Yes, but what does she do for an encore?

When Amy Rentschler does it, she does it big.

The 24-year-old Grosse Pointe native ran in her first marathon last weekend and did rather well for a first-timer. The marathon just happened to be the prestigious New York Marathon and Rentschler just happened to finish in the top 20 percent overall. More than 19,200 runners came from around the world to participate.

Her time of 3:28:10 placed her in 77th spot in her age group and 196th among female starters (3,800 in all). Her fine finish also qualified her for the 1987 Boston Marathon.

Athletic excellence is really nothing new for the Grosse Pointe North High School graduate. She was North's top swimmer for four seasons and made the All-American swim team as a tanker at Kenyon College.

Pokey party

Hurry, before it's all full up. Catholic Social Services of Macomb County is sponsoring an all bars hold fundraiser at the new wing of the Macomb County Jail Friday, Nov. 21.

Those interested in the "Slumber in the Slammer" all-night party must donate $50 to Catholic Social Services for the honor of being the new jail's first guests.

Those who want to be jailed must first get tickets.

Reservations must be made in advance due to limited accommodations.

For more information, call Katherine P. Kenny or Catherine Kuehn at 468-2616. No files please.

Too many zeros

A reporter for the Woods' police beat thought she had a hot news item — a scoop — big story.

An unknown, unnamed adult male with dark hair, wearing a dark suit, walked into the Grosse Pointe Woods police department Saturday afternoon and paid his parking citation in person.

"He placed a $1,000 bill on the desk and said to use it for the station's coffee fund," the report read.

The cash was refused. He insisted, "No, you keep it," he said, according to the report. Then he left.

Turns out, the figure in the report had one too many zeros and one too few decimal points.

Should have read $1. Big tipper.

All quiet

Cops appreciate a little peace and quiet once in a while. The guys in the Park got some, courtesy of the massive Detroit campaign against Devil's Night devilment.

They had gotten used to helping out in Detroit, some years even taking squad cars to protect the firefighters from rock-throwing crowds. Not this year.

Detroit didn't have much trouble this year, so the Park police didn't have to help. Instead they could devote their attention to minor home-grown pranks: three leaf fires, two spray-paintings and one egg-throwing.

"The key is parents exercising control," said Lt. Bill Furtaw. "There just weren't the big groups of unchaperoned kids. When they said they wanted to go out with their buddies, their parents said 'no.'"

Sudden Infant Death Syndrome > Researchers know what it isn't

By Margie Reins Smith

Three-month-old Daniel Reno woke up one morning at 4 a.m. He cried and fussed and wouldn't be satisfied by his mother's attempts to rock or feed him. Laura Reno decided to put Daniel back in his crib and let him cry for awhile. Within 10 minutes he had quieted down.

The next morning Daniel was dead.

Five-month-old Jeremy Lizewski's parents checked him at 11 p.m. He was sleeping peacefully.

The next morning Jeremy was dead.

Both babies were victims of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome

(SIDS), often called crib death. SIDS is a disease which causes from 6,000 to 7,000 infant deaths each year in the United States. Not much is known about SIDS, except that it causes the deaths of apparently healthy babies in their first year of life. SIDS is, in fact, the leading cause of death among infants one week to one year old. Autopsies offer no explanation for these deaths.

"They (researchers) don't know what SIDS is," said Laura Reno, a Grosse Pointe Woods resident, "but they now know what it isn't."

The deaths are not caused by suffocation; or the position of the baby; or aspiration; or an infection; nor is it hereditary; it's not caused by improper feeding; or neglect; or abuse; or allowing the baby to cry too long.

"It is very hard to deal with the death of a child when there are only question marks surrounding every aspect of the disease. The only thing we knew for sure was that our baby was dead," said

Reno. "There's nothing to blame it on. So you blame yourself."

"It's so terrible to lose a child, said Brook Nicholson. She and her husband, Mathew, lost a two-month-old baby girl to SIDS 2½ years ago. "SIDS parents have nothing to blame for the death. We have a lot of loose feelings hanging around."

Two programs provide the necessary help and support for the 80 to 90 SIDS parents in Wayne County each year. The Wayne County SIDS Center offers support groups, information and education. The Southeastern Michigan (Continued on Page 18A)

Halloween in the Village

They were out in force Friday afternoon — trick or treaters and even a few older masqueraders. That's Neil Presnell of the Farms at the right, looking properly frightful like any self-respecting witch. At the bottom is 2-year-old John Clark who is obviously enjoying the annual ritual. He is the son of Dan and Susan Clark of the Park.

School board agrees to ban smoking — how

By Nancy Parmenter

The Grosse Pointe school board continues to wrestle with implementing a smoking policy. There is unanimous agreement that smoking must be stopped; members disagree on how and when to do it.

The policy is scheduled for a first reading — a preliminary step to adoption — at the Nov. 10 meeting. As it now reads, smoking will be banned on campus during school hours, except at lunch, starting in January.

It is likely to be changed.

"Ground work is the key to success," said trustee Carl Anderson. "We need more ground work prior to implementation."

Anderson urged postponing the start until fall of 1987 in order to prepare enforcement and education aspects of the policy.

"We could spend the year looking at creative approaches to enforceability," he said.

The new state law governing smoking in public places is scheduled to take effect in January, and it could have some bearing on the schools' policy, said trustee Carol Marr. She pointed out that the new law's implementation guidelines are incomplete.

"I'd like to hold off and see what recommendations there are about staff smoking," she said.

Not everyone agreed that a delay would be beneficial. Board Vice President Fred Adams said the board must "step up to this — it's against the law." Several parents supported Adams.

"The students are expecting a smoking ban," said resident Josie MacLean. "To draw back now is to risk losing credibility."

Approving a policy that allows smoking in a designated area at lunch time could have some legal ramifications, however. Trustee Jon Gandelot said he is opposed to it.

"I have a philosophical problem with approving something that is clearly against the state law," he said. State law forbids smoking on school grounds by people 18 and younger.

In addition, enforcement has not been worked out. The policy as it now stands includes education and enforcement without spelling them out.

"We've stirred up a hornet's nest," Gandelot said. "We don't know where the money will come from. The solution to every problem we have is to throw money at it. We'll have a Gestapo making sure the kids don't smoke."

Gandelot said he favors enforcement by example and is opposed to hiring additional monitors. It is estimated that the monitors would cost the school system $34,000 a year.

The policy as written was proposed by a committee of parents, students and school personnel and put into rule form by the administration, following what it perceived to be board direction.

Superintendent John Whritner said Monday that he would rework the policy for next week's meeting, trying to mold it to suit.

But it won't be easy to satisfy so many opposing camps. Recognizing that difficulty, board President Vincent LoCicero turned the project over to Whritner saying, "Is that enough direction, Superman?"

Farms DPW workers picket; talks at impasse

By Peter A. Salinas

They're taking their frustrations to the streets.

Grosse Pointe Farms Department of Public Works employees picketed the municipal works building on Kerby and Chalfonte Wednesday and Thursday last week, trying to draw attention to stalled negotiations between the city and their union.

They have been working under terms of an old contract which expired June 30.

Greg Ocelnik, secretary for the AFSCME Local No. 522, said what the city has offered up to now is all it will give. He said the city's call for a state mediator is premature.

"These guys walking out here are doing this on their own time," he said. "We would have had more out here but some of the guys are working overtime."

Ocelnik said laborers and truck drivers in the department make between $21,800 and $22,500, depending on the amount of overtime they work and how long they have worked for the city.

"A guy working for the city with a wife and a couple of kids can't afford to take his family out to a decent restaurant once in a while on what he makes," Ocelnik said. "Last year (City Manager Andrew Bremer's raise was six percent. That boosted his salary $3,500. (Treasurer) Lock also got a six percent raise last year amounting to $3,000."

Richard Solak, city clerk, is the chief negotiator for the city.

Solak said he is sorry that the employees have taken their grievances to the public, and he feels that any inflammatory statements by the union or the administration will harm the negotiation process.

He said calling for state mediation through the Michigan Employment Relations Commission is a natural step in the negotiation process.

Though the employees have been working under the terms of the old contract, he said there has been no meeting scheduled as yet with the state mediator.

"It is just too bad that it has gotten to this point," Solak said of the picketing.

Union members put the blame on the city.

"The administration puts up a hell of an argument for themselves (to get a raise)," Ocelnik said, "but when it comes to our raises, they don't go to bat for us to the council."

John Bosco, union local vice president, said that picketing is a good idea.

"It may be the only thing they understand," Bosco said. "We can't live on what we're making, that's why I have got a second mortgage on my house."

"They never want to deal with things realistically. When I go to the store, I have to pay the same prices for bread and milk. There is no way they can justify what they (the city administrators) make. When we asked them if they could live on what we make, we get no answer."

Solak said the city is basing its hourly rate paid to the employees on what comparable communities are paying. He cites the other Grosse Pointes as comparable communities.

"We had three meetings where we discussed economics," Solak said. "We suggested a mediator and they (the union negotiators) didn't object. It is nothing out of the ordinary."

Solak said that the DPW workers got a seven percent wage increase last year, and the city wants to sit down and reach an amicable settlement.

Solak said the employees are asking what everyone else who negotiates asks for — more money. He said that Grosse Pointe Shores employees earned just slightly more than Farms employees did last year, and that those in the City, Park and Woods all earned less per hour.

Joe Fluary, 62, a former Farms DPW worker for 27 years, said that he is upset because he must pay for his own Blue Cross coverage. He noted that city administrators, police, firemen and city office workers all have paid Blue Cross upon retirement.

Solak would not comment on any specific negotiating point.

The workers cite poor management in the city, and point to poor roads and a sewer system that is in need of repairs. They note that other communities outside of the Pointes that are comparable to the Farms in size, pay their employees several thousand dollars more a year than the Farms and the benefits are better.

"It is a very complicated process," Solak said. "There are so many factors involved. Negotiations are not something that lends itself to an easy explanation."

Ocelnik feels strongly about the local's position.

"There is no sense in playing games when they aren't offering us (anything)," he said.

Farms employees walk in protest

Grosse Pointe Farms Department of Public Works employees walked off their jobs for an hour Tuesday morning, Nov. 4, at 9 a.m. in protest of the treatment of a co-worker.

Brian Grimes, AFSCME Local No. 522 president, said the walkout was over a four-month-old grievance regarding the upgrading of a laborer to mechanics' helper, which he called a violation of the contract between the Farms and the union.

"We had a confrontation with the city in which the city threatened DPW worker Ken Rowell's job, if he didn't agree to (temporarily) upgrade his job level," Grimes said.

Grimes said Rowell's job with the DPW was never certain from one day to the next as he was switched between the higher paying mechanic's helper level and the lower paying laborer job.

Greg Ocelnik, DPW worker and union local secretary, said an agreement was reached quickly, but that the workers would walk off their jobs again the following day if Rowell's position was challenged by the city.

Grimes said that when Rowell refused to work as a mechanic's helper, he was told to punch out his time card and go home. That is when the union members walked off in protest.

City Comptroller Carrol Lock said that the city was taken by surprise over the walkout, but admitted the four-month-old grievance over Rowell's job was due for an answer Nov. 4.

He later said there was a response to the grievance, that the workers weren't aware of, and added there would be more discussion on the issue.

Lock said that no other personnel, outside of the DPW workers, walked off their job, and the elections held Tuesday were in no way affected. Police and firefighters stayed on their jobs.

Grimes said that a supervisor moving Rowell from one job classification to another is a violation of the contract.

City DPW workers have been up in arms lately. They have been working under the terms of the 1985-86 contract since the end of June and they staged a protest last week at the DPW service building after work. Workers carried signs threatening to strike.

High school offers recipe for overcoming voter apathy

By Nancy Parmenter
An informed electorate is the key to a successful democracy. But how does the electorate become informed? How does the individual voter make sense out of complex issues and conflicting claims?

A ninth-grade civics class at Grosse Pointe South High School is aimed at sorting out some of these questions. Students in the year-long class study ways to separate fact from fiction, truth from propaganda. An election year is a good year to work on it.

"Teaching the difference between conservative and liberal is the hardest thing," said teacher Elaine Christensen. "The kids — and adults — may know what they think, but they have difficulty putting a label on it."

"The kids are always surprised at the outcome. Coming from what they see as a conservative community, they are surprised at how liberal their own attitudes are."

Coming into the class, most of the students don't know what the issues are, let alone where they stand on them. But they are encouraged to read the newspapers, talk to their parents, ask a lot of questions and challenge everything.

In an election year, one of the ways to understand the process is to take part in it. The students are given extra credit for working on a political campaign.

In a community where many of the local races are considered a foregone conclusion, finding a campaign to work on is a challenge in itself. Confident in their party majority, Republican William Bryant and Democrat George Crockett wage almost no campaigned beyond a few newspaper advertisements.

"This is the first year we've had a Republican we could work for,"

Christensen said. "Mary Griffin was the first one who asked for help."

Christensen said that even she,

Lessons in democracy

One exception to the local rule that incumbents don't wage serious political campaigns is state Sen. John Kelly. Kelly not only campaigned and asked for the help of local high school students, but offered them an educational program to go along with it.

Aide Theresa Alderman set up the program, which was coordinated locally by Jack Coury of South High School's Social Studies Department. Alderman invited the participation of all of the 13 high schools in Kelly's district. Two declined; the others — including South and North high schools — participated in varying degrees.

The kids helped distribute leaflets and signs and manned the telephones. On Saturdays, Kelly held seminars to explain the political process and answer questions. The final seminar, to come later this month, will analyze the election outcome.

"He's a very spontaneous speaker," Alderman said. "He loves learning and likes kids. He's interested in molding the ideas of young people — so they know how things work." The goal of the seminars is to "create an educated voting pool and to make them see that one person can make a difference."

The students had plenty of questions, Alderman said.

"Like: Why is he campaigning so hard? What has he done for the neighborhood?"

Observing Kelly in action made them aware of the mountains of details that go into planning a political campaign, aide RoseAnn Collins said. "The kids seem to be attracted to his energy. (At the same time) they are very energetic. It's a benefit to the older workers to be around them."

Kelly himself said the students were a welcome addition to the campaign. "They're positive, upbeat — and pretty insightful," he said. "They're good barometers of what's happening in the community."

One of the learning experiences for the students was getting out on the streets and talking to the voters, Kelly said. "It was good for them to get feedback from the electorate. That made it more than theoretical."

Kelly's independent voting record has given the students a different view of the political process.

"At first they didn't understand bipartisan rivalry," Alderman said. "The senator is on different sides on different issues. It makes them aware of the need to evaluate a candidate's beliefs, not just the party."

Robert Bruce, Theresa McGratty (with her back to the camera), Jennifer Huntington and Sean Kelly debate the gubernatorial candidates' stances on abortion.

as a seasoned political observer, had been shocked at the money poured into many Republican campaigns for paid "volunteers" and computerized phone banks and mailings. None of that filtered down to Griffin, however, who acknowledged before the election that the party had targeted certain congressional campaigns, but not hers.

Bryant's opponent, Democrat Nancy Resowski, didn't get party assistance, either. South civics students helped distribute leaflets and put up signs for Resowski and Griffin on weekends and after school.

Picking a candidate to work for did not imply endorsement, Christensen said. When students signed up to work, they didn't even know what the candidates stood for. Learning that was one of the goals of the project.

The week before the election, the students were still sorting out their opinions. In a small-group session during class, they tried to write down attributes of the candidates to peg them — and themselves — as conservative or liberal.

One student couldn't remember the name of the candidate she had worked for. Others, with more political experience, knew something about the issues. One savvy political observer was more interested in assessing their actual chances of winning the election than in judging their stands on the issues. Talking of several new candidates running against political powerhouses, she characterized their campaigns as "pity missions."

It was agreed that working on the campaigns was teaching them something. "We hear some of (the issues) when the older people are talking and we're eating doughnuts," said Leanne Caragay.

The students were interested enough in the issues to keep plugging away. One group struggled with Medicaid-funded abortions. Misinterpreting Gov. James Blanchard's vetoes of legislative votes to halt payments as opposition to abortion, they kept reading and arguing until they got it straight. An explanation from Christensen confirmed their new understanding.

Frustration ran high at the general inability to find information about candidates. The students kept notebooks on candidates throughout the election. Everybody's book bulged with articles about the governor's race cut out of the two metropolitan dailies, but the lesser races were sparsely covered.

"The kids have complained that the newspapers don't cover the candidates well enough," Christensen said. "They say they don't know enough to vote intelligently. Until (coverage) came out in the Grosse Pointe News (two weeks before the election), we didn't know anything about these (local) candidates."

Many of the students attended candidate forums and read material published by the League of Women Voters, but they said that didn't absolve local newspapers of their responsibility to cover elections.

The notebooks and class discussions have benefits beyond the schoolroom. On the immediate level, some of the parents asked their children to bring the books home to help the parents make up their minds on Nov. 4. The new ideas have spurred some dinner table discussions, too, which is all to the good, Christensen says.

"One-third of all registered voters in this country don't vote," she said. "Civics has failed if we can't get more people to be civically responsible than that."

She thought about it, then strengthened her statement:

"Civics is a dismal failure in this country, considering that it's the only course required in every state. I want them to learn to be good citizens."

A class profile

Ninth-grade civics students at South have examined their own ideas formally and informally. Class discussions have revealed that:

- Like large numbers of young people in the nation, they are social liberals and fiscal conservatives. Last week one class was nearly unanimous in calling itself "neo-liberal."

- Teacher Elaine Christensen said Grosse Pointe students aren't as conservative as they once were. "I'm finding more kids dead-center," she said. "I can see where Grosse Pointe is going more liberal."

- They are incensed about book-banning. Recent news accounts of the successful efforts of the religious right to prevent children from reading "The Diary of Anne Frank" and "The Wizard of Oz" sparked angry comment in one class. "They want the world their way," was one comment among many that opposed censorship and favored respect for others' viewpoints.

- "What are we going to read to our kids at night?" said one student.

- Crime is their number one fear, even in Grosse Pointe. Some students say they are afraid to walk local streets after dark. In one class, every single student had had a bicycle stolen at some point.

Car accident injures four

An accident Saturday in the City of Grosse Pointe demolished a car and injured its four teenaged occupants. One was in intensive care for three days.

James Branson, 17, Daniel Wood, 18, John Parsons, 17, and Shellie Champine, 17, were traveling east on Mack at 10:43 p.m. in a car driven by Wood, when he lost control. The car, a 1973 Nova, went over the curb and hit a tree, an Edison pole and a sign before it came to a stop near the intersection of Mack and Notre Dame, according to police.

Branson, a Farms resident, was unconscious in the back seat when medics and police arrived. Medics were unable to get the car door open and radioed to Grosse Pointe Park for their Jaws of Life tool. Under the mutual aid pact, cars from the Park and the Farms and a Detroit EMS unit responded.

All four teenagers were taken to Bon Secours Hospital. Wood, Parsons and Champine were treated and released. Branson was treated for multiple fractures and admitted to the hospital's intensive care unit in serious condition. By Monday, the hospital had upgraded his condition to fair.

Police found three empty beer cans in the car and several more in the street, according to the report. No results of blood alcohol tests were available Monday.

The car was smashed too badly to tow away. Police said two tow trucks and a dolly were needed to move it.

The investigation remains open and citations for traffic violations may be issued.

Wood and Parsons are residents of Grosse Pointe Woods and Champine lives in St. Clair Shores.

