Detroit offers proposal to fix Fox Creek

the month, he said.

By Pat Paholsky The beating Grosse Pointe Park has been getting in the press lately regarding the five-foot dike it suggested may be necessary to contain flood waters appears to have worked to the city's advantage. It attracted lots of attention. And Monday night when the city council met to authorize an engineering firm to come up with some cost estimates, it attracted the right attention.

The director of the City Engineering Department of Detroit advised the council that his department will recommend to Mayor Coleman Young and the Detroit council the installation of sheet metal piling along Fox Creek.

'We recognize the problem we have and we initiated a study with a consulting firm. We have the results of the study here," Director Clyde R. Hopkins said.

The sheet metal piling, he said, is the quickest solution to the problem and would last between 40 to 60 years. He added that Fox Creek comprises only 15 to 20 percent of the city's containment area and that his department will recommend shoring up all of the channels adjacent to Fox Creek. "We're looking in excess of $9 million," Hopkins said. The recommendation will be submitted to the Detroit mayor

Hopkins' announcement was good news to Mayor Palmer Hee-nan, who said that he was pleasantly surprised by the ap-pearance of the Detroit official.

The visit prompted conciliatory remarks by Park officials, from Hee-nan — "We want to be coopera•tive'' -- to councilman John Prost

- "I certainly support your proposal" - to Mayor Pro Tem

Vern Ausherman - "We would agree that this is not a matter of controversy, but a matter of concern between our two cities.' and the council before the end of While Hopkins appeared to want to avoid any controversy, he did allude to some differences of opinion regarding the matter. Fox Creek, he said, has been leaking for more than 27 years and the Department of Public Works always repairs the minor leaks. In reference to predictions of an increase in water levels in the future, Hopkins said, "I don't want to get into a controversy, but I never heard the figures I heard tonight."

He also disagreed with the details of the plan Park City Manager John Crawford said was recommended by the Army Corps of Engineers in 1979. The plan, according to Crawford, involved seawalls. Hopkins said the plan called for bisecting property and building a mound three to four feet high in residents' backyards. Seventeen communities declined the Corps' plan, Hopkins said, adding that "no major city accepted the proposal.

And, Hopkins added, Fox Creek, even though it's located in Detroit, is a Wayne County drain.

The council voted to authorize Hubbel, Roth and Clark, the city's engineers, to prepare a proposal for elimination of the flood plain designation in the Park and cost estimates. The agenda also called for the appointment of a citizens committee to work with the administration in seeking solutions to the problem.

Several items down on the agenda, about 1^{1}_{2} hours after the TV cameras and broadcast journalists left, the council agreed to a special meeting Oct. 15 to review the annual audit. Mayor Heenan said he would at that time appoint a citizens committee to look into the flooding problem.

After the meeting, he said he hoped to appoint seven to 11 citizens to the committee, depending on the council's wishes. A likely candidate for the committee is Lou Mleczko, who lives on Barrington near Fox Creek.

Mleczko, who is also a Detroit News reporter, urged the council to act promptly. He spoke at length before Hopkins gave his proposal.

School awards bid; City resubmits offer

By Nancy Parmenter

The school district accepted a bid on the Kroger parking lot Monday night, but the decision may have satisfied very few. The winning bidder wouldn't guarantee future parking prices, the losing bid-der disputed the bidding process and the school board voiced disappointment in the foot-dragging of Grosse Pointe City

The City, meanwhile, is making up for its former go-slow attitude with a flurry of offers on the property. Last week's bid on the parking lot plus two adjacent parcels having been thrown out by the schools, the City came back after the bid opening with an offer higher than any of the previous bids.

"It's higher than the $126,000 (offered by the highest bidder),' confirmed City Manager Thomas

"We're not interested in parking garages," said Judith Goodnow Prus, landlord to Kroger and part of the merchant consortium that put together the losing bid. "Parking garages are anathema to the grocery business.'

Prus, the Kercheval Co. and Kabak & Mehr Associates bid $121,100.18 for the lot. They contend that their bid is actually the highest because it is a cash bid. They also feel that they have the public interest at heart - something they say Stanton and Burns do not. "The public interest is best provided by those with an interest - the City or the owners of adja-cent properties," Prus and her associates told the school board in a written statement after the bid acceptance.

The 13 volunteers come from the five Pointes, Detroit, Mount Clemens and Warren. Officials in all six communities have said that the program is too new and too small to evaluate accurately. "From what our police have told us, they've been helpful for those seven kids," Leidlein said. Reedus said she hopes that now that the cities have a financial stake in the program, they will participate more fully in its operation. Membership on the advisory council is open to - and encouraged for - all six communities. Youth officers from each police department are also asked to meet regularly with FLEC staff. 'The advisory committee is where the decisions are made,' she said. "I hope somebody from each city will participate. That's how you get the full benefits of the program. The program is coordinated with the juvenile court system in Wayne County and with six other youth assistance programs. It is set up to deal with teenagers whose crimes are not serious enough to handle through juvenile court. Referrals may be made by the police, the schools or by parents.

may be only a matter of time. City Manager Thomas Kressbach and Public Safety Director Bruce Kennedy were meeting on the subject at press time.

The council gave unanimous approval to the funding request at its Sept. 15 meeting, but attached the proviso that the city manager and police chief must find the program worth the $1,800.39 the city would have to chip in. Kennedy said Monday that he had just returned from a vacation and expected to meet with Kressbach Tuesday.

Kennedy declined to comment on whether the request would receive approval. "One thing we'll do is look at our stats," he said. The program has dealt with three City residents so far.

The program to help teenagers in trouble with the law was started by the Family Life Education Council about nine months ago with a one-year grant from the Skillman Foundation. FLEC officials spent parts of August and September making the rounds of the six municipalities asking for matching funds for the second year of operation.

The Skillman Foundation had already authorized $21,000 -- if the five Pointes and Harper Woods would come up with an equal amount. Each community was asked to contribute according to its population, ranging from $959.56 in the Shores to $5,764.17 in the Woods.

It was smooth sailing at first, with councils in the Farms, the Park and the Shores giving unanimous approval. On Sept. 15, the City gave its conditional approval and the Woods approved the spending request 6-1.

'I felt we didn't have enough information to make a decision," said councilwoman Jean Rice, the lone dissenter. "I wanted to know what the schools offered through their program to see if there were any duplications.

Rice also said the FLEC presenter put pressure on the council to decide immediately. "I'm used to that, of course, but I wasn't pleased," she said. "He was going to make another presentation the next day and he wanted to be able to say that the Woods had approved

The going got tougher in Harper Woods last week. "I was counting on my fingers," said FLEC Direc-tor Rebecca Reedus. The council til the budget was final," she said. 'We couldn't — we had a deadline from Skillman to meet."

There was never any question about the value of FLEC's program, Harper Woods Ĉity Manager James Leidlein said. 'Everybody agreed it was a good program. The Family Life Education Council has a long history. The questions were about long-term funding: Will they be back every vear?

Leidlein said the council and FLEC itself did in fact expect the agency to continue coming back with funding requests. FLEC told the council that it intended to pursue other funding avenues, but that there were no guarantees.

"They suspected they'd be back again," he said. "The advantage to that is that they'll have a longer track record" for the council to evaluate.

As of the beginning of September, the youth assistance program had hired a director, trained 13 volunteers and several FLEC staff and handled 16 clients. One was referred to outside help, one discharged because he or she was too old, two discharged because they moved outside the program's boundaries, and the remaining 12

Kressbach. He would not release the amount because the offer was still in negotiation Tuesday, he said.

'We were disappointed (that the first offer was refused), but basically the price was too high," Kressbach said. The new offer is higher, a move made possible, he said, because several of the Village merchants are "basically subsidizing" the offer. "It's a City offer, but supported by the Prus people," he said. Judith Goodnow Prus is the owner of the Kroger building and is acting in concert with other local merchants.

Kressbach declined to elaborate on the offer or how it is affected by the awarding of a bid Monday. He indicated that it is still alive, however.

The board awarded the bid to attorney Beverly Hall Burns and publisher Pamela E. Stanton for $126,500, payable over four years at 11 percent interest. The two said after the meeting that they intend to keep the lot in parking.

People should expect that they'll still be able to park there,' Burns said. She said there are no plans to change the meters, but Stanton added that, "speaking realistically," it is likely to be impossible to keep the parking price the same over the years.

City officials have said they think the purchase price was high enough to force the new owners to raise prices just to keep even. 'They won't be able to keep prices down without a subsidy of some sort," predicted Kressbach Mondav

Both city officials and shopping center merchants have expressed concern about parking availability and price. Parking is currently 20 cents an hour.

The Village Association wrote to the school board Sept. 30 urging the board to "work together (with the merchants and the city) to resolve this sale to everyone's benefit." The letter said that the merchants had for two years encouraged the city to buy the lot and some adjacent land for additional parking.

'Without sufficient tax revenues, both the schools and the municipal government would be forced to make undesirable cutbacks in services," the letter warned.

But the parking issue isn't that simple. The merchants want surface-level parking.

fore the meeting of the publicinterest concern.

"There's an incredibly strong community interest in keeping that in parking,'' said board President Vincent LoCicero last week. "The board recognizes that. But I don't know if we could use that as a legal basis for rejecting the bid." After the meeting, Prus and her attorney, James Draper, hinted at possible action if the parking issue sn't resolved to their satisfaction.

"We'll just have to wait and see if they continue to operate the lot at a reasonable rate," said Draper.

Woods woman tied, robbed

A Grosse Pointe Woods resident was the victim of a breaking and entering and a possible armed robbery in her Manchester Road home Friday, Oct. 10, shortly after noon.

According to Woods police reports, the woman arrived home at approximately 11:55 a.m. and entered her side door with a key. She was grabbed around the neck from behind by a man's right arm.

The man warned the victim to look straight ahead — not to look at him. He forced her to kneel, tied her hands behind her back, then tied her to a rocking chair.

According to police, when she tried to bite him, he said, "Don't hurt me and I won't hurt you. I have a weapon.

The victim did not see a weapon.

The man took $57 from the victim's purse, a gold ring, an emerald and diamond ring, and the keys to her 1982 blue Pontiac station wagon.

After he drove away, the woman managed to smash the front door screen and go to a neighbor's house to call police.

Entry to the house apparently was accomplished by removing a sliding doorwall in the family room

There are no suspects and the car is still missing. Police are investigating.

inte resident unlocks knowledge within special students

By Peter A. Salinas As the buses and cabs arrive and the children enter the Moses Field Center, the halls are alive with excited laughter, loud voices and warm greetings.

It is another Wednesday morning at the center, a school for the severely multiply and mentally impaired in Detroit. The school is operated by the Wayne County Intermediate School District, and is one of four such centers throughout the county.

There are about 200 students at the school from Detroit and neighboring school districts. Grosse Pointe, however, has developed its own program to train such children and young adults. Becky MacNamee, a Grosse Pointe Park resident, is a teacher at Moses Field Center. She has worked for the intermediate school district for five years, and during her career has taught both nonhandicapped and handicapped students MacNamee, 42, is originally from Ohio. She was awarded a master's degree in education from Wayne State University. The degree was earned in the field of education for the physically and mentally impaired.

The children she teaches at handicaps. They may be of normal size and strength for their years, but may have the intelligence of a small child.

"I look at these children and picture them as a normal child," MacNamee said. "I try to bring out every normal reflex and ability. If we don't look at them for their highest potential, we'll not get very far.'

MacNamee said with some students, that highest potential may be to get them to tie their shoes or button their jackets, but that with each child, the teacher and administration must learn what the individual's limitation are and if those limitations can be overcome.

The center has professionals from a variety of educational disciplines. There are some 85 teachers and staff persons who train the students.

There are teachers, teachers aides, speech and language specialists, occupational therapists, a psychologist, a full-time nurse, a part-time intermediate school district consultant for blind and deaf students and a physical therapist.

Together these people take a positive approach to situations where there is often little hope.

James A. Hutchinson, principal of the center, said the dignity and Moses Field Center may have a of the center, said the dignity and variety of physical and mental the rights of the students are, and of the educational process.

"What we are about here is people helping people," Hutchinson said. "We are no better than they are, but we are more fortunate.

Those less fortunate people in a large group can have a profound impact on a visitor.

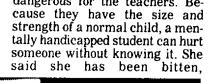

Students in some cases must be protected from themselves, as they will strike themselves repeatedly. Other students are confined to wheelchairs, and will be their entire lives. Young children, four to five years of age, must be turned over when lying down, because they cannot do it on their own. They are stimulated with special toys that react when touched in a certain way.

MacNamee admitted that it is often a sad experience, but as a doctor becomes anesthetized to blood and wounds, the teachers learn to accept the handicaps of the less fortunate, but more importantly learns to deal with those handicaps.

"What we are striving for is in-dependency and self-care for these students," MacNamee said. "Their quality of life is very different from our own. In improving their quality of life, we must know that we are not going to cure them or take away their disability. "There are things they can do should always be, at the forefront and things they cannot, and will not, be able to do. You have to have a goal for them, and that is very different than goals set for a normal child - very different."

MacNamee noted that it can be

"The box said, 'Excuse me, I can't see the screen, would you please move over,' "MacNamee said. "Right then I was so excited. This new technology is doing so much for these kids who just several years ago wouldn't have had any such opportunity.

MacNamee sees herself as a locksmith of sorts.

"All of that is locked within them," she said. "We try to unlock what is inside. That's the joy. That's the goal. To try and find the key that opens."

Schools accept parents' gifts

By Nancy Parmenter

The Grosse Pointe Board of Education accepted gifts from several groups of school supporters at the Oct. 13 meeting. All of the gifts fall within guidelines, board President Vincent LoCicero said. The guidlines were established after questions were raised several months ago as to whether some gifts fall into categories the schools should be paying for themselves. PTO/PTA gifts tread a fine line between enrichment - which should be provided by parents and necessity - which should be provided by the schools, trustee Jon Gandelot said. What looks like an enrichment item one year may be considered a necessity a few years later.

Gandelot said computer pur-chases fall into that category. The school's computer program was started when parents at Poupard thought it would be nice to expose their children to them. That purchase made the schools see the computers' value and equipment was eventually bought districtwide.

Gandelot said his only problem with the gift program is that the school board is sometimes the last to find out about a purchase.

"We have a policy that any purchase over $500 has to come ' he said. ''My beef is that sometimes we seem to act as a rubber stamp. Often times we can drive by the school and see the gift cemented into the ground before it ever gets to the board." Procedures are designed to prevent that, as well as to define what type of gift is suitable. But individual schools and principals have wide discretion. Gandelot said.

gift of projects worth $1,275 from the Grosse Pointe Fouondation for Academic Achievement. The projects include funding for music specialists from orchestras and universities to visit Parcells Middle School to present a music clinic; and for a visit to three elementary schools and the Cen-tral Library by author/illustrator Marc Brown.

The Parent-Teacher Organization at Defer School donated $900 to be divided among the teachers to enhance the education of the students in each class.

