The flamingo kids strike again

The picture we ran last week of a plastic flamingo on the roof of a house under construction has a story behind it.

Seems there's a group of five couples on Moran who get together several times a year. They read a story in Time magazine six years ago about the pink flamingo coming back into vogue in a Chicago suburb.

The group picked up on it and began playing practical jokes on each other. One year before Christmas, one of the merry group put eight flamingoes dressed as reindeer on another's lawn. The sleigh was a grass catcher filled with presents — an empty six-pack, etc.

Dara Knill, who called to explain the flamingo on the roof, said one year she received a flamingo toilet plunger as a gift. And, she said, that's her flamingo on the roof of Kathy and Dave Letscher's new house on Merriweather.

The Letschers, Moran Road residents who are building on Merriweather, became the recipients of the big bird in retaliation for cancelling out on a get-together with the group. The flamingo was nailed to the roof and the Letschers reported they received so many comments, they decided to leave it up.

Neighbors in the vicinity need not fear that the bird will become a permanent fixture, like a weather vane: The cupola on which it is nailed is not shingled yet, so it will have to be removed from its lofty perch sooner or later. And who knows where that bird will turn up next? We would suggest that the Moran Road irregulars check under their beds at night.

Message from Geneva

Bill Elston, editorial writer for the Grosse Pointe News, recently received a holiday greeting from an old Washington friend, Max Kampelman, now chief U.S. negotiator at the arms control talks in Geneva and newly appointed counsel to the state department, which might have contained a significant message.

What was unusual about the greeting is that it included a quote from John Adams, second president of the United States, made in 1809:

"If I had refused to institute a negotiation or had not persevered in it, I should have been degraded in my own estimation as a man of honor."

An appropriate new theme for the Reagan administration's arms control negotiations at Geneva?

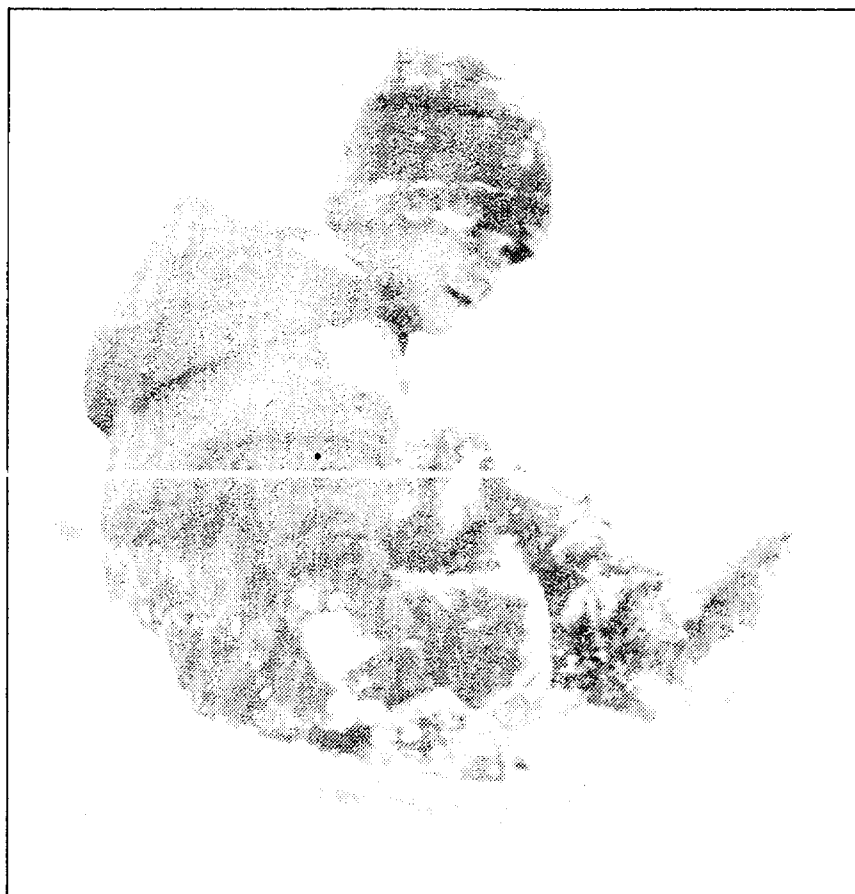

Island booster

Former Grosse Pointer Phil Porter has an article published in the February issue of House Beautiful magazine. Now the curator of collections at Fort Mackinac, Porter writes about one of his favorite subjects, Mackinac Island. It's on page 39.

He and his wife Valerie and their four children live on the island in the summer and in Cheboygan in the winter. The 1973 North High graduate is the son of William and Lornie Porter of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Porter had previously written a booklet, the eighth in a series for the Mackinac Island State Park Commission, titled "View from the Veranda: The History and Architecture of the Summer Cottages of Mackinac Island."

Slip-slidin' away

It's an ill wind (or snow storm) that blows nobody good, and a good number of Grosse Pointers took part in smooth sledding on the hill next to the Farms DPW on Moross at Grosse Pointe Boulevard Sunday morning. Adult Forum Christ Church looks at teen violence

By Elsa Frohman

Group gathers ideas, shares thoughts

Christ Church has been holding Adult Forum programs between its two Sunday morning services for one-and-a-half years, but it wasn't until two weeks ago that the program began to attract attention, and the Rev. Margaret Sammons, staff advisor for the adult study classes, found herself making arrangements for three television news crews to sit in on the program.

"It wasn't exactly our average Sunday morning experience," Sammons said.

Adult Forum covers a variety of subjects, spanning all phases of adult Christian study, Sammons explained. Previous topics have ranged from Bible study, to coping with teenagers, to coping with aging.

"We've always wanted to do social and political issues," Sammons said. "And there was this matter of children being killed in Detroit. We all felt it. Then when Susan Watson (Detroit Free Press columnist) wrote asking what people in the community suggest, we wanted to do something about it."

Sammons describes the forum as a study group for "gathering ideas and sharing our own thoughts." She started looking for thought-provoking speakers on the subject of gun control and teen violence. The first speaker was Detroit Councilman John Peoples, one of the sponsors of Detroit's recently enacted gun control ordinance.

"It was wonderful to have him," Sammons said. "He is also a Baptist minister and he could talk about both the civic response and the Christian viewpoint."

Coincidentally, Detroit's gun control ordinance went into effect the night before Peoples was to speak at Christ Church. The coincidence drew major media attention to the program.

Gun control and violence are anything but distant issues for Grosse Pointers, Sammons said.

"It is our problem," she said.

"Grosse Pointe can't stand as an island. It does affect us. We are all aware of the risks of going into Detroit, but beyond that, one of the central points of the Christian faith is that everyone in the world is related. If they are hurting, in some way, then I am too."

Interest in the program has been high and attendance has jumped to the capacity of the Christ Church undercroft where the program is held.

"Mr. Peoples told us of the hopelessness that black kids feel right now," Sammons said. "In many ways, it's a lot like the '60s, and then, the kids' sense of self-worth was enhanced by the presence of such groups as the Southern Leadership Conference. Those groups don't exist at this point."

The second speaker in the series was Timothy Kenny, deputy chief of the Wayne County Prosecutor's Repeat Offender Bureau. Kenny spoke about the effects of criminal violence on the victims.

"This is to help people think about the issues," Sammons said.

Kenny was the prosecutor for the second trial of Ronald Bailey, for the murder of Kenny Meyers. He spoke about the stages that crime victims and their families go through, and about the problems they face after the court process is over.

"Victims go through several phases of response," Kenny said. "They are similar to the phases a person goes through when told he has a terminal illness."

The first stage is shock, Kenny said.

"There is shock that this could happen to them and their families — that this could interrupt their lives," he said.

The next phase is a combination of anger and fear.

"They are outraged that they have been violated," he said. "They are innocent victims. It seems random."

They also fear that the attack could happen again.

However, the worst phase can be the criminal trial, if the person who committed the violence is caught, Kenny said.

"This is a phase of confusion," he said. "They enter into the legal system. Demands are made on their time, and they don't know why. And it can be just as confusing for an attorney, if he is the victim."

Kenny told of counseling the father of a rape victim, who was a prominent civil attorney. Because he was not familiar with criminal proceedings, the process was almost as bewildering for him as for a lay person.

"The process makes demands on the victim," Kenny said. "He is asked to answer questions he doesn't understand. It's like a Magical Mystery Tour, that for many, ends up as a nightmare."

But the victim may suffer even more when the trial is over, Kenny said. If the case is well-publicized, the victim receives a lot of support and attention from the prosecutor's office, from the press and from the public. After the trial concludes, that stops abruptly.

"The police and prosecutors are designed to determine guilt. We're not trained to do a lot of follow-up with victims," Kenny said. "It can become addictive. All that attention is going to stop abruptly. It's like going from 100 mph to a dead stop. That takes its toll."

Kenny said his office attempts to be sensitive to the victim's needs, but there is a limit.

"We're not equipped to be a social welfare agency," he said.

Kenny suggested that people who know someone who has been the victim of violent crime should be supportive.

"You hear the complaint that one person can't do anything," he said. "In our office, when we talk about people with authority, we talk about the judges and the police. But there is a difference between authority and power. All of us have influence and power."

Kenny had a list of four things that anyone can do to improve the violent crime situation.

— Give support to those who have been victimized.

— Volunteer in the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office's Victim-Witness volunteer program.

— Don't duck out of jury duty.

— There is nothing more discouraging than intelligent, articulate peo-

Numerous services available for older citizens in area

By Margie Reins Smith

Ann Kraemer, M.S.W., executive director of Services for Older Citizens, Inc. (SOC), left her desk briefly on a Wednesday morning and walked through five spacious classrooms at the organization's Ferry Elementary School headquarters. "We have up to 30 people here today," she said. "Wednesday is humanities and sewing day."

George Salbert was packing hot lunches in one classroom — as he does every day of the week. More than 50 home-bound senior citizens would receive a nutritious hot lunch that day: stuffed green peppers, rice, peas and carrots, sliced pears, bread, milk and juice.

On the other side of the hall, third graders lined up for recess in their high boots, warm woolly mittens and colorful ski caps.

The children and the seniors waved to each other and exchanged greetings. Salbert, a volunteer for the last nine years in the Meals at Home program, said, "I love these kids. I love these seniors, too."

Other senior citizens were packing meals, playing pool, sewing or attending a film and discussion series put on by Helen Leonard, outreach librarian for the Grosse Pointe Public Library.

"SOC serves senior citizens in the five Grosse Pointes and Har-er Woods," Kraemer said. "According to a 1980 census, Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods have more persons 60 and older than children."

"Economics is not the major problem (for senior citizens) in the Pointes," she said. "According to a survey done a few years ago, the main problem in this area for seniors is finding help when they need it."

That's precisely what SOC does. In addition to the Meals at Home program, there are five more services under the SOC umbrella: Senior Citizens Information (SCI), Food and Friendship, Minor Home Repairs, Escort Service, and Rebate and Tax Service. All are based in Ferry Elementary School.

Senior Citizen Information is a referral service, linking seniors to the help they need — everything from home health care, tax preparation assistance, legal and financial advice, or transportation and housing alternatives. Last year, Kraemer said, the office talked to 3,000 callers.

Long tables in the office are covered with brochures and looseleaf notebooks filled with such diverse information as emergency response systems, wheelchair lifts, how to choose a nursing home, lists of support groups and transportation services, and a SOC-compiled directory called "Discounts for Seniors."

"If we can't link the senior citizen to the proper service, we 'patch,'" said Kraemer. "We try creative solutions to problems. One lady called because she was having trouble finding transportation to the grocery store. She found someone to help out with trips to the doctor and the bank, but she couldn't find help for shopping. We were unable to find transportation for her shopping trips, but we were able to get her into the Food and Friendship program, for which there is transportation."

Another woman was frustrated because she was caring for her husband, who had lost his mental capacities and was beginning to lose his physical capacities. She was finding it stressful and increasingly difficult to care for him. "We found an adult day care facility for him," said Kraemer, "and she is coming here for some of our social activities."

The Food and Friendship program consists of a nutritious lunch, served five days a week at Ferry School. The goal of the program, according to Kraemer, is to get seniors out of their homes for socializing, a hot meal, and perhaps an educational program, a craft activity, a game or an exercise session at the school. Funding is partly underwritten by the Detroit Area Agency on Aging. Participants donate if they are able to afford it.

The Minor Home Repairs program is funded by Community Development Block Grant funds in the SOC area and provides people to rake leaves, shovel snow, cut grass, do minor electrical and plumbing repairs and maintenance chores for middle and low income residents over the age of 60.

The Escort Service provides transportation for seniors who are unable to drive. It's staffed by volunteers.

The Rebate and Tax Service provides trained volunteers to help low and moderate income seniors with preparation of income tax returns, home heating and property tax rebates.

Meals at Home has 119 volunteers and five delivery routes. This program is for senior citizens who live alone or are unable to prepare their own meals because of illness or disability. Volunteers deliver a hot, nutritious meal at noon, Monday through Friday. Meals at Home is funded through the Detroit Area Agency on Aging and is administered by the Detroit Department of Health.

In addition to the meals that are provided free, the program includes a paid meal plan for seniors who are unable to prepare their own meals. Mary Lou Anderson is in charge of Meals at Home, and said she currently has 39 federally funded clients and 12 to 15 paying customers.

"This is food for more than the body," she said. "Most of these people love the daily visits. Our volunteers are trained to look around for other ways to help these people. One lady didn't answer and we found she fell and broke her hip. We keep each person's doctor's name and the name of a relative or neighbor in our files."

SOC is a double-faceted organization because it provides help for senior citizens looking for specific services such as meals, recreation and educational programs. It also

Nancy Williams to be honored

The 14th Congressional District Democratic Party will honor Nancy Quirk Williams Sunday, Feb. 22, at the fifth annual F.D.R. Memorial Dinner.

Nancy Quirk Williams

Williams, who was Michigan's first lady from 1949-1960, is known for her dedication to serving the community. She has been active over the years in numerous organizations ranging from being a cub scout leader to general chairperson of the Detroit Grand Opera.

The F.D.R. Memorial dinner will begin at 5 p.m. at the Polish Century Club in Detroit. Dinner is $28 per person. The program includes a roast of former Supreme Court Justice G. Mennen Williams. For tickets, call 979-0064.

Smokers sought for study

Local cigarette smokers, aged 35 to 59, are needed to undergo a free lung function (breathing) test at Cottage Hospital as part of a nationwide study. Two-thirds of those determined eligible to participate in the federally funded study will become involved in a program including a free smoking-cessation class.

Free public screenings are held at Cottage, 159 Kercheval Avenue, between Moross and Cadieux roads, every Monday and Wednesday through March 15.

If you would like to participate, call 881-1800 to make an appointment. The breathing test takes about 15 minutes, and simply involves blowing into a machine called a spirometer.

The study is aimed at preventing chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, which includes emphysema and chronic bronchitis. Henry

After-school classes scheduled

A total of 57 class sections of youth enrichment offerings has been included in the winter schedule of classes by the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

Scheduled for the most part after school, these activities, designed to enhance and supplement the basic curriculum, are open to all students in grades K-8.

Some preschool classes are included.

Classes are "Aggressive Study Skills for Middle School Students," "Amazing Spiders," "Animal Family Introduction for Tiny Tots," "Animals-Nobody Loves," "Astronomy Introduction," "Ballet," "Balloon Animals," "Crawl and Croak," "Creative Dynamics,"

Ford Hospital, along with its suburban centers and its affiliate Cottage Hospital, and other institutions including Johns Hopkins Medical Center, Mayo Clinic, and the University of Pittsburgh, were chosen as sites for the National Institutes of Health study.

Participants who continue with the study may also receive a medication that could reduce lung damage. The medication is a bronchodilator in the form of an inhaler. The study will follow participants for five years, with periodic monitoring.

Dr. William Conway of Henry Ford Hospital's Division of Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine is the principal investigator of the Henry Ford Hospital and Cottage Hospital portion of the study.

To make an appointment to be tested, call 881-1800, Monday through Friday, between 9 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Schools seek to upgrade energy conservation

By Nancy Parmenter

The school board took the first step Jan. 12 toward a vastly scaled-down plan for reducing energy costs at the system's elementary and middle schools. The vote allows the district to seek approval from the state to float a bond issue to pay for the improvements.

The vote does not require the board to actually issue the bonds. It gives the board a nine-month window in which to plan a definite list of improvements, make a final decision, and — with any luck — take advantage of any favorable downturn in interest rates.

The board will ask the state to approve a bond issue of up to $2 million. However, the anticipated laundry list of improvements is expected to cost approximately $1.5 million.

The list includes first-priority items from a study compiled by Tomblinson Harburn Assoc., an architectural and planning firm. Weatherstripping, door replacement, boiler upgrading, roof repairs and lighting replacement are among the items on the list.

What is not on the list any longer is window replacement. Tomblinson Harburn recommended the replacement of every window in the district, with the exception of Poupard School, which had its windows replaced in 1980.

Three charged with Park break-ins

Police in Grosse Pointe Park say they cleared five break-ins and one attempted break-in from the unsolved list with the arrest last week of three people. All of the break-ins took place in December and January on Wayburn and Maryland.

A Detroit man, 22, and a Park man, 17, were expected to be arraigned Jan. 21 on one count each of breaking and entering. A Detroit juvenile, 15, brother of the Detroit man, is being held in the Wayne County Youth Home and was also expected to be arraigned Wednesday.

Police had been gathering information on the three and were able to put it all together two weeks ago when a Wayburn resident interrupted the juvenile in the act of

Woods police recover stolen items

A Mack Avenue electronics store was broken into on Tuesday, Jan. 13, according to Grosse Pointe Woods police reports. Witnesses provided police with information that aided the pursuit of three suspects and the eventual recovery of the stolen items.

Burglars apparently entered the business shortly after 7 a.m. Tuesday by throwing a cement block through a large window and a glass door.

Two witnesses saw a black jeep-type vehicle drive away shortly thereafter. Harper Woods police

The board balked at including the windows in the bond issue because of the enormous expense (up to $779,460 at Brownell Middle School) and the extremely long payback period. It was anticipated that it would take as long as 25 years before the windows would pay for themselves in energy savings.

The items included in the possible bond issue would pay for themselves in 7.8 years, according to David King, director of support services.

Several board members raised questions about omitting the windows from the project.

Trustee Jon Gandelot asked if the district could lose its opportunity for financing by putting off the window project. "We'll have to replace them sooner or later — probably sooner rather than later," he said.

Business Manager Christian Fenton said he does not anticipate that energy funding will dry up.

Board secretary Carl Anderson expressed doubts about the possibility of funding the window replacement out of the district general fund, one building at a time.

"That's not realistic," he said. "I would be concerned about dipping into the general fund every year."

The district budgeted $1.7 million for energy costs during the 1986-87 school year, an amount that includes the high schools and the libraries. Some of the schools use twice as many BTUs as the desired goal, according to a study compiled by King last year.

Compared to a goal of 80,000 BTUs per square foot (an amount that fluctuates with the weather, King cautioned), Ferry School is the lowest user at 107,565 and Kerby School gulps energy at the rate of 239,503. At the middle schools, Pierce is right on target, using 106,741 compared to a goal of 100,000. Middle schools, especially those with pools, use more energy than elementary schools, King said. Parcels and Brownell are a bit higher, at 124,292 and 128,828.

