League just like the boys, their participation tends to drop off at the Babe Ruth and high school level. That's drop off as in "practically nonexistent."

Want to know why?

It's mostly because the girls themselves opt not to play hardball any longer. Girls are permitted to play Babe Ruth baseball and even high school ball, but at last check, they just don't. At least not in Grosse Pointe.

"There haven't been any girls playing Babe Ruth in the Farms-City," says league official John Hoben. "It seems that when they get up around 11, 12 or 13, girls are a lot more interested in playing soccer or softball. But they are certainly welcome to play if they desire.'

So why don't they?

Well, it could be a number of reasons. One might be fear. At the Babe Ruth and high school levels, the boys involved are bigger and players are permitted to wear metal spikes. And some girls might not be ready to face what might be for some an intimidating prospect. Another reason might be purely social. When they reach their teens, many girls find that their friends are playing soccer and softball, so naturally, they join the teams their friends are on ... and that usually isn't baseball.

In high school, there are very few spots open on teams - say around 40, counting the varsity squads at North and South. And the female talent just isn't there at the ages of 16 and 17, coaches tell me. That isn't just an opinion, they assure me, but a fact.

So what's a girl to do?

Well, from my standpoint, I think that if a girl really, really wants to play baseball in Grosse Pointe, she can. I know something about going against the grain and taking the heat for it (there aren't too many female sportswriters around, you know), and I know that it wouldn't be easy for a girl to be the only female on a Babe Ruth baseball team. Or to work at playing baseball and honing skills to somehow grab a spot on a high school ball team despite the fact that historically, chances are she many not ever achieve that goal. Neighborhood Club director John Bruce, a staunch advocate of girls' sports, agrees that it might be tough.

"I've seen some pretty talented female athletes . . . but I don't think I've ever seen a girl with the physical strength and skills to play high school hardball.

But when you want something badly enough, you go for it. And if that nice lady's daughter wants to play baseball more than anything else, I'm betting that she'll do just

And blast the stereotypes, anyway.

Boating brothers win world title

By Peggy O'Connor

It wasn't an Olympic gold medal, but it'll do. Boy, will it do.

University Liggett School graduate Bruce Burton and his brother, South High alum Glenn Burton, didn't fare too well in their quest for a sailing medal in the 1984 Olympics. But one other dream came true for the Lake St. Clair sailing veterans - and crew member Chris Lucander - last week when they won the Etchells 22 world championship in Toronto, beating 35 boats from six coun-

"I'm four feet off the ground and rising," said an elated Bruce Burton. "We're really excited. Any time you get to be the world champion in something, you get excited," his brother Glenn

Unlike the Olympic trials, when the Burtons sailed under heavy air conditions they really weren't used to, the Lake St. Clair-like weather at the world championships was exactly to their liking. In fact, they built up such a lead on the second place boat from Marblehead, Mass., that they didn't even have to sail the last race.

"Bruce and I think that the winds we had (8 to 15 knots) are our optimum condition. With a wind like that, it seemed like we couldn't do anything wrong,' said Glenn, a mortgage banker at Capitol Mortgage.

After their shot at the Olympics, the Burton brothers separated for a time. Bruce Burton took to larger boats — he sailed on John Stevens' IOR Sprint and Glenn stuck to racing Etchells. But the pair drifted back together when they bought a used Etchells 22 they christened "Firing Line" and entered in the Etchells 22 circuit this spring. Glenn had won the Detroit River Yachting Association championship in 1985 on the boat and the Burtons — with some advice from their father — decided to stick with what they knew.

"We felt it was best to go with Etchelis ... plus, it really has the best fleet sailing program around. So we did it,"

THEY WERE delighted to find that

Firing Line was rated in the top three of the fleet, performance and size-wise, and even more delighted when they started winning everything in sight with her, including the DRYA title, the Grosse Pointe Invitational, the Great Lakes Championship and the Founders'

Cup.
So it seemed a cinch that the Burtons would cruise to the world Etchells 22 ti-

"We knew we were fast and we just thought it would be a question of whether we would have everything going for us," said Bruce Burton. "I've never been in a regatta in my life where people picked us to win the way people were picking us to take the worlds."

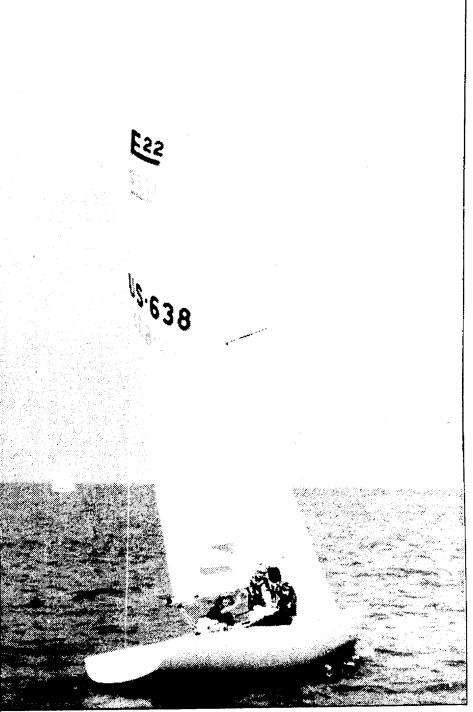

So the Burtons and Lucander sat down the night before the first race and discussed the situation. "We told ourselves that we shouldn't let it go to our heads, that we had to concentrate on what we were doing instead of on what people were saying. We knew we just had to go out and do our best," he added.

And that's because world-class sailing has its share of mind-games. Like the one played on the Burtons after they won the first race in the world championships. "The guy who was third came up to me after the race and mentioned that nobody ever won the worlds after winning the first race. I just said 'well, we'll just have to change that,' "Burton said. "Besides, I looked at the trophy and found out he was wrong. I wasn't falling for his psych-job."

