What's in a name?

In keeping with the new state law on indoor smoking, the Grosse Pointe schools have gone to a great deal of trouble to get administrators and staff together to decide on designated smoking areas. Monday the list was approved, but not without some questions.

Three schools heroically decided to go cold turkey and ban smoking altogether. That decision probably won't stand partly because some day there could be smoking staff members, and partly because nobody much likes the idea of sending visiting parents out behind the building for a cigarette.

But a bigger sticking point was the designation of a boiler room as a smoking area in Kerby School. For years, teachers were banished to the boiler room to smoke - in fact, friendly janitors set up chairs and coffee pots there.

'The term 'boiler room' has unfortunate connotations for people who have been teaching for a number of years," teachers' union president Doris Cook told the board, adding impishly that "perhaps Mr. (Leo) Warras at Kerby could rename the boiler room.

Starting 1987 right

The first lottery winner of 1987 is also the first Harper Woods resident ever to win. Loretta Dunec, a retired science teacher who taught in the Grosse Pointe school system, was one of three winners who split the Jan. 7 $3 million jackpot. She received her initial check for $57,332. And she'll be picking up annual checks until the year

She and her husband Rudolf, a retired U.S. government engineer, have been buying tickets since the lottery began in 1984. They play separately and have their own systems. Between them they have matched four numbers two times and their highest prize was $54. They have a son in California and a daughter in Alaska whom they'll be visiting soon. Mrs. Dunec said they'll use the mon-ey to help their kids and to improve their house. What a great way to start the

Warming up the neighborhood

Anyone who lacked the Christmas spirit by Christmas Eve could have gotten a nice dose by driving down Lakepointe, between Vernor and Kercheval after 7 p.m. Seasonal ambience was provided by Jim Weber and Linda Marshall, next-door neighbors on that particular stretch of Lakepointe in Grosse Pointe Park. Jim placed luminaria in front of each house along the block and Linda tied red bows on every front yard tree. Luminaria are small votive candles which are set in sand-filled brown paper bags and lit, creating a soft, flickering light. "It's a convivial neighborhood," said one resident. "We have lots of mutual respect and neighborliness. This was a lovely touch." Nice for those driving by, too.

Chief justice: Dorothy Comstock Riley trades fighter image for peacemaker role

By Elsa Frohman

Feisty is the word that seems to be most often used to describe the new chief justice of the Michigan Supreme Court, Dorothy Comstock Riley. She earned that description during her active and exhausting campaign to become a member of that body in 1984, after her exclusion from the court in 1983 in a highly partisan battle.

However, after two years on the court, today, equanimity would be a better word to describe the chief justice. The Republican woman who was ousted from the predominantly Democratic court in 1983 started off 1987 by being unanimously elected chief justice by some of the same justices who voted her out before. Her fences are nothing if not mended.

Riley, a resident of Grosse Pointe Farms, replaced retiring Chief Justice G. Mennen Williams, another Farms resident. Williams, a Democrat, left the court because of a state rule that prohibits running for re-election after a justice has reached the age of 70. While Riley had nothing but praise for Williams, she said she agrees with the rule.

"It's the exceptions that make any rule seem inappropriate," Riley said. "When you look at the Chief (Williams), you see that he is more vigorous and energetic than a lot of younger men. He has all his wits about him. But you do get into situations where if you don't institutionalize the rule, you'll be one on one with someone you care about and have to say that they can't do the job as they Riley, 62, will be 68 years old when she next comes up for reelection. "As of now, I intend to run again," she said.

Though she agrees with the age rule for the court, Riley expressed some uncertainty about the way our society treats the aged in general.

"We have two great resources in this country," she said. "Our old-er individuals are not cared for the way they should be and they are not given a chance to be productive. At the same time, our young people don't seem to be served well enough. I don't know how long the middle group can survive if it is completely self-centered."

Riley said she was grateful to her fellow justices who elected her to the post of chief justice.

"I can't really say I was sur-prised," she said. "If you are a candidate, there is always a possibility you will be elected. But I am overwhelmed with gratitude toward my colleagues, any one of whom could do the job masterfully, because they were willing to put this in my hands. I would never have put my name in if I thought I couldn't do it.'

Riley's unanimous election to chief justice carries a special iro-

In 1982, outgoing Republican Governor William Milliken ap-pointed Riley to fill the Michigan Supreme Court seat left vacant at the death of Blair Moody. Moody had just successfully run for re-

The seat was contested because incoming Democratic Gov. James Blanchard felt he should have had the opportunity to fill the position. The justices (not including Riley) met and decided to rule that Riley's appointment was only for the remaining portion of Moody's previous term and not for the new term. Riley was replaced by Patricia Boyle.

Riley set out to win back the seat she had lost by the judicial process, by the elective process. In 1984, she ran an unusually active campaign that earned her a reputation for frankness, outspokeness and energy.

In the course of the campaign, she spoke out against Michigan's system for choosing appellate judges. In this state, judge candiates are chosen by the political parties, only to run on a nonpartisan ballot - a charade, in Riley's words.

Two years later, Riley still stands behind those words.

"I never said anything that I did not believe to be absolutely true,' she said. "Ideally, the governor would appoint the appellate bench. When people are not familiar with the people running, it is difficult. The appellate bench is an institution that most people don't come in contact with."

Riley told of a meeting with a group of newspaper editors while she was campaigning in 1984. She told them that there were six inter-mediate appellate judges in their area and asked them to name three. One of the editors could name one judge — because he was a friend. The rest came up blank.

They had never thought about it." Riley said. "If the editors can't know about the appellate judges, how can the public?"

However, Riley doesn't see much likelihood that the system will change.

"The people of Michigan have made it very clear for the past 100. years that they want to elect their justices," she said.

But failing a complete change, Riley would like to see a procedural change that would allow the justices to run on the party tickets they were nominated from bringing the partisanism out in the

"There is nothing wrong with being political," she said. "It shouldn't, and doesn't affect most of our decisions, however. I am a Republican and I'll never hide behind the non-partisan label.

Once she was on the court, Riley put aside the past and devoted herself to bringing unity to the court and efficiency to its business.

"I've always said, don't com-plain about the dirty tricks people have played on you," she said. 'We can only change ourselves. Don't complain about somebody else, make yourself better.'

When she was campaigning, Riley criticized the administrative slowness of the court. Today, she says the court has improved considerably.

Before Riley joined the court, the time between hearing a case and rendering a decision was often more than a year. Today, most cases are disposed of in six or seven months.

"I hope to build on the work of the former cnier, hope to improve, or at least maintain the work he did.

That doesn't mean she hopes to see decisions rendered instantly.

'There should never be so much efficiency that we forget that the real job of the court is to dispense justice," she said. "We're not a business."

Riley wants to streamline the administrative tasks of the court so the justices can spend more time on what she calls the "primary business of the court," hearing cases.

"I want to reduce the burden on the individual justices of the court," she said. "There is much we must do ourselves in addition to the true business of the court."

Kroger lot changes hands; City still operating it

Grosse Pointers overstaying their time in the Village's Kroger parking lot may have noticed that their parking tickets still come courtesy of the city of Grosse Pointe, even though the lot changed hands several months ago and is expected to change hands again. The lot has now been leased to the Kroger company.

"We're continuing to operate the lot on a month-to-month basis," said City Manager Thomas Kressbach. "We have an informal agreement to operate it on the same basis as before."

The city always did operate the lot as part of its parking system, even when the property was owned by the Grosse Pointe schools. The difference is that now that the lot is privately owned, it is taxed. The City pays the property tax (to itself) and collects the revenue from the meters and the tickets.

"We're willing to operate the lot on the same basis as before, Kressbach said. "We're not losing money on it.

New lot owners, publisher Pamela Stanton and attorney Beverly Burns, met with the city to establish the operating agreement as soon as they closed on the sale in November, according to their lawyer, Carl Rashid of Butzel, Long, Gust, Klein & Van Zile. By mid-December, Stanton and Burns had leased the lot to Kroger, Rashid said. Kroger also has an option to buy the property in two

"They wanted to buy it right Rashid said. He said his clients preferred to hold the property for a period to allow it to increase in value. He declined to say how much Kroger's option is

The sale of the property to Burns and Stanton was controversial. Users of the lot feared parking prices would go up. Village merchants feared a loss of traffic and some banded together to try to buy the lot themselves.

But the $121,100.18 bid put together by Judith G. Prus, Kercheval Co. and Kabak & Mehr Associates was judged lower than Burns and Stanton's $126,500. The Prus group tried to stop the sale on the grounds that their cash bid was actually higher than the other, which was spread over four years. A lawsuit to set the sale aside is still pending, with no court date Rashid said he does not know what effect the suit, if successful, would have on the lease arrangement with Kroger, which rents its building from Prus.

How does it work?

Dorothy Comstock Riley

Michigan Supreme Court justices operate on a complex and demanding schedule. Each year, the court hears about 250 cases, out of some 2,500 cases submitted. Chief Justice Dorothy Comstock Riley outlined the procedure the court follows in selecting and hearing its cases.

"A lot of time goes into the original determination of whether we should hear a case," she said. "Then additional time is spent arriving at an opinion."

Each month, some 200 case applications are circulated among the justices for their review. Each justice reviews the package and picks out specific cases that he believes should be considered. Cases are selected not on the basis of whether the justices agree with the verdict rendered in a lower court, but on whether a point of law has been overlooked, or whether this case involves some law that needs to be clarified.

Weekly, the judges meet for a conference where they discuss about 35 of the original 200 cases in detail. A number of cases will be selected for determination and others will be rejected. Not all the cases selected will be heard; some will be culled before the remaining cases go on the hearing docket. Once a month, the justices hear oral arguments in the cases they have selected. In three days, they will hear 17 to After hearing the oral arguments, a straw vote is taken to determine what the majority opinion is going to be and which justices are in the majority on each case. The justice to write the opinion is selected, at rail dom, from the justices in the

After the opinion is written, it is circulated at another weekly conference, where the justices decide whether they agree with what has been written, or whether it should be revised. Most opinions are circulated several times before they are in their final form. If any justice disagrees strongly with an opinion, he may write a minority opinion to accompany the majority opinion.

In addition to their duties as adjudicators, the justices also attend a weekly administrative conference dealing with the running of the state court system.

Turn off the tube and talk

Parents are children's first teachers

By Nancy Parmenter

Even an expert isn't immune to Anxiety-ridden parents subscribe to one theory after another in an effort to be the best and do the best for their children. Designer clothes, flashcards, lessons. Competition and pressure. The right nursery school.

"I'm sorry to say that I probably would have been the first to sign up," says Jane Healy, educational psychologist, teacher, mother, who believes parents should relax and follow their in-

"My level of anxiety was as high as everyone else's," Healy said last week. "I wish there had been someone to tell me I was doing all

Healy has written a book which she hopes will do just that for to-day's young parent. "Your Child's Growing Mind" synthesizes the latest information on the brain to guide parents in helping their children learn.

'Parents know more than they think they do . . . they are so earnest — they want to do the right thing. I hope the book will give them confidence." That is more or less the message Healy will bring to a talk in Grosse Pointe tonight at University Liggett School.

Parents know instinctively to cuddle and talk to their babies and those are the two most important things children need.

"Parents don't have to become teachers," Healy says. "Talking and listening and reading to them, loving the sound of language to-gether, turning off the TV to talk - that's the greatest gift a parent can give a child."

Parents have always wanted to give their children the best, but in recent years, their anxiety to do so has become much greater. In fact, Healy says, "parent anxiety has become institutionalized."

A result of that institutionalizing is that parents now scurry around buying into every new educational theory, hoping to give their children a leg up on the rat race of life. Every class, every lesson is seen as a necessary ticket to a top college, itself a necessary ticket to a top job. And that leads to a couple syndromes educators are starting to worry about: Superbaby and the hurried child. Healy concerns herself more with Superbaby. The trend toward teaching children to "read" with flashcards when they are barely old enough to pronounce the words is not only a waste of time, but can actually be bad for the kids.

The rote process "isn't reading at all," she said. "It's what we call barking at print.

But the pressure to learn is far more damaging to the child. Healy says she has seen first graders so traumatized by their early reading experiences that they want nothing to do with it in school.

"Children need active learning. They need to involve their legs and arms and tongues. They need to own the process. Parents holding up a flashcard are saying 'this is my process and I'm going to make you do it.'

ULS Headmaster Ted Whatley, who has heard Healy speak many times at independent schools seminars, says she is "the best person around to give us advice about the way we deal with different styles of learning . . . I want an all-school awareness of these challenges.'

Whatley and Healy both say they do not believe that affluent suburbs like Grosse Pointe have greater problems with hurried children. "I don't see why Grosse Pointe would be any different from any other suburb," Whatley said. "I'm not worried about Grosse Pointe."