King said two weeks ago that if the first priority items and the window projects were done, most of the schools would be able to come close to the goal.

The windows are a problem because of the age of the schools. Owing to the historical character of many of the schools, the replacement windows would have to be custom-made. "A large proportion of the window cost is really historic preservation," Gandelot said.

"The windows... are very sensitive to architectural style," Donald Lee of Tomblinson Harburn told the board Jan. 5. "We have assumed that we will do whatever we have to do to maintain style. Yes, it's possible to install windows with a payback of seven or eight years, (but) these are custom windows."

King said two weeks ago that the windows will have to be replaced eventually. "Some leak, some don't work mechanically," he said. "We would have to deal with them even if we weren't looking at energy management."

The windows at Poupard School were replaced in 1980 at a cost of $105,000, King said. The project was necessary because the school could not maintain an even temperature in the classrooms.

"On Monday mornings, some of those rooms were only 50 degrees," King said. Energy costs at Poupard have increased 40 percent less than costs at other schools in the years since 1980.

Poupard's window space was reduced by two-thirds by replacing the upper part of each window with a panel. The effect, as King described it, is as if the shades are partly drawn.

Windows at the district's newer schools could be treated in the same way, but those at the old schools would probably retain their current character.

A bond issue

Voters will not be asked to approve a bond issue to pay for school energy improvements. Under a seven-year-old state law, local school districts have the authority to borrow money for energy improvements or asbestos removal without asking the voters to approve it.

"Hundreds of school systems have done it around the state, especially for energy management," said David King, director of support services.

The idea of floating a bond issue without asking the voters originally bothered board Vice President Fred Adams, especially when the board was considering including window improvements and spending twice as much money.

"We should fully explain it to the taxpayers," Adams said last week. "It's a lot of money and it's rather unusual."

Board President Vincent LoCicero said paying back the bond will not be an ongoing burden on the community. "The actual cost to the community is only a year and then the paybacks take over," he said. "If we do a good enough job of explaining it, the taxpayers will see it as a cost savings."

The cost to the district general fund would be $91,000 in the first year. After that, savings from the energy improvements would pay for the bond.

The district is expected to ask the voters to approve a multi-million bond issue to finance library expansion at some point this year. "It's important that the community understand the difference between the two projects," LoCicero said.

Voters will be asked to approve the library project because the community will have to pay for the bonds through a tax increase. In the case of the energy bond, the savings in energy is expected to pay for the bond.

robbing a house. That arrest led to further information and "when the dust settled, we had three good arrests," said Park Lt. William Furtaw.

The three are believed to be responsible for five break-ins on Wayburn and one on Maryland, the last one carried out by the juvenile a week after he was arrested the first time.

On Jan. 5, the youth was caught in a Wayburn house when the resident of the adjoining flat heard a noise. He went down into the common basement to investigate and came up the stairs in the next flat, where he found the youth in the living room. The resident recognized the teenager as an acquaintance of the family and held him until Park police arrived.

But on Jan. 12, the same juvenile apparently broke a pane in the back door of another house on Wayburn, went in, and ransacked the flat. He allegedly took a shotgun, jewelry, scuba gear and a six-pack of beer.

Following his second arrest, the juvenile was sent to the youth home, where he will undergo testing at police request.

War Memorial to sponsor art contest

The true meaning of Memorial Day is the theme of an art contest the War Memorial is sponsoring for local youngsters in grades 6-8.

The first prize winner will receive $50 cash and publication of his or her work on the center's May/June Calendar cover. Other prizes will include a $20 and a $15 War Memorial gift certificate, for second and third prizes, respectively, and assorted art supplies for honorable mention. Everyone who enters will receive a certificate of participation.

The purpose of the contest is to create an understanding, not only in the traditional meaning of Memorial Day, but to develop an awareness among youth that the War Memorial is a living memorial to Grosse Pointers who served in World War II, Korea and Vietnam.

The contest is open to any Grosse Pointe student or resident in grade 6, 7 or 8. Entry forms and contest rules are available at the War Memorial's front desk, Monday - Saturday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

The deadline for entries is 9 p.m., Monday, Feb. 23. The contest will be judged by War Memorial art instructors, board members, community leaders and staff, and winners will be announced on Wednesday, March 18.

All entries will be on display at the War Memorial during the week of May 25, as part of the recognition of Memorial Day.

Correction

Information in an article concerning an economic forecast for 1987 in the Grosse Pointe News two weeks ago was incorrect.

The article said that IBM had announced layoffs of 10,000 employees. Information should have said that the corporation sought and secured early retirements for 10,000 employees.

According to Elise Schepeler, information representative for IBM Southfield, IBM has not had layoffs in more than 50 years.

The company offered early retirement to employees 50 years of age or more with an incentive of five years added to the employee's age and five years added to the length of service, to increase retirement benefits. Schepeler said there was no minimum length of service required for an employee to be eligible.

She said that the company offered the early retirements to improve the company's competitive strength by reducing costs and balancing resources.

While there is no hiring freeze at IBM, Schepeler said IBM has limited its hiring and is in the process of relocating some employees.

Shores chief retires after 32 years

By Peter A. Salinas

After 17 years as Grosse Pointe Shores director of public safety, Joseph Vitale is hanging up his holster. Only three other men have held the same job over the last 75 years.

Vitale's police career in the village spans three decades. The St. Clair Shores resident first started in Grosse Pointe Shores as a rookie in August 1954.

At 58, he is retiring by choice. "I liked it from the very first day," he recalled. "I knew I had found a home and I would retire from here. I started patrolling and I realized what a beautiful, wonderful community this is."

Some back problems have been bothering the chief lately, but he said that's not why he is retiring.

"I guess I have to be realistic," he said. "No one lives forever, and I want to enjoy the rest of my years. I love to travel. My favorite vacation is to the New England states."

"The job is beautiful, but I want to get out. I've had to be pretty conscientious over the years, and it is best to get out from the responsibilities and relax."

Thirty-two years of law enforcement would be hard on anyone, but add to that the demands of a large family and the responsibilities show in the lines on the tough Italian face. He and his wife Mary Jane have five children.

The native eastside Detroiters was a graduate of Eastern High School. After graduation Vitale worked with the Army Corps of Engineers and later spent a year in Korea during the height of hostilities. He earned the rank of platoon sergeant.

Before police training, Vitale worked as an apprentice toolmaker with Chrysler.

"I decided to become a police officer because I liked working with people," he said. "Basically, people are pretty decent."

He said he earned about $85 a week as a rookie, and noted that there were no police unions then. "It wasn't much back then," he said. Shortly after he took the job in Grosse Pointe Shores, he married his high school sweetheart and they bought the home they still live in in St. Clair Shores.

In their family of three boys and two girls, the youngest is 17 and a senior at Lakeview High School.

Vitale believes in respecting the privacy of citizens. He wouldn't discuss the one murder case the Shores had during his years with the department.

"Police officers have an obligation to respect the privacy of a case they are working on," he said. "I am strong in my beliefs on individual privacy."

He said he never had to fire his weapon during his years on the force, and only had to draw it once.

His proudest moment came recently. While he was in his office, he heard his son's name being requested by the Harper Woods Police Department. His son recently became a police officer.

"I thought, my God, I'm getting old," he said with a laugh. "I have a son who's a police officer."

The village of Grosse Pointe Shores was the first community in the nation to have a combined fire and police department.

Though the Grosse Pointes now have only one community that still has separate police and fire departments, Vitale said that public safety departments are not for all communities.

"It is well known that public safety departments work," he said, "but they should be tailored to the needs of that individual city. In many cases, especially in communities with small work loads, communities cannot afford to maintain the salaries necessary to keep two separate departments."

Chris Gustin, associate professor of Swain School of Design, New Bedford, Mass., will give a two-day workshop at Pewabic Pottery, Jan. 30 and 31, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The artist will work on a series of functional forms, demonstrating his throwing techniques and his personal approach to clay. During the execution of these pieces he will open a discussion on the thought and working process of the potter.

Cost for the two-day workshop is $35 for Pewabic Society members and students, $50 for the general public. Lunch is potluck. For further information, call 822-0954.

He said that when a community considers combining its police and fire departments, a detailed study should be performed. He added that he feels that administratively, the director can wear both a police and fire hat.

"When you have a small work load, it is not hard to be well-trained in both fields," he said. "Administratively you must keep your thoughts open to the needs of both areas and make sure those needs are addressed."

Vitale added that there is always at least one and more often two certified emergency medical technicians on duty at all times in the Shores. All the patrolmen in the department and several of the command officers are trained as EMTs.

What he'll miss most about leaving the department is the camaraderie.

"I'll miss the men and women I work with a lot," he said. He said he is indebted to the residents and the village officials he has worked with over the years.

"I can't say enough about how well I have been treated and the respect that these people have given this department," he said. "It has always made you want to go out and work even harder."

"If I had been able to write my own script, I wouldn't have changed much," he said. He reflected and added, "Well, maybe I would have made myself chief a little sooner. You have to have a sense of humor."

Vitale said he will fill his free time with travel and gardening. He said he has never been able to join the garden clubs in the area, which is something he will likely do. He said that during the summer he has a yard full of roses, and that while he likes all flowers — those are his favorite.

"I am going to relax when I feel like relaxing," he said. "I'll turn off my police band radio when I check out on my last day of service."

He said his family is important to him, including his mother, who is 91.

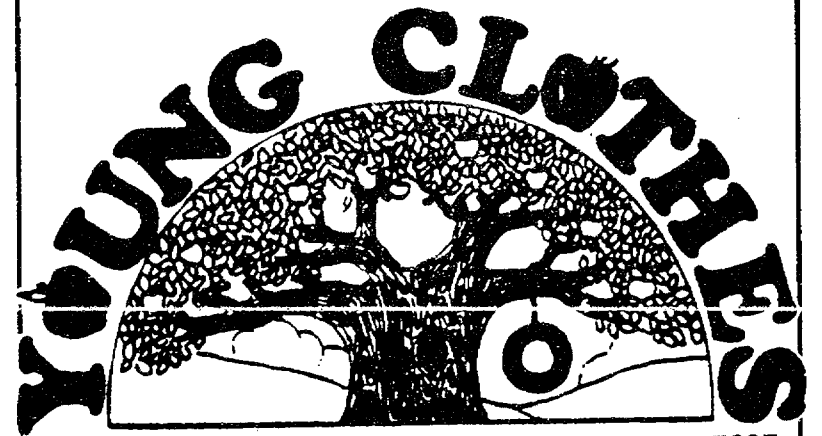

"My wife and my children are my whole life," he said. "They have never caused any problems. I am very proud of all my children, and I plan to spend a lot of time with them."

Wanted

These composite sketches were put together by Grosse Pointe Farms police. The two suspects are wanted in connection with an armed robbery at A.L. Price on Mack Avenue Jan. 14.

Gunmen take $2,500 from Mack business

Two gunmen robbed the A.L. Price store on Mack in the Farms at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 14, making off with $2,500 in small bills, Farms police said.

The two men walked around the store for a short while before asking for the store manager by his first name. A clerk directed the men to the rear of the store.

One of them asked for an employment application. The manager told the man to return in the morning. Both men then drew revolvers and announced a hold-up.

"Do as we say, or we will shoot you right here," one of the gunmen told the manager and a nearby clerk, according to the police report.

The men were both described as being black and in their late 20s.

One man was 5-feet, 10-inches, 150 to 170 pounds, had a thin face, beard and mustache, was wearing a Detroit Tiger baseball cap, a dark blue Detroit Tiger nylon jacket, blue jeans and white Reebok tennis shoes. He was carrying a snub-nose blue-steel revolver in his right hand.

The other assailant was described as 5-feet, 8-inches, 150 to 170 pounds, having a round face, clean shaven but with a dark shadow on his face, wearing a gray driving cap, gray jacket, and gray trousers. He held a nickel-plated two inch barrel revolver in his right hand.

Having placed their weapons in their coat pockets, the gunmen ordered the manager and clerk to the store's rear office. The manager was ordered to open the safe. The gunmen stuffed the money into a white canvas bag, ordered the men to lie on the floor and left the store through the rear alley exit. The suspects drove away in a 1985 or 1986 Mercury Cougar, according to reports.

According to police, other local businesses were contacted and some leads have developed.

Anyone with information on the robbery can call the Farms police department at 885-2100.

Brazen thief steals purse as police abound

Farms police were a little redfaced and more than a little angry last week when a purse snatcher invaded their turf.

Two police cars were outside of the A.L. Price store on Mack with their lights flashing. Detectives were in the store and marked police cars were cruising the area. All were responding to an armed robbery which occurred Jan. 14 at the store.

At about 7 p.m. a man knocked down a 64-year-old Harper Woods woman who was walking behind the store, taking her purse.

A witness brought the woman into the store to report the theft. The woman apparently was not injured. She had $3 in the purse.

The man was described as 20 years old, 5-feet, 10-inches, with light brown short hair and wearing a blue waist length jacket. He was spotted leaving the scene in an older blue Mustang.

Anyone with information on the purse snatching is asked to call Farms police at 885-2100.

Opinions & Letters

Life in the fishbowl

A new era of media-bashing appears to be under way in the United States with the press being attacked by both the right and the left — by Republicans as well as Democrats — for unfairness and overcoverage of such stories as the Iranian arms controversy and the FBI probe of Detroit's Recorder's Court.

The evidence of media-bashing comes from a new public opinion poll showing a decline in the news media's credibility because of the coverage of the Iranian matter, and the response of many judges and their friends to news stories about the investigation of the local courts.

Not in a democracy the people have a right to know what is happening to their government, including the courts. We elect public officials to serve us, but we do not know how well or poorly they perform unless the news media have the opportunity to cover their activities and report what they find.

In the two cases cited, one in Washington and one in Detroit, it is taken for granted that investigations are being continued, but nobody has yet been specifically charged with a crime in either case. Such situations cause problems for the media and their readers as well as for those involved.

For example, newspapers and the other media are often reduced to quoting unidentified sources. That means people accused of wrongdoing do not have the opportunity to confront their accusers. In some cases, unidentified sources are more interested in conducting a vendetta against the people they accuse than in reaching the facts in the case.

In the Iranian-Nicaraguan arms affair, some journalists also have been accused of wrongdoing. Their coverage, Washington Post Executive Editor Ben Bradlee, never renowned for restraint, quipped that he "hadn't had so much fun since Watergate." He later acknowledged his mistake and urged his staff members to keep a low profile off the job and avoid TV appearances.

In a Gallup Poll taken for the Times Mirror Co., the respondents gave both TV and newspaper positive believability ratings but the ratings for both media had declined substantially since June 1985. TV dropped from 83 percent to 66 percent, while local newspapers dipped from 80 percent to 65 percent. At the same time, the poll showed that President Reagan's approval rating, which had dropped to 47 percent in mid-December, had risen to 52 percent in the current survey.

The sharpest criticism of the media, as might be expected, came from people who consider themselves as strong conservatives. Among such respondents 42 percent said news organizations had been unfair to the president, as compared with only 21 percent who came to that same conclusion in 1985. The supporters of the president no doubt were responding to Mr. Reagan's own comments in Time magazine in which he said, in part:

"I have to say that there is bitter bile in my throat these days. I've never seen the sharks circling like they now are with the blood in the water. What is driving me up the wall is that this wasn't a failure until the press got a tip from that rag in Beirut and began to 'play it up.'"

In indirect response to the president and the other media critics, David Lawrence Jr., publisher of the Detroit Free Press, has said, in defense of the press, that it "did not create the arms-to-Iran/dollars-to-contras deal (alas, we did not even break the story)." "And," he added, "it seems plain silly to assert that the main thing wrong with the situation is that knowledge of it fell into the wrong hands."

However, writing in the Bulletin of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Lawrence concluded the news media had been guilty of such things as publishing stories that "seem to overstep the bounds of good journalism in trying to be authoritative about a still-unfolding situation," by using labels and slick presentation devices that "appear to draw conclusions," and by failing to explain the reporting and editing process to readers. But then Lawrence concluded:

"We can argue that truth is elusive. We know we are fallible. We know that every single reader sees the world, and news stories, through very individual prisms. It won't do us much good to blame those who won't question our credibility. Knowing that, our pursuit of truth ought to be just as aggressive as we can make it, tempered only by civility, sober and thoughtful judgment, some common sense and much more of a willingness to explain ourselves to our readers."

He was referring, of course, to the coverage of the Iranian arms controversy, but his comments also serve as an informal rejoinder to those who criticize stories about the investigation of Detroit's courts as "indictment by headline," another example of racism in the media and doing "irreparable harm" to the legal system.

Judge R. Patrick Donahue of the 36th District Court made an excellent point about such matters: "Any public official, judicial or otherwise, has to assume that they live in a fishbowl. As far as this investigation is concerned, they can pop up anything, any place, from any direction. And that's how it should be."

Right on, Judge.

No subject for hilarity

To the Editor:

I am writing in regard to the F.V.L. (For Your Information) column which each week appears on the front page of the Grosse Pointe News. It is my understanding that several people contribute to this hybrid. One subject, however, seems to be the reporting of the same individual, as the reporting has handled in the same manner with each article. That subject is the reporting of the destruction of property. Your reporter or reporters, if that is the case, seems to have a very misguided sense of values. Destruction of property is not a subject for hilarity as these articles imply.

I am enclosing copies of two recent issues as an example. One appeared Dec. 11 and dealt with the "amputation" of the Elias Brothers Big Boy statue. (Quoted words are yours). There have been numerous previous incidents of similar reporting, all being handled as the funny item of the week.

Someone needs to take your reporter or reporters' aside and explain a basic fact. Malicious destruction of property is not funny. The above acts were most certainly malicious as opposed to accidental. I am sure the owners of the vandalized property do not find your articles amusing. I also wonder if the seniors who wreaked havoc at the Grosse Pointe South and Grosse Pointe North School libraries envisioned their deeds as a front page item in the F.V.L. column along with a pat on the head for their "funny prank" (my words).

Please, let us not send any more of these inappropriate messages to our community.

Long live the Farms Pier

To the Editor:
The Farms council is currently pondering the name change of the Pier in honor of the late Mayor Dingeman.

In view of this and the fact that a special committee has been appointed to examine the pros and cons of this proposal, I submit the following bits of nostalgia and opinion.

It was born and raised in the Farms and the Pier remains foremost among my memories of the grand times throughout the years I can vividly recollect the accord of freshly cropped plants which permeated the air each spring. This of course was for replacement of the dock boards which gave way to the elements of nature.

As a life guard, I remember rolling out the fibrous mat to cover the full length of the dock. This was meant to be a protection for the swimmers. Actually it was more abrasive than sandpaper. We had to lug the life guard chairs to their positions at the end of the dock and also anchor the raft in the shallow end of the harbor for the small fry to use — remember?

Swimming was at the end of the main dock, both in and out of the harbor. Also there was a beach area east of the boathouse — the raft was in front of the old dock boathouse.

How well I reflect on the giant thermometer on the side of the old boathouse. In the winter, it would often be near or perhaps below zero degrees, but it would not diminish our enthusiasm to hurriedly change into our skates and zip across the freshly surfaced harbor ice. The ice was kept in super shape by the dock man who would flood it two or more times daily.