The Ferry School PTO donated

$3,200 to be used for eight projects, including an education-enhancement gift for each classroom, the purchase of a video cassette recorder, Nature Center maintenance and programs, safety patrol and spelling bee prizes.

Playgrounds at Maire School will benefit from a gift of $2,000 from the PTO for the purchase of a tire swing and tire bridge.

The Monteith PTO donated $5,605 to be used for multiple purposes. Among them are parenting workshops for parents, science room materials, music room risers, field trips and carpet.

Candidates forum is scheduled

The League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe will sponsor a candidates forum Wednesday, Oct. 22, at 7:30 p.m. in the library of the War Memorial. The forum, co-sponsored by the War Memorial, will give the public an opportunity to learn the views of candidates for national and state office prior to the November election.

Dennis Hertel (D), incumbent candidate for U.S. Representative for the 14th District, will attend, as well as Nancy Resowski (D), candidate for state representative for the 13th District. Also attending will be John Kelly (D) and John Lauve (R), candidates for the Michigan State Senate for the 1st District. Candidates unable to attend were invited to submit prepared opening and closing remarks which will be read by a league spokesperson.

Each candidate will make a brief opening statement after which they will respond to written questions from the audience.

Another forum for the Wayne County Commission candidates will be held Tuesday, Oct. 28, at 7:30 p.m. at the Pierce Middle School auditorium, Grosse Pointe Park. This forum will be co-sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe and Detroit.

The two leagues are also publishing a joint Voters Guide containing statements from candidates for county commissioners and legislators representing Grosse Pointe and Detroit. The guide will be distributed throughout the Pointes. Copies are available at the public library and at each city hall.

Cars stolen in Park

Three cars were stolen in Grosse Pointe Park last week according to police reports. One was recovered with all its windows broken

On Oct. 6, a 1985 Oldsmobile was taken from a restaurant parking lot on Mack.

The next day, a 1986 Pontiac Grand Am was taken from a driveway on Pemberton. Police recovered the vehicle within hours, but all the windows had been smashed.

Oct. 8, a 1968 Plymouth Barracuda was taken from a parking lot on Mack.

During the night of Oct. 10. someone attempted to take a 1985 Chevrolet Blazer from a driveway on Middlesex. The door lock was damaged, but no loss was reported, police said.

The BEST CLUB

Parent organizations work hard to raise funds for the gifts. The Monteith PTO holds four fundraisers a year, according to Principal Joan Kubista.

'They want to do things that directly benefit the children," Kubista said. "Some of the projects take a couple of years to work on." Large purchases like playground equipment fall into that category. Not everything has an obvious direct benefit. Recently the Monteith PTO raised funds for new furniture for the school lobby.

"The furniture was 30 years old and we'd have gotten rid of it anyway," Kubista said. But the decision sparked a discussion about the benefit to the children.

"Maybe it didn't directly impact instruction, but the children do use the lobby a lot," Kubista said. The parents decided to buy the furniture.

The enrollment conundrum

With an enrollment gain of 97 students in the last two years, the Grosse Pointe school system once more is faced with the question of what the future holds with respect to the school population.

At the moment, nobody really knows whether a new long-term trend is setting in with the increase of 37 students in 1985 and a further increase of 60 more this year. But surely the rise from 7,309 students in 1984 to 7,346 in 1985 to 7,406 in 1986 — all figures based on the fourth Friday (of September) count – deserve careful study by those planning the school district's future moves.

A year ago, David King, assistant director of support services in the schools, was quoted as "beginning of a reversal" in the declining en-rollment. This year he told the Grosse Pointe News school reporter that the "downward trend that was predicted a course of strength that the that was predicted a couple of years ago has stopped," and added, "You could say the popu-lation has stabilized." That appears to be a fair conclusion based on what we know now.

Even this year's small increase, however, has forced the school system to hire additional teachers and school aides to help meet the rise in enrollment which has occurred chiefly in the elementary grades. The additional cost, estimated at $100,000, indicates the importance of planning ahead and making accurate estimates of student population to make sure that funds are available to meet the needs of any increases that occur.

When Barnes Elementary School was closed two years ago and converted to other uses by the school district, the estimates were that school population in the Pointes would dip to a low of 6,000. King now says that it is no longer expected that the district will lose another 1,000 students in the foreseeable future. But the stabilization that King now sees will require some changes in the schools, even if the enrollment never approaches the record of 13,529 in 1971-72.

For one thing, the population of the high

Cooperation, not hostility

Despite Mayor Coleman Young's recent criticism of the "hostility" of the Pointes and other suburbs, the city of Detroit showed a commendable spirit this week in proposing a plan to con-tain flood waters from Fox Creek that endanger residential areas of Grosse Pointe Park and Detroit.

What Clyde R. Hopkins, director of Detroit's City Engineering Department, proposed was the installation of sheet metal piling to contain Fox Creek flood waters and prevent them from spilling out into residential areas. That proposal came as a substitute for a Park plan to build a five-foot dike along its boarders to control the creek.

the Park proposal that started the war It was of words. Mayor Young described the plan as illustrative of the "hostility" that suburbs feel toward Detroit. And the Detroit news media immediately began labelling the Park plan as a "Berlin wall" supposedly intended to keep out blacks from Detroit as well as waters from Fox Creek, even though a five-foot-high dike would not keep anyone in or out of the Park. But now the war of words appears to be over. Mayor Palmer Heenan as well as council members Vern Ausherman and John Prost made conciliatory statements about the Detroit engineers appearance and proposal. And calm is restored to the Park's border with Detroit.

schools continue to decline although there no longer appears to be any discussion of closing one of them. Even if the increase in the elementary and middle school continues, it will take some time for the larger enrollments to work their way through the system to the high schools. But if the increases in the elementary and middle schools continue, eventually they will move into the high schools as well

A recent Detroit Free Press survey indicated that the Grosse Pointe rise in enrollment was just part of an east side and Macomb County public school increase. But the biggest increases occurred in the newer community developments in Macomb County, with new families moving in to occupy the new homes. That cannot happen in the built-up Pointes, which now have few vacant lots left and even fewer big estates remaining to be developed.

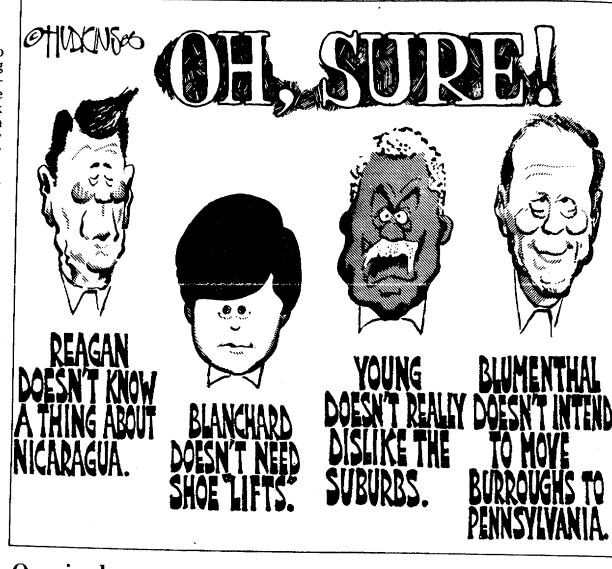

Yet the excellent quality of the public schools of Grosse Pointe does help to explain the recent increase. People still move to the Pointes because of the excellent school system. And as more of the older families of the Pointes retire and move elsewhere after their children have grown up, more of those homes will be occupied by younger couples with school-age children. If that trend continues, then there is likely to be a further increase in the school enrollment, regardless of what the statistics show about number of children per family and the birth rate.

As the Grosse Pointe News said a year ago in commenting on the 1985 enrollment increase, "Regardless of the size of the enrollment, the continuing goal in the Pointes is the maintenance of the excellence of the school system." We believe that goal is still widely shared — and the lack of public criticism of the recent budget increase for the coming year offers additional evidence to support it. Yet the new enrollment figures require close attention to assure proper funding, appropriate class size and a sufficient number of qualified teachers to maintain the excellence we all seek, regardless of what the future holds.

proval of the mayor of Detroit and the Detroit city council and the funding of the $9 million cost of the project. The Park, too, still has to work out the details of its own efforts to eliminate the flood plan designation in the Park. And the Park mayor still myst appoint a citizens committee to work with the city administration in seeking solutions to the problem.

But now a start seems to have beem made in a cooperative spirit to try to solve the flooding problem that has plagued both the Park and the city of Detroit. The piling that would substitute for the Park's dike would also eliminate the criticism that the dike plan would increase flooding for Detroit residents near Fox Creek. Park City Manager John Crawford had admitted that was a possibility but said his city had a responsibility to protect its own residents, despite the negative impact of its neighbors in Detroit. Happily, this dike plan now can be abandoned. The flooding is a long-term problem which both cities have addressed several times over the years. It is unlikely to be solved overnight, despite the residents' demands for quick action to protect their property. But at least the two cities and their officials are talking to each other in friendly terms and with conciliatory attitudes that augur well for early cooperative action to end the flooding in both the Park and the city of Detroit.

Time running out for Lucas

The failure of Republican gubernatorial nominee William Lucas to close the gap separating him from Gov. James Blanchard must be causing deep concern among GOP leaders in Michigan.

In TV station polls as well as the highly regarded Detroit News public opinion polls, the Republican challenger is shown to be trailing the Democratic incumbent by a 2 to 1 margin with less than a month left in the campaign.

True, the race won't be over until Nov. 4, but the polls indicate that up to this time at least, Lucas has made little dent in Blanchard's reelection efforts and now must rely on a quick fix to turn the race around.

Perhaps the challenger's new tough line against the governor will do the trick. But that is questionable. Instead, for Lucas to call the governor a liar — as he has just done — could also be seen as an act of desperation, which is what Blanchard's backers are claiming.

What the polls indicate is that Lucas is not attracting the popular support among either whites or blacks that the Republicans had anticipated. Well, why not? Why has a popular Wayne County executive, and before that a popular Wayne County sheriff, made such a weak run against the Democratic governor at a time when GOP fortunes nationally have been improving?

Nobody really knows but surely the improvement in Michigan's economy in the last couple of years must play a role. People simply feel that things are better in Michigan and that the Blanchard administration deserves some of the credit.

That also means the Republican argument that the Reagan administration in Washington deserves most of the credit for the improvement in Michigan's economy has not served as an effective rebuttal to the Blanchard claims for his efforts on behalf of the state.

But perhaps there are other campaign issues, too, that have cost the Lucas campaign some popular support. For one thing, Lucas has come across as a representative of the conservative wing of the Republican Party and a campaigner who has given little attention to the moderates among the GOP.

Former Gov. William Milliken, a moderate Republican who claimed wide support among independents and even Democrats, had and has critics in his own party but he was still able to hold the moderates and conservatives together when it came to election day.

Lucas, instead, seems to have bought the conservative GOP line on many issues, including abortion, taxes and public education, with the result that he finds it difficult to claim support from the middle of the road people who usually elect governors in Michigan. Indeed, on some issues he sounds like a clone of Richard Headlee, the right-wing Republican nominee in 1982.

Blanchard, on the other hand, has wooed business and other interests that usually are regarded as Republican-oriented with probusiness talk and actions and other moves in order to appeal to the public as a moderate Democrat who travels the middle of the road.

In these late stages of the campaign, Lucas could still recoup some of his political fortunes if he tried to challenge Blanchard's claim to the centrist position. The best way for Lucas to do that is to show that he occupies that middle of the road position himself and is not giving it up to the Democratic governor.

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, early in his campaign for the presidency in 1952, was said to be 'running like a dry creek.'' We all know what happened in November of that year. Lucas, too, may finally get his campaign running at full throttle and surprise the pollsters and pundits. But time is running out.

A few years ago while visiting in Grosse Pointe, I visited the park and saw that the trough was now in the park minus the plaque. I went into the Shores police station and I believe spoke with a Mr. Frank MacWhirter, not sure of the last name or spelling.

He said he thought the plaque had been stolen. He gave me the phone number of his mother because he thought she had known a Ruth Hager Georgi who belonged to our club.

I was able to contact Ruth Hager Georgi who helped me recall the members, who were as follows, as we were able to recall: Janet McLeod (her father, A.L. McLeod, was a village trustee), Bessie and Anne Hurley, Margaret McHie, Rosemary and Beatrice Long (father, J.R. Long was a village

Churches have closed doors

To the Editor:

The Detroit Free Press International Marathon will be held Sunday, Oct. 19.

The decision to not run it through Grosse Pointe this year was made sometime ago, influenced by the churches along the route on Jefferson Avenue and Grosse Pointe.

I have been a member of one of these churches for 25 years and as a participant in this marathon, I have many emotions about this decision.

I can appreciate the inconvenience that it has caused in attending church services that day. I know, however, through a survey of my own that many churchgoers looked forward to that day - planning their routes to church and being spectators, too. These people are as disappointed as I am.

It is sad that the churches of our community and the Detroit churches could not work together to show community spirit, compasion for others and charity (funds are raised for multiple sclerosis that day by the runners)

Those of you who supported the marathon in previous years by being spectators, lending aid to runners, policing the route and pledging money toward MS certainly showed Christian attributes.

''Do you always have to sit in a church pew to be a good Christian?

I was always proud to run through Grosse Pointe alongside many runners who had never been here. I feel the churches have certainly closed the doors.

All you wonderful spectators will be missed by many. I wish I could bus all of you down to Michigan Avenue.

A proud Grosse Pointer and notso-proud church member .

Personal eulogy to a friend

To the Editor:

This is a personal eulogy to my beloved friend, Marie Mitchell. I feel her story must be told, so that the public could be made aware of the untold agony this wonderful woman suffered at the hands of supposedly fine doctors and hospital staff.

She entered a renowned hospital for a simple hysterectomy and after many hours, her husband Allan Mitchell was told that she had cervical cancer and a radical hysterectomy was imperative. Then supposedly to prevent any further spread of cancer cells, she was treated with nuclear medicine. She was implanted with radiation implants over and over until her husband found her near death. The radiation implant was removed, and after a few days, she was dismissed from the hospital and they were told she was fine.

They believed what they were told by these educated men. Have you ever seen a person die inch by inch, organ by organ from radiation burn and poisoning? I watched my friend destroyed in the most agonizing way imaginable. Her legs bowed from the knee up, her bladder useless because of burned tissue, her kidney burned out, then her bowel. She could not walk but a few feet without such a rapid heartbeat that she fainted from it.

The burn does not stop destroying until you die and she did — taking with her an artistic genius that will be touched by no one. She was one of the finest decoupers in the world and to waste a life and talent like she had is a mortal sin. If my words can save just one person her agony, it will be worth the tears I shed to write this.

Big Brother lives in GP

To the Editor:

Regarding your front page item, "So that's what it looks like," (fyi, Oct. 9) it's nice to know that I live in a community where one's neighbors carefully watch every move one makes, ever ready to report to the authorities any possible violation.