Hospitals announce joint health care venture

Officials of Bon Secours and St. John hospitals gather at the site of their new joint venture in providing health care services to senior citizens. Shown are Sister Irene Waldman, president of the Sisters of St. Joseph Health Care System; Glenn Wesselmann, president and executive officer of St. Clair Health Corp.; Christopher Carney, chief executive officer of Bon Secours of Michigan; Sister Pat Dowling, associate administrator of the Bon Secours Nursing Center.

Two Detroit-area Catholic health systems have agreed to become partners in providing extended and residential health care services to senior citizens in their community.

Christopher M. Carney, chief executive officer of Bon Secours of Michigan and executive director of Bon Secours Hospital in Grosse Pointe, and Glenn A. Wesselmann, president and chief executive officer of St. Clair Health Corporation and St. John Hospital in Detroit, have announced their corporation's joint agreement to redevelop the former eastside Wayne County Community College campus (previously the Austin Catholic High School) as a Continuing Care Center for senior citizens.

"Historically, the community, St. Clair Health Corporation, and Bon Secours have felt a need to do something collaborative," said Wesselmann. "Up to now, such an opportunity was not necessarily essential or feasible. But increasing health care costs and the lack of nursing care facilities for senior citizens elderly have opened the doors for this newly planned venture.

"Non-hospital skilled nursing facilities in the area are even more important now due to the new Medicare regulations that limit payment for the length of time patients may remain in the hospital. Many times patients continue to need care but not at the level the hospital offers. The extension of St. John's and Bon Secours' services in this way is a natural," Wesselmann said.

The proposed St. John-Bon Secours Continuing Care Center, located on East Warren just west of Mack Avenue in Detroit, includes two major phases.

Phase I consists of the development of a 150-bed extended care facility for those requiring full-time nursing care and a 100-bed residential care facility for those needing part-time or limited care. It is anticipated that construction of the first phase will begin in late 1986 and be completed by spring 1988.

Phase II, which will include independent living units or senior citizen apartments for self-sufficient individuals, is still in the planning stages. Detailed information such as the number of units and costs, and complete plans for development and implementation, are not expected to be available until spring 1987.

Combined, these two individual projects comprise a comprehensive program to offer senior citizens a full spectrum of care on one campus. As an individual's health status changes, he or she can benefit from the varying degrees of care each component provides, and maintain independence for as long as possible.

The total cost of Phase I and Phase II is expected to reach $28 million, with the equity and debt divided equally between St. John Hospital and Bon Secours of Michigan.

Both organizations will divide costs, operations and responsibilities equally. In addition to hospital investments, the balance of the funds for the development of this project will be obtained through the sale of bonds.

The senior citizen population in Detroit and surrounding areas is increasing. The population of those age 65 and above in northeast Detroit is estimated to reach 14 percent in 1986 and 17 percent in 1990.

There is a shortage of nursing home beds on the east side. Only 14 nursing home beds per 1,000 people age 65-plus are located in the region of the St. John-Bon Secours Continuing Care Center. In comparison, there are 59 nursing home beds per 1,000 people age 65-plus in the remainder of the service area where other health care groups plan to build.

St. John Hospital obtained the Certificate of Need approval to purchase the former WCCC/Austin property in May 1985, and afterward approached the Sisters of Bon Secours with a partnership in financing and operating the health care facility.

An appropriate memorial

The proposal to name Pier Park in the Farms in memory of the late Mayor James H. Dingeman appears to be an unusually appropriate way to honor the man who gave so much service to his community for so many years.

It is appropriate that the proposal came from the Farms Foundation, an organization the mayor himself had been instrumental in forming in order to raise funds for such civic purposes as remodeling Pier Park, completing the landscaping on the Hill and carrying on other worthwhile community projects.

But it is also appropriate that the park be designated to bear Dingeman's name. The park long has had a special place in the hearts of the members of Dingeman's family. Over the years the family spent many pleasant hours there, especially when the children were young and Dingeman enjoyed taking them to the park for evening walks or Sunday morning breakfast picnics. In recent years, in his official capacity as mayor and member of the Farms Foundation board, he had participated in planning such improvements as the new recreation building and the new entrance to the park.

Finally, it is appropriate that one of the first official acts of one of Dingeman's old friends, Ralph McElvenny, who had just been named president of the Farms Foundation, was to sign the resolution requesting the council to dedicate the park to Dingeman's memory.

The Farms council is expected to act Monday on the foundation's proposal to name Pier Park as the James H. Dingeman Memorial Park. Approval of the proposal would be an appropriate recognition for the late mayor's service to the park and the community, and would be welcomed, we are sure, by his many friends and admirers.

Year of the mud-slinger

It was, we were told, the year of the mud-slinger. Perhaps that is an apt description of the 1986 mid-term elections that wrote themselves into the history books on Tuesday.

The term applies to the amount of mud slung by both sides in some of the harshest campaigning seen and heard in recent years in the United States. As David Brinkley of ABC News said, it was a year in which candidates accused each other of most of the crimes in the record book, ranging from mere lying to cheating, libel and even robbery.

With a record number of women engaging in the campaign, one might have thought their presence would have had an elevating effect on the tone of the charges and countercharges. But that did not occur. What did occur in one highly publicized race for the U.S. Senate between two women in Maryland were attacks on one candidate for being "a San Francisco Democrat" and the use of other innuendo to paint her as a lesbian.

Why did the campaign get so dirty and why was so much mud slung?

Theories differ but many observers blamed the low road of the campaign on the wide use of 30-second TV commercials — and the abundance of money to put them on the tube as frequently as desired by the sponsoring candidates in the closing days of the campaign.

With so little time to get the message across in each advertising spot, the sponsors had to reduce the issues to simple black and white charges that amounted to a form of name-calling with little substantial information to support any accusations. In addition, TV spot commercials spared the candidates the sometimes embarrassing questions asked by inquisitive citizens or, even worse, by nosy reporters.

The other side of the coin was that few important issues were discussed at length or in-depth. It was easier to call political opponents names than it was to discuss one's own beliefs, one's own programs for the future or even one's own record in office. And it was true that no major national issues emerged.

Yet the low turnout of voters indicated that the negative campaign tactics turned a lot of people off. Citizens heard so many variations of the facts, so many distortions of the record and so many misquotations that they often tuned out of the campaign and, disillusioned and disgusted, did not even take the time to sort out the facts from the propaganda. Worst of all, many just didn't vote.

There have been nasty campaigns before. But seldom has so much money been spent across the country on such low political attacks as this year. Unfortunately, some of the TV commercials produced for Michigan candidates were among the worst at confusing and misinterpreting the records of the opposition candidates. That should have been expected. The campaign consultants and advisers who were responsible for much of the negative advertising elsewhere were used in Michigan, too.

Perhaps it is time to impose some controls on political advertising, especially on the tube. Instead of having governments grant large chunks of money to candidates, as Michigan does to those running for governor, perhaps the funds ought to be set aside to finance a specific allotment of TV time for political advertising by and for each serious candidate, with perhaps a bonus of time for those who follow the high road.

Surely the American people — including those in Michigan — are entitled to a higher level of campaigning than was witnessed in 1986. Yet all of us who watched and listened share the blame. If we had turned off the offensive TV spots — or had voted against the sponsors, we might have put an end to them ourselves.

State fails to make history

Even before the votes were counted, it was apparent that the gubernatorial election was over and that Gov. James Blanchard had won a convincing victory to claim his second term.

Polls in recent weeks taken by the Detroit News, the Detroit Free Press and the Detroit TV stations all showed the same results: that Gov. Blanchard was increasing his lead over the Republican nominee, William Lucas. Not only did Blanchard increase his margin, but he also continued to gain more support from both blacks and whites and from Republicans as well as Democrats.

In the final Free Press poll, for example, Blanchard led 78 percent to 10 percent among Democrats, 42 percent to 38 percent among Republicans, 58 percent to 18 percent among blacks and 60 percent to 24 percent among whites. Even in outstate Michigan, where only 25 percent of the voters identify themselves as Democrats, Blanchard led by a 61 percent to 21 percent margin.

Why was Blanchard able to win such a convincing victory?

Perhaps the exit polls will provide specific and plausible explanations, but until they are available, we tend to think Blanchard won for a variety of reasons. A major reason in our opinion was the fact that the state's economy was perceived to be improving and many people did not feel it was appropriate to change horses in the middle of the economic stream.

As Michigan's economy improved, voters' annoyance with the governor for initiating a 38 percent increase in the income tax tended to decline, especially after the increase was wiped out and the rate returned to 4.6 percent. So the attack on the governor's tax and economic policies, that had led to the recall of two Democratic state senators and to Republican control of the state Senate, simply did not take hold in the 1986 campaign. Blanchard also wisely concentrated his 1986 campaign on his efforts to win more jobs for Michigan, and that tactic attracted more support from business people usually aligned with the GOP.

When it appeared during the campaign that Lucas was running like a dry creek, we suggested that it might have been because he had yielded the middle of the road to Blanchard and was running as a right-wing Republican. Perhaps so. But in truth Lucas ran more poorly than Richard Headlee, the right wing GOP nominee in 1982, who lost to Blanchard by a 51 percent to 45 percent margin. So Lucas' right-wing positions hardly can be the major explanation for his overwhelming defeat, even though they obviously didn't help him.

It is true that Lucas was not forgiven by many Republicans for once having been a Democrat and for wishing to start at the top in his new party. Other "switch" candidates, however, have been forgiven and elected by Republicans, notably President Reagan himself. The president, once a New Deal Democrat now, like Lucas, says the party left him and that's why he left the party.

There are other possible explanations for Blanchard's victory, such as it's always difficult to defeat an incumbent who runs a careful campaign and the fact that the Lucas campaign got off to a slow start because of organizational difficulties and lack of funding. But there is another factor that some observers will cite and it is one that does no particular honor to Michigan. It is, of course, the issue of race.

That does seem to have been an important factor but just how important nobody really knows. The fact that more Republicans in traditionally Republican outstate Michigan supported Blanchard than backed Lucas in the final Free Press poll would indicate that race was a factor. Yet in Detroit only a small percentage of blacks switched their traditional allegiance to the Democratic Party to vote for Lucas. So it could be argued that the GOP, in nominating a black candidate for governor, not only failed to make any appreciable inroads into the black Democratic strength in Detroit but actually lost many white Republicans all over the state who could not bring themselves to vote for a black candidate.

Whatever the reasons, Michigan obviously did not make history in Tuesday's election. Yet the effort still was worth making. Both parties ought to be color blind and the day yet may come when Michigan will elect a black governor. The time obviously has not yet arrived, but the 1986 GOP campaign ought not to be regarded as the last attempt to bridge the political gap between blacks and whites. But better and more unified efforts will be needed if the next attempt is to be successful.

Woods should be proud of police

To the Editor:
On Oct. 3rd around 8:10 a.m. with the rain pouring down, my mother and brother were returning home from North as they usually do after they drop me off for school. As my mom approached the Marter Road light, a fuse blew and the car rolled slowly to a stop. As my brother panicked, my mom happened to glance into the rear-view mirror. All she saw were the bright lights of a Grosse Pointe police car.

When the officer came alongside the car she rolled down her window and told him the dilemma. He went back to his car and called for a tow truck. When he approached the car the second time, he told my mother that he was going to attempt to roll the car around the corner into Toles Lane. While the rain was still pouring down, my mother and brother walked with an umbrella to the corner where the police car was. The police officer then rolled the car around the corner.

In the meantime my brother was only concerned in getting to school on time. My mother told him that it didn't really matter if he was late just one day. But the officer was kind enough to offer them a ride. The officer then drove my mom and brother to Parcels Middle School where my brother attends school, and where my mother could call for a ride.

Most police officers would have stopped, but this officer was kind enough to stay and help. I think Grosse Pointe Woods should be proud that they have such a fine police force. Even though my mother didn't get his name, she will always remember him.

Thank you!

Smokers will find a way

To the Editor:
I'm writing in regard to the article titled "Schools to develop smoking ban policy," from the Oct. 16 issue. Do schools really think they'll accomplish anything by taking away the students' smoking area? They would be asking for nothing but trouble. In fact the only thing they would be avoiding is the harmful smell at the smoking area.

Many kids smoke and if they're not given the right to do so, they'll most likely rebel. They might resort to smoking in the halls, for example. Whatever the case, you can be sure that the kids aren't going to leave school property between classes to have a smoke. They'll find a way and a place to smoke on school property.

As one student said, "They can't tell us to quit. It's our lungs." I hope that the schools won't take away the smoking area, I personally do not want to smell smoke in the halls all day long. I also hope the school board realizes that whatever happens, they cannot stop the smokers from smoking.

Start at the bottom

To the Editor:
A few weeks ago, I read an article written by a mother whose son played for the Grosse Pointe Red Barons football team. She criticized the program because she felt her son spent long hours practicing and didn't get enough playing time. She isn't enrolling her son in the program again. This only hurts the child's learning experience.

There is always someone who must sit the bench. This gives the child an incentive to work harder and improve. Sitting the bench is a learning experience and something you have to accept as an athlete. This builds your character as a person, and in time, will affect your ability to play.

Some words to the mother who wrote the Red Barons article: Everyone has to start out at the bottom and work his way up. This is how your son will get better; don't deprive him of the experience.

Girls' sports equal to boys

To the Editor:
As an athlete myself, it's discouraging to read about the defeat of a boys' team when my own team has just had a successful win. Why couldn't that win be given more attention than another's loss? I feel that girls' sports are equal to boys' sports and should be reported in the same way. As one flips through the pages of the sports section, it's a common sight to see articles on boys' sports only. Girls work just as hard as boys to bring success to their teams, but receive little credit.

We can, should recycle

To the Editor:
Re: Recycling in Pointes feasible, study says. Your article in your paper of Oct. 23 reminded me of my rather frequent trips to Germany where recycling is part of everyday living. Even in the best sections of town, containers are put up neatly labeled "Green Glass" and "White Glass." Old newspapers are also collected faithfully and turned over to church groups or the city itself for recycling.

I remember from my youth that horse-drawn carriages would regularly pass through the neighborhood with the owner yelling:

"Bones, old textile fabrics, paper (knochen, lumpen, papier)."

Somehow most became very successful businesspeople.

We can and should do the same thing here. Just because the U.S. is blessed with natural resources, we should be smart enough to recognize a smart thing when we see it: Less waste, less to be disposed of, a money-making proposition if we handle it right and conservation of natural resources should help future generations.

What an opportunity!

Convert school to library use

To the Editor:
Reference your recent article regarding the need for additional space for the library system:

A possible solution readily at hand would be to convert one of the schools having abundant space and parking facilities to library use.

It would appear to be the most cost-efficient approach and perhaps solve two problems at the same time.

School should ban smoking

To the Editor:
Currently many students smoke on the grounds of Grosse Pointe South High School. Smoking on school grounds should be prohibited. Students have had the right to smoke in past years, but recently research has proven that smoking causes many forms of cancer which makes a ban on smoking much more reasonable. Students smoking outside the many entrances to the school are also an eyesore which would not be present if smoking were forbidden. Smoking is against the law for minors, and since most of the high school students are under 18 years of age, this law should be enforced upon them. The high school should refuse to permit smoking on its grounds. The evidence is clear that the use of tobacco products should be stopped.

Nothing will be accomplished

To the Editor:
I cannot believe what I read in your Oct. 16 issue, "Schools to develop smoking ban policy." What is the Board of Education trying to prove? What do they think they will accomplish by refusing to let students to smoke on school grounds? I can tell you right now what they are going to accomplish — not one darn thing. The schools think that they are going to stop the students from smoking permanently, but they are wrong. All they are doing is asking for trouble. Do you think students are going to leave school property just to have a smoke?

Now, they will find some place where no one can find them. And believe you me, there are plenty.

Besides all they will be doing is getting rid of cigarette smell. The majority of the students will remain smoking. One student stated, "They can't tell us to quit, its our lungs." If the majority of the students are going to remain smoking, is it really worth wasting $10,000 to develop a smoking ban policy that is destined to fail? I can tell you right now, NO!

I say

Like they say on television, it's cold and flu season again. And that disturbs me for more than just the obvious reasons.

I hate cold-slash-flu season. It isn't enough that we have to put up with honking and sneezing and hacking everywhere we go; we've also got to listen to the major-league whining and blubbering that goes along with it.

I've seen it a hundred times... this week alone. Take a normal, sane, mature adult and give him some clogged nasal passages, a sore throat and an earache and he's immediately transformed into a whimpering 5-year-old who acts like someone just stole his bike.

Because it is cold and flu season and because at this time of year those nasty germs are going to be passed around faster than a full flask at a college football game, I thought I'd give you folks a little notion of what to expect.

There are three basic stages to your average cold. With few exceptions (candidates for sainthood, no doubt) cold-sufferers experience each stage, in order, every time they come down with a cold.

The first of these stages is called "Shock/Surprise." Now, most of us work with or live with other human beings. And naturally, once one of the people who share your space bubble comes down with a cold or cold-like ailment, it is relatively safe to assume that one or two million of those microscopic bearers of bad tidings will find their way into one's own system before the day is done. So why are people so surprised when it happens? Who knows? But they are and it usually sounds something like this:

"I took my Vitamin C and I zipped up my jacket when I went outside. So how come I got a cold?," whined a friend.

"Probably because you got zapped by one of those rare, new-

Appreciate fruits of life

To the Editor:

I am writing in regard to the growing problem of prejudice in the Grosse Pointes. Throughout the years, the majority of the people who live in Grosse Pointe have shown how prejudiced and downright mean they can be to outsiders or people who aren't as economically well off as they are. This problem has shown through on many of their children and will probably continue through the generations.

The problem has stemmed from the fact that most Grosse Pointers are financially well off, and so they feel that since they have money, they own the world. What would happen if the people in Grosse Pointe lost all of their money? Would this be the downfall of Grosse Pointe?

Many of the people who live in Grosse Pointe don't realize what it would be like to be poor. Most of them know nothing other than a lot of money and don't seem to appreciate what they've got.

I'm not saying that having an abundance of money is bad. In fact, that's terrific, but when someone starts to take what they've got for granted then it's time to think about what they're taking for granted and why, and then try to once again appreciate the fruits of life.

What most of the people need to do who live in this fair community is to simply look over what they have and try to realize what it must be like to not have all of the things that they've taken for granted all of their lives. There's nothing wrong with being wealthy, as long as you don't abuse it.

Geshundheit!

And my nose is all red and sore and my eyes keep watering and running and my head hurts and . . ."

Yeesh. It's enough to make a person almost welcome another of their Aunt Zelda's colorful descriptions of her gall bladder surgery.

That stage is almost as bad as the third stage. That occurs when the cold sufferer finally begins to feel a tiny bit better (translation: he's walking around without his portable oxygen tank and his three-footed cane). He's stopped coughing every 3.6 seconds and is down to asking for sympathy only every other hour. This is when the third, or the "Relief/Survivor" stage kicks in.

Now that the cold-sufferer is out of intensive care and feeling frisky enough to move three or four feet away from his bottle of cough syrup, he begins to look around at the condition of others.

"Was that a sneeze I heard, Harry? I'll bet you've got my cold," he'll say gleefully. At this point, the same joker who couldn't believe it when the mean, old Flu Fairy slugged him in the head with her magic wand is now taking some perverted pleasure at the thought of passing his cold on to you.

"You must have gotten it from me," he'll reason. "I sit closer to you at work and the air conditioner blows from my desk onto your's."

Then, he'll revel in the complete description of just exactly what is going to happen to you, cold- and flu-wise. Right down to the last disgusting detail.