They the Whip, Pom Pom Pul-laway or simply general skating — yes, these are deeply etched memories of the Pier — remember?

How many of you share memories of the large pot-bellied stove in the boathouse? In absence of the dock man, we would stoke it to the exact the stove would glow orange and later we would suffer the wrath of the dock man as we know him. There heaves we never burned the building down!

It was a humorous scene as the wooden bench seats would be drawn as close as possible to the old stove, and cold and wet wool slitting socks would be draped as close as possible without their total disintegration, but often the air was filled with the smell of scorched wool socks — what a stench — but I'll gamble a lot of you are smiling because you also lost a sock or two!

I could probably write a book on joyous events at the Pier, swimming parties, fishing off the dock, berthing our boat, the birth of the Farms Boat Club, also, I could go on naming many long-time residents, etc. — but I know many of these memories are shared with many of you — right?

The old boathouse is gone and of course, other structural changes incorporated. Good, bad or indifferent, by necessity or in the name of progress — it really makes little difference.

The point of this nostalgic verbiage is to oppose a name change to the Farms Pier now or ever. Let us keep what little the Farms has in the area of public domain free of any personal connotation. Long live the Farms Pier.

Richard G. Champlin
Temperance, Mich.

Moderating the pay hikes

As expected, President Reagan has sharply cut back the proposed salary increases for top federal officials, bringing them in a range of 2 percent to 16 percent contrasted with a presidential commission's recommendations for pay hikes of up to 80 percent.

Since these recommendations would give top federal officials their first salary increase in a decade beyond adjustment for the cost of living, the new limits appear to be more equitable and more likely to be accepted by Congress than the commission's proposals. Approximately 3,000 officials will benefit unless Congress rejects the president's plan within 30 days.

Congressional salaries would go up almost 15 percent, from $77,400 to $89,500 a year, as contrasted with the commission's recommendation of an annual salary of $90,000. Cabinet officers would get a 12 percent boost, from $33,800 to $37,500, while federal judges also would be raised to levels ranging from 2.6 percent for associate justices to 10 percent for federal district court judges.

If the president's recommendations are accepted, the total cost of the hikes would be cut almost two-thirds, from the $150 million proposed of the presidential commission to the Reagan figure of $53.5 million per year. That overall reduction ought to make the president's proposal more acceptable to a Congress still struggling with the nation's massive deficit as well as a general public skeptical of big pay hikes for public servants.

Yet it is true that the pay increases will have a wide effect throughout the government and in private enterprise as well. The president's policy will mean a 10 percent recommended pay raise for 3,000 officials with a new executive order giving additional thousands of lower-ranking executives new pay hikes to help keep them in line with their superior officers. And the journalists, lobbyists and others who work in Washington and closely monitor the pay of federal employees do not see any reason for putting pressure on their bosses for new salary increases to permit them to maintain the standard of living to which they have become accustomed.

In his criticism of the recommendations of both the president and the presidential commission, Ralph Nader, the consumer activist, made a good point. The commission did not hold any public hearings and so there was no opportunity for any input by people who felt the recommendations were excessive. We see no reason for any secret sessions for a commission acting on such an important matter. The commission ought to open its sessions for public reaction — or be abolished.

It is an entirely the viewpoint that it is only pay that attracts people to federal employment. There are many other benefits such as long vacations, many paid holidays and even congenial and challenging assignments that are not available in private or other public jobs. Those factors ought to be considered in making salary recommendations, along with the problem caused by pay that is lower than that in the top ranks of private employment.

rights leader would have been 38 last Thursday, while Lucas was a year older.

Whether Lucas will get a long-rumored federal appointment is apparently still under discussion. A White House source told the Detroit News that the federal post committed to offering Lucas a high level post, and Lucas told the Detroit newspaper he remains interested in an appointment to a "meaningful" job that would make him a "contributor."

Some local leaders were critical of the president, despite his tributes to Lucas and Lucas, on the grounds his admiral's actions on social programs had failed to match his rhetoric. But Lucas said the president had given him "a great birthday present" and sent Reagan a telegram saying he was "deeply grateful and humbled" by the recognition he received in the speech.

A good bet: Bill Lucas soon will be offered a high federal post consistent with his abilities and with his desire to be appointed to a meaningful job. That would be as deserved as the president's praise for the candidate who carried the GOP banner high in a losing cause in 1968.

An appropriate tribute

President Reagan paid an appropriate tribute to William Lucas, former Wayne County executive and unsuccessful Michigan GOP candidate for governor, in his speech marking the birthday of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. last week.

After lauding King's courage and convictions in his civil rights efforts, the president cited Lucas as "a friend of mine who exemplified the concern and can-do spirit we're talking about." Reagan explained that Lucas was raised by an aunt in Harlem after his parents died and helped his high school win a track championship by running most of the race after losing a shoe. He told how the former county executive went on to become a teacher, investigator for the Civil Rights Commission, an FBI agent, Wayne County sheriff, Wayne County executive and finally a candidate for governor.

"And although he didn't win and become Michigan's first black governor," the president continued, "Bill kept moving ahead doing his very best. And I can tell you of you, if America is a land of champions, it is because of people like Bill Lucas."

The president didn't mention it but Lucas shares his birthday with King. The slain civil

On growing old: Problems

By Marian Trainor

Although Eda LeShan, author of "Oh, To Be 50 Again" (Times Books), is capable of writing on aging based on her own experiences, she sought out hundreds of people who shared their thoughts. The result is a compassionate presentation of the problems of older people.

LeShan is a noted educator, family counselor and author of more than 20 books including "The Wonderful Crisis of Middle Age." Many readers know her as a columnist for "Women's Day" and as a moderator of the public television series, "Do Your Children Grow?"

We appreciate the fact that she does go beyond her own expertise to seek answers from those whom

As the author points out, older people living today have had to adapt to more changes in the industrial world and in technology, together with the social changes that came with these advances, than any previous generation.

"We are the people of trolley cars; of children being quiet at the dinner table."

She suggests that we deal with it by giving new experiences a chance. If we don't like it, ignore it. Don't fret; just be happy you have lived long enough to witness such new and wonderful things.

Pertinent and illuminating chapters on the importance of knowing oneself and choosing what your future will be is followed by comments on health and fitness.

"There are no young people or ations protected their parents. They kept secret what they thought would distress them. Now older people are confronted with all sorts of behavior that once was unacceptable.

The need for tolerance is not one-sided. The author also has something to say to the older generation. She warns against taking sides when children have marital problems and trying too hard to keep them from making mistakes.

A problem that is much in the fore today because of the increase in our life expectancy is the need to assume responsibility for elderly parents. The "sandwich generation" may have children in college or children dependent on them for other reasons and elderly parents to care for.

The guilt, the sadness, but the necessity of, placing a parent in a nursing home is discussed, and helpful observations on how best to deal with such feelings offered.

What makes this book different is that, while it is practical, it also deals with feelings and emotions — an important aspect of the entire aging process.

she knows can also contribute from practical experience.

She acknowledges this need to share her feelings with her peers in a quote from the play, "Home of the Brave," about two soldiers returning from war who are terrified about their future. One says to the other, "Coward, take my coward's hand."

"That's how I feel now," she says, "as we face the ultimate test of our courage and humanity."

She continues: "Old age is about courage. It is about making the choice as to whether or not to be defeated by aging or to live out one's remaining years with style." Basically the question becomes whether we choose "old and growing" over "growing old." It is not easy to accept change.

old people," a woman whose father was vitally active at 90, says. "There are just healthy people and sick people."

This fear of becoming ill and dependent is real to older people. LeShan stresses the miraculous self-healing powers people possess. She contends that self-healing is most powerful in those who want to live the most.

Relationships with grown children is another facet of the later years that must be worked out. LeShan found parents who admitted they have had more crises with their children as adults than all the time they were growing up. They often cited financial dependence.

What must be realized, she thinks, is that our children's life experiences were different than ours. For one thing, earlier gener-

I say

There is not one single giraffe in Michigan.

Well, shucks, Mabel, everybody knows that.

The kind of giraffe we're talking about here is even rarer than the familiar yellow-and-black reticulated giraffe. This is a giraffe whose neck got long from sticking it out. Especially for unpopular causes.

Let me back up a moment.

I just heard about giraffes myself. Ruth brought along a copy of "Parents Magazine" when she visited at the holidays and we ran across an ad for the Giraffe Project, a group that goes around honoring "ordinary people who stick their necks out for the common good."

This is a concept that appeals to me. Like most people, I favor the common good. Like most people, I think sticking one's neck out is a worthwhile thing to do. And like most people, I almost never do it. But I honor it.

I got even more interested in it when it turned out Renie knows the founders.

Ann Medlock and John Graham are New York yuppie-types who stuck out their necks in their own way, first by quitting their upscale jobs as journalist and diplomat to work full time finding giraffes and then by leaving New York for rural Whidbey Island, a floating jewel in Puget Sound.

"I got uncomfortable thinking things were out of kilter," said Medlock from her "electronic cottage" on the island. As a journalist, she said she got tired of newspapers always focusing on the crisis, the shocking, the illegal and criminal. She knew about some good stories that she wasn't getting to write.

Now she's writing some things she never expected to. "I'm spending a lot of my time writing movie proposals," she told me. Seems after all this time, television has gotten interested in stories about people who stick their necks out.

People like a teenager who saw a drug problem in her school and started a program to stop it.

Or the housewife who was ostracized by her community because she fought pollution in her town.

Those are examples from the magazine ad. Other examples jingle at you from several Detroit-area radio stations. College stations seem to like them. The

Stolen cars

Grosse Pointe Park police report several stolen cars last week.

On Jan. 9, a 1975 Chevrolet was taken from Wayburn. The same day, someone damaged the ignition of a 1979 Ford in an attempt to steal it from its parking space on Mack.

On Jan. 10, a 1982 Pontiac was taken from Mack. It was recovered later in Roseville.

A 1975 Oldsmobile was driven away from a Maryland address Jan. 11. It was recovered and the alleged thief arrested in Grosse Pointe Farms.

On Jan. 13, a 1986 Pontiac was taken from Kensington and recovered later in Detroit.

The next day, a 1983 Oldsmobile was taken from Maryland. It was also recovered in Detroit.

Park police also recovered a car stolen in Detroit, when officers in a patrol car spotted it and chased it until the driver abandoned it on Chalmers.

To dream the unpopular dream

Now people in Michigan can't be less courageous than other Americans.

I know a whistleblower in a city government job. I know people who embrace trees in front of chainsaw-wielding developers. I

But maybe I just didn't notice. Perception is like that. Now that I've heard of it, I'll probably hear more about it.

But here's the odd thing.

The ads ask readers or listeners to notify the Giraffe Project about people they know who have stuck their necks out. I like to write about people who are willing to take a stand, so I asked Ann Medlock to send me a list of local giraffes.

And that brings me around to where I started: There aren't any. Not any in the whole state.

Nancy Parmenter

know writers of letters-to-the-editor.

I know somebody who is making a career out of monitoring the separation of church and state as it applies to the military. His theory goes that the government is illegally supporting the church by paying chaplains.

You must know people like that too.

It isn't much of a pain to notify the project. Ann Medlock is a pleasant lady who answers her own phone. They've even got an 800 number (800-344-TALL).

Grosse Pointe doesn't have any polluted landfills or industries to blow the whistle on. But it's got plenty of thinking folks with opinions they just might be putting into action.

Giraffes. Let us hear about it.

Farms resident is winner

A Grosse Pointe Farms resident was a winner in the First District Christmas lighting decoration contest sponsored by state Sen. John Kelly.

The Donald Lindow residence on McKinley was selected as the third place winner in the contest.

First place went to William Kozenko and second place to Dennis Hieke, both of Detroit.

More than 100 entries were submitted this year for the second contest. Residents and community leaders from the first state senatorial district nominated the homes of neighbors and friends.

A donation of money toward food baskets will be presented to the Capuchin Monastery in the name of each prize winner. A certificate of recognition will be given to all nominated homeowners and nominators.

"I have found that neighbors who exhibit positive community spirit during the holiday season exhibit that same community enthusiasm throughout the year," Kelly said. "I was extremely pleased with the number of nominations and the response of the community members to this project."

Ah! Sweet chocolate

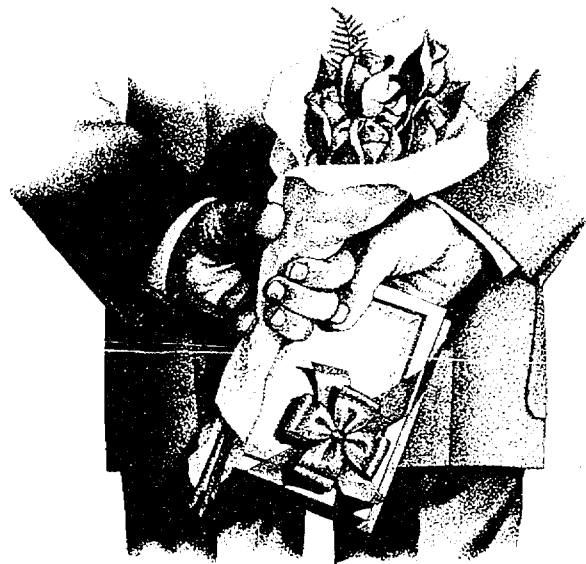

Feeling upset? Sad? Think gnawing off the beard of that leftover chocolate Santa would help? It just might.

The National Kidney Foundation of Michigan is sponsoring its third Chocolate Lovers Holiday at the Dearborn Fairlane Center, Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 24 and 25, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Last year the foundation raised $14,000 with its chocolate tastings, workshops and demon-

Americans consume some two billion pounds of chocolate each year. If you're interested, that is enough to slather every man, woman and child with about nine pounds of chocolate.

The foundation reports that chocolate is not as likely to cause cavities as once thought. Eating it helps lessen acid production, and there are chemical substances in cocoa that inhibit the bacterial action that promotes cavities and plaque.

strations by chocolatiers.

This year more than 20 leading chocolatiers and chocolate manufacturers will hand out samples of their products. The public can sample chocolate in the form of truffles, cookies, milk, mousse, ice cream, candies, baked goods and, of course, bars.

The foundation issued a number of "chocolate facts" which are intended to inform and educate the public about the sweet truth of chocolate.

Chocolate contains a chemical that can get rid of the blahs. It contains a stimulant called phenylethylamine which can produce a high, due to increased hormonal activity as when people are in love.

Americans like their sweets, but not as much as the Swiss. The average American eats 17 pounds of confections annually, and 54 percent of that is chocolate. The Swiss, however, consume more chocolate per person than any other country.

Casanova reportedly used chocolate as an inducement for romance.

Both the Mayans and Aztecs believed that chocolate had the ability to prolong life. Which probably prompted someone to once say, "When I die, I'm not going to be embalmed; I am going to be dipped."

For more information about the Chocolate Lovers Holiday, call 1-800-482-1455.

Eye care project helps elderly

Potentially blinding eye disease can be treated effectively if detected early, a fact that 3,722 elderly Michigan residents have discovered through the National Eye Care Project (NECP).

Volunteer Michigan ophthalmologists have uncovered:

- 529 cases of cataracts,
- 49 cases of glaucoma,
- 114 cases of macular degeneration,
- 22 cases of diabetic retinopathy, among elderly Michigan residents who have called the toll-free Helpline — 1-800-222-EYES (3937) — to receive assistance through the NECP.

The public service, which offers medical eye care to the disadvantaged elderly at no out-of-pocket cost, is sponsored by the Michigan Ophthalmological Society and the Foundation of the American Academy of Ophthalmology.

The NECP is available to U.S. citizens or legal residents, age 65 or over, who are not currently under the care of an ophthalmologist, and who have not seen one within the past three years.

Since the Michigan Helpline opened on May 5, more than 3,722 residents have called, resulting in more than 2,595 referrals of elderly patients to local volunteer eye physicians for medical examination and possible treatment for sight-threatening eye diseases.

More than 140,000 elderly Americans have called the Helpline num-

Theater buffets

Candlelight theater buffets will be served at 6:30 p.m. in the War Memorial's Crystal Ballroom prior to some performances of Grosse Pointe Theatre's production of "A Far Country."

Prepaid reservations should be made at least three days prior to the date of performance at the War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore. Buffet tickets cost $10.25 per person.

The dinners will be available on Wednesday through Saturday, Jan. 21-24, and on Wednesday through Friday, Jan. 28-30. For information, call 881-7511, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily, except Sunday.

Tickets for the play must be purchased through Grosse Pointe Theatre. Call 881-4004 for information.

Organ donation law to be explained

Saratoga Community Hospital will offer a free one-and-one-half hour seminar to explain the new "Required Request and Organ Donation" law. Organ donation is an emotional issue at a critical time.

For more information, call 245-1555. Pre-registration is required.

ber since the project began in January.

"We want elderly people to know that failing eyesight in their later years can be prevented or lessened through early diagnosis and treatment," said Frederick W. Bryant, M.D., president of the Michigan Ophthalmological Society. "We are now able to repair or even replace certain parts of the eye by using sophisticated surgical tools and important new drug therapies."

Periodic medical eye examinations are particularly important, said Dr. Bryant, to detect potentially blinding eye disease, such as glaucoma, which has no early warning signs. Nationwide, about 1,600 cases of glaucoma have been diagnosed and treated through the project.

After calling the toll-free Helpline, an elderly person will be mailed the name of a volunteer ophthalmologist who will treat the patient, regardless of his or her ability to pay, and who will accept (for this project) Medicare or insurance assignment as payment in full. If hospital care is needed, the ophthalmologist will work with a local hospital to make care available. Hospital charges, eyeglasses, and prescription drugs are not paid through the program.

More than 7,000 ophthalmologists are participating in the NECP. The Helpline is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in all states (except Hawaii, 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.)

Learn about jury duty

"Jury Duty: Know What to Expect," a single-session offering scheduled by the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe Public School System, will be taught by Judge Patricia Schneider.

"The jury is at the heart of the American justice system," she said. "A jury is made up of ordinary people who deliberate in secret and decide without explanation verdicts affecting the lives of strangers. For any of us who may be judged, or who has served on a jury or will in the future, this class is a chance to learn more about this important subject."

The class will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 5, at Barnes School, 20090 Morningside Drive. Fee is $3.

Call 343-2178 for information.

Montessori open house

St. Peter's Montessori will hold an open house Sunday, Jan. 25, from 9:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. The school is located at 19800 Anita, Harper Woods.

Students from five Grosse Pointe-area high schools are honored for their community service by members of the Lakeshore Optimist Club.

Optimists honor high school students

At its Youth Appreciation Awards Dinner Jan. 6, the Lakeshore Optimist Club of Grosse Pointe honored 25 students from five local high schools for their volunteer contributions to schools and community.

Program Chairman John J. Turcotte said the young people were selected for their unselfish volunteer work. "Our club began this program four years ago with the purpose of identifying and recognizing young people who we see as 'unsung heroes' and who very quietly volunteer countless hours of their time in the community," he said.

