Historical society begins inventory of Grosse Pointe

Expansion under way

Library architect gets started

By Narrcy Parmenter

With the selection of an architect for expansion of the Grosse Pointe libraries, preliminary designs should be ready by March. That timetable would clear the way for a vote on a bond issue in June, if the school board decides to ask the public that

The board voted Monday to hire the Ann Arbor architectural firm of Osler & Milling, the architects who prepared the original study that recommended the expansion.

"It was a very, very difficult decision," said Jon Gandelot, chairman of the selection committee, last week. "We made the decision on the basis that Osler Milling had a leg up on the other firm in knowing our system . . . but we could have taken either of the two finalists and been satisfied."

Until the architects prepare a drawing with cost estimates, the school board will not know how large a bond issue to ask the voters for. But Gandelot said he is hopeful that the issues will appear on the June ballot with the regular school board election.

'Unless the drawing is a turkey, which I'm confident it won't be, we could be ready," he said. "We don't have much time to play with. But I'd like to get it on the June ballot - it would save the schools about $10,000 (the cost of holding a separate elec-

The 11-member committee met seven times and interviewed six firms, with extra questioning of the two finalists, Gandelot said. During that same period, the library staff was already at work figuring out space requirements and work flow.

"We felt (Osler & Milling) worked best with the library staff," Gandelot told the board last week. "They have a good reputation for being able to listen to clients. And they respect the Marcel Breuer building's significance."

Maintaining the integrity of the Central Library's architecture has been a major issue in any discussion of expansion. Actually, the committee wasn't unanimous in believing that the building is an architectural jewel, according to library Director Charles Hanson, but did agree that any Breuer building has an historical significance that should be protected.

And apparently, the architects

"They're so excited, they've already done some drawings," Hanson said. "The Breuer design is not restrictive. They'll probably try to turn the original building into a sort of public reading room - which is probably what Breuer

There have been fears that an expanded library would take South High School's athletic field, but Gandelot said no decisions have been made yet. "There's been talk of putting additional parking along Kercheval (which would take a narrow strip of the field)," he said. "We hope we won't take much - if any of the athletic field."

Meanwhile, the library staff is lems by putting hundreds of infrequently used books in "remote storage" - in the Richard School attic. Hanson said the move won't take the books out of circulation altogether, but it will mean delays of several days or a week for any patron wanting to read them.

"We don't like having to do it," he said, "but it seems to be the only solution at this point. And we aren't saying the patron can't get the book." Boxing the books will mean the library can put away the book tables in the main

Legislators critique Blanchard's address

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Things begin to cloud over a bit, when in Michigan politics, the Republicans start agreeing with the Democrats, and the Democrats are at odds with an incumbent Democratic governor.

That was the situation last week - at least as far as Gov. James Blanchard's State of the State speech went.

Long-time Grosse Pointe state Representative William Bryant. a Republican, thought that Blanchard's speech was "very good, very encouraging," and he used words like visionary in describing

State Senator John Kelly, a Democrat, said he didn't find Blanchard's fifth State of the State message "particularly exhilarating or inspiring." He also said the recently re-elected governor used the state-wide coverage 'primarily as a photo opportuni-

Bryant said that most of the criticism from the Republican side said that Blanchard did not use many specifics in the speech.

"I liked the fact that it was a visionary speech," Bryant said. "The beginning of his second term is an appropriate time for that kind of speech."

Kelly said he was "astonished that the speech was devoid of anything meaningful.

Blanchard, in his speech, said that Michigan's ultimate goal is to make Michigan the best place to live, work and raise a family.

"Most of those things are assumed," Kelly said, "I hope we are striving for those things without having somebody having to articulate it. That's what I've been doing all along. Kelly said that Blanchard's speech was far from visionary.

"If saying that we have two peninsulas, clear water and sparkling blue skies is visionary ... I've given that speech for

Kelly added that there is nothing visionary about avoiding mention of Detroit's designation of murder capital of the nation, plummeting property values or the need to reform the criminal and juvenile justice systems.

Bryant said that Michigan has just come through some dark economic times, and that now is a good time to urge lawmakers and citizens to work cooperatively to ensure a better future. "There is a need for the vision he's talking about," Bryant said. At the end of his speech, Blanchard directed lawmakers to a 64page itinerary his administration would like to see addressed.

"That report is more like an interesting public relations piece a corporate prospectus designed to get investment in Michigan,' Kelly said.

Kelly siad that Blanchard's speech was not serious enough for the problems the state must confront, and he referred to Blanchard as a "Pollyanna governor." See LEGISLATORS, page 15A

Pointer of Interest Mildred Briggs

Not just because she developed a style of teaching theory that is

Not just because of her own impeccable musical background. Mildred Briggs teaches more than the proper notes and the correct pedaling; more than scales. triads, key signatures and cadences. From the very first lesson - when she places her student's hands on a blank piece of paper, draws an outline around them, and assigns a number to each finger - Briggs lets each child know she expects good things from him or her - muscially and otherwise.

And she usually gets it. But we're not just talking about the proper interpretation of Beethoven's "Fur Elise" or the proper phrasing for C.P.E. Bach's "Solfeggietto" here. We're talking about learning to accept challenges, about developing regular practice habits, about pursuing excellence, attending to details, and performing before an audience. We're talking about learning bonesty, integrity, respect for others, responsibility. punctuality, and good manners too. We're talking about making music AND growing up - in the best sense of both terms.

Mrs. Briggs is the consumunite teacher." said Tom Rhodes. Rhodes took piano lessons from Briggs for seven years - 35 years ago. Now his son Tom, 11, and his daughter, Melinda, 14, take piano lessons from her.

"Teaching is her whole life," he superbly tuned pianos, a row of wobbly tables and folding chairs and two huge chalkboards. Close at hand are piles of music, boxes of rhythm sticks, work books, large plastic replicas of the grand staff and big plastic notes, a stack of giant flash cards with notes printed on them, and a box full of inexpensive prizes.

Once a week, each child is expected to present himself at her studio - on time, shirt tucked in, hands washed — for an hour of class instruction in music theory. Sounds like dull stuff.

Not at Briggs' music studio. In a typical after-school class, the air crackles with energy. Youngsters race back and forth from piano to chalkboard alternately display ing their understanding of triads and tallying up their earned points. They lean forward on the spindly tables, eager to be the first to call out the proper note as Mrs. Briggs holds up a flash card. The child who first calls the correct note, catches the tossed card and stacks it in front of him. The child with the biggest stack wins. Mrs. Briggs' aim is good. The kids are good at shagging cards. They're even better at sight read-

Each class activity earns points. The child with the greatest number of points picks a prize at the end of the hour - a yo-yo, a novelty pen, a miniature address book, a big orange or blue pastic paper clip, a pretty seashell,

Briggs said the games, the competitive spirit, the points and prizes make music theory more palatable. "This makes it fun for children to learn things it's almost impossible to get them to learn," she said.

In addition to the hour-long class lesson each week, she gives each child a private half-hour lesson at the piano. The half-hour often stretches out to 45 minutes or an hour. "She's a terrific teacher," said Susan Stedem, 17, who has studied piano with Briggs for nine years.

"She is the most patient person I've ever met. If I don't understand, she'll spend extra time with me. She wants you to learn and grow. The competition and prizes are a neat incentive, especially for the little kids," Stedem

A large percentage of private lessons are given at her student's homes, tightly scheduled between athletic activities, sports events, after-school activities and homework. Many lessons are scheduled early in the morning, before school.

"Mrs. Briggs is on our doorstep every Tuesday at 0:45 a.m., rain or snow," said Marilyn Stedem, Susan's mother.

And Briggs is never late. She has no excuses, and she expects none. Mildred Willison, in her biography, recalls a day when Briggs came to her house to give two before-school lessons.

"On her way back to the studio someone ran a stop sign and totalled her car. Dauntless, Mrs. Briggs had her car towed, went to the hospital for about 40 stitches on her face, rented another car, and in perfect control returned to our house to give two lessons to two more of our children at noon time, as scheduled."

Briggs insists that each child perform in several recitals each year, but she arranges the programs so that they're never more than an hour long, and she makes sure each child is well-prepared. She also requires each student to have one or two polished pieces ready to perform - without fuss or protest — in case Grandma or a parent's friend says, "Play something for us."

"Every child should have a chance at playing music and sharing it," she said. "Music is a great part of life."

Briggs has turned out some excellent musicians and some ordinary ones. She usually manages to instill a love and appreciation for music, and many of her students also play other instruments. Those who have gone on to study music in college usually pass their first year college-level theory courses immediately, without taking the courses.