But a lot of other crews were. After Firing Line had a couple of wins under her belt, Bruce Burton said he went out one morning with his tool box and started a little harmless tinkering with the mast. Soon, lots of other skippers were out tinkering with their masts. And earlier, the Burtons were the only ones who washed the bottom of their boat . . . until they'd won a race and then everybody got out and started swabbing.

That's the kind of thing the Burtons are used to seeing at the international level of competition. And it's what they might see again if they consider competing in the 1988 Olympic trials.

"Lately, I've been thinking about it. But we haven't bought a boat or even

Winter boat storage

October weekends are iffy. Sunny, 60-and-70-degree weather is possible and gloomy, bone-chilling weather, ice, and snow are probable. Some boaters prepare their boats for storage soon after

Labor Day. Others — gambling types — count on a few pleasant weekends. More than a few local skippers recall fall cruises when the spray froze on the windshield and had to be chipped off, while underway, by a first mate. Boats have windshield wipers

Three options are available for winter boat storage in this area. You can take your boat to a warmer climate. You can haul your boat out of the water for dry storage on a cradle, on blocks, or on a trailer. Or you can try in-the-water storage, called

The last five years has seen an increase in the number of bubbled boats because of improved bubbling techniques and more reliable safeguards against equipment failure. Bubbled boats remain in the water all winter, usually huddled together in a designated portion of a harbor. Powerful electric pumps circulate warm water from the bottom of the harbor toward the surface. The constantly moving, bubbling water prevents ice

Bubbling is attractive because it provides proper support for the hull of a boat. Boats are designed to be in water. A cushion of water provides uniform support, whereas even the best custom-designed boat cradle only supports a few points of the hull. High and dry hulls are subject to stresses that may cause

Bubbled sailboats can leave mast and rigging in place, eliminating the possibility of damage during the process of removing and replacing the mast. Bubbling also allows boat owners to take advantage of good autumn weekends and early spring thaws. If your boat is afloat, it's ready to cruise whenever

A spot check of six marinas in St. Clair Shores, Mount Clemens and Detroit, found all six offering choices of dry storage (covered and uncovered) or bubbling (covered and uncovered).

Boat owners who decide to bubble this winter for the first time should be sure to check their insurance policies. Most cover dry storage, but some companies require a special endorsement for

Preparing a boat for winter involves five basic operations: Winterizing: Engine winterization is best done by a professional, unless you are very familiar with marine engines. Batteries should be removed and stored inside on a trickle

Draining water systems: All water must be replaced with antifreeze. This includes the engine's cooling system, water tanks, shower sumps, holding tanks and air conditioners. Boaters use a red-tinted non-toxic antifreeze commonly known as 'red pop,' in their drinking water tanks. Pour some antifreeze in the Bottom cleaning: Clean the boat's bottom thoroughly to get rid of the season's accumulation of marine growth and algae. Most boat bottoms don't need to be painted with antifouling paint every year, but if it's necessary, this chore is best done in the

Ventilation and protection: Many skippers wax their boat's chrome and leave the wax in place all winter to prevent pitting and corroding. Large cushions and mattresses should be propped up for maximum air circulation and covered loosely with a nonplastic cloth. Open all hatches, drawers, doors and refrigerators to discourage the growth of mold and mildew. Many boaters leave small light bults burning constantly in the bilge and in the boat's interior. The bulbs provide just enough warmth and light

The entire boat should be covered with canvas, securely fastened against the forces of wind, rain and snow. Be sure the

Remove equipment: Remove all gear that is portable. Electronic instruments such as radios, compasses, radar and Loran should be taken home for drier, warmer, safer storage. Unbeaten weekend for Pointe's Red Barons

The Red Barons' football teams emerged from their weekend games with the Mount Clemens Barracudas unscathed — taking a pair of victories and one tie.

The freshmen played to a hardfought 13-13 tie. Led by quarterbacks Paul Gentile and Andy Suchowski and the running of Derek Ottawaere, Brian Law and Tim Miller, the Barons moved the ball well. Ottawaere scored on a 6-yard run and picked up the extra point to give the Barons a 7-0 lead. The defense dominated in the second half, led by David Tipple, Robert Berger, Tim Morgan and Greg Hogan.

But the Barracudas scored on a long run and after the missed extra point attempt, trailed 7-6 at the half. In the third quarter, the Red Barons scored on key runs by Ot-tawaere and Rouls. The point after attempt failed and the Barons held at 13-6. The Barracudas scored again on a long run, added the extra point and the game ended in a

The Barons showed a nice passing attack, keyed by Jay Harrington's crucial catches. Also playing well were Carl Bommarito, Dan Strobl, Corey Greer and Andy McCroskey.

The Red Barons' JV team used fine play by both the offense and defense to take a 26-12 victory over Mount Clemens. Tom Kolojeski blocked a punt deep in the Barracudas' territory and after Drew Woodruff scored for the Red Barons, the point after attempt was no good, leaving the score 6-0. In the second quarter, the Barons drove 40 yards behind the ruff and finished the drive when Scott Spada hit Brian Blake with a 25-yard TD pass. Spada added the extra point to give the Barons a 14-0 lead. As the first half wound down, the Barracudas broke off a long scoring run to cut the margin

The second half was controlled by a swarming defense, led by Alex Brinker, Jason Jaworski, Len Cugliari, Tony DiLaura, David Applegate and Eric Coddens. The fine defense gave the offense excellent field positions, which resulted in two more scores. The first was a 15-yard run by Haskell and the second, a 5-yard scamper by Woodruff. The Barracudas added one final score as time ran out.

The varsity team pulled out a 7-0 win over the Mount Clemens senior

Norsemen thunder past Brablec, 42-0, in Silverdome

By Josh Abbott North High

There was thunder outside the Pontiac Silverdome last Friday night and just as much thunder inside as the streaking North High varsity football team destroyed Roseville Brablec, 42-0, to close out the annual Bi-County Day at the Silverdome.