After observing the same pattern year in and year out, I've started to wonder why the pharmaceutical companies don't offer some sort of remedy for those who suffer — not from colds, but from those who have them.

Actually, the whole process tends to get boring after a while. And it gives me one big headache. I just hope that isn't a cold coming on. I'd rather have something serious, like strep throat. Now there's a disease with some possibilities.

City should enforce law

To the Editor:

Although laws concerning wandering dogs exist, these laws are often disregarded and not carried out. Not a day passes that I do not notice a dog on our lawn.

Where are the police? Why make such laws if the city is not going to carry them out? I often notice policemen circling my neighborhood, but it seems as though they don't even see the dogs, even though the police have to stop and toot their horns so that the dogs are not run over. Many residents might overlook this disturbance, but to others, this does promote a real problem.

To be specific, my next door neighbors have two dogs. The dogs are constantly wandering on to our lawn and they often leave their droppings. We keep our dog in a fenced-in area, why shouldn't others?

Although we do have laws that fine residents if their dog strays, they are often overlooked. This levy would be a good source of income and it should be enough motivation for the city to enforce this law.

Public hearing for Jefferson Avenue downtown

Park residents will have an opportunity to express their views Monday, Nov. 10, on a plan to develop the Jefferson Avenue downtown district. The public hearing will be held in the Pierce Middle School auditorium at 7 p.m.

There was a public hearing at the last council meeting Oct. 27, also held at Pierce, to establish a Tax Increment Financing Authority. That hearing, which drew about 200 residents, resulted in a taxing plan that will provide funding for the Jefferson Avenue development.

Proposed by the Downtown Development Authority (DDA), the plan calls for extensive private and public improvements in the East Jefferson business district. Improvements include small islands

Anti-smoking program waste of time, money

To the Editor:
According to Superintendent John Whritner, "the only question is not whether, but when" the students at Grosse Pointe high schools will be faced with a no-smoking ban and anti-smoking education programs. Such a plan would be a waste of time and money.
The school board is going to try to make kids kick the habit for good, and not just quit when they are on school grounds. Smoking students have said that they will just leave the campus, or hide, to have a cigarette. A no-smoking policy, coupled with an anti-smoking education or counseling program, is an extremely idealistic plan. The no-smoking committee has recommended that $10,000 be set aside to implement this plan.

Such an expenditure of the taxpayer's money is pointless.
Why waste this money on a plan that is doomed to failure? The money could be better spent on textbooks for those classes who are now only allowed a room set of books which must be shared with all classes.

Increase speed limit

To the Editor:
I am writing in regard to the new speed limit that was passed a couple of months ago. Although it hasn't been instated, it has provoked much controversy. I have done a lot of reading on this subject, and have come across several different opinions on the matter. The most popular, it seems, is that the former 55 mph speed limit saves lives. I don't agree with this.

useless, will try to find a way around it. This is what was happening with the 55 mph speed limit law. It was losing effectiveness and was getting to the point where it was practically unenforceable.
As a driver-to-be, I hope that the new speed limit will be welcomed with outstretched arms. It was a great move, since people will drive as fast as they feel like at any given time. A greater speed limit decreases the number of speeders travelling the highways of Michigan. This I hope will lead to safer driving conditions. But the most important thing to remember is that 55 doesn't necessarily save lives.
Scott Schorer
Grosse Pointe Woods

To help to get my point across with the most possible clarity and ease, I will cite an article that was printed two months ago in the Detroit News. It was entitled, "Driving 70 Is Simply Heavenly." In this letter to the editor, James L. Butler cuts down Brian O'Neil's response, ("55 Saves Lives"), to the original editorial entitled "Drive 70." Butler claims, and rightly so, that the use of statistics as evidence to support or discredit the 55 mph law is an "undisputable" waste of time.

Editor's note: The speed limit has not been changed, although there has been considerable discussion on the subject.

Audacious!

I feel that Butler had an important point, and I wish only to elaborate on it.
The new speed limit was a good idea because it allows people to make an important decision, which speed they will travel at. Let's face it, the majority of the people on the expressway do not travel within the bounds of the 55 mph speed limit. The new limit will reduce the number of people speeding. It will almost make radar detectors useless, since the reason we use them in the first place is to avoid an "unreasonable" speed limit. Radar in itself is deceptive of human nature. All of us, when confronted with a law that is either unfair or just plain

Just because Mr. Bashara's tenants wish to completely monopolize the flower trade in the Village, is no reason for the Grosse Pointe City Council to even consider his audacious demands. He states the Serbas pay taxes. Who doesn't, Mr. Bashara?

Attendance policy unfair

To the Editor:
I have a complaint about the new attendance policy at Grosse Pointe North.
Last year, and in years past, students were allowed so many skips before a detention or a drop (from that class) was given. This year not even one skip is allowed or a detention is given and after four skips (from any class) you are dropped from the last class that was skipped.
I think this is unfair of the school board to issue this attendance policy. In past years, the old policy had benefited those students who really needed to get out of class, but didn't have the time to go through all the hassles before being allowed out of class. I admit many students abused that policy, but it really affected those who didn't.

In my opinion, I think the school board should switch back to the old policy. It will help many students, including myself.

Coach praises every player

To the Editor:
You have printed letters from readers who are highly critical of the organized youth sports and coaches who have interacted with their children. We thought you might like to hear about an experience which demonstrates the potential of such programs.
Our son is five and asked to play soccer for the Neighborhood Club. He had never played any organized sport and in fact, has yet to show any real awareness of the game's "finer points."
He has, however, had a marvelous time. His coach, Bill Sheldon, has made every child feel skilled and important. He praises every effort and if he can't find specific plays to praise (a fairly common occurrence!) he tells each boy that he's glad they're on the team.

If his attitude could be cloned, kids' sports would enjoy a wonderful reputation. We are grateful to him for providing such a perfect first experience.

They deserve praise

To the Editor:
In last week's paper (Oct. 23) I was glad to see that you had printed an article about the Safe Rides program. The article, however, seemed a little cold. It lacked some much-needed praise for the students involved. These caring young adults voluntarily give up their time and effort to help combat a very serious problem, that of drinking and driving.
These students could almost be called heroes, because every drunk or impaired driver is a potential causer of accidents. With every call the students receive and every person they've stopped from driving home drunk, they may have saved lives.

Who knows how many lives they may already saved and how many they will in the future, but whatever the number, I think these young adults really deserve some very special praises for their adult-like actions.

We'll be running the country

To the Editor:
I was appalled to see the pictures of the "smokers" of Grosse Pointe North on the front page of your paper. When your photographer took the pictures, he or she was not in a clear state of mind. The picture on the inside page was disgraceful. Why is it that everything bad about North High School is printed in your paper?
The reporters of the Grosse Pointe News came and reported about the so-called "students" of North High School. But they must have been blindfolded. The real students were inside of the building getting an education.

Next time the reporters of your paper come to North High School, they should try walking in the building and report and take pictures of the real students. We are the ones who will be running the country when your generation is older.

Damman's Feys heads for the fishing hole

By Peter A. Salinas

He dusted everything from flush handles to light bulbs in the early years, and now at 77 with 44 years of hardware knowledge under his hat, he'll be retiring as a manager of one of the largest hardware stores in the Pointes.

Henry Feys, a lifelong Grosse Pointe resident, will be missed by many residents who know him both in the store and on the river.

You see, under that hat is not only a wealth of knowledge about paint and wallpaper; there are, tucked away, secret fishing spots and the recipe for one deadly wall-eye lure.

He won't retire until the end of the year, but already the move has drawn attention. Mort Crim, Channel 4 anchor, delivered a commentary on Feys on his evening news program recently. Feys has been written up by a Damman Hardware in-house publication and his customers who know of the imminent retirement say they will miss him.

"I've never been out of a job," Feys said. "I don't know what it's like, but we've got plans and I'm looking forward to it."

He has relatives in California, and is planning a trip to Florida, but as much as he says he'll be enjoying the free time, there is something in his voice that says he'll miss it — a lot.

He started working at Fromm's Hardware, which was located near the Sanders' store in the Village just down the street from where Damman's is located now.

"I started at the very, very bottom," he said. "My first day on the job was when I was 28. I dusted shelves that day."

Feys said he had no background in the hardware business. He held several other jobs, including one in a factory which he didn't like, and he figured the hardware business would be interesting work.

Henry Feys, left, will retire at the end of the year after 44 years of hardware experience. He is shown helping to set up a display of battery cables with Dave Damp, the current co-manager of Damman's Hardware Store who will continue as manager when Feys retires.

He graduated from Grosse Pointe High School in 1933, and was married in 1942 to Genevieve.

He said during all those years in the Village, he was never robbed, flooded out or had a windstorm do any damage to the stores he worked in. He did have the ceiling in Fromm's Hardware Store fall in on him once when it weakened. He was out of work six months with a back injury.

"I love this business," he said with a smile. "For every little thing you do, you get satisfaction out of it. Even the little things you do for people you think are just routine, they are so thankful. This job has never become boring and I have never dragged getting to work. There are times I just can't wait to get to my store."

"While I'm still able to start enjoying retirement I'm going to take it," he said. "That's better than having to quit and not being able to enjoy it, right? I will miss it though."

Gordon Ford, a Farms resident and a customer for many years, said that the fish in Lake St. Clair may have something to worry about once Feys retires.

"It's the end of an era," Ford said. "I'm not kidding — it is the end of an era when he retires. He is a great hardware guy and an even better fisherman."

Feys said he makes a little homemade jig out of maribou feathers, dental floss, Christmas tinsel and silver paint.

"I make my own rods and my own lures," he said. "I don't have a favorite, but I sure have a lot of them." He added that the "Henry Feys Special" lure has killed its share of fish.

The biggest change in the hardware business he has seen is the move from behind-the-counter salespeople, to allowing people to browse through the aisles.

"I think it has made for much more progressive hardware marketing," he said. "It was more personalized, but I think this is much more progressive."

His most memorable sale was a snow shovel in the middle of July. He said it was for a woman who was buying a house-warming gift. He had to climb around in the stock room to find one, but he did.

It was a case of just one of many customers who have had service by someone who loves his work.

Second computer lab scheduled

The second in a series of "Computer Awareness Labs" sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Public Library will be held at Central Library on Saturday, Nov. 15, at 1 p.m.

The program will explore the topic of "The Computer as Adventure," a look at adventure games currently available for the micro-computer. There is no charge for the program, but registrations will be limited to a class size of 30. Register by calling 343-2074.

Blaine Wolf, coordinator of Automated Services and sponsor of the series, says that "game playing is a legitimate function for the computer. In fact, it was game software that helped launch the personal computer revolution. Later, when computers were found to be useful for things like number crunching, file management, and word processing, games kind of took a back seat in many offices."

Workshop participants will be able to play such games as "The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy" (a zany interactive fiction adventure based on the popular book by Douglas Adams), "Squire" a financial simulation game in which your goal is to retire at age 35 with a net worth of $1 million, and "Zork I" (an adventure in which you seek treasure, battle trolls and explore the great Underground Kingdom).

Free diabetes test

Cottage Hospital will test for diabetes this week through Friday, Nov. 7. Free blood tests are offered from 9 a.m. to noon, in the hospital laboratory, to anyone 18 years of age or over who is not a known diabetic.

Diabetes Detection Week is an annual effort to identify the estimated 240,000 people in the state of Michigan who have undiagnosed diabetes and, consequently, are not being treated.

Tests are given on an informal, drop-in basis at the hospital, 159 Kercheval Ave., Grosse Pointe Farms. Tests should be done two hours after eating. For more specific information, call the Cottage Hospital Laboratory at 884-8600, ext. 2190.

Parental leave act to be discussed

The Junior League of Detroit and the League of Women Voters of Detroit will present State Rep. Mary Brown who will discuss the Parental Leave Act tonight, Nov. 6, at 7 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe Academy, 171 Lakeshore.

Brown, who will introduce legislation in February at the state level, will inform the public of this bill which provides employees with a job-protected leave of up to nine months in a year. She will be recommending paid job-protected leave for up to three months and unpaid job-protected leave for up to six months. Job reinstatement would be at the same position or of equal job level.

The leave could be taken to care for a child after birth or adoption. The leave also considers the care of a seriously ill senior or dependent parent, child or spouse.

Admission is free.

Nannies wanted: School has list of employers waiting

By Margie Reins Smith
Mary Poppins, where are you? Quality child care is the most perplexing, highest priority item on a working mother's endless list of Things To Do.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics' figures from March 1986, 54.7 percent of the nation's women are now in the labor force. Fifty-one percent of women with children under three and 70 percent of women with school-age children work full time.

Child care choices for a mother or preschoolers include: hiring a sitter to come to the child's home, taking the child to the sitter's home, or taking the child to a day care center, an informal play group or a nursery school. For school-age children, the choices are: leaving the child alone after school, sending him to a friend's house, hiring a sitter, or finding a nearby latchkey program. What if the child gets sick? What if the sitter is sick? What happens when he needs a ride home from school, to an after-school sports event, religious class or music lesson?

Grosse Pointe Marguerite Michaels faced the child care dilemma three years ago. A registered nurse and the wife of a financial planner, she has two daughters. Michaels advertised for a trained child-care worker in local newspapers. She investigated day care, talked to friends, looked for a grandmotherly-type sitter. She even contacted the Nolan Nanny School in England, about hiring one of their graduates. No luck.

Michaels wanted Mary Poppins — a trained nanny, ever-cheerful, wise, patient, understanding, tireless, yet a firm and demanding teacher of values and virtues. She wanted this person to come to her home every day to plan age-appropriate activities, to fix nutritious meals, and to handle the day-to-day, hour-to-hour crises in her children's lives; someone to take care of them when they caught colds or had upset stomachs, to devote herself, full-time to their needs.

Discouraged, but not defeated, Michaels started her own school, the Nanny Academy of America, Inc. in a rented classroom at the Grosse Pointe Academy. She designed the curriculum, hired the instructors, secured the necessary licensing, designed the uniforms, found mothers and nursery schools and doctors willing to provide hands-on experience for her students. The Nanny Academy of America, Inc. will graduate its first two students Nov. 7.

Michaels said she has a list of about 40 families waiting to hire a nanny.

She admits that, unfortunately, future Mary Poppins' are few, while the demand for their services is great.

"A nanny is an expensive alternative to day care," said Michaels.

"but you can't compare the results of day care with the nanny's specialized, individual attention."

"One parent I know said she went through the experience of day care and the resulting guilt about being at work and uncomfortable about child care. She said she'd forfeit something else in order to afford a nanny."

"It's not necessary to be wealthy. It just depends on your priorities."

Michaels estimated her graduates can expect to earn between $220 and $350 a week, starting, for a 50-hour week.

Nannies don't have to be live-ins, she said. One of her graduates is married, so she's looking for a family that only needs daytime child care.

Tuition for students is $1,100. Michaels is working on a deferred payment plan, so students can pay their tuition later, while they're working.

Classes run eight weeks, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., for 296 class hours. Theory classes are held in the Academy's classroom, and practical experience is taught at local nursery schools and with local families.

Course subjects include human growth and development, daily child care, nutrition and home management, family dynamics, interpersonal skills, creative learning, effective guidance, as well as training in CPR, first aid, how to handle emergencies and sick children. Future nannies learn to bathe infants, prepare meals, provide creative playtime activities, and how to discipline children when they misbehave.

Maria Dezenski, 23, a student nanny, said she has always loved children. A 1981 graduate of Regina High School, she took child care classes in high school, and has worked in nursery schools and grade schools. At the Nanny Academy, she said, "I learned how to talk to children when they have problems or when they misbehave. Now I understand how to punish for misbehavior and how to teach a child to deal with and solve his own problems."

Diane Mercer, 19, also an almost-graduate of the Nanny Academy, was a 1986 graduate of Fitzgerald High School. She worked as a co-op student in a preschool, and said she has always been interested in kids. "I liked the creative learning course," she said. "I learned how to do different things — like science projects — how to interact with children and plan appropriate activities for them, instead of just sitting in front of T.V."

Sheila Horst, R.N., part-time instructor for the daily child care

Diane Mercer, 19, a student at the Nanny Academy of America, enjoys caring for infants. Here she feeds a baby at Salem Memorial Child Care Center during a practicum on Infant and Child care.

Maria Dezenski, 23, joins a group of toddlers in front of their playhouse at Salem Memorial Child Care Center. Dezenski will be one of the first graduates of the Nanny Academy of America, Inc.

Boys and Girls Clubs

A tea was held recently in Grosse Pointe to support the programs of the Boys and Girls Clubs of Southeastern Michigan at the home of Nancy Williams, standing at the left. Others working to support the club include, from the second from the left, Edie Longyear, Marge Berquist and Erma Reindel. The Boys and Girls Club is part of a nationwide network of youth service organizations dedicated to promoting the aspirations, personal adjustment, citizenship, leadership, health, physical fitness, cultural enrichment of young people.

Homework by computer?

Patrons at the Grosse Pointe Public Library can now use the computer to help do homework, thanks to some new software introduced at the Central Library.

Two new software programs, "Homework Helper: Math Word Problems" and "Homework Helper: Writing," were recently published for the public access Apple IIe at Central Library. The programs offer step-by-step instructions to students in grades 7 to 12.

"Homework Helper: Math Word Problems" helps students learn about work problems, translates them into equations, solves the problems, and gets printouts of the steps involved in solving the problems. "Homework Helper: Writing" enables students to create ideas for a paper, outlines the ideas and writes the paper efficiently and effectively.

The programs have already proven popular, according to Blaine Morrow, coordinator of Automated Services. "I wish these were around when I was in high school," he said. "They really are helpful, and easy to use. And I honestly think the kids who are using them are improving their academic skills in the process."

In addition to these educational programs, Morrow adds, the library has recently acquired other useful software packages. Among them: "Certificate Maker," a program that allows users to make certificates of appreciation for a number of occasions; "Poetry Express," a program designed to make poetry writing fun; "Squire," a financial planning simulation; and "Will Writer," a program that enables the user to prepare and print a legal will. The library also recently updated its popular integrated software package, "PFS: File, Graph, Plan and Write" with more recent, enhanced versions.

Library patrons must take an introductory class on use of the Apple IIe before being allowed access to these programs, according to Morrow. After that, they may use them whenever the library is open. Sign-ups for use of the micro-computer are based on first-come, first-served basis, and are generally limited to one hour per day. The service is free.

Stamp fact

U.S. stamps are "Mini Messengers," and are popular with collectors in foreign countries. The Japanese, for example, fell in love with McGruff, the crime dog, when he appeared on a 1984 U.S. stamp urging crime prevention.

Contact Frank Wagner at 884-7182 for reservations, or additional information.

Authors booked for dinner, discussion

The War Memorial's fall Book and Author Dinner will be held Tuesday, Nov. 18, at 7 p.m.

The three featured books will include an account of the long road to success by two local celebrities, an in-depth biography of a controversial world leader and a nostalgic novel of a teenage boy's life in a 1925 mining community. The event will be presented by the center's Council of Sponsors and chairpersons Mary Turner and Jan Wells.

The ups and downs in the private and professional lives of TV celebrities John Kelly and Marilyn Turner are detailed in their new book, "Good Morning Detroit: The Kelly & Co. Story." The couple, whose morning show has been a staple in Detroit homes for nine seasons, will share tidbits from their story which explores their rise through the media ranks as well as the personal account of their broken marriages and ultimate romance and marriage.

Victims wait for transportation to St. John Hospital as make-up people apply a few finishing touches.

A hospital triage team gathers around one of the disaster victims as he is brought in.

Disaster!