But Healy thinks affluent parents have more decisions to make because they can afford to give their children whatever they want to. "The anxiety is the same among all parents," she said. People who are more affluent have more opportunity. It's harder for them, because they have more decisions to make, about their own lives and their children's. They take decision-making seriously, because they are used to having their decisions count.'

Parents must come to understand that what they do with their children at an early age has a lifelong effect, Whatley says. "The parent is the most important teacher the child will ever have,' he said. "They must be more conscious that every act they take is a moment of teaching.

'There's a really healthy thing going on here in the amount of attention being given to the education of younger children. There's a lot to be optimistic about."

Healy has a doctorate in educational psychology from Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, where she works as a learning specialist at the Hathaway Brown School. "Your Child's Growing Mind," her first book, is a Book-of-the-Month Club selec-

Her talk tonight will present the latest information on how the brain grows and explain what that means to parents, in terms of raising their children. Healy says it has been learned that environment and experiences can change brain growth; wild animals grow a thicker brain cortex than the same breed living in domestication, for Healy will speak at 7:30 p.m. to-night, Jan. 15, at University Lig-gett School, 1045 Cook Road. Copies of her book will be available for purchase.

The municipal docks have room to hold about 296 boats plus Sunfish racks. There are two waiting lists with about 375 names awaiting an opening at the two facilities.

Councilman Harry T. Echlin asked City Manager Andrew Bremer Jr. how much the harbor generated in revenues and how much money was expended.

Bremer said that the city spent about $39,000 in repairs to the facility last year, but indicated that was solely for materials and did

Bremer said that revenues generated by the mooring fees were $64,400. He estimated that if salaries and labor costs were added to the expenditures for 1986, the total expenditures would hover around $120,000. He noted that 1986 was not a typical year because of the cost of repairs that had to be completed due to the high water.

Echlin, a boat owner, said he thought the mooring fees were still a bargain even given the 10 percent increase. He said that in conversation with other boat owners, they were willing to pay more in fees to see more improvements at the harbor.

"The people I have talked with have said they wouldn't mind paying more to see things like the breakwall raised or the spiles on the docks raised," Echlin said.

Bremer indicated that that could be an area that could be looked into, but added a warning:

"If the water goes up much more," Bremer said, "we will be out of business at a lot more places than the seawall. In a related story, the council voted unanimously to spend about $10,000 to purchase Lake Michigan sand to add to its beach area at the municipal park. Bremer told the council that beach sand was last added 15 years ago. He noted that other local sand was brought in in the past, but there were many complaints among residents who felt the sand became muddy.

Bremer added that the city has began talking with truckers, but that competitive bidding would not be to the city's advantage, because all the sand comes from one supplier near Grand Haven.

Woods sets priorities for parks redevelopment

Woods Mayor George S. Freeman called a joint meeting of the city council, meeting as the Park Redevelopment Committee and the Committee-of-the-Whole Monday night.

At the top of the meeting's agenda was the setting of priorities for the first part of Phase I improvements at Lake Front Park and Ghesquiere Park.

Woods voters approved a $3,500,000 bond issue for improvement of both parks Nov. 2 as well as a maximum one mill increase in city property taxes.

Council members at Monday's meeting unanimously agreed that the first items under construction at Lake Front Park should be the new vehicular bridge across the Milk River, the removal of the existing bridge, and the construction of the new pedestrian bridge with

Break-ins

Two houses and an office were broken into in Grosse Pointe Park last week. Someone made an attempt to enter a third house, but was stymied by a deadbolt lock, police said.

On Jan. 2, someone broke into a house on Wayburn by breaking the glass in a rear basement window. À shotgun, a rifle, a videocassette recorder and miscellaneous jewelry were taken, according to police reports.

On Jan. 5, a suspect broke a window in a kitchen door of a flat on Wayburn. The thief entered the upper flat. A resident of the lower flat heard a noise, ran upstairs and caught the man. The resident held the suspect until Park police officers arrived.

Two nights later, a suspect entered an office on Jefferson by kicking in the front door and frame. The thief climbed through the receptionist's window into the inner office and took the office telephone answering machine.

Jean Campbell memorial service is Sunday

A memorial service for Jean Campbell, former counselor and Latin teacher at Grosse Pointe South High School, will be held Sunday, Jan. 18, at 4 p.m. in South's auditorium. She died Dec. 19 of cancer.

Miss Campbell grew up in Gaylord, received her B.A. from Eastern Michigan University, her M.A. from the University of Michigan, and her master's of education in guidance and counseling from Wayne State University

She worked at South for 41 years — first as a teacher of Latin, then as a counselor.

"Jean was a lot of fun to work with," said Terry Lloyd, a counselor at South for the last 10 years. "She had such a pleasant sense of humor. She was fun to be with. But she was also a very dedicated person — dedicated to the kids. She hated to be away from the kids and worried about missing something that was important to a student. She always had time to listen to small problems. Her door was always open.'

Edward Shine, principal of South High School said, "She wasn't flamboyant, but she was always there. As a teacher and a counselor, she made a significant contribution to the learning that has taken place here. We have a position to fill now — and it will probably take two people to fill the role that Jean has etched out here at South."

Miss Campbell is remembered by students, former students and colleagues as a bubbly, optimistic, enthusiastic, upbeat person. She made Latin enjoyable, even though it can be a boring subject, said Paul Rentenbach, a former student.

She also enjoyed traveling, cooking and opera.

Survivors include a sister, Marion Andriola; two nieces and a nephew.

She was cremated.

Memorial contributions may be made in Jean Campbell's name to the Grosse Pointe South Mothers' Club Scholarship Fund, 11 Grosse Pointe Boulevard, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236.

bers, school board members, and pastors of Grosse Pointe churches received copies of these publications. The panelists of the forum will explore the information presented in these publications.

Some of the questions to be addressed include: Are parents abdicating their role to the schools? What is the responsibility of schools regarding social issues? Are parents and schools confused about the limits of their authority? Where do we stand on issues related to alcohol and other drugs? Is this community providing a consistent message? Why is it as important for parents of kindergarten children to become involved with social issues as for parents of

A peaceful court transition

A Republican from Grosse Pointe Farms last week succeeded a Democrat from Grosse Pointe Farms as chief justice of the Michigan Supreme Court in a peaceful transition that may set the stage for a new era of good feeling on the high court.

Dorothy Comstock Riley, the new chief justice, did her part by praising her predecessor, G. Mennen Williams, for "a tremendous job" in getting the support of the rest of the judiciary and the state bar, and by expressing the hope she could "build on the work of our former Equally generous, Williams said his former colleagues "are to be congratulated in choosing well." He said Justice Riley is "as well known for her scholarly, trenchant opinions as she is known for having her opinions out before anyone else." He also praised her "leadership and administrative competence.

In a wide-ranging interview with the Grosse Pointe News last week, the new chief justice also said she "did not expect" to be elected but was "overwhelmed with gratitude" by the action of the people she worked with and respected.

She chose not to get involved in the partisan gloating by GOP Chairman Spencer Abraham who had described her surprise election by the seven-member court "as the final vindication" for her ouster from the court in a political squabble four years ago. Instead, she gracefully said she was "looking forward, not backward.'

The demeanor of the two principals in the leadership switch at the high court should help improve the public perception of the court's performance. So should the new chief justice's promise to streamline the in-house administrative duties to reduce the "brutal burden" on the individual justices and leave more time for their "true business," the adjudicatory function.

In response to questions, however, the chief justice did disagree mildly with her predecessor on at least two matters, the law forbidding incumbent judges, including justices, from seeking re-election after they reach the age of 70 and the method of nominating and electing justices in Michigan.

Williams had told the Grosse Pointe News a week earlier that in 1986 he would have run again — and "would have been elected, too" if the law had not barred him from making another race. Mrs. Riley commented that "there is no question but that Williams is more vigorous and energetic and has his wits about him better than many people do at 60.

"But," she added, "if we don't institutionalize the retirement rule we may have to look someone else in the eye at some future time and tell him that despite his great contributions in the past, we have the feeling he shouldn't run again." In effect, she defended retention of the retirement rule despite having no question about Williams' own competency to serve at

With respect to the election process that Williams had defended, the new chief justice said she still thought that the way Michigan nominates and elects its justices is "a charade." She used that same phrase in 1984 to describe Michigan's process of having the politi-cal parties nominate candidates who then run on a nonpartisan ticket.

She acknowledged, however, that the people in both political parties have made it clear they want to elect their justices. Ideally, she believes appellate judges should be appointed because people often do not come in contact with the appellate courts and judges and thus do not be-come as familiar with them as they do with trial courts and judges.

She conceded that she and other women as well as minorities probably benefit from the elective process but, she added, people ought to vote for candidates only when they are informed. So she's still for revision, even though there is no political climate for it. And she answers critics who say appointed judges "lack accountability" by arguing that the appointive power would require the governor to exercise a sense of responsibility in picking the judges in the first place.

Just as former Chief Justice Willilams identified himself as a New Deal Democrat, Mrs. Riley says she is a Republican. She thinks it is nonsense to say that the court is not involved in politics because it is elected by the people. But she contends that it should not be partisan and usually isn't in arriving at its decisions.

She points out that most candidates for the Supreme Court come from the Detroit metropolitan area because unless a candidate is a former governor, lieutenant governor or U.S. Senator — or a person with a good political name — he or she doesn't stand much chance of getting enough support to win in the 83 counties in the state. Hence — candidates proliferate in the heavily populated metropolitan area and, she might have added, in Grosse Pointe Farms which now has contributed the present and immediate past chief justice.

Mrs. Riley is expected to follow Williams' lead in tightening up the court organization and but she pointed out that the court's real job is to "dispense justice" and warned against increasing efficiency at the price of justice.

All in all, the new chief justice strikes us as a feisty but sensible leader who will keep a tight rein on the administrative duties of the high court, will avoid redoing the work of the lower courts insofar as possible and will seek to make sure the high court has something to say when it does issue its opinions.

As she pointed out, however, she cannot achieve such aims alone but since she is a team player, the court's record of performance and its reputation seem likely to be enhanced if she gets the coperation she has been assured. That achievement would be good for the high court and the people of Michigan that it serves - and would further increase the pride of the Pointes in having furnished a second chief justice to

They're crimes, not pranks

When does a prank become a crime?

The answer, of course, is when the prankster breaks the laws that protect individuals and property

In the Grosse Pointes, we've had two recent instances of what some people might regard as pranks that resulted in law violations and damage to personal and public property

In one case, six seniors at Grosse Pointe South High School have admitted involvement in a break-in and vandalism of the South school library and will face arraignment later this month on charges of illegal entry, trespassing and malicious injury to property.

In the other, one or more persons as yet unidentified shot out windows of 44 cars parked on the streets of four of the Grosse Pointe municipalities on the morning of the day before Christmas. In this case, police do not even know that the person or persons responsible for the window shooting spree were from Grosse Pointe, although it is suspected that they were.

In both cases, however, malicious destruction of property was involved and thus crimes were committed. In the school break-in, students involved referred to the vandalism as a "senior prank" but school officials said it was not a prank, nor was the behavior indicative of the behavior of the senior class as a whole. Whatever the shooting incident represents, it, too, must be regarded as a crime, not a prank.

In the school break-in, damage was caused by scattering books, spray-painting walls and knocking over tables and chairs. In the shooting case, many private property owners sustained substantial losses, as did their insurance carriers. In both cases, the damages and the losses are being paid for by private and public pocketbooks.

It is disappointing to report such incidents in a community that is recognized as peaceful and law-abiding. It is even more disappointing that some people fail to distinguish between peaceful pranks and crimes that damage personal and public property.

Prepare for winter's onslaught

By Marian Trainor

Winter was a little late this year, but it made up for its tardiness with a spectacular arrival. "It's one thing to see it arrive gradually, a few drifting snowflakes one day, an inch or so another and finally that two or three inches that we have come to expect. But to storm in in full dress was too much. Is that a polite, considerate way to make an entrance?

No matter. It's here for a few months, and like any unwelcome guest, we make the best of its stay.

There are those who just move to sunnier climes, leaving winter behind to wear out its welcome. Then there are those who must tolerate it. For them there are measures that can make it beara-as it wings its way to a hidden nest. This much must be said of winter. It is a quiet, unobtrusive intruder. The sounds of summer are buried in snow and ice. It will be a while before winter moves out and the voices of children at play, the pound and tap of heels on sidewalks and the whirl of cars on streets are heard again. You have time now to contemplate, to dream, to plan to pursue private pastimes undisturbed by a busy world that will soon waken to the siren song of spring and beckon you to leave behind solitary pur-

Weary of paging through the promise of garden catalogs, cleaning closets with contents that are almost revelations to you, looking at television to the point that you watch even the programs you don't like, or reading books that were best sellers two years ago, you will decide to meet the enemy on its own terms.