The Norsemen scored early and often in the victory, beginning when they took the ball on Brablec's 30 after a good punt return by North junior Chuck Thomas. Senior Bob Belser put North ahead with a 42-yard field goal after the opening drive stalled. In the next possession, however, senior fullback Mike Miller capped a 39-yard drive with a 12-yard TD run. After a failed extra point attempt, North led, 9-0.

In North's next possession, junior quarterback Bruno Giglio went deep to Thomas for a 73-yard scoring play and that made it 16-0. Giglio came right back to hit senior tight end Rob Olds with a 41-yard touchdown pass, then connected with Thomas again for a 4-yard scoring toss and North went to the locker room with a 30-0 advantage.

Early in the second half - with the Silverdome lights flickering and torrential rains pouring into a stadium runway from the storm outside — Bill Smith scored to give North a 36-0 lead. Senior quarterback Jamie Wheatley capped the scoring with a 1-yard dive into the end zone.

Miller led North's offense with 121 yards in 12 carries; Smith added 51 yards in five rushes. Giglio enjoyed another fine game, completing 7 of 13 passes for 211 yards. Thomas caught three of those passes for 111 yards and two touchdowns.

Coach Frank Sumbera called the victory "our strongest team effort so far this year." He added, "we also complimented the defense, especially the play of senior Dave Kopitzke and juniors Karl Schultz and Jay Tobias.

North is now 4-0 this season and has won 20 consecutive regular season games. The Norsemen travel to Lake Shore this Saturday, Oct. 4, at 1 p.m.

North's JV football team raised its mark to 4-0 by topping Roseville Brablec, 12-7. Sophomore Derek Lawson blocked a Brablec punt and returned it 28 yards for the goahead touchdown.

Kickers 9-1-1

North's varsity soccer team had a nice week, winning three games and running its record to 9-1-1. The week began on a positive note when the Norsemen downed league nemesis Warren Fitzgerald, 5-2. Dan Regelbrugge had two goals and two assists; Dan Spitz added a goal and one assist. Chris Colfer and freshman John Cartwright had one goal each.

Two days later on Sept. 25, North came out looking like a team that wants to go places, snuffing out Mount Clemens, 7-1. Regelbrugge and Spitz each scored a pair and John Secco, Glen Nadeau and Cartwright added the other goals. The kickers finished the week by topping Roseville Brablec on Saturday, 5-2. Cartwright had three goals and Spitz added two. The JV team also defeated Mount Clemens, 5-0, last week.

The next day the cagers edged LCN, 54-44, pulling away from a 21-21 tie at halftime with a 17-10 spurt in the third quarter as North's superior conditioning and speed wore LCN down. North was led by Wheatley with 17 points and four assists. Leslie Talos added 14 points and five assists and Barbie Loeher dished out eight assists with her pinpoint passing.

Kickoff return beats Devils

South won the battle against Port Huron Northern, but the Blue Devils lost the war, 7-0, in Friday's Eastern Michigan League football South's varsity outrushed PHN, 129-117 yards, but had one touchdown called back and another drive stalled at the Northern 2. PHN scored the game's only touchdown on an 87-yard kickoff return to open the second half.

The game was a defensive bat-tle all the way, with South and PHN netting just 19 and 21 yards passing, respectively. "The defense played very well, we stopped them many times. Both defenses had good games, really," said Blue Devil assistant coach Al Moebus.

South coaches also praised the punting of Mike Paull, who had a six-punt average of 40 yards. "It really kept us in the game,' Moebus said.

This Saturday, Oct. 4, is Homecoming Day, as the Blue Devils host L'Anse Creuse North. Game time is 1 p.m.

Running well against Port Huron were seniors Sue Sparling and Linda Gaglio, along the juniors Jenn Christians, Stephanie Morreale, Megen Smucker, Elizabeth Lazarowitz, Jenny McSorley and Amy Gentile.

At Fennville, South finished a close second to East Kentwood in a 15-team field. The Blue Devils had five medal-winners in the top 20, including sophomores Tedesco and Groustra and juniors Song, Berger and Wasinger. South's top seven also included junior Reba Uthappa and sophomore Brasseur. Also running well were Raquel Chapin, Monica McDermet, Debbie Solterisch, Beth Hoye, Elizabeth Johnson and Tara Lulis.

South's No. 1-ranked girls' varsity tennis team faced No. 6-rated Marian High on a cloudy, damp afternoon last week, and for the Blue Devils, the outcome was just as sunless as the day. Marian surprised the defending Class A champs, 4-3.

Mary Wachter lost at No. 1 singles, 1-6, 4-6; Cathy Wachter beat her No. 2 singles opponent, 6-0, 6-1; Kathy Turner and Sarah Mayer were victorious at No. 4 and 4 singles, 6-3, 6-0, and 6-0, 6-1, respectively. All three doubles flights fell to Marian. "Our doubles were off — like the weather," said coach Stephanie Prychitko.

Earlier in the week, South beat top-ranked Lahser. Mayer was the only winning singles player, 6-4, 6-2. The doubles teams of Anne Nicholson and Kathy Rajt (No. 1), Meg Petersen and Ellen Mayer (No. 2) and Michelle Nault and Lisa Disser (No. 3) bounced back to take their flights.

Three games against Detroit Country Day School (DCDS), Lutheran North and Plymouth Christian left the Knights with two losses and one victory.

On Sept. 23, the Knights traveled to DCDS for their ninth away game this season. Rains had left the field flooded, necessitating sloppy kick-and-run tactics. Soccer balls skidded over strikers' feet and past defenders' bodies, giving both teams ample opportunities to capitalize on mistakes. DCDS's aggressive style paid off as they outscored the Knights 5-2. ULS goals were scored by Doug Wood and Blasko Ristic. Lutheran North was the home team on Thursday, Sept. 25, but the Knights did not have foul weather to blame in this 4-1 loss. The University Liggett School North a battle. Dominating the play, the Knights finally scored in the end of the second half off a header by Mike Fozo.

On Friday, Sept. 26, coach David Backhurst's Knights had a long awaited home game against Plymouth Christian. At the first whistle, the Knights charged up the field, enroute to a 6-0 win. Bob Williams led the scoring with three goals; Michael Trapp, Anthony Abiragi and Alex Tringali added one each.