This year's recipients by school include: Grosse Pointe South — Jonas J. Rodger, Linda Gaglio, Heather Imel, Kathy Cius, Kevin English; University Liggett — Wendy Willett, Suzannah Maycock, Shelly Tibbitts, Elizabeth Renick; Grosse Pointe North — Sue Dawson, Elizabeth Nixon, Amy Walker; Bishop Gallagher — Joseph DiCresce, Kristin Gorny, Kerri Hurford, Paul Kesman, Laura Lee; Our Lady Star of the Sea — Kathryn Elibri, Helen Belanca, Cathy Jo Cavanaugh, Elizabeth Paschke, Kathy Thompson. Unable to attend were Divya Railan and John Grierson of Grosse Pointe North, and David Chilingirian of University Liggett.

A sampling of the organizations and charities who benefited from their volunteer service include: St. Anne's Nursing Home, the Muscular Dystrophy Association, the Crop Walk, canned food drives, St. John Hospital, Special Olympics for Disabled Children and Adults, Foundation for Exceptional Children, Safe Rides Program, Bon Secours Hospital, Harper Light Substance Abuse Center, Capuchin Soup Kitchen, Macomb County 4-H Horseback Riding Program for the Handicapped, Cottage Hospital, Family Life Education Council, The Casa Maria Program for Underprivileged Children, Tau Beta Camp for Diabetic Children, American Heart Association, Henry Ford Hospital and the Torch Drive.

Optimist President William R. VanDeweghe said the award program is conducted annually throughout the country. "This year's awardees are truly outstanding representatives of both their schools and our community, and we are all very proud of them," he said.

"People in this community should be proud of these students," Turcotte said. "They make the extra effort."

Success is measured differently at Barnard

By Margie Reins Smith
Barnard Center keeps a low profile.

Part of the Grosse Pointe Public School System, the neat, one-story, seven-classroom facility is tucked behind some huge trees on the grounds of the Children's Home of Detroit, 900 Cook Road, in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Important learning is taking place at Barnard Center, however. Success is just measured on a different scale. And — like the building itself — success is not always obvious to outsiders.

Barnard Center is a special education school for children with emotional and behavioral problems. The Center's first assistant, Patty Kelly, said, "This is one of the best programs for emotionally impaired children in Michigan — and I've visited quite a few. I make it a point to visit others."

Besides Kelly, who serves as an assistant principal and crisis teacher, the Grosse Pointe school system employs three special education teachers for Barnard, plus three teachers' aides and four part-time teachers — one each for physical education, music, art and speech. Twenty-six children currently are the beneficiaries of all this expertise, but the number of children fluctuates, and can go as high as 30. The average child's length of attendance at the center is 14 months, according to Kelly.

"Historically, Grosse Pointe has regarded the residents of the Children's Home as residents of Grosse Pointe Woods," said Dr. Clare Hunt, director of special education for the Grosse Pointe schools. Grosse Pointe has provided education for children living at the Children's Home. "This is a unique partnership in the United States," she said. "Most residential placement centers hire their own staff."

"This program is unique," Kelly said, "because of its strong cooperative relationship with the Children's Home of Detroit." The Children's Home is a residential treatment facility for children with emotional problems. There is only one other residential program in Michigan that has two agencies working with strong cooperative efforts for children, according to Kelly.

"We work very closely with the Children's Home, with each student's case worker, therapist and treatment supervisor," she said. "The school is part of a team. We communicate daily — sometimes more often — with others who are working with these children."

The 26 children currently enrolled at Barnard range in age from 7 to 14. All have severe behavioral and emotional problems and cannot be mainstreamed into regular Grosse Pointe school classrooms. According to Kelly, the children have difficulties coping — at home, at school and in the community. Most have had prior residential treatment. They are referred from psychiatric hospitals, outpatient mental health programs, and day treatment programs.

"Some make dramatic progress," she said, "but most children reach little goals that are not obvious to outsiders. They do not show dramatic increases in test scores, as regular school children do. But our staff sees progress. Most children benefit here."

Dr. Marvin Faust, consulting child psychiatrist to the Grosse Pointe Public School System and to the Children's Home of Detroit, said, "Our job is to look at each child from all angles. The academic angle is important. At Barnard Center, however, we are also concerned with socialization — how the child gets along with peers and teachers. Often we consider socialization to be of primary importance, while academic gains are secondary."

"In Barnard's closed, structured setting, we can pay more attention to building a basis of support and trust so that the child can learn," he said.

For example, an 11-year-old boy, said Kelly, was very rigid and constricted when he came to the school. "In addition, he made inappropriate sounds and gestures when he was under stress — sounds like a machine, or a computer, or animal sounds and gestures.

"Within a few months, he was able to play in a group, to carry on a conversation, to maintain eye contact. In less than a year he was able to attend Brownell's special education classes. This was incredible, considering where he was when he came to us," she said.

Anne Maters, certified music therapist, spends two mornings each week at Barnard Center. She said she uses music as a form of communication with the children. It's also a form of expression for them, she said. Maters meets with each class twice a week and she meets individually with students at the beginning of the day.

Participating in group activities is very difficult for these children, according to Kelly. "One of our most rewarding and successful group experiences was our Christmas program last year."

Maters said the Christmas presentation — for the children's parents, caseworkers and teachers — was the first time she'd tried such an ambitious group project. "Every child had a part. For some of them, it was the only successful group experience they'd ever had."

"The program was a moving experience," Kelly said. "It moved me to tears. Some parents cried too. The children memorized a play, made scenery on flats in art class, made costumes, and memorized words and actions to the songs — all very difficult for them. "This was not just a 'cute' special ed play. It was a good finished product that could compete with any other play," Kelly said.

Maters, who said she was too nervous during the Christmas program to notice any details, said she later saw videotapes of the performance. "I saw two children who are mortal enemies turn to each other and shake hands — part of the action that went along with a song in the program."

"One of the most disturbed children here turned to me and said, 'I was good — wasn't I?'"

"The good feelings from a successful program like this carry over to other parts of their lives," Kelly said the greatest asset of Barnard Center is the staff. "This is not an easy job. It's very demanding. High stress. Teachers and staff do not get many hugs or thank-yous from the children. We measure progress in a different way."

"The staff is upbeat, energetic, caring. They look for new ways to reach children — children who are working with an emotional deficit. And they do it without words."

Good teachers are difficult to find

By Nancy Parmenter

Grosse Pointe is not immune to the problems that plague city schools across the nation, teacher union president Doris Cook told a group of church women last week. Teacher shortages and burnout and student dropouts exist in affluent communities as well.

They may take longer to manifest themselves.

"Grosse Pointe is mining the parochial schools and smaller school districts," Cook said Jan. 13 at the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church. "Those people are applying here and we're hiring them in large numbers."

"Grosse Pointe will not feel the teacher shortage as soon. We offer higher salaries and we're hiring only experienced teachers."

But the shortage is real. And it is worse in some fields than others. "Two years ago, Cook said, only one person in the entire state of Michigan graduated from college certified to teach high school physics. The rest of the talented science students went into other science-related fields that paid better."

"Kids go into business these days if they want to make it," she said.

There are 31 colleges in the state that graduate teachers, from tiny Siena Heights, with about 15 new teachers a year, to giant Michigan State University. With the state's three largest universities leading the way, some of the schools are working to revamp, improve and enlarge their teacher certification programs.

"But when colleges try to expand their programs, they too run into a shortage of qualified staff," Cook said. "Of the people who get teaching certificates, 50 percent of them never go into teaching and 20 percent leave the state."

But quality is even more discouraging than quantity. Although the colleges are now trying to encourage higher standards, the minimum grade point average to enter teacher programs is still only C+, according to Cook.

There are several reasons the best people don't want to consider teaching as a career, and only one of them is low salaries. Stress and lack of decision-making probably rank just as high.

Cook said that when she was teaching at Pierce Middle school, she taught a unit on careers. Gradually she realized that none of the students were researching teaching as a possible career. Asked why not, several told her, "I don't want to spend my life teaching kids like us."

Even people in the educational field who get the opportunity to get out of the classroom usually resist going back into it, she said. Administrators and counselors — and, she admitted, union presidents — relish the control they have over their time out of the classroom.

"They don't like the structure and rigidity and control of the teachers by the administration," Cook said. "If they return to the classroom, they lose control over their own time. They have to deal with large groups of kids instead of one-on-one."

"(In the classroom), you are seeing a minimum of 125 kids a day and you are expected to interact with every one of them. . . . Some teachers are just counting the years until they get out."

Teaching used to be regarded as a "gateway profession" for women and minorities, Cooks said. "But now minorities are being courted — if they're qualified, they'll find a more prestigious job."

The improvements now getting started will improve teacher quality by requiring teachers to get recertified every five years and by testing academic knowledge and teaching skills before a graduate can set foot in a classroom as a student teacher. But Cook believes that salary improvement would do a lot to attract more qualified people.

She endorses the National Education Association's 30-60-90 plan, which sets a goal of a minimum starting salary of $30,000, with a career maximum of $60,000 by 1990. Grosse Pointe, a high-paying district, currently offers a starting salary of $18,884 for a bachelor's degree. The highest step available to teachers with a Ph.D. is $41,967. Starting salary for a Ph.D. is $26,060.

Cook knows the goal is high. "But you have to set goals," she said. "A better salary is the only thing that will attract the best and the brightest into education." She said she is disappointed that the community at large does not speak out more on the need for higher salaries to attract good teachers. Teachers themselves generally take the lead, bringing charges of self-interest from the community.

The fact that only teachers are bringing up the money subject is reflective of the value society puts on education, according to Cook.

"Society does not value education and teaching as they used to," she said. "They take schools for granted. What the home and the churches can't or won't do, they turn to the schools for. If the job isn't being done, it's given to the schools."

"(Yet) the schools are a top factor in making a community attractive. In Grosse Pointe, they are responsible for keeping your property values up."

"You get what you pay for."

WINNERS CIRCLE

BY LAURIE KIPP

M&L

Along with other state agencies, the Michigan Lottery's fiscal year ended in September. The following summarizes the latest record-breaking year in responding to various questions.

Q: What are annual sales for the Michigan Lottery?

A: Last year sales from all Lottery games were more than $996 million, which represented a 12.6 percent gain from the previous year.

Q: How much did players win last year?

A: Prizes paid to winners exceeded $480 million, up 12.6 percent from the previous year.

Q: Does the State make money on funds used for 20-year prizes?

A: No. For each $1 million prize paid over 20 years, the Lottery invests approximately half that amount. All the principal and all of the interest combine to pay the full prize to the winner. This system helps increase the amount of prize money that can be won in a given year.

Q: How much did the Lottery provide for schools last year?

A: With all net revenues from the Lottery earmarked for the State School Aid Fund, last year's contribution grew past $417 million, or about 22 percent of the total fund.

Q: How is this money distributed?

A: All money in the School Aid Fund is disbursed according to the State School Aid Formula which was developed by the Legislature. To maintain the same level of support to schools without Lottery funds would have required another $130 per Michigan household last year.

Q: How many Lottery millionaires were created last year?

A: There were 31 players or Lottery Clubs winning prizes of $1 million or more during the year. Included was the second highest award, $10 million, ever won by an individual in the Michigan Lottery.

Q: How many cash prizes were awarded?

A: More than 17 million cash prizes were won during the year. The equivalent of nearly two for every resident of the state.

Q: Didn't you announce record payouts in one of the daily games?

A: Actually, record payouts were recorded for both daily games. The June 10 payout of nearly $5 million in the Daily 3 was equal to 48.9 percent of the amount played in that day's game. The record setting 386 percent payout in the Daily 4 on November 4, 1985 already has been broken with a 668 percent payout on October 15 of this year.

I have a dream . . .

That line from Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s famous speech was brought home for students at Kathlynn Kellogg's third-grade class last week. The students created T-shirts depicting their dreams. Around the table are Steve Song, 8, left, Steve Fennell, 8, Daniel Clor, 9, and Margaret Radnick, 8. Sitting next to a poster of Dr. King is Blair Bellard, 8, who dreams of becoming a teacher.

All-day kindergarten tuition rate goes up

By Nancy Parmenter

The tuition rate for all-day kindergarten will increase six percent to $1,375 starting in September, the school board decided Jan. 12. The new rate was set now so that program administrators could plan advertising for spring registration.

Trustee Carol Marr told the board that as a member of the early childhood committee she had visited all-day kindergarten programs in other Detroit metropolitan school districts and came away with satisfied with the Grosse Pointe program.

"($1,375) sounds like a lot, but I see now that we're offering a lot for a reasonable price," Marr said.

In a later interview, Marr said the committee had visited programs in Utica, Birmingham, Southfield and West Bloomfield. "Other than Birmingham, I'm not aware of any (metropolitan-area) system that offers all-day kindergarten with a certified teacher (as Grosse Pointe does)," she said. "Most offer half a day with a teacher and half a day with a caregiver."

Grosse Pointe has offered the program for three years. It started with one class and has built to three — at Defer, Kerby and Ferry, Marr said.

There were concerns during the planning stages that enrolling a child in kindergarten all day would result in two levels of readiness at the beginning of first grade. Most Grosse Pointe kindergarteners are still in school only half a day.

The program was not intended to speed up learning, but to offer a broader variety of activities to student who were ready for the all-day experience, Marr said. She acknowledged that some students are probably enrolled in the class because their working parents need a place to leave them all day, rather than because they are mature enough.

Roger McCaig, the district's director of research and development, has been conducting a study that will show whether the students in the all-day class are getting ahead of the half-day students. The study, designed to run for four years, is incomplete and has yielded only preliminary results.

"We now have first-grade achievement test results for the first group," McCaig said. "They were virtually identical."

McCaig has tested every student in the all-day classes and a sample of the half-day students. The test is one-on-one with a student and a test-giver and takes about 20 minutes to administer to each child.

The first group, tested in kindergarten and again in first grade, had similar results for all-day and half-day. "It suggests that being in school all day doesn't (make them learn faster)," he said.

The second group is throwing a curve at the testers. Based on the results of their kindergarten tests (they haven't been in first grade long enough to have test results there), the boys are outscoring the girls — a rather unusual situation at that age.

The all-day boys scored higher than the all-day girls and better than both boys and girls in half-day kindergarten, McCaig said. Until he gets the results from first grade mental-ability tests, he won't know the reason why. But he can guess.

"It isn't likely that the boys had a better learning experience than the girls in the same class," he said. "It's more likely that the class ended up with a group of bright boys. Only time will tell."

The classes will continue to grow, contingent upon enrollment and space availability, Marr said. The elementary schools are currently experiencing a mini-boom in population and could run out of space.

Marr, who was a member of the committee that recommended the all-day program in 1980, before she was a school board member, said her former concern about the tuition has evaporated.

"I feel good about what we offer," she said. "It's an optional program and it shouldn't be at taxpayers' expense. When you look at the public school system, you tend to think you shouldn't have to pay for it. But that attitude is changing."

The tuition is designed to cover the cost of the additional half day only. Half a day is included in the traditional kindergarten through 12th grade covered by taxes.

Free trees given by foundation

The National Arbor Day Foundation is giving 10 free trees to people who become foundation members during January.

The free trees are part of the foundation's effort to promote tree planting throughout America.

A Sugar Maple, White Flowering Dogwood, Pin Oak, White Pine, Red Maple, Birch, American Redbud, Silver Maple, Red Oak and Colorado Blue Spruce tree will be given to members joining during January.

The six- to 12-inch trees will be shipped postage paid with enclosed planting instructions at the right time for planting this spring. The foundation makes its spring shipments between Feb. 1 and May 31, depending on the local climate and this year's weather.

To become a member of the foundation and to receive the free trees, a $10 membership contribution should be sent to Ten Trees, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, Neb. 68410, by Jan. 31.

G.P. real estate comparable

Home prices in Grosse Pointe rate favorably with prices in other cities in Michigan and the Midwest, according to a housing survey released by Schweitzer Real Estate, Inc./Better Homes and Gardens in Grosse Pointe.

The average price of an existing 1,600 square foot, three-bedroom home with one-and-one-half baths in Grosse Pointe is $120,000. The average price for a similar but newly constructed home would be $150,000 although a newly constructed home of this size would be rare in Grosse Pointe.

The average existing home price of $69,616 in 11 midwest states is the lowest among the seven regions surveyed. The $169,943 price tag on an existing home in the New England states is the highest average price in the nation.

New home prices in the midwest also fall below national averages. The average new home price of $96,411 in the Midwest is fifth behind New England, Alaska/Hawaii, East and West. The south central states and the south have somewhat lower new home prices. The highest average new home price is $237,050 in New England. The lowest average new home price is $80,304 was found in the south central states.

The midwest states in the survey are Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

Lake Forest, Ill. had the highest reported new home price in the region at $350,000. The lowest reported new home price was $45,900 in Burton, Mich. Nationally, the highest average new home price was $525,000 in the New York suburb of Saddle River, N.J. The most affordable in the nation was priced at $45,000 in Glasgow, Ky.

Lake Forest also reported the Midwest's highest existing home average of $225,000. The lowest average existing home price in the region was $35,700 in Pittsburgh, Kansas. Saddle River, N.J. also led the nation in average existing home price of $475,000.

Tops in math

Two Bishop Gallagher students finished in the top five percent of more than 23,000 high school students in Michigan who took Part I of the 30th annual Michigan Mathematics Prize Competition. They are Joseph Gazzarato and William Materna, both seniors.

They will be among the approximately 1,000 Michigan students who will compete in the second and final part of the competition. The winners will be honored at an awards program at Michigan State University March 7. About half the winners will receive college scholarships. Last year's awards totaled $18,800.

The competition funds include contributions from the Arvco Corporation, the Burroughs Corporation, the Ford Motor Company, Michigan Bell, the Kuhlman Corporation, the Upjohn Company and the Michigan Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

Mathews to receive DAR award

Julie Mathews of South High School is the 1987 recipient of the Good Citizen Award, presented by the Elizabeth Cass Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

She was elected by teachers and students for outstanding contributions in scholarship, leadership, citizenship and patriotism.

Good Citizen Awards are given annually to high school senior girls and boys all over the United States. Michigan alone honors more than 500 students.

This year the Elizabeth Cass Chapter, DAR, is honoring the following students from this area at a team at Grosse Pointe North, on Monday, Feb. 2, at 1 P.M.:

April Adams, Harper Woods High; Joseph Gazzarato, Bishop Gallagher; Oksana Ambrushkiv, Immaculate Conception; Lydia Pannicker, Hamtramck High; Laura Ann Matthews, Lincoln High; Peggy Mesaeh, St. Florian High; and Anthony Kawa, Warren High.

Student spotlight

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a project for woodworking, a book review — whatever you, the student, would like to share with our readers.

This space is open to any student in the Grosse Pointe public and private school system from grades 1 through 12. Send your entry along with a picture of yourself to Student Spotlight, Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms, 48236. Or drop it off at our offices. If you would like everything returned, enclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

ULS debaters win laurels

The University Liggett School debate team has had a successful second half of the season.

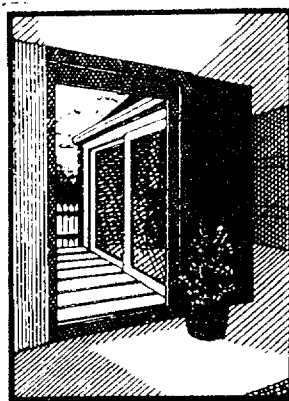

During the weekend of Nov. 21-22 they traveled to Stevenson High School in Mount Clemens and came away with honors in both four-man and two-man debate. The four-man team of Robert Zych and Prasad Rao on negative and Kavita and Nishu Sood on the affirmative came away with second place. Zych received the seventh place speaker award.