But there is more than boredom and determination involved in the courageous resolution to brave the hazards that lay beyond the picture-card pretty view from your windows. There are precautions to be taken.

Guarding against chill is one of them. It is important to dress warmly to ward off colds, pneumonia or hypothermia.

Hypothermia occurs because an excessively cold environment can lead to a progressive fall in body temperature and the collapse of the cardiovascular system which maintains the flow of blood to various parts of the body. Unfortunately the mechanism that compensates for variation in the temperature in this area is not as efficient in older people as it is in young folks.

In fact they are sometimes so weak that they allow body temperatures in older persons to fall or rise to dangerous levels. These changes in body temperature can produce disease or permanent damage to the body.

There are other reasons why the cold affects older people more than younger ones. Studies show that the aged do not show increased heat production to the extent that younger subjects do when exposed to the cold. Older people seem to have decreased ability to control heat loss in the cold by constriction of the blood vessels of the skin. When the blood vessels of the skin constrict, the flow of blood to the outer layers of the skin is reduced and heat is lost from body's surfaces. Shivering, which is a series of rapid muscular constrictions, is triggered to convert stored energy such as sugar to heat.

Usually this heat production is sufficient to protect the body against hypothermia. However, if the temperature is very cold and the person is not well protected from it, these mechanisms that protect against hypothermia fail, and the person goes into cardiovascular collapse. Blood flow to the organs becomes inadequate.

Studies have also shown that some older people are more susceptible to hypothermia than

Atherosclerosis, an accumula tion of fatty materials in the walls of the large- and middle-sized arteries, is a factor. The accumulation of fatty materials narrows the arteries and impedes the flow through them. One set of arteries that is commonly affected is that which supplies the legs

In very cold weather, the first line of defense that the body has to conserve heat is constriction of the small vessels to the peripheral part of the body including the legs. The reduction in flow plus that already caused by the atherosclerosis can make people vulnerable to ulcer formation.

Fortunately most older persons who go out in the cold for whatever reason take adequate protection against overexposure

Hypothermia can also occur indoors. While temperatures of 65 degrees Farenheit are adequate for most people, older persons may need to set their thermostats higher. This is particularly true of persons 75 years or older.

Others who are most likely to develop hypothermia in homes which are not adequately heated are the chronically ill. Medication, particularly for anxiety, depression, nervousness and nausea, may affect the regulation of body tempera-

I say

My aunt's hairdresser said . . .

One lazy afternoon about three years ago, I was shopping at a metro-area mall when I took out some time to watch the giant wa-

It was kind of an amusement park ride sort of thing, a wide fiberglass tube with a constant stream of water pumped through it, beginning somewhere above the second level where I stood, and snaking down through loops and curlicues to terminate with a splash in a small swimming pool on the first floor level. For some small amount of money, you could rent a swimsuit and ride the tube two floors to the pool.

I was standing by an observation railing meditating on whether I could put my dignity far enough aside to try it, when I overheard the conversation of two teenaged boys to my left.

"You know, a kid drowned in that thing last month," teen num-

'No kidding?' "Yup, he got in trouble on the way down and by the time he popped out at the bottom, it was

The cool confidence of his tone might have convinced you that this young man knew what he was talking about. But I knew better. It happens that at the time, I was in charge of doing the police report-ing for the municipality where the mall is located, and if there had been a death at that mall, I would have known about it. I checked with the police the next day to be sure — I was right, nobody died, nobody was injured — getting wet was the worst thing that had happened to anybody in the tube.

I would have loved to know where the young man got his information. It was undoubtedly from a friend, who had heard his uncle say that a neighbor was there and saw it. The teenager I overheard was indulging in the propagation of an urban myth, the 20th century's version of the fairy tales of the Middle Ages.

Opinions & letters

I'm indebted to Jan Brunvaand, author of "The Vanishing Hitch-hiker," and "The Choking Doberman, for the tem "urban myth." Both books are available in the Grosse Pointe Public Library and I recommend them heartily to anyone who enjoys a good story. I had just finished reading "The Choking Doberman" a few weeks before I overheard my young men at the

An urban myth is distinguished by the method of transmission. It spreads primarily by word of mouth, through the print and electronic media often, unwittingly, help propagate the stories. When someone tells you an urban myth, he will testify to its absolute veracity. Generally, the story is told as having happened to someone one or two steps removed from the teller, but still close enough to be identified as a real person.

For example, about four years ago, some time before I read Brunvaand's books, I was riding on an elevator in the hospital in the town where I was working. Sharing my elevator was a volunteer Grey Lady, a woman I had known for several years. On the way down, she regaled me with the story of Reggie Jackson and "The Eleva-

You may have heard the story, a lot of people have. Briefly, a woman, or women, from a small town or suburban community, is visiting New York for a convention of some sort, when she gets on an elevator in the hotel to ride back to her room. Just as the doors are about to close, a large, black man rushes into the elevator with his large, threatening dog.

"Sit, lady," the man commands, and the woman (women) drops to the floor of the elevator, certain she is about to be mugged.

The man reacts with embarrassment. "I meant the dog," he explains. "Her name is Lady."

Later, the woman (women) receive a note offering to pay for their dinner that night — from Reggie Jackson.

Brunyaand researched the story thoroughly and came to the conclusion nothing of the kind ever happened — to anybody. Jackson denies the story categorically.

That day in the hospital elevator however, my companion told the story as happening to two of her friends (one of whom was supposedly the aunt of a mutual acquaintance). She was a lovely sincere person whom I would never suspect of lying.
So why did she tell me this patently false story? For the same reason anyone repeats a story they heard from a friend or neighbor.

Storytelling is fun. I know that -I do it for a living (though the stories I tell here in the newspaper are generally better verified than urban legends). Knowing something that everybody else doesn't know gives one a sense of power. That feeling is magnified when you get to tell everyone what it is that they don't know.

But beyond that, urban legends get repeated because they are good stories. They address our fears and longings and express our feelings about our culture. Urban legends are generally wrapped up neatly with a moral that can let the storyteller and his audience feel a little bit better about themselves.

The water tube story expressed the underlying fear that something bad might happen to you at a place as familiar as the local shopping mall. The teller and tellee could feel good about themselves because they hadn't been foolish enough to take a ride on the tube.

The moral of the elevator story is "Appearances are Deceptive, and the teller and tellee can congratulate themselves afterward because they wouldn't have been foolish enough to assume that the man was going to hurt them.

Most urban legends are harmless morality tales, but a few have a cruel edge. Consider the old story about the Procter & Gamble logo being a symbol of Satan worship. P&G has had to spend untold amounts of money on counter-advertising and legal action to prevent religious groups from boycotting their products

For the record, the 13 stars on the moon logo represent the original 13 Colonies, and no P&G executive has ever gone on Phil Donahue or any other talk show to tell how his company made millions with devil worship.
Like many other urban legends, however, the P&G Satan worship story re-emerges every year or so. Urban myths have cycles.

How can you tell is a story is an urban legend? The best way is to look at the story in the cold light of logic. If it's just too pat, chances are, it actually happened to my aunt's hairdresser -- just last

Thief gets cash in armed robbery

A Southfield man, 30, was robbed at gunpoint in mid-afternoon on St. Clair in Grosse Pointe's Village shopping district Jan. 8.

According to Grosse Pointe police, the man, a customer in one of the stores, walked out to his car at 3 p.m. Just as he opened the driver's door, two men in a rusty brown older-model car pulled up.

The passenger got out, pulled a blue steel snub-nose 38-caliber revolver and ordered the man up against his car. The thief patted his victim's pockets, found folded bills in one front pocket, and slashed the pants with a sharp instrument, police said.

The two suspects got away with $45. Police have sent suspect information out on the computer system and are continuing to inves-

Our love and appreciation go out to all those who gave of their time and support in finding and caring for our Sylvia. We don't know the many names of her friends, the good people at Samaritan Hospital Center, the police department, and others, but we know the effort you put forth in her behalf.

Our special thanks go to the kind woman who found Sylvia and took her to the hospital where she was treated with kindness and love. It takes a special person to stop and help when there are so many who would just pass on by. God will bless her for her caring love of Sylvia was a kind and loving person but she had many hardships. She suffered with depression and illness and had no family there to help her, but she had some dear friends who were there when she needed them. God bless all of you who helped her in any way. She was precious to us and we will miss

1986 review

Boundary settlement, police-fire merger top Park's list of achievements for 1986

By Pat Paholsky

It was a banner year for Grosse Pointe Park, City Manager John Crawford said of 1986.

It was also a year of controversy

"The most significant accomplishment was the long-standing litigation with Detroit on the boundary issue having been re-solved," Crawford said. The dis-pute was "15 years in the making," he added.

"Equally important was public safety, consolidating the police and fire departments," Crawford said. The year also saw the creation of two Tax Increment Financing Act districts and a Downtown Development Authority. Through the authorities, the city plans to upgrade the Jefferson Avenue business district and the northwest residential area.

Citizen involvement was at an all-time high with 108 residents who volunteered their services on 13 boards and commissions, Crawford said.

It was also the year that marked the beginning of the computeriza-in the treatment of physical ailments due to psychological causes.

tion of the public safety department. With most of the equipment purchased and programming near completion, Crawford said the system will allow the department to streamline activities and make more information available to citizens

With the operation, you free up public safety officers from clerical work, making them more available to serve the residents," he said.

Other changes in the public safety department initiated in 1986 was the introduction of the scooter patrol in the summer months and the use of unmarked and one-man cars. And another detective was added to the staff

There was a major personnel change when comptroller Nunzio Ortisi retired after 23 years with the city. Replacing him was Dale Krajniak as comptroller and Pamela Kondziolka as city clerk.

A study of the city's traffic was done last year and recommendations for the northwest area, the section with the most problems. were made.

"Some of them (recommendations) have already occurred," Crawford said, "and some of the significant changes will occur in

He cited residential parking permits and opposite-side street parking as two programs the city will implement to alleviate traffic and parking problems in the area.

"In 1986 most of the changes were signage changes and traffic movement control devices," he

The Mack Avenue improvement project will continue with Phase IV at the western end. With the demolition of the former Pointe Hardware, the street improvement project will begin there this sum-

Another accomplishment in 1986 was the hiring of Dr. Gerald Lanier, the tree expert from the State University of New York. With his hiring, the city committed itself to a comprehensive elm tree program. Robert Tarabula, the city forester trained by Lanier, prepared a detailed report on the 1986 elm tree program which was submitted to the council Jan. 12.

The establishment of a flood plain committee is the first step to eliminating the flood plain designation for more than 600 homes in the city, Crawford said. The committee is expected to present its recommendations to the council before spring. Crawford said that the committee's recommendations will be a high priority item even though the means of financing improvements is uncertain.

More certain is the fact that the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation is about halfway toward its goal of raising funds to convert the bathhouse at Windmill Pointe Park to an activities center, he said.

Last year, Whittier and Essex were resurfaced at a cost of $135,000 and Crawford said the street improvement program will continue.

There is a street improvement committee and between now and spring, they will evaluate the street report and determine which streets are to be done next," he

One of the major issues city officials will have to face in the new year will be labor-related. The clerical and public works employees contracts expire in June and the public safety department contract, in negotiations since last June, is not settled. The matter is scheduled for arbitration.

Cars taken

Thieves tried to take five cars from Wayburn last week, Grosse Pointe Park police said. Several were recovered later.

A 1985 Oldsmobile was taken from a garage on Jan. 3. It was recovered four days later on Parker by Detroit police.

A 1981 Oldsmobile equipped with a special locking device was taken Jan. 5 and recovered near Vernor and Philip by Detroit police.

The same day, a door lock on a 1986 Caprice was punched in an attempt to steal the car, police said.
A 1981 Buick was driven away the same day.

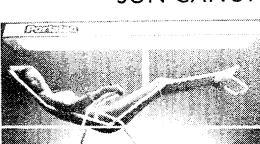

On Jan. 6, a 1973 Pontiac Catalina was taken from a Wayburn address. The car was recovered later on Alter Road.

The same day, a Park patrol unit spotted a car stolen earlier on Kensington. The officers chased the car to Ashland, in Detroit, where it was abandoned.

Also on Jan. 6, a customer in a bar on Mack saw someone in his car as he approached it. The suspect got out of the car and briefly confronted the owner before running away. The suspect was described as a black man in his 20s. with a white man acting as look-

City concentrated on flood control in'86

By Pat Paholsky

For the Chinese, 1986 was the Year of the Tiger, but for Grosse Pointe City Manager Thomas Kressbach, it was the Year of the

"The high lake levels took precedence," he said. "We spent $95,000 during the year on projects related to high lake levels, not counting the cost of our own labor by our employees.