Coach Jeff Healy's University Liggett School junior varsity soccer team won two, tied one and lost one last week.

The two victories were decisive shutouts, 5-0 over Inter-City Baptist and 2-0 against Detroit Country Day School. The tie was a 2-2 standoff with Grosse Pointe South's freshmen team. ULS lost 3-1 to Lutheran North.

'Crocodile Dundee': Refreshing, enjoyable, great fun

By Michael Chapp

It's simple!

No, the above is not a bemused redundancy. It's a fact. The reason "Crocodile Dundee" is such a great movie is because it stays simple. Not simple-minded or simplistic; just simple.

Lest one sound too much like a simpleton at this point however, it is important to simplify the meaning of simple: "Crocodile Dundee" is a film about a rough-and-ready Australian adventurer who, after being interviewed by a pretty New York reporter on his own turf, accompanies her back to the United States. While in the Big Apple, he bites off more than he can chew in terms of culture shock and romantic interest in the reporter. That's it. That's all the movie is about. Nothing more. Nothing less.

See. It's simple! And the fact that it stays that way is precisely what is so refreshing and downright enjoyable about this movie. Where lesser pictures would veer off into gunplay and car chases, "Dundee" keeps on track. The theme is a familiar one - the transplanted foreigner trying to make his way through the difference between the jungles of vegetation in the Australian bush and the jungles of concrete in New York, And focusing on those differences is enough to make any movie a winner. "Dundee" keeps its focus, and in doing so, it wins.

As a reporter for Newsday, Sue Charlton (Linda Kozlowski) is always on the lookout for an interesting story. Michael J. "Crocodile" Dundee (Paul Hogan) has or rather is — an interesting story. After having his leg almost ripped off by a crocodile, Dundee managed to crawl back to civilization, where he nursed himself back to health and opened a safari business. Along with his partner Wally (John Meillon), Dundee takes people back to the scene of all the excitement, where he collects numerous ooh's and oh my's, not maze and blues of being in a new environment. There's a world of one of his safaris, hoping to get a must be the friendliest place on earth." His naivete is blatant from great story. She does indeed.

Along the way, the two of them become romantically involved. For a guy who doesn't know where he stands on the nuclear arms issue - "It's none of my business" - and doesn't even know his age, Dundee is still fascinating. After all, how many people can put wild boars to sleep just by staring at them and tell time to the minute just by looking at the sun? Sue doesn't know of any others, not even in New York, so she invites Crocodile to come back with her for awhile.

Ever the suave leader in the jungle, Dundee is completely aghast upon reaching the city. "Imagine seven million people wanting to live together," he says as he's chauffered through a Manhattan traffic jam. "New York the beginning, and indeed, that is only the beginning. In Australia, Dundee was able to grab, mangle and break a poisonous snake in two without missing a beat in the conversation. In New York, he has trouble figuring out why there's two "toilets" in his hotel bathroom. In Australia, Crocodile could single-handedly kill one of the animals after which he's named. In New York, he faces an altogether new breed of animal - the

The lifestyle differences make for the film's best sequences, as do the scenes in which Dundee unwittingly demonstrates to the audience his oh-so-human foibles and his sometimes conniving way of doing business.

The love story at the film's heart is interesting, but nothing out of the ordinary. Indeed, if there's any weakness to this movie, it's the way things are wrapped up into a neat little concluding package for the delight of all the romantics in the audience.

But that's no big problem. Everything else in the picture is too much fun and too quickly paced to let such a minor setback stand in the way. Hogan is sublimely brilliant in his reading of the title character, and Kozlowski. a newcomer, is fresh and inviting a rookie as audiences have seen in quite a while. Together, their chemistry is undeniable. It's a good bet there will be a sequel to this movie, providing audiences hand over enough green stuff at the box office.

Dundee, in his innocence, would ask what "green stuff" is. He's simple-minded. The movie is not. It's simple!

All possible in 'The Boy Who Could Fly'

By Marion Trainor

"The Boy Who Could Fly" is a quiet, gentle film about two teenagers who have been scarred emotionally by the trauma of personal tragedy. One of them is Eric (Jay Underwood), who parents were killed in a plane crash when he was five years old. The other is Milly (Lucy Deakins), whose father committed suicide.

Each of them accommodates to loss in his and her own way. With Milly, the suicide didn't happen. She convinces herself that her father died of cancer. Eric's reaction is more devastating. He becomes autistic. He has not spoken a word since the accident.

He is also obsessed with the belief that he will, if he tries hard enough, be able to fly. This belief in the power of will adds another dimension to the film, the one that anyone who wants something bad at the insistence of a teacher (Col-enough to work at it will succeed. Eric is no Peter Pan flying off to Never-Never Land or a Mary Poppins dropping from the air with her umbrella into the nursery. Eric and Milly become neighbors after Milly and her widowed mother (Bonny Bedelia) and her young feisty brother, Louis (Fred Savage) move in next door.

Milly, a sensitive young girl, is drawn to the lonely boy who lives with his alcoholic uncle (Fred Gwynne) and who spends a lot of time standing on window ledges and rooftops practicing a technique that he is sure will enable him to fly.

He has been institutionalized but leen Dewhurst), he is returned to his uncle.

Milly works with Eric trying to get him to communicate and gradually a bond forms between them. He trusts her as a friend and she comes to believe in Eric's special gift to the point that she credits him for saving her life when she falls from a bridge.

Eric's future seems doomed by the prospect of living out his life in an institution, until the unthinkable happens. It is a contrived ending and yet a joyous one.

Although the film is flawed by its failure to skillfully merge a straight forward drama with fantasy, it has a strong appeal because of Lucy Deakins. She handles a difficult role where she must depend on gestures and eye contact to communicate, with poise and a professionalism far beyond her years.