Briggs came to Grosse Pointe in 1933 and began teaching private lessons from a studio at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church. She moved to a studio on the second floor of the Punch and Judy Building in December 1941, and has been there until last year, when renovations were begun on the building. She's been temporarily displaced to a studio on Mack Avenue near Three Mile Drive.

She has nothing but praise for the thousands of Grosse Pointe youngsters she has taught - and their parents. "I never have trouble with discipline," she said. "I can go year after year without speaking to anyone in class. I anticipate trouble before it happens and I don't let it happen.

"Grosse Pointe children are wonderful. They're not given enough credit. People in Grosse Pointe have been wonderful. I couldn't do what I do without every parent right in back of me. Parents are wonderfully cooperative. I always thank them for coming to programs."

She will not reveal her age. "There's a lot of stress placed on age," she said. "A symphony director once told me never to tell my age. When you're 18, he said, they'll say you're too young. When you're middle aged, they'll say they want somebody younger - or older. When you're older, they'll say, 'We don't want anybody that old."

She loves children and she loves to teach. She said she'll never retire. "I hope I can teach until I curl up my toes. I enjoy teaching. I enjoy children.

"It's marvelous if people can pass out of this earth doing what they want to do. I don't have to

Educators ponder solutions to high school dropout problem

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

Dropouts are the issue of the moment, as the high rate in many urban schools caught the public by surprise.

But most suburban districts, although they are concerned about their own dropout rate, are not plagued by the high rate in the

"If I would talk to a Detroit administrator, he'd say we don't even have a problem," said Secondary Curriculum Director Robert Welch of Grosse Pointe's dropout situation. The rate here hovers between 1 and 2 percent.

Some educators believe that a small percentage of dropouts from the school program is a natural, inevitable thing, like the core of unemployed at the heart of even a healthy American economy. What a school system can or should do about it is a matter of debate.

"There are those who feel that there are some kids who don't want to follow the program, who, at this time of their life, just aren't in the mode," said Roger McCaig, Grosse Pointe's director of research and development. "They view a certain amount of dropping out as appropriate - a sort of 'we'll help you, but we can't make you do it.'

On the other extreme stand many educators and the state Board of Education. "They feel there is a concern if one person drops out - 'catch a falling star,'" McCaig explained.

Responses to a "normal" drop out rate of up to about seven percent vary. Some schools do nothing about it, others create special programs. Grosse Pointe administrators and board are talking about what to do about their own rather small dropout problem.

Figures supplied to the board last month show a dropout rate of 2.3 percent in 1985-86, an increase over the previous year's 1.4 percent and about even with 1981-82's 2.04 percent.

The school system has a reading specialist who works with students at both high schools. She started work in September, too recently to know yet whether reading help will prevent dropouts.

Informal discussions on the subject have taken place between the two high school principals and McCaig and Welch. The four have monthly meetings on instructional needs and say that an awareness of the dropout situation has emerged, but has not yet been addressed in a formal way.

The district looks toward Ann Arbor and St. Clair Shores as possible models.

For 12 years, Ann Arbor has operated several alternative programs for students who for one reason or another, don't fit in well at one of the regular high schools. Students with behavioral problems may attend the Roberto Clemente Center, with the eventual goal of returning to regular classes. Others may refer themselves to the Community High School, an alternative program that stresses individual attention, according to Hayward Richardson, deputy superintendent for instructional services.

Community High is small and self-paced, with a variety of work and study options available. Its student body consists of people who march to a different beat but not behavioral problems, Richardson says.

"Some of our students are extremely bright, but just don't flourish in the environment (of a large student population,)" he said.

Richardson said that while the program is considered to be a success - there is a waiting list to get into Community's 325student body — the schools have been unable to quantify it in relation to the dropout rate. As in most school systems, dropouts tend not to respond to polling.

"We have a seven percent 'unaccounted-for' rate that we report to the state, but we don't have any real confidence in its accuracy," Richardson said. "We're working now to develop procedures to pinpoint the facts."

Many of the students who drop out of Grosse Pointe high schools find their way eventually to one of the alternative programs in St. Clair Shores. The three school districts there have combined to offer night classes for adults, vocational education, a program for expectant mothers, and daytime high school completion for people 16 to 21.

"These are individuals who have made the decision that education is important to them," said high school completion counselor Cynthia Kuhn. "People opt out of their situation for a lot of reasons. It's not necessarily the school it's not necessarily the family."

Kuhn said the students respond favorably to the smallness (the program is limited to 62). "It's not possible to get lost in the shuffle," she said. "You cannot be anonymous in this setting.'

In addition to the regular curriculum, students have the option of taking part in guided group interaction, a meeting with a facilitator to discuss adolescent problems. The program is new and Kuhn hesitated to go out on a limb making claims for it, but she was enthusiastic.

We emphasize cooperation,"

The idea of alternative education in Grosse Pointe has come up, but for now it remains only an

"We're not at the point of making recommendations," said South Assistant Principal Russell Luttinen. "If you have 40 or 50 students, it would be feasible. Of course, you don't know whether the kids would take it."

Superintendent John Whritner fears the alternative programs don't have staying power. 'They're not good or bad," he said. "They are just hard to sustain. When you try to come up with an alternative program to serve 100 kids, you're all over the map.'

Welch worries about devising a curriculum to accommodate every student. "You hate to lose anybody," he said. "The world is not too kind to people who don't have a high school diploma."

But courses have to be designed on several levels to meet low and high ability, and steering low achievers to vocational education isn't the answer, Welch says. Voc ed these days is becoming hightech and demanding, and keeping courses easy only turns them into a "dumping ground" where students "fiddle their time away."

'We are paying close attention" to the St. Clair Shores program, Welch said.

The district did have an alternative education program at South about 20 years ago, according to Welch. Students received individual attention in tailormade programs, "but even in that program, I had trouble keeping them in school," he said.

The key to a successful alternative ed program is isolation offsite, says McCaig. Keeping the two sets of students separate is beneficial to both. The 98 percent of students who go with the regular program are protected from disruption, while the 2 percent can find structure and closeness and get a fresh start.

"I'm really serious about the off-site." McCaig said. "You need an individualized program and some social work staff, too. These kids need a lot of support.

North counselor Fran Carnegie agrees. Putting alternative education off-site "puts them in touch with a different set of kids," she said. "It's a brand-new peer group, a brand-new environment.

Educators believe that drop-

Gail Erickson, a school substance abuse counselor, thinks drugs are the problem more often than expected. "It's not just because I'm a substance abuse counselor," she said. "For 15 years, I was a regular school counselor, and I'd be really willing to say that among kids who drop out, drugs are a big factor. But it isn't always the student - maybe dad is an alcoholic."

Erickson says she favors alternative education programs, but only if any drug-related problems are cleared up first. "If you don't address the substance abuse, you're just wasting time and money," she said.

If the abuse is not addressed, she said, "nobody's going to fit your needs - you're not going to function wherever you are.

Erickson was optimistic about the possibility of helping the problem students. "We try to help kids make healthy decisions," she said. "Sometimes they're just waiting for somebody to pull them back.'

South Principal Edward Shine concurs. "When the institution and the motivation come together, that's when nice things hap-

Farms council approves plans for Cottage Hospital parking deck

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Unanimous approval was given to a revamped site plan for Cottage Hospital's parking deck by the Farms city council Monday

The council had originally approved a plan for the structure in August 1984, but since then Cottage officials have reworked it adding more green space around the deck, providing more parking spaces and eliminating large aerial walkways between the deck and the hospital over Muir Road and replacing them with smaller

The parking deck will provide 504 spaces. When the new plan for the hospital is fully implemented, there will be a total of 721 parking spaces provided by the hospital.

The attorney for Cottage, William G. Barris, told the council that the hospital will provide beneficial and much-needed parking for the new development and existing businesses on the Hill.

City officials were concerned about the old plan because the large walkways over Muir Road near Kercheval gave the street a tunnel effect, with which officials were uncomfortable. The new plan calls for smaller walkways between the deck and the hospital and the deck and the new building, 131 Kercheval Center, which eliminates the tunnel ef-

Cottage Hospital recently purchased the lot reserved for leased parking at the west end of the Farms municipal lot from the Grosse Pointe schools.

Lessees currently pay about $30 per quarter to park there. According to City Clerk Richard So. lak, there are about 120 lessees who have access to 84 spaces. In a letter to Cottage, the city requested that the hospital maintain at least 100 spaces for current lessees during the construction period of the deck.

Hospital officials balked at the request, noting that their staff already leases about 20 spaces in the lot, and a substantial portion of their private parking area will be unuseable during the anticipated 10-month construction peri-

No firm decision was made on the number of lease spaces that will remain, but the approval given by the council was conditional on reaching an agreement on the number of spaces satisfactory to both sides.