Big Brother is apparently alive and well and living in Grosse would like to think they remember some of the educational stuff, but I'm sure it's the rides they recall best, the excitement and glitter of the carnival atmosphere. We enjoyed it, too. Through their eyes, we saw the wonder of a make-believe world and we became children too for awhile. And before we knew it, they were too old to go to these places with mom and dad, but they were a color-coding the tunnel. just the right age to go by themselves with their friends. Just as well, I thought. Now is the time to gear our vacations to our interests. We traded in the booster chair at the restaurant for candlelight and tuxedoed waiters. No more lowbudget motels; now it's hotels with lobbies that have chandeliers. Goodbye forever to miniature golf courses. And from now on, the only plastic I want to touch is a credit card. In fact, the more conspicuous the consumption, the better. Right? Well, yes and no. I had a chance a couple of weeks ago to go to Disney World and a few other such places on a part-business, partpleasure trip. It had been 14 years since I'd been in the Magic Kingdom and I took my mother, who had never been there. We oohed over the electrical parade and marveled at the fireworks. We saw the $20 million "Captain EO," a film that is 17 minutes long and my mother now is the owner of a Michael Jackson poster. We walked through every one of the 10 pavilions at Epcot Center, each one representing a different country. I took my mother on my favorite rides, the Haunted Mansion, the Pirates of the Caribbean and the jungle boat ride. Some of it was not as I remembered and some of it was better than I expected. My favorite rides were a disappointment. Maybe it's because what was state-of-the-art then is outdated now. Or maybe, as one person suggested, you need a little kid to infect you with his or her excitement. Epcot was a happy revelation. I'd never been there and I remember that the reviews, after it opened, were bad. The pavilions, according to the report, were a disappointment, because they only offered the food of the country and some of its goods. They were devoid of culture, I recall reading. Well, I would say that a coun-try's foods and the products it makes are part of its culture. We never got to any of the exhibits. There was so much to see, it would take at least three days to go through. I hope to get back someday.

Park break-ins

Several houses in Grosse Pointe Park were broken into over the last two weeks. All were entered through unlocked windows or doors, according to police reports.

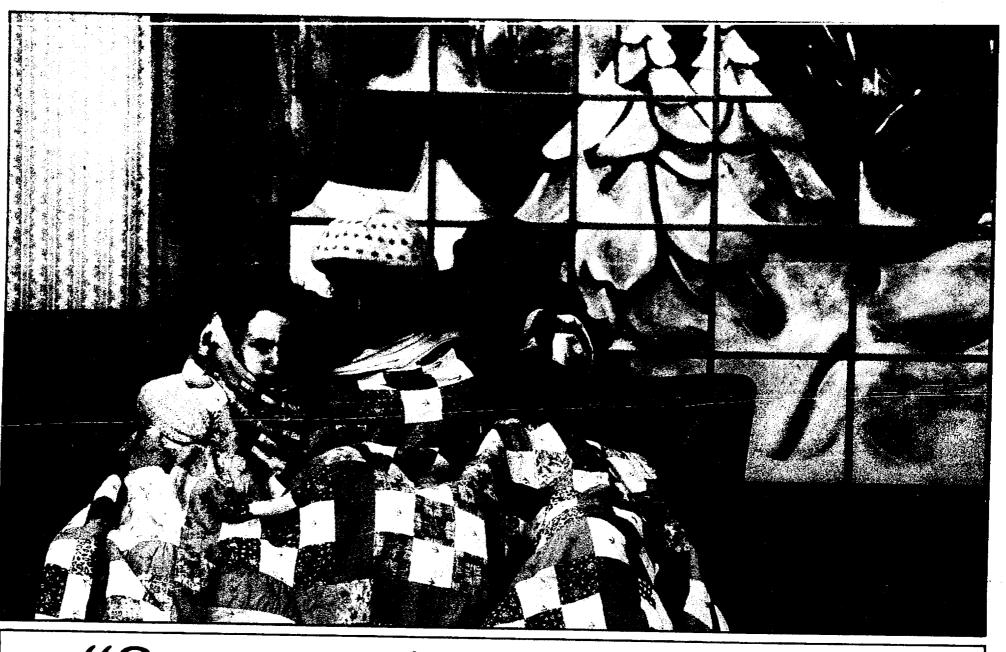

Sometime on Sept. 25 or 26, a person entered a house on Berkshire through a window. The residents reported that a video cassette recorder was taken.

During the same night, someone entered a house on Bishop, coming in through an unlocked rear door. A purse was taken from the kitchen counter. The resident lost cash, traveler's checks, jewelry and identification papers, police said.

On Oct. 2 during the day, a house on Pemberton was entered through an unlocked rear door. There was no search or ransacking of the house, but $235 was taken from an upstairs bedroom. A white man, 5 feet, 8 inches tall and 18-20 years old with medium blond hair, was seen leaving the house, according to the report.

On Oct. 7, someone entered the unlocked back door of a house on Devonshire and took a purse containing $150 from the kitchen. At 4:30 a.m., a dog barked and a resident heard a person walking down the driveway at 4:30 a.m. police reported.

MACLD to meet

The Michigan Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities (MACLD) will present a program by Ann Meyers and Patty Gough on "Successful Mainstreaming in Elementary and Mid-dle School," Tuesday, Oct. 21, at 7:30 p.m. in the Grosse Pointe Central Library.

With the re-structuring this year of the program, more learning disabled children are being mainstreamed into regular classes than in the past. Although this offers more opportunities for the children, there will be times when their success will depend on the ability of the child, parent and teacher to work together in adapting curriculum and classroom routines to help the student compensate for his disability.

Meyers and Gough, both teachers of learning disabled children, will offer suggestions and answer questions on how parents can help their children make the transition to the regular classes. The meeting is open to all interested people. For more information, call 885-8103.

Volunteers needed for formaldehyde study

The Allergy and Clinical Pharmacology/Toxicology Division of the Department of Pediatrics at Wayne State University and Children's Hospital of Michigan are seeking volunteers to participate in a study on the effects of exposure to formaldehyde.

The study, sponsored by the Michigan Department of Public Health, is being conducted in response to numerous reported claims of adverse health effects in individuals living in homes insulated with urea formaldehyde foam insulation (UFFI). It will determine if skin testing can be used as a means to identify people who may be sensitized to either UFFI or formaldehyde.

Individuals between the ages of 12 and 45, both who have and have not been exposed to UFFI in their home environment are needed. Each participant will receive a free allergy exmination that in-cludes a history and physical exam, and a lung function, blood and skin test valued at $150. A physician will discuss the test results with each patient and make recommendations.

Interested persons should call Children's Hospital's Pharmacology Department at 745-5873 for more information.

Proprietor ponders profound pipe-puffing pleasures By Peter A. Salinas

There's a definite international flavor in this small shop, and the comfortable, informal atmosphere makes it a social oasis amid a metropolitan business district of glass, cement and neon.

Aromas from Africa, South America and the Virginias fill the shop and delight a customer's nose. Carefully carved pipes from Turkey, Greece and Corsica please the eye. Four large easy chairs surround an old wooden, well-used chess set in the middle of the already tightly cramped floor space. The customer knows who's important here. Gourmet coffees from the tropics around the world are for sale, but the owner doesn't have a thing against brewing a pot of the expensive stuff for an amiable customer or guest.

Conversation almost immediately takes a turn toward tobacco and the implements in its use.

Hill and Hill Tobacconists, Ltd., in Grosse Pointe Woods, is owned by Maria and Jim Simon of the Shores

Hill and Hill is sponsoring a Pipe Expo for the second year in a row at the Hoffman House/Best Western Midway Motor Lodge in Warren Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 18 and 19.

Jim Simon is more than just ex-cited about the 1986 Pipe Expo he's bordering on ecstatic. He hands a flier to everyone who enters the shop and says things like, "Don't miss it if you can help it," and "If you go, you're in for a treat.'

The expo will feature Ismett Beckler, a world renowned master carver of meerschaum pipes, and Elliott Nachwater, a noted pipe collector. The show will also feature the "Flying Horseman," a meerschaum pipe valued at $15,000.

Meerschaum, (pronounced meer-shum), is a soft, easily caved mineral - hydrous silicate of magnesium. It is composed of fossilized shells of tiny sea creatures that fell to the ocean floor millions of years ago.

High quality meerschaum deposits are found only in the small city of Eskishehir in central Turkey, in an area of only four square miles.

Meerschaum is valued as a material for pipes because it is a highly porous substance. It acts as a filter and absorbs tobacco tars and nicotine. Since it is highly burn-resistant, it allows the user to get the most pure flavor from the tobacco possible.

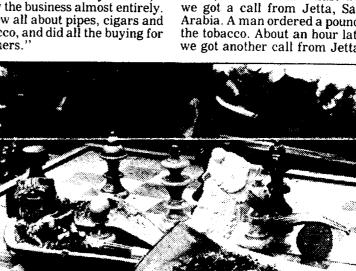

At 34, Simon has been steeped in the world of tobacco and pipes for 20 years. He said he smoked a pipe then, and everyday after school he would take the bus to downtown first tobacco shop in the Woods.

Detroit, where he would spend the rest of the day with different tobacco shop owners.

"Something just drew me there," Simon said. "My parents didn't mind as long as I didn't smoke cigarettes. Every one in my peer group smoked them though.

He would go to Watkins Tobacco Shop in the David Whitney Building, LaFond's Pipe Store in Hudson's and when he was 18 he went to work for Siegners Smoke Shop in the AAA Building.

When I took that job at 18, I knew the business almost entirely. I knew all about pipes, cigars and tobacco, and did all the buying for Siegners.

The meerschaum pipe on the left, a rich golden color, is used, and the one on the right, still white, is new. The pipes are expensive and can run as high as $15,000.

While working there he attended Wayne County Community College and later Wayne State University, eventually earning a degree in psychology. He almost landed a job with AAA as a counselor in 1974, but as it turned out, he didn't get it and instead that year opened his Wayne and Oakland counties. Simon mixes all of his own blends of pipe tobacco, but now he must contract out his recipe for his biggest seller "because it would take all month to just keep up with the orders.

His best-selling pipe tobacco is Haymarket, a blend of burley, Vir-ginia and toasted Virginia tobaccos, with just a hint of vanilla that he developed himself. In fact, he blends all the tobaccos he sells.

'We ship Haymarket all over the world," Simon said. "Last week we got a call from Jetta, Saudi Arabia. A man ordered a pound of the tobacco. About an hour later, we got another call from Jetta. I house for a move, came in with four used pipes. He gave up the habit about 15 years ago, and wanted to sell them.

Simon's trained eye looked over the pipes carefully. He said something about $30, and the man said "sold.

Simon will strip the pipes, sterilize them with alcohol, inside and out, replace the stem if needed, sand them down and refinish them with a special wax.

The pipes were not meerschaums. A used meerschaum which has developed the rich gold tones that comes with use an age, would fetch a higher price.

The pipes, made of briar came from the roots of a briar shrub. The best briar comes from Greece and Corsica.

A quality briar pipe will have a tight, straight grain, and small bird's eyes (tiny knots) in the wood

"The bird's eye is the hardest part of the shrub," Simon said "A briar pipe with no flaws and tight grain is about one out of 500.'

Simon said that each briar broker cures the wood in a different manner. This curing process is a closely held secret. Depending on how the briar is cured, a pipe will take on its own character and give the tobacco a unique flavor.

Pipes will range in price from $20 to several hundred dollars. Simon said it depends on what the person wants. He suggests that if you start smoking a pipe to break the cigarette habit, as many of his customers do, to buy a good quality pipe that will allow for tobacco enjoyment. "If you start smoking even a very fine tobacco in a poor quality pipe, then you won't enjoy it very much.

Beckler, the pipe artisan from Turkey, will carve meerschaum pipes at the show, something that Simon said is a must for those attending the pipe exposition.

The 12th Annual Pipe Smoking Contest will take place Saturday, Oct. 18, at 6:30 p.m. Contestants are given two wooden matches, a small amount of tobacco and are asked to keep the pipe lit and smoking for as long as possible.

Paul Strong, a regular customer and friend of Hill and Hill's owner, is a former record holder in the contest.

Strong, of Mount Clemens, said he wouldn't miss this year's contest, and challenges anyone to beat his 1979 record of one hour and 37 minutes.

Attorney arrested in grand jury probe

Edward H. Bunn, of McKinley Road, was charged with uttering and publishing (forgery) and embezzlement over $100 in one indictment and in another, was charged with uttering and publishing and obtaining money by false pretenses over $100.

According to Patrick Foley, director of the Wayne County Organized Crime Task Force with the prosecuting attorney's office, the first indictment alleges Bunn forged a release.

In this case Bunn's client was not informed of the settlement, and Bunn is alleged to have signed the release and accepted a settlement check in the amount of $14,500 in September, 1984. Bunn is charged with forging the signature on the check, depositing the money in an account bearing his name and keeping the money for two years. Bunn was also indicted on a charge of defrauding an insurance company of $5,500. Bunn is alleged to have claimed the money was due the other side in a lawsuit.

asked if he knew the other guy, and he said he never heard of him." With people from Saudi Arabia to northern Michigan clamoring for his tobacco, Simon keeps busy. His four stores sell about 3,200 pounds of Haymarket every month.

"We give people what they want," he said. "Pleasant aromas, a good price and quality pipes to smoke with."

A Michigan Ambulance driver stopped in for a few minutes to walk around the shop, and made a payment on a meerschaum pipe. An older Grosse Pointe resident stopped in and purchased a couple of dozen cigars, from Simon's large temperature-controlled storage area.

Mleczko asked if the city had an emergency preparedness plan if the earthern dam fails. He asked if the city would be prepared to pump sewage out of basements if some of the homes were flooded. He also asked if the city had enough sandbags or a plan to evacuate residents if necessary.

"Our entire sewage system is tied to the Jefferson interceptor and it's my understanding if they become overburdened, our entire system will fail not only north but south of Jefferson," Mleczko said. "The Corps (Army Corps of Engineers) has informed me that you will not only get water from Fox Creek but from the Detroit River as well.

"Time is of the essence here," he added. "We don't have the luxury of six months to ponder this. I strongly urge the council to begin to look at some short-term plans, not only for preparedness, but to forestall the high water.'

The situation between the two cities appears for now, at least, to have been defused.

School awards bid . . .

"But we don't know what they'll do. They could close the lot right down.

Asked if there is anything the merchant's bidding group can do, Draper said, "Yes. We're just deciding what action to take."

Prus' group is particularly miffed at the schools because they originally offered to buy the piece a year ago. Copies of that correspondence were included in the protest packet they handed to the school board after the bidding.

Meanwhile, the schools say they spent months urging the city to make a decision about the lot. Early this year it was decided to approach the city before establishing a bid process, Superintendent John Whritner said. After the school system sold the Messner lot behind the Hill shopping district to Cottage Hospital, it was decided to open the bid process and wait no longer for the city of Grosse Pointe.

Whritner mentioned the issue of parking and the public interest. "Obviously, (parking) is in everyone's interest," he said before the board voted on the bids. "The high bidders (Stanton and Burns, according to the schools' attorney) are Grosse Pointe residents and I must assume good intent."

Trustee Joan Hanpeter also spoke about intent. "I am concerned that unless we can find the true intent, there is a possibility that the lot might close," she said. "I am disappointed in the city for not moving along faster." Han-peter added that she is afraid that if the lot is closed, the school system will be blamed.