Underwood also has a difficult part to play. His role of Eric could easily have fallen into a characterization of a rather foolish, helpless boy. But he manages to convey intelligence and strength and manliness to the point where we really believe that what he wants to achieve will happen.

Although the film centers on Deakins and Underwood, it has a strong supporting cast in Bonnie Bedelia and Colleen Dewhurst.

"The Boy Who Could Fly" is not the best film made, but it has its merits. It presents a telling account of how families who are close can survive tragedy and how bereft a child can be who has no family. It has a lot to say about the isolated world of the autistic without being maudlin or technical. There are no offensive words spoken or any scenes that include violence. It is rather an old fashioned film that depends on story and the belief that all things are possible.

Admission to the film and the lecture are free of charge. For schedule and ticket information, call the box office at 577-2972.

"GET READY ROOM" — BAKER CONCEPT'S new philosophy of self care. The basic principle lies in the idea that once entered into the "GET READY ROOM" one leaves completely prepared for the next task. For example: Going to work.

The entrance for the "GET READY ROOM" should be off the bedroom. Once entered, the individual can completely take care of the body, hygienically as well as physically, without ever leaving the room.

Besides personal needs including exercise, showering or bathing, similar necessities such as make-up can be attended to. During this preparation time one can be entertained by music or the morning news which occupies the mind, as well as shapes the tone or mood for the day to come.

A phone call can be accepted or placed within this room.

In its spacious and organized dressing area, one can carefully select clothing and accessories, doublecheck their appearance in a specially designed 3-way mirror, and leave ready for the day, knowing the traffic situation or having heard a favorite song.

An additional benefit this room provides is the fact that at no time one has to leave the room to find or get supplies, clothes, or anything in order to get ready.

The privacy and relaxed atmosphere of this room, as well as its practical layout, sets the mood of things to come.

For new or remodeled interiors, textured walls add warmth, flair

The big news recently in home remodeling projects is the use of vinyl wall-coverings for a dull, flat wall surface.

Knowledgeable homeowners realize that the walls are the largest area of interiors (four times that of the floor). Hence, the new interest is in adding more durable and more interesting patterns and textures than ordinary paint or wallpaper could provide.

The popularity of vinyl coverings has grown because they not only "dress" a wall, but they also hide a multitude of sins — cracked plaster (or wallboard seams) — much more sensibly than paint.

They are now also available in beautiful colors and designs, as well as beautiful textures, to add a three-dimensional. sculptured effect.

Now there are embossed stripes, deepetched linears, frets and bamboo effects which change with all variations in light, either natural or electric.

There are not only papers in lush florals or plaids on vinyl, but linens and even luxurious silks, which are treated with Scotchgard stain repeller for soil resistance.

Just a few years ago, designers and architects specified them for hotels/motels, hospitals and offices, because of their aesthetic appeal, but now are using them in residential spaces, especially in contemporary decors.

Here, Las Vegas designer Anthony W.

Grant, ASID, designed a master bedroom utilizing Vicrtex Wallcoverings.

Simplicity and comfort were the criteria. The beige string-texture wallcovering provides a sophisticated softness and subdues the sharp lines of the bed and furnishings.

Grant blends rug, fabrics and pillows, all in neutral tones, and even covers the vertical blinds in the string texture Vicrtex, creating a continuous and tranquil visual effect.

The largest manufacturer of vinyl wallcoverings, Vicrtex offers over 100 designs and 1,800 colorways. Vicrtex is a division of L.E. Carpenter & Co. in Wharton, NJ.

Laminate creates the newest glamour looks for kitchens

Decorative laminate has come a long way since the days when it brought gold-flecked counters to every diner in the land. Today, it is still known for its durability and wipe-clean efficiency, but of late it has also become a trend-setting fashion product and the up-front favorite of talented kitchen designers everywhere.

The options available in today's laminate include pinstripes, geometrics, stone and metal look-alikes, free-form florals, and every color under the sun but, according to the Laminate Council of America, the way this material is now used in the kitchen has changed just as dramatically as its looks.

Of course, it still goes on countertops, but never before with such aplomb. Then you have laminate-covered cabinetry, which was first made popular by the Eurostyle influence and, lately, many designers, conscious of the working woman's need for carefree kitchens, are specifying laminate for walls, window frames, doors, rangehoods, tables, desks, shelves and any other imaginable surface.

Much of the laminate industry's news zeroes in on the countertop. This is where the new color-through laminates make beautiful sense. Since the color goes all the way to the core, nicks and scratches show less than in traditional laminate, and these products' make-up makes it possible to create multi-striped, routed and beveled edges for great fashion punch.

Color-through laminate is now being produced by four manufacturers. Consoweld has just introduced its version, which it has dubbed BeautyCor. Formica's brand is ColorCore, while Pioneer Plastics manufactures MelCor, and Solicor is Wilsonart's entry into this market.

Another colorful addition to adventurous countertops is Formica's Color-Tiers, multi-colored strips, which are ready to apply for edging.

Fashion is also at the heart of Wilsonari's new ColorVantage system of coordinating laminate colors and designs from cabinets to backsplashes to countertops, while Nevamar Corporation boasts a technological improvement, known as the Arp surface. It is said to provide extra wear protection for counters.

Sleek cabinetry

The best-looking cabinets in today's kitchen showrooms are inevitably laminate covered. Featuring frameless construction and hidden hinges, these cabinets look sleek and light and, covered in white or almond laminate, today's most popular choices, they are terrific kitchen brighteners.

Other colors are coming in, however, notes the Laminate Council. Gray is the new "neutral," and a great future is predicted for clear blues and yellows. Designers also see a return to the pinks and mauves previously associated with other rooms in the house, and they look sensational in the company of black or gray appliances.

Up till now, America has considered these cabinets a contemporary style, but change is in the air. In Europe where the style originated, manufacturers are offering more traditional looks as well, and U.S. designers have been quick to follow suit.

While they stick to the frameless construction, they bring in more than a hint of traditionalism and even the country look via warmer and richer laminate colors on the cabinets. Wine reds, deep greens and Williamsburg blues are among the colors that strike a traditional note.