Barris indicated that lease fees at that lot may rise. He said fees will be charged at fair market value and no longer at a governmentally subsidized rate. He had no predictions as to what a fair market rate would be.

Several of the city officials, including Mayor Joseph Fromm, expressed their satisfaction with the new plan as it was presented. Fromm said that the added green space around the deck site, and the added spaces were both welcome additions to the project.

There will be several easements between the city, the Bologna building and Cottage in regard to this project.

Barris said the city will be requested to grant both an underground and aerial easement for the project. Though there is no current plan contemplated for the underground easement, he said engineers are concerned that underground utility lines may be need one day and they wanted

Dropouts versus illegal 'drop-ins' t a time when the Grosse Pointe school system is concerned about a small but growing number of high school dropouts, quite a few non-resident parents are trying to get their children into the Grosse Pointe schools.

Those are contradictory trends but to some degree both reflect the system's reputation for excellence. Compared with schools in big cities such as Detroit, the proportion of dropouts from the Grosse Pointe schools is indeed low. But in view of the large proportion of Grosse Pointe high school graduates who go to college, there is always concern about the small proportion who drop out and do not even finish high school.

As for the parents who falsely claim residence in the Pointes, they, too, are indirectly testifying to the excellence of the schools here. They want the best for their children and they do not think they are getting it, so far as education is concerned, whether their children are living in Detroit or some other city in which the school system does not have a good reputation. So they try to get their children into the Pointe schools.

While administrators do not have detailed records, local dropouts do not fit the classic dropout profile. They do not in many cases drop out of education totally and forever. Instead, they tend to enter adult education programs, obtain a general equivalency diploma, join the military or take classes in a trade school or an alternative high school, as Grosse Pointe News reporter Nancy Parmenter wrote in a recent report.

In addition, as Superintendent John Whrit-ner told Ms. Parmenter, "Some youngsters just need some time away from school. Once they get the sense that they need the diploma, they'll go back.'

And apparently they do just that. The result is that some of the dropouts are really students who leave and then re-enter, either at their old schools or at different schools. Sometimes high school students need time to find themselves just as do college students who now often take five years or more to complete their four-year college programs.

Yet administrators find it difficult to generalize about dropouts. Some students find graduation requirements too difficult. Some are dissatisfied by the stricter enforcement of attendance. Some may be hooked on drugs. For some, the schools may be too big and the students may feel lost. Even so, while the dropouts and potential dropouts constitute only a small proportion of the student body, administrators and teachers constantly are on the watch for the tendencies that predict trouble, including dropping out.

As for non-residents trying to fake an address or otherwise break the law to get their children into the schools in the Pointes, they create a problem that requires constant surveillance. Since it costs almost $5,000 a year to educate each student in the Pointes, the non-resident who gets into the system is in effect stealing that sum from the district. And most of the local school revenues come right from Grosse Pointe.

Yet it remains a contradiction that at the time Grosse Pointe schools are experiencing a small but perhaps significant rise in dropouts, they also face more challenges from non-resident "drop-ins." On the basis of what we currently know about both problems, the school system appears to be dealing carefully and intelligently with both dropouts and drop-ins, even though in one case the aim is to retain students and in the other to keep them out.

Learning the county ropes avid Cavanagh, Grosse Pointe's freshman representative on the Board of County Commissioners from the 1st District, is finding "a lot of problems" in county government but as an optimist he's not ready to call it "a mess," as County Executive Edward McNamara has done.

In a telephone interview with the Grosse Pointe News, Cavanagh said he had been "learning the ropes," especially with respect to his post as chairman of the audit committee and as a member of the public service committee.

The audit assignment could turn out to be an important one because the new commissioner believes the single most important issue facing the county this year is the budget. He's now awaiting a quarterly independent audit which he and his committee will review and check to see whether county departments are in compliance with budget requirements.

He is also getting acquainted with the responsibilities of the public service committee which deals with county roads, airports, drains and other services to county resi dents. One of his top priorities, he said, will be to review the condition of county roads and especially the need for improvement of Lakeshore Road, long a matter of contention between Grosse Pointe Farms and the coun-

Since he uses Lakeshore Road himself every day, Cavanagh says he knows its condition and is anxious for action to be taken soon on patching or even repaying, if time and money can be found on the county's schedule of upcoming road work.

Cavanagh said he is awaiting the results of a state investigation of the 1986 officeholders expense fund report of former Wayne County Drain Commissioner Charles N. Youngblood before deciding whether any further action is needed. Youngblood, whose office was abolished in a referendum last November, has been under fire from County Clerk James R. Killeen on the grounds some of his expenditures from the fund were not related to his position as drain commissioner.

The questioned items included a $12,200 payment to Youngblood's wife for bookkeeping and record-keeping services; $3,000 for season tickets and parking for Detroit Lions games at the Pontiac Silverdome; $4,700 for Christmas presents and party prizes, and $14,500 for attorney fees. Whether such spending is legal or not, it would appear to be unethical and further justification for the abolition of Youngblood's office.

With respect to the relationship between the board and the county executive, Cavanagh sees "a new day" in Wayne County with a spirit of camaraderie developing between the two branches of government, the legislative and executive. Cavanagh said that the four other new commissioners, including the lone Republican on the 15member board, Susan Heintz, are cooperatcommissioner is a lack of communication with his constituents. From his side, he plans to remedy that problem by issuing newsletters reporting on what the county is doing and what services are available. He'll no doubt find that as time goes along he'll hear from more constituents, especially if they take exception to a county board action ing well with the returning veterans. One disappointment so far for the new or inaction.

Meanwhile, 1st District residents ought to feel reassured by the new commissioner's cautious approach to his new responsibilities and his avoidance of quick solutions and shooting-from-the-hip decisions that too often have characterized board actions in the past. He is, in short, off to a good start. Now we'll see how well time treats him.

Put smokers in back room

To the Editor:

Do the owners and publishers of the Grosse Pointe News realize that all the new designs and features of the paper are being defeated by the appearance and air pollution in their own front office? All the publicity about smoking in the public schools, all the talk of lung disease from second-hand smoke, all the new laws for public places and the smoker, and still a customer must endure the reek of cigarettes coming from six women who are there to conduct the business of the News. It is most discouraging to have to deal with people who have so little regard for laws or even courtesy. Your lovely new building with its paned glass front may as well be an inner-city police lock-up, as far as being a pleasant place to visit. If your people must smoke, please get them into a back room and away from the public eye, and the public

Media are biased

To the Editor:

There is a growing hue and cry that the press and television broadcasters are biased against the present administration. Up until now one could attribute this to partisan attitudes.

But the remarks made by TV commentators on the president's State of the Union address clearly justify the serious accusation.

I did not hear a single reference on the president's support of a constitutional amendment to require balanced budgets. His forthright demand for legislation that would give him a line item veto over logrolling appropriations was never mentioned.

A moderate's program

y staking out a middle-of-the-road course in his State of the State report, Gov. James Blanchard won praise from some Republicans and criticism from some Democrats. Yet in view of his overwhelming victory in November, it is difficult to disagree with his strategy. He wants to keep the reputation as a moderate he carned in the last two years of his first term.

So it was not surprising that a Republican such as Grosse Pointe's William R. Bryant Jr. called the governor's speech visionary but Democrats such as Sen. John Kelly of Detroit, who represents the Pointes, faulted the chief executive for not taking a stronger line to meet the state's needs.

Kelly said he was disappointed that Blanchard had not addressed such issues as the adentification of Detroit as the nation's murder capital, the city's plummeting property values and reform of the criminal and juvenele justice systems.

Bryant found reason for optimism in the governor's call for improving the state's business climate, his general pledge to trim the income tax rate another two-tenths of I percent and his appeal for all elements in the state to try to work together to solve the problems of the future. Senate Majority Lander John Engler, Mount Pleasant Republican, said he, too, was in general agreement with the tone of the report.

But whether the governor will get his new tax cut seemed doubtful last week after the leaders in the Democratic-controlled House expressed interest in using the windfall from the new federal tax law for other purposes, including a reduction in property taxes, rather than for the proposed income tax

Senate Republicans already have endorsed an income tax cut, but they were not so supportive of the governor's proposed 3 percent increase in welfare benefits and his plan for "work and learn" camps for delinquent children as part of a "human investment" strategy. Many Republicans also joined Democrats in criticizing the governor's failure to include more specifics in his

The Michigan Black Caucus found even less to approve in the governor's agenda on the grounds that the majority of Michigan blacks have not shared in the improvements and quality of life Blanchard spoke of for 1987.

The address did seem to offer something --- but not a great deal --- for everyone. It did not recommend a cap on spending, although the size of the increase already is a matter of dispute. But it did not contain recommendations for expensive new programs, either. In view of the uncertain economic outlook for Michigan in 1987, perhaps the report was the best that could be expected from a moderate Democrat

The Angels at home!