About $25,000 was used to install two new steel seawalls at Neff Park, increasing the existing height in two places and repairing and renovating electrical lines. Renovation of the electricity at the marina came to about $30,000. That included the wooden decks and line repair that was necessitated by the high water.

A seawall and sewer work on Lakeland came to about $20,000 and another $20,000 was spent on flood control engineering and catch basin work, Kressbach said.

"In each case, the city labor is above those figures," he said. "Although we anticipated some of it, it's difficult to plan. You're not going to spend that money unless

The private flood control improvements last year were significant, he said. Five homeowners replaced their seawalls and two others made major improvements. Five more residents are planning seawall work early this year, he said, "so that both private and city improvements are significant.' Overall, 1986 was a good year, Kressbach said. "We accom-plished many of our objectives and some others are being carried over into 1987.

'We contracted for the purchase of a new pump for the Neff pumping station in June for $125,000. That's just the pump and motor," he said.

Bids for the construction of the building to house the pump, its installation and electrical work will be sought this month. Kressbach said the construction alone — an addition to the existing building will probably be in excess of Another project under way that should be completed by March is the Lakeland sewers from Jefferson to the lake. The cost of the

"We are still involved in the sewer study of our infrastructure which we had going last year and will be completed in the next few months," he said. The study was halted while the engineers concentrated on the lake levels.

In the tree program, 88 trees were planted to replace those lost to Dutch elm disease. The city continued its spraying and removal program and also received a Tree City USA award in 1986.

We have been planting 60 to 70 trees each year for the past five years," he added.

The village shoping district received two identifying signs at each end. Other improvements in the village included new Christmas lighting and replacing wreaths and lights. The overhead lighting in one of the municipal parking lots was improved and about $30,000 was spent on maintaining and repairing the parking structure.

Replacing police cars and other vehicles cost the city about $42,000, Kressbach said.

One of the major concerns last year was personnel. There was an 18 percent turnover due to retire-

"It was a pretty significant number. We never had that, so we spent a great deal of time and effort to recruit and hire the best employees we could," Kressbach said. "And we spent time and money training them.

Private construction, notably the Dodge Place development, is progressing, he said, with sewers, water mains and street lights in Three new businesses located in the city — Banana Republic, Flowers by Kimberly and Donald E. Pierce Insurance. A few more businesses will be relocating to the village from other cities, he added.

A new telephone system in the public safety and public works offices cost $14,000. "We are looking forward to another good year," he said. "We still have a concern with lake levels.

Some of the goals this year include sewers, street and sidewalk improvements and parking lot landscaping. Some equipment is scheduled for replacement and the city will review the computer system in the public safety depart-

1986 review Farms boasts 3 major projects in past year

By Peter A. Salinas

It was a year in which three major commercial developments began to take shape in Grosse Pointe Farms, but one of the men who was instrumental in making them happen didn't live to see them begin to bear fruit.

Though the Farms made strides in commercial development, held the line on taxes and the budget and recently formed a longawaited beautification commission, 1986 was marred by the death of the city's mayor of 11 years, James H. Dingeman.

Dingeman had worked for a number of years to secure commercial developments in the city. He was a well-known and respected member of the community. Among his contributions were founding the Grosse Pointe Little League in 1952 and the Farms Foundation.

The major commercial developments — the Bologna office/retail building, Punch & Judy development and Kerby Place - will add a significant increase in the city's worth, but there is a 50 percent tax abatement on the largest, Bologna's, of the three developments.

Current Mayor Joseph Fromm said he is pleased with the accomplishments the city has make over the last year and looks forward to continued growth, but he recognizes that there are problem areas.

Fromm noted that property taxes have increased one percent a year over the last seven. Fromm noted, however, that continuing sound fiscal management will be important in the next several vears.

He pointed to Lakeshore in the Farms and its need for resurfacing. He said the city will have to contribute 12.5 percent of that cost, and it will run into a substantial sum of money.

Other costly endeavors the city will be facing soon is the computerization of the police department and the municipal court. Because of space shortages in all the city departments, the city must look at expanding its facilities.

"I think one of the highlights this vear was how we responded to the residential concern of the speeding and hazardous moving violations on our streets," Fromm said.

"We instituted the traffic bureau which cost the city $100,000," Fromm said. "Unfortunately, there are concerns about traffic volume which still exist. The traffic study committee will be looking into this and attempting to come up with a solution.

The city completed the resurfacing of the city hall parking lot and made site improvements, including significant landscaping of the city hall grounds. The city allocated $25,000 to the Pier Park entranceway and gatehouse and the Farms Foundation contributed $90,000 to the project.

The city spent about $80,000 on its Dutch elm disease prevention program. In 1985, 133 elms were lost, and last year, 128. Some 66 trees of various varieties were planted on public property.

There were two new faces working for the city in 1986.

Matthew Rumora was appointed as the new city prosecutor. He is a St. Clair Shores attorney who lives in the City.

Richard Huhn was appointed as the new parks and recreation director. He came to the Farms from Bloomfield Township where he was the recreation coordinator. He holds a master's degree in parks and recreation from Michigan State University.

City Manager Andrew Bremer Jr. said that as with all the Lake St. Clair shoreline communities, the Farms is hoping for lower water levels.

"We raised electric lines and docks in the new harbor," Bremer said. "Other than landscaping the entranceway and placing permanent traffic diverters at the new entranceway, we have no specific plans for the park.

Bremer added that the city's continuing 10-year improvement plan is moving along smoothly. Repair and replacement of the sidewalks in the city has been twothirds completed, and the remaining one-third of the sidewalks will be repaired in 1987.

"I would like to say that we have been blessed with good people on the city council and the commissions and that has certainly helped administratively,"Bremer said.

This past year the city implemented one of its most controversial pieces of legislation in some time.

The city enacted a juvenile curfew ordinance in response to numerous complaints about vandalism and loitering around and on the Hill. The curfew ordinance drew both praise and criticism.

Fromm said that the recent creation of the beautification commission and $2,000 of seed money appropriated by the city council is the first step in a good direction.

"I am personally pleased of having approved the beautification commission, and we are looking forward to its implementation in 1987." Fromm said.

Negotiations with the Farms Department of Public Works Employees have ground to a halt for the time being. The 30 men have been working under the terms of a contract that expired at the end of June 1986.

"I am a firm believer in not negotiating in the newspaper, Fromm said "Ultimately we will reach an equitable solution with the DPW union. I have confidence in the leadership of the union and the administration to reach an agreement satisfactory to both

One of the major items on the Farms upcoming agenda is the combining of the city's police and fire departments into one public safety department.

"I am looking forward to the completion in 1987 of the combining of the police and fire departments," Fromm said. "We are in the process of negotiating with the unions. We are close to an agreement.

Fromm stopped short of saying that the forming of a Farms Public Safety Department would occur in 1987, saying that nothing is ever 100 percent certain.

Fromm added that the current backlog of cases in the municipal court, (police are currently issuing tickets with Sept. 1987 court dates) is unacceptable. He added that he hopes that computerization of the police and court offices along with the introduction of a visiting judge on a part-time basis would help alleviate the backlog.

Fromm said that one of the things the city must address is the question of the Mack/ Moross

"We must decide if the current use of that area (A.L. Price, Krogers and Sears) is the best utilization for that property. Personally, I am unhappy with how that area is maintained.'

Finally, Fromm said that the city's infrastructure (sewer, roads and sidewalks) are all getting old, and if the city were to have some sewer collapses it could be in for some major expenditures.

It was the year potentially severe flooding from high waters of Lake St. Clair was averted, and the year residents celebrated the village's 75th anniversary.

Village Manager Mike Kenyon said that the anniversary celebration Sept. 7; which included a demonstration by the U.S. Coast Guard and a sky diving exhibition, was an "overwhelming success.

"The city looked great and everything went well," Kenyon said. "The dinner was a sold-out Shores resident Ken Adler was one of the organizers of the daylong event and the grand marshal of the antique car parade.

One concern facing all shoreline communities this past year was the extremely high water level of the lake. This year Lakeshore had to be closed in parts of the Shores and Farms, but no significant damage occurred in the village.

'We did experience some boat well problems in the harbor because of the high water," Kenyon said. "We have been lucky though. We raised water and electrical lines in the harbor, but even with these high water levels, we have had no reports of basement floodThis past year the Shores lake, but the money was raised in reached contract settlements with one year. all three of its unions. One of the major projects undertaken by the city this past year has been completed — two years early. The Shores Foundation anticipated it would take three years to raise $70,000 to purchase and plant nearly 300 trees along the Lakeshore median and along the

The village ordered a $103,000 fire truck, which should arrive in early 1987, Kenyon said Gerald Schroeder, president said the village has done very well in 1986, but there will be some changes coming for 1987. 'We will be selecting a new chief of police next year. Public Safety Director Joe Vitale will be retiring in February. Schroeder also said that one of the major problems facing the city is the high water level. Other than hoping the water level will go down, we have been doing everything we can to protect the harbor and the park," Schroeder said. He has been proud that in the past several years the village has succeeded in sticking to its budget.

"Our fiscal year will end in about three months," he said. "We will end the year with expenditures not exceeding revenues.

Kenyon said one of the major projects the city will undertake in 1987 is the construction of a new sewer line on Renaud Street.

"We will be installing both a sanitary sewer and storm sewer line at a cost of about $250,000," Kenyon said.

One of the things that will carry over to the new year will be a decision by the council regarding the lease agreement between the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club and the

The contract expired in July 1986, and no decision has been made by the council regarding renewal.

Currently, the village has about 100 residents on a waiting list for boat well space. The village leases about 80 spaces to the yacht club, which it says it cannot provide to its residents without improvements and perhaps major structural work.

A decision on the lease agreement will likely be made before next year's boating season.

Kenyon reports that the city's continuing five-year plan is moving ahead as scheduled.

This past year the city was working on replacing all median curbing on its stretch of Lakeshore from Moorland to the north village limits. That work will be completed in 1987. The following year, the outside curbs will be replaced and in 1989, the roadway will be resur-

Woods officials say 1986 was good year

By Margie Reins Smith

Chester E. Petersen, Woods city administrator-clerk, and George S. Freeman, mayor, agree that 1986 was a successful year.

According to Petersen, the Woods has retained the lowest city tax rate in the Grosse Pointes and, in fact, has the lowest city tax rate in all of southeastern Michi-

Increased use of computers has simplified and streamlined city administrative duties, Petersen said. Payroll, general ledger entries, water bills, tax bills, police and fire records, and voter registrations are now expedited by computers.

Petersen said senior citizens continued to benefit from services provided by the Woods. The city funds Services for Older Citizens (SOC) as well as a taxi service and has initiated Compute-A-Care and Alert-A-Lite programs

Compute-A-Care, the first computerized emergency response system in the country, involves a computer-generated daily phone call to participating senior and handicapped citizens who live

The Alert-A-Lite program involves installation of a porch light that can become a blinking light a signal to neighbors or police that an emergency exists in that home.

Petersen counted the continuation of major capital improvement programs and the rebuilding of the city's infrastructure system as one of the year's outstanding achievements. The Woods spent $807,982 for improvement of streets and sidewalks and installation of handicap ramps; $362,372 on watersewer improvements; $16,000 for street light conversion from mercury vapor to energy-efficient high pressure sodium vapor; and 18,000 on a tree planting program. The City of Grosse Pointe Woods received three notable awards in 1986: for traffic safety, from the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police; for pedestrian safety for cities of comparable size nationwide, first place from Michigan AAA; and for excellence in financial reporting, a certificate of achievement from the Government Finance Officers Associa-

The city adopted a master redevelopment plan for improvement of the city's Lakefront and Ghesquire parks and voters approved a $3,500,000 bond issue to finance the long-term plan.

In addition, Petersen said $364,080 capital outlay went for vehicles and equipment; $2,500,000 water-sewer improvement bonds were issued; $1,825,000 street improvement bonds were issued; and $175,000 was spent for repair of the Torrey Road storm water pumping

Mayor Freeman added praise for the achievements of the beautification committee during 1986. Three new street boulevard flower beds and 85 new trees were planted, and the landscaping of the Mack Avenue median from Bournemouth to Prestwick was completed, including additional benches, bike racks and trash bins.

Local businesses also contributed to the beautification effort, he said, by spending $1,500,000 for remodeling projects for their stores and office buildings.