Building a new Concentrated Care building meant that St. John Hospital had to come up with a modified plan for treating mass disasters. Last month, the hospital conducted a drill — a simulated airplane crash at City Airport, with 20 badly injured victims.

For two hours, 100 hospital personnel separated the victims according to severity of wounds, treated injuries, comforted the victims' families and responded to media questions. Members of the Grosse Pointe Community Theatre helped out by playing all but the hospital roles.

"We've done disaster drills for as long as I've been a member," said Jane Vreeland, who coordinated the actors.

"Periodically a hospital will call and ask us to help out."

The victims made up at the hospital accounting department across the street. Just before they were picked up by ambulances for the short trip to the emergency room, they poured fresh stage blood all over themselves, Vreeland said.

Theatre people tend to throw themselves into their parts. "I played an hysterical woman looking for her husband," Vreeland said. "I had bruises the next day from being carried out. I was all stiff — and realized it was because I had been so tense."

Hospitals are required to practice disaster drills regularly to ensure that they can respond quickly in the face of a real disaster.

Sarah Springer, a nurse assistant, and Dr. Dennis Isguien assist victim Maria Peck, a radiology student at the hospital in real life.

Grosse Pointe Theatre member Michele Carl touches up a facial wound.

Kathy Conlon applies an abdominal wound to victim Dan Smigeli as hospital staff videotape the procedure.

If you were playing a victim in a disaster drill, you could paint a few red marks on your face and call them wounds.

Kathy Conlon wouldn't. Conlon was in charge of the make-up for last month's simulated airplane crash. As a make-up artist experienced in monsters, wounds and transitions (that's where Dr. Jekyll turns into Mr. Hyde), she wanted it to be authentic.

She went to St. John Hospital's medical research library. She looked at slides of accident and burn victims. She pored through books to find rare color photographs.

"Armed with that information,

I started to experiment," Conlon said. "The key ingredient is liquid latex. It looks like Elmer's glue and dries rubbery."

Make-up is an exact science. Once you've figured out how to do it, you can duplicate your results. But figuring it out requires some imagination.

A microwave helps, too. "I found that I could pour (the liquid latex) onto a plate and microwave it," Conlon said. "It becomes malleable and suggests inner tissue."

The clean slash wounds presented a different problem. It wasn't until Conlon was enjoying a pita sandwich lunch one day that it came to her that pita bread offers some real make-up possibilities. She painted it with rubber mask grease paint and stuck it on with spirit gum.

"Ideally you would match the skin tone, but we didn't have the time for that," she said.

All Conlon's work didn't go to waste afterwards. The hospital will save the wounds to apply to the next disaster drill victims. That should be good news to Conlon, who used all her dishes and cookware to prepare for the event.

"I baked them and cooled them all around the kitchen," she said. "They looked like little pastries from a horror shop."

Theresa Selvaggio and Jamey Morrison have the leading roles in "Kiss Me Kate," Grosse Pointe Theatre's first production of the 1986-87 season.

'Kiss Me Kate' at War Memorial

Grosse Pointe Theatre's first production of the 1986-87 season is Cole Porter's "Kiss Me Kate." The musical, which opened Nov. 4 at the War Memorial's Fries Auditorium, stars Theresa Selvaggio and Jamey Morrison.

"Kiss Me Kate" is the story of a recently-divorced actor and actress who are paired as the leads in a touring revival of Shakespeare's lively comedy, "The Taming of the Shrew." Their backstage bickerings gradually increase as carry-overs into real life from the shrew and tamer roles they play on-stage.

Supporting players include Terri Turpin and John Gennette. Others in the cast are Salvatore DeMercurio and John Oleksiak as the gangsters, Al Bertel as Baptista, the shrew's long-suffering father, Rick Fisher and Bill McCarthy as Bianca's two suitors, and Gregg Watkins as Harrison Howell, Lilli's fiance. Director is John Diebel, with Marie Devlin as producer, John Guadagnoli as stage manager, Dean Erskine as tech director, Jack Petz as set designer, Cynthia Fuller as costume designer, Timothy P. Higgins and Patricia Sherrill-Chaney, co-choreographers, and Keith Sipos, vocal and musical director. The production runs through Nov. 15 with performances every night at 8 p.m. except Sunday, when performances are at 7 p.m. For ticket information, call 881-4004.

Grosse Pointe Academy reaches $3 million goal

The Second Century Fund Campaign of the Grosse Pointe Academy has surpassed its goal of $3 million two months ahead of the close of the campaign.

George A. Haggarty, chairman of the Board of Trustees, announced the achievement Oct. 22 at a recognition dinner honoring 80 major donors. The dinner was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emmet E. Tracy Sr.

The drive was initiated in 1984 in anticipation of the 100th anniversary year of the school. The campaign targeted funds for scholarship and general endowments, building renovations to the grounds, and the construction of the Laura E. Timmis early School addition is under way, and other projects are completed or in progress.

Long-range plans and funding needs for the Academy include additional endowment funds, facilities improvements, and construction of a new gymnasium.

25 years!

Among those who were hostesses at Our Lady Star of the Sea High School open house last month were, from left, Felicia Franco, Helen Bellanca, Cathy Cavanaugh, Sue Matyn and Jenny Furtaw. The celebration began with a liturgy for alumni in August that was attended by former students from throughout the country. At the open house students conducted tours of the newly redecorated cafeteria and multi-purpose room.

Pierce to host annual ethnic dinner

The tenth annual ethnic dinner, sponsored by the Pierce Middle School PTO, will be held at 6 p.m. tonight, Nov. 6, in the Pierce gymnasium.

This event is open to the public and will offer many varieties of food, including Greek, Middle Eastern, French, English, German, Italian, Mexican, Polish and American.

All food is prepared and served by the Pierce parents. The money school volunteerism, "Making the Lights Come On," will be broadcast nationally by the Learning Channel (Channel 11 locally). Two broadcasts have been scheduled for 9 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. and will feature actress Sandy Duncan and her husband, Broadway actor Don Correia. Underwritten by the American Can Company Foundation, the program gives an entertaining and informative look at school volunteer efforts in various cities and towns.

School volunteerism, a uniquely American tradition, has been undergoing what National School Volunteer Program Executive Director Daniel Merenda calls "a quiet revolution for the past decade. Businesses, social agencies, government, all types of people from all walks of life are now supplementing the traditional role of parents as school volunteers."

Marge Nixon, coordinator of volunteers for the Grosse Pointe schools said, "There are more than 60 seniors who are pen pals or who are presently volunteering as grandparents in the classroom. The time they give and the caring they share with our youngsters helps our children bridge the generation gap."

Nixon encourages senior citizens, residents and parents who are interested to contact her at 343-2191 for more information.

Architecture classes available

High school juniors, seniors and adults can explore their talents during two special design programs being offered on Saturdays by the Lawrence Institute of Technology (LIT) School of Architecture.

Design Discovery and Pre-College Programs are set for LIT's campus in Southfield Jan. 24 through May 23, 1987. Students will gain preliminary exposure to the beginning coursework in the fields of architecture, interior architecture or illustration/design. College credit toward a bachelor of science degree program will be awarded upon successful completion of these courses.

Each of the three programs offer studio experiences in drawing and basic design. In addition, there will be an art and architecture awareness seminar which will include field trips to museums, art galleries and Lawrence Institute of Technology's Frank Lloyd Wright-designed Affleck House. Participants may take one, two or three classes. Tuition for each class is $150, the seminar is $50, and an estimated $100, for a full program, may be needed for materials.

Farms traffic unit goes after speeders

By Peter A. Salinas
Late for work? Had to be to the dentist's 20 minutes ago? Meeting a friend across town, and should have left 10 minutes ago?

These are all reasons for putting the gas pedal a little closer to the floorboard, but none will serve as an excuse to get out of a speeding ticket.

Grosse Pointe Farms police traffic bureau is using Doppler radar to catch speeders in the city, and the results have been getting mixed reviews.

Traffic Officer Jack Patterson said that many people who have been ticketed are upset, but that on some streets when a speeder is pulled over, people actually come out on their porches and cheer.

"What we are trying to say is don't speed," Patterson said. "For five miles per hour over and better there are no warnings. You've got a ticket."

People are always coming up with excuses for speeding, the one most people use is some type of medical emergency.

"If there is a medical emergency, I may send them on their way reminding them that even with such an emergency, they must travel at the posted speed limit," Patterson said.

"If the emergency is serious enough, I call a medic unit, and then give the guy a ticket anyway."

Tickets are not cheap. A ticket for 10 miles per hour over the speed limit is $40 and two points with the Secretary of State's office. It costs a driver $100 if he is caught traveling in excess of 21 miles per hour over the speed limit. That fine comes with four points on the record.

"We are assigned to traffic control specifically unless there is a fatal accident or serious felony in progress," Patterson said.

The traffic control unit consists of him and Officer Stephen Puckett.

Some of the neighborhood streets are being patrolled more than others because of the amount of traffic volume.

"We are watching McMillan very closely," Patterson said. "When we pull someone over on that street, people come out of their houses and cheer."

If you've ever seen a bus do something illegal and were upset, well, Patterson said buses are fair game too, and tickets have been issued to the SEMTA drivers while in the city.

Under ideal conditions, Patterson said, the Doppler radar will bounce a signal accurately off a car at three quarters of a mile. Ideal conditions don't necessarily mean bright sunshine and clear skies.

"The best conditions seems to be when it is foggy and overcast," he said.

The radar system employed by the Farms is reportedly accurate to one mile per hour, according to Patterson, and when someone tries to fight the ticket in court, the judge knows the system and the defendant has little chance of winning the case.

Patterson said the bottom line is to reduce the number of accidents. If an accident does occur when people are traveling at the speed limit, there is less chance for serious damage or injury.

Farms Officer Jack Patterson monitors the radar equipment, keeping a watchful eye for speeders.

Crescent Sail Yacht Club project nears completion

A large breakwall designed to ease the troubled waters around Crescent Sail Yacht Club in Grosse Pointe Farms is nearing completion.

Philip McCallister, a civil engineer and club member, said the project, which has cost its members more than $250,000, ran into several problems this summer.

He said that the members had decided that an eastern entrance would be a good idea, but several storms from the east this summer changed their minds.

"We have a nice safe entrance on the south," McCallister said. "The new breakwall is pointing off into the main harbor to protect it from the northeast."

There will be 10 or 11 new boat wells in the harbor, but McCall-ister said the primary intent of the project was to protect the area. He said the club was in danger of losing its club house.

The Farms City Council became involved in the project to enable the yacht club to apply for the state permits necessary to construct the breakwall.

Farms Director of Public Service John DeFoe said the city is satisfied that the project will do what it is intended to do — protect the small harbor and the shoreline.

McCallister said that the club will be charged a lease fee by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources for use of the bottom lands under Lake St. Clair that have been added to the Crescent Sail harbor.

Insurance exec pleads guilty

Joseph C. Spieser, 62, a Grosse Pointe Shores insurance executive, pleaded guilty Oct. 31 in federal district court to a charge of falsifying records concerning a union health fund for J.L. Hudson Co.'s warehouse workers.

Spieser, former president of Health and Welfare Plans Inc., told U.S. District Judge Horace Gilmore he admitted making false statements concerning the amount of money he collected from Hudson's in 1980 and 1981 for the fund.

Falsifying records in violation of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) carries a fine of $10,000 and a five-year prison sentence.

Spieser entered into a plea agreement with the U.S. Justice Department, and waived his right to a full indictment and statute of limitations restrictions, according to the Justice Department.

The plea bargain made by Spieser and the Justice Department's Organized Crime Strike Force, included provisions in which Spieser agreed to refrain from handling ERISA-related accounts. The agreement also specified the Spieser could not receive more than a two-year prison sentence.

Spieser told the federal judge he did not properly report the amount of money his company collected and paid to an insurance company for warehouse employees represented by Teamster Local 299.

Hudson's paid Spieser's company $4.80 per employee per month for cancer insurance coverage, but Spieser paid the insurance company which co-administered the plan only $2 per employee, according to the Justice Department's press release.

Spieser was not charged with misusing funds, but only falsifying records.

Spieser was recently co-chairman with Chief Justice G. Mennen Williams on a fundraiser for Most Holy Trinity Church, an inner-city parish which helps the needy.

He was released under a personal bond of $5,000. No sentencing date has been set.

Deanna VanAntwerp, chairperson, can be reached at 882-8505. Proceeds from the sale will be used for school equipment and programs.

City to pick up leaves

The City of Grosse Pointe's special fall leaf pickup program is now in operation. Residents may rake their leaves into windrow piles between the curb and sidewalk where they will be picked up by the City with its vacuum truck.

Residents are asked not to rake leaves into the street where they cause traffic hazards and clog catchbasins. Also brush and similar debris should not be intermixed with the leaves as it clogs the vacuum collection equipment. Residents are also reminded that the burning of leaves is not permitted.

Public Works Superintendent Douglas Collinson reports that the leaf collection program is operated on a continuous cycle throughout the City. Crews and equipment operate on an overtime basis when leaves are falling at their heaviest rate to keep the collection cycle as short as possible.

Also, to keep the vacuum suction equipment in actual collection operation as much as possible, the collected leaves are temporarily held at the City Park. From that point they are subsequently hauled to the Grosse Pointe-Clinton waste reduction plant for disposal or to mulching sites.

The special leaf pick-up program ends the first week in December after which leaves should be placed in containers for pickup on regular refuse collection days.

Felicia Hunter, left, director of vocational services for Goodwill, and Kym Kaye, director for public relations, show off the new fast food kitchen, paid for in part by the fundraising efforts of the Junior Group of Goodwill. ## Job training to go

Goodwill program aims at placing handicapped clients in fast food restaurants

By Elsa Frohman

Handicapped clients of the Goodwill rehabilitation programs will soon be finding jobs in the fast food industry, thanks to a new training program funded by the United Foundation, the Junior Group of Goodwill and Michigan Rehabilitation Services. A fast food kitchen has been built in the cafeteria at Goodwill headquarters, 3132 Trumbull, in Detroit, where handicappers will be trained for independent jobs in restaurants such as Burger King and Hardee's, beginning in January.

The new food services training program will be the major beneficiary of the Junior Group of Goodwill Antique Show at the Michigan State Fairgrounds this weekend. The Junior Group was founded in Grosse Pointe, though now it encompasses members from the entire metropolitan Detroit area. "The support of the Junior Group made possible the overall renovation of the kitchen area," said Felicia Hunter, director of rehabilitation services for Goodwill Industries of Greater Detroit.

The new program will be a 10-week course in fast-food service. Clients will be mentally impaired, hearing impaired, and physically impaired, though all will be required to have a high degree of mobility. Clients are referred from the Michigan Department of Social Services.

"For this program, the clients will be required to be able to stand, stoop, bend and lift, and to have a maximum use of both hands," Hunter said.

Clients will be individually trained for positions tailored to their capabilities. One trainee might be best suited to work at a cash register, another might be better suited for busing, dishwashing or other kitchen work.

"We want to show the employers that the handicapped can work, if given the opportunity," Hunter said. "We also want to give them an edge over the person who just walks in the door. We can use this program as another selling point to employers." The clients will be given job placement assistance at the end of the training course.

The program will be operated in a mock-up fast food restaurant in the Goodwill cafeteria. In the beginning, students will serve a fast-food breakfast, that will be available for sale to Goodwill staff. A lunch menu may be added later.

The fast food program has been developed as an expansion of the current food service training program at Goodwill. In the existing

Berry Lecture to present horticulturist

On Friday, Nov. 21, at 10:30 a.m., in the Fries Auditorium at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, the Grosse Pointe Garden Center will present the annual Berry Memorial Lecture and subscription luncheon which will feature David J.A. Smith, production manager and director of horticulture of White Flower Farm.

Smith was born and raised in England on the private estate of the Earl of Bradford at Weston Park in Shropshire, where his father was head gardener. Under the direction of his father he learned many aspects of the gardener's craft, but interrupted this for five years while he gained pilot's wings and a commission in the Royal Air Force Reserve from 1947 to 1952.

After leaving the Air Force he joined the famous English firm of Bakers Nurseries Ltd., and during the seven years of his association with Bakers, he also presented displays at Chelsea and other major flower shows.

In 1954 he came to the United States at the invitation of the owners of White Flower Farm as plant propagator, becoming production manager in 1958 and director of horticulture in 1968. He has been a judge at numerous major flower shows.

Following Smith's program a subscription luncheon will be served in the Crystal Ballroom, and there will be a bonsai show and sale offered by the Grosse Pointe Bonsai Association.

Admission to the lecture is free to members of the Garden Center but non-members will be charged $5.

David Smith

Luncheon reservations will be accepted until Nov. 18 and must be accompanied by payment of $12 in checks or cash. Tickets will be held at the door. Make checks payable to the Grosse Pointe Garden Center. For more information call the Center at 881-4594 Tuesday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Deadlines

All material submitted for the Second Section of the Grosse Pointe News must be in this office by 3 p.m. Friday before publication the following Thursday.

A lot of people have been bringing in items on Monday lately. There seems to have been some confusion about deadlines. For the record, here are all the deadlines for the newspaper.

Different parts of the paper have different deadlines, since the volume of material we send through makes it impossible for our printer to do the entire paper at once.

The first deadline is for the Second Section. All the submitted material for this section must go down to our printer by the end of the working day on Friday. That means, I have to have it by 3 p.m.

The spec and news sections, (Sections A and C) accept copy until 3 p.m. on Monday.

The Classified Ad section accepts ads until noon Tuesday. The paper is printed late Tuesday night and mailed on Wednesday to arrive at your door on Thursday. The paper is never available on Wednesday. It goes on sale Thursday morning.

So that we can get the paper out on time and start on next week's paper, deadlines must be observed. Make a note of the deadline for the section you want to submit to. If you mail copy, please make sure to allow at least two days for delivery.

Thank you.

November marks the end of another season

November, in the Indian Calendar, is known as the Month of the Mad Moon, when "The North Wind doth blow; and we shall have snow; and what will the robin do then, poor thing?"

Most of us know perfectly well what the robin will do. In fact he has already done it, and is even now enjoying the sunny southland.

But all the birds have not gone south. Many of them remain all winter and all of them appreciate the seeds and grains you provide in your bird-feeders and scattered near your back door, or the lump of suet tied to a tree branch in your garden.

If you have a garden you perhaps really ought to give the winter birds a regular offering of food as a thank-offering for the good service they perform for you every summer.

All the wildflowers have not disappeared either. Three varieties of aster, the common blue, the white health, and the showy asters bloom beautifully in November as do camomile, clover, daisies of several varieties, goldenrod, mustard and yarrow. And this is the time of year to gather rose hips for jelly and seed pods of many plants to dry for winter bouquets.

Late fall is also a planting time for many trees and shrubs. In Grosse Pointe Woods a project is underway to plant new trees on many public right-of-ways. This is part of the Master Street Tree Planning plan of the city sponsored by the Woods Tree Commission. Trees to be included in the fall planting are sweetgums, Euro-

Topiary seems to be an increasing interest for many people these days. That is, the kind of topiary in which plants are trained around or fill a wire frame to create fanciful shapes of rabbits, birds or other creatures, or to make hearts or lyres of any fancy shape.

Ever since, a couple of years back, the Grosse Pointe Garden Center presented a topiary workshop, this charming craft has become more popular. There have been numerous inquiries about sources for topiary supplies. Two good sources are Merry Gardens, in Camden, Maine, and Vine Arts in Baltimore, Md.