The vote was 4-1 in favor of accepting the Stanton-Burns bid. LoCicero, Carol Marr, Carl Anderson and Fred Adams voted yes. Hanpeter voted no, Jon Gandelot abstained and treasurer Dorothy Kennel was absent.

The Michigan Cancer Foundation A comprehensive cancer center

Dr. Gloria Heppner, senior vice president of the Michigan Cancer Foundation, looks on as a research worker examines a microscopic slide.

Research — two approaches to the problem

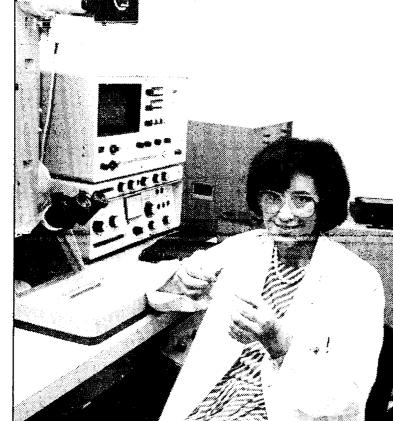

MCF is home to seven major research projects aimed at understanding and curing cancer, according to Senior Vice President Dr. Gloria Heppner. We will be taking a closer look at two of those projects, both headed up by Grosse Pointers.

Immunology

Immunology is the study of how the body's immune system fights disease. In recent years, some of the most promising cancer re-search has centered on finding a way to trigger the body's immune system to destroy cancerous cells, without harming the patient's healthy cells.

Drs. Fred and Bonnie Miller, and Dr. Wei-Zen Wei, all three of the Pointes, are studying the biology of breast cancer — focus-ing on the effects of chemotherapy and the interactions of the different types of cells in a tumor.

"Each cancer is different," Bonnie Miller said. "It is a complex set of diseases and there is no theory

By Elsa Frohman The Michigan Cancer Foundation has an image problem.

'Our name doesn't say what we do," explained Dr. Gloria Heppner, senior vice president of the organization. "People see the word foundation and think we give away money. In fact, the opposite is true.

The Michigan Cancer Founda-tion, despite its misleading name, is a comprehensive cancer center providing a full range of services to the cancer patient, from basic research, to information and education, to direct patient services

But MCF, headquartered at 110 East Warren, in the Cultural Center of Detroit, also has a strong Grosse Pointe connection. From Dr. Michael Brennan, president of MCF, and Heppner, on down through the ranks of researchers, support workers and volunteers, MCF is the professional home of many Grosse Pointers.

The influence of the Pointes on MCF and vice versa is evident in the many Circle of Fellows events that have been held in Grosse Pointe over the years. The Circle of Fellows is an organization of in-dividuals who pledge at least $500 annually to support MCF, and that grassroots support is typical of the nature of the foundation. MCF is a community based cancer facility.

"MCF is a unique kind of organization," Heppner said. "There are a lot of places that carry on cancer research, but most are affiliated with a university or a hospital. MCF is the only organization where the citizens of the community decided they wanted a cancer research facility and the facility grew out of that."

The founding of MCF is a fascinating story that tells not only of a community that wanted a cancer facility, but also of two women determined to carry on research, in the face of nearly insurmountable odds.

The foundation had its seed in the research of Wilhelmina Dunning who started out at Columbia University in New York before World War II, Heppner explained. At the beginning of the war, the government took over all the laboratories for defense research and Dunning found herself without a job. Dunning's research was on pro-static cancer and at the center of her work were specially bred rats used in her experiments. Dunning had a lab assistant with relatives in Michigan, and faced with eviction from Columbia, the two women loaded Dunning's rats and a number of pet cats onto a trailer and headed for Michigan:

They set up shop in an old farm house and got on with their re-search. But that's where the community became involved.

'The relatives were appalled, here were these two women trying to do research in this dilapidated farm house," Heppner said. "The relatives went out and raised money to buy the house that is now the Scarab Club for them to work in.

Before long, the operation was outgrowing its new quarters and community support was gathered to purchase an old truck garage at 110 East Warren — the very building the foundation uses today. The MCF Meyer L. Prentis Center looks like anything but an old truck garage today. From outward appearances, it might have been built in the last 10 years.

"The building is like an onion," Heppner said. "It's been remodeled and remodeled. But the basement tells the tale."

In its early years, the foundation was called the Detroit Cancer Research Institute. The name was changed to Michigan Cancer Foundation in the 1950s when a number of other functions were gathered together under one roof to form a comprehensive center.

Ironically, Dunning didn't stay long with the institute she founded. During the early formative years, as the research facility grew into something larger than one woman's project, Dunning became disaffected and quit, taking her rats to Florida where she continued her research for many years. Descendants of the rats Dunning bred for research are considered very important even today, Heppner said.

Early in the history of the foundation, a group of local doctors decided that there should be a registry of cancer patients in the Detroit Metropolitan area. Today, the division of epidemiology is the descendant of that effort. Com-puters at MCF hold a record of every cancer patient in the three county area along with data on where the patients live, what type of cancer they have, what treatments they receive and other information that helps to develop a clear picture of the population and cancer risk in southeastern Michigan.

Another component of MCF is volunteers - more than 6,000 of them — working at everything from sewing to answering in-quiries on the 800-4-CANCER information line, to direct patient contact through the transportation and other patient service programs.

'By having a research component, we ultimately hope to develop the best possible service programs," Heppner said. "Our goal is to make everything a continuum. Our research programs run the gamut from the most basic to the most practical."

MCF is still a community based organization. While the largest single component of its $11.8 million operating budget last year came from government grants and contracts, $2.8 million came directly from public contributions and another $1.8 million came from the United Foundation.

The largest part of MCF's operating budget is spent on research and epidemiology, with 70 percent of the organization's money going to pay salaries. "Seventy percent of our budget is people," Heppner said. "People is what the whole thing is about."

Epidemiology — who gets cancer and why

Epidemiology is the study of the of breast and lung cancer in the causes of disease in a human population. The epidemiologist studies statistics on who got sick, and what environment that person lives in.

Dr. Marie Swanson is vice president for Epidemiology and Cancer Control at the Michigan Cancer Foundation. Her work involves a general population.

One of the services provided by the epidemiology department at MCF is the evaluation of specific geographic areas for higher cancer risk. Swanson explained that her team has investigated five areas in connection with toxic waste contamination in the past. "We have looked at specific communities when someone in the community asked us to, or the state health department asked," Swanson said. "Yes, we do find a higher incidence, however, none have shown an excess risk." Swanson explained that when the studies are broken down to very small geographic areas, the number of cases of cancer reported is so small that the data cannot be said to show any reliable increase in risk. However, throughout the entire metropolitan area, the incidence of lung cancer has been shown to be significantly higher than throughout the United States. Those figures hold for everyone, black, white, male and female.

the area," Swanson said, "Also possibly a higher exposure in the workplace." The MCF cancer data base includes information on who gets cancer, where they live, what they do for a living and what treatments they receive for their cancer. The collection of this information on a large number of people in a single data base allows researchers to evaluate many different aspects of the disease. The Epidemiology and Cancer Control Research Department is currently working on a project to focus on controlling the disease in the black population. Some aspects of the project will be to develop smoking cessation programs, breast cancer screening programs and cervical cancer screening programs. Another project underway in the department is a study of occupational cancer hazards under the umbrella of NIOSHA, the National Industrial and Occupational Safety and Health Administration. A third project focuses on the special problems of cancer in the aged, for the National Institute on Aging.

"We hope to find some common theory," said Wei. "This is the hope of immunology. We hope to find a marker for the immune system so we can activate the body to fight the cancer."

"Stimulating the immune system is a new innovative therapy, said Fred Miller.

The heart of their work is a close study of the cancerous and healthy cells in a tumor, looking for the interactions, how those interactions are affected by chemotherapy, and for a common link that would set all cancer cells apart from all healthy cells, thus providing a key to stimulate the immune system.

The Millers and Wei all came to MCF from Rhode Island, where they previously worked with Hepp-ner, also from Rhode Island.

Pathology

A second husband and wife team of Grosse Pointers runs the pathology lab at MCF. Drs. Irma and Jose Russo are originally from Argentina. They have been with MCF and have been Grosse Pointers for 13 years.

Pathology is the study of the nature of the disease itself. In contrast to the work of the Millers and Weis, who look at the interactions of cells, the Russos are interested in a detailed picture of what the disease consists of, how it starts and how it progresses.

"We take a multi-disciplinary, two prong approach," said Irma Russo. "We look at where and how cancer starts - what specific conditions are necessary.

There are many unanswered questions about the causes of cancer and the progression of the disease. If a group of people is exposed to a cancer causing agent, why will some of them contract the disease while others remain healthy?

"We must find out what causes cancer," Russo said. "We must find out how carcinogens work."

Research indicates that the causes of cancer are very complex. Several circumstances may be necessary to trigger the cancer cells, and the circumstances must occur at the right times in the person's life.

'Nuns have a high incidence of breast cancer," Russo said. She explained that research shows that women who have children when they are young have a lower incidence of breast cancer than women who don't have children at a young age. Nuns are a good example of a group of women who don't have children when they are young.

"It seems that the carcinogen must affect a young mammary gland," Russo said. "Child birth protects the woman. We must see if a woman can be protected by mimicking that with a hormone.

A large part of the Russos' research comes from an actual visual examination of cells. They use electron microscopes to study the structure of diseased cells. The pathology lab also examines tissue specimens from patients for diagnostic purposes.

massive data base tracking every individual who has been treated for cancer in the tri-county since 1978.

The cancer reporting system in place at the Michigan Cancer Foundation has provided 48 percent of the information on cancer in blacks used in national epidemiological research. The data base has also provided important information for research into the causes

Volunteers giving of themselves to help victims

Volunteers for the Michigan Cancer Foundation number in the thousands, according to Grosse Pointer Sharon Cure, manager of volunteers for the foundation. Their roles range from direct support to families of cancer patients through home visitation, to support of the patients themselves through the transportation program, or indirect support, as in the many women who participate in sewing groups.

Volunteers man the information lines of the 1-800-4-CANCER service, where any interested party can call on the telephone and learn more about the disease and its treatments.

Through the transportation program, volunteers pick up cancer patients at their homes and drive them to medical appointments.

The sewing groups include many women who have been donating their time to the assistance of others for more than 50 years.

One of the newest programs involves giving volunteers extensive training in family support. The volunteer will then go to the home of a patient one day a week and give the family "respite." The as-sistance may be as simple as being a sympathetic listener.

'Our volunteers have done many diverse jobs," said Cure. 'They used to average about 55 years old, but that age is coming down. We are also training more men as volunteers.

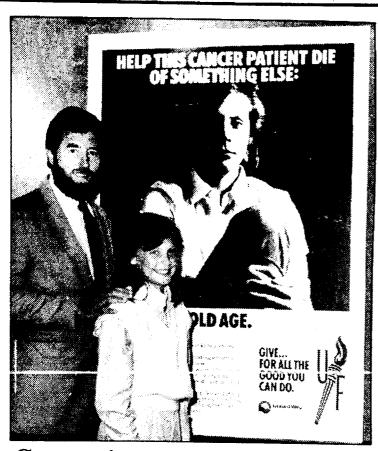

For information on volunteering for the Michigan Cancer Foundation, contact Cure at the foundation, 833-0710.

Campaign begins

Peter Schweitzer, Grosse Pointe resident and executive vice president/general manager at J. Walter Thompson-U.S.A./ Detroit, is serving as advertising group head for the United Foundation 1986 Torch Drive. JWT is the sole advertising agency for this year's campaign. Eleven-year-old Stephanie Wittrock was featured in one of the real-life situation ads produced by the company.

RSVP offers opportunities for seniors

Program of Wayne County began in 1973. At that time the challenge was not as much to recruit senior volunteers who were 60 or over but to engage sites that were interested in utilizing the skills of senior citizens.

It seemed as though the societal syndrome of shelving our senior citizens prevailed. However, after convincing several site-coordinators about the untapped resources of our RSVP volunteers, they did provide volunteer opportunities for our senior citizens.

The number of volunteer sites now numbers more than 200. The requests for volunteers far exceeds the supply even though there are more than 1,500 RSVP volunteers in Wayne County

The services at these sites vary. Volunteers work as tour guides, information specialists, tutors, patient escorts, receptionists, cleri-

Cottage nursing centers accredited

Cottage-Belmont Nursing Center, Harper Woods, and Cottage-Rose Villa Nursing Center, Roseville, have been awarded renewal of their Certificates of Accreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals (JCAH). The threeyear accreditation signifies that the nursing centers have met, and in some cases surpassed, the rigorous national standards for quality patient care. The nursing centers were judged by their performance, provision of equipment, and staffing by this organization.

To become accredited, Cottage-Belmont and Cottage-Rose Villa Nursing Centers voluntarily requested an on-site evaluation by JCAH surveyors who applied standards designed to further the objectives of quality patient care and the safety of the environment in which that care is provided. These national standards represent a consensus among health care professionals and are periodically up-dated to reflect changes in health care delivery.

Cottage-Belmont and Cottage-Rose Villa Nursing Centers provide skilled personal nursing ser-vices for the chronically ill, the handicapped, the convalescent patient, and for those with infirmities typical of old age. With a combined total of 276 beds, these nursing

Finalist

Bill Essman of Grosse Pointe Park, employed at the Westin Hotel in Renaissance Center, was one of 20 finalists in AAA Michigan's Sixth Annual Zero-Proof Mix-Off finals at Detroit's Roostertail recently. The competition drew 141 entries statewide. Winning drinks will be included in the 1986 Great Pretenders Party Guide, which will be distributed free to the public at all AAA Michigan offices statewide in early December. The drink contest promotes the sensible use of alcohol over the Christmas-New Year's holiday.

You just have received the best clue as to who the murderer might be, so you move into the library's secret closet to verify the clue. All around you, actors in 1920s costumes are dying to find out what you've just learned.

The magician pulls a rabbit out of his top hat and wishes merry Christmas to the guests. Everyone gleefully cheers for an encore. A grand antique table decked with a scrumptous Victorian Christmas dinner awaits guests in the main dining room.

The Rev. Smith and his wife recreate their life style of the 1840s as they come back to life in pictures and articles that grace the walls of what was their old home. A brief visit with them, and you learn how the town of Holland was first settled.

Murder Mystery Weekends, Victorian Christmas celebrations, historic homes — what do all these have in common? They are all in bed and breakfast establishments and they are all in Michigan.

Whether they are in homes with two to seven rooms, or in inns with more than a dozen rooms, B&Bs are fast becoming a popular alternative to hotels and motels. It can be in a private home, an old mansion turned into an inn, or even a rustic cottage by the lake — but each B&B offers something unique to its guests, making a bed and breakfast stay a tourist attraction in itself.

The unique offerings at each B&B make no two alike, giving each a flavor of its own. One example is the Montague Inn in Saginaw, a restored Georgian period mansion built in 1929. Here, Murder Mystery Weekends and the inn's exquisite gourmet restaurant are just added touches of what makes the Montague Inn elegant and a memorable B&B stay.