City administrator Petersen set forth four goals for Grosse Pointe Woods in 1987:

 Retain the city's low tax rate. Negotiate all five employee union contracts, which expire the end

 Implement the largest capital improvement program in the city's history

 Maintain the city's leadership as one of the outstanding and innovative cities in the country.

"It was a great year," said May-or Freeman. "This council probably did more in one year's time than any council so far. Everything seemed to pull together.

'Next year we have a lot to do to complete the progress.

Chief justice Riley .

tem, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court has less power than under some systems where the justice to write the opinion on any given case is assigned by the chief. Here, opinions are assigned by lot among the justices holding the majority opinion. Riley described her new duties as being a spokes-

"I speak for the court," she said.
"I will attempt to guide them in dealing with administrative duties. I am the immediate contact between the bench and the bar. It's my duty to participate in meeting with the leadership of the bench and bar. The chief picks up an additional burden. But I don't really have any more clout.'

The chief justice post will add to Riley's already busy schedule. She spends most weeks in Lansing, returning to her home in the Farms on weekends.

"I have two suitcases," she said. "I come home and unpack one and pack the other.

Riley expressed admiration for U.S. Supreme Court.

"I have had the pleasure of meeting Warren Burger," she said. "If there was anyone who ever looked and acted like a chief justice, it was him.'

Her highest praise was reserved for William Rehnquist, current chief justice of the court.

"Rehnquist is an outstanding juror," she said. "He has been described as an arch-conservative, but he truly has the high esteem of his colleagues on the court. He brings the court together. He also has a brilliant and total grasp of the law.'

The criticism leveled at Rehnquist during his confirmation was often out of context, Riley said.

'When you put yourself in public life, you're expected to be above reproach," she said. "But we don't seem to treat our public figures very well."

Riley herself sometimes is a target for criticism.

'i answer all my mail, no matter how nasty," she said.
She told of a letter from a man present and past members of the who said he would never vote for a woman with three names.

"I wrote back to him and explained that I use my maiden name because my father didn't have any sons. I'm carrying on the family name," she said.

Later she met the same man at a function. She remembered his name and commented to him on the letter.

'He said he would vote for me now," she said. "He said, 'I've been writing to people for years, and you're the first one to write

Riley is a native of Detroit. She attended Wayne State University for both her undergraduate degree and her law degree. She practiced from 1950 until 1976, as a sole practitioner, with the Wayne County Friend of the Court, and as a partner in Riley and Roumell. In 1976 she was appointed to the Michigan Court of Appeals.

Riley's husband, Wallace, is a former president of both the Michigan Bar Association and the American Bar Association. They have a son, Peter Comstock Riley, who is 19 years old.

Flamingo Road

It's not the chickens that have come home to roost — it's a flamingo. It was spotted perched atop a new housing construction at Merriweather and Grosse Pointe Boulevard in the Farms. We wonder if the residents have a Florida home as well.

UPI bureau chief entertains

She said her favorite president was John F. Kennedy. "While we were on the campaign trail in 1960, there were many nuns along the way that came out to see the candidate," Thomas said. "Someone asked Kennedy if he thought the Catholics would vote for him. He said, 'Well, I know one thing, the nuns will.' She said that Kennedy brought to the White House both hope and vision. She said he knew the difference between war and peace, and knew what the horrors of a nuclear war would be. She said he was very good at getting young people involved.

"He was not a perfect president," she said, "and his time was short. He gave that feeling that we could move the mountain. I think that feeling died with him. Correspondents spend most of their day in the White House in special quarters. She said she must live within 10 or 15 minutes of the White House, because she never knows when she will be called in. She said she often arrives at 6 or 7 a.m. and may leave at 6 or 7 p.m.

'We don't get to see the president very often," she said. "We may go days without seeing him. Sometimes, you may see more of him on television than we do.

When they do hear from the president, it is usually through his press secretary. She has dealt with many of them over the years, but her favorite spent only a month at

"Jerry terHorst was Gerald Ford's press secretary for one month," Thomas said. "He was from Grand Rapids and was Detroit News Bureau chief in Washington for a number of

She said terHorst stayed press secretary until Ford pardoned Richard Nixon without letting terHorst know first.

"It was a great profile in courage," she said. "It took great integrity to do what he did. It helped us all in terms of what newspeople stand for."

Thomas was a relative unknown among America's masses until she began to be seen on television.

They're all great,'' she said of the major network newscasters. "I admire what they do, and they have to do it in such a hurry.'

When asked if she considered herself a celebrity or if she had a problem with newspeople taking on celebrity status, she answered quickly and honestly.

"I love it," she said to rau-cous applause. "Consider the alternative. Really though, we journalists have a saying. You are only as good as your next story.

You win some and lose some. You can't get a big head in this business.

Often reporters in Washington must rely on their sources when the president isn't talking.

I wish someone would give me some," she said of news leaks.
"Most of the leaks that come out, come from the White House or some other officialdom. You have to just trust your source and ride it out, and eventually the truth is

And that is what she seeks to print - the truth. There are not many stories she has written which the same facts haven't been given out to the rest of the White House press corps.

"If you ever work for a wire service you learn fast to just play it straight," she said. "You write it straight. Just the facts. We serve newspapers and broadcasters all over the world. You can't write a story with what you think or like you see it. It has to be just what it

She said it is often difficult to know just what the facts are. On one hand Reagan will say he is supplying arms to the guerillas in Nicaragua, she said, but on the other he is saying he is not trying to overthrow that country's government. On the one side Reagan will bomb the home of the Libyan leader and then say he was not trying to kill him. 'She recalled the Iceland summit and pointed out that the press corps was standing outside in the frigid weather waiting for the talks to end. She said that the island is one of the most remote and desolate areas of the world, but she didn't mind being there.

"We always used to say that the only thing worse than being on a campaign trip was not being on one," she said.

She talked about the time she went to Peking when President Nixon made his historic visit to

"It was like being on the moon, it was so different. I remember leaving a wake-up call with the operator. The call came in and the operator said, 'Wake up.' There was the time Nixon was asked what he thought of the Great Wall of China. 'The Great Wall, is a great wall,' he said.'

Thomas told one story after another, and though she mentioned many, there was a feeling that there was many more from this woman who has seen six presidents come and five go so far.

"When you meet people they always ask you what you do and where you are from," she said. "I always say I am from the eastside of Detroit. I am proud of it.

"I love Detroit, there are many great people here," she said. "They have a dynamism and spirit no matter what the problems are. And everyone always helps everyone in the end."

Durant still questioning government role in legal service to poor

By Nancy Parmenter

W. Clark Durant has just been re-elected to the chairmanship of the Legal Services Corp., a federal agency for which Ronald Reagan has -- as he has every year since 1980 — proposed no funding Durant is not discouraged at the president's zero budget proposal. He says Reagan is supportive of the agency's reform efforts.

"I suspect Congress will fund it," Durant said Monday. "We always request the same budget.

In an agency fraught with controversy over delivery of legal service to the poor, Durant has set out to rethink the process. He now emphasizes competition, accountability and local solutions rather than federal regulation - moves that cause critics to complain that the agency is throwing poor people to suggests. One is that the president

Not at all, says Durant. "We're trying to expand (service). The number of lawyers paid for by federal dollars isn't the proper measure of service.

In spite of asking Congress not to fund legal aid to the poor, one of the things Reagan did Jan. 9 after he got out of the hospital following prostate surgery was to sign a letter to Durant.

"You have taken bold steps to shift to debate on how best to serve the poor," Reagan wrote. "... You have astutely recognized that programs for the poor require more competition, greater accountability for taxpayer dollars, and alternative approaches that maximize local solutions.

So why does Reagan give with one hand and take with the other? There are several reasons, Durant

The man, whose name was not released pending the issuance of charges and arraignment, was first reported as being a prowler in the Park late Sunday night.

Farms police later received a prowling complaint from a Handy Road resident. In both cases the man was described as six feet tall and wearing a green army jacket and black cap.

The vehicle was abandoned, but left running in the driveway of a LaFontaine Road home.

• Never leave your snowblower unattended, even for a few minutes. If you must leave it, put it in the yard or garage, out of

CALVARY SENIOR CENTER

Serving the needs of the elderly in the area for the past 10 years, the center carries on the mission of Calvary Lutheran Church

By Elsa Frohman alvary Lutheran Church is no more, but the church lives on in Calvary Senior

"Probably the most significant decision that the people of that congregation made was to leave this property for this use," said the Rev. Dr. Rodney Hill, administrator of Calvary Center.

Hill explained that the existence of Calvary Center is do to the decision of the Calvary congregation to leave the church building and property, stretching a full block north of Mack on Gateshead and including one house, to Lutheran Social Services when the congregation dissolved 10 years ago in the summer of 1977.

"It had come to a time when they could no longer function as a congregation," Hill said. "They left the property to Lutheran Social Services with only two conditions — that whatever the purpose the property was put to would keep the Calvary name, and that it be used for services for older people.' Today, Calvary operates a variety of programs ranging from Senior Day Care to Meals on Wheels, to a drop-in senior center where patrons can play cards, pool, have lunch or just socialize.

In 1977, Calvary opened as a drop-in senior center.

"At first, they brought brown-bag lunches," Hill said. "Some of those same people are still com-

The center got off to a good start, Hill said. "We got this building debt-free and barrier free, and that made a difference," he explained.

One of the first extra services to be added was an outreach social worker who instituted the center's Protective Services.

"Our definition of protective services is a little different from the DSS (Department of Social Services),"Hill said. "For DSS, protective services apply to some-one who is abused, either by themselves, or someone else. The United Foundation definition involves people at risk."

Calvary's Protective Services are funded by the United Foundation. Today, the program employs two full-time social workers and two social work students from Wayne State University on field placement.

"We consider 'at risk' to include people who need guidance to remain independent," Hill said.

The social workers help seniors untangle bureaucratic problems with Social Security, utility companies and other institutions. Hill sited a case where a client was told she had been overpaid on her Social Security checks and would not get a check for several months to make up the difference. The client went to the Social Security office several times without making any progress. Once a Calvary Social worker stepped in, the error was detected and the problem was re-

The social workers also help younger families deal with the problems of aging parents. When the elder members of a family get to the point where they need help to live independently, Calvary Center can assist the family in finding the correct alternatives for care.

With funds from the Detroit Area Agency on Aging, Calvary was able to add Home Serrvices to its list of programs. The Home Services project is limited geographically, to the five Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods and the Denby and Finney neighborhoods of Detroit. Through this program, the center provides light housekeeping on a regular basis for seniors and han-dicappers who need help to stay in their homes.

"Light housekeeping includes picking up, vacuuming, dusting, changing beds and cleaning up the kitchen," Hill said. It doesn't include heavy cleaning such as washing windows, moving furniture, etc. The cleaners will come once every one, two or three weeks as needed.

"This is for people who need a bit of a prop to live independently," Hill said.

In addition to the cleaning service, Calvary has a Chore service.

Under this program, minor home repairs are provided.

"We wouldn't rewire a house or replace a broken pipe," Hill said. But for handiman-type repairs, the Chore service does the work for free, unless the client wants to make a donation. The Chore service also provides lawn mowing and a limited amount of snow shoveling.

Another service is Calvary Cleaners — a major housecleaning service. For people who need a special cleanup job, before a party or family gathering, the Calvary Cleaners move furniture and do

The Pastor's Corner

Loving and caring

The Rev. John Corrado Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church

Love is easy to talk about but loving is not easy

Caring is easy to talk about but caring is not easy.

"Relationships" — especially "meaningful" ones — how we love to talk about them! Building them — that's hard.

How easily a church can become a house of words: 'We love all the warm, wonderful abstractions!'

How easily we can mistake attraction and affability for love and friendship.

The words are easy. The realities are hard. The realities require knowing one another. The realities require time and effort. and the stern knowledge that we will not always like one another or agree with one another or even understand one another.

We are not Prince Charmings and Sleeping Beauties. The Church is not a magic wand or a fairy godmother.

We are all frogs and we are all waiting for all the other frogs to come close and see our warts and "love" and "care" and "relate" in spite of them.

Our calling as a people is not to be carbon copies of our "Wayside Pulpit" and go around mouthing all of the warm and wonderful abstractions.

Our calling as a people is not to search for agreeable, attractive, apparently perfect people who have no edges or warts or bumps which will sometimes rub us the wrong way.

Our calling as a people is to accept the imperfections of ourselves and others AND to take the risk of reaching out to touch and love knowing all the while we might fail. Only courage

"takes the worry out of being close" Only brave people dare it. Beyond all abstractions and unreasonable expectations, pray the courage to take the risk of loving.

This column is written on a rotating basis by members of the Grosse Pointe Ministerial Association.