Wood-look laminate, so real-looking these days, that one might fear a splinter, also beckons a more traditional or provincial look for cabinetry. Good examples are Westinghouse Micarta's Oregon Burl, super for a formal look, and a well-rounded group of golden oaks and honeyed beeches for country styles.

Topping the counters of Eurostyled cabinets with marble, granite or slate-look laminate is still another way to get away from the ultra-contemporary scheme.

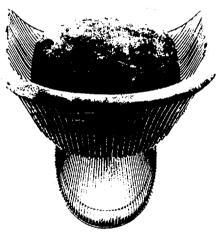

And to add texture contrast to superslick surfaces, consider one of today's many tambour designs. These flexible, deeply dimensional laminate products bend naturally, so they are excellent for curved and concave walls and islands, table pedestals, and columns.

To see today's fashion laminate in action, visit the showrooms of good kitchen designers and retailers.

And don't be discouraged if they only seem to show white or off-white cabinetry. Most cabinet manufacturers offer a full range of laminate colors and designs, so you can order anything at all.

Laminate distributors and interior designers can recommend shops that will create that very special kitchen you have in mind.

Vinyl windows: The clear choice of more and more Americans

Vinyl-framed windows with insulated glass are clearly ahead in the race to become America's fastest growing window.

According to executives with Vinyline windows, a leading producer of rigid vinyl windows and patio doors, vinyl windows represent some 17 percent of the window market and are growing about 15-20 percent each year.

Aluminum and wood windows, the company notes, continue to lose signifi-cant market share to vinyl.

Key product features

Producers of vinyl windows and doors stress the products' low maintenance, high energy-efficiency, and long-lasting strength and durability as key product features. They resist corrosion, peeling and blistering, and do not have to be painted.

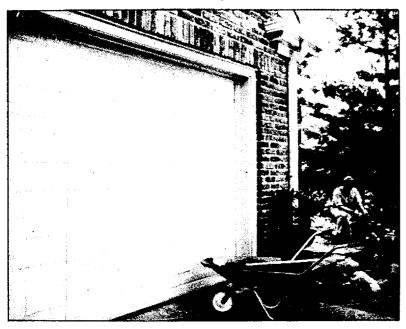

Increasing design choice

Continuous product developments by such leaders as Vinyline have provided homeowners with far greater design choice than was available a few years

Styles include single and double-hungs, casements, sliders, picture windows. bays and bows, and even round-top and other custom configuration windows. Various frame colors also are available.

For a free informative brochure titled. "What Homeowners Should Know About Windows," write to Vinyline, One Raritan Rd., Dept. M, Oakland, NJ 07436.

Homeowners should stop ignoring garage door

COMBINING THE STYLE of a traditional raised wood panel door and the longlasting performance of steel, Kinnear's Executive residential garage door provides security and beauty for many years.

Although the garage door is the largest piece of operational equipment in the home, most homeowners don't realize its importance. Most even ignore the garage door until it stops working, when, in fact, the properly-selected garage door can add a great deal of security to a home.

The homeowner can choose from two basic types of garage doors: Steel or wood. A major difference between steel and wood residential doors is the amount of maintenance required to keep the door looking like new, says Dirk Leachman, product manager with Kinnear, a leading manufacturer of overhead rolling doors for residential and commercial applications.

Leachman says steel doors prepainted with baked-on enamel require little or no maintenance. Because of the baked-on finish, a steel door will retain its appearance for many years, requiring only minor touch-ups to cover any scratches acquired over the years.

However, steel doors can also be painted. Leachman says most will receive a heavy-bodied exterior paint very well, and adds that it is an excellent way to complement any exterior home design.

With or without paint, steel doors will resist the elements. Made from galvanized steel, rain, sleet and snow will not tarnish these residential doors.

Wood doors, on the other hand, can weather, and eventually crack and sag unless given proper care. Prior to exposure, Leachman suggests the homeowner apply at least two coats of oil-based paint, stain or other exterior finish to all surfaces of the door. Every year thereafter, the homeowner should apply a single coat to the exterior of the door to preserve the wood.

In following these guidelines, a wood door will retain its "like-new" appearance for many years. In fact, wood doors often retain their new appearance longer than steel doors because they are more flexible.

The flexibility of wood gives a wood door more impact resistance than a solid steel door. For example, a wood door is not likely to bend, and most definitely will not dent if hit with a hard object. A steel door will probably dent, and may even bend under similar circumstances.

All steel and wood flush doors can be insulated; wood panel doors cannot. This does not mean that steel and wood flush doors are better at keeping out cold in the winter and heat in the summer.

Leachman says insulation alone will not keep out cold or heat. For this, weather stripping is necessary along the bottom, and around the sides and top of the door.

Insulation does make for quieter operation of the door, and will add some strength. Homeowners should remember that insulating the garage door is not the way to insulate the entire garage.

Before actually buying a garage door, whether it is wood or steel, Leachman says the homeowner must supply the dealer with the size of the opening in the garage, as well as the head room and side room in the opening.

According to Leachman, the size of the opening is always measured as width by height. The headroom measures the distance from the top of the opening upward to the nearest obstruction.

Similarly, the side room measures the distance from the side of the opening to the nearest obstruction on the wall.

It is essential that the measurements be accurate in order to mount the hardware properly. Leachman suggests the homeowner ask the dealer to measure the opening, and says quite often dealers offer free estimates to the consumer.

No matter how expensive a garage door. Leachman strongly recommends the homeowner have it installed and serviced by an authorized dealer. However, instructions are available with most residential garage doors that explain how the do-it-yourselfer can install the door.

If the homeowner chooses to install the door, Leachman says extreme caution should be exercised. Be sure to have the appropriate tools needed for the job before beginning and follow the manufacturer's safety precautions carefully.

It's obvious that the garage door is no longer a part of the home to be ignored. When purchasing a garage door, the homeowner now has several factors to consider: Maintenance, style, flexibility, insulation and cost.