True topiary, or the art of training and clipping small shrubs and trees, is for outdoor gardens and has a history going back to Roman times. In a sense it is really sculpture using the living material of branch and foliage to create fanciful forms, sometimes of animals or people, but more often in geometric shapes such as cubes, spheres, pyramids and columns.

The Grosse Pointe Garden Center wishes to extend thanks to the community for its enthusiastic attendance at the recent Tour of Homes presented by the Center. This annual event supports the many projects which the center uses for service and education. This year's successful Tour of Homes will make possible the annual scholarships in the graduate school at the University of Michigan and at Michigan State University for students in horticulture.

The Garden Center also supports the award winning Trial Gardens on the lake side of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial and has an extensive reference library of gardening and horticultural books for community use. Its many events and workshops are open to the public and the Garden Center room on the second floor of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial is available for the use of any garden-oriented group for meetings as guests of the center which will absorb any room fees incurred. Call the Garden Center for more information Tuesday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

In the Chinese flower calendar the gardenia is the flower for November. The Chinese have a special diety of flowers, Ho Hsienku, who lived in the seventh century, the daughter of a shopkeeper in Lingling, Yunan Province.

She ate from a peach of immortality given to her by Canopus, god of longevity. She became the genius of flowers, one of the eight Taoist immortals. It was her degree that special attention should be paid to a special flower each month of the calendar year. This Chinese flower calendar is the oldest of its kind.

Gardenias, or cape jasmine as they are sometimes called, originated in China and are also native to Japan and South Africa. They are named for Dr. Alexander Garden. The variety most often used by florists for corsages is "Mystery" with velvety white petals and a sweet, heavy scent.

Question of the week: Why is Indian Summer called Indian Summer?

Answer: You'd be surprised at how many answers there are to this question. Everyone seems to have a different one. One is that this lovely time of the year, which is called St. Martin's Summer, or Martinmas, in England had its name changed to Indian Summer by the Puritans in New England in the very early days in this country because the English name sounded too "popish." Another theory is that this was the favorite time of the year for marauding bands of Indians to sally forth on scalping raids and massacres since they could well be camouflaged by the changing colors of autumn foliage. What is your answer to this question? Perhaps that is really the question of the week.

Goodwill kitchen to train handicapped for food service . . .

 program, clients do bussing, dish-washing and a limited amount of counter work in the cafeteria.
 "We saw that it wasn't enough," Hunter said. "They needed other skills."
 In the new program, clients will spend part of each day working in the fast food kitchen, and part of the day learning other necessary skills, including appropriate work behavior, punctuality, team work, accepting supervision, grooming and hygiene.
 The fast food industry is an ideal work opportunity for the handicapped, Hunter explained. A current shortage of fast food workers has driven up wages and for the individual willing to stay with the job, advancement is possible without a college education.

 "Nowadays, the kids are saying $3.35 (minimum wage)?" Hunter said. "The restaurants have to offer more. Once an individual gets into the industry, they can be moved up as a team leader. There is no level where you have to have a degree."
 The fast-food employers have been very supportive of the program. Both Burger King and Hardee's have lent advice.
 "Especially Burger King," Hunter said. "They have shown a great willingness to work with us and they hire many handicapped people."

Goodwill Industries places its primary focus on rehabilitation of the handicapped and moving them out into jobs in private industry. The organization operates a variety of employment training programs, as well as short-term sheltered workshops, and employment adjustment programs.
 Once best known for its resale shops, Goodwill operates only one such outlet today. The store is located in Roseville.
 Last year, Goodwill served 3,400 people — 2,700 of whom were in rehabilitation programs.
 "Eventually, we hope to find a job placement for everyone," Hunter said.
 Six percent of the funding for Goodwill comes from the United Foundation. The majority of the money comes from fees for services. Goodwill is also supported by the Junior Group and the Women's Association of Goodwill.

 The Junior Group Antique Show opens with an invitation-only preview tonight. Tomorrow, Friday, Nov. 7, and Saturday, Nov. 8, the show will be open from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. On Sunday, Nov. 9, hours will be 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. A donation of $4 will be asked for admission.
 This is the 39th year when the Junior group has held the antique show to raise funds for Goodwill.
 For more information on Goodwill, its rehabilitation programs, or the antique show, call 964-3900.

Volunteers needed for festival

Many Pointe women will be active volunteers in the Festival of Trees this holiday season, and the Festival of Trees Steering Committee is searching for still more. Pointe hostesses are needed for this glittering event for: the wreath and tree displays, gingerbread and Santa rooms, and train and miniature displays.
 Pointers already active on the Festival of Trees Steering Committee include: Kathy Neumann, who was last year's Festival of Trees chairman, Rita Goss, Beth Kastner, and Sally Spain. They are anxious for more Pointers to join them in making this wonderful benefit for Children's Hospital of Michigan a huge success.

The Festival of Trees, held annually at Cobo Hall during the Thanksgiving holidays, is a stunning Christmas showplace. Professionally decorated trees are the festival's centerpiece, but the event includes plenty of wreaths, gingerbread houses, and many other Christmas ornamentation and ideas. Styles range from sophisticated to traditional, all of them breathtaking. The Festival will be Thursday, Nov. 27, through Tuesday, Dec. 2.
 The festival is a wonderful way to kick off the holiday season. If you'd like to volunteer, just contact Chris Nightingale, volunteer chairman, at 647-5758, or call Children's Hospital of Michigan at 745-0138.

The Pastor's Corner

Don't weep — it's chronic

The Rev. Paul Panaretos
Our Lady Star of the Sea

From among the mysteries of life, I find chronic human illness to be most perplexing. I do not think it so surprising that people have said a demon caused an illness. Nor do I think it so surprising that people later would blame an illness on a "humour," a body fluid that affected people both physically and psychologically.

Today's technology allows us to see and even measure many causes of some emotional illnesses and some physical illnesses that have emotional manifestations. Even in the treatment of these, the healing arts are assisted by our technological advances.

I more than recognize our present-day medical and healing expertise. From my youth I saw an experienced chronic illness invade the lives of my own family. It was often painful to endure, especially when my friends and their families did not suffer any chronic illness. Knowing the causes offered some consolation. Medical or surgical treatment of the causes offered more consolation. Nevertheless, the question nagged me, why that illness?

The question that continues to nag me is, why any illness? Even with all our technology and medical expertise, I think we continue to ask with people of less sophisticated days: Why does chronic illness disrupt my life or the life of someone I love?

I do not think that there will ever be an answer to the question that will completely satisfy me. It is more important to me that I cope with my chronic illness and with the chronic illness of others. It is just as important that I love myself and others, chronic illness and all.

It is often difficult to love myself or another person who suffers from a limiting, disabling, retrogressive or degenerative illness. Feelings of anger, guilt and denial well up inside. Those feelings confuse me and can impede my decision to love.

Jesus encouraged that besides loving God with our whole persons, we love others as ourselves. How do I love someone who is very different from me because of a chronic illness? Or how do I love myself and God if I suffer from a chronic illness?

Sometimes God is the target of rage, sometimes God is comfort. Sometimes people feel guilty of failing to measure up to God's standards or to those of their loved ones or to their own. Whether God is hated or loved, denied or trusted (and I have discovered it is often a mixture of these), people give God a great deal of attention. They also give no less attention to their relationships with others.

To love another person as I love myself requires that I am honest with myself and my feelings. I find personal honesty very difficult when I am affected by a chronic illness or by a person with a chronic illness. A support group — persons who meet regularly with others dealing with the same illness, directly or indirectly — can be of great help. I belong to a support group for persons affected by epilepsy. Together we confront our feelings and help each other to be honest with ourselves. Together we discover how much love we have — both to offer and to receive.

In a world with so much illness; in a country with so many hospitals and medical research institutes; in a society that emphasizes personal worth and fosters personal introspection, it is difficult to live with chronic illness. It is more difficult to love in the face of chronic illness. Yet I have seen and felt love nonetheless.

Jesus was no stranger to chronic illness — physical, emotional and societal. The church, the living legacy of Jesus, is no stranger to it either. However, the church is more than a support group. It is men, women and children who are Jesus-alive-in-the-world.

People affected by chronic illness have shown me that it is not only possible to "love your neighbor as yourself." They demonstrate to me that Jesus' words are words of hope for us all. They also demonstrate to me great sensitivity and concern for others. Indeed, willingness to reach out to a person touched by illness transforms the Golden Rule into a healing art.

U.S. Savings Bonds. Paying Better Than Ever.

Back in 1872, San Francisco's first cable cars were called "Hallidie's folly." Today, they're America's only mobile historic monument. Some things never change.

But one great American tradition has changed—U.S. Savings Bonds. Now Savings Bonds pay higher variable interest rates like money market accounts. That's the kind of change anyone can appreciate.

Just hold Savings Bonds for five years and you get the new variable interest rates. Plus, you get a guaranteed return. That means you can earn a lot more, but never less than 7½%.

You can purchase Bonds at almost any financial institution. Or easier yet, through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

Buy Savings Bonds. Like the cable car, they're another part of our proud heritage.

Make no myth-take, this is serious

It has come to my attention that some very nasty rumors are making their way about town. Now there's nothing I detest more than unsubstantiated information, innuendo, fiction, untruth or just plain baseless rumors flying around. The way I see it, if you are going to gossip, you might as well get it right.

So, in the interest of fair play (not to mention truth, justice and the American way) and because I don't really have anything else to write about this week, I bring you "Myth or Fact: You Decide" . . .

Myth: The sports editor of the Grosse Pointe News is a graduate of North High, and as such, does her level best each week to make sure that absolutely no information about South High ever sees the light of day.

Fact: The sports editor is, in fact, a summa cum laude graduate of Bob's Journalism School/Laundromat, where she learned to be a fair, unbiased, factual, totally honest and completely objective reporter . . . and how to remove unsightly sweat stains from white shirts.

Myth: The sports editor of the Grosse Pointe News is a graduate of South High, and as such, is sworn to see to it that any and all information about North High makes its way immediately into the circular file.

Fact: See previous "Fact."

Myth: According to fans of North High (or South, whichever one feels it has been slighted in that particular week's newspaper coverage), the sports editor of the Grosse Pointe News has eight-inch talons, screams at people at the slightest provocation and rides a broom to and from work.

True: The photo above has been retouched.

Myth: The Grosse Pointe News will accept sports articles written in purple crayon on the back of brown paper bags which have been crumpled into wet, soggy balls and dropped off at the paper's front desk in the wrong department at 4:59 p.m. Monday afternoons.

Fact: Actually, we don't. But that might be an improvement over some of the stuff that IS dropped off at the News.

Myth: We here at the News will only print results of games in which teams win. We do not believe that a team which loses has any right to have results published in the paper, or to show its face, for that matter.

Fact: Absolutely false, although for some odd reason, folks in these parts have gotten that impression. We've told them and told them until we're blue in the face . . . and they still believe that we're only interested in writing about winning teams or top-ranked athletes. No way, Jose. If you win, lose, draw or just show up, we want to hear about it. Of course, the game or event should have something remotely to do with Grosse Pointe. (That, and any other element of the bizarre will enhance your chances of making it into the paper in the week you desire).

Myth: The folks who ran that troubled investment company which allegedly lost all the nice people's money, made them very unhappy and made lots of not-so-nice news recently are the same people who operate the Michigan High School Athletic Association.

Fact: No, but the fans of the Troy, Warren Cousino and Osborn high school football teams might give you an argument on that.

Myth: Michigan State University back Lorenzo White isn't really injured. He hasn't been in the Spartans' lineup recently because he's been wearing No. 40, calling himself Mike Miller and moonlighting as a fullback for the North High football squad.

Fact: True. What, you don't believe me? Well, you've never seen both of them in the same place at the same time, have you? Have you?

Myth: The Michigan prep football powers-that-be (aka MHSAA) scout around for the muddiest, soggiest football fields available upon which to hold their annual high school football playoffs. Then, when most of the contenders have spent three rainy, cold and occasionally snowy Saturdays eliminating themselves from the playoffs, they round up the survivors and completely confuse them by letting them play in the warm, dry, brightly-lit Pontiac Silverdome.

Fact: True. But North High (9-0 and entering the playoffs this week) has a chance to fool them all. The Norsemen have already played in the Silverdome once this year. When it was dark, wet and rainy . . . inside the Dome.

Myth: Grosse Pointe coaches read this stuff and laugh their heads off.

Fact: Sure they do. Of course. Naturally. Maybe. Uh, I sure hope so.

Last-minute switch has North gridders facing PSL's Chadsey High Saturday

By Peggy O'Connor

The word from the state on Sunday night was that 9-0 Bi-County League champion North High would face Public School League titlist Detroit Osborn this weekend in the pre-regional game of the state Class A football playoffs.

Then a foul-up at the state level regarding computer points assigned for victories surfaced and suddenly, Detroit's Chadsey High (7-2) was in and Osborn was out, much to the dismay of Osborn coach Nick Thompson.

"We feel pretty bad . . . and we beat the heck out of those guys, too," Thompson said.

What the switch did to North was to throw coach Frank Sumbera about 24 hours behind in his game plan. "I'm scrambling like a mad dog," Sumbera said Monday morning. "The thing is, I've seen Chadsey play once, so they won't be a total surprise. But I'd shelved all my other scouting in favor of preparing for Osborn. Now we've got to start over again."

What Sumbera does know about Chadsey is that it's got a pair of "twin tower" tackles: each stands at 6-5, 280. "They've also got a fine linebacker, Curt Rice, who is 6-2 and 245. And Boyer, their junior wideout, isn't bad either. He caught 42 passes for 694 yards this year and at 6-2, 175, he's a real good threat," Sumbera said.

Chadsey likes to throw the ball a lot, he added. "We do try to mix our offense," said Chadsey coach Charles Spann. "We go with a multiple offense most of the time."

Spann's Chadsey team is excited at the prospect of playing in the playoffs, especially after believing that the season had ended. "Hopefully, we'll have the time to prepare for North because I haven't seen them play in years. All I really know about North is that they are 9-0 and have a pretty successful program," Spann admitted.

North also has the advantage of hav-speed at the wideout," he added.

One thing Sumbera doesn't want, oddly enough, is to see the Norsemen score on the first play from scrimmage like they did last season against Murray-Wright.

"We just went to sleep for two quart-school Monday and got right down to business, without much rehashing of last Saturday's 12-10 win over rival South High.

"They were very businesslike, really wanting to get down to finding out who they were playing and how to get ready. They know they've got a job to do," Sumbera said.

One of those jobs is to let folks outside the area know that North isn't just a 9-0 flash in the pan, if there is such a thing. "We haven't gotten anything (recognition) beyond what we've done on the field. We've won 25 in a row — ask Russ Hepner how difficult that is to do — and still we're ranked No. 8. And you know who's ahead of us? A team with two losses," Sumbera said.

Sumbera said he really isn't complaining, he just wants to see his hard-working Norsemen get their due. "These kids work hard. They come to play. We met the challenge and won our rival game . . . Troy didn't," Sumbera said, referring to 1985 state finalist Troy, which hovered near the top of the state rankings most of the season, but lost to Troy Athens last weekend.

North is basically healthy going into Saturday's game. Senior kicker Bob Belser is expected to recover from a concussion, but won't see any action on defense, his coach said. The towel-waving, popular senior center Tom Shehab and tackle Terry MacDougall are possible but both are on a "wait and see" basis.

"Our offense is sputtering a bit . . . but the home field advantage should help that," Sumbera said. "Because we're at home, we'll be on the same schedule we've been on for the past two weeks and you can't beat that advantage."

Game time Saturday is 1:30 p.m.

Chadsey's defense has the unenviable task of stopping the Norsemen's 1,090-yard rusher Mike Miller.

ing played Detroit Murray-Wright in the playoffs last season. "The kids saw what a PSL team can do, they know pretty much what to expect," Sumbera said.

"I think that the key will be to play a little deeper, be a little cautious in the first quarter. We know that we can't let them run by us because they have that ers after that. I don't want to score right off the bat and have the kids think this is going to be easy, because it won't. Chadsey is supposed to be a very physical team and we have to be ready."

If the Norsemen's demeanor this week is any indication, they are prepared. Sumbera said that the players came to

Wings' Hanlon leads clinic

Detroit Red Wings' goaltender Glen Hanlon will conduct a clinic for local hockey goalies this coming Monday, Nov. 10, from 4 to 6 p.m. at University Liggett School's McCann Rink, on Cook Road.

Glen Hanlon

ULS varsity hockey coach John Fowler is conducting the clinic, which is primarily for goaltenders from North, South, ULS and the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association. Most goaltenders in the area have been contacted by Fowler; however, those who have not been reached who would like to participate may call Fowler at 884-4444 for more information. Pre-registration is necessary.

"This is something I've wanted to do for a long time. Glen Hanlon is gracious enough to help us out," Fowler said. "I think this is really going to be a lot of fun."

The clinic will focus on teaching goaltending skills, including technique, shot-blocking and angles. It will also feature a session on stretching and warm-up for goalies, led by a member of the Red Wings' physical therapy staff. John Murphy, a Harvard University graduate and ULS' assistant coach, will also participate in the clinic.

The event is free. Spectators are also welcome, at no charge.

Meet the master of the harbor

By Peggy O'Connor

How does a boy from the cornfields of Indiana get to the shores of Lake St. Clair? By boat, naturally.

Actually, for Grosse Pointe Yacht Club harbormaster John Pullin, the trip from his birthplace in Rensselaer, Ind., to the GPYC spanned 34 years, included stops in Korea and Vietnam and was less-than-navigable by sail. Still, boats played a key role in Pullin's decision to take the harbormaster's job last April.

"Boats and being around them are my life. I'm also a people-oriented person and this is a people-oriented job," Pullin says.

There's not a lot of water in Rensselaer, a small town in northwestern Indiana. (The town's main claim to fame for many years was that it served as the Chicago Bears' training camp) but after high school, Pullin suddenly found himself surrounded by it.

He joined the Navy in 1952 and went from apprentice seaman to Master Chief of the Sixth Fleet — a position surpassed only by that held by the Master Chief of the Seventh Fleet. Pullin served 25 years in the Navy, 18 of those in amphibious forces. He is a veteran of both the Korean War and Vietnam, and made every over-the-beach landing in Vietnam.

"So I don't really care if I ever sail another boat again," he says with a chuckle. But working with them is something else.

Pullin, 52, retired from the Navy in 1975, returning to Rensselaer where he coached basketball and taught at St. Joseph's College. He also served as a program administrator for CETA (Comprehensive Employment Training Act). Each of those jobs was rewarding, Pullin says, but when the opportunity to do what he does best presented itself in the form of the GPYC's harbormaster job, he jumped at it.

"The Grosse Pointe Yacht Club is known the world over, even by people who have never been here," Pullin says, gesturing to the harbor, which was still crowded with boats on a chilly, mid-October afternoon. "I'll bet you that if you were to be around the harbor in say, the Virgin Islands, and mentioned the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, there'd be somebody there who would recognize it."

"It has always been known as the showplace of the Great Lakes . . . and I'd like to maintain that standard."

FOR PULLIN, that means he works from 7 a.m. to "dark-30" during the peak season, which runs from Memorial Day through Labor Day, with July 4 being the heaviest point of the year. During that time, Pullin and his staff perform a variety of tasks, from food and beverage service and waste pump-outs, to serving as diesel and gas suppliers, boat washers, line handlers and sundry items delivery men. The harbormaster is also responsible for keeping a regular maintenance program running, working on preventive maintenance, directing harbor traffic, assisting and coordinating first aid and emergency care and in general, acting as ambassador to visiting boaters and club members alike.