I'm as excited as a bookie who has the inside line on the Second Coming.

The pope is coming, and I just can't wait. I'd like to see white smoke puff out of the Seven Sisters when he arrives, and damn it, I want the People Mover to be running by then. The Pope is coming, and I'd like to buy him a pound of Trapper's Alley fudge. The pope is coming. Let the hoopla begin.

I'm no old-timer, but I remember when Pope Paul VI was chosen as the Catholic leader. His name was written over Detroit and the eastside in skywriting. Pontiff Paul's portrait began popping up all over the place. Next to his photo was always a sprig or two of Palm Sunday fronds care fully woven into a cross.

We third graders at St. Juliana's in Detroit knew the pope was the boss. Even Pastor Healy had to answer to him, and the nuns, who feared nothing, were just a little scared when Healy was around.

The pope is coming — and to Detroit! How 'bout that! No other pope in history has ever come to Motown, not even after the Tigers won the Series — although Sparky could easily have been named Cardinal or even Blue Jay.

Catholic school had its advantages back in the early '60s. We didn't have to associate with the public school kids who always stole your compass and protractor out of your desk when they came to cathechism on Saturdays, and we were always within a stone's throw of a priest in case we got an uncontrollable urge to confess a sin or two.

Confession was much more meaningful back then. There is a certain reverence you had for the sacrament when you were six and ashamed you had looked at some back issues of National Geo1 Say graphic without parental supervision. It was meaningful in the sense that when Father told you that you must recite a number of prayers for penance, you were more than eager to get at them—relieved that you would be allowed to live at least until your next confession.

And there were the nuns. After seven years in Catholic grade school, the nuns had my number and area code. Which meant that my mom got a lot more calls that last year. I became certain shortly after I made my confirmation that the nuns somehow knew that I was not bound for Heaven and treated me accordingly. Little did I know that their rather strict ways in dealing with me were just an insurance policy that I would get there one day or one way. After all, if you live Hell on earth...

But the pope's coming to see me now, so I must have been good. I want any remaining nuns in the area who knew me to understand that it for some reason, Pope John Paul II doesn't show, it's not my fault. I could imagine what my eighth grade teacher, Sister Mary Wheresyourtie (not her real name) would do to me if she found out that I was responsible for the Pope not showing.

Pope John Paul's visit will mean one thing for sure, big bucks for a godless few. When the pope went down under last year, some Aussies made a fortune selling pope-corn, pope-sickles and pope-on-a-rope soap.

Here in Detroit, people will be selling T-shirts which read, "John Paul and Iacocca in '88," or "The Pope doesn't use the Tunnel or the Bridge." They'll be selling Bob Evans Pope Sausage, blessed cigars called Holy Smokes, and Stroh's sold in special recyclable aluminum "Vati-cans."

Over in Pontiac instead of having Bourbon Street North, they'll set up the Road to Hell and pave it with good intentions. They'll organize Cathedral Crawls rather than the Pub Crawls held during the Superbowi hoopla a few years back.

Tiger hats with an old English "P" on them will be hot items, as will the knee pads which say "John" and "Paul" on them. Frankincense and myrrh will be sold as Pope-pourri, and some office supply company will come out with a full line of papal products: papal staples, papal weights, papal clips and saintly stenopads.

Maybe the Pope can do something about the high water while he's here. After all, it is Lake "St." Clair. And I would like to see a special effort made to clean up I-94. I don't care if he doesn't use the highway, he'll know it's dirty. Something should be done about the Tigers' schedule so they will be playing the Angels at home, during the pontiff's visit. And I'd like to see the Polish ethnic festival held down on the Riverfront while John Paul is here, or at least a pierogi festival.

Now there isn't a lot of time before the pope visits the Motor City. So, you better start saving your prayers. We want John Paul to have a pleasant stay.

Foul fowl

A Farms homeowner had to go before the city council Jan. 26 and rather sheepishly had to explain a problem he had with the house he was constructing at Grosse Pointe Boulevard and Merriweather.

Seems David Letscher, in the process of constructing the house, discovered that the foundation of the building was laid about five to seven inches from the planned construction lines.

You may recall that this house was a subject of discussion several weeks ago when the News ran a photo of the plastic pink flamingo which was perched atop the home.

Letscher noted the problem and dutifully pointed it out to the Farms building department which had to, by ordinance, refuse to grant a certificate of occupancy. The city's ordinance requires that there be at least 30 feet of space between the building and the rear lot line. The error made the building in violation of the ordinance.

During the course of the explanation he was giving to the city council, Mayor Joseph Fromm asked if the contractor was local.

Letscher, who had called the problem to the attention of the building department, rather quietly explained he was the contractor.

He was granted his variance, but the council cautioned him to be more careful in the future.

. than sorry was how Grosse Pointe Farms and City firefighters approached a report of smoke Wednesday, in the Punch and Judy Building on Kercheval on the Hill. Workers who are renovating the local landmark smelled what they believed to be smoke and called the fire department. Firefighters found no evidence of a fire and Kercheval was opened after about 30 minutes.

Annual police report

Shores holds line on crime

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

All's quiet on Grosse Pointe's northeastern front.

New Director of Public Safety Daniel J. Healy said that there were only four breaking and enterings in the 1.2 square mile village during 1986, with a total loss of $25

Healy said the minor break-ins were the result of people who knew the residents, and in all but one case the culprits were found and property returned.

There was a slight increase in the number of larcenies from automobiles. The number of car break-ins jumped from 20 in 1985 to 28 in 1986.

While the number is not as great as some neighboring communities, Healy said that beefed-up patrols and high visibility of police cars help to keep the number

"What the crime element is after are radar detectors," Healy said. "It is a small increase, but we will stay on it.'

Once every three years

Peter, Ryan and Kevin Messacar help their mom, Rosemary Messacar of Grosse Pointe Farms, rummage through the school attic to resurrect some Kerby Karnival treasures from the past, as parents and children gear up for their tri-annual fundraiser. Kerby Karnival will be held Saturday, March 21, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the school located on Kerby at Beaupre in Grosse Pointe Farms.

The event will feature games, activities, food and family entertainment seasoned with the 1987 theme of Michigan's Sesquicentennial. A drawing and a silent auction will also be offered. The Karnival has been sponsored by the Kerby PTO, every three years for the past three decades. It has raised money to enrich the school's curriculum and support other special projects.

I continue as House Republican Leader Emeritus this term. That translates to "former leader" and my being so named four years ago is the only time that title has been bestowed.

My seat in the House chambers remains where it has been, right

My committee assignments remain as I want them, Republican vice-chairman of the Taxation Committee, and a member of the Education Committee and of the Urban Affairs Committee.

I want to get back to writing regular articles for the Grosse Pointe News. Many of you have asked that I do that, and I will try. Last year so little happened up here that there wasn't much to write about. This year there will be more going on.

There is major interest in looking for a new education financing system and for providing proper-

Anonymous callers make strange requests

There have been a number of cases where Grosse Pointe residents have received calls from an anonymous person who told them that a family member was being held captive, but four recent calls have an added twist

Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officials said that residents received calls this past weekend stating that their husbands had been kidnapped.

The caller then told them to place masking tape over the mouths, and if possible, have other family members tie them up while they awaited forther in. structions from the caller.

A number of these cases have been reported in all five Grosse Pointe communities in the last three to four months.

Detective Lt. Pete Thomas said, "anyone getting these kinds of calls should do two things - hang up and then call police."

No one followed the inst tions from the caller, but one woman, whose husband died several years ago, was shaken up by the incident.

"It's strange how some people get their kicks," Thomas said.

Theater group presents program to health council

Laurie V. Logan, community services division manager for Crossroads Productions, Ltd., presented an overview of programs for school-age children to the general membership of the Health Education Council of Grosse Pointe recently at the Central Library.

The health council is made up of representatives from all public, private and parochial schools in Grosse Pointe. The council sponsors a variety of health-related activities in schools, such as nutrition fairs, breast self-examination programs, scoliosis screening, and CPR instruction to all high school sophomores. Crossroado Productions is an eight-year-old non-profit professional touring theater company based in Redford. Crossroads produces a variety of programs mime, dance, storytelling, plays - including a series of programs and plays concerning social issues facing today's school children.

Logan discussed "The Pressure Cooker." a play for middle school and high school children concerning divorce. "The play is designed as a prelude to discussion by the children," said Logan. Led by two limited-license psychologists, the audience eventually discusses formation about Crossi problems faced by children of di-Productions, call 537-4860.

vorce - guilt feelings, stepparents, how to cope and where to get help. Some schools form support groups after presentation of the play, Logan said. The groups then meet regularly to talk about their feelings and their problems.