In 1982, Calvary added one of its most significant services — Senior

This is for the very frail elderly person who needs supervision," Hill said. Senior Day Care is an alternative to nursing home care for elderly people who can't live by themselves. The day care clients are often victims of Alzheimer's disease or depression.

"There are people who can't be left at home during the day," Hill said. "It may be that a spouse is taking care of them but it is getting to be too much. They need a break

For families caring for an invalid older person, day care can provide a needed respite from the constant demands of care.

"In Alzheimer's, the personality dies before the person," Hill said.
"When two people have been living together for all these years, when one becomes completely dependent on the other, it is very difficult. The partner can become exhausted.

Day care can make it possible for a family to continue to care for an elderly parent in the home, when otherwise a nursing home would be unavoidable.

"The people in nursing homes are older and sicker than they used to be," Hill said. Many people don't realize how few people actually go into nursing homes, he explained. "Only five percent of people ever go to a nursing home. Nineteen out of 20 of us will live out our lives without spending time in a nursing home. Of people over 85, only one in four is in a nursing

Day care offers a substantial savings for families with an elderly person needing care, even though the day care program has been entirely privately paid up until this year.

"This is cheaper than a nursing home or home health care," Hill said. "Twenty-five dollars will get you three hours of home care. Here you get the whole day, with lunch.' However, establishing a day care center has been difficult without any outside funding.

"Few insurance companies will cover day care, and there is no tax incentive," Hill said. However, this year, for the first time, Calvary has received a grant from the Detroit Area Agency on Aging to help support the day care program. The fee structure will be changed this year to include a sliding scale for those in financial Pointe Memorial Church.

The day care program provides churches to pray for unity among ment and supervision for its clients. There is a nurse on duty at all times during the day and medications provided by the family are dispensed. There is a bath service for those who need help bathing and a hairdresser.

'Most of our clients start coming one or two days a week, but increase their visits once they find out how nice it is," Hill said.

Calvary's services also include Meals on Wheels, dispensing prescription drugs for those not eligible for Medicaid through Detroit Board of Education and Wayne County Community College. Calvary is also a Food and Friendship site where 60 hot meals are served a day.

In some ways, Calvary Lutheran Church is still present in the cen-ter. The church building has been renovated to the point where its original use is difficult to recognize, but several members of the old congregation are still active in the center as volunteers.

"We use a lot of volunteers," Hill said. "If someone just wants to be a friend to an older person, or World Medical Relief and a variety of classes offered through the wants to help with arts and crafts projects, or wants to help transport and older person to the doctor or deliver Meals on Wheels." The center also operates a telephone reassurance program, where volunteers call seniors to check on them and chat periodically.

Calvary Senior Center operates for drop-ins and lunch from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., daily.

For more information on any of Calvary's programs, or to volunteer, call Hill at 881-3374.

By Peggy O'Connor

Stu Argo Jr.'s memory of Australia consists mainly of 14hour days spent hard at work yacht racing, practicing yacht racing or preparing the boat for yacht racing. He didn't get too much time to shop or see the sights, yet the North High graduate calls his four months in Australia "unforgettable.'

The Canada's Cup veteran served as a port tailer on board the Chicago Yacht Club's "Heart of America" in the club's recent challenger trials. And although Heart of America didn't make it past the round-robin series, Argo says he wouldn't trade a moment of the time he spent trying.

"I just really enjoyed the whole experience. I would do it again in the people down there a minute. The people down there are really friendly. I've been sailing against Australians for years and I still haven't met one who wasn't nice," Argo said.

"We had a great crew that really worked well together. And even though we didn't make it to the semifinals, we had some good races. It was a pretty special experience for me.

Argo got his spot on Heart of America through his association with Gary Jobson, a veteran sailor he met while the two crewed on Bill Martin's Stars & Stripes out of Bayview Yacht Club in the Canada's Cup in 1984. Jobson, who is now doing color commentary for ESPN during the America's Cup, liked what he saw in Argo and asked him to sail with him for a couple of seasons.

In June 1985, the Chicago Yacht Club bought "Clipper" as a practice boat for the America's Cup trials. Jobson asked Argo to come to Chicago to sail with the crew and see if skipper Buddy Melges "liked

"It's a huge jump. Like going to the Super Bowl," Argo says. He made the transition and after earning his degree in geology from MSU in December 1985, Argo was asked to join the team to race in Melges did. So Argo made the Florida last February, then go on to San Francisco and to Santa Cruz, Calif., in March. He was there when Heart of America was christened out on Michigan Avenue in Chicago last summer.

The boat was shipped to Australia in August and Argo followed in September. The crew had just three days to practice for the first round-robin, and they emerged from that series with just three vic-(Continued on Back Page)

Incident spoils 'best' hockey game

South shocks No. 7 North,

By Peggy O'Connor

The octopus-tossing culprit has been identified and reprimanded. Other than that, it's up to each high school hockey fan to continue to improve his behavior at varsity hockey games, say athletic administrators. Although the crowd at last Saturday's North-South hockey game was termed the "best ever" by both coaches and administrators.

fans from both schools were ejected from the game with 4:30 left in the third period. The fans had been warned three times — and the teams penalized twice - when coins were repeatedly thrown onto the ice. The public address announcer warned fans at the start of the third period that another similar interruption of the game would result in the ejection of the crowd. And when a male North High student tossed a squid into the South High bench area, St. Clair Shores Civic Arena officials cleared the stadium of fans before referees allowed the game to continue.

"I don't disagree with the referees' decision to halt the game and clear the arena. Sure, I think our kids were disappointed it had to happen. But I also think that something positive can come out of this whole thing," said South coach

Tim Zimmerman.

"I think they made their point: throwing things on the ice won't be tolerated.

At North, athletic administrator Thomas Gauerke said that the student who threw the octopus on the ice (throwing squid is a Detroit hockey tradition symbolizing the days when the Red Wings won the Stanley Cup playoffs in eight straight games, thus the eight-legged octopus) had reported to the office himself and would write a letter of apology to players, fans and students.

"He honestly wasn't aware that a penalty had been given (earlier). He said he couldn't hear the public address system and told me that if he had known that it would have resulted in fans being ejected, he never would have done it. This boy has never been in any kind of trouble . . i believe nim, Gauerke said.

Gauerke said he called the North team captains into the office and (Continued on Back Page)

7-0 Knights on top of MIAC standings

In an early season first place showdown, the University Liggett School varsity basketball team nipped previously undefeated Plymouth Christian, 68-59, on Friday, Jan. 9 at Schoolcraft College. The win gave ULS a 7-0 record and sole possession of first place in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference.

The Knights started slowly, as the Plymouth Eagles shot out to a 17-14 first quarter lead. Switching to an aggressive man-to-man defense, ULS got on track. Kevin Crociata had several steals and John Yancey, overcoming two first quarter fouls and one period on the bench, rallied for 10 second quarter points to give ULS a 32-28 half-time lead.

Plymouth tried to roar back in the third quarter as Pat McCarthy started hitting everything he threw and ULS was forced to go to a "box and one" defense with Kandia Milton on McCarthy. The strategy worked as McCarthy scored only four fourth quarter points. Meanwhile, the Knights picked up their offense. Yancey stayed hot and senior William Middlebrooks got into the act with 11 second half points and a game-high 11 rebounds. Crociata continued stealing passes and running the offense.

Yancey led the ULS scoring with 23; Milton added 17, and Middlebrooks and Crociata had 13 and 10, respectively.

On Jan. 6, the Knights played their strongest complete game of the year, walloping Southfield Christian 68-42. Once again, four Knights hit for double figures as Yancey had 26, Milton had 17, Middlebrooks, 11 and Crociata, 10.

"We're thrilled by the two wins," said Coach Chuck Wright. "Both Southfield and Plymouth Christian are tough, well-coached teams. We played better against Southfield, but showed that we are battlers against Plymouth.

"Middlebrooks and Crociata had great weeks. Middlebrooks led us in rebounding in both games. Coach Domenic Facciolla (Wright's assistant) has been doing a lot of extra work with him and it's paying dividends. Crociata's floor game is improving all the time. Our subs, primarily David Chilingirian, Bill Listman and Bill Lucken, have been doing a great job also."

The Knights' next game is not until Jan. 23 due to exams. They will play Huron Valley Lutheran at home at 7:30 p.m.

The University Liggett School JV cagers continued their winning ways with a close 48-46 victory over Plymouth Christian School on Jan. 10.

Point guard Ti Juan Kidd, who has just returned to the team after an injury, led the team with an outstanding 20 points, followed by Mike Niccolini with 10 and Anthony Abiragi with 7.

Coach John Wienshienk complimented the team's overall defense and its ability to shut down Plymouth Christian's offense in critical situations.

Spikers 2-0

The girls' varsity volleyball team at ULS is off to a great start and a 2-0 league mark.

Playing Harper Woods on Dec. 12, ULS came off the court with its first win, 15-5, 15-7. The first MIAC game was played on Jan. 8 at Lutheran Northwest. ULS won two games, 15-4, 15-9 and 16-14, 3-15, 15-

Sophomore Sylvia Ristic had almost a 100 percent serving record for the two matches. Senior Laurie Khelokian had three kill spikes.

Returning players this year are Cindy Paul, fourth year; Kathy Bianchi, third year; Khelokian, Sue Cleek, Ristic, and Dana Warnez, all second year players. New on the team are senior Delia Price, sophomores Shirley Kim and Diann Imbriaco, and freshman Lexi Crain.

On Thursday, Jan. 15, ULS will host Plymouth Christian at 6 p.m. (By Kathy Bianchi)

Swim team opens

Since varsity swimming is a brand new sport at ULS every member of the co-ed varsity swim team set a school record in the opener Friday, Jan. 9, at Mercy Center, Mercy College. The team lost to Detroit Country Day School 50-25, but Coach Liz Stavale said she was "more than just pleased with the team's first showing."

Neil Weyhing took first place in the 200 freestyle and Dan Shanle was first in the 50 free. Tip Quilter battled Chip Quamler of DCDS in an exciting race, earning second place in the 100 breast. The 400 free relay team of Bruce Wilkinson, Whitney Joondeph, Steve Sanchez and Weyhing placed second.

Liz Sieber and Varick Foster were chosen by their teammates to serve as captains for the 1987 season. ULS will swim seven meets in the next six weeks; the next meet will be against Cranbrook on Friday, Jan. 16, at 4 p.m. at Parcells Middle School pool.

Icers ranked No. 10

The ULS varsity hockey team is at 7-4-1 and ranked No. 10 in Class B-C-D.

On Dec. 17, in its last game of 1986, ULS Hosted Metro League rival Gabriel Richard (No. 8 in class B-C-D), winning 4-1. In the first period, the Knights jumped out quickly on goals by Gordie Maitland, Jonathan Davis, Blasko Ristic and Bill Jewett. Richard answered with its only goal early in the second period, but ULS's tennacious team defense, including superb goaltending by Steve Stoyka, stopped further scoring.

ka, stopped further scoring.
On Wednesday, Jan. 7, the Knights returned to dominate No. 5 ranked Allen Park Cabrini, 3-2. Cabrini jumped out to a two-goal lead in the first period, but then the Knights began to steamroll, scoring two goals in the second on shots by Doug Wood and Ristic. Once again defense prevailed, with tough play by the defensive "Bruise Brothers": Pahl Zinn, Chip Davis, Andrew MacLeod, Ted Evans, Mike Coello and Ristic. Offensive thrusts were supported by Bob Jewett and Charlie Roby. Wood scored the game-winner.

ULS' game against St. Clair Shores Lakeview on Jan. 17 showcased the net-minding ability of senior goalie Jeremy Belenky. Belenky blocked 15 shots and got offensive help from Maitland, Bill Jewett, Bob Jewett, Wood and hard-shooting Andrew Galsterer. The dazzling line of Bill Reuther, Branden Pelok and Jonathan Davis dominated Lakeview so much that the opponents could not get the puck over their blue line during a two-minute span in the second period. The Knights went on to improve their record to 7-4-1 with a 5-1 victory. With these wins, Coach John Fowler's team is now ranked No. 10 in the state for Class B-C-D.

The Knights' next game is on Jan. 17 at home against south Lyon. The game marks the debut of Shannon Nowowiecki, Mike McCracken and Greg Petrilli. (By Blasko Ristic)

Cagers 'click', open league season with a victory

By Josh Abbott North High

North's varsity basketball team clicked into first gear last week, chalking up 146 points in a pair of wins over Warren Woods Tower and Roseville Brablec. The Norsemen entered play this week at 4-2 overall, 1-0 in the Bi-County League.

North went on the road Jan. 6, pouncing on a relatively weak Tower team 68-36. The Norsemen burst out to a 25-10 first quarter advantage and rolled to an easy win. Junior forward Russell Rice led the offense with 12 points; senior David Justice added 10 points.