Earlier in the season, the ULS debate team went to Troy Athens High School every Tuesday to debate two rounds in the Mac/Oak League. This league is the largest and toughest one in Michigan. Following the tradition of the past five years, at the season's end the ULS varsity came away with first place. Pam Colby received the second speaker award, Tom Vallone — fifth, Nishu Sood — sixth, and Kavita Sood — honorable mention.

On Friday morning, Dec. 12, the debaters left for a weekend tournament held at Princeton High School in Cincinnati, Ohio. More than 100 schools from all over the nation attended.

Over the weekend of Dec. 19-20, the debaters traveled again to Ohio for a tournament at Maumee High School. Colby and Vallone were semi-finalists at the two-man varsity level. As for speaker awards, Colby took first, Vallone — second, Levinson — fourth, and Kavita Sood — sixth. On the four-man level, with Rao and Nishu Sood on the negative, and Zych paired with a debater from Southfield Lathrup High School on the affirmative, ULS took first place. Nishu Sood took second speaker, while Zych took sixth.

Next week, the Adult Forum program will be a taped interview conducted by Sammons, with Oris Walker Jr., an Episcopal priest at St. Matthew and St. Joseph churches. Walker recently conducted the funeral of a teenager killed in Detroit violence.

The Adult Forum is held on Sunday mornings at 10:15 a.m., between Christ Church's two worship services.

The committee planning the programs includes: Sammons, Dr. Collier Worrell, Suzanne Henderson, Helen Santiz, Joyce Dennison, Julie Boyle, Tom Champion, Joe Swickard and Dow Smith.

New York Times editor to speak here

Robert Semple Jr., editor of the New York Times Op-Ed page will come home to Grosse Pointe Monday, Feb. 2, courtesy of the War Memorial's Council of Sponsors. With more than 23 years at the Times, as political reporter, White House correspondent during Nixon's first term and foreign editor, where he directed the paper's 32 full-time foreign correspondents, Semple will offer his views on "Reagan's Legacy: The Political, Economic and Social Consequences of the Reagan Revolution" at the War Memorial at 8 p.m.

A former Pointer, Semple attended Grosse Pointe University School, now University Liggett. He graduated from Andover, received a B.A. at Yale and an M.A. in history from Berkeley.

He divides his duties at the New York Times with an active schedule that includes lectures throughout the nation on domestic politics, foreign policy and the role of the press in reporting and shaping the news, as well as frequent appearances on NBC's "Meet The Press."

Joan Woodhouse, the Council of Sponsors member who organized the program, said "I've heard him speak many times," and Bob Semple's wit and understanding of the political scene make him a dynamic speaker and (he) seems to bring new perspective to the political events we read about daily."

Semple has close ties to Grosse Pointe through his father, Robert Sr., and his brother, Lloyd, whose families live in the Farms. Of the War Memorial lecture, Semple has promised to reveal "... a lot of good things. And things that even George Will doesn't like."

Tickets are available for $10 per person at the War Memorial in advance or at the door. For additional information, call 881-7511, 9-9 daily except Sunday.

Third program set in library series

The third in a series of five programs aimed at out-of-school adults will take place at Central Library on Thursday, Jan. 22, at 7:30 p.m. Dr. Donald Bassett of Wayne State University's Department of Education will talk about Katherine Paterson's Newberry Award winner, "Bridge to Terabithia."

This year's series, "Not for Children Only," is one theme of a larger program "Let's Talk About It," designed to bring adults into the library and the company of a scholar for lecture and discussion in a seminar setting. The "Not for Children Only" theme suggests that there are many good adult books written for which the reader must have experience and comprehension, but that there are no good books written only for children.

The Feb. 26 title will be "I Am the Cheese" by Robert Cormier. Professor Rascole McCullough will speak. March 26, Dr. Craig Roney will lecture on E.B. White's "Charlotte's Web."

There is no fee for the lecture. However, participants are asked to have read the book before the program so they can take part in the discussion. Extra copies of the tities have been donated by the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library and can be picked up at Central Library when registering.

provides a volunteer opportunity for other seniors like George Salbert and his wife, who work at SOC five days each week.

Executive Director Kraemer has only been on the job for a month, but brings 20 years experience as a social worker to the position. "I'm really impressed with the staff here," she said. "Everyone takes extra steps to help. We have a good group of volunteers too. They go beyond the call of duty."

Asked what her three wishes would be — for SOC and for senior citizens in this area — Kraemer was quick to respond:

"I'd like to find more transportation for those who need it, including assistance for people who need help getting out of their homes, down the steps, and into the vehicle."

"I'd like more affordable personal care help for people in their homes — on a continuing basis."

"I'd like to find housing alternatives. Many older people want to get out of their big old houses. But they don't want to leave Grosse Pointe, their friends, their nearby relatives. There are no alternatives in the Pointes. One senior citizen's housing development in Harper Woods, I hear, has 1,200 people on its waiting list."

Crockett elected to chair Foreign Affairs subcommittee

Congressman George W. Crockett Jr. was elected chairman Jan. 8 of the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs in the 100th Congress.

Crockett was approved for the chairmanship by his Democratic colleagues on the House Foreign Affairs Committee. He succeeds Rep. Michael Burns (D-Maryland), who did not run for reelection to the U.S. House of Representatives.

As chairman of the Western Hemisphere Subcommittee, Crockett will assume a key role in the Congressional deliberations on such issues as U.S. policies in Nicaragua and El Salvador; President Reagan's Caribbean Basin Initiative; foreign assistance programs in Central and South America; and continuing debt problems of countries in the region.

Crockett has been a frequent critic of Reagan administration policies in the region. He has filed suit against the presence of U.S. military personnel in El Salvador; opposed the mining of Nicaragua's harbor; expressed concerns over the structure of the Caribbean Basin Initiative; and urged the Administration to support the Contradora peace initiative.

He has been a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee since he first came to Congress in November 1980. Crockett will also continue to serve as the ranking majority member of the Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Africa.

Park woman founds prayer group with national significance

By Elsa Frohman

Last night, Sally Reynolds prayed at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C. The organization she founded, Mothers of Mary, is one of many participating in the all-night vigil preceding this weekend's pro-life activities in the nation's capital.

But in an interview last week, Reynolds said her prayers wouldn't be exclusively on the abortion issue, the official focus on the weekend's events commemorating the Jan. 22 U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion.

"I pray out of a reverence for life at all stages," Reynolds said. "When you look at the world around us and see that it isn't perfect, you ask, what can we do?"

Reynolds organized Mothers of Mary 14 years ago after the death of her mother, who was at the time living at St. Joseph Home for the Aged. While her mother was at the home, she had regularly visited and prayed with her mother in the St. Joseph chapel.

"When she died, I said what can I do?" Reynolds said. "Then I thought, my mother would probably still have me visit here. Perhaps I could pray with other mothers and we could ask God to help us."

With the permission of the nuns at the home, Reynolds organized Mothers of Mary, a prayer group that has met weekly at the home ever since.

"Some of them are mothers, some are old people from the home and the nuns join us too," Reynolds said.

Reynolds chose the name, Mothers of Mary, because of her reverence for Mary as the mother of Jesus.

"I'm a Catholic and we all look to Mary," she said. "She was a beautiful example of the virtues I would like to possess. She was a woman of faith, and a woman of hope, and a woman of love."

Reynolds is quick to point out that while she reveres Mary, she does not worship her.

"Mary is the mother," she said. "We do not worship her. Worship is given only to God. We honor her. We believe that we can ask Mary as our friend to ask her son to help us."

Reynolds' involvement in the all-night vigil in Washington began with a public statement by the president.

In 1980, at the time of his inauguration, President Reagan commented that he would like to see

Jan. 21 observed as a day for prayer. That statement started Reynolds thinking again.

"The thought came to me," she said. "How beautiful it would be if people converged on Washington to pray for life. In our nation's capital, we can protest, we can prosecute and we can put people in prison. Those are all 'P' words. But we can never reach our goals without prayer."

Reynolds called the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington and asked permission for her group to pray the Rosary at the Shrine on Jan. 21. Her request fit in perfectly with the newly formed plans by the National Council of Bishops to hold a vigil at the shrine on that date. Reynolds was put in touch with the Rev. Edward Bryce to help organize a national Rosary with representatives from every state.

"It started in 1981," Reynolds said. "This is the seventh year. It starts out with Vespers at about 4:30 in the afternoon. Then there is a mass by Archbishop James Hickey. Then we have a national Rosary for life."

Reynolds explained that the Rosary consists of 50 Hail Marys — meditations of the life of Christ through his mother.

"We thought, since there are 50 states, why not have an official role call with people like senators calling each state," Reynolds said. "As we pray together, we meditate on the mysteries of the Rosary."

Candles are lit and passed among the worshippers and each representative places a red rose on the altar.

The meditations for the observance were written by Mother Angelica, the television personality.

All participants sign the "Golden Book of Life," a promise of future prayer.

"We call it, Pray Each Day for the USA," Reynolds said proudly. The book contains more than 500,000 signatures.

"This is not just for Catholics," she said. "We have people of every denomination."

Reynolds says she has found deep inspiration at the vigil over the past seven years.

"I have visited Lourdes and I have visited Fatima, but I have to say that in our own country, I have never seen such sacrifice," she said. "They come from all over and they believe that prayer is the answer. Many people come to Washington to protest using four-letter words. These people come and display a four-letter-word — love."

One of Sally Reynolds' most prized possessions is this statue, given to her by the Bishop of Fatima in Portugal. Reynolds took a group to the shrine to perform a play she wrote about the Miracle of Fatima in 1968.

Read a good garden while the snow flies

Gardening has brought joys and delights, and problems and woes to humankind ever since the days of the Garden of Eden. And writers have been giving advice and suggestions to gardeners ever since the beginning of the written word. This is a good month to read books on gardening and landscaping, on flower arranging and Bonsai, and on all the myriad related subjects a dedicated gardener can discover.

The library at the Grosse Pointe Garden Center is a treasure trove of garden information. Located on the second floor of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, and open Tuesday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. It is a circulating library for garden center members, but available to all for reference and browsing. New books are frequently added to the collection.

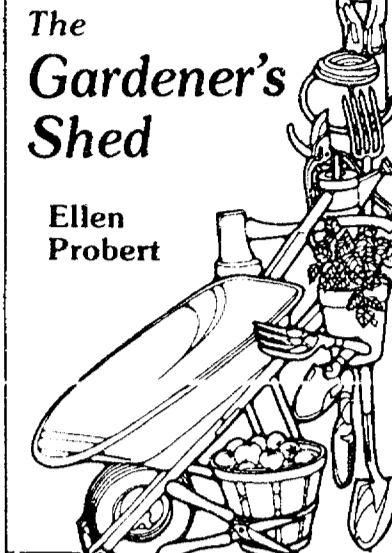

If you are planning a vacation trip you might like to check such books as "A Guide to Public Gardens in the United States," "Gardens Open to the Public in England and Wales," "Touring the Gardens of Europe," or "Thomas Jefferson's Flower Garden at Monticello," among others.

Sometimes fascinating facts emerge as you browse through garden books. Did you know, for instance, that Torreya, a tree known as Gopherwood, is native to no section of America except Liberty County, Fla., and the Southwest corner of Decatur County, Ga. Legend has it that it is related botanically to the trees from which Noah built the Ark.

It is to be hoped that you are providing bread, seeds and suet for the wild birds in your garden, but remember that they need water too. If you set out clay saucers or wooden bowls for the water it will not freeze as it will in metal bowls.

If you put an old pocket mirror in the bowl it will reflect the light and warm the water. A drop of glycerin will serve the same purpose and will not harm the birds.

Here's an idea that always delights children. On a cold night find an individual jello mold or small fancy-shaped metal dish. Let the child fill it with water and place it outside on the window sill with a bit of plastic wrap over it to keep it clean. In the morning unmold a very fancy icecube to decorate breakfast orange juice, or to admire until it melts, or even just to eat.

The Gardener's Shed
Ellen Probert

The month of January is a distinctly low-light month and a good time to consider how to increase natural light for our house plants. The American Gloxinia and Gesneriad Society (which, incidentally, was founded by a 13-year-old boy) offers some suggestions: "Paint walls white ... stand plants on white marble chips ... face interior shutters with mirrors ... paper ceiling and wall areas with Mylar ... use moveable screens covered with shiny white gift-wrap paper." Mirrors have another advantage. Placed behind the plants they double the display as well as adding light. The Longwood Gardens greenhouses use this method most effectively. Snow outside also reflects more light inside.

January is very often a month of mild weather and thaw, but the threat of snow is always there and perhaps it is as much the unpredictability of weather and the contrast of balmy days and drifting blizzards that make this first month of the new year so interesting. On days of snow you might watch the traffic patterns your family makes with an eye to the placement of pathways in your garden next spring.

In the European Flower Calendar the flower for January is the snowdrop. In the Chinese Flower Calendar it is the plum blossom, flower of winter and symbol of beauty and longevity; and in the Japanese Flower Calendar the pine, which is ever green, is the symbol of January. The pine is also the symbol of boldness and fidelity, stability and longevity and is the Chinese symbol of friendship.

By now, all there is left of the Christmas decorations are the poinsettias, which usually put on a good show for two or three months—sometimes even longer. (One local lady tells about a white poinsettia given to her as a Christmas gift which retained its lovely blooms all the way to the following Christmas).

Next June cut your poinsettia plants back to within an inch above the crotch of each stem. Hopefully, this should give you twice as many blooms the following year. Summer the plants outdoors in full sun.

Before frost next fall bring them in and put them in an absolutely dark closet from six in the evening until eight the next morning. Be sure it is a cool closet. Ideal temperatures would be about 60 degrees. After about six weeks of this treatment, put the plant in a bright window and at about Christmas you should once again have magnificent flowers.

If you don't have an available closet get a large cardboard carton and cover your plants with the box from 6 p.m. to 8 a.m.

There's always a Flower Show on Belle Isle at the Anna Scripps Whitcomb Conservatory which dates back to 1904 and which welcomes a million visitors a year to its six major flower displays.

Just a few days ago the annual winter show opened with a gorgeous display of blooms which will provide color, fragrance and a beautiful lift to winter depressions until just before Easter.

Spending an hour in the humid warmth and fragrant air of the great conservatory and reveling in the magnificent display of colorful blossoms and lush foliage is almost as good as a trip to Florida in the midst of gray January doldrums. Many varieties of cyclamen, cineraria, calceolarias and primroses are waiting to delight you. Don't forget to pick up one of the new brochures about the conservatory which lists all the floral events planned for this coming year.

Academy brunch raises $40,000 for Barat Human Services

The Grosse Pointe Academy Alumni Association raised nearly $40,000 at "Brunch with Barat," a special fundraising event for Barat Human Services, an agency that helps treat and prevent child abuse. The mid-day affair, hosted by WXYZ-TV's Bill Bonds, was held at the Grosse Pointe Academy on Dec. 7.

The event began with a chapel service, followed by a reception honoring long-time advocate of children, Margaret Slattery, Dr. Joseph Fischhoff, director of Psychiatric Services of Children's Hospital and Barat Human Services to a group of around 300. After the reception, which was held in the academy's library, guests moved upstairs for a brunch prepared by Rudi Stanish, the "Omelette King" from New York.

Stubborn ounces

The Rev. Robert Boley
Grosse Pointe United Methodist

Running across some correspondence from a Peace Corps volunteer, who tells of a conversation between her peers about the South American morass of terrible need, I was inspired. They nearly all felt that anything they did was hopeless — except one PC volunteer. In his pocket was this poem called "The Stubborn Ounces of My Weight."

*You say the little efforts that I make Will do no good.
They will never prevail to tip the hovering scale
Where justice hangs in the balance.
I don't think
I ever really thought they would
But I am prejudiced beyond debate
In favor of my right to choose which side Shall feel the stubborn ounces of my weight.*
— Bonaro Overstreet

And so those young people in their discouragement were helped by this one short statement. But it is true! One person's action at one time or more times may well "tip the hovering scale . . ." Jesus' story whose punch line was "In as much as you did it to the least of these . . . you did it unto me," tells it all. We have one life, and sometimes one opportunity. We do count. Even little of me, and little of you! Let's be prejudiced about what our weight will do — and leave the rest to God. This column is written on a rotating basis by members of the Grosse Pointe Ministerial Association.

Schoenherr, auxiliary bishop of Detroit, will take place at the Fairlane Manor, Dearborn, beginning at 7 p.m. The invocation will be given by the Most Rev. Kenneth J. The managing editor of the Detroit Free Press, Neal Shine, will add a special touch to the evening's program as the master of ceremonies. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas V. Angott are this year's co-chairpersons. Angott is president of Detroit Pure Milk Company. A festive evening is planned with music provided by the Eddie DeSantis Quartet and Orchestra. Dinner is planned for 8 p.m.

A second Guest House facility in Rochester, Minn., began operations in 1969. Together, the centers have admitted and successfully treated more than 4,000 clergymen over a period of 30 years.

For more information about the Bishop's Dinner, please call Guest House at 391-4445.

Memorial welcomes three ecumenical ministers

Departing from the traditional single ecumenical minister, the congregation of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church this year will have the experience of hearing from three native American ministers representing different phases of ministry to the American Indian. In the pulpit this Sunday will be the Rev. Clifford Canku coming to Grosse Pointe from Wagner, S.D., where he presently serves three Presbyterian churches as their pastor. The Rev. Canku is a member of the Dakota tribe. He is a graduate of the Dubuque Theological Seminary. Prior to entering the seminary, the Rev. Canku served in the U.S. Army and in a number of secular positions. Today, serving as pastor for three Indian churches, the Rev. Canku will be able to relate his experiences and concerns for the native American from that viewpoint. Coming to Memorial Church as the second Ecumenical Minister will be the Rev. Sidney Byrd. Rev. Byrd is a retired Presbyterian minister living in Sante Fe, N.M. He is a member of the Sioux tribe, having been born at Porcupine, S.D., near the Wounded Knee Battleground in the Pine Ridge Reservation. Rev. Byrd served in the U.S. Army in World War II and graduated from the Cook Christian Training School in Tempe, Arizona and went on to earn his B.A. degree at Huron College in Huron, S.D. He received a B.D. degree from Dubuque Theological Seminary. Rev. Byrd has served seven churches in five different states and has also been on the staffs of Cook Christian Training School and Huron College. The Rev. Dr. Cecil Corbett, president of Cook Christian Training School in Tempe, Ariz., will be the third Ecumenical Minister, and he will arrive in mid-February. Dr. Cook is a member of the NezPerce tribe, although he was born on a Cherokee Reservation in North Carolina. He received his training at the Cook Christian Training School and Huron College in South Dakota where he earned his B.A. degree. He received his B.D. degree from the University of Dubuque Theological Seminary and was awarded an Honorary Doctor of Divinity Degree by Huron College in 1967 and by the Dubuque Seminary in 1970. Dr. Corbett served as pastor in several churches before being called to Tempe to become the Director of Programs at the Cook Training School in 1967. In 1983 the title was changed to president. Today Dr. Corbett serves on the Presbyterian Churches General Assembly Mission Council which attempts to implement a church-wide national policy for Indians. The native-American Ecumenical Ministers will be meeting with all of the organizations of Memorial Church and will be meeting with members of the service organizations in the Grosse Pointe community while they are in residence.