It isn't any easy job, what with the GPYC's 300 wells filled to capacity and the threat of high-water damage hanging over the harbor. But it is a job he relishes.

"I jokingly tell people that for a retired seaman like me, this job is like therapy. But it's not as big a joke as I make it out to be," Pullin says. "People are always telling me what a terrific job I have. They're right, it IS a great job. But when you get a job like this, you have to realize that it's the people who make it a great job."

Pullin doesn't like to take credit for the obvious cosmetic improvements at the GPYC. Maintenance programs under his direction have included rebuilt piers, an improved electrical system and preventive measures which resulted in no water damage to piers, electrical boxes or water lines this year.

"When you have a dedicated harbor engineer like Fred Schriever, it makes the harbormaster look good," Pullin says.

He and Schriever work with 12 harbor boys during the peak of the year; that number decreases to four or five during the remainder of the season. Pullin's harbormaster chores ended Nov. 1. He now turns his full attention to maintenance and the bubbling system.

"THIS YEAR, we're going to attempt to bubble the entire harbor in addition to the individually-bubbled boats. We hope to minimize ice damage on the piers," Pullin adds. ("Bubbling" is a system in which warm water is bubbled through hoses placed around boats which remain moored at the club during the winter.)

That's just one of the many plans Pullin says he has to keep the GPYC as "the jewel of Lake St. Clair." It takes a lot of hours, which he says neither he nor his wife Eileen resents.

"We're here to do a job. If that takes 16 or 18 hours a day, that's the way it is. If we can send people on their way with a smile and speaking favorably about the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, then the time was well-spent."

"Like I said, I'm a people-person. If I can help a young guy with his first boat or stop and talk to an old-timer who's on his third craft, I've done my job," Pullin says.

The bottom line is: this is a fine community and it deserves an excellent yacht club. And I think we've got — from the swim program to the tennis team to the office staff and the world-class chef — just a real fine family."

Pullin and harbor boy Joe Chirico, of Mount Clemens, inspect the club's pedestrian bridge.

Norsemen make it 25 consecutive victories; cagers win

By Josh Abbott
North High

A pair of second quarter touchdowns by North High helped the undefeated Norsemen to a 12-10 win over rival South High at North last Saturday. It was North's third straight win over the Blue Devils and its 25th consecutive regular season victory.

The Blue Devils struck first in this game as junior David Lucas booted a field goal. North's offense struggled a bit in the early going, but switched into gear in the second quarter when an outstanding kickoff return by senior Dave Kopitzke provided good field position.

North took advantage and moved rapidly against a tough South offense behind the running of seniors Mike Miller and Bill Smith. Miller capped the drive with a 29-yard touchdown romp, giving North a 6-3 lead.

On South's next possession, defensive lineman Jim Montgomery picked off a screen pass by Blue Devil quarterback Bryan Jones. North continued to pound away at the running game after the interception. Smith scored from three yards out to give the Norsemen a 12-3 advantage and for the remainder of the third quarter the teams settled into a game of field position.

Midway through the fourth quarter, however, the Blue Devils began to mount a comeback. Helped by Jones' passing and the running of senior back Duff Berschback, South scored to cut the lead to 12-10. With four minutes left, the Norsemen needed two or three first downs to run out the clock. And on a third down and six, they got it when quarterback Bruno Giglio hit tight end Rob Olds for a key first down. A South penalty gave the Norsemen another first down and the clock finally ran out on the Devils.

"The kids really performed well," said coach Frank Sumner. "It was one of the better North-South games."

Miller ran for 126 yards in 17 carries to pace the offense. Several times, he ran with five or six South players hanging on. Miller finished the regular season with 1,090 yards rushing and 14 touchdowns.

The Norsemen begin the state Class A playoffs this Saturday, Nov. 8, at home against Detroit Chadsey (7-2). Game time is 1:30 p.m.

The JV football squad finished an excellent season with a 34-14 thrashing of South. North (8-1) was paced on offense by Jason DeYonker and Chuck Shultz. The defense was led by John Ball, Kevin McCarron and Scott Schorer.

Regional wins

The girls' and boys' cross country teams each captured regional championships recently.

The girls finished first among 11 teams with a total of 343 points. North placed four runners on the All-Region team, including Sandy Smith, second, Christy Drummy, fourth, Anne Finlan, ninth, Shannon Andrews, 11th, and Chrissy David, 18th. The win was North's fourth regional championship in seven years.

The boys' team took home the Region 7, Section 1 championship with 83 points, outdistancing Fraser (88) and Port Huron Northern (97). John Van Syckle (16:99) finished fifth; Adrian Weyhing (16:52) was eighth, and Tom Rice (16:56) finished 10th. The boys' freshmen-sophomore combined team ran well as Bob Straske out-kicked the Sterling Heights High runner to take first (17:44). John Shefferly was ninth (19:42) and Tim Ballew finished 14th (19:02). (By Jamie Wheatley)

Cagers breeze

North's girls' varsity basketball team won its 10th and 11th in a row with romps over Clintondale and L'Anse Creuse last week. On Oct. 28, the Lady Norsemen blew out the Lady Dragons, 52-30, as North was in control all the way. Heather Mergos led with 10 points and 11 rebounds. Kim Reiter followed with nine points and three rebounds and Leslie Talos played a great game all-around, totalling six points, seven rebounds, five assists and four steals. Barbie Loehner added seven points, five steals and four assists.

Two days later, the girls tromped L'Anse Creuse, 51-36. North led 25-21 at halftime, then outscored LC, 19-9 in the fourth quarter. It was a great team victory, highlighted by outstanding pressure defense and help from the bench, especially by Monique Van Assche and Michelle Zrimec. The win gave North a 14-1 mark overall, 8-0 in the league. Robin Wheatley led the scoring with 15 points, five steals and four assists; Mary Lex added 10 points. (By John Laskarides)

Defense stars as gridders lose close one

By Matt Aldrich
South High

South's varsity football team lost a heartbreaker to crosstown rival North, 12-10, last Saturday.

South's offense was led by senior

Duff Berschback, who made an over-the-top, one-yard touchdown and carried the ball 18 times for 60 yards. Junior Doug Lucas kicked a 28-yard field goal for the Devils' other points.

Junior quarterback Bryan Jones completed nine of 20 passes for 92 yards. Berschback had a 15-yard reception, junior Mike Paull caught two passes for 25 yards. Ted Mills also caught two passes for 17 yards. The offense got good protection from Dale Wilson, Dave Fannon and Joe Reynolds.

The Blue Devil defense did another good job of containing North's offense despite giving up two touchdowns.

"Our defense has only allowed 71 points this season, which is one of the lowest totals that we've had at South," said coach Al Moebus.

Juniors Roger Hunwick, Marcus Wysocki, Lucas and senior Eric Nord did a good job on defense.

Berschback and Fannon were selected for the EML All-League offensive first team, while Lucas was selected for defense. Second team selections were Reynolds on offense, and Nord and Hunwick for defense. Honorable mentions went to Wysocki, Wilson and Jonas Rodger. Paull was named All-League punter.

South's freshmen football team ended its season on a high note, defeating crosstown rival, North 18-0, Wednesday, Oct. 29.

Joe Caldwell started the scoring for the Blue Devils, with a 55-yard TD in the second quarter. Later that quarter, Mike Montagne put South up 12-0, going two yards for the touchdown. To put the game out of reach, Montagne scored again in the fourth quarter with a 5-yard TD.

The defense did a super job, while North never posed a threat throughout the game. The defense gave up an average of only seven points per game this season. The Devils' overall record was 4-2-3.

Cagers romp
South's JV basketball trounced

Mount Clemens, 50-15 on Oct. 30.

The key to the win was a well-balanced attack. Leading the Devils in scoring were sophomores Kathy McGrath with 12 points, Sarah Heck with 11, and Heather Adragna with 10. Lorrie Geist dominated under the boards to grab 11 rebounds. Megan Nelson was the leader on defense.

The cagers are now 7-1 in the EML, 10-4 overall.

CC teams end year

South's girls' cross country team placed 21st among 28 teams Saturday at the state meet at IMH Brookwood Golf Course in Flint.

In a field of 190 runners, Toni Tedesco finished 80th (20:42); Wendy Berger was 83rd (20:43); Micha Song was 89th (20:48); Traci Lee finished 98th (21:02); Vicky Groustra was 101st (21:04); Jennifer McSorley was 136th (21:27); and Alexandra Anglewitz finished 175th (22:54).

Despite not placing in the top 20 at the states, boys' cross country coach Tom Wise said he was very pleased with his runners' times.

Senior Kevin English ran a personal best of 16:42, and reached his goal of beating opponents he had lost to earlier in the season.

Mark Sonnenberg tied the freshmen record (17:47) on a very tough state course. Sonnenberg shared the record with freshman David Kerfoot. Kerfoot (17:58) and Phil Orton (17:13) also ran fine races.

"I'm really excited about the team's future, because I will basically be the same team for the next two years. I'm going to be looking forward to next season," Wise said.

Knights' soccer championship hopes end with loss

The last minutes ticked away on the big scoreboard clock situated at the Northport end of Andover High School's soccer field. And with them went the University Liggett soccer team's hopes for a state championship.

Northport, a team deprived of the top honors the last two years, would not be denied this time, winning the Class D championship with a 3-1 victory over ULS on Nov. 1.

University Liggett School came into the game as the No. 1-ranked team in Class D, sporting a record counter-attacked down the left wing and caught the Knights' defense out of position, tying the game 1-1. The remainder of the half was ULS' and by halftime the Knights had outshot Northport by a margin of 14-5.

The second half saw a reversal of roles. Northport came out charging against a ULS team which appeared to have lost its momentum. Just after ULS' Williams slammed a shot off the Northport crossbar 12 minutes into play, Northport worked the ball down the field quickly and scored momentum swung to them in those first minutes of the second half. We couldn't sustain an attack and our defense made a couple of mistakes. We were the better skilled team, but perhaps Northport, having missed out the last two years, was hungrier."

The loss ended an exceptionally strong 17-5-1 season for ULS. The Knights won the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference, were district and regional champions, and ended up No. 2 in the state.

Maitland not only placed second in the boys' individual run, but also won a seventh place slot on the 15-man All-State Class D roster — a first for University Liggett School.

Ajiri rushes for 130

The ULS varsity football Knights ended their season on Saturday, Nov. 1, with a 41-0 loss to Centreville.

Dike Ajiri rushed for 130 yards and had 17 tackles. Other leading tacklers were Agu Nwosu and Ted Evans, with eight each. Quarterback Bill Listman completed five a significant improvement over last year's performances against the same teams.

Last week, ULS played at Southfield Christian and Lutheran Northwest. On Friday, Oct. 31, against Lutheran Northwest, ULS lost by only six points.

ULS was represented by junior Gordie Maitland at the 1986 Michigan High School Athletic Association Class D cross country state finals, held at West Shore Community College in Ludington, last Saturday.

Maitland, the Knights' captain and front runner, turned in an impressive 17:22 for second place in the boys' individual run. The course was described by Whitmore Lake coach Larry Steke as "very challenging." Coming through the chute 10 seconds behind the first place winner Bob Brent, of Hale, Maitland congratulated him, adding with a smile, "I hope you're a senior!"

Coach Bob Newwine commented that although the Knights had a tough 1986 season, they made great strides in bringing football back after ULS dropped the program in 1984. He also stated that the Knights will miss their three senior captains, Bill Listman, Pahl Zinn and Tim Simonds, along with four other starting seniors, Eric Wise, Agu Nwosu, Mike Navarro and Mike Isip. ## 'True Stories' is David Byrne's nonconformist look at life

By Michael Chapp

David Byrne is not what one would call a conformist.

As leader of the Talking Heads for the last 11 years, he has always appealed to a somewhat limited audience who appreciate his twistedly poetic self-expression and out-of-the-mainstream-style of music.

So when the time came for him to make his debut as a motion picture director, it's only natural that the result would be "True Stories," a film which not only wallows in its absurdity, but is downright genuine because of its esoteric nature.

Defying any sort of definitive plot synopsis, "True Stories" is actually a potpourri of diverse filmic genres and styles. It relies heavily on music and visuals to get its meaning across, yet it also makes use of a carefully crafted script by Byrne, Beth Henley and Stephen Tololowsky.

To say that the movie is simply a pseudo-documentary about a small town in Texas would be to discount all of the intricately detailed character analyses Byrne so artfully incorporated. But to say that the movie is some sort of wild character study with no basis in reality would be just as erroneous.

The fact is, Byrne based this film on real events — thus the title — but added a lot of spice to the recipe by twisting certain things to suit his own tastes.

The main storyline of the film, common place as it may sound, is only the point of departure for the little vignettes that Byrne serves. Virgil is a small town in the heart of Texas preparing to celebrate its specialness in connection with the state's sesquicentennial. Parades are being planned and the big event, a big talent show, is to be the biggest thing in the area since the party Sam Houston threw at the Alamo.

The film begins with a history — all the way back to prehistoric times — of the town of Virgil. Soon though, Byrne hops into his red convertible and takes viewers on a ride through the town, introducing a bevy of characters too weird to be true, or so weird they have to be true; it's hard to decide. There's the lazy woman (Swoosie Kurtz), who's so rich she hasn't had to get out of bed for years. There's the cute woman (Alix Elias), who dresses in pink and likes babies and flowers and small furry animals and such. There's the lying woman (Jo Harvey Allen), who exaggerates the truth more than a little bit. There's an old spiritual leader (Robert "Pops" Staples), who heals townfolk of what ails them. There's a married couple (Spalding Gray, Annie McEnroe) who get along beautifully and have a perfect marriage, except they haven't talked for years. And there's Louis Fyne, the "normal guy" in Virgil; if advertising on television for a wife can be considered normal.

Byrne lets each of the characters do what they do best: he lets them be themselves. Indeed, Virgil is any small town in America, but on a hyperbolic scale. Byrne has taken a few human idiosyncracies and has put them on the screen to represent the oddities of all humans.

The film's music works as well as the story elements to further the action. Toe-tappin' and hard rockin', the beat doesn't stop for more than five or ten minutes at a time. The music, in fact, actually saves the film a few times from rambling on ad nauseum. Most of the aforementioned characters have their own solos, each of which compliment the few songs performed by the Talking Heads themselves.

Most of the film's music, in fact, was written by the Talking Heads. It works well. "Wild Life," for example, is as powerful on the screen as it is on the radio. Maybe even more so, since the film is not a compilation of music videos, but rather a movie which integrates music as a supplement to the story. It's refreshing to see that Byrne has his priorities in order.

"True Stories" deserves a recommendation, but with a few caveats: One should not expect to see nothing but David Byrne and the Talking Heads. As the almost omniscient narrator, Byrne does have a substantial part, it's true. But the real stars are the characters, and it is each of the individuals who get the lion's share of screen time in "True Stories," not Byrne. The rest of the Heads do not appear in the movie.

The other thing is the humor. Those who expect a blatant comedy will be disappointed. The humor is as dry as the Sahara and as understated as... well, the man responsible for it.

But for those who appreciate something out of the ordinary, and something which demands more from the audience than just cerebral vegetation, "True Stories" is a good choice for an evening's entertainment. It's hip, flippant and a little bit anti-establishment. Just like the man responsible for it.

"True Stories" is a slice of life ala David Byrne.

Bare feet

... tickling the keyboard is among the antics of Prof. Peter Schickele's "P.D.Q. Bach" spoof of the classical master to be presented at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 19, at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts. Participating in the "evening of musical madness" will be the Warren Symphony Orchestra. Tickets at $16 for adults and $14 for students and senior citizens may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The Center is located on the Center Campus of Macomb Community College at Hall (M-59) and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

Las Vegas Night to benefit band

The Lakeview High School Band Parents Association will sponsor a Las Vegas Night, Friday, Nov. 7, at the Shores Banquet Club on Harper in St. Clair Shores beginning at 7 p.m.

A $5 admission will include $2 of free chips. Snacks will be available. All proceeds go to the Lakeview High School Marching Band.

'Guys and Dolls' at Macomb Center

Five performances of "Guys and Dolls," the long-running Broadway musical about the Damon Runyon underworld of tinnhorn gamblers, rogues, tarts, deadbeats and sentimental chorus girls populating New York's Times Square, will be presented over two November weekends at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts.

Shows are set for Friday, Nov. 7, and Saturday, Nov. 8 — both at 8 p.m. — and for Friday, Nov. 14, at 8 p.m., followed by two performances on Saturday, Nov. 15 — a 2 p.m. matinee and at 8 p.m.

With songs by Frank Loesser, who has written such hits as "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition," "Baby It's Cold Outside" and "Once In Love With Amy," this musical comedy that ran more than three years on Broadway resurrects Runyon's most lovable, laughable characters.

The show's producer is Larry Carrico, the Macomb Center's technical director. The director-choreographer is Jeffery K. Neill and the musical director and orchestra conductor is Wendell Kindberg. Both Neill and Kindberg are from New York and bring 20 years of professional experience to the production.

Tickets for all performances are $7 for adults and $5 for students and senior citizens. Special group rates are available for groups of 20 persons or more.

Tickets may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The Center is located on the Center Campus of Macomb Community College at Hall and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

Amnesty group schedules benefit

A benefit performance will be sponsored by the Detroit group of Amnesty International, an independent, worldwide movement working for the release of all prisoners of conscience, fair and prompt trails for political prisoners and an end to torture and executions.

The raucous Russian satire, "Heart of a Dog," was penned as a novella in 1925 by Mikhail Bul-gakov and was adapted for the stage by Frank Galati in 1985. An 8:30 p.m. performance will be preceded by a reception at 7:30 at the Detroit Repertory Theatre, 13103 Woodrow Wilson on Thursday, Nov. 20.

Contributions to Amnesty International are tax deductible. For further information or to reserve tickets, call 882-2375.

A check for $2,500 should brighten the days for eaters at the Capuchin Soup Kitchen. Pointes East, the organization of 18 eastside restaurants, raised the money through a picnic. ### Whoopi is the star in 'Jumpin' Jack Flash'

By Marian Trainor

"Jumpin' Jack Flash" is a one-woman show, and that woman, Whoopi Goldberg, is terrific. From the misused Celie in "The Color Purple" to the raucous, rowdy clowning Terry Doolittle in this comic thriller is quite a change of pace, but Whoopi moves into the part with gusto.

The director, Penny Marshall, prepares us for her remarkable change of character by imposing credits on scenes in her apartment, panning the camera on giant posters of favorite movie stars, gaudy, mismatched furnishings and cute little plaster figures, the sort you might pick up at a carnival.

When the camera finally comes to rest, we see Terry snuggled under the covers hugging a stuffed dog. As she rolls out of bed, flings her hair into place and stuffs her feet into a pair of bear-claw slippers, we know that here is an individual.

Dressed in her orange sneakers and oversized overalls, she goes to work, stopping along the way to greet people she passes. Breezing into the bank, she slides down the bannister to a lower level where she is a computer operator.

It is a fairly loose operation in spite of the efforts of the manager to establish the proper sedate atmosphere.

Terry enlivens her day by sending personal messages on the computer along with the financial statements. Her counterpart at a Japanese bank gets a recipe for yankee pot roast. She feels sorry for him eating all that raw fish.

Interspersing high finance with the personal touch is one thing, but a message she receives on her terminal one day is quite another.

It is a call for help from a British intelligence operative known as Jumpin' Jack Flash, an intelligence agent held behind Soviet lines. He wants Terry to help him, a request that ultimately gets her involved with the KGB and the CIA.