Then on Friday, North took a similar victory over Brablec in the league opener, 78-45. The Norsemen jumped out to a 12-point lead in the first quarter and were never challenged. Junior center Karl Schultz had a strong game with 16 points. Forward Kirk Lowry shipped in with 14.

The varsity faces Clintondale on the road this Friday, Jan. 16 at 7:30 p.m. before hosting Lakeview on Thursday, Jan. 22.

North's JV squad evened its season mark at 3-3 with a split of two games last week. North lost to Tower, 34-33, and topped Brablec, 57-31. Against Brablec, center Matt Brady led all scorers with 15 points. Scott Cline had 11 points and Derek Lawson and Charlie Stumb chipped in with eight apiece.

The JV plays at Clintondale and Lakeview this week.

North's freshman basketball team played Port Huron before the Christmas break and despite being tied at 18-18 at halftime, fell to the undereated Big Reds, 45-34. Kevin Endres paced North with 11 points; Jon Kesman had seven points and John Karabetsos added five.

On Jan. 7, the frosh met non-league foe Royal Oak Kimball, emerging from an exciting contest with a 49-47 win. After Kimball tied the game at 47-47 with four seconds left, North called time out and when the ball was inbounded at half-court, Kesman banked a shot off the glass for the two points and a North victory. Kesman accounted for 20 points overall; Chris Meathe contributed 12 points and nine rebounds.

On Jan. 9, North trounced Brablec, 59-31. Endres led all scorers with 28 points, 15 rebounds and six blocked shots. Kesman scored 13 points as nine players got on the board for the 3-3 frosh team.

Icers in slump

North's hockey team has been in a bit of a slump lately, losing two games in a row for the first time this season. Coming back from the holiday break, North fell to hardhitting Detroit Country Day, 8-3, and lost to rival South High, 6-3.

Brian Nettle (two) and John
Quinlan scored against Country
Day. Rob Marshall (two) and Bob
Poulos got goals against South High.

Matmen maul South

North's varsity wrestling team kept its unblemished record against South intact last week with a 50-4 victory over the Blue Devils on Jan. 6. Earning pins were Chris Hayes, Bill Lewis and Chuck Schultz. That same day, North edged what was described by Coach Larry Aceto as a "tough Bishop Foley team," 39-33. Key wins included pins by Hayes, Lewis, Schultz, David Van Dale and John Kostermeyer.

Swimmers lose

North's varsity swimmers ran into a tough Dearborn squad, losing, 56-24. Andy Young and Jeff Williams had three firsts. Young won the 100 fly and Williams touched first in the 200 and 500 free. Turning in personal bests were Victor Perez in the 100 free and 100 breast, Steve Swan in the 200 IM and 100 back, Ron Jendretzke in the 200 and 500 free, Dave Farrell in the 200 IM and Bob Bania and Rob Chevalier in diving.

Spikers fall

The girls' varsity volleyball team opened the year with a Jan. 7 loss to rival South High, 12-15, '2-15. Despite the loss, North got great service points from Mary Lex and strong attacks from Julie Cook and Barbie Loeher. The girls also lost to East Detroit, 1-15, 15-7, 11-15.

The JV squad opened its season at the Shrine Invitational, finishing second out of eight teams. The girls lost to Regina, 13-15, 5-15.

Feeling By Deanna Hawthorne

Here it is the middle of January and you've already botched your New Year's resolutions to exercise more and eat less. Don't give up or give in - Start anew. This weekend take the time to sit down and plan a onemonth fitness program for your family. Don't think of the entire year. Remember how the man ate the elephant? One bite at a time! Here are some hints to help you and your family reach your goals.

1) Plan a family conference where each member sets specific goals. Included in these goals should be a set requirement of aerobic exercise for at least 20 minutes three times a week for beginners or young family members. Does Dad have a nagging back problem and a pot belly? The two are related. Dad needs to do abdominal strengthening exercises daily. Has Mom gained an extra 10 unattractive pounds? Reduce those calories. Remember, it's a simple matter of balance: one pound equals 3,500 calories. What is taken in must be burned or it is stored as

2) Make up a chart with each family member's name and goal. Each person gets to mark the chart when a requirement is fulfilled. Make the chart large and colorful and display in a prominent spot.

3) Help the children to select a time to exercise that they will be likely to keep. Do you have a stationary bicycle? How about bicycling during one of their fa-vorite TV programs. Take a family walk together. Make it brisk! Do your abdominal exercises together.

4) Reward yourselves. Make the rewards fitness-oriented.

5) Stick to it. It's only for a month. Don't forget to record results. Kids especially like to see progress.

6) Don't nag. Keep it light and make it FUN.

7) Don't forget Fido. Dogs become unfit too. Take him for a walk. You'll be helping him as well as yourself.

8) During this month have everyone's blood pressure checked and also think about having a blood test to check cholesterol levels. Weigh everyone in and out at the end of the month. If one of the goals is to stop smoking, family support often helps a great deal.

9) Don't forget that aerobic exercise is the only activity that burns fat as fuel. Always warm up for eight to 10 minutes before elevating your heart rate with static stretching and rhythmic limbering exercises. Gradually increase your heart rate with easy jogging or marching.

10) Don't forget to cool down with slow walking or other limbering exercises after the aerobic activity to bring your heart rate to pre-exercise range. Remember to listen to your body. There is NO gain in pain!

Set the right example for your children. It's very difficult to get children to eat right or to exercise if you don't do it yourself.

I'd love to hear of your successes (or failures). Let me hear from you. Good luck. Remember, it's only one month!

Program focuses on steroids

Anabolic steroids, chemical compounds similar to those of naturally occuring male and female sex hormones, have been a controversial issue in athletics for several years. They can, under certain circumstances, promote the synthesis of proteins used to build tissues in skeletal muscles.

To provide athletes, coaches and parents with information about steriods, South High, in cooperation with CHAMP (Cottage Hospital Athletic Medicine Program) and Henry Ford Hospital Center for Athletic Medicine, will present the program Athletic Conditioning and The Effects of Anabolic Steroids on Monday, Jan. 19, 7:30 p.m. The presentation will be held at South in room 170 (near the gymnasium), 11 Grosse Pointe Boulevard.

Marti VanEenenaam, a CHAMP-certified athletic trainer, will discuss physical conditioning for sports. John Hurley. M.D., orthopedic surgeon, will present information on the ef fects of anabolic steroids on the body. A question and answer period follows.

"For the athlete who really wants to excel in his or her sport, conditioning should be a year-round practice," says VanEenenaam, "Get-fit-quick methods, such as drugs, are not

Weight training: A few facts before you start

By Peggy O'Connor

In the market for some welldeveloped abdominal muscles? Like your "pecs" to be at their peak? Weight training in a proper, supervised lifting program might be one way to achieve your goal. And, while not everyone wants to vie for body-building titles like Ms. Olympus or Mr. America, weight training is becoming more and more popular as a way to achieve and maintain cardiovascular fit-

There are weight training programs available for men, women and even children. And, if properly practiced, such programs can result in improved overall titness, better developed cardiovascular condition, increased endurance and great muscle development.

A number of local health and fitness clubs offer weight training programs, as do several "body-building" gyms in the area. In Grosse Pointe, the non-profit Neighborhood Club provides freeweight equipment (barbells, dumbbells, handweights, etc.) in its Fitness Center.

And, although program coordinator Dan Wyers says that the club's weight program is not a formal one (Fitness Center activities are supervised, but extensive individual instruction is often not possible), there are a few basics which folks interested in weight training should know, according to

"I think weight training can be for anyone. Studies show that it improves cardiovascular fitness, when combined with proper diet and other exercise. Of course, weight training should not be the main exercise, but more of a tool used in achieving cardiovascular fitness," Wyers said.

Wyers himself lifts weights every other day. "In my opinion, it improves one's mental well-being - as does any regular exercise and fitness program - because you can see the results of your work and get up in the morning and say 'hey, I feel good about my-

Although weight training experts have differing points of view on nearly every aspect of the sport, they generally agree on the notion that those who want to add bulk or mass to their bodies should lift heavier weights at fewer repetitions and those (women for example) who don't want bulk but prefer to add muscle tone, would be better off lifting lower weights at higher repetitions.

Beyond that, Wyers suggested that people interested in weight training should find out as much as they can about the sport. "The more you know about lifting before you begin, the better off you'll be,' he noted. Some sources of information about weight training include the public library, local gyms and lifting clubs (although you should be prepared to hear a sales pitch along with your information), and trade magazines like "Sports Fit-ness," "Muscle and Fitness" and the very technical "National Strength & Conditioning Association Journal."

Wyers stressed that he is not an expert in the field and that although the Fitness Center's weight room and other facilities are open to the public at $1 per person, per use from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on weekdays, no individual instruction is offered at the Neighborhood Club. "I can steer a person in the right direction . . . and work with those I see having a real problem. But it's really important that people know what they're doing when they begin to lift weights.

Here are a few do's and don'ts Wyers suggests for beginning

· Do check with a physician be-

• Do find out what you want to accomplish before you start. Do you want to lose weight? Gain bicep strength? Improve endurance? It's important to know your goal before you begin the program.

• Do investigate the sport thoroughly before you begin. Seek out the best type of equipment and assistance. If you've tried a weight training program before, find out why you didn't stick with it, or Do wear the proper attire for lifting. Improper equipment is one ticket to failure.

· Don't work out alone, especially when working with heavier weights.

· Don't start out with the heaviest weights available. Begin with lower weights and work up. Never walk into a gym and try to pick up the heaviest weights there even as a joke.

Don't work faster than your body can handle. It takes a while for your body to keep up with the pace of your lifting. Build your repetitions up slowly and let your body progress along with your

• Don't get discouraged with your results at the beginning. It takes time to see the benefits from a weight training program. "Give lifting an honest chance. Build your program gradually and when you see the results, you'll be happier and more likely to stay in the program," Wyers said.

Bread — the staff of life?

Many, many centuries ago, a creative cook took a few grains of wild wheat, ground it between two stones and discovered the original stone-ground whole wheat flour. with the development of milling technology, flour changed dramatically

During colonial days, thousands of stone mills ground flour for neighboring towns and villages. Some mills began to "bolt" their flour, a system borrowed from ancient Rome where flour was sifted through bolts of cloth to remove the hulls and much of the bran and germ to produce a whiter and finer flour. Because of the cost of the process, white flour remained a ing to note that "peasant bread, status food for many years. The bran and germ were thrown away in the era before farmers and feedlots were around to buy up the leftover bran and germ. It is interestdark, heavy and grainy, got the old "nose-in-the-air" treatment from those who considered themselves educated and sophisticated. Little did they know that their choice of 'white'" bread was void of nutritional value. The government did not make it mandatory for bread manufacturers to enrich their white bread until 1941.

Nutrients

A grain of wheat contains three key components: bran, wheat germ and endosperm. The bran is the six outer layers or skins, the germ is the embryo, a small area inside the base of the grain, and the endosperm is a white, starchy mass in the center. If you are going to get the necessary nutritional benefits from the grain, you should be eating it with these three components balanced in proportions found in the original grain. The bran and germ are the main repositories of the vitamins and minerals. These two portions contain 75 percent of the 11 B vitamins, plus the greatest proportion of trace minerals such as zinc, copper and iodine. Wheat germ is the home of vitamin E and the essential unsaturated fatty acids.

Since the 1970's "natural foods" have once again become popular, "in" foods. Many food-processing companies jumped on the band-wagon with their versions of "whole wheat" breads, but we must shop and choose wisely to assure we are getting a good quality product. Thankfully, there are a number of small companies producing good quality breads.

Become an ingredient reader. The first ingredient listed should be whole wheat. Choose heavy, grainy varieties. We can also begin to change the way we bake. Start by using half whole wheat flour, half white when you make pancakes and waffles, for instance. In a short time you can treat your family to these two breakfast items made by using only whole wheat flour.

When storing whole wheat flour it is recommended that you find a cool, dry place in your kitchen. If your cupboards are too warm, then choose the refrigerator, making sure the flour is wrapped and closed tightly. Whole wheat has once again become a recognized ingredient in fulfilling our daily nutritional needs. And one of the real bonuses: you can actually smell and taste the difference.