What's happening at local churches

First English Lutheran

On Friday, Feb. 6, at 7:30 p.m., the First English Lutheran Church, at 800 Vernier Rd., in Grosse Pointe Woods, will host the UM Friars. Tickets are priced at $5, and may be reserved by calling the church office at 884-5040 during normal business hours, or may be purchased at the door. A reception will follow.

The Friars were organized in 1955 as an octet from within the University of Michigan Men's Glee Club. In the 30 years since, the Friars have enjoyed a reputation for singing excellence, and the group performs regularly at banquets, parties, and school functions in the Ann Arbor area and throughout Michigan.

Highlights of the past several years have included special appearances at the White House, before Michigan Stadium football crowds, on regional television and radio, and at the popular Bandoma program of the University of Michigan bands. In addition, the Friars join the UM Glee Club in concert throughout the United States, and performed during the Glee Club's 1985 tour of Europe.

The Friars choose and prepare their own music and choreography, and select their replacements from among the members of the Glee Club. Their program consists of a variety of light music including parodies of songs from the '50s and '60s, renditions of well-known tunes from the '30s and '40s, novelty songs, and current popular music.

The octet takes its name from that of a prestigious society of campus leaders that flourished at Michigan in the early 1900s. The frothy beer mug that serves as the logo of today's Friars is reminiscent of the congenial fellowship of that turn-of-the-century drinking society, and pays tribute to the spirit of light-hearted spontaneity which is the trademark of every Friars performance.

World Day of Prayer

On Jan. 20, representatives from 19 churches in the Grosse Pointe area met at Our Lady Star of the Sea Barton Center to plan the 100th annual observance of the World Day of Prayer.

All are invited to the service and the fellowship hour which will follow.

Week of Prayer

The Week of Prayer for Christian Unity will conclude Sunday,

Jan. 25, with a service at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, at 4 p.m. It will be a Service of the Word of God, conducted by the Rev. Clifford Canku, ecumenical minister at Memorial. Canku is an American Indian of the Dakota tribe who serves as pastor of three churches in Wagner, S.D. Music will be provided by William DeTurk of Memorial Church. The public is welcome.

Mothers of Mary pray at shrine . . .

Back in the Detroit area, Reynolds' group is involved in a project to get more young people interested in prayer. Through the Spiritual Olympics, a light has been passed to youth group members that Reynolds hopes will eventually reach all 50 states.

"We hope to reach out more diligently to youth," Reynolds said.

Prayer has always figured large in Reynolds' life. She has made many trips to Fatima in Portugal and Lourdes in France. One corner of her living room is given over to a half-height statue of Mary which was a gift from the Bishop of Fatima in the late '60s, after she brought a theater group to the Portuguese shrine to perform a play on the Miracle of Fatima that she wrote.

If Reynolds has a single hero or heroine, it must be Mother Teresa.

"Mother Teresa does everything with love," Reynolds said. "She is a universal figure showing a love of humanity."

Reynolds had the privilege of meeting Mother Teresa when the Nobel laureate was in Detroit. She asked the nun's prayer in support of the vigil. The meeting took place in the Little Sisters of the Poor's just established headquarters in a poor section of the city.

Reynolds concluded her meeting with Mother Teresa and went back to her car parked outside where she discovered she had locked her keys inside. She returned to the meeting where Mother Teresa was speaking with others and get help from one of the men to break into her car.

"Mother Teresa came out on the balcony to watch," Reynolds said. "At first, she made a gesture like praying — then, when we succeeded, she spread her arms, like 'Thank you, Lord!'"

Mothers of Mary is an informal group meeting at St. Joseph Home on a weekly basis.

"Prayer is the answer," Reynolds said. "This is the idea we started with in Mothers of Mary. I can't tell how, but it can't help but help. We don't believe that we are the answer. We believe that prayer is the answer. We're like the 50 beads linked together."

Reynolds has been the driving force behind the Grosse Pointe Children's Theater for the past 33 years. She taught drama at Liggett School for nine years.

Mothers of Mary meets on Fridays from 10 to 11 a.m. There are between 30 and 40 regular members.

"This is just one place that we do this," Reynolds said. "There are groups all over the Detroit area."

For more information on Mothers of Mary, contact Reynolds at 885-6219.

The following recipes are from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helen DeWitt Roth.

Overnight Six-Layer Casserole

New scene stealers are layered casseroles — marvelous make ahead dishes whose ingredients marinate for several hours or overnight for better development and blending of flavors. The new oven proof glass straight sided casserole adds to the visual effect.

1 can (16 ounces) tomatoes
1 Tbsp. margarine
1 pkg. (6 ounces) long grain and wild rice
1 pound very lean ground beef
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
2 cups shredded cabbage
1 Tbsp. flour
1 to 2 Tbsp. lemon juice
1/2 cup evaporated skimmed milk
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded low-calorie processed cheese

Place 1 to 2 tablespoons lemon juice in measuring cup, add sufficient evaporated skimmed milk to make 1/2 cup. Stir. Let sit at room temperature at least one hour so that it will thicken into delicious sour cream.

Drain and chop tomatoes, reserving liquid. Add enough water to liquid to make 2 1/2 cups. Add margarine, rice and contents of seasoning packet to tomato liquid in saucepan. Bring to a boil then reduce heat. Cover tightly and cook over low heat until all liquid is absorbed (about 25 minutes). While rice is cooking, brown ground beef and drain. Season beef with salt and pepper. Place cabbage in boiling water and let stand two minutes. Drain cabbage and sprinkle with flour.

Spoon rice into two-quart straight-sided oven proof glass casserole. Layer cabbage, soured evaporated milk, ground beef, the reserved chopped tomatoes and cheese over rice. Cover and refrigerate overnight.

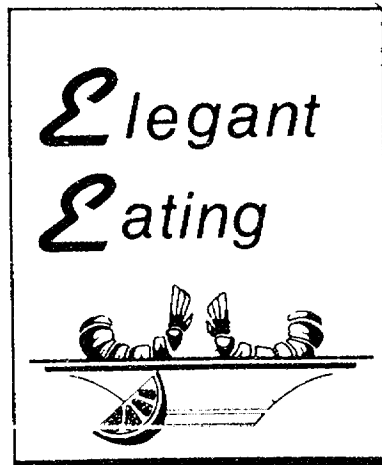

Bake uncovered in preheated 350-degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes. Makes six servings.

Calories about 325 per serving. Cholesterol about 47 mgs.

Excellent Tuna Casserole

2 cups thinly sliced carrots
3 leeks, sliced diagonally
3/4 pound broccoli, cut into florets
1 cup water

3 Tbsp. margarine
3 Tbsp. flour
1/4 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. marjoram
1/4 tsp. onion powder
1 1/2 cups skim milk
1 can (6 1/2 ounces) chunk light tuna, drained
2 tsp. lemon juice

2 Tbsp. grated Parmesan cheese

Combine carrots, leeks, broccoli and water in saucepan. Bring to boiling, cover and simmer five minutes or until carrots are crisp-tender, then drain.

Melt margarine in medium size saucepan. Stir in flour, salt, marjoram and onion powder until blended. Add milk gradually, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and bubbles. Stir in tuna and lemon juice. Combine drained cooked vegetables with tuna mixture. Pour into a shallow two-quart baking dish. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Bake uncovered in preheated 350-degree oven for 20 minutes or until bubbly. Makes four servings.

Calories about 256 per serving. Cholesterol about 31 mgs.

Burgundy Bean and Meat Stew

For added economy, save leftover beef and ham bones in your freezer to make this unusually good stew. Compliment with squares of hot corn bread.

16 ounces dry pinto beans (2 1/2 cups)
1 pound meaty beef bones or beef shank cross cuts
3/4 pound meaty ham bone or ham hock
1 clove garlic minced
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1/4 tsp. Italian seasoning
1 bay leaf

1 can (16 ounces) canned tomatoes, cut up
1 1/2 cups burgundy wine
1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
2 Tbsp. packed brown sugar

In Dutch oven combine beans and seven cups of water. Bring to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, two minutes. Remove from heat. Cover and let stand one hour. (Or, add beans to water; cover and let stand overnight.) Do not drain.

While meat bones are still quite cold, cut off every possible snippet of fat. Add beef bone, ham bone, garlic, salt, pepper, bay leaf. Bring to a boil. Cover and simmer for 1 1/2 hours, stirring occasionally. Remove bones. When cool enough to handle, cut off all lean meat and dice. Discard bones. Return meat to kettle. Add undrained tomatoes, burgundy, tomato sauce and brown sugar. Simmer, covered, about 45 minutes more or until beans are tender. Remove bay leaf. Mash beans slightly. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Makes 8 to 10 servings. Garnish with thinly sliced green pepper rings. Variables preclude accurate calorie count.

Greek Meat and Macaroni Bake

1 cup onion, finely chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1 Tbsp. vegetable oil
1 pound very lean ground lamb or lean ground beef
2 Tbsp. tomato paste
1 tsp. mint flakes, crumbled
1/4 tsp. cinnamon
1/4 tsp. rosemary
1/4 tsp. thyme
1/4 tsp. salt
Pinch of pepper
3 Tbsp. margarine
5 Tbsp. flour
1/4 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
1/8 tsp. ground mace
2 cups skim milk
1/2 pound elbow macaroni, cooked and drained
1 egg
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Saute the onion and garlic in oil in large non-stick skillet until onion is soft and lightly browned. Add lamb or beef, breaking up clumps with a spoon. Stir-fry about five minutes, just until meat is no longer pink, but do not brown. Add the tomato paste, mint flakes, cinnamon, rosemary, thyme, 1/4 tsp. salt and pepper. Turn heat to very low and cook mixture, uncovered, stirring occasionally, while preparing remainder of recipe.

Melt margarine in a large saucepan. Stir in the flour, the 1/4 teaspoon salt, pepper and mace; cook and stir one minute. Add skimmed milk, and cook, stirring constantly until sauce thickens and bubbles.

Stir 3/4 cup of the sauce into the cooked macaroni in a medium-sized bowl. Beat egg with the 1/2 teaspoon salt in a small bowl until foamy. Stir a little of the remaining sauce into the egg until blended, then return to the sauce remaining in the pan.

Oil a 9x9x2-inch baking dish. Layer mixture this way: Half the macaroni mixture, 2 tablespoons of the Parmesan, all of the meat mixture, pressing layer firmly onto macaroni layer, 2 tablespoons Parmesan, remaining macaroni mixture, 2 tablespoon Parmesan, the remaining sauce, and the remaining Parmesan.

Bake uncovered in a preheated 350-degree oven for 45 minutes or until bubbly and lightly browned. Remove from oven. Let stand for about 20 minutes before cutting into squares. Makes six servings.

Calories about 325 per serving. Cholesterol about 51 mgs.

Pork and Zucchini

2 Tbsp. margarine
1 1/2 pounds lean pork after removing all fat, cut into 1-inch cubes
2 medium onions, thinly sliced
2 cups beef broth
2 cloves garlic, minced
3/4 cup dried basil
1/2 tsp. dried marjoram
1/4 tsp. dried thyme
Salt to taste
1/4 tsp. black pepper
1 1/2 pounds zucchini, trimmed, cut into thin crosswise slices
3/4 cup plain, low-cal yogurt

1 tsp. cornstarch

In a non-stick skillet, melt margarine and saute the pork and onions until nicely browned. Transfer to 9x13-inch baking dish. Blend broth, garlic, basil, marjoram, thyme, salt and pepper. Pour over meat. Place in preheated 350-degree oven and bake for about 20 minutes. Remove baking dish from oven and stir in zucchini.

Cover and bake about 20 minutes or until meat is tender and zucchini is crisp-tender. With perforated spoon transfer meat and zucchini to serving dish and keep warm. Pour the juices from the baking dish into a small saucepan. Skim off any fat which may appear.

Over high heat boil juice, uncovered, until reduced to 1 1/2 cups. Mix the yogurt with the cornstarch until smooth. Stir into pan juices and cook gently, stirring constantly, until thickened and hot. Taste and adjust seasonings. Pour sauce over meat and zucchini.

Bulgur Ground Beef Casserole

1 pound very lean ground beef
1 cup chopped celery
1 large green pepper, chopped
1 medium onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
1 can (16 ounces) tomatoes, cut up
1 cup bulgur
1 cup water
1/3 cup raisins
1/4 cups shelled sunflower seeds
Grated cheese for topping (optional)

In skillet cook ground beef, celery, green pepper, onion, garlic, salt and pepper until meat is browned and vegetables are crisp-tender. Drain off excess fat. Stir in undrained tomatoes, bulgur, water, raisins and sunflower seed. Turn mixture into a two-quart au gratin dish or casserole. Bake, covered, in 375-degree oven for about 35 minutes or until bulgur is tender and mixture is very hot.

Peggy O'Connor

I'm worried . . .

I think it was Yogi Berra who once said: "You never know what you don't know, you know?" I've always tried to live by that advice. But since you never really know what you don't know, I worry sometimes.

What do I worry about?

I worry about some of the hockey fans in Grosse Pointe. I mean, when they come to the game on a 20-degree January night not wearing any socks (as I saw 15 or 16 South/North fans do a few weeks back) I wonder about their knowledge of the game.

I worry about the folks who throw coins, not to mention squid, at hockey games. It's not funny to throw things on the ice. Read my lips: IT'S NOT FUNNY TO THROW THINGS ON THE ICE. In the first place, the hockey players could get hurt. I don't even want to think about the possibility of what could happen to a person's knee, leg or ankle when his skate hits a coin embedded in the ice.

In the second place, the folks who throw octopi on the ice are really little more than copy-cats. See, there is a reason (albeit a weird one) behind Detroit Red Wings followers' tradition of tossing eight-legged creatures of the sea seaward. It has to do with the rich winning history the Wings possessed back in the 1940s and 1950s. Few people who attend Wings' games today — with or without a bag o' octopus in hand — are aware of the story behind the tradition. And I'd wager that none of the debris-tossing fans at the Jan. 10 North-South game knew much about it.

And in the third place, it really doesn't take much wit or humor, or intelligence really, to toss objects on the ice. I'm kind of disappointed. I'd always thought fans in these parts were a little more clever than that.

I worry about the people who worry about the Detroit Tigers' fortunes without Lance Parrish now that he's off seeking greener pastures. But remember: they didn't go too far in 1985 when they had him for a full season. Chances are, Lance would have retired from the Tigers in another two or three years anyway, so fans would have had to bite the bullet sooner or later.

I worry about making too much of University Liggett School's great start in basketball. Coaches get nervous when people start making a big deal about their teams, good or bad. But listen, when a team which won five games one year starts the next year at 8-0, that's news. When a team is getting superior performances from talented athletes like John Yancey, Kandia Milton and William Middlebrooks, it's news.

But I don't want to make too much of it. I worry about all those poor folks who are going to suffer painful injuries to their ankles and legs from jumping on and off the Red Wings' bandwagon. Seems you couldn't go anywhere a couple of days back without hearing somebody ask "Hey, how about my Red Wings?" Then they lost a couple in a row and bang — instant ignominy.

I worry when I start using words like "instant ignominy." Sounds like a hot breakfast cereal.

I worry about people who live in Cleveland. First they had to recover from the total shock of watching the Indians stay in first place for more than a blink last summer; then they had to endure the crushing, last-second loss of the Browns in the AFC final. All those depressed, anguished, heartbroken people living so close to a large body of water . . .

I'm worried that my decision to coach a South High hockey practice in February is going to ruin my amateur status.

Not to mention my weak ankles.

Think Jacques Demers is worried?

I worry about what the dinner-table discussion at my house is going to sound like in a few months. The person I am going into debt with to help pay off our wedding reception is now gainfully employed as a — gasp — sports editor.

I can see it now. We're going to be sitting around the table saying things like "Gee honey, you really passed the broccoli with a lot of intensity." And "Listen dear, we're really going to go into this wallpapering project 100 percent." Or "Sorry, Mom, Peggy is listed as 'probable' for the family get-together this weekend. She pulled a hamstring in warm-ups."

Sheesh. I'm worried. I don't think there's any way to de-program sports writers.

Volleyball update

Class, roster changes mark '87 teams

By Peggy O'Connor

University Liggett School returns its lineup, but changes from Class D to Class C. And the coaches at North, South and Our Lady Star of the Sea enter the new year with new faces on their roster. All in all, it should make for an interesting girls' volleyball season in Grosse Pointe. Here's a brief look at each team:

University Liggett

Many coaches would envy the Lady Knights' Shelley Owens; she's got all but one member of last year's district chamionship and Michigan Independent Athletic Conference runner-up team back this season. ULS definitely misses the strong hitting of Kara Van Dellen, but back to help ULS challenge MIAC favorite and reigning champ Southfield Christian are seniors Kathy Bianchi, Susan Cleek, Laurie Khelokian and Cindy Paul and sophomores Sylvia Ristic and Dana Warnez. They are joined by senior transfer student Delia Price, JV graduates Diann Imbricco and Shirley Kim and freshman Lexi Crain.

"We've been fairly consistent as far as setting up our offense. If we can do that throughout the season, I think we'll be very successful," Owens added.

ULS won its district last year, but finished second in the league behind Southfield Christian for the second straight season. This year, the girls have set a goal to change the order of that finish.

their girls' varsity volleyball teams in recent years. The Tunas have gotten off to 12-0 and 14-0 starts in previous seasons, but began this year with a 4-3 overall mark and a 2-2 record in the Catholic League.

"We've had a few problems, mainly with inconsistency. Slowly but surely we're ironing those out," said assistant coach Spindler. "Basically, it's been a lack of leadership. Nobody seems willing to take the lead out there on the floor. They're trying to lead by example, but in volleyball, you have to communicate out there."

The fact that this year's squad started out the season a bit different from those of previous seasons is a little frustrating for the coaches, Spindler said. "But I think that Val and I — who are opposites — are a good combination and between the two of us, we deal with the frustration," she added.

Senior Tracey Walker and junior Jeannie Purrenhage line up at the setter position for the Tunas. Hitters are Buffy Stumb, Kris Widgren, Kelly Kiefer, Bridget Sullivan and Beth Allor. Early in the season, Johnson and Spindler were experimenting, moving players around in different spots on the floor. It's important, Spindler says, for the girls to gain confidence while learning to play well in those positions they aren't accustomed to.

"Val and I see an improvement already," Spindler said. "And you know, in those years when we started off so well we peaked early, before the playoffs, really. I think that this year we're going to be late bloomers and peak at the right time."

Pontiac Catholic — which beat Star in the district finals last year — and St. Clement loom as the Tunas' biggest competition this season. Those teams, and the two early league losses won't make it any easier for Star to accomplish one of its goals for 1987: to win a divisional championship.

"We had both of those goals, too, and we couldn't put it away. That's another of our goals: to learn to put away the games when we've got the lead," Spindler said.

"We still have a possibility of winning the division, but somebody is going to have to beat St. Clement. Beyond that, we'd just like to improve as we go along, peak at state tournament time and maybe win a district."

Grosse Pointe South

Four matches into South's volleyball season, coach Cindy Sharpe said her squad was "playing a lot better now than in the first couple of games."