Impulsive and eager for adventure, Terry tries to break the code that will enable her to exchange messages with Jack.

It's all hilarious fun with Whoopi as leader. She gives her whole self to her role. Her expressive eyes bulge with exaggerated fright in tight incidents. She gets mad with a passion and has a vocabulary to go with it and she is an expert at tossing off rib-tickling asides.

There are other characters in the film but they don't stand out against Whoopi's quasi-nerd character.

Who Jumpin' Jack Flash is or exactly who the villains are in this illogical espionage story is not made clear, but one thing is certain — Whoopi Goldberg is star quality.

Benefit to aid students

Two of Detroit's hottest bands, CIA and The Batboys, will perform at the City Club Thursday, Nov. 13, when the Alumni Association and the Student Government of the Center for Creative Studies-College of Art and Design present "Funderwear Raiser," a benefit entertainment in support of the Student Emergency Loan Fund.

The benefit's objective, according to Student Government copresident Andrea Cifor, is to expand the financial resources of the existing loan fund so that it may better serve students at the college when they need emergency short-term loans to meet educational expenses.

CIA and The Batboys are donating their services, and the City Club is contributing its facilities and staff free of charge to the benefit, which is being co-sponsored by Windsor's CJAM University Radio. The activities at "Funderwear Raiser" will continue from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. Admission will be $3 for college students and alumni, and $5 for the general public. Advance tickets may be purchased at the City Club or by contacting the Alumni Relations Office at the College of Art and Design, at 872-3118, during regular office hours.

'Death by Chocolate' to open Regina season

The Regina Players will open the theatrical season Nov. 7, 8 and 9 with the performance of "Death by Chocolate," a farcical comedy by Paul Freed.

Curtain time is 7:30 p.m. in the Regina High School auditorium. Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens. For more information, call Edmond Guay at 526-0220.

Regina is located at 20200 Kelly Road, just south of Eight Mile in Harper Woods.

MOT auditions

The Michigan Opera Theatre will hold auditions for major roles in the Opera-In-Residence touring production of Sousa's "El Capitan" on Monday, Nov. 17. Auditions will take place from 2 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. at Central United Methodist Church, located on Adams at Woodward in Detroit.

Singers interested in auditioning for one of the seven available full- and part-time positions must call the Michigan Opera Theatre Community Programs Department at 874-7850 to schedule an appointment. Applicants should prepare an aria in its original key and language, and one character number from the musical theatre/opera repertoire.

From January through April 1987, Michigan Opera Theatre's annual residency tour will perform throughout Michigan in a minimum 10-week tour. Under the auspices of the Michigan Opera Theatre Community Programs Department, headed by Karen DiChiera, this year's "Salute to Michigan" tour will focus on the State's Sesquicentennial celebration, and will feature a full-length production of John Philip Sousa's comic operetta, "El Capitan."

BLACKHAWKS-MAJOR MAGICS

Excellent goaltending by the Hawks' James Custer and the Magics' Frank Zimmer highlighted this game. The Hawks' B-line provided the edge as they defeated the Magics, 3-1. Chris Amsden opened the scoring from Doug Semack and John Solaka. Brian Everham of the Magics scored from Ranny Sawaf and Michael Paul. The Hawks also got goals from Solaka and from Frank Orlando; Orlando, Byron Brewer and Amsden drew assists. Playing well for their teams were the Magics' Nate Bayko, Ricky Carlson, Brent Kuhar and Andrew Warner and the Hawks' Blair Ridder, Danny Scott and Jed Scott.

CHIEFS-BLACKHAWKS

Kevin Kasiborski scored three goals and Chris Smith and Chris Coates added one apiece as the Sequoia Chiefs defeated the Blackhawks, 5-2. The Chiefs' Chris Ford and Joey Berger played strong A-line defense against a persistent attack from the Hawks' Gibson, Platt and King. Tim Brewer and Ann Platt scored for the Blackhawks. C-liners Zyatt, Balesky and Meldrum played well for the Chiefs.

ARROWS-BRUIINS

The Arrows topped the Bruins, 8-1. The Bruins got on the board first on Bill Conway's goal from Tim Brady and Joey Lucido. But the excellent goaltending of Peter Sullivan and Matt Debski's fine defensive play helped keep the Bruins scoreless the rest of the way. Meanwhile, the Arrows' offense, led by John Staniszewski (four goals) and Mike Getz (three assists), took over. Stephen Andris, Ben Debski, Walter Belenky and Bill Faber also scored; Patrick Pound, George Andary, Jeff Giffer, Billy Crandall, Chris Mitchell and Charlie Braun drew assists. David Kerwin, Matt Descamps, Jack Ryan, Stephen Owens and Tim Miller skated well for the Bruins.

ARROWS-CHIEFS

The Chiefs jumped to an early 2-0 lead in the first period, but the Arrows came back to take a 5-3 win. Coates put the Chiefs in front with two first period goals — one on an assist from Gordie Todd — but the Arrows rebounded with an unassisted tally by Andris in the first period and two goals by Staniszewski in the second. Coates' third goal of the game tied it up again at 3-3, but Andris scored again to give the Arrows a 4-3 margin. Sullivan's third period goal clinched the win. Nicholas Miotke played very well in goal for the Arrows; he had help on defense from Joseph Wernet, George Andary, Matt and Ben Debski, Getz, Giffer and Braun.

The Chiefs' Justin Lariscy and Matt Lariscy, Joey Berger, Brian and Kevin Kasiborski, Ryan Oren and Ranu Zayat skated well, as did the Arrows' Belenky, Chris Mitchell, Pound, Faber and Crandall.

COUGARS-CENTURY 21

The Cougars chalked up their second win of the year, topping Century 21, 5-3. Peter Birgbauer opened the scoring for the Cougars, from Gene Baratta and Sumeet Karnik. Century 21 got that back on a power play when Massu scored from J. Santo and R. McCain. But Birgbauer's unassisted goal gave the Cougars a 2-1 lead. A-liner Mike Weyhing made it 3-1 when he converted Behi Rabbani's sharp pass and Birgbauer completed his hat trick (John Lawrence assisting) to make the score 4-1. Century 21 closed the gap in the third period, despite the fact that Cougar goalie Paul Huebner stopped several shots. Massu scored from Geoff Kimmel and Santo, then Allard added an unassisted goal. But the Cougars shut the door the rest of the way and took the victory. Tom Stroble played an excellent game, pulling double shifts and skating well for the Cougars.

TALONS-MAJOR MAGICS

Paced by two goals each from Annie Morris and Joshua Prues, the Talons skated to an impressive 7-4 victory over the Major Magics. Brian Law and Abbey Fox added unassisted goals and Aaron Ascencio scored from Andrew Ricci and Fox to close the scoring. The Magics got goals from Elich, Baskel and Kuhar; Zimmer and J. Bayko drew assists. Brian Brown and Annie Gage played well for the Talons, as did first-time goalie Brian Fehling. Bill Fox coaches the Talons.

TALONS-COUGARS

The Talons jumped off to an impressive 3-0 lead on goals by Nathan Ascencio (two) and Fox, but had to hold off a furious Cougar attack to take a 5-2 win. The Cougars came back on goals by Rabbani and Lawrence from Weyhing and Karnik. But the Talons put the game away on Fehling's first goal and on Ascencio's unassisted tally. Playing well defensively for the Talons were Jimmy Peterka, John Graffius and goalie Kevin Collins. Birgbauer, Lawrence and Crain were outstanding for the Cougars.

Mite AA

Howe, Dionne, Gretzky. They've all skated on the ice at Joe Louis Arena. But last Wednesday, Oct. 29, it was Monroe's Grosse Pointe Raiders 9-year-old travel team's turn as the squad faced off against Livonia's Mite AA on the JLA surface.

Livonia opened the scoring on Matt Harrigan's goal from Brian Lilienthal and took a 2-0 lead when Kevin Swider put one past Monroe's goalie Jamie Bufalino. But Grosse Pointe put the pressure on and it resulted in Kevin O'Malley's goal from David Ferguson and Carl Rashid. Livonia scored again and led 3-1 after one period. The second period was all defense as Monroe's George Christensen, Emmet Baratta, Rick Gokenbach and Bobby Rahaim shut Livonia down and allowed just three shots on goal. Mike Anway made it 3-2 with the period's only goal; Pat Brennan and David Pulis drew assists.

Three minutes into the third period, Rashid buried the puck in the net after taking passes from Gokenbach and O'Malley. Livonia took a 4-3 lead, but Pointe forwards Tony Rubino and Terry Brennan pressed Livonia's defense and with three minutes left in the game, Anway scored his second goal of the game to give the boys from Grosse Pointe a 4-4 tie. Anway was the game's No. 1 star. Livonia's Lilienthal was the No. 2 star and O'Malley took No. 3 honors.

"This was the best game we've had this year," said Dan Belisle Jr., director of amateur hockey for the Detroit Red Wings.

Monroe's is coached by Mike Anway and assistant coach Dr. Ed O'Malley. Rick Gokenbach is manager.

RAIDERS-LINCOLN PARK

Monroe's took a 9-0 win. Anway, Brennan, Ferguson and O'Malley had two goals each; Rubino also scored. Assists went to Brennan, Rubino, and Ferguson (two each), and Carl Rashid, Bob Rahaim, David Pulis, Gokenbach, Brennan and Anway. Bufalino got the shutout in goal.

RAIDERS-RIVERSIDE

Brennan led the way to a 9-2 victory over the Canadians, scoring four goals. Christensen, Ferguson (two), Anway, Pulis and O'Malley also scored. Barratta, Rashid, Pulis, Brennan, Rubino and Anway (three) got credit for assists.

RAIDERS-GPD

Anway scored twice and O'Malley once as the Pointers turned back a determined GPD squad, 3-1. Ferguson, Brennan and Rashid earned assists. Bufalino was steady in the nets, helping Monroe's remain undefeated.

Bantam Division

CHIEFS-RAIDERS

The Bantam Chiefs, sponsored by John Cueter's Oakland Dodge, opened their pre-season with a good effort in a 5-3 loss to the St. Clair Shores Raiders. Mike Kisskalt scored the Chiefs' first goal, assisted by Pete Cueter and Jack McSorley. Brad Russell put the Chiefs up 2-0, on a pass from McSorley. John Olmstead's unassisted goal was the Chiefs' only other score.

CHIEFS-BULLDOGS

The Chiefs came away with a 3-2 pre-season victory over the Warren Bulldogs. After falling behind in the game, McSorley converted a pass at the goal crease from linemate Russell. Kisskalt scored in the second period from McSorley and Russell. With the score tied at 2-2 with 10 seconds to go, Vince Palazzolo intercepted a Bulldog pass and fed Jim Alderton, who scored the winner on a breakaway.

CHIEFS-FLAMES

The Chiefs opened the regular season with a 3-0 victory over the Grosse Pointe Flames. Matt Krieg's outstanding goaltending was a big factor in the victory, as was the defense of Hea, Cueter, Juan Ganum and John McGlone. Palazzolo scored from Kisskalt and Russell. Russell added a goal on Ganum's pass from the point and Eddie Barbieri closed the scoring when he converted passes from Palazzolo and Alderton.

CHIEFS-ASTROS

The Chiefs had an easy time of it as Krieg notched his second shutout in this 10-0 win over the Fraser Astros. Goal scorers were Kisskalt and Barbieri (two each), Russell, Olmstead, Palazzolo, Alderton, Hea and Brendan Rohan. Earning assists were McSorley, Kisskalt, Olmstead (four), Scott Soule, McGlone, Alderton and Watkins.

CHIEFS-FLAMES

The Flames topped the Chiefs, 4-1, in a special Halloween game which was followed by a pizza and soda pop session for both squads. The Flames got goals from Derek Field, Renato Roxas, Paul Cavazos and Blake Crawford and assists from Crawford, Scott Collins and Andy Vyletei. Barbieri scored from Ganum for the Chiefs' only goal.

CHIEFS-KINGS

The Chiefs regained their winning form, 6-3, over the St. Clair Shores Kings. Scoring for the Chiefs were Soule, Hea, Kisskalt, Russell and Barbieri (two). Assists went to Alderton, Barbieri, Russell, and Kisskalt.

FAMILY LIFE EDUCATION COUNCIL

EIGHT PAGES

FIRST ANNUAL BUGLER SUPPLEMENT TO THE GROSSE POINTE NEWS

Why the Bugler?

As you read this special edition newspaper, "The Bugler," we hope you'll share both our excitement and enthusiasm as we announce the 20th anniversary of the Family Life Education Council.

We named our newspaper "The Bugler" for two reasons. First, in a neighborly way, we're trumpeting the fact that F.L.E.C. has enjoyed a 20-year tradition of service to the community. There have been many times when F.L.E.C., quietly and without fanfare came up with programs that served obvious needs in the community.

But there were other times when F.L.E.C. had to lead the way. That's the second reason for calling this issue "The Bugler." Dr. Frank Parcells, one of the founders of F.L.E.C. spoke of the history and the mission of F.L.E.C. at the 20th anniversary dinner. It is a history that included some controversy at the time when F.L.E.C. was trying to help awaken the community to take action on unpleasant problems affecting young people and families.

He said, "Nobody likes people who wake them up. Not in the morning or the afternoon. In this sense, F.L.E.C. has served the community in a vital way. It's been the bugler for two decades."

Since we began in 1966, we've been a grass-roots organization, and F.L.E.C. is still community-based. Many local doctors, lawyers, social workers and nurses volunteer their time to F.L.E.C.'s many programs. In addition, lay volunteers from the community are trained by skilled professionals to do short term crisis intervention and community education.

From its very beginning, F.L.E.C.'s leadership has consisted of people from all parts of the community: local school officials, ministers, house-wives, lawyers, doctors, social workers and many others. This remains true.

F.L.E.C.'s charter group was bound by a common interest: the problems of young people and families which developed in the 1960s and 70s as society changed rapidly and took new and unprecedented directions.

F.L.E.C.'s founders and those who followed their lead were eventually joined with a professional staff who gave valuable assistance in tailoring programs to community needs. Thus, a synergism took place that led to the development of programs that include:

- Youth Assistance, a guidance program for young people who are in trouble with the law.
- Alcohol Awareness, a peer counseling program where upperclassmen go into the elementary and middle schools to talk about drinking.
- Parenting Workshop, a well attended series of classes that teaches parents how to understand and communicate with teenagers.
- Center Point, one of the first organizations to help young people in crisis in the metropolitan area.
- Phone Friend, a call-in service for latchkey youngsters who need someone to talk to.
- Medical Clinic, pregnancy testing and counseling plus venereal disease testing and treatment.
- Legal Clinic, a resource for people with simple legal questions. Volunteer attorneys refer more complex problems to other services.

The list reflects the organization's role as a "bugler" attempting to awaken a community to a variety of problems and our quiet role of filling needs everyone also recognizes.

We are proud of the fact that we recognized some problems — like drug abuse — earlier than others and took steps to deal with it. Some of these steps were controversial at the time, but twenty years of history has validated the direction we took.

One adult and one young person in trouble with the law spend quality time together each week in the Youth Assistance Program. It's a formula that keeps youngsters out of trouble. Livonia's Y.A. program is five years old and has an 82 percent success rate.

Youth Assistance — Part of F.L.E.C.'s Next 20 Years

UPDATE — Shortly before the Bugler went to print, the city councils of the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods voted matching funds, $21,000 total, to equal a grant from the Skillman Foundation to support Youth Assistance for 1987.

Thank you, all the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods, for helping us to serve you better.

"Youth Assistance may well be the focal point of F.L.E.C. for its second 20 years."

— Rebecca Reedus, director

There's a new way of handling youngsters who get into trouble with the law. It's called Youth Assistance and it's F.L.E.C.'s newest contribution to the community. Our full-fledged Y.A. program is in its second year and we've seen it grow tremendously from the pilot program called the Juvenile Offender Program we began in 1980.

The local police, courts, and sometimes the schools and parents themselves send young people to Y.A. when they've had their first brush with the law. The Y.A. program offers everyone a sensible and workable alternative to the labyrinth of the juvenile justice system.

Wayne County's Juvenile Court can take seven months and more to hear a case. Lesser cases are dismissed at early stages in order to clear the docket for other, more serious youth crimes such

F.L.E.C. helps youth through two tough decades, 1966-86

How FLEC Began

In 1966, against a background of what is often called "the turbulent '60s," several local professionals gathered in Friendship Hall at the Christ Episcopal Church. They met to share their concerns about trends they saw emerging among the young people they worked with in their various professions.

In a very real sense, each brought a piece of a complex puzzle to this meeting and when all the pieces were carefully put together — it was clear that the community needed to develop new, imaginative and responsive approaches to help young people in trouble.

The Family Life Education Council was born out of this sense of concern coupled with an ambition to find solutions.

Examples of the puzzle pieces and the professionals who found them include:

- Doctors, like pediatrician Cal Worrell, were seeing an increase in drug use in young patients. They were also noting an increase in teen pregnancies and venereal disease.
- Detectives in the five Grosse Pointes saw more juvenile crime, including a steep increase in drug abuse.
- Mental health practitioners like Dr. Frank Parcells who was then the president of the school board were seeing signs that the family unit was beginning to experience more and more pressure and stress. They also saw parents bringing troubled children in for therapy. In many cases, the parents did not suspect that drug abuse was often part of the problem.
- Teachers and administrators like Richard Kay, then head of Community Services for Grosse Pointe Schools, also saw many changes in students: some came to their classes drunk, while others were nodding off from drugs. In addition, some students were seeking more knowledge about sexual reproduction and relationships.

No one remembers who called the first meeting. The following were there: Richard Kay, Charles Parcells, president of the Grosse Pointe P.T.A.; Hugh Riddleberger, headmaster of the Grosse Pointe University School; Louise TeWalt, president of the Grosse Pointe High School Mothers' Club; John Lake, director of the War Memorial; Ed Krattli, director of the Neighborhood Club; Marilyn Rizzo, parochial school coordinator for the Mothers' Health Council, and Dr. Harry Meserve, president of the Grosse Pointe Ministerial Association.

Worrell said he was elected president because he came in late. Meserve took the job of vice-president; Rizzo became secretary and Krattli, treasurer.

They carefully named the organization Family Life Education Council hoping to avert any alarm or negative reaction from the community.

The Early Years

"The baby boomers were coming of age and things were getting out of control," said Worrell, the first president of F.L.E.C. "Every generation has to rebel. In this case, there were so many of them and so few of us (adults)."

"Those youngsters were full of hopes, dreams and high idealism. They saw through the hypocrisies of the adult world, but many allowed themselves to be drawn into drug abuse, sexual promiscuity and alcoholism," he continued. "They were so perceptive in some ways and so gullible in others."

"It's not like we wanted to focus on drugs, we had to."

In 1967, the G.P. Board of Education took F.L.E.C. under its wing and the organization's first educational program was as controversial as the times.

F.L.E.C. brought Dr. Mary Calderone to present a series of workshops. Calderone is one of the founders of Planned Parenthood and of SIECUS (Sex Information Education Council of the United States.)

"She talked until she was hoarse," Worrell said. "She talked to all area students: public, private and parochial. She talked to the Wayne County Medical Society, to teachers at a three-day workshop and to J.P. McCarthy on his Focus Show."

Soon afterwards, the John Birch Society staged a backlash rally at the then new auditorium at Grosse Pointe North. Sex education was such a sensitive topic in that era that the rally attracted people from all over the state.