Another play, "Visitation Day," is available for elementary age children of divorce through Crossroads Productions. Still more programs are available concerning teen substance abuse and teen sexuality.

Wilma Fellman, assistant director of SPACE, Room to Grow, also spoke to the council about some of their programs. SPACE is a non-sectarian community service for widowed, sopa rated and divorced men, women and their children and is sponsored by the National Council of Jewish Women, Greater Detroit Section. SPACE has sponsored "The Pressure Cooker" for 11 middle and high schools in the tri-county area last year and, through a grant, is able to fund 100 percent of the cost of the play to public schools that have such a need.

Prime Time for Senior Citizens

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

It's roses and chocolates time and not a minute too soon. There's not been much excitement around since New Year's when all of the merriment of the Christmas season came to an end. Since then the business of life has been pretty dull. Short days and early nights haven't helped, not to mention gray skies and mean gusty winds.

Something is needed to give life a lift. So it is with joy and a renewed sense of being that we go shopping for just the right token of love and appreciation to send to those special people in our life on Feb. 14, St. Valentine's Day. Of course, we look forward to being remembered ourselves.

Being remembered on Valentine's Day ranks right up there with Christmas and birthdays, because for centuries this day has been set aside for one reason: to send tokens of love to those whom we hold dear.

It is a tradition that goes back centuries to the Roman festivals honoring pagan gods. A feast called Lupercalia was celebrated in honor of Juno and Pam.

Young Romans would put the names of young maidens into a box and then draw names out at random. The girl whose name was chosen became the young man's partner for the Lupercalia festival.

With the introduction of Christianity, all of these pagan rites came to an end.

saint of young lovers, should be honored because 200 years before he had been executed for marrying young couples against the order of the Emperor Claudius who believed that single men made better soldiers.

Little is known of the patron saint of Feb. 14th. Some historians place St. Valentine as being the churchman who was beaten and beheaded on Feb. 14, 296 A.D. because he had cured his jailkeeper's daughter of blindness. He is buried in the church of St. Praxedes in Rome where a gate was named for him - Porto Valentine.

It is claimed in modern times that Valentine's Day has been celebrated since 1445. The holiday is mentioned in literature both by Chaucer and Shakespeare. It was Ophelia in Shakespeare's "Hamlet" who sang: Good morrow!

tis St. Valentines Day All in the morning betime And I am maid at your window

To be your Valentine. The oldest custom of the day in England and Scotland came down from the Lupercalia lestival. Young people drew names form an urn to match up partners. That custom was replaced by the giving of gifts, such as May baskets on doorsteps.

Every country had its own customs, all of them revolving around love and courtship.

Romantic thoughts and romantic customs have come down Instead, in 496 AD, it was through the centuries, customs decided that St. Valentine, patron that have lost none of their charm even in our pragmatic tell-it-likeit-is era. Indeed we welcome and cling to such observances as a relief from being exposed daily to the harsh realities of life. We welcome, too, the opportunity to pause in our often hectic busy days to have an opportunity to let those we care about know that we treasure them.

Days and weeks may go by when sons and daughters think about Mom and Dad and mean to call them, but just never get around to doing it. A busy husband or wife involved in myriad activities, particularly if there are children who have long list of commitments, such as sports, cub scouts, etc., may forget that a little gift now and then is a way to keep romance alive. Grandparents remember from their own children how exciting it was to get a letter addressed to them. Grandchildren are equally thrilled to get mail.

Some of us will send flowers and candy.

These will be special but so will a card thoughtfully chosen that tells the person who receives it, "I'm thinking of you and you are

Cavanagh to work for improvements

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

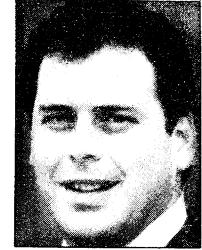

Grosse Pointe's hometown county commissioner is still getting his feet wet on the new job, but has plans aplenty for the fu-

"I'm learning a lot right now," said David Cavanagh. "I'm plunging headlong into the two committees I'm on." He is a member of the public service committee and chairs the audit commit-

Cavanagh said he hopes to develop a relationship with his new constituents through a newsletter that will tell each resident what the county is doing in relation to his or her neighborhood.

"It was something I said in my campaign - people don't know what the county can do and should do for them," he said.

Cavanagh said he hasn't heard as much from people as he expected to, but expects the volume of mail to increase once the newsletter starts. Currently, most of his mail is coming from downriver, from people upset at the county cuts in the home extension program - particularly 4H.

"I drive that way (on Lakeshore) to my house every night,' he said, "so it's foremost on my mind also . . . I don't know if I could expedite something as extensive as repaving, but patching is a definite reality.

This is the beginning of a new day in relations between the executive and the commission, Cavanagh said. The old days of indefinitely tabling issues and Grosse Pointe can expect Cavanagh to bring pressure on two particular local thorns — the pavement on Lakeshore Road Grosse Pointe can expect fighting among factions are turned around. The Grosse Pointe Woods City Council authorized negotiations Monday night with C.A. Hall Co. for demolition of the existing vehicular bridge at the city's Lake Front Park.

The company estimated demolition costs at $42,000, with work to begin in mid-March and completion scheduled for May 1.

Larry Pate, of Pate, Hirn and Bogue, Inc., city engineers, said that he is still checking designs and costs for the new vehicular bridge, which will probably not be completed before Aug. 1.

Council members also discussed details of a plan to open a second park entrance during the construction project's duration. The two entrances will temporarily split the Lake Front Park into two sections - the Jefferson side for swimmers, tennis players and picnickers - and the lake side for some boaters, picnickers and construction vehicles.

The Woods council agreed to begin leasing boat wells for the 1987 season, but added that boat owners' money should be refunded and their names remain on the waiting list, if the demolition project is delayed, rendering the wells unuseable.

Cavanagh plans to put his own stamp on the audit committee. "It was always a pretty dry committee," he said. "I hope to change that. I hope to do some in-depth investigation into problems fac-ing the county." The audit com-mittee is responsible for reviewing programs and monitoring compliance.

The committee is currently waiting for the quarterly audit report. Cavanagh said the county finances are the most important issue facing the commission and executive and he plans to go over the items line by line.

The committee is currently interviewing applicants for the position of auditor-general to replace Lester Robinson, who took position with the executive branch. Cavanagh said he hopes to have the position filled within a couple of weeks.

Cavanagh said he believes the county will get a handle on its problems.

"It's definitely not all roses down here," he said, "but I don't take the pessimistic outlook. I'm optimistic."

"Saint John Hospital? What a great place. I was born there."

Lindsay Balash weighed only 2 pounds, 13 ounces at birth.

The birth of a baby is a memory that a mother carries forever.

Louise Balash doesn't have that memory. She was too ill to experience the birth of her daughter. Lindsay Ann, on April 29, 1982.

Lindsay was born two months prematurely. She weighed only 2 pounds, 13 ounces when she was delivered by emergency Caesarean section at Saint John Hospital.

"I REMEMBER Getting A Few Labor Pains the evening before Lindsay was born. . . and that's the last thing I remember," Mrs. Balash explains.

"I had toxemia. That's a form of high blood pressure brought on by my pregnancy. It caused my heart rate to soar and left me unconscious.

"I was having seizures and convulsions. My obstetrician did the C-section because he was afraid I wouldn't make it otherwise."

A week passed before Louise Balash was coherent enough to realize that she had given birth. Her condition worsened over the weekend. When her kidneys failed, Joseph Beals, MD, a kidney specialist practicing at Saint John, put her on a hemodialysis machine to cleanse her blood of waste products.

MEANWHILE, In The Neonatal Intensive Care Unit, Lindsay needed help from a ventilator for four days to keep her breathing. Her pediatricians, Ali Rabbani, MD, and Nicholas Relich, MD, and primary care nurses, Betty Bladdick, LPN, and Chris Arickx, RN, monitored her progress.

"By the time I was well enough to see her, she was doing well," her mom recalls. "But she was so tiny, so fragile, that I was almost afraid to touch her."

Louise Balash stayed in intensive care for two weeks and went home one month after her delivery. When she was feeling better, she and her husband, Mark, began attending the hospital's support group for parents of premature infants.

THE HIGH-TECH FACILITY that surrounds a premature baby can make it difficult for parents to show the usual signs of affection.

"I could tell that Lindsay liked to hear my voice," her mom says. "Mark and I could tell that she could distinguish our voices from the nurses and other staff members.

Her mother, Louise Balash, says: "The Saint John Hospital staff saved me and my baby."
Today, Lindsay is an active, healthy 4-year-old.