Part of the reason for South's improvement, she explained, was that two of her more inexperienced setters were coming along and relaxing a little more and that Sharpe herself could resume the three-setter offense she'd set up before top setter Chris Schulte left the lineup with an injury.

Schulte still can't start at setter, but she's back in the lineup, joined by setter-middle hitter Heather Imel and middle hitter Barb VanWingerden, co-captains; outside hitters Patty Hess and Megan Keller and setter Patty Pentecost. Front row starter Carrie Donaldson and back row specialists May Younes and Shannon Burns round out the lineup.

That team will try to capture what Sharpe called a "pretty weak" Eastern Michigan League championship and set its sights on winning the South's first district title in memory, she said.

"I think we'll do well this year. One thing I've noticed about this year's team is that we're putting people away. We allowed a total of five points in two matches. The girls seem to just go out there, do it and get out of there. Maybe they have to get to their homework or something," Sharpe said with a laugh.

Regina is again the area's top contender for a title in South's district. "They're good, but they are beatable. We should be able to play with them . . . and I think we will," Sharpe said.

"I think there's really not much doubt that we're pretty much the top team in the EML. Our big goal is to win the district. We don't want to look past teams we play before Regina and screw it up before we get there. We want that district title in memory."

ULS — led here by senior co-captain Kathy Bianchi (at net), Lexi Crain, Laurie Khelokian and Dana Warnez — moves up a class this year.

"We're tired of being runners-up," Owens said. "And we'd like to go beyond that and repeat as district champs and do better in the regionals. That will be a little more difficult this year because we've moved up to Class C."

Owens was concerned about the jump in classes at first. "Then I thought: shoot, we were runners-up when we were in Class C two years ago, so I think that if we pull together and play like I think we can, we will be able to be competitive."

Feeling fit

By Deanna Hawthorne

The key to aerobics:

Your target heart rate is your safe and effective exercise pulse. It's very individual, and the following formula, recommended by the American College of Sports Medicine, will help you exercise at the right pace for you, no matter what type of aerobic activity you select. It is the most effective training measurement for maximum cardiovascular and fat-burning benefits, taking into account your age and current level of fitness. You will need to know your age (no cheating!), fitness level and Resting Heart Rate.

TO FIND your Resting Heart Rate begin by finding your pulse at your lowest activity level (usually while still lying down when you first awaken). This may be taken on the thumb side of your wrist, palm up, or your carotid pulse (groove of your neck) using the first two fingers and pressing lightly, or by placing your hand over your heart. Take the pulse count for 15 seconds and multiply the number by 4 (to get a 60-second count). Try two consecutive days for an accurate count. (An indication of being fit is a lower resting heart rate after embarking on a regular program of aerobic exercise.)

Here's a sample formula for a 40-year-old beginning exerciser:

- 1) Subtract your age from 220. This is your Maximal Heart Rate (MHR)
- 2) Subtract your resting heart rate (RHR) from that figure. This gives your Heart Rate Reserve
- 3) Multiply your Heart Rate Reserve by: 60 percent to get Minimum Working Heart Rate; by 75 percent to get Optimum Working Heart Rate; and by 90 percent to get Maximum Working Heart Rate.

Sample: 220 (start)
-40 (age)
180 (MHR)
-72 (RHR)
108

108 x60% (*TZB)
65
+72 (Add RHR)
137 (*MTP)

*TZB—Target Zone Beginner)
*MTP—Minimum Target Pulse

The result of 137 divided by six is 22/23 beats per minute. Divide this last number which is your Target Heart Rate by six so you can take your pulse for just 10 seconds while exercising. If you find you're below your THR, move a little faster or stroke a little harder. If you're above, slow down a bit.

Remember: F-I-T for maximum fitness benefits. F is for frequency — three to five days per week; I is for intensity of training — at your Target Heart Rate; T is for time — 15 to 60 minutes of continuous aerobic activity. Lower intensity activity should be conducted over a longer period of time.

I hope you're doing well on your one-month family plan. Remember that aerobic activity is any activity that is rhythmic and aerobic (requiring oxygen) in nature, that uses large muscle groups, that can be maintained continuously: running, jogging, walking, hiking, swimming, skating, bicycling, rowing, cross-country skiing, rope skipping and various endurance game activities.

This week practice taking your Target Heart Rate while exercising and don't forget that cooling down slowly and safely lowers your pulse from your Target Heart Rate and helps prevent injuries. This is the ideal time to stretch. Next week we'll concentrate on some good cool-down stretches. Meanwhile, have fun with your fitness.

Test a diet before you try it, RD says

Consumers do not know how to distinguish fact from fallacy among the hundreds of diet books on the market, yet reliable information is available, according to a nutrition expert.

"Older adults, younger adults, and teenagers have so many diet books to choose from it's no wonder they're confused. Less than six percent are effective, almost 15 percent are dangerous, and most are not based on scientific fact," said Lisa Harris, a registered dietitian (RD) and editor of Current Diet Review, a new publication for health care professionals that evaluates diet books.

Harris said that in 1985 some 1,500 diets were on the market, excluding those printed in magazines and newspapers. As the number continues to rise, so does the potential for those who could suffer side effects from them. This, according to Harris, heightens the need for consumers to properly evaluate diets before following them.

"On the surface, many diets appear perfectly logical. Yet unless you know what to look for, you may not realize they could be unsafe," she said. Harris cited the "Fit for Life" diet as an example of how diet books can be misleading.

"There's relatively little harm in eating foods in a certain order or combination, even if that theory is not scientifically based. However, I do consider it dangerous to claim the diet is safe for pregnant women yet advise against drinking milk or taking calcium supplements," she cautioned.

Jane Fonda's latest book is an example of how diet books can be confusing, according to Harris, who also is a nutrition specialist at the San Bernardino City Schools in San Bernardino, Calif.

"Her approach is excellent... in theory. She talks about eating foods high in fiber and in complex carbohydrates. But her specific daily recommendations are relatively low in those areas," Harris pointed out.

"Most people who write diet books are not qualified to do so," she added. "The authors of the Fit for Life diet have a degree from an unaccredited institution, yet you would never know it unless you really did some digging."

HARRIS SAID the root of the problem is, "While our country has the world's greatest abundance of food, most people know very little about nutrition." She offered general guidelines on how to scrutinize diets before following them:

- Let the sensible meaning of the word "diet" be your guiding force: proper eating, not improper starvation. Depriving yourself of food could lead to malnutrition, anorexia and bulimia.

- Remember that proper dieting means eating a variety of highly nutritious, low-calorie foods. Potatoes, cereals and breads, for example, are part of a well-balanced diet and are less fattening than most people realize.

- Don't be turned off by diets that promise only one- or two-pound weight loss per week. That is the recommended average given by most doctors and dietitians. Studies show that the faster weight is lost, the faster it is regained.

- Steer clear of diets that over-emphasize one type of food or food category. The body requires a balance of protein, fat, and carbohydrates. Too much of any of them could increase the risk of serious illness such as heart disease or cancer.

- Evaluate the author's credentials. Ask for his or her resume directly, or write the publisher. (Reliable sources will have a degree in nutrition or medicine from an accredited institution.) You may also want a second opinion from an RD or a doctor at a local hospital or university.

"One of the most overlooked, yet important, ideas about diets is the fact that they are very personal. Everyone has likes and dislikes plus different metabolism, levels of activity and health concerns. The notion that one diet can help millions of people is not just naive, but potentially dangerous," Harris said.

Harris founded Current Diet Review in 1986 after observing adverse effects of and confusion caused by diets on hundreds of patients she has worked with over the past 10 years. The bi-monthly newsletter is the only publication of its type, devoted exclusively to diet book reviews.

For further information about diet books or nutrition, consumers can write to or call their state dietetic association.

Eat smart

By Mary Busse

Taming the sweet tooth

If we had lived back in the times of Marco Polo, it is highly unlikely that refined white sugar would have been considered a "monster" in our daily eating habits. One pound of sugar would have cost us the equivalent of about $220 U.S. So it is no wonder that sugar was served at the most special of occasions and easy to understand why people then could control their "sweet tooth."

Thanks to the introduction of sugar cane seed to the West Indies, sugar plantations began to flourish. As the quantities produced went up, prices fell and the average person could now afford to cater to that sweet craving. Is this "sweet tooth" all in our minds? The fact is, before we are born, we have the capacity to love sweets.

This urge towards sweets is perfectly natural. It is Mother Nature's way of making mother's breast milk sweet and attractive to the infant. No other taste sensation is needed for survival. Human breast milk is just the right sweetness for the baby, also supplying all the necessary nutrients.

But this normal desire for sweets can quickly go crazy. White sugar is 2½ times sweeter than the lactose (milk sugar) in human milk. And it seems that once this is triggered in a lot of us, the craving for sweeter and sweeter foodstuffs increases. U.S. sugar consumption is running about 120 pounds per person, per year; 70 percent of those pounds are consumed in manufactured foods!

All green plants manufacture some form of the carbohydrate called sugar in their leaves. Sugar is a general term describing a large number of organic compounds with varying degrees of sweetness. Our refined sugars today are made from the sugar cane plant or the sugar beet.

In their original form these plants contained a balance between the sugar, starch and cellulose, (plant fiber). The plant starches and the fiber content both help to assure that our bodies assimilate and smoothly burn the food we have eaten. Refined white sugar races through our systems, lacking in vitamins and minerals and with no nutritional value. What was once a highly effective three-player team is now one hot-shot (sugar) wreaking havoc on our bodies.

Consider other plants that were originally complex carbohydrates, then altered to refine the sugar they contained: dextrose — taken from corn; corn syrup — a liquified version of dextrose; fructose — sugars taken from fruits, but also that which is a manufactured fructose created by adding bacteria to cornstarch to produce dextrose and fructose. Fructose is supposed to be easier for the human body to digest, but we must keep in mind it is still a refined product, rather than the original complex carbohydrate.

Sugar has gotten a bad reputation because it seems to be crowding out the many other essential ingredients we need to establish sound nutrition. Some of us are much more susceptible to sugar addiction. The more we have, the more we need to get that "sweet" fix. It is encouraging to know that the sweet habit can be broken.

- Examine the breakfast cereals you buy. Many are nothing but sugar packaged in eye-catching boxes. Try cooking up a bowl of oatmeal, cream of wheat or farina for a healthy change.

- We all are aware of the sugars in candies, cookies and junk food snacks. But sugar is also high on the list of ingredients of foods we don't consider sweet. Check out peanut butter, hot dogs, mayonnaise, ketchup, frozen pizzas, frozen dinners and salad dressings. These are just a few of the items that contain added sugars.

- Try substituting fresh fruits and juices for that afternoon jettai we often experience. Begin to introduce more foods that offer you "stick-to-the-ribs" energy. Foods such as whole-grain breads and cereals, crunchy vegetables and fruits can offer a more subtle but satisfying sweetness to our lives.

Next week: sugar substitutes.

Shores' Holley marks ski Hall of Fame

"Hot Wax" Holley is in the Hall of Fame.

Danforth Holley, of Grosse Pointe Shores, was inducted into the Ski Magazine Hall of Fame Dec. 5 at Steamboat Springs, Colo. The recognition is made annually to those who have made major contributions to the ski industry.

And that description fits Holley perfectly. He is credited with developing the first fiberglass ski, the famous "L-shaped" edge and the plastic snow used by the U.S. Ski Team and others for training and ski jumping.

Holley has also developed more than 30 wax products and removers for downhill and cross country skis; all of those are sold under his name. He is currently promoting Holley Speed Glaze, a coating which reduces friction and creates greater speed for all watercraft, especially fiberglass sailboats.

Holley is co-author and distributor of the Michigan Cross Country Ski Atlas, which has opened up all of Michigan's state parks and recreation areas to cross country skiing. As one of the first professional cross country ski instructors in Michigan, Holley instituted ski programs at the Grosse Pointe Academy and in the Grosse Pointe schools. He has also taught at the Neighborhood Club and for groups at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, and is presently working on a cross country program for University Liggett School. Holley also set up the cross country course at the Country Club of Detroit.

The 71-year-old Holley is still an avid skier. He won the White Pine Stampede in the 50 and over class in 1979 and two winters ago, was first in his division in his own "Holley Cup" Invitational 10K cross country race, held at the Otsego Ski Club in Gaylord annually.

Holley was a director of the U.S. Ski Association (Central Division) for 10 years and is an Olympic fund-raiser for the midwest area U.S. Ski Association. He has acted as an official at the Federation International Ski World Championship in Chamonix, France. And his great love for skiing led "Hot Wax" — as he is fondly known — to co-found the North American Vasalopet, styled after the famous cross country race in Sweden.

Clinic focus is shin splints

Shin splints — that familiar pain in the leg experienced by recreational athletes of all types — is a term used to describe several causes of lower leg pain resulting from a variety of sports and everyday activities.

But shin splints can be avoided if proper precautions are taken. Tim Reilly, a certified athletic trainer for CHAMP (Cottage Hospital Athletic Medicine Program) tells how to decrease or eliminate shin splints and other leg and foot injuries in a free community program, "Athletic Shoes and Shin Splints," on Wednesday, Jan. 28, from 7 to 9 p.m., in the lower level boardrooms of Cottage Hospital. Cottage Hospital is located at 159 Kercheval Avenue.

Reilly will also investigate the relationship between proper shoes and the potential for athletic injury. An expert in athletic footwear will describe some of the shoes available in stores and answer questions regarding construction of proper fit.

The program is free, but reservations are requested since seating is limited. Call 881-1800.

Get slim

Those determined to lose weight in 1987 can find support through Harper-Grace Hospitals' "Trim Shop," an eight-week, professionally supervised weight reduction program designed to promote healthy eating habits. Through group support, participants will learn to eat sensibly, set realistic goals and lose extra pounds. "Trim Shop" will be offered at Assumption Greek Cultural Center, 21800 Marter Rd., Grosse Pointe, Tuesdays, Jan. 27 to March 17, from 7 to 9 p.m. Fee is $45.

Enrollment is limited to 25 for each group. To register or for more information, call 745-8983.

Calling all rowers

Rowers and potential rowers who are interested in competing in the sport in the upcoming 1987 spring season should come to the Detroit Boat Club this Saturday, Jan. 24. There will be a team meeting at 8:30 a.m. at the club on Belle Isle.

Both experienced rowers and high school youth who want to participate are encouraged to attend. For more information, call Chuck Kreger at 773-3179 or Dr. Richard Bell at 559-5824.

Cagers win one; icers rebound

By Josh Abbott
North High

North's varsity basketball team split a pair of games last week to run its record to 5-3.

On Jan. 13, the cagers traveled to Fraser, nipping the Ramblers, 54-46. North trailed throughout much of the game, but a 20-5 run in the fourth quarter gave the Norsemen their fifth win. Senior guard C.J. Anderson sank seven of eight free throws in the final three minutes to seal the victory. Junior center Karl Schultz paced North with 16 points and senior forward Scott Reiter had eight rebounds.

Last Friday night, the Norsemen went on the road to tangle with unbeaten league foe Clintondale, coming up on the short end of a 71-52 final.

North, which trailed by 12 at half-time, cut that margin to six midway through the third quarter. But the Dragons pulled away for their eighth straight win. Senior guard Chris Dudeck and Schultz each scored 11 points; Reiter had 10.

The JV squad raised its record to 5-3, with a 60-39 win over Fraser and a close 53-51 win over Clintondale. Against Fraser, Scott Clein scored 14 points and Kevin McCarron added 12. Matt Brady put in 22 points against Clintondale. Clein and McCarron had 12 and 11 points, respectively.

Icers rebound

Things didn't look good for the North varsity hockey team when it was shocked by Lakeview, 3-1, at the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena on Jan. 14. But the Norsemen bounced back on Saturday night with a 4-3 victory over No. 2-ranked Ann Arbor Pioneer.

Against Lakeview, North was flat against a pumped up team. Lakeview had a new goalie from the AAA ranks and he turned away North shots all night long. Dan Spitz got North's only goal.

The Norsemen brought a whole new attitude into their game on Saturday. Rob Marshall took a nice pass from John Andary and gave North a 1-0 lead in the first minute. Link Bessert's goal made it 2-0 and freshman goalie Matt Krieg played very well, turning aside dangerous shots.

Bob Poulos put North up 3-1 on a power play goal in the second period, but Ann Arbor Pioneer came out fired up for the final period and tied the game at 3-3. Senior netminder Matt Dennis came on and shut the door the rest of the way, with help from the defense. Brian Nettle scored the winning goal with five minutes to go.

'Amazing' Knights climb to 8-0

The University Liggett School varsity basketball team improved its record to 8-0 by trashing Warren Bethesda Christian, 66-31, last week. The game was dictated by the Knights' aggressive, swarming defense.

"We set the pace with our tough man-to-man, but we ripped the game open with our trapping 1-2-2 zone," said Coach Chuck Wright. "This was the hardest we've played all year. It was a very satisfying game."

Gymnasts qualify

North's varsity gymnastics team began the 1987 season on Jan. 9 with a win over Royal Oak Kimball, 117.15-105.55. The win qualified North for the regionals.

South High

The Blue Devil varsity hockey team split a pair of contests last week, losing to Southgate Anderson, 4-3, and bouncing back to top Lakeview, 8-5. South is currently 5-3-2 in the Michigan Metro League, 9-4-2 overall.

Scoring for the Devils against Southgate were Pat Clavet, Jim Smith and Jerry Bourke. Jeff Lefebvre, Andy Roy and Rodney Goin drew assists.

Against Lakeview on Jan. 17, senior John Nicholson opened the scoring with his unassisted goal. Andy Busse made it 2-0 with a shorthanded goal from Bourke. Roy and Lefebvre added the Devils' other first period goals, from Bourke and Busse. Tim Jerome, Clavet and Roy (two) closed out the scoring. Roy, Goin and junior Bill Huntington (two) earned assists.

The Devils were ranked No. 2 in the MML-East Division as of Jan. 13 and held four of the top five scoring positions. Roy was the East's top scorer, followed by Huntington, second. Jerome was fourth and Lefebvre, fifth. Also, freshman Kevin Nesler was rated the No. 2 goaltender in the division.

South hosts Port Huron at 7:20 p.m. this Saturday, Jan. 24, at the Grosse Pointe Community Rink.

Bruce leads cagers

South's varsity basketball team topped Eastern Michigan League rival Anchor Bay, 68-55, last week. Senior Sean Bruce lead South with 30 points, five assists and five steals. Sophomore Andy Ament chipped in with 10 points. South shot 56 percent, marking the first time this season that the Blue Devils shot 50 percent or better from the floor.

Tankers fall

The varsity swim team lost a close one to a strong Dearborn team, 49-34. Taking firsts for South were junior Bill Thompson in the 100 and 200 free, sophomore Paul Wilson in the 100 back, and the 400 freestyle relay team of Bill Thompson, Ian Thompson, freshman Jim Mello and junior Aaron Smith.

South bounced back with a 121-40 victory over Roseville on Jan. 15. Wilson, the Thompsons and junior Chris Nevison combined for a win in the medley relay. Freshman Jamie Nevison won the 200 free; freshman Craig Winingier took the 200 IM and sophomore Brad Stedem won the 50 free.