F.L.E.C. Focuses on Drug Abuse

With a sense of dedication and courage, the organization moved ahead full-bore, and, in 1969, adopted by-laws, cut the umbilical cord to the schools and went out to seek funds to support its mission. For a number of years, that mission narrowed to drug abuse.

The Grosse Pointe Rotary Club stepped forward with a contribution of $10,000 to help F.L.E.C. As awareness increased about the organization, donations of time and money flowed in.

The scope of the drug abuse problem along with its devastating effects forced the young organization to commit all of its resources to that problem, while other organizations like the Health Education Council concentrated on the problems of sex education.

"It's not like we wanted to focus on drugs, we had to," explained Worrell. "We were the one organization in the community that was viable and able to pick up the gauntlet."

By 1969, F.L.E.C. brought in Dr. Donal Louria to speak on "The Drug Scene and Community Responsibility," but more importantly, the Grosse Pointes were one of the first in the tri-county area to start a drug hot-line and rap session for the young. This was the beginning of the Center Point Crisis Intervention Center.

Worrell said it was difficult to get the community to even realize it had a drug problem, so F.L.E.C. gathered proof. Eventually, F.L.E.C. staffers had the names of 400 heroin users.

"We called the parents, asked them to come and talk to us about options for their children," Worrell said. "Most were cooperative, some denied the problem and a few were indignant. Some of the parents wouldn't accept their child's problem even when the youngster was nearly 'shooting up' right before their eyes."

"It was an epidemic, and in an epidemic, all kinds of young people were touched. You name it — name any profession — and we could tell you a story of a family with a child hooked on hard drugs."

One of the options F.L.E.C. could offer parents was Center Point. And as time went on, that offer became a better and better one. Center Point was on the leading edge in suburban crisis intervention. The only other center in the tri-county area at that time was Common Ground.

"There was no model for a training program," said Sean Hogan-Downey, who began as a volunteer on the crisis line and became the director of Center Point from 1969 to 1975. "We structured our program as we went along. At first we accepted counselors who were recovering drug addicts along with college students studying mental health and others who simply wanted to help. Then we developed training and staff requirement programs. We were a loosely organized team then and today we're a sophisticated organization."

"All along, the volunteers were dedicated to a group of young people who were not the most appreciative or approachable youngsters of that time," she remembered. "Doctors would come in at 3 a.m. to check on kids who had overdosed. Volunteers watched over the safety of those coming down from a trip on L.S.D."

When Center Point moved from the Neighborhood Club to a vacant store

Jacobson's bought prior to its expansion, it encountered considerable resentment.

Center Point was now located at Notre Dame and Kercheval. Its long-haired clients, antiwar posters, and mattresses on the floor were on Grosse Pointe's Main Street. It was an ugly sore that people didn't want to see, Worrell said. F.L.E.C. moved the drop-in center to the Unitarian Church on Maumee and continued to make its programs more sophisticated.

Worrell said F.L.E.C. soon discovered that the Synanon model of group therapy didn't work for heroin addicts. F.L.E.C. then teamed up with several doctors from Lafayette Clinic, a psychiatric hospital in Detroit that also does training and research. Worrell then applied for and received one of the first licenses in the country to dispense methadone.

By 1970, F.L.E.C. opened a Methadone Withdrawal Clinic for adolescent

Why the Bugler?

For example, when we founded Center Point, a crisis center for youngsters caught up in the drug culture, we were much criticized.

There were people who thought Grosse Pointe had no drug problem. As they came to realize that the drug problem knows no city limit, many wanted "those kids" kept away from their kids. Finally, most recognized that drug abuse was such a pervasive problem that the entire community had to take action.

In recent times, drug abuse has received both national and world-wide attention.

We at F.L.E.C. take a special pride in knowing that for two decades we have been dedicated to creating both an awareness of this problem plus other programs that effectively work for solutions.

Susan Stedem and Athena Pappas are two of 50 high school volunteers who do peer counseling on substance abuse in the 5th and 6th grades of area schools.

Volunteer To Help The Best Cause Around — The Family

The Family Life Education Council is always looking for a few more good volunteers for programs designed to help individuals and families. F.L.E.C. programs depend on community people helping their neighbors.

What does it take to be a volunteer for F.L.E.C.? A warm and patient heart, time to train under top professionals from our staff and the community, and a commitment to devote a certain number of hours.

We need volunteers of all ages and backgrounds:

- Teens like to sign up for our very popular Alcohol Awareness program and go into 5th and 6th grade classrooms to talk about alcohol and drug abuse.

- High school volunteers can also answer the "PHONE-FRIEND" lines for latch-key children who are worried or lonesome.

- People 17 and up can work for Center Point Crisis Center or our newest program, The Grosse Pointe/Harper Woods Youth Assistance Program. At Center Point volunteers answer phones and offer short-term counseling, and refer people in crisis to other agencies. Youth Assistance is one-on-one counseling with a young person who has gotten in trouble with the law.

- Center Point counselors can take additional training and move into the Medical Clinic where they supplement the work of paid doctors and counsel on problem pregnancies and family planning.

- Attorneys can donate time to Center Point's Legal Center.

The hours for training and volunteer time are as varied as the program. For more information or to volunteer for a program, call 885-3510.

Alcohol Awareness

Some 50 high school students train each fall to lead class discussions with 5th and 6th graders in the spring. Grade schoolers feel they're getting inside information from older students they look up to. The peer counseling supplements intensive drug education taught by adults from other organizations who are invited into the schools.

There are 24 hours of training workshops led by professionals in the alcohol and drug abuse fields. High schoolers learn how to listen with empathy, how adult alcoholism affects children, what support groups there are for alcoholics and family members, and what happens when drugs are mixed with alcohol, among other topics.

Classes have already started for this year. They began Monday evening, Nov. 3, and will continue through Jan. 12. Elementary school presentations are done in March and April. However, high school students who want to volunteer and missed the deadline for the Alcohol Awareness program may be interested in next year or in Phone Friend.

Phone Friend

Every school day, from 3 to 6 p.m., teens staff the "warm lines" at F.L.E.C. headquarters behind Cottage Hospital. They're taking calls from latch-key children home alone after school. The caller's average age is seven. And they call because they're lonely or scared, need someone to talk to, hear noises in the house, or don't know how to solve a problem at home. And sometimes, they're pranksters. But the teen never knows what to expect when picking up a receiver.

Phone Friend received 3,245 calls during this past spring semester.

Teen counselors need to have a sense of humor, warmth, patience, and good judgement. Training for the program takes three hours, and trainees are asked to give an eight hour week commitment. At the end of the eight weeks, they can sign up for more.

Center Point

Caring, non-judgmental people over 17 are needed for Center Point to staff

the "hot-lines" and provide a contact and a helping hand to someone during an emotional crisis. Besides doing short-term counseling over the phone or face to face, Center Point staffers link clients to other agencies. Volunteers are backed-up by a staff professional who is in the office.

It takes 40 hours of training to work for one of the oldest crisis centers in the tri-county area. Volunteers also have back-up by professional F.L.E.C. staffers. Training sessions sharpen and focus skills volunteers usually bring to the program: empathy, insight, problem solving, and the ability to clarify values. After training, volunteers will be able to answer crisis calls, do intakes for face-to-face clients and provide referrals. There was a training session in October and another will be scheduled. Call 885-3510 for more information.

F.L.E.C. asks for a commitment of four hours per week for a year. The Center is open 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday.

Medical Clinic Counselor

One of the most delicate counseling roles of all is that of medical clinic counselor, for along with the medical care Center Point gives confidentially and for a small fee, those with health problems or problem pregnancies also receive counseling.

In addition to 40 hours training in crisis counseling and experience in Center Point, Medical Clinic counselors take an additional 8 hours intensive training in counseling about sex education and options for problem pregnancies. At no time do Center Point counselors recommend abortions but they do discuss the option.

Training for Medical Clinic counselors is scheduled as needed after requests by Center Point volunteers.

Youth Assistance

as assault and murder. When a young person charged with a lesser first offense does go on trial, few are sentenced. Those who are, are sent to the juvenile home where they spend time with young, predatory toughs who victimize them or teach them new tricks of the trade.

Experience shows that those confined to juvenile homes learn the wrong lessons. But the others lose too. The long wait for a hearing or dismissal dissipates the shame or fear felt at the time of the arrest. Unfortunately, many come to the wrong conclusion that crime pays. The system encourages them to test the limits of the legal system.

In contrast, Y.A. is designed so young people learn from their mistakes and make restitution to the community. And there's no time lost. A week after the referral, the youngster has a counselor. He or she is also enrolled in a seminar on communication and decision making and will be assigned some community service.

The parents are also urged to join a parenting class.

Y.A. is a program with a proven track record. It's based on Livonia's successful, pioneering program of the same name. Livonia has an 82 percent success rate. It arrived at that figure by watching the police and court dockets to see if youngsters in the program got into trouble again. After two years, 82 percent had a clean record.

F.L.E.C.'s direct involvement with young first offenders began in 1980 when the Grosse Pointes and the school district disagreed on how to divide the costs of police youth officers stationed at the high schools. When the cities and schools struck the item from their budgets, F.L.E.C. stepped in with a counseling program called Young Offenders staffed with volunteer counselors. The program took on greater substance and commitment in 1985 when the Skillman Foundation underwrote it with a one-time grant of $63,000 to develop a Youth Assistance program.

Recently, the five Grosse Pointes and the city of Harper Woods contributed a total of $21,000 to fill out the Skillman grant. The amount is far below that which the cities contributed for the salaries of the youth officers.

This kind of program is nothing new for F.L.E.C. The organization has helped youngsters in trouble with the law since its inception. It argued the need for youth officers in the late 60s. That's when the community was waking up to some terrible facts: drug use among our young was epidemic, drugs were dealt on school grounds and affluent young people were finding hard drugs within easy reach.

When the police Youth Services Department was shut down, F.L.E.C. got involved again.

The result was Y.A., which not only fills a void in community services, it's the natural result of F.L.E.C.'s early vision of service to troubled young people and their families.

The kinds of first offenses Y.A. deals with include shoplifting, burglary, vandalism and felonious assault. On the record, the City of Harper Woods had more than 500 juvenile arrests last year including 100 which were warned and released to parents. (The fact that Eastland is located in Harper Woods helps explain some of the cases.) In the Grosse Pointes, the total juvenile arrests were nearly 400 with almost 150 warned and released to parents.

And that's just what's on the record. Police officers say the numbers don't tell the whole story.

This is how Y.A. works. The youngster is assigned to a three-part program.

Y.A. immediately matches the young person with a volunteer counselor from the community. This one-on-one relationship is central to the program.

"At first some of them think that having a counselor is 'stupid,'" said Sandra Mignone, director of Y.A. but after a few weeks, she said she notices the young person can't wait to have the counselor stop by the school or at home to pick up the young offender.

Counselors go through extensive training and that is one of the reasons for the good relationships. In the 24 hour training program, counselors learn to listen without criticizing or dictating what the young person should do. They learn to help them get goals, make decisions and solve problems.

A relationship like this is a gift many of these young people have never experienced.

The second part of the program is Project Impact. This is a support group for no more than eight young people. The group meets one and one half hours per week for eight weeks and looks at topics like decision making and goal setting. One or two of these sessions focus on drug abuse.

"The rules are they can't put anyone down, there's no smoking, no swearing and no talking out of turn," said Mignone. "The classes are small to give everyone a chance to say what they want to say. They learn things from others in Project Impact and share things with each other."

Project Impact complements the work the volunteer counselor is doing — the program seeks to help young people build self-esteem and find a better way to live.

The third part of the program should go into effect at the end of this year, said Mignone. It's work service — donating work to the community as restitution.

That part of the program is the last to kick-in because Y.A. just qualified for the necessary insurance.

In addition, their parents are invited to attend parenting workshops. F.L.E.C. runs a popular program for all parents called "Systematic Training for Effective Parenting of Teens," or STEP/TEEN. It's a ten session workshop to learn effective communication and problem solving skills and to gain insight into the concerns of teens.

Y.A. is now counseling 20 young people and the program usually lasts six months, said Mignone. She has just finished training one group of counselors, and recruiting efforts are underway to enlist more volunteer counselors. Anyone interested is invited to call 885-3510 for more information.

F.L.E.C. Helps youth through two decades, 1966-86

heroin users at Bon Secours Hospital with the help of Dr. Ken Schooff of Lafayette Clinic.

"We (F.L.E.C.) rehabbed 75 percent of our kids as opposed to the 5 to 10 percent rate of drug clinics in general," Worrell said, giving much credit to support addicts received from their families, their environment, the Sisters at Bon Secours, and nurses who volunteered their time at the hospital.

As awareness of F.L.E.C.'s success grew, the police departments turned more and more often to F.L.E.C. for help in dealing with young people whether the crises were drug-related or not.

Robert Ferber, chief of police in Grosse Pointe Farms, commented that the state legislature voted in the Mental Health Code in the early 70s requiring police to become involved in delivering people in crisis to care centers. However, the state didn't give any guidance or resources for doing the job. F.L.E.C. stepped in, Ferber said. "They trained the police in the law, coordinated with three major hospitals and got involved in the screening process to meet the requirements of the act.

"It's easy for police to find crisis situations but it's hard to find institutions to refer these crises to," Ferber said.

"F.L.E.C. cut a lot of red tape for us and also provided the trained personnel, referrals and developed programs to meet the needs of local youths in crisis."

Success Leads to New Directions

F.L.E.C. didn't rest on its laurels. As the drug problems of the late 60s and 70s began to ease, it sought new ways to serve the community. It developed other programs for young people and then shifted its focus to include programs for adults. Some of those new programs were Alcohol Awareness programs in the elementary schools and an adult methadone clinic.

In 1971, the Medical Clinic opened and a resource was now available to test and treat venereal diseases among the young and to give counsel to those who were pregnant. Internist Dr. Joseph Beals, then president of F.L.E.C., saw the need for non-judgmental medical care for young people.

... The police departments turned more and more often to F.L.E.C.

"Young people were getting involved in situations they weren't equipped to handle either financially or emotionally, and they didn't know where to go for answers. They were afraid to go to their family physicians and feared reprisals at home.

"Counseling went along with the medical treatment. Some girls came looking for abortions. We never recommended abortions, but we would counsel them about their options."

Beals was one of the doctors to volunteer his time to the clinic. At its peak, the clinic had a staff of 10 physicians.

F.L.E.C.'s concern for alcohol related problems culminated in the establishment in 1977 of Alcohol Awareness. The program sends trained high schoolers into the elementary schools to do preventative work with young children before they are tempted to take their first drink.

Other programs were developed such as the legal clinic where area lawyers volunteer their time in a program that is similar to the medical clinic. Workshops on parenting to help parents better understand their children began in 1982. And the Phone Friend program began in 1984 to give latch key kids a place to call when they were experiencing a problem or just feeling lonely.

F.L.E.C. also lobbied alongside city officials and police chiefs to help establish a community-wide Youth Service Division which operated successfully for several years until the municipalities and the school district disagreed over division of costs.

F.L.E.C. didn't rest on its laurels ... it sought new ways to serve the community.

Finally, when the Youth Services Division closed, F.L.E.C. developed the Young Offenders program and most recently, the Youth Assistance Program that gives counseling to young people after they get picked up by the police. It is this program that Rebecca Reedus, present director of F.L.E.C. believes could well be the focal point for F.L.E.C.'s next 20 years.

According to Hogan-Downey, "F.L.E.C. has always been on the cutting edge of youth concerns. It has never been a redundant force. I see them as pioneers. They're not afraid to say, 'We've done this, now what's next?'"

The Medical Clinic that F.L.E.C. founded for young people served an important need in the community. F.L.E.C. is a worthwhile organization. It's a good service organization run by highly professional people.

F.L.E.C. has been an important agency serving the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods. Whenever we've asked for help, they've been there.

The drug problem in the 1960s and 70s was "terrifying." My phone rang off the hook 24 hours a day. It was a nightmare. We didn't have enough people to work on the problem. F.L.E.C. didn't want to focus on drugs, but we had to. We were the one organization that was viable and willing to pick up the gauntlet.

"My phone still rings as parents call about drug problems, but not as often."

Raymond Buck, M.D.
Psychiatric Center of Michigan, Volunteer consultant, F.L.E.C.'s Alcohol Awareness program

"From the perspective of the schools, the need for F.L.E.C.'s services is as great now as it was when F.L.E.C. began 20 years ago. The drug culture has changed since the beginning of the organization. While drug use diminished in the 70s, it's taking off again in other dangerous directions. But we also continue to be concerned about prescription drugs as well as alcohol. We're deeply concerned about teen suicide. The schools have also noticed continuing student stress from changes in the family structure.

We look forward to continuing our good working relationship with F.L.E.C. and look forward to their next 20 years in the community."

F.L.E.C. saw a need to stand by some of the least approachable young people of the 1960s and early 1970s when it opened Center Point Crisis Intervention Center. Many in the community were antagonistic to the way the clients dressed and acted, but our volunteers were really dedicated to helping them and did so.

F.L.E.C. has always been on the cutting edge of youth concerns in Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods. F.L.E.C.'s people are not complacent, they're pioneers. They're not afraid to say, "We've done this now, what's next?"

Without F.L.E.C.'s leadership twenty years ago, this community would not have come so far, so fast, in dealing with drug abuse. Grosse Pointe was beginning to solve its problems at the time other communities were just beginning to discover they had one.

It began in an era when people wanted to believe that drugs were an inner city problem and it couldn't happen in Grosse Pointe. Everyone associated with it took a share of abuse. The founders of F.L.E.C. had courage.

F.L.E.C. has had low visibility and high achievement in our community since 1966. When they first came before the Farms City Council, I was surprised that seven prominent members of our community — all council members — lacked basic knowledge of F.L.E.C.'s programs. But after learning about F.L.E.C., they were the first of the Grosse Pointes to vote money for F.L.E.C.'s newest project, Youth Assistance.

F.L.E.C. deserves more recognition and support.

It's easy for police to find crisis situations but it's hard to find institutions to deal with them. F.L.E.C. has provided the trained personnel, referrals and developed programs to meet the needs of local youths (in crisis).

F.L.E.C. has been a good friend and neighbor in Grosse Pointe Farms for a number of years now.

F.L.E.C.'s Alcohol Awareness program sends upperclassmen into the elementary schools to talk about drinking. That makes sense to me. For one thing, the best time to deal with addiction problems is before people become addicted. Then, too, a seventh grader will listen to an 11th grader better than to a doctor, a psychiatrist or even a parent.

F.L.E.C.'s early use of peer counseling is another example of its leadership in dealing with community problems.

A SPECIAL MESSAGE FROM F.L.E.C.'s PRESIDENT

FLEC

FAMILY LIFE EDUCATION COUNCIL
158 Ridge Road, Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan 48236
Phone 885-3510

Dear Friends:

As we celebrate FLEC's twentieth anniversary of service to the community, I think it appropriate that we reflect upon the accomplishments of the Family Life Education Council. This special edition outlines the many contributions FLEC has made to Grosse Pointe.

While we are proud of our past, there is a spirit of renewal in each of us as we see the exciting new directions FLEC has taken in its twenty-first year.

A commitment to serving the needs of our young people continues to be the underlying theme of our programming.

Our programs are made possible through the many volunteers who give of their time and themselves to young people in need and through the generosity of the citizens of Grosse Pointe who provide the financial support for FLEC to operate. Each of us can make a commitment to the young people of Grosse Pointe by making a tax deductible contribution to FLEC. Your support is needed and will be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,

John R. Urso
President
FLEC Board of Directors