Upon entering the inn, you are surrounded by lavish Georgian period furnishings — spotless and elegant — yet with a homey atmosphere. Sunny bay windows draped with brightly patterned curtains and matching window seat covers, fabric covered testers blooming with flowers, and antique chairs with tapestry upholstry, all create a feeling of visiting a wealthy turn-of-the-century mansion.

And you are. Robert Montague, a Saginaw industrialist who pioneered what is now the Jergens Soap Company, built the 18-room mansion for his family. Though restored, many of the original features of the home remain intact. The library's secret sliding closets, presumed to have stored liquor during the days of prohibition, are now incorporated into the murder plot during the Murder Mystery weekend. Visitors take note that one of the remaining bathrooms belonged to Montague's son who had his bathroom done in University of Michigan colors maize and blue.

Michigan's B&B's offer mystery

Some of the guest rooms are small, pretty doll-house-like rooms, while one of the suites is so spacious that it holds a fireplace, two double beds, double baths, a dining room and a sitting room. The inn's parlor and newly added rooms can accommodate up to 150 for conferences and receptions.

Or, escape into the late 19th century, where there are no telephones, no television, no radios: at the Victorian Villa Guest House in Union City. You can wake up in a live-in Victorian museum.

At this 1876 guesthouse, every corner echos the lavish opulence of Victoriana — wooden armchairs ornamented with scrolls and cushioned in dark crimson velveteen, a century-old brass lamp imported from China, wall candle sconces, dark mahogany and rich oak beams throughout, Italian Carrara marble fireplaces with mantle glasses and antique lamps. The house is full of lamps: china parlor lamps, piano lamps, figural banquet lamps, organ lamps, sparking lamps, and a "camel" lamp from the Middle East.

A giant elk head is mounted in one of the parlors, indicative of the rage for stuffed trophies during Queen Victoria's reign. In the bed chambers, massive, commanding bed posts blend with rich hues of vesteryear.

Guests are welcome to a continental breakfast of pastries and rolls accompanied by Michigan fresh fruits. Afternoon tea is a special at this guest house. Weekend getaways may include Weekend getaways may include a Victorian Christmas celebration in November and December, complete with wassailing and a lavish dinner. In the summer, an old fashioned Victorian summer "Daze" invites guests to tent and lawn entertainment in the gardens, and in the fall, a Sherlock Holmes Weekend includes a murder mystery. For rates and times of special events call Ron or Sue Gibson at (517) 741-7383.

Though offering only three rooms to lodgers, the Parsonage of Holland preserves a history that dates back to the days of Reverend Hoogstra. He lived in the home which then was the Prospect Park Christian Reformed Church parsonage. With antiques and leaded glass windows, this cozy home shares with its guests newspaper clippings from 1916 onward which tell of the old days and of the then fledgling church.

Similarly, the Old Wind Inn, also in Holland and once a pioneer Indian mission, now rents five bed and breakfast rooms. The house was built in 1846 by Indians and Presbyterian missionaries. The Old Wing Mission later moved to the Grand Traverse Bay area. Along the walls of the restored old home are framed pictures telling the history of the Indians, the mission, the missionaries and the Dutch settlement. The host is an historian whose knowledge and hospitality will enrich the lives of guests.

Like the Montague, the Victorian Villa, and the Holland homes, most bed and breakfasts are housed in historical homes. However, some are geared for sheer vacation fun. such as the Norden Hem in Gavlord — an ultra modern bed and breakfast resort. Many of these bed and breakfast resorts come complete with swimming pools, hot tubs, and other recreational facilities. And many bed and breakfast homes, whether historical or modern, are located right on the lakeshore, providing water recreation for all ages. Whatever the facilities, each bed and breakfast is especially designed for those who are looking for historical ambience, often lowr prices, friendly atmosphere or a unique getaway. For more information on Michigan's more than 100 bed and breakfast accommodations, call the Michigan Travel Bureau at 1-800-5432-YES for the Michigan Bed and Breakfast and Historic Inns Directory.

Watch missing

A woman's gold watch was reported missing from her home on Charles in Grosse Pointe, police reports say.

Apparently the watch was taken during the week. The woman discovered its loss Oct. 4 when she came home on the weekend, according to the report.

Police are investigating a suspect who had access to the house earlier in the week. The watch had been in a basket on top of a dresser in the bedroom.

Prime time for senior citizens When seniors must care for parents

By Marian Trainor

It is likely that no group living in America today has benefited more from advances in health care and enlightened social programs than older citizens. They are living longer and enjoying better health. Advances in the medical field have added years and time for activity and productivity.

Not too many years ago people were deemed old at 50. It is now predicted that 50 will be but a halfway mark as longevity progresses upwards to 100 years of life.

Medical science and social programs, however, do not guarantee the blessing of a longer, happier life. It requires cooperation to make that dream come true.

There are rules of health to follow; good diet, exercise, prompt attention to early signs of illness. We have benefited from advances in such programs as Social Security and Medicaid, but these too require constant attention and monitoring to make sure they are not reduced or altered. We are lucky to have such representatives as Claude Pepper standing guard and such organizations as the National Council On Aging (NCOA) and American Association of Retired Persons (AARP), but the support of all is needed which means that when a proposal is made in Congress that would affect benefits adversely, it is time to write to your congressman and senator.

Good health, enough financial security to provide for needs and some luxuries - these are but two of the benefits that make the later years worth living.

There is another and that too demands effort on our part. As the years go by opportunities for social contacts lessen. Grown children are involved with raising their families and sometimes have moved to other areas for job advancements; old friends may no longer be with us or may have moved to warmer climates.

That means it is up to us to make new friends. It's no fun being a social zero

Happily in most areas, and for certain in the Grosse Pointes, there is ample opportunity to join activities and form new friendships. The War Memorial, the Neighborhood Club, Food and Friendship are but three organizations that provide opportunities for classes, lectures, recreational activities and sponsored trips.

health maintenance, financial management, socializing with others have been the principal problems with which older citizens have had to deal. Now there is a new development.

"Old" used to be the top of life's chart. But since we are living longer, the designation "old" has slid down a notch to make room for those who are classed as "old-old" or elderly, those who are living into their 80s and 90s

This fine line of age delineation has a greater significance than to create an aura of extended middle age by adding another link in the aging cycle. In many instances, the old person who thought his or her days of responsibility for someone else were over must now accept the fact that they may have the care of an elderly mother or father who can no longer care for themselves.

Having parents live to be grandparents and great-grandparents is a joy, but with those added yea.'s come infirmities. The clock runs down. The years take their toll.

What to do? The first thought may be to bring them into your home. It is a loving thought, but it may not be the best one for them. Doug Manning, in a down-to-earth but compassionate book "The Nursing Home Dilemma," tells how he vowed that no relative of his would ever go to a nursing home, but when his mother-in-law moved into the family house, it became evident that he and his wife could never meet her physical needs, much less her emotional or social needs.

Like many others it became necessary for them to make a decision on what was best for their mother and not on the guilt they might feel in not being able to care for her themselves. They found that love that does what people need instead of what they want is the best. It would be better if parents could remain healthy and self-sustaining until they died. If it doesn't happen, then any alternative is not desirable, whether it be assuming their care or placing them in a nursing home.

It is important that the person who is going to be placed in a home be given a clear explanation of the reasons for the decision and to give an opportunity to work through to reality and acceptance of the decision

When choosing a home, major decisions are cleanliness, care, food, programs, entertainment and attitude of staff. But there is another consideration. Is the home close enough for frequent visiting? A nursing home is not a hospital. Such homes are not in existence to remove responsibility from the family or to replace the role of family in the live of the patient.

In his book designed to help fa-milies make positive decisions about nursing homes, Manning says: "Families are the link between the resident and the outside world. The home can care for physical needs far better than we can, but family can offer the continuing relationship with family and the continuing support needed for the resident to maintain a sense of security and purpose.

Much has been written about bad nursing homes. Sadly some of it is true, but most of them, according to the author, do a good job. Many things could be improved. None are perfect.

Part of the problem comes from high expectations.

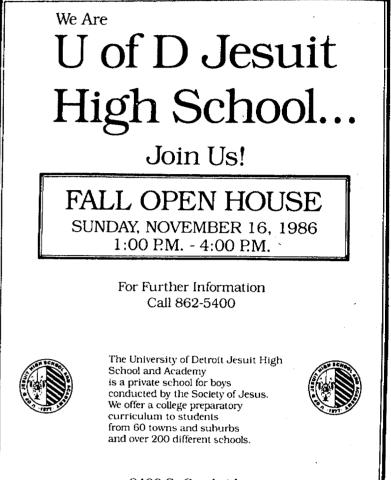

We need to understand that these facilities have limitations.

Sometimes people in a nursing home seem to change. They be-come demanding and selfish. There are reasons. The main one is they begin to live on a survival level. People who have been selfreliant and secure suddenly lose their health. The insecurity and pain drive them to survive. Surviving is always selfish.

Some time spent with an elderly loved one, pointing out what value they have been to us can do wonders to overcome the depression, the anger that is sometimes felt by nursing home occupants. We can tell them how proud we are to be part of their lives. We can tell them they are needed.

They are needed. They are still learning and we can learn by being part of the process.

Schools to develop smoking ban policy

By Nancy Parmenter Students at the two Grosse Pointe high schools will have a short reprieve while the board ponders a smoking ban at the campuses. At the Oct. 13 meeting, the board accepted a report from a nosmoking committee, but did not adopt a no-smoking policy.

It's a sure bet there will be one within a couple of months, however. "The only question is not 'whether,' but 'when,' " said Su-perintendent John Whritner. He said the board and administration will concentrate on developing some policy statements to clarify the unanimous agreement that high school students shouldn't be smoking on school grounds.

Currently there is a designated smoking area at each high school - in defiance of state law. It is likely that at the beginning of the winter semester the designated area will disappear and students will have to leave campus to smoke.

The schools hope that the ban will cause the students to stop smoking rather than go somewhere else. But several board members have expressed doubts about the efficacy of anti-smoking education programs.

"I have a problem with $10,000 for no-smoking education," said board secretary Carl Anderson at the meeting. The money was

Molotov cocktail found by passerby

A Molotov cocktail burning in the bushes outside St. Clare of Montefalco School was extinguished by a passerby Oct. 4. The incen-diary device was placed in the bushes near the sidewalk at the corner of Charlevoix and Audubon and was not close enough to the school to injure anyone, Grosse Pointe Park police said.

"It baffles everyone," said police Lt. William Furtaw. "It made no sense.

Furtaw said the department is not looking at the incident as a prank, but cannot figure out why someone would ignite a bottle of gasoline, then leave it upright and too far away to do any damage.

Because the bottle was left upright, it would have burned itself out in any case. "The terrible thing about a Molotov cocktail is when you throw it," Furtaw said. "Then the glass breaks and the flame spreads.'

recommended by the no-smoking committee, but has not been allocated by the board. Students seem to share the doubts. A group of smokers at North last week was vociferous about their intention to keep smoking in spite of any ban. "They can't tell us to quit. It's our lungs," one student said. Senior Mike Kirouac said he is 18 and resents have a rule enforced on him but not on teachers. He said he probably won't pay any attention to the ban.

The board does have the legal right to tell even 18-year-olds not to smoke on school property, ac-cording to President Vincent LoCicero. "Any restaurant or other property owner can say that," he said. 'We would have the right to tell that to the teachers as well, although we're not going to go that far.

Several of the smokers said they would just leave school grounds or smoke in the bathrooms. "There are too many places to hide," one student said. "The school can't find them all.'

Senior Maureen McKenzie predicted a lot of suspensions if the policy is instated. "It's not something these kids do to aggravate their parents," she said. "It's an addiction."

McKenzie said the number of smokers at North has dropped dramatically during her years there. "If you'd been here three years ago, you wouldn't have believed Detroit's own world trade center may not overpower the skyline, but it has been around much longer than the New York superstructure. Now celebrating its 60th birthday, the original Old World Market at the International Institute will bring together under one roof the crafts and folk arts of some 30 ethnic groups.

Begun during the Depression as a means for foreign-born women to earn money by selling their native half what it was as late as 1980. The outbreaks are more concentrated in preschool children rather than in school age children as in the past. Unfortunately, the risk of complications including brain damage and death, are highest in the preschool age group. All states require a child to have a measles vaccine before entering school, but there is no way of guaranteeing younger children are immunized and many of them are not. The CDC reports that in some urban areas, only about 50 percent of two-year-olds are immunized, which is not enough to stop spread of the disease.

If you haven't shopped for a car in a few years, you're going to be surprised at how much a lot of so-called economy cars cost today.

Saabs consistently deliver better perfor-

CCS plans open house

Metropolitan area residents will have an opportunity to enjoy a free sampling of both the visual and performing arts on Sunday, Oct. 19, when the College of Art and Design and the Institute of Music and Dance present 'Open House 1986' at their Center for Creative Studies campus in Detroit's University Cultural Center.

This year's edition of the annual Open House will spotlight the work of the faculty, guest artists and students at the two schools in a fivehour program of ongoing demon-strations, lectures, rehearsals, workshops, film and video shows, music recitals and dance presentations, and jazz music featuring college faculty members Keith Vreeland and Harry Smallenburg.

There will also be a special exhibit of original student works in Crafts, Fine Arts, Graphic Communication, Industrial Design and Photography at the college. The Sarkis Galleries, currently hosting "Women Look at Women," a Library of Congress traveling show of great American women photographers, will also be open, as will Underground 245, a gallery space that is managed by the College's Student Government.

Headlining the many profes-sional artists participating in the day's program at the institute will be concert pianist Leszek Bartkiewicz, Aetna artist-in-residence at the school, dancer-choreographer Clifford Fears, and classical ballet dancer and teacher Joanne Danto, each of whom will be seen in special presentations.

ONE IN A SERIES OF PUBLIC SERVICE ADVERTISEMENTS

Saint John Hospital and its health care partners: New services from a trusted name in health care

Since 1953, Saint John Hospital has stood for excellent health care and concern for the value of human life in the communities it serves.

For many people, Saint John Hospital is a trusted name in medical care. And now Saint John Hospital has five health care partners: St. Clair Dialysis Center, The Oxford Institute, St. Clair Ambulatory Services, Affiliated Health Services, and Harrison Community Hospital.

THESE PARTNER ORGAN-IZATIONS offer a broader variety of services than just hospitalbased care, according to Glenn A. Wesselmann, president and chief executive officer of St. Clair Health Corporation, the parent corporation. "Together we can provide a comprehensive array of services for all age groups," Mr. Wesselmann explains.

"We offer health care for people from before they're born through their senior years," he points out.

Meeting a Community's Total Health Care Needs

Saint John Hospital's partners share its reputation for quality, providing care in facilities throughout the community.

"WE HAVEN'T FORGOT-TEN that community service is why we're here," Mr. Wesselmann states. "For example, Saint John has the east side's only newborn intensive care unit. We've combined advanced technology and medical care with an oldfashioned concern for the way a mother feels when her baby is sick."