'The Mission:'

By Michael Chapp

One of the most visually beautiful films of the year, "The Mission" is also one of the most powerful and thought-provoking. Set in 18th century SouthAmerica, it relates the true story of Jesuit priests forced to make a choice between their vow of obedience and a cause for which they have dedicated their lives. Because of the implicit paradox, the piece is both politi-cally and theologically challeng-

The year is 1750, and the countries of Spain and Portugal are in an unceasing bicker over ownership of Argentina, Paraguay and Brazil, where both have established prosperous colonies. Spain has outlawed slavery of the native Indians, but Portugal still allows it. The Jesuits, also known as the "shock troops" of the Vatican, have set up missions in some remote areas of the country, such as in the rain forests above the thundering Iguazu Falls. There, they have taught the Indians not only about God, but about things of earthly practicality, such as how to work with wood and metal, how to grow crops, and how to be self-sustaining.

When the Treaty of Madrid is tween the Spanish and Portugese empires is established, the Jesuits are ordered to vacate many of their missions, including the one set up by the falls.

The politics of the geography in the story are quite simple. But it's the politics of the people involved that really provide the tale's intrigue. Father Gabriel (Jeremy Irons) is a gentle, obedient and courageous priest who built up the mission after his predecessor was brother. His dedication to the order and what it represents seems as deep and sincere as Father Gabriel's, however.

When the Jesuits are ordered by the Vatican to leave the mission, Mendoza and some of the others organize and decide to help the Indians fight for their way of life. And that, of course, is where the quandary lies. Which is more important, the film asks: To be obedient to the order and give up the Indians to slavery, or to defy the order and fight for what their consciences and moral judgment dictate is right? The political argument is that it's necessary to sacrifice a handful of Indians so that the effectiveness of the Jesuists will be preserved elsewhere. The theological argument is that there's no point in dedicating one's life to the service of God if, at the first sign of trouble, you give in to the opposing forces. The question is an intriguing one, and the film's handling of it is excep-

By spending a lot of time with the character of Father Mendoza early in the film, viewers are forced to feel the pull of his predicament later. Since we understand his disgust with the thought of violence and murder, we also understand his moral dilemma when faced with losing the Indians to slavery. In the same way, we empathize with Father Gabriel, who opts to obey the Vati-

The film does not make a mockery of the ensuing war. Quite often, in fact, it plays silently, save for the songs of singing choirs. In the film's most powerful scene, Father Gabriel leads the Indian women in a procession, with the eucharist in the front, while Father Mendoza leads the men into battle. All the while, the soundtrack highlights the singing choir. And the viewer knows, in the heart, that both of the priests are doing what they feel DeNiro is wonderful as Mendoza. Of the two lead roles, his is less packed with dialogue and action, so he is required to do more with the material he does have. His part, albeit small, is as powerful and memorable as any character on the screen this year.

Nevertheless, it is Irons who deserves real accolades for his reading of Father Gabriel. His pacifistic demeanor and thoughtful delivery make him a shoo-in for an Academy Award nomination for best actor.

Roland Joffe's direction is tight and careful. No scene is allowed to drag on; no material in the film seems to be excessive. Indeed, every frame of the picture appears to be as carefully and fastidiously planned as a royal feast. The framing speaks as loudly as the characters, yet at no time does one get the feeling that this is an "artsy" picture. It will play very well for a general audience.

"The Mission" won the Best Picture award at the 1986 Cannes Film Festival in France. It could very well be a contender for the same honor at the Academy Awards in Hollywood next spring.

"Mission" accomplished.

After suffering overwhelming remorse and climbing his own Calvary, slave trader/mercenary Rodrigo Mendoza (Robert DeNiro) finally achieves a cathartic moment of spiritual conversion with the help of Jesuit priest Father Gabriel (Jeremy Irons), right, in "The Mission."

'Mosquito Coast' challenges the audience

By Michael Chapp

"Mosquito Coast" is a study of images and reality. Of theology and science. Of untamed nature and human nature. Of love and hate, and the surprisingly close link the two emotions have. It is a viscerally challenging piece, one that will not soon be forgotten.

Based on the best-selling novel by Paul Theroux, "Coast" is the story of a cynic with a chip on his shoulder and a dream in his soul. It is the story of man who becomes so disillusioned with America that to the middle of a jungle in Panama. But most of all, it is a story of the human spirit, and the lengths to which one will go to described as a contemporary Shakespearean tragedy. Its center of action is a man so entangled in his own vision that it eventually consumes him. Just as accurately, it is a chronicle of the man's son, and the spiritual growth that can be found in even the most challeng-

More easily than one might expect, he turns the native village into a veritable summer paradise, replete with gardens, Casablanca fans, plumbing, running water and air conditioning. But that's not enough. And already his hubris becomes apparent to viewers.

Indeed, no matter what Fox accomplishes, he wants more. His dream of a utopia is complete, yet he still feels an emptiness inside. It is not a material emptiness; it is the emptiness of a man who cannot make peace with himself. Meanwhile, he begins to distance himself from his family, since they don't share his visions.

Ford worked on "Witness," does a beautiful job with the immense parameters of "Coast." Weir handles the intimate close-ups and the ıngle shots with equai precision. Likewise, he uses the camera effectively to create moods in the piece. The shot of Fox's "ice factory," planted majestically in the jungle like a gold nugget in a clump of dirt is as telling as the close-up of Fox's face wailing in disbelief as his dream begins to crumble around him. Quite often, Weir simply pans back from the jungle in silence, letting viewers ingest for themselves the importance of the situation.

'Mosquito Coast'' contains a lesson for everybody. It is a powerhouse of a film that will touch viewers down to their very essence. It challenges the audience not only to understand Fox, but to understand themselves as well. It questions human motivations, it challenges theology and the metaphysical, it poses queries that are philosophical. And it never lets up — not for a minute

'Brighton Beach Memoirs' returns to a slower time

By Marion Trainor

"Brighton Beach Memoirs" is a gentle, evocative film that takes the viewer back to a time not too long ago when life moved at a slower pace and family life was the most important influence in young people's lives.

In this endearing comedy, Neil Simon takes us to a home in the Jewish section of Brooklyn, presumably where he grew up with his mother and father, older brother, his widowed aunt and her two daughters.

Eugene Morris Jerome (Jonathan Silverman) is the 15-year-old son. Smart, with boundless energy and a lively imagination, he sees himself either as a pitcher with the Yankees or a writer. Watching him all over his feet, it is obvious that baseball is not his calling.

As we listen to his asides and comments, there appears to be hope for him as a writer.

Right now his station in life is not too lofty. He is the one designated to run down to the corner store for three slices of cheese cut thin, and 10 minutes later, for a loaf of bread. This "gofer" role irritates him no end. It interrupts his journal writing and his daydreams of what the young woman next door looks like without clothes. Actually Eugene is a typical teenage boy of his time and his family is typical of the struggling Depressionera families of their time.

Eugene's father has lost one of his two jobs, creating a family crisis which is heightened when his 18-year-old brother, Stanley (Brian Dillinger) stands to lose his because he refuses to apologize over a difference with a tyranical boss.

His mother and aunt quarrel over a matter which as Eugene's father says, "should have been settled 25 years ago." His talented pretty cousin rebels because her mother will not let her quit school to join a Broadway show.

And then there is the younger cousin who makes a career out of being sickly and telling tales.

Added to these problems is the struggle to keep a family together when money is scarce. Tension becomes "so thick you could cut it with a knife, which is more than you could say for the liver," Eugene writes in his journal.

Things work out but not before they get worse. But even in the worse times we enjoy being with this family, partly because of Eugene but also be cause we have come to know the family well enough to know they will settle their difficulties without bitterness or rancor. 'Brighton Beach Memoirs' was a huge stage success. Audiences delighted in Eugene's growing pains and his antics. He is even funnier on screen where there is more space and time to follow him on his gangling misadventures and to listen in on his private observations. He is the epitome of every growing put-upon teenager who sees himself as a martyr to his fa-

Another difference between the stage and screen version is the ability of film to create a more pronounced sense of place and time.

There is much to appreciate in this film, but one of its biggest attractions is the opportunity it offers to relax and enjoy life with Eugene and his family.

Incident spoils . . .

told them that "we have to get to the bottom of this thing, let fellow students know this won't be toler-

"Overall, I'd agree that the behavior was the best in three years. From the standpoint of foul cheers, there really weren't any. My concern is that our people take responsibility about their behavior at public events. Honestly, it seems like when we get in large groups, we have one or two who goof things

Ironically, Gauerke said, he told the team captains that his season-al report to the school board on hockey had been quite favorable. "Outstanding, really. We've had good attendance, disciplined play and have been incident-free. This sort of tarnishes that, but I think that the fact that the person responsible came forward and is contrite, has a bearing on things."
South was the "home team" in the first meeting of the schools ever at St. Clair Shores. South had dozens of parent personnel at strategic points in the arena and kept the large crowd in check." Frank-ly, I think it was the best-behaved group ever . . . and the arena had a lot to do with that," said South's Chuck Hollosy. Gauerke said that he would meet with North's booster club to see if it would be possible to place parents in the stands to discourage throwing debris on

In the game - which coach Tim Zimmerman called "the best ever" - unranked South outlasted a furious North attack in the first period to take a 6-3 victory. Rob Marshall scored an unassisted goal at 8:58 of the period to give the Norsemen the lead, but South goalie Kevin Nesler was strong in the nets and kept the Norsemen off the board. Rodney Goin took a pass from the corner from John Nicholson to tie the game with 5:59 left in the period, then Tim Jerome converted a rebound after North goalie Matt Dennis made a great save and South led, 2-1 after one period.

Marshall streaked down the ice on a breakaway and scored midway through the second period to tie the game. Andrew Roy and Jerome followed with a pair of quick goals, and South again had the lead, 4-2. In the third, Roy scored his second goal on a power play to make it 5-2. but defenseman Bob Poulos kept North close when he scored. South's Roy added his third of the night with under two minutes left in the game.

Sailor won't forget days down under . . .

'Our boat was a little longer than most of the boats and about 4,000 pounds heavier. But the keel was a little smaller and we kept slipping sideways during races," Argo explained.

The crew made some changes before the second round-robin, like making the keel longer and adding some weight. Still, Heart of America only won three races in the second round.

"We made more changes; we put more lead in the keel and took 140 pounds out of the mast. That really helped, I think we were round-robin," he added. It wasn't enough and Heart of America was eliminated from the challenger series. Part of the problem, Argo said, was the fact that the club's budget was around $7 million, compared to the approximately $29 million being spent by challenger finalist Dennis Conner and "Stars & Stripes." Conner built three or four boats and ex-perimented with all of them. Argo pegs Conner and his syndicate as the eventual winner of the America's Cup.

"He just has so many resources. America II gave him their sails,

Century 21-East falls, 5-2

Century 21-East played aggressively in the first period of its game with Cottrell on Dec. 18, but siopped skating and fell behind quickly, winding up on the short end of a 5-2 final score.

The Century 21-East over 30 team never regained the momentum it had in that first period, when it got goals from Kevin Roseborough and Mark Goettling.

During the four-week holiday break, the Century 21-East entry in the over 30 league came up with a new team name: the Sabres.

The Sabres came out flying in their Jan. 9 game against Computer Horizons, scoring a season-high seven goals enroute to a 7-0 shutout. Notching goals for the Century 21-East Sabres were Tony DiFalco (two), Mark Goettling, Chris Walsh, Sam Clogg, Kevin Roseborough and Tony Morici.

we gave him our radio equipment. And I think that in the Cup, the Australians are going to be a little off the pace because I think that this protest they're going through is going to throw them off the track. It's just too much of an in-terruption," Argo reasoned. (The protest is between defender finalist Australia IV and Kookaburra

The heated competition going on in both the challenger and the defender camps isn't surprising, Argo said. "It was pretty intense down there and it built up by the month. It was like a battle zone sometimes. You had 15 different camps, all of them fenced off and

"Except for us. We were open to the public and the press. Buddy Melges is like that. He feels that whatever is good for the sport is good for us. He told us that if everybody was going to copy our keel design, fine, then they'd only be as good as we were.'

Argo will be a spectator for the America's Cup, but he'll be watching while embarking on the winter racing circuit. He left for Fort Lauderdale on Tuesday to crew on Eugene Mondry's "Leading Edge" in the Miami to Key West race.

Scores: 8 to 10 points — You are a Real Sport! You sit in the front row at every high school contest. You don't leave Red Wings' games with the score tied and less than two minutes left in the third period. And you understand most of the things written in this column.

4 to 7 points - Okay, so you missed a few. You don't qualify for the Be a Real Sport titie, but at least you know what to do at the seventh inning stretch and you are well aware that Howard Cosell is no longer doing Monday Night Football, but is now playing shortstop for the Cleveland Indians.

0 to 3 points - You call that a score? Totals like that can get you CHUMP honors (Could Hardly Understand Most questions Posed) if you aren't careful. You can barely lace your own Nikes and you think that Bob Uecker is a card game. Thirty lashes with a rolled-up Sports Illustrated for you.