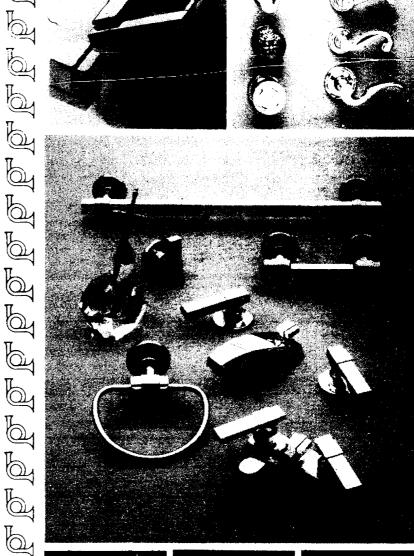

Each of these should be considered in conjunction with the style of home the door is intended for, as well as the amount of use and abuse the door will receive.

There is nothing so alive and pleasing as a spring garden of magnificent Dutch bulb flowers: Crocuses, muscaris, hyacinths, daffodils and tulips, to name a few. Many of them are perennials, which means they multiply and bloom year after year, mak ing them a sound economical investment.

When to plant

All spring flowering bulbs must be planted in the fall. Ideally, they should be put into the ground when the soil temperature falls below 60°F. In northern climates, that generally occurs from late September to early November Bulbs can be planted through December in the Sun Belt states.

With a little advance planning, you can select bulbs that will flower in sequence from late winter through May (see chart).

Where to plant

Generally speaking, bulb flowers prefer partial shade. Avoid planting them in areas which receive direct midday sun. Some people like formal plantings in symmetrical beds, others prefer casual plantings in clusters.

Once the bulbs are in position, cover them with half the dug out soil and water the area thoroughly. Add the remaining upturned soil until it is even with ground level and water the area again.

A remodeled attic uses eaves for a "de-lightful" environment

THIS ATTIC ROOM takes advantage of the light control, privacy and quiet beauty offered by three different Hunter Douglas window fashions to become a handsome, welcoming extra bedroom.

Attics are natural places to look when remodeling, but unfortunately adding nat-ural light is often problematic. Not so in this bedroom where the natural eaves of the attic space were used to de"lightful"

A welcoming atmosphere

Skylights and window were carved from the space to eliminate any resemblance to a dusty, dark cavern. Light con-trol, privacy and design interest are in-herent in the three distinctively sculpted light spaces, and these are enhanced by the use of three distinct window fashions by Hunter Douglas.

The long, narrow window at the left of the bed features a custom micro blind, while the interesting angled window has soft translucent fabric vertical blinds. The skylight blind is "Duette," the unique dual-pleat soft fabric shade available in a wide variety of decorator colors.

Duette can be ordered in custom sizes in widths up to 174" and lengths of up to 192" with no seams, tapes, visible pull cords or holes to mar its clean, uncluttered styling.

A treatment for every window

Each window treatment answers the special need of the window in which it is installed, and, combined, they create a sleek, coordinated, visually appealing. thoroughly functional and welcoming extra bedroom.

Now you have a worry-free vacation

Have you ever awakened in the middle of the night while on vacation and wondered whether you remembered to close all the windows at home? Or have you come home from a week of total relaxation only to find your freezer on the fritz and all its contents spoiled?

If you live in the Grosse Pointe area, there is a way to insure a more worry-free vacation. You have a service available to help guard against (or clean up) any mishaps that occur while you're away.

The bonded employees of Castle Caretakers can certainly add the element of peace of mind while you are away from home. And most importantly, they are willing to meet the needs of each individual homeowner.

While not intended to be a security service, our staff will take care of turning on the lights, mailing and picking up papers, putting out the trash and water your plants. Visits to your home will be done as often as preferred by the client.

TIPS FOR PLUGGING CRACKS BETWEEN TUB, WALL

Fill cracks between tub and wall as soon as they appear, or water will seep through the wall and possibly through the ceiling below.

First, clean out old caulk, making certain that all loose particles are removed. Then, using a tube of waterproof, flexible caulk such as Elmer's Silicone Rubber Tub Caulk, squeeze out caulking, pushing it ahead of tip slowly for a continuous bead, and filling the crack completely.

HOW TO MAKE BUBBLES DISAPPEAR FROM WALLCOVERING

Bubbles in wallcoverings aren't diffi-cult to fix. The Wallcovering Information Bureau says it's best to cut an X in the bubble with a razor and carefully lift the cut edges out one at a time.

Apply paste to the surface of the wall and the back of the wallcovering. Press the edge back against the wall and use a seam roller to flatten it into place. Remove any excess paste with a damp sponge.

Oriental rugs gain in popularity

Nearly a decade ago, only a few well-known designs in Oriental rugs existed. Today, we have an infinite number of designs and colors woven in China, India Pakistan, Iran, Turkey, Afganistan, Romania and Egypt. In the last five years the popularity of the Indian Dhur-ries and Kelims has reached an all time high.

No work of art is more durable or more practical, and yet so easy to care for as a hand-knotted Oriental rug. Hand-woven on a loom, an Oriental rug is the focal point of any room or office.

The pile on almost all Oriental rugs is wool. Some silk and cotton rugs can be found, but wool is the most common. Its quality depends on fineness of the wool, height of pile, clarity of design, tightness of weave and harmony of colors.

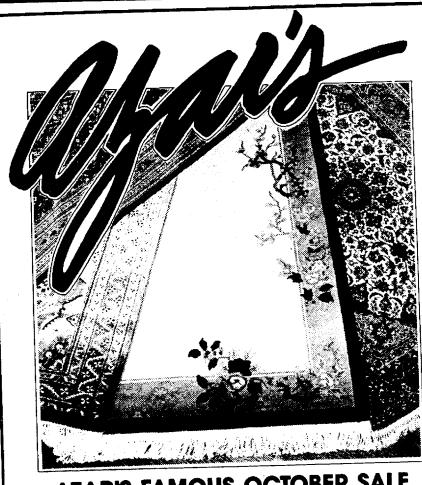

When buying an Oriental rug one must know in advance the size of the area to be covered and what colors are preferred. Keep in mind that it is much easier to decorate around the rug than try to match a rug to a particular room decor.