"As a teaching hospital, Saint John attracts high quality physicians," Mr. Wesselmann states "Of our more than 400 medical staff members, 140 are on the faculty of Wayne State University Medical School, and 325 are boardcertified in their specialties."

"Throughout the hospital, we like to treat patients as our guests," says Patrick C. Wrenn, chief operating officer for Saint John Hospital. "We have a special Caring program for all employees so that a caring approach comes across to our patients," he emphasizes.

Mr. Wrenn says that Saint John Hospital is serving the community in other ways as well. "If you need a doctor, you can call our Physician Referral Network."

"For your convenience, one of our pharmacies stays open until midnight," adds Mr. Wesselmann. "And we've just introduced a nanny service for new mothers."

Unit-By-Unit Renovation Under Way

The recently opened unit for new mothers is the latest example of the unit-by-unit renovation taking place adjacent to the Concentrated Care Building.

"Saint John Hospital continues its planned course of growth and development for the individuals and families of our communities, while staying one of the busiest hospitals in southeast Michigan," states Patrick C. Wrenn, the hospital's executive vice president and chief operating officer.

Care and Treatment for Our Neighborhood

As a positive step in improving the Moross Road and Mack Avenue area, the St. Clair Health Corporation (Saint John Hospital's parent organization) is planning to redevelop the Pointe Plaza Shopping Center.

A number of possibilities are under consideration for the site, including upgraded shopping and offices.

New landscaping has already been added along the parking lot and on the Mack Avenue traffic islands.

"AS PART OF ITS RESPONSIBILITY to the community, St. Clair Health Corporation is concerned with the way our surrounding environment is maintained," says president Glenn Wesselmann. "We like to be a good neighbor."

"In these and other ways, we're expressing our commitment to the community," Mr. Wesselmann points out. "Just as we've joined our organizations to form a partnership providing personal, professional care, we'd like to continue being a trusted partner in your family's health care."

Saint John Hospital has the only newborn intensive care unit on the east side, helping to give parents of high-risk babies peace of mind.

any other, at any symphony from Detroit to Boston. The conductor raises his baton - and music comes forth. A few bars, then he motions for silence.

"This passage must be lighter," he says. The musicians return to the beginning of the passage and try it again. But this isn't the Detroit Symphony and most of the musicians have other careers in the daytime. This is the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra, some 65 musicians who play because they love music - not because it is their job. The Grosse Pointe Symphony will open its 1986-87 season on Oct. 26 with a concert that will include pieces by Berlioz, Mozart, Saint-Saens, Ravel and Tchaikowsky -as well as a special piece that will see its Michigan premiere, by East Detroiter Lawrence Singer. The membership of the orchestra may be non-professional, but its repertoire is anything but elementary.

"I try to play the same types of programs that they play at the DSO," said Felix Resnick, conductor and music director of the orchestra. "If people don't want to go downtown, they can stay right here for a concert." The Grosse Pointe Symphony plays the five concerts of its main season at Parcells Middle School on Sunday afternoons. The group also plays a traditional Christmas concert at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club and has played at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Summer Music Festival.

Resnick is a professional musician. He plays violin in the DSO and is also conductor-music director of the Birmingham-Bloomfield Orchestra

Resnick says he works with the community orchestras because he

"I've always loved doing it,'' he said. "It's another part of my musical activities. This is a more rewarding task. Here I can shape a concert and have it performed the way I see it. We (Resnick and the orchestra) almost always end up seeing eye to eye. It is challenging and exciting."

The members of the symphony come from all professions and backgrounds. Most are Grosse Pointers, but others come from the surrounding cities.

Gerald Stoetzer is an attorney, but in the evenings, he puts aside his legal briefs to play the violin. He has played with the Grosse Pointe Symphony for the past 32 seasons.

"It's a hobby," he said. "I hadn't done anything serious with music since high school. Oh. I could pick up the violin and scratch out a tune for the kids. But then I picked it up again and joined the symphony at (Continued on Page 2B)

GROSSE POINTE NEWS

GP Symphony musicians make music for pleasure . . .

(Continued from Page 1B) the suggestion of my wife, Muriel. She was in a women's club that was making cookies for the rehearsals.

Admission to the orchestra is by audition. Resnick evaluates potential new members once a year. Stoetzer made the grade then found the musical expectations of the group surprisingly high.

That first rehearsal was the longest rehearsal of my life," Stoetzer said. "It was the first time I had ever played full symphonic music."

Members of the orchestra study the music on their own before they come to rehearsal, then try to play up to Resnick's expectations.

'You have to be able to keep out of the stern scrutiny of the conductor," Stoetzer said. "He'll say, 'I heard an A-flat,' and everyone says to themselves, 'I hope he didn't mean me.' "

Betty Peterson, assistant concertmaster of the orchestra, says she plays because she loves it.

"I love music," she said. "I went 20 years without playing, then I just went back to it." Peterson started playing the violin when she was 6 years old. When she was 16, she gave the instrument up to pursue other interests.

"When I went back to playing (with the Grosse Pointe Symphony) I started to meet people and got back into studying," she said. She has studied under Misha Mischakoff recently, "Now I teach violin and play with a quartet at weddings. I also do special church music.'

Trumpeter Paul Miller joined the orchestra at the urging of his sister, who was playing flute with the group.

"I participated in instrumental music all through high school," Miller said. "Those grades got me through sometimes."

Miller is a student at Wayne State University and is currently doing his student teaching as an instrumental music teacher. He says he hopes to use his orchestral experience with the Grosse Pointe Symphony in his teaching career.

Pam Ford, manager of the orchestra and a violist, joined the or-chestra in 1965 when she graduated from high school. Today she is a cardiovascular clinical specialist, but she has maintained contact with her music.

"I didn't want to give up my music," she said. "I enjoy playing. There is always something besides my job. It's a good sideline to relax after work.

Part of Resnick's role as conductor is to instruct the orchestra members in playing better. He is assisted in this by the concertmaster, Derek Francis, also a musician with the DSO.

"I try to pass along my experience of having played orchestral music for many years," Resnick said. "That helps them."

"He has the most gentle way of chiding us," Stoetzer said.

For the opening concert, Edith Diggory, winner of the 1985 Metropolitan Opera District Auditions, will be the principal soloist, singing two selections of Mozart opera. However, a second soloist on the program will be Clement Barone, piccolo, of the DSO. Barone will be playing the original piece by Lawrence Singer.

Singer's composition is written in the Baroque style.

'Larry Singer and I have spoken about doing this piece many times," Resnick said. "It seemed to fit into this program.

One of the benefits of playing in the symphony is contact with professional musicians, according to Stoetzer.

"One of the most exciting things is, every now and then when we're gram, hosted for this concert by short handed, DSO people come in to help. It's flattering to sit with these people and my playing has benefited because of it," Stoetzer said.

Five members of the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra have "graduated" so to speak, to play with professional orchestras. They are Darrel Barnes, Robert Barnes, Mario DiFiore, Edward Sauve and Robert Howes. These musicians play with the Philadelphia Symphony, the Boston Symphony, the Detroit Symphony and the Cincinnati Symphony. In addition, Stephen Eliason is currently playing with the Orchestre National de Lyon (France) which is currently touring the United States and will be playing in Ann Arbor on Nov. 11.

The Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra was founded in 1954 by Grosse Pointe realtor and violinist Thomas Nester. Annually, the group awards at least one scholarship in Nestor's name. The recipient or recipients play with the orchestra the year they receive the scholarship.

The Grosse Pointe Symphony Women's Association supports the orchestra in audience building and fundraising. Mary Baynert is president of that organization. The symphony is also supported by the Grosse Pointe Symphony Association, led by George Vincent.

Concerts are held at 3 p.m. on Sundays at Parcells Middle School. Tickets are $6 for adults and $3 for students. Season tickets are $25 for adults and $12.50 for students. Tickets are available by calling 886-6244 or may be purchased at the box office on concert day.

AAUW to look at the insurance crisis at October meeting

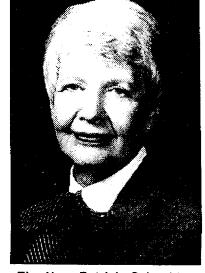

"We're sorry, your insurance has been cancelled."

This news has been received by police departments, recreation areas, day care centers and even insurance companies and lawyers. If insurance has not been cancelled, the cost has increased from 100 percent to 900 percent.

Most hospitals in Michigan require doctors to carry $200,000 lia-bility insurance. Some doctors ask patients to take unnecessary laboratory tests as evidence in case of suit. Individuals with "high risk" (history of suits) may be turned away by doctors.

Manufacturers and small busi-nesses find the cost of liability insurance a more serious threat than taxes or government regulations.

Should there be state government control of insurance rates or statute of limitations on liability suits? What is the answer? Who will pick up the cost? How will it

Churches

St. Paul Ev. Lutheran is 115 years young

By Elsa Frohman Esther Peters remembers when many of the classes at St. Paul Evangelical Lutheran School were conducted in German. She attended the school through the eighth grade.

'My earliest memories are of the spire of the church, the poor box on the wall, and the organ in the balcony," she told members of the St. Paul congregation during the celebration of the church's 115 anniversary last Sunday.

Peters has been a member of St. Paul's all of her life. She grew up in the church when it was located in Detroit at the corner of Joseph Campau and Jay streets. She attended the church school, which was closed in 1930, and she stayed with the church when it moved to Grosse Pointe in 1950.

Peters and four other long-standing members of the congregation gave an oral history of the church as part of the 115th anniversary.

St. Paul Evangelical Lutheran Church was founded in 1871 when a group of families asked to split off from Trinity Lutheran Church in Detroit, now known as Historic Trinity. St. Paul in its turn was the parent church for St. Luke, Christ, Good Hope and Martin Luther Lutheran churches.

The original congregation was mostly German and church busi-ness was conducted in that language. The church operated a small, four-room school that covered first through eighth grade until the economic conditions of the Great Depression forced its clos-

Peters, who is well-known in Grosse Pointe for her travel programs at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, remembers her years in the school with pride.

'It was a good school because when our students went into public school, they were always promoted to the next grade," she said.

Of all the ways the church influenced her life, however, she counts the church music as most important.

'It was the music,'' she said. "The church organist. I became a public school music teacher and a church organist. I lay a lot of claim to the organist we had when I was a child.

Harold Fick told of the years of decline that led the church to find a new home in Grosse Pointe. As the members of the congregation moved out of the Detroit-neighborcongregation decided to sell its building and look for a new home. "Those were the wilderness years," Fick said. "I'll call it the decline and the rise again of the church. It was a time most significant to our church." During World War II, the church had more than 100 men and women serving in the armed services. This further decimated the attendance and membership. "In the early 40s, they decided they could no longer operate at that location," Fick said.

However, during World War II, building was restricted and a new church could not be constructed. The congregation moved through several school locations for Sunday services, staying the longest at Jackson Intermediate School.

As the congregation looked for a new home, several sites were rejected, Fick said. The first site considered was Chalmers and Frank-fort. Later, the group looked at the the intersection of Chalfonte. The new building cost $250,000 in 1950. It was located in an undeveloped area of Grosse Pointe Farms.

The Rev. and Mrs. Charles Sandrock, left, and the Rev. and Mrs. Philip Wahl pose with the cake, baked in the shape of the original St. Paul Evangelical Church, at the 115th anniversary celebration last Sunday evening. The Sandrocks came from Columbus, Ohio, for the party. The Rev. Sandrock was pastor of the church for 28 years, 1948-1976. The Rev. Wahl is current senior pastor at the church.

The church members were so eager to move their new building that each Sunday, after attending services at the school, they would drive to the building site to review the progress, Fick said. Leonard Schim spoke of the years from 1956 to 1968 when the congregation went through an expansionary period and added its education building. The group raised $253,000 in pledges and bonds to build the addition. Bernard Schenk spoke of the years from 1969 to 1980 when the congregation celebrated its centennial and hired its first associate pastor

Carol Halpin briefly wrapped up the historical presentation with a look at the last five years, when the church had its first female vicker.

Columbus, Ohio. He was leader of the St. Paul congregation for 28 years, from 1948 to 1976. He presided over the move to Grosse Pointe, and through the building and expansion period of the church.

The celebration included a catered banquet in the church fellowship hall, the "Verbal Tapestries" by the church members and a musical performance by "The Pointe Classic," a quartet of church members.

Afterward, a cake baked in the shape of the original church building on Joseph Campau was cut in the Fireside Room.

Chairman of the 115th anniver-sary celebration was Helen Fick. Other anniversary activities planned for the remainder of the year include a tour of Historic Trinity on Nov. 16 and a special Thanksgiving Eve Service on Nov. 25, when the congregation's Thanksgiving Offering, being collected currently, will be presented

The Pastor's Corner

One of the absolute certainties of life for each of us is that it ends. We know that. But have you prepared for your death?

If you do, you will be doing a great service to your loved ones. You will rest easier for the remainder of your days knowing that the important event will be managed in an orderly fashion. If you don't, others will have to do your job for you. Often it will be too late to take the most advantageous course of action. Often this postponed process will have to be done by relatives and friends under the stress of bereavement. Often what you have failed to resolve will cause conflict later among those who survive you.

Here are some practical steps to take to be good stewards of your life's conclusion.

Make a will. Have a list of your property and other assets you can pass on to your family. Are there others, including institutions such as your church, which you would wish to support by a bequest? To the greatest extent possible, talk these matters over with your spouse and children. This is a time for open and in-depth communication.

Write down the following information and put it in a convenient place known and available to the immediate family, and also give them copies:

- 1. Name in full
- Social Security number
- 3. Military service number 4. Date and place of birth 5. Father's full name
- Mother's full name, including maiden name
- 7. Memberships in clubs, church, etc.
- 8. Append curriculum vitae if available
 9. Newspapers which should be notified of your death
- 10. Name, address and telephone number of your lawyer 11. Name, address and telephone number of your em-
- ployer
- 12. Name, address and telephone number of your im-mediate family; or someone who will be responsible for your estate and funeral preparations
- 13. Banks where you have accounts and/or safe deposit boxes; location of safe deposit box key
- 14. Location of will and trusts
- 15. Location of insurance policies (include descriptions of each and names of companies)
- 16. Location of securities and name and address of broker
- 17. Location of deed, mortgage agreement 18. Funeral Preparations:
- a. Name of your church
- b. Funeral Director
- c. Will there be calling hours? Where? At home,
- church or funeral home?
- d. Will your body be present at funeral or will your
- remains be cremated before the service?
- e. Will the burial service include Eucharist?
- f. Preference of appropriate scripture passages and hymns

Puppet brings message of God's love

The Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church, 19950 Mack Avenue, is pleased to announce the appearance of Gail Wenos and Ezra D. Peabody on Sunday evening, Oct. 19, at 7:30 p.m.

Gail Wenos, brilliant young ventriloquist, and her little "woodenheaded" side-kick, Ezra, form a unique combination which God is using today to speak to people of all ages from 8 to 80.