"I liked to pick up her little foot and kiss it... just so she'd know I was there."

A month after her mom went home, Lindsay followed.

Today, Lindsay is a bright, active, healthy 4-year-old. She's slightly built, but at 29 pounds, not much under the normal weight for her age.

She delights in showing visitors her bedroom and the tiny basketball uniform sleeper on her 14-inch rag doll. It's the same one that Lindsay wore when she came home from the hospital.

"I'm happy with the way things have turned out," Mrs. Balash says. "And I thank God every day for the skilled staff at Saint John. Without them, I might not have this beautiful daughter."

Special Deliveries

All babies born at Saint John Hospital are special. Among our special deliveries in the past year are these:

Jason, Daniel, James and Robert Methven, quadruplets born to Gayle and Norman Methven of Utica. The multiple births occurred without the help of fertility drugs—a one-in-730,000 chance.

Timothy Paul Langer, son of David and Ruth Langer of Mt. Clemens. Mrs. Langer delivered three weeks early, even before her family's planned baby shower. The family brought the shower to Mrs. Langer, right in the maternity unit of Saint John.

Erika Bergman, born to Cathy and Dave Bergman, Detroit Tiger first baseman.

New Birthing Options Are More Like Home

On a clear day, an expectant mom and dad can see the RenCen through the finted window of a labor-and-delivery room at Saint John Hospital.

They might dim the lights, turn on the TV, and snuggle across the oak bedstead as they get ready for one of life's most intimate moments—the birth of their baby.

Labor and delivery-all in one room

Many of the 3,300 babies born at Saint John in the last year started their lives in the hospital's new labor-delivery and recovery rooms, according to Karen L. Beget, RN, regional perinatal coordinator in Maternal/Child Health. As the word gets around, Beger says, more and more mothers are choosing these new hirthing options.

In addition to four traditional delivery rooms, Saint John has six new labor-and-delivery rooms and a birthing room in its new maternity suite. The labor-and-delivery rooms have 24-hour ultrasound monitoring, and an inhouse anesthesiologist is available 24 hours a day.

Mothers choose the new suite. Beger says, because they like the convenience of going through labor and delivery in the same room, and going home earlier.

The birthing room is the most homelike of all. Furnished with a rocking chair, a recliner, TV console, phone, and an oak cradle and bed, the birthing room is friendly. Monitoring devices and emergency supplies are concealed in cupboards.

Of course, if a problem should arise, the full facilities of the hospital's delivery suites and newborn intensive care unit are standing by. Many of the tiniest and most critically ill infants born in Detroit are alive because of the high-tech resources and highly specialized staff at Saint John.

The whole family gets involved

The new birthing options are proving to be popular with the whole family. Fathers or support persons can take a more active, supportive role in childbirth. And visitors get to see the newcomer much sooner, often within the first hour or two after birth.

Moms who choose the labor-and-delivery and birthing rooms must be referred by their physician. They must be in excellent health, with no indication of a high-risk pregnancy, and must complete childbirth classes.

Saint John's perinatal team delivered more than 3,300 babies last year; according to Minu Kashef, MD, chief of the department of Obstetrics and Gynecology. "That's a big addition to the Saint John family," he says. Doctor Kashef says that in the past year Saint John received more than 200 emergency transports of high-risk mothers and infants from 12 southeast Michigan hospitals.

Late last year, three standard-production Saab 9000s were taken to the Alabama International Speedway in Talladega, Alabama for an unusual test drive: Twenty days straight at top speed.

The result? Twenty-one new world and international records including the highest average speed (132 mph) ever recorded for a production car driven this distance. Of course, you probably shouldn't directly apply these results to your everyday driving. But the fact remains, not one, but all three Saabs finished. Which would certainly seem to say something about their performance and endurance abilities. Abilities you're invited to test drive yourself. Albeit over a shorter. distance. And preferably at a much reduced speed. *All records subject to Federation of international declined and the conjugation of the standard NAS Alk and NAS and not the Conjugation of the Co

Preparing the work flow and space requirements for the architect is a complex task, Hanson said. The study looks at how each department relates to the others and takes into consideration such disparate items as the loading dock, the public telephone, the location of copiers and computer stations, whether cables should be buried or installed inside walls and whether the children's reading room should be located near the elevator (it shouldn't).

"Plus, we have to deal with severe site considerations," Hanson said. "I'd like to say we had endless parking, but philosophically I know that's strictly a philosophical question.'

The original gift

It isn't every community that has a free Marcel Breuer building given to it, no strings attached. But that's what happened in Grosse pointe in 1951, when Dexter M. Ferry Jr. decided to give a library.

Now Ferry's son sits on the architect-selection committee for the expansion of the library. Although he was the man who picked Breuer to do the original building, Hawkins Ferry supports the changes.

"I think it's a necessary thing," he said. "They need more space. It's fine, as long as they preserve the Breuer building, which I understand they're going to do.'

Dexter Ferry was a longtime believer in libraries and was one of the organizers of the first Grosse Pointe one, located in a little house in the Village, according to his son. But he didn't go into it expecting to give the money.

"There was quite a movement on to build a new library," Hawkins Ferry said. "They had a fundraising drive and weren't able to raise the money.'

Ferry stepped in with a grant from his family foundation and the rest is local histo-

No one knowns how much the library cost, "It was a deeply kept secret," said library Director Charles Hanson.

The building was given to the school system, which has heen responsible for its upkeep since then - and which will be responsible for the addition, through a tax levy.

The Ferry family interest in art and architecture led them to donate original art to the building. The most prominent among the art works are an Alexander Calder mobile in the main reading room and a Wassily Kandinsky tapestry on the second level.

Hawkins Ferry and his sister had an interest in modern architecture. He encountered Breuer as an architecture student at Harvard; she saw his work at New York's Museum of Modern Art and later invited him to design her home in Baltimore.

So when it came time to select an architect, they thought of Breuer, among others. "I tried to get Eero Saarinen to do it, but he was too busy," Ferry

Legislators

Some of the specifics Kelly wanted to see addressed in the speech were how Michigan is going to deal with property tax reform, juvenile violence, the flight of the middle class from Detroit and the 17 communities affected by planned General Motors plant closings.

Other Democrats were also critical of Blanchard's speech. Particularly vocal for the legislature's Black Caucaus, which said the speech did not address the needs and problems of blacks in the state.

Kelly said there is a problem with having a Black Caucus.

"Having a Black Caucus tends to focus attention on the interest group rather than how things relate to the needs of black people," Kelly said. "Urban deterioration is not primarily a black problem. Unemployment and plant closings are not exclusively a black program either.'

Bryant agreed that the speech was short in specifics. He said the proposed youth camps is a good idea.

"It is an idea that I have been talking about," Bryant said, "and I have some different ideas on the subject."

He feels that not all the juveniles who would go to the camps should be there involuntarily. He said that he would like to see the camps emphasizing fulfilling a G.E.D. or high school diploma or working with the military to get the kids the kind of training they need to get into the armed services.

One specific Blanchard did mention was that his administration would do what it could to offset the trade imbalance by seeking the meed for import restrictions or tarrifs.

That was one area in which both Bryant and Kelly agreed.

"It is folly militarily to depend on other nations for things as basic as steel," Bryant said. "I am not a member of Congress, and I don't pretend to know everything about protective trade legislation, but I strongly insist we should have a greater access to foreign markets. It's just not real cricket what's going on out there. There are too many restrictions, time delays and red tape.'

Kelly said that the thousands

Pancake supper

The annual Kerby Cub Scout Pancake Supper will be served Thursday, Feb. 19, in the school gym, 285 Kerby Road in the Farms, from 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Tickets are $2.50 for all you can eat and can be purchased at the door or in advance from your neighborhood Pack 481 Cub Scout.

The children will be entertained throughout the evening by Jim Bergstrom, a magician. Proceeds from the supper cover half of the scouts' expenses.

This year, the scouts are also asking the community's help in their attempt to collect new and used children's books for the Parent Child Center of the Franklin Wright Settlement. The center, located on the east side of Detroit, services needy families with young children. Bring your donation of children's books to the Kerby gym the night of the supper.

Cinema League

The Grosse Pointe Cinema League will meet Monday, Feb. 16, at 8 p.m. at the War Memorial.

"Sardinia, Corsica, and Malta," a 16mm movie by Leo Tallieu, is a cinematic treat.

Viewers will visit stone-age settlements, medieval fortresses, pine-forested mountains and pleasant beaches. There is the birthplace of Napolean, Sardinia's Costa Someralda, Corsica's Cliffs of Bonafacio and Malta's "other island," Gogo.

The public is invited. There is a charge of $1.50 for non-members.