Other firsts included freshman Ken MacLean in diving, I. Thompson in the 100 fly, C. Nevison in the 100 free and Wilson in the 100 breast. Bill Thompson touched first in the 100 back, earning a state qualifying time. (By Heidi Heilmann)

RAIDERS-TRENTON

The Raiders skated to a 2-1 victory in this exciting battle of undefeated teams. Rick Gokenbach scored the winning goal on a tip-in of a shot from the point by Christensen. P. Brennan scored the other goal; Anway and Bob Rahaim drew assists. Jamie Bufalino was spectacular in goal, turning aside 14 shots.

RAIDERS-LIVONIA

After suffering a 3-2 defeat, the Raiders met Livonia in the championship game that same afternoon, winning 2-0. After a scoreless first period highlighted by Bufalino's steady goaltending, the Raiders took the lead when P. Brennan scored on a pretty passing play from Anway and O'Malley. At the six minute mark of the third period, Tony Rubino broke in alone after taking a pass from David Puls. A Livonia defenseman pulled him down and Grosse Pointe was awarded a penalty shot. Rubino went around the charging Livonia goalie and banged the puck home to give the Raiders a 2-0 win.

The Pointers had to kill off a five-on-three situation late in the game, with Bufalino making outstanding saves. The game ended with Livonia buzzing around the net. Monroe's now returns to league play, where they are undefeated.

'Native Son' examines inequality of races

By Michael Chapp

Bigger Thomas (Victor Love), a 19-year-old black boy from the roughest part of south-side Chicago, sits in the posh living room of the man for whom he works as a butler. Completely ill at ease in the surroundings, he fidgets with anxiety while his boss, a WASP-ish type business magnate, prepares to show him around. This scene typifies the theme of "Native Son."

Superficially, it is a story about what happens when Bigger accidentally kills the businessman's daughter. In actuality though, it plays as an essay on race relations and the true nature of equality.

Director Jerrold Freedman, basing his film on the novel by Richard Wright, pulls no punches in making his point. The film asserts boldly that America is not the egalitarian society it thinks it is. In making that point, however, some of the dramatic integrity of the story is sacrificed.

From the beginning, the film develops Bigger as a quick-tempered, hot-headed victim of society. He lies to and steals from his mother, he threatens to kill his friends, and he contemplates robbing a local store.

But he also manages to get a job as a butler for a rich family across town — a businessman, his blind wife and their college-age daughter who likes to think of herself as a Communist. Bigger fits in nicely at his job. He needs work and the family needs a "colored" boy that they can patronize.

The girl makes an attempt at treating Bigger as an equal. One evening while Bigger is chaffering her, she instructs him to pick up her boyfriend instead. The boyfriend, a devout Communist, persuades Bigger to let him drive. They insist on accompanying Bigger to a south-side restaurant and they make half-hearted attempts to talk his language. One gets the feeling though, that their cordiality is some type of self-serving exercise in ego-stroking rather than something they feel in their hearts.

Nevertheless, Bigger goes along with it. He has no choice. By the time he gets the daughter home, she is in a drunken stupor and Bigger has to take her to her room; so that her parents won't find out. Just as Bigger gets her tucked in for the night, the girl's blind mother comes in to make sure everything is all right. Bigger, afraid that he will be in trouble if anyone finds out he is in the room, muffles the girl with a pillow so that she can't talk.

And in doing so, he accidentally kills her.

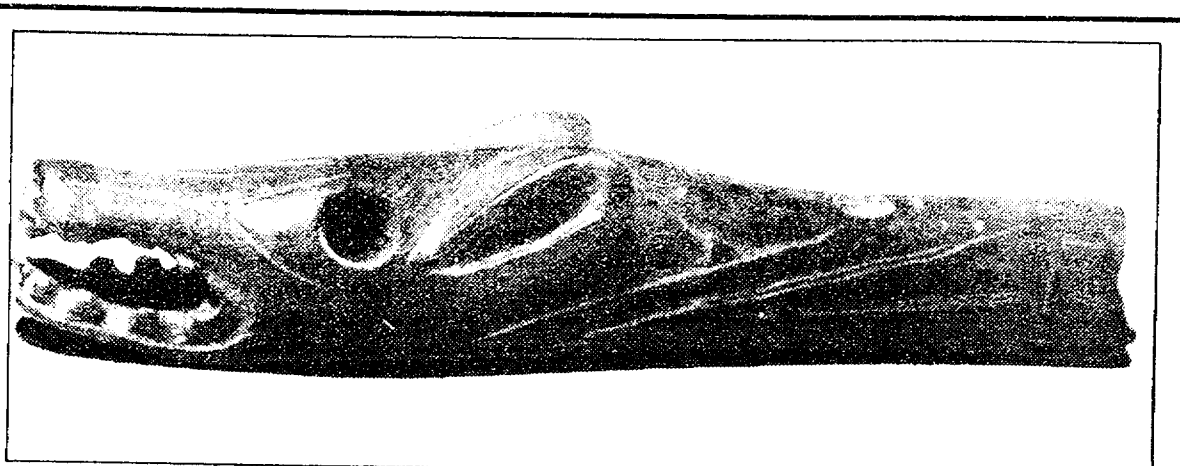

Things go from bad to worse.

The film's powerful message is that, from the beginning, Bigger was in a no-win situation. One sympathizes, though not completely, with the quandary Bigger finds himself in. Bigger, the film asserts, is really just a victim of the environment in which he was raised. The main argument of the piece is that there are misguided, uninformed people like Bigger everywhere. Society perpetuates the schism between whites and blacks, and Bigger's mistake is really an echo of society's failure to do anything about the inequality of its people.

Though the film is a noteworthy one, the film does not go about presenting it in an efficient way. The story borders on the ridiculous throughout, and more than once viewers may feel as if they're watching a comedy instead of a serious drama. Only in the last few minutes does the point become obvious, and even then it gets bogged down in its own rhetoric.

A special acting kudo should go to Oprah Winfrey, who plays Bigger's mother. She is given one big scene in which to stretch her acting talent, and in that scene she is tremendous. Her performance alone makes the film worth seeing.

Bigger is not necessarily better, the film tells us. And the fault is our own. It's a message worth thinking about; the story flaws of the film notwithstanding.

Polar bear head

... is one of the works in "Ancient Eskimo Ivories of the Bering Strait" an exhibition of a classic but little-known native North American art tradition. The free exhibition opens at the Detroit Institute of Arts Tuesday, Jan. 27, and continues through Sunday, March 22. The 167 sculptures originated between the third century B.C. and 1100 A.D. They were created by prehistoric people of the Arctic living near the narrow body of water that divides Alaska and Siberia.

'Bedroom Window' is filled with suspense

By Marian Trainor

As tightly wrapped as a good cigar, "Bedroom Window" keeps viewers on the edge of their seats with a plot that moves toward an exciting end without any unnecessary incidents to mar the suspense.

Without violence, novice director Curtis Hanson weaves a scary, intriguing film out of a tangled web of near-truths, misled loyalty and cold calculated murder.

It begins when Terry Lambert, (Steve Guttenberg), a young architect has an affair with his boss's wife, Sylvia, (Isabella Huppert).

Their rendezvous is interrupted one night when she hears a scream outside Guttenberg's window. She rushes to the window in time to see a young woman being assaulted. Huppert's screams scare the attacker off but not before she gets a good look at him and he looks up and sees her in the window. Guttenberg does not see the incident. He is in the bathroom when it happens.

They know they should report what has happened to the police, but for obvious reasons they can't. That decision changes when a girl is brutally murdered that same night not far from Guttenberg's apartment. Guttenberg volunteers to say that he was the witness.

It appears to be a good solution. Hubbert carefully coaches Guttenberg on the attacker's appearance — young, palefaced, red hair cut in a ducktail style.

Guttenberg sees a man who fits the description in the police lineup. The suspect has a record of rape and is capable of murder. Yet he can't bring himself to positively identify him.

The story escalates into a series of scary and downright sit-on-the-edge-of-your seat happenings.

Guttenberg of "Common Ground" and "Cocoon" is credible as the young yuppie who enjoys his freedom and fun. Huppert is glamorous, seductive and vivacious.

While the cast is adequate, it is the story, however, that is the star attraction of this film. The audience doesn't lose interest.

Edward Albee drama next at Hilberry

"A Delicate Balance," Edward Albee's 1967 Pulitzer prize-winning drama, opens at Wayne State University's Hilberry Theatre Thursday, Feb. 12, following previews Feb. 6 and 7, and continues through April 24.

"A Delicate Balance" is a poetic work that touches upon the conflict between friendship and the need for privacy, and is a probing examination of the illusion that freedom of choice is never lost.

The cast includes Marilyn Mays as Agnes, Kenneth Umland as her husband Tobias, and Michelle Felten and Steve McCue as their best friends, Edna and Harry.

For ticket information, call the Hilberry Theatre box office, Cass and Hancock, Detroit, 577-2972.

And "My Sister Eileen" presents a whole assortment of zany characters Aug. 7 through Sept. 12. The company winds up the season with a spooky romantic comedy "Gramercy Ghost," Oct. 2 through Nov. 14.

The Missing LINC

Linking Individuals to Needs in the Community is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to coordinate needs with resources. This is accomplished by placing goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of Metropolitan Detroit charitable agencies. Operating since 1971, LINC is proud of the accomplishments it has made and strives to increase its resource base. If you have recyclable items, no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100 with your donation. KEEP IT MOVING!

1C. PRAYERS

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who show me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in perpetual glory. Amen.
Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as your favor has been granted. Thank you for favors received. M.R.

WINTER BIRD FEEDING TIPS

Winter bird feeding is most successful when we know the specific needs of different birds. We can attract more birds to our yards if we use a variety of foods and feeders. Feeders will attract most birds if they are located in a sheltered location in or near trees, bushes, or buildings. Seed can also be scattered on the ground in snow-free areas.

GRAIN FEEDERS
Grains most popular for bird feeding include sunflower seeds, corn, milo, and millet. Black, oil-type sunflower seeds and white proso millet are probably the best and most popular seeds to attract Goldfinches, Blue Jays, Cardinals, Black-capped Chickadees, Evening Grosbeaks, Pine Siskins, Purple Finches, Pine Grosbeaks, and White-breasted Nuthatches. The small, black, oil-type sunflower seeds are preferred by most over the larger, black stripe or gray stripe sunflower seeds.
Either ear corn, shelled corn or cracked corn is popular among Blue Jays, House Sparrows, Starlings, and Pheasants. Milo is preferred by House Sparrows, Pine Siskins, and Tree Sparrows. Millet is preferred by House Sparrows, Dark-eyed Juncos, and Tree Sparrows. Oats are most popular for House Sparrows. Cardinals have an affinity for squash seeds. Wheat is a fair to good food for House Sparrows, Pine Siskins, Redpolls, Dark-eyed Juncos, Starlings, and Tree Sparrows.

SUET FEEDERS
Suet is a nutritious food for Brown Creepers, Downy Woodpeckers, Hairy Woodpeckers, Red-bellied Woodpeckers, Red-breasted Nuthatches, Pileated Woodpeckers, and White-breasted Nuthatches. Black-capped Chickadees also eat suet.
Suet feeders can be made by boring holes in a small log, filling the holes, and suspending the log. Suet can also be hung from a tree in a cloth mesh bag, or onion sack. Suet is available at meat counters in supermarkets.

OTHER FOODS
Bacon drippings will be eaten by woodpeckers, chickadees, and nuthatches. Peanut butter will be enjoyed by woodpeckers, chickadees, juncos, nuthatches, cardinals, and Brown Creepers.

THISTLE FEEDERS
Thistle seed is another selective way to feed native songbirds. It's an excellent food for Redpolls, Purple Finches, Pine Siskins, and Goldfinches. Thistle feeders are available commercially.

GRIT
Sand or grit is necessary in the gizzards of birds to help grind up the seeds they eat. Mix into the food or provide it at another location.

WINTER BIRD BATH
You can increase the attractiveness of your back yard for winter birds by maintaining open water in a heated bird bath.

FEEDING SCHEDULE
Place feeders out in mid-September to attract winter residents as they move into your area. Continue feeding until mid-April.

PROBLEM ANIMALS
Squirrels may present a problem at bird feeders. They can scare birds away, eat a large amount of expensive seed, and waste seed by scattering it out of the feeder. Some commercial feeders have a counter-weight which closes the feeder when a squirrel sits on it. If a feeder is placed on a pole, a tin, circular-shaped shield often deters them.

Center Ice in the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association...

The Little Caesars tournament, the Talons played the Redford Blackhawks to a 1-1 tie. Redford took an early lead on a first period goal but midway through the third period Sucher scored after taking a perfect pass from teammate J.J. Lewandowski.

Squirt Division

The Talons played four games in December. They started with a 7-2 loss to St. Clair Shores. Mike Hendrie had three goals and Jim Andary, one. Things improved quickly with an 8-1 shellacking of Flint. Andary scored four goals and Hendrie, Rob Wiczorkowski, Donny Tocco and Phil Descamps each scored one. Assists were earned by Ken Doptis, Andy Baskel, Brad Klein, Steve Solaka, and Hendrie (four).

After a 2-1 loss to Port Huron, the Talons returned home to play the Lansing No. 2 squad and won 5-2. Andary and Hendrie had two goals each and Doptis added the other with an assist by R. Wiczorkowski. Brian Jeffries and Joe Pierce played well on defense.

The Talons beat Livingston County, 8-6. After falling behind 5-3 in the second period the Grosse Pointers had a five goal outburst in the third period. R. Wiczorkowski and Andary had hat tricks; Descamps and Hendrie scoring the other two goals. Hendrie also had five assists and Scotty Wiczorkowski and Andy Baskel were among the many more receiving assists.

The next night the Talons entertained the other Lansing contingent and shut them out, 12-0. Andy Brewer got the shutout in goal. Andary scored four, R. Wiczorkowski added three more and Jeffries, Baskel, Tocco and Joe Pierce added single tallies. Klein skated strongly in his first league game back from a broken collarbone.

RED WINGS-SCS

Jay Ricci and Chris Crain each scored for the Red Wings as they tied St. Clair Shores, 2-2. Assisting on Ricci's goal was Greg Ryan; Jeff Adams and Eric Kisskalt assisted on Crain's goal. Kenny McIntyre was outstanding in the nets for the Wings. Skating hard and moving fast were Peter Anthony Brown, Jon-Paul Sweda, Andy Lee and Kip Gotfredson.

RED WINGS-SHAMROCKS

The Red Wings topped the Shamrocks 5-0. Scoring started in the second period off the stick of Adams from Kisskalt. Kisskalt closed out the period with his second goal of the game; drawing the assists were Gotfredson and Crain. Adams, Ricci and Augustine Yofe each lit up the scoreboard for the Wings in the third period assisted by Crain, Gotfredson and Amy Kendall. McIntyre was brilliant in goal for the Wings, earning the shutout. Jordan Jones, Greg Ryan, Tom Waldron, John Wise and Weston Norton played well.

Bantam Division

CHIEFS-SAGINAW

The Chiefs participated in the International Silverstick Tournament in Midland over the New Year's weekend, winning the opener, 11-0. Netminder Jeff Blum earned his first shutout of the season in this penalty-free contest for the Chiefs. Jim Alderton, Brad Russell, Mike Kisskalt (two), Brendan Rohan (two), Mike Watkins, Kevin Nugent (two), Eddie Barbieri and Vince Palazzolo scored the goals; John Olmsted, Brad Hea, Nugent (two), Russell (two), Scott Soule, Palazzolo (two), Barbieri (two), Pete Cueter and Juan Ganum assisted. John McGlone and Jack McSorley played very well, working tirelessly at both ends of the ice and making plays to start scoring drives.

CHIEFS-WARREN

The Chiefs came out on the short end of the 5-2 final in this tough, fact-paced game. After a slow start, the Chiefs trailed, 3-0, but came back with goals by Nugent and Russell from Russell, Kisskalt (two) and Ganum. After some close scoring opportunities, the defense got caught up ice and Warren increased its lead, despite the fact that Grosse Pointe had the edge in shots, 26-19.

CHIEFS-MIDLAND

The Chiefs won this thriller in overtime, 3-2. After a scoreless first period, the Chiefs took the lead on a goal by Kisskalt from linemates Russell and Nugent. Four minutes into the third period, the score was knotted a 1-1, but Midland took the lead just a minute later. With one minute to go in the game, Barbieri stormed into the slot, put a sharp deke on Midland's goalie and scored the tying goal. After a one-minute break, overtime began and the Chiefs were playing shorthanded. But they gained possession of the puck in Midland's zone and a determined Kisskalt finished off the play by lifting the puck past the Midland goaltender to give the Grosse Pointe squad the victory.

CHIEFS-FLAMES

The Chiefs and Flames renewed their battle to be the Grosse Pointe district representatives in the state playoffs. The Chiefs came out on top in this one, 3-1. John Olmsted scored two goals and Eddie Barbieri got the other for the victors. Brad Hea, Jim Alderton, Brad Russell and Barbieri drew assists. The Flames' Frank Lucido scored on a pass from Derek Field.

CHIEFS-KNIGHTS

Chiefs' netminder, Jeff Blum, earned his second shutout of the season as he sparked in goal helping his team to a 5-0 victory. John Olmsted scored early in the game off an assist by Jack McSorley. Mike Kisskalt next scored. Jim Alderton, Brad Hea, John McGlone, and Pete Cueter held off the Kings while the Chiefs were shorthanded; Olmsted then increased the lead assisted by Barbieri. Brendan Rohan finished the scoring by knocking in a puck following a fine effort by Mike Watkins and Juan Ganum.

FLAMES-FRASER

The Flames beat the Fraser Astros, 7-0. In the first period the Flames could only put one goal in the net. Jim Bunn, the Flames goalie, gained a rare assist by passing a loose puck to Andy Bond who fed a perfect pass to Renato Roxas who scored. The second period saw the Flames explode for three straight goals by Paul Cavazos, Adam Tanielian and Roxas. Tanielian, Frank Lucido, Jim Osiwala, and Dan Strader assisted. In the third stanza Tanielian went on a tear, scoring three goals ably assisted by Bond, Lucido, Dan Grundman and Derek Field (two).

FLAMES-ULS KNIGHTS

The Flames drew first blood on Tanielian's goal off a centering pass by Osiwala, then Lucido took passes from Roxas and Grundman to skate in alone on the Liggett goalie and slip it under his arm for a two-goal advantage. But the ULS Knights fought back and finally Fred Bellamy lifted the puck over the prone Bunn. Before the second period ended Osiwala put the Flames back in front by two goals — assisted by Tanielian — for a 3-1 win.

FLAMES-RAIDERS

The Flames and the St. Clair Shores Raiders played to a rare 0-0 tie.

FLAMES-FRASER

The Flames traveled to Fraser to meet the Astros for their second game within a week and won 8-1. Nick Black rifled a shot from the blue line which beat the Astros' netminder and seconds later he almost duplicated the feat. Andy Vyletel emerged from a scoring drought using a nifty pass from Cavazos to put the Flames up 2-0. Before the period was over Lucido and Blake Crawford combined to give the Flames a three-goal advantage. Smith opened the second period with a goal on Cavazos' second assist of the night.

Cavazos, Lucido (two) and Tanielian scored in the third period. Fields, Grundman, Tanielian (two) and Bond assisted.