Wenos has been a singer and traveled with the Johnny Mann Singers; has appeared in concerts and at conventions all over the United States; is a recognized performer in national television; a recording artist and has delighted hundreds of audiences throughout the world.

Book Review Group

Myrtle Everett will review the national best seller, "The Soong Dynasty" by Sterling Seagrave at the Book Review Group of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church on Tuesday, Oct. 21, at 1 p.m. in the church lounge. She will be introduced by Dorothea Bush, group chairman.

This book is the first full behindthe-scenes account of the amazing Soong family whose wealth and power dominated China and the American policy toward Asia in the 20th century. There were six siblings in this family, two of whom are very well known: Soong Ching-Ling (Madame Sun Yat Sen) and May-Ling Soong (Madame Chiang Kai-Shek).

Everett and her husband, Dr. Robert Everett are no strangers to China, having gone there many times, he about 20 and she about eight. They have formed China-U.S. Exchange, a non-profit corporation, whose purpose is to arrange visits between groups of qualified professionals in China to help the American and Chinese form friendships and to understand each other and their professions. These include groups of eight to 78 dentists, physicians, psychologists, radiologists, chemists, lawyers, business managers, and others. The Everetts consider this a minimission that arranges exchange conferences between American professionals and their Chinese counterparts.

Visitors are welcome at both the review and the luncheon preceding it at noon in fellowship hall. Reservations are requested for the luncheon and can be made by calling the church office at 882-5330. Child care is available if you notify the church office.

Bits and pieces . . .

About a year ago, Grosse Pointe North's athletic program lost a good friend. He was David C. Neal, an avid sports fan and in particular, a tireless booster of North's sports activities. He tried never to miss a game, whether or not his sons, Chris and David, played.

This week, it was decided that in memory of David Neal, North High will establish what will be an annual football award for the most outstanding member of the Norse-men's specialty teams. The trophy will be purchased with funds collected in Neal's memory after his death last fall.

North athletic director Tom Gauerke and football coach Frank Sumbera wanted to do something that would honor Neal and his family for years to come. They concluded that an award in Neal's name to a member of the special teams would be most appropriate, since each of his sons excelled on the specialty squads in his football years at North.

The first David C. Neal Special Teams Trophy will be awarded at North's fall sports awards night, Wednesday, Nov. 12, at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium.

It's Homecoming season, so guess who's going back to watch her old high school's 1986 Homecoming Game? I'll be at Roseville High Field on Oct. 18, watching undefeated Detroit Servite take on Holy Cross. Why? Well, for one thing, it'll be a pleasure to sit up in the stands for once and enjoy a game, instead of having to stand in the mud, dodg-ing football players and scribbling notes like crazy. For another, this year's Panther team has already won more games - six - thanthe teams did in my whole four years there, so it should be a great game to watch. Also, members of the classes of 1975, 1976 and 1977 have promised to be there for a sort of informal Servite alumni party. See you there, Servite fans.

A vision in maize and blue.

That, no doubt, is the best way to describe University Liggett School athletic director, tennis coach and rabid Bo-Booster Robert Wood. Wood had promised to culminate weeks of good-natured UM-MSU jousting with athletic department secretary Reba Torongo by showing up at the office this week decked out in Michigan's colors in honor of the Wolverines' 27-6 win over the Spartans last Saturday.

St. Clare volleyball coach Larry Hines instructs his squad at practice.

'Best coach ever' wins St. Clare's 300th

By Peggy O'Connor

St. Clare's athletic director calls Larry Hines one of the best coaches he's ever seen. Hines' charges, the members of the 16-0 varsity volleyball squad at St. Clare of Montefalco School, simply call him "coach." One thing's for sure: the slightly-built, crewcutted mentor of the 16-year-old program can be called the winningest coach in the history of Catholic League volleyball.

Hines' squad cemented that status for him last week, when it won its 300th volleyball game. Since the program began in 1973, Hines' teams have racked up an unprecedented 303 victories, while losing just 26 times.

Those are pretty amazing statistics for a guy who hadn't even seen a volleyball game when he was first asked to coach. "I started coaching when I was in the Marines in 1960. Some of the NCOs' and officers' wives put together a team and they asked me to coach. I told them I would, even though at the time, I didn't even know what the ball looked like,' Hines recalls. By 1971, Hines was employed as a magnetic particle inspector at Beaver Precision Inc., and his wife, Fusako, was playing volleyball in a St. Clair Shores women's league. They ended up asking him to coach, then when the opportunity came up to assist Rick Zara-nek when he started the St. Clare grade school program in 1973, Hines grabbed district and regional/east-side championship, and accumulated a host of other records.

Hines says he really doesn't think much about St. Clare's success in terms of numbers. It's more of a habit, which in turn attracts more kids to the pro-gram. And a fresh influx of eager volleyball players to any program almost always spells success, Hines says.

"I'm really most proud of the fact that we've got four teams playing, that's a first in the CYO," he adds.

Hines likes the girls to start playing volleyball as soon as possible. There's currently a second grader playing on the No. 2 sixth grade team. "And boy, she's a little hustler," Hines says. He'll take players as young as kindergarten, if they want to play, he adds. school volleyball player.

"We set a standard for our kids and we want them to meet it. And we keep raising that standard so that the girls are more than ready to play high school volleyball when the time comes. We teach them to play on a high school level when they are very young. That's the key to our success, I think," Hines says. And it results in some rather surprising achievements, at least from the point of view of St. Clare's opponents, who don't expect tiny fifth graders to come up with high school-type "dinks" for points.

Those tiny fifth graders have gone on to volleyball success at South, North and in college. The busy Hines - who is also South Lake's varsity volleyball coach -

One of those St. Clare graduates is Chris Schulte, whom Hines calls the most exceptional player in his memory.

"He's just a great coach," says Schulte, now a South High sophomore. "I've been with him since fifth grade, he taught me everything about volleyball."

Schulte says she thinks St. Clare has been successful because of Hines' development program. "He works with kids from when they are really little . . and when they get up in the fifth or sixth grade, he lets their little sisters sit and watch and learn. And pretty soon, they want to play," she adds.

As for Hines, he'll continue to coach St. Clare "as long as the man upstairs permits." He's set sort of a goal for himself: to establish six or seven teams at St. Clare.

Reba, who has her corner of the ULS world decorated in green and white, said before the game that no matter what the outcome was, State is still the better football team . . . a nice sentiment, but one probably not echoed this week by a member of the Grosse Pointe News staff (who shall remain nameless) who also happens to be a State product.

But then, Reba probably didn't lose $5 on the game.

Speaking of North, did you know that the Norsemen haven't had a single sub-.500 football season under coach Sumbera?

While the gridders have been drawing attention for winning 22 consecutive regular season games and setting offensive records of all kinds, the truest test of a successful football program these days is finishing each season with a winning record. And if you don't believe that, ask veteran South coach Russ Hepner, who makes a winning season – that's 5-4 folks, and it's tougher than it looks — the No. 1 goal for his Blue Devils each year.

Since 1981, the Norsemen have finished at 5-4, 6-3, 7-2, 7-2, 9-0 and are currently 6-0 under Sumbera. You can throw in all the unbeaten strings and consecutive shutout quarters you want to, but the statistic which shows how consistent your program is is the one that counts.

Aside to aspiring collegiate goalie and former South High standout Bill Tecos, currently recovering from knee surgery: Hang in there, Bill. Just think of this as another two-man advantage you have to kill.

Better late than never, I always say.

Only this time, I'm pretty late in saving it I found out just last week that Margaret Spindler had stepped down from her athletic director's spot at Our Lady Star of the Sea High School in order to concentrate on coaching and teaching at Star's grade school.

So when I called Star's "new" athletic director, Julie Uryasz, on another matter last week, I naturally congratulated her on her new title. Then, like a good little journalist, I politely inquired as to when the move had taken place, thinking that since I hadn't heard about it until that day, it had probably occurred too recently for Star to let us know.

"Uh, last January," Uryasz told me, sounding a little puzzled.

Oh, well. I'm just glad she hadn't been elected pope or found a cure for the common cold or anything like that.

He took over as head coach in 1975 and St. Clare took over as the Catholic Youth Organization's top team. Since 1977, the Falcons have captured every league,

'When we start them out now, we like them to get the idea behind volleyball, to learn to like the game and enjoy playing. We baby the younger ones, telling them to try hard and to learn to do it right. When you do it right, you have fun.

That's pretty much our philosophy." His approach to coaching is simple: have fun in practice, but when the game starts, it's all business. "That's where you need to have discipline. We want the girls to know what they are doing out there. Sure, when the ball comes to you it's an individual concept, but after that, it's a team game and we want the girls to learn the discipline needed to play a team game.

The result is obvious, in terms of St. Clare's record. What isn't so obvious to outsiders, Hines says, is that Falcon spikers have as much dedication, determination and desire as the average high

South sports Devils make it two in a row

By Matt Aldrich South High

The South High varsity football team won its second straight game last Friday, beating Port Huron, 23-6

South's offensive attack was led by senior Dave Arnold, who had two TDs. One was a 31-yard interception, and the other was a 33yard pass from senior tailback Duff Berschback.

Berschback also had a fine night, rushing for 123 yards in 23 carries. Senior Gene Lambert contributed to the offense by rushing for 74 yards.

The third touchdown of the game came from junior quarterback Bryan Jones in the third quarter. Jones also completed two other passes, one to Berschback and another to junior Mike Paull for a 32-yard total.

The other scorers in the game were juniors Doug Lucas with a 28yard field goal and Roger Hunwick with a two-point conversion. The offense got good blocking from senior Dave Fannon, and juniors Joe Reynolds, Ian Thompson and Dale Wilson.

The Blue Devil defense again tormented its opponents by holding them to just 89 yards rushing and 48 yards passing. The defense only permitted the Big Reds four first downs, the first of which didn't come until early in the fourth quarter.

South's next confrontation is at Mount Clemens this Saturday, Oct. 18, at 1 p.m.

The freshman gridders recorded their third straight tie, the latest against Anchor Bay on Oct. 8, 6-6. The frosh stand at 2-1-3 for the season.

The Blue Devils' offensive attack was led by freshman Mike Montagne, who rushed 20 times for a total of 80 yards, including a game-tying 32 yard touchdown in the fourth quarter. Because of muddy field conditions, the offense was unable to complete the twopoint conversion play.

The Devil defense played extremely well in the game against Anchor Bay.

Kickers fare well

South's varsity soccer team defeated Fitzgerald, 3-1, then played to its second 0-0 tie with North High this season, in action last week.

Senior Jeff VanGeeste scored twice and sophomore Tom Witt added one goal against Fitzgerald. Coach John Case called the contest with rival North a good, exciting game, despite the lack of scoring. The defense played well, he added, as did juniors Dave Morinelli and Jeff Johnston.

The JV squad lost to North, 2-1, as Jim Ryszewski was the lone goal scorer. "The whole team played really well ... I really think we outplayed North," said freshman Anthony DeLuca.

The freshmen won their game, topping De La Salle, 2-1. DeLuca scored both goals, one off a free kick.

The varsity and JV faced Mount Clemens (after press time) this week and the varsity will go on to the regional finals this Saturday, Oct. 18. (By Heidi Heilman)

Netters sweep

South's varsity tennis team was successful last week, winning each of its meets. The girls topped Grand Blanc, 7-0, on Oct. 6, then managed to outlast five three-set matches and an aggressive University Liggett School team to beat top-ranked ULS, 4-3.

No. 1 singles player Mary Wachter lost to Dawn Martin, 6-1, 6-4; Cathy Wachter fell to Pam Ali at No. 2 singles, 6-2, 4-6, 4-6; Katy Turner defeated Elena Hunt at No. 3, 1-6, 6-4, 7-6; and No. 4 singles player Sarah Mayer lost to Amina Ali at No. 4, 6-1, 3-6, 4-6. South's doubles teams - Anne Nicholson and Kathy Rajt, Meg Petersen and Mayer, Michelle Nault and Lisa Disser and Vicki Morreale and Amy Brumme — outlasted their ULŠ counterparts.

The girls won the regionals last week with 25 points and will compete in the state finals this weekend at Midland. South is going after its 11th consecutive Class A championship. (By Heidi Heilman)

Harriers shocked

South's girls cross country team suffered its first dual-meet loss in three years, falling to crosstown rival North, 25-32 Oct. 9.

South took three of the top six positions. Sophomore Toni Tedesco finished second, while juniors Micha Song and Wendy Berger took the number four and five positions. South also took positions 10 through 16. The girls were, in order of finish: Michelle Brasseur, Traci Lee, Jenny McSorley, Reba Uthappa, Rebecca Wasinger, Vicki Groustra and Megen Smucker. Although they lost to North, South did beat Lake Shore 15-50, improving its overall record to 11-1. South is also undefeated in the EML.

In the process of defeating Mount Clemens 21-37, South senior Kevin English became the No. 1rated cross country runner in the EML by beating the former No. 1 runner with a time of 17:08.

Another top runner, senior Tony Murdock, is continuing to have dramatic drops in time. This week he finished a full 24 seconds faster than his time in the last meet.

North sports Norsemen at 6-0, face toughest teams in last three weeks

By Josh Abbott North High

The Norsemen scored touchdowns in their first five possessions and cruised to a 41-13 victory over Lakeview last Saturday. North, now 6-0, will get ready to face the toughest part of its schedule, as it plays South Lake (5-1), Clintondale (4-1), and Grosse Pointe South (3-3) in their final three games.

After North's defense stopped Lakeview on the opening series, he offense moved the ball towards the lead to 34-13 before North struck again. Senior quarterback Jamie Wheatley went long to junior Dan Unger who was tackled inside the Huskie 10. Wheatley then hit junior Marty Pochmara to cap the scoring.

Miller led North's impressive running attack with 136 yards in 15 carries and three touchdowns. "Mike ran really well," said coach Frank Sumbera. "He ran through, over and around people." Miller has now rushed for over 700 yards in six games and has scored 10 touchdowns.

Sophomore Matt Grady paced a balanced offensive attack with two touchdowns. Over the six games, the Norsemen have been led by the running of Kevin McCarron and Jason Deyonker. Chuck Schultz and Jim Povlitz have been standouts on defense.

The freshmen (5-1) won a scoring fest against Lakeview, 64-22. This offensive output is a school record for a freshman team. Quarterback Ed Barbeiri threw five TD passes and Charlie Stumb scored three times.

Cagers dominate

North's varsity girls basketball team continued to dominate with relatively easy wins over L'Anse Creuse and Center Line last week. On Oct. 8, the Lady Norsemen defeated L'Anse Creuse, 55-46. After trailing 16-8 in the first quarter North came alive in the second quarter to outscore L'Anse Creuse, 23-10. The girls held the lead until they fell behind 43-42 in the fourth quarter. They got the lead back and then gradually built up the nine-point winning margin. The cagers were led by senior guard Barbie Loeher's 16 points and 6 steals, followed closely by senior forward Missy Preston's 14 points and 7 rebounds. Heather Mergos did a great job coming off the bench collecting 4 points and 5 rebounds. The next day, North routed Center Line, 65-28, in a non-league contest. North was led by Robin Wheatley and Leslie Talos; they had 13 points and 4 steals and 12 points and 3 steals, respectively. North is 8-1 overall, 2-0 in the league. (By John Laskirides) flight, defeating South in the finals, 6-1, 6-3. Andrea Thomas and Lynda Rayos also beat South in the finals, capturing the regional champion-ship in No. 2 doubles.