Tool talk

Learn about the basic tools needed to perform everyday projects around the house from Melinda Zettner, assistant manager of Damman's in St. Clair Shores.

She will speak on Gadgets and Gizmos at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Thursday, Feb. 12, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Topics include simple hardware, such as hinges and wall anchors, as well as common tools, screwdrivers, hammers and wrenches. The fee is $5. For more information, call the War Memorial, 881-7511, Monday-Saturday 9 a.m.-9

China series scheduled

A three-part mini-course on China will be offered by the War Memorial Council of Sponsors on Wednesdays, Feb. 18, 25 and March 4, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Two scholars from the University of Michigan Department of Chinese Studies will present lectures on the Peoples Republic of China; offering historical background as well as current perspectives about the emergence of the country.

"Legacies of Chinese Past," the topic of the Feb. 18 lecture, will be presented by Professor Kenneth DeWoskin, associate professor of Chinese Language and Literature and associate director of the university's Center for Chinese Studies.

DeWoskin, an authority in his field, has taught and lectured throughout the world. He serves as executive director of Governor Blanchard's Commission on China.

In the second lecture, Feb. 25, DeWoskin will discuss "China and the World Today," A special feature will be an exhibit of works by professional photographer Robert Stewart of St. Clair Shores who, during a recent cultural exchange, photographed areas rarely visited by tourists.

David Shambaugh, a lecturer in Far Eastern international relations in the Department of Political Science, will speak on "Chinese Politics Since Mao: Past Trends and Future Possibilities" March 4.

Shambaugh recently returned from China, where he lived and taught for more than two years as part of an official scholarly exchange program. He will discuss the fast breaking developments in China today, including recent student demonstrations, and the effects of these developments on the relations between the United States and China.

Shambaugh has written "The Making of a Premier," on the newest "power person" in China, Zhao Ziyang.

Chinese tea breaks will be offered each evening. The lectures are $25 for the entire series or $10 for a single lecture, $5 for students with I.D. A list of related reading material is available by calling the Programming Office.

For further information, call 881-7511 between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. daily.

Interviewed

Bonnier concert

Jazz pianist Bess Bonnier will entertain at the Assumption Cultural Center Sunday, Feb. 15, at 7 p.m. An afterglow will follow the cabaret-style concert.

The center is located at 21800 Marter Road. For ticket information, call 779-6111.

Control your pressure

Down With High Blood Pressure, a series of four weekly classes, will begin Thursday, Feb. 19, and continue on Feb. 26, March 5 and 12.

The classes are held from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in Boardroom A on the lower level of the hospital. The hospital is located at 159 Kercheval Avenue, between Moross and Cadieux.

The fee is $20. Call 881-1800 to register.

Paratroopers sought

The 82nd Airborne Division Association, composed of men and women who have served as paratroopers and glidermen in any airborne unit during and since World War II, is conducting a national membership drive to locate troopers eligible for membership.

If you served, contact Shirley R. Gossett, National President, 5459 Northcutt Place, Dayton, Ohio 45414, for details of the association as well as information about the 41st annual convention, to be held in Houston Aug. 22-24.

All about railroads

"Railroads in Michigan," the first complete bibliography of the state's railroad publications, is now available through the Northern Michigan University Press.

Written by Dr. LeRoy Barnett, archivist for the Department of State's Bureau of Michigan History, the book is a valuable reference of Michigan railroading over the last 150 years. An official Sesquicentennial project, "Railroads in Michigan" is a 180-page catalog of company publications containing more than 2,100 entries, maps of Michigan railroads and a graph of publications. The books sells for $16 hardcover or $13.50 paperback and can be obtained through the Northern Michigan University Bookstore, Marquette, Mich.

Kerby students celebrate sesquicentennial

School are joining in the 150th anniversary of Michigan statehood. On Jan. 26, students, teachers, parents and guests gathered at the school for a special birthday party.

Students, under the direction of May Krager, instrumental music teacher, Judie Bailey, vocal music teacher, and Rita Flaherty, fourth grade teacher, presented an adaptation of a specially commissioned musical, "Make Mine set to music. Special appearances were made by Pontiac, Cadillac, Stephen Mason, Mrs. Henry Ford I, and some of Michigan's immigrants. The mining and lumber industries were highlighted, and a special salute to the auto industry featured a Motown assembly line complete with workers and a car.

A slide presentation, produced from photos and original artwork from Barbara Leppiaho's fourth grade class, created the backdrop to the music.

The birthday cake consisted of a dozen sheetcakes, baked by room parents. They were combined and decorated with a map of the state and lit with 150 can-

Throughout the school year, various student displays highlighting Michigan will be featured in school showcases. The tri-annual Kerby Karnival, scheduled for March 21, will be centered around the theme of Michigan's Sesquicentennial.

Smokers aged 35-59 sought for study

If you're still puffing away on cigarettes, and if you're aged 35 to 59, you are needed to undergo a free lung function (breathing) test as part of a nationwide lung health study. The local screening sites are Henry Ford Hospital, Cottage Hospital and Henry Ford's Fairlane, Lakeside and West Bloomfield Center.

Two-thirds of those determined eligible to participate in the federally funded study will become involved in a program including a free smoking-cessation class.

Several screenings have also been held at work sites, including Michigan (AAA) center and Williams International in Walled Lake. Smoking cessation classes for selected participants have begun.

If you are a smoker aged 35 to 59 and would like to participate, call 876-1900 during business hours to make an appointment convenient for you. The breathing test takes about 15 minutes, and simply involves blowing into a machine called a spirometer.

The study of smokers is aimed at preventing chronic obstructive lung disease, which includes emphysema and chronic bronchitis. Henry Ford Hospital, along with other institutions including Johns Hopkins Medical Center, Mayo Clinic and the University of Pittsburgh, were chosen as sites for the National Institutes of Health study.

Chronic lung diseases are a major health problem in the U.S. There are 10 million people with the diseases and 60,000 of them die each year. Cigarette smoking is the most common cause. Death rates from these diseases have been steadily rising for more than a decade. Many have declining lung function for years before getting symptoms or becoming disa-

Participants who continue with the study may also receive a medication that could reduce lung damage. The medication is a bronchodilator in the form of an inhaler. The study will follow participants for five years, with periodic monitoring.

For further information or at Dearborn's Automobile Club of to make an appointment to be tested, call 876-1900.

Valentine folklore

If you're looking for some helpful hints for finding your true love on Valentine's Day, the Computerized Folklore Archive at the University of Detroit suggests you take a look at our fine feathered friends.

If you see a blackbird, you will marry a clergyman. A goldfinch means that your spouse will be a millionaire, but the bluebird spells a life of poverty because your future mate will be far from rich.

If no birds are in sight, drop three balls of clay into a bucket of water. Each should contain the name of a likely prospect on a sheet of paper. The first one to rise will be your valentine.

Dreams have a magic of their own and if you want to spend a night with your true love, follow one of these dream-recipes before going to bed:

• Put three bay leaves under you pillow. You're sure to dream of the person you will marry.

• Or boil an egg in salt water. Then eat the whole thing,

If that doesn't conjure up your future spouse, if might help to add some audio-appeal. Try reciting this piece of folk-verse: Good Valentine be kind to me; in a dream let

The archive, directed by Professor James T. Callow, is the world's first computerized folklore collection and it includes thousands of items collected every semester by students of folklore. Since 1964, informants have been steadily enlarging and refining the archive with traditions from all over the world. Eggs, for example, are widely recognized for the important roles they play in the serious business of courtship and marriage. Unmarried Polish and Hungarian girls used to give eggs, sometimes by the dozens, to their boyfriends. In Macedonia, engaged couples exchanged eggs as gifts while Russians and Indonesians used eggs at their marriage ceremonies. If you're hounded by an unwanted valentine, however, relief may be only a salt shaker away. Salt, according to folk wisdom, can quiet a storm, bless a new house, cure and earache, and - get rid of unwanted visitors.

Farms wine brokers have popped the cork on the market

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Last year the owner of a wellknown wine shop in the Metro Detroit area was interviewed on a local talk show. During the course of the interview, he said a certain French wine was known to reduce cholesterol in the blood. and therefore, decrease the likelihood of heart attack.

It was a claim without scientific backing, but that didn't stop listeners from ordering the wine by the case. In one week, a local distributor ran out of a six-month

That local distributorship was A.H.D. & Associates, a company now based in Melvindale, but born in Grosse Pointe Farms, and owned by a long-time Farms resi-

Anthony Hercules Delsener (that's were A.H.D. comes from), 78, started the wine brokerage in January 1973. Since then the company has grown from a twoman, basement-run operation, to a 14-man, computerized-inventory brokerage and importing company.