Look for clarity of design on the back of the rug and feel the pile for firmness. A short firm feel is better than a loose soft feel.

For more information on purchasing, caring for, or appraisal of an Oriental rug call Azar's Gallery of Oriental Rugs 644-7311.

Don't Take Your Chimney for Granted!

Everyone loves the warmth generated by a cozy fireplace or woodstove, but to keep the fire "friendly," it's important to maintain both your woodburning ap pliance and your chimney.

Studies from the Consumer Product Safety Commission show that home fires related to woodburning most often originate around the chimney or stove pipe. You can avoid the threat of such fires by following a few guidelines:

- 1. Use only the chimney and stovepipe specified in the installation instructions. Factory-built fireplaces always come with a chimney designed for use as an integrated part of the fireplace system, and stove manufacturers will specify the kind of chimney to be used with their stove. Be sure that the chimney you choose is approved by local code
- 2. If you are using a metal chimney, make sure it's not installed too close to combustibles. If you've added insulation in your home. check your attic to see that the insulation is not resting up against the chimney.
- 3. If you are using a masonry chimney, check on the condition of the liners, and also watch for other signs of deterioration.
- 4. Keep the chimney at least three feet higher than the place where it exits the roof and two feet higher than any roof within 10 feet. (That is a minimum, and it could be increased)
- 5. Don't overload your chimney by building too large a fire.

Creosote is an unavoidable by-product of wood combustion, and as you use your woodburning appliance, creosote will build up on the sides of the chimney and stovepipe: Creosote is highly flammable, and if allowed to build up, it may ignite, causing a full scale chimney fire.

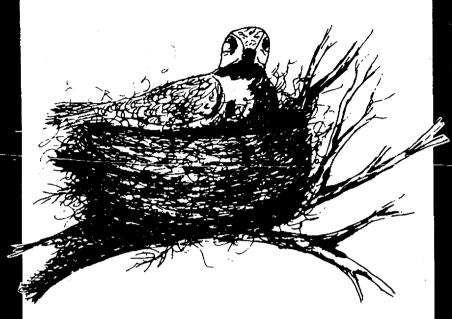

To avoid such fires, have your stovepipe and chimney inspected regularly (especially if you change the kind of wood you burn or if someone new is operating the stove or fireplace), and have the chimney cleaned when creosote accumulates from 1/8 to 1/4 inch.

Using chemicals or burning particular kinds of wood, will not prevent the accumulation of creosote. But you can reduce creosote formation with the following burning techniques:

- When lighting a stove or fireplace, make a blazing fire for about 30 minutes to bring all surfaces up to operating temperatures. Some creosote is vaporized during this warmup period.
- * Burn shorter, hot fires as opposed to
- long smoldering ones. When loading fresh fuel, burn it hotter in the beginning. This will wrap each wood piece with a hightemperature charcoal layer and help it burn cleaner.

For more information on chimney safety, write to the Wood Heating Alliance, the trade association for the residential woodburning industry, and request their pamphlet "How Does Your Chimney Stack Up?" Send a selfaddressed stamped envelope to WHA, Dept. WB, Suite 700, 1101 Connecticut Ave., NW, Washington, DC 20036.

Fall a great time to plant

by: Bill Scanlan Scanlan's Florist 399 Fisher Rd. Grosse Pointe

Fall is ideally one of the best times of the year for planting trees, shrubs, and ground covers. The weather is cooler so there is less chance of shock or wilting. When planting trees, shrubs or ground covers, make sure the soil is rich and loose where the item is to be planted. Always dig the hole larger than the ball or container that the plant is in, this will leave room to add rich soil or peat to encourage the root structure to develop and spread. Hold off any feeding at this time since if new growth is encouraged it will not be hardened enough before the first freeze or frost and will sustain a foilage burn that could damage the plant.

Container grown nursery stock is ideal for the home gardener. The sturdy plants have been conditioned to contained growth and are usually root bound ready to grow outside the pot. Make sure when purchasing this type of planting material to deal only with a reputable nursery that will guarantee the product for full replacement. When removing the plant material from the container, if you notice little or no root structure, return the plant, as it will most likely not survive the winter.

Ground covers such as ivy, pachysandra, myrtle, and euonymous are all very hardy in our area. Follow the same procedures as with shrubs and trees when planting but remember that ground covers will spread so be sure to space them accordingly. Ground covers will need a little more care and frequent watering than shrubs or trees because their root structures are closer to the surface. During the first winter, freezing may heave the young plants out of the ground. Press them back into place without delay. Most established ground covers benefit greatly from an application of garden fertilizer early each spring. It should be applied when the foilage is dry and watered in immediately. Later, after a year or two, ground covers can be propagated for use in other areas. This will encourage more growth on the plants after the cutting, for each cut made on the original plant will double the new growth on that plant. Ground covers are basically maintenance free and require only occasional feeding and proper watering when needed.

The Enchantment of Oriental Rugs

Oriental rugs have enchanted and fascinated owners and viewers throughout the world for centuries. Their painstaking craftsmanship, enchanting patterns and magical beauty captivate everyone. They are dreams made incarnate ... twisting labrinths of flowers, mystical animals and ancient symbols

The traditional patterns have been handed down through countless generations, yet they are infused with individuality when a weaver sits down at the loom and creates his own interpretation of the historical design.

They are the embodiment of beauty and when we open ourselves to their message and take delight in their exotic designs we enrich our lives immeasurably.

I as an Oriental/Rug Retailer of America can help lead you through this complex maze of names, knots and countries.

Please call Tadross & Zahloute at 644-8200 for an appointment or stop in at 330 E. Maple, Birmingham.

Mr. Zahloute points out new colors and traditional designs of his new fall collection.