Mary Garcia lost in the second round to Mary Wachter of South in a tough two-set match. The netters also won their Bi-County League and Bi-County Tournament with a record of 4-0 for the season.

At the Bi-County tournament Oct. 5, sophomore Christine Biertta did not lose a game in the three matches that she played at No. 3 singles.

On Oct. 7, the girls beat L'Anse Creuse, 15-50, at Vernier Hill. North runners swept the first seven spots to raise their record to 8-0. On Thursday, Oct. 9, the girls beat Grosse Pointe South, 25-32, and Lake Shore, 15-50, to raise their record to 10-0. North runners took six of the top 10 spots. Miller ran it in from seven yards to give the Norsemen a 7-0 lead. Junior Chuck Thomas returned a Huskie punt to the Lakeview 30, and a few plays later Smith took an option pitch from Giglio around left end for six more points.

After an interception by senior safety Dave Justice, Giglio hit senior wide receiver John Hielscher for a 55-yard touchdown. The North defense then pounced on a Lakeview fumble. Seconds later, Miller ran 25 yards for his second touchdown and a 27-0 lead. Justice picked off another Huskie aerial. setting up a two yard touchdown

'We really executed well, both offensively and defensively," Sumbera said. "We attained the level of performance that we hope to carry into our final three games.'

The Norsemen travel to South Lake on Oct. 17 for a 6:30 p.m. game.

North's JV and freshman football teams are laying down a strong foundation for the future as each team blew out Lakeview last week continuing to post an extremely impressive record this season.

The JV squad is now 6-0 after destroying the Huskies, 40-0. p.m. Oct. 16. Victory ... again

The varsity girls' swim team seems destined for great things this year. The girls continued their winning habits last week by defeating Warren Woods Tower and Roseville Brablec.

In the meet against Warren Woods Tower, Brigid Brooks, Amy Grierson, Kris Skaff, Ellen Nelson, Laura Verona, Anne Verona, Kathy Kilgus and Chris Martens won their events.

The tankers traveled to Roseville Brablec, coming up with a 114-55 victory, (putting an end to Brablec's previous unbeaten streak) upping their record to 6-0. North swamped Brablec by winning 10 of the 11 events.

> The JV improved its record to 8-2 overall, 2-0 in the Bi-County, with victories over L'Anse Creuse and Center Line last week.

On Oct. 7, the Cagers defeated league for L'Anse Creuse, 47-36. North was led by Dory Unger's 22 points. The following night, the Lady Norsemen blew out Center Line, 51-25. North set the tempo early by taking a 25-6 halftime lead.

Balanced scoring and steady defense made the difference in this contest. All players scored, and Unger again led the Lady Norsemen with 9 points. Melissa Champine followed with 8 points: Laura Bova added 8.

North's freshman girls' basket-

'Color of Money' fine overall; misses in one sequence

Michael Chapp

A.S. A.F. - . .

If there's one thing audiences will remember from "The Color of Money," the sequel to Paul Newman's classic 1961 film, "The Hustler," it will doubtless be the sequence in which Tom Cruise does some hot-shot dancing in the midst of a trick-shot billiards game. Now that's talent.

And if there's one thing that causes "Money" to lose some of the credibility it otherwise would have had, it will doubtless be the same sequence. Too bad. The choice has to be made right there. Either look at this film as a quickly-paced romp through the world of hustlers and smoky pool halls

He's the best, in choice should have been necessarv fact, nobody in town can beat him.

All the elements for a fine picture are here. Cruise and Newman are together for the first time; the quintessential pretty boy from yesterday meets the prototypical pretty boy from today in a project that demands a little bit of everything from each of them. Fine actors both, they do have a certain chemistry when on the screen together. The script has enough lunacy and lucidity to make the

Chorus auditions

Auditions for The International Chorus will be held on Thursday, Oct. 30, at the International Institute, from 6 to 8 p.m.

The chorus last year performed at 10 events, including Detroit Aglow Sing-A-Long, Noel Night, The International Dance Festival, Around the World Festival, The International Festival in Flint and at four senior citizens residences.

Under the direction of Dr. Dale Voelker, the chorus has learned to sing and perform in several foreign languages while wearing colorful costumes. The chorus meets every Thursday, at the institute, located at 111 E. Kirby, start-philosophy of hustling more than once. Eventually, Eddie teaches Vinnie all he knows, and Vinnie settles down enough to secure some serious money. The picture, with Martin Scorsese as director, is more than just the Bickersons in a pool hall, and a good deal of complexity and dimension are added when Eddie decides to play pool for the first time in umpteen years and loses his shirt. Vinnie, who by now is an A-1 con-man himself, goes on to Atlantic City, and Eddie, devoid of all self-confidence, retires to some fittle pool-hall-in-the-wall to work on his game – and his life.

Indeed, this picture has the potential to do magic in terms of story and character analysis. As is. Newman's Eddie is appreciatively diverse and threedimensional. The true conflict of the story, when all is said and done, is nothing less than a challenge to Eddie's philosophies of life and prosperity. The climax, in which Eddie comes to the painful realization that maybe there is more to success and happiness than money, is as jolting to viewers as it is to Eddie. The bittersweet irony of the picture's dramatic hook is more than enough to grab and hold viewers tightly. Every technical aspect of the film - right down to the slightly out-of-focus framing of the characters for dramatic intensity - functions in perfect synchronization to make the picture work.

Well, almost everything. The sequence in which Cruise dances around a pool table in a slummy neighborhood lip-syncing to classic rock 'n' roll is a bit much, even for those who voluntarily would suspend their disbelief. It is an interesting moment, yes. In fact, viewers might even find themselves tapping their toes to the beat of the music.

But the toes stop tapping when one realizes what such nonsense does to the dramatic credibility of the film. In one word: damage.

Luckily, there is still enough about "The Color of Money" to make it a worthwhile piece. New-man continues to spit fire albeit the increasing amounts of gray on the ol' noggin, and Cruise, quickly establishing himself as a talent to be reckoned with in Hollywood, turns in another very satisfying performance.

"The Color of Money" is red as in hot - and very worthwhile for the most part. It's just too bad it had to give itself some black as in eyes — by including the dance sequence. That's just plain clumsy. But not fatal.

his father's footsteps, in "At Close Range.

The trouble with that is his father. Brad Sr. (Christopher Walken) is the leader of a heartless lowlife gang that makes money by breaking into company safes and hijacking tractors. Not much of an example for a teenager.

But then, life with his mother (Millie Perkins), his grandmother (Eileen Ryan), and his brother Tommy (Christopher Penn) doesn't have much to offer.

The family is dirt poor. Workworn, the two women slouch around the house, their spirits broken, watching television or playing cards. The boys and their friends spend their time drinking beer and getting high on drugs.

When Brad Sr. strolls by flashing his money and cars, young Brad can't wait to take off with him. He sees his father's life of crime as one of adventure, money and a kind of power. Being a part of it means that he can be with his father, have a car of his own and be able to buy some nice presents for his girlfriend, Terry (Mary Stuart Masterson).

The crimes are carefully planned and orchestrated and there is little violence involved at first, but always there is that sure threat that if need be, there will be no hesitancy in resorting to any act, no matter how inhumane or cruel, to protect what the group calls themselves, "the family." That message is lost on Brad

Another difference - crime and violence is usually associated with city streets. Here the story is played out in an Andrew Wyeth landscape of rural Pennsylvania. The camera lingers over bucolic scenes of rolling farmland, emphasizing the beauty of the landscape in sharp contrast with the ugliness of the crimes.

There is nothing uplifting about what happens in "At Close Range." What makes it special are the performances of Christopher Walken and Sean Penn. Walken flashes charm with every move and gesture. He is the ultimate in March of Dimes Grantee Uses Ultrasound To Find and Treat Fetal Heart Defects

An infant who appears perfectly normal at birth may have a serious heart defect, one that only a cardiologist might be able to detect before it causes trouble.

While treatment is possible for even the most serious heart malformations, many newborns die before birth because their conditions worsen too rapidly to permit diagnosis and treatment. Some babies die before birth because their hearts, although normally formed, beat too fast and fail.

Research sponsored by the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation at Yale University Medical School is changing that. The nation's first fetal cardiac assessment and treatment program is using ultrasound to detect heart problems while the high-risk fetus is still in the womb. With early diagnosis, treatment can begin immediately after birth-and in some cases even sooner. The program is directed by Charles Kleinman, M.D., associate professor of pediatrics.

Dr. Kleinman's team is one of only a few with expertise in using ultrasound to examine the fetal heart, its structure, blood flow, and even the motions of its tiny valves.

Ultrasound diagnosis uses high-frequency, inaudible sound waves to examine structures and movements deep inside the body, including those of the fetus and its internal organs. As the waves come into contact with hard and soft tissue, bones, and organs, a pattern is produced on a video screen which doctors can then interpret.

Funded by a March of Dimes research grant, Dr. Charles Kleinman has perfected a method of detecting fetal heart defects. Ultrasound diagnosis uses high frequency sound waves to transmit a "picture" of the tiny organ's structure, blood flow, and the motion of its valves.

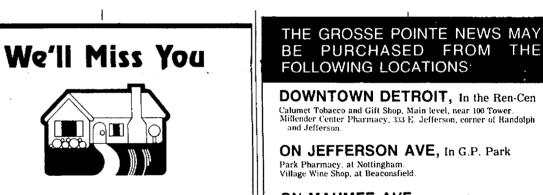

As the rate and direction of blood flow in the heart changes, so does the frequency of echoes measured by ultrasound. Evaluating individual changes in these echoes is what Dr. Kleinman's research is all about. Should the ultrasound examination find a malformation of the fetal heart-that is, a structural defect-medical or surgical intervention immediately after birth may be necessary to treat the problem. If the defect is functional-for example, if the heart is anatomically normal yet it is beating too fast or too slowly---medication may be used successfully. Such medication can be administered through the mother's bloodstream even before the baby is born.

More than 2,000 women at risk of having a baby with a heart defect have participated in the March of Dimes-sponsored program since 1983. Women most likely to qualify include those who already have children with heart defects, or were born with a birth defect themselves, those exposed to certain therapeutic drugs, and diabetics and alcoholics. Since nearly one percent of all babies is born with a heart problem of some kind, Dr. Kleinman's pioneering studies are expected to add a new dimension to prevention and treatment of congenital heart defects at medical centers throughout the country. This type of work is central to the mission of the March of Dimes, which fights birth defects through research, medical services, and education.

ULS sports Top-ranked University Liggett netters win regional School cross country team at a meet on DCDS' winding and

By Kathy Bianchi ULS

The state's No. 1-rated tennis team — University Liggett School's girls' varsity squad ended up a week of competition against two of Michigan's top Class A teams by winning their own Class C-D regional and earning a spot in the state championships.

ULS won every flight in Friday's regional competition, which included teams from Our Lady Star of the Sea, St. Anthony and Almont. The girls didn't lose a single set, racking up a best-possible 14 points and earning the regional trophy for coach Bob Hartwick.

Earlier in the week, ULS played rival South High. After a match which included five three-set games and two tiebreakers, South emerged with a 4-3 victory. Bob Wood, coach of ULS's boys' team, called the match "intense" and noted that it was "the best match I've seen .

On Oct. 9. ULS faced Class A Seaholm High, and came out of that tussle with a 7-0 victory.

This week, it's on to Holland. Mich., for the eight-team state finals. The Lady Knights hope to bring home their seventh consecutive Class C-D championship.

After a close loss to South High, ULS's JV tennis team defeated Seaholm, 5-2. Coach Sandy Smith praised the squad's effort, calling the girls "energetic and hardworking.

Kickers win pair

The ULS varsity soccer team had a successful week, winning two of three games.

On Monday, Oct. 6, the Knights traveled to Cranbrook School to take on their arch-rival. Last year, two of ULS' three losses came at the hands of the Cranes. Cranbrook scored on a penalty kick 13 minutes into the contest and the rest of the game was up and down the field, with the Knights' detense, led by senior sweeperback Mike Fozo, responding well to the challenge. Time ran out on the visitors, however, as the lone goal held up in the 1-0 ULS loss. On Oct. 7, the Knights held a rare home game, hosting Lutheran East. This day, the visitors shocked the hosts by scoring just three minutes into the game. ULS rebounded, scoring three unan-swered goals by freshman Jon Davis and Anthony Abiragi, and junior Bill Jewett in the first half. The game was concluded with two more unanswered ULS goals by senior co-captain Bob Williams and freshman Alex Tringali for a 5-1 Knight victory.

On Oct. 9, coach David Buckhurst's squad hosted Michigan In-dependent Athletic Conference rival Huron Valley Lutheran (HVL). Despite a relentless pounding of 36 shots at HVL's goal, ULS amazingly scored only one goal in the first half, on a stolen ball by freshman Doug Wood. In the second half, the Knights began to find the net, scoring four goals on 22 more shots. Tringali, Williams, Fozo, and senior Karl Meyer tallied for the home team. The 5-0 victory was the team's seventh shutout in 17 games. In six league games, the Knights have given up only one goal.

The Knights, with a record of 12-4-1 and ranked No. 1 in Class D, began state tournament play on Wednesday, Oct. 15, with a district game against Harper Woods (after press time). The winner will play at ULS on Saturday, Oct. 18, against Bethesda School.

Khelokian stars

The ULS varsity field hockey team, coached by Muriel Brock, picked up two ties with one win last week.

On Oct. 6, ULS faced a strong Ann Arbor Huron team on a watersoaked field. Play was sluggish in the mud, and the game ended in a 1-1 tie. Senior Laurie Khelokian scored for the Lady Knights. ULS took on the Academy of the Sacred Heart on Oct. 7. Again, the game ended in a 1-1 tie with Khelokian scoring for ULS, this time on a penalty shot.

ULS defeated Kingswood 5-0 on Oct. 9, in a contest marked by accurate passing and aggressive offense. Khelokian had an outstanding game, notching all five goals for ULS. Coach Brock's team travels to Dearborn on Friday, Oct. 17, for a 4 p.m. game. (By Eva Dodds)

Against HVL, Susan Cleek led the scoring with 15 points, while Diann Imbriaco followed with 10. Liza Beizai and Sarah Cleek also scored; Rachel Kneeshaw played excellent defense.

ULS's strength was its intimidating defense which kept HVL from scoring the entire third quarter. The Lady Knights' offense worked because of its communication and intensity. Coach Shelley Owens felt that the girls greatly benefited from their loss at Bethesda by learning from their mistakes.

The Lady Knights' next action is Oct. 17 at Detroit Country Day School.

ULMS kickers win again

The University Liggett Middle School varsity soccer team defeated Allen Park Inter-City Baptist, 7-0, on Oct. 9, duplicating the score from a Sept. 23 contest.