Delsener's two sons, Anthony "Chip," 34, and Richard, 32, work with their father out of the Central Detroit Warehouse located just off south I-75 in Melvindale.

Their operation is dwarfed by Seagram's which uses the public warehouse to store liquor for delivery to 14 states, but Delsener probably likes being surrounded by the mountainous stacks of cases of spirits.

In taking his replacement around the country to meet his customers, the friends he had developed said that they would miss him. When he told them he really didn't want to retire, they said. "why don't you get into the wine business, and we'll buy from

That sounded like a great idea to the retiring, but not tired father of five. A.H.D. started out as a wine brokerage. As a broker Delsener represents foreign wine companies and acts as middleman between the wineries and the wholesalers.

At first Delsener and his son Chip were involved in the business. The two worked out of Delsener's Ridge Road home, in which he has resided since the early 1950s, with desks in the basement.

"Oh, yes," Delsener said. "We had to get a permit for that."

At first the company served a number of states, while concentrating mainly in the Midwest. As the business grew and two more desks were added to the basement, it became clear other quarters were necessary. A.H.D. & Associates moved to the Grosse Pointe Plaza in St. Clair Shores.

After a short stint back in the basement of the house, A.H.D. moved its office operations to the

"We were importing from the beginning," Delsener said. "We became a distributor in 1981."

With the onset of its distributorship, Vintner's Ltd., the company took on a local clientele. A.H.D. is an independent broker representing more than a dozen suppliers from Germany, France, Spain, Italy and California, and Vintner's Ltd. is a local wholesaling company.

Because of his contacts, Delsener said he was able to latch onto some of the better known names in Europe. He now has the master distributorship in Michigan for a number of vintners including Georges Duboeuf and Pierre Dourthe, two better known French wines, and Fetzer and Buena Vista, two well-known California wines.

"If anyone wants those wines in the state, they have to come through us," Delsener said.

Vintners Ltd. supplies many small stores, large restaurants and hotels in the area. Among his clients are the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, Vintage Pointe, Hamlin's Farms Market and a number of other Grosse Pointe retailers.

"We serve Sparky Herbert's, The Old Place, Za Paul's, several of the chophouses, the Caucus Club, and Chambertin's in Dearborn," son Richard said.

He drove a delivery truck for about 18 months, before he became a salesman for the company.

"I was the fleet for a while there," he said reflectively, with a smile.

As with sales of any sort, the toughest part of the job is matching sales with inventory and getting the product there when the customer needs it.

One way to alienate a restaurant is not being able to deliver a wine on its list. "Sometimes we have to borrow the wine from another supplier or go to a broker in another state," Richard said. "That's the fun part. That's where you consider yourself a hero, or really scare yourself."

Though the Delseners declined to give their gross sales, they said the company sold more than 50,000 cases of wine in 1986. Some of those cases may cost $500 or $600 for 12 bottles.

There are many problems an importer and distributor can run into.

"You have a problem with the vintage," Delsener said. "You may just finish selling a customer on a 1984, and then run out. If you tell him all you have the next time is a 1985, you must sell him all over again.

Weather conditions can be a problem too. Wine is shipped from Europe by boat. When the Great Lakes freeze, the wine can no longer be brought directly to Detroit. It may have to be trucked Who's on first?

Our Jan. 29 issue was still warm from the press when we heard about the mistake in our first featured business story. Seems the duplex built on Maryland last fall wasn't the first one built since the big war. It was the second.

Got that information from the person who lives in the first one. Mary and Hilaire Huvaere moved into their house in 1952, one year after they got married. "We've been there all that time in the Cabbage Patch," Mrs. Huvaere told us. "My husband was born right across the street from the house you wrote about.'

A call to the Park building department puts it straight for posterity. John Pierce has the newest house (1986). The Huvaeres are second. And the next newest is Butch Korte's, built in 1941-42.

temperatures can freeze wine.

"We have had 1,200 cases come in before that were frozen," Richard said. "Of course, you can't use the wine, and it is covered by insurance — but it must be destroyed. A customs official stands right there and makes sure you have destroyed every bottle too.'

World monetary exchanges play an important role in the wine business. Delsener said that when the U.S. dollar slips against the French franc, prices will rise.

"There has been a tremendous increase in the price of white burgundy, for example," Delsener said. "Demand is also exceeding the supply for that wine, and the price has jumped 200 percent."

There are other problems too. One of his suppliers had trouble with their bottling equipment. The bottles came over with two or three corks in them. Some had no corks at all. When shipped, the bottles stand upright, but when stored in the warehouse the bottles are turned upside down to keep the corks wet and fresh.

"You can imagine what a mess that was," Delsener said. "You have all this wine leaking out and fruit flies everywhere.

The phone bill is high too, although the company uses a Telex whenever possible. Despite the costs and problems, there are 14 employees and the Delseners making a living at importing and distributing wine.

"The profit potential is there," Richard said. "We learned some things the hard way - like buying a wine that doesn't sell. You may like the wine, but it seems like you are the only guy in the city that does.'

Wine sales have been seeing a steady increase in recent years, and Richard said that last December may have been the company's best month ever.

'We've been growing very well," he said. "We sold twice as much wine in November and December as we did during the same time the year before.'

He said people are drinking better wines

> The wine industry, at least in Michigan, not only has to deal with economic and market forces, it must also deal with federal and state regulation.

"The Michigan Liquor Control

Commission must approve the label for the bottle and also analyzes the wine for content," Richard said. "We had a wine label that said something to the effect that the wine will bring you joy It was in French and in very sm^{-1} , type, but the LCC said the laber and to be changed."

Part of the way to keep down such unnecessary costs is to visit the suppliers in Europe, where Chip Delsener was when the interview took place.

"Chip is our resident wine expert," Richard said. "He'll visit the supplier and go over various things with them. There is a lot that can be done in person that is very difficult to do over the Telex or even over the phone."

Both Delseners see a big opportunity for growth in the wine industry, especially as California wines continue to gain in popularity. They said that California wines are now every bit as good as French wines, and vintners have the state-of-the-art in techniques, and can give a wine a French taste or keep its own identity as a California wine.

"It is a peculiar business," Richard said. "A lot of people are intimidated by wine. There are so many producers and so many different kinds.'

He added that if a wine columnist in one of the local newspapers, the New York Times or a national wine or beverage magazine, gives even a little plug to a wine there can be a huge demand.

"It is just like anything else," Richard said. "If they hear that something is good, they'll try it.'

Back in the office, the two Delseners and a salesman are scrambling to fill an extra large order. Calls are made, the computerized inventory is searched. It won't be a problem.

"There is a huge market out there," Richard said. "If as many people who drink beer, drank wine, we'd be a lot busier than we are now.

Art of the Dart

Grosse Pointe artist in nine-man exhibition of editorial cartooning

By Elsa Frohman Feature Editor

Draper Hill doesn't claim to know what qualifies as art.

"The lines have always been a bit fudgy," he said. "There are many things that are perceived later as art - with a capital 'A.' We're so busy doing it, I don't think that any of us worry about what it is."

Hill, a resident of Grosse Pointe, is an editorial cartoonist. His caricatures of local and national political figures are a regular feature on the editorial page

"They were expensive," Hill said. "They were bought as collector's items. People would have folios of caricatures. They would come out after dinner - after the ladies had retired."

were firmly established as a regular feature in weekly and daily newspapers.

"The public had a tremendous appetite for pictures," Hill said. Hill owns an extensive collection of 18th and 19th century cartoons.

"Over the last 20 years, there has been a tremendous rise in interest and collecting of cartoons," he said. "Most successful cartoonists exhibit for sale now."

Hill's collection includes 100 years of the magazine Punch, the first publication to use cartoons regularly.

'Collecting is a full-time job," he said. "And it gets harder and harder to move."

Hill's work as a cartoonist relies on condensing an idea into a single-frame picture. It falls somewhere in between the work of cartoonists like Jules Feiffer, who uses multiple frames and extensive dialogue, and Bill Mauldin, who works in a single frame with a minimum of printed words.

"There is no absolute formula," Hill said. "I try to keep my options open as long as possible. The point comes first and the picture second. I might set two men on the floor and build a room around them. Or I might start with a figure with his mouth open and then try to figure out what he's saying.

"They (the figures in his drawings) are like puppets and you have a sort of illusory control over them."

A caricature is less of a drawing of a person than a symbol that stands for the person, Hill said.

"There are all kinds of stories about cartoonists who draw a political figure, but when they actually meet, he doesn't recognize him," Hill said.

Nearly everything is fair game for the cartoonist's pen, Hill said. "Anything that touches people. You do what everyone is thinking about."

Not all cartoons are well received. While most public figures take their caricatures in stride, some don't, and the public can become incensed as seeing a hero portrayed with feet of clay.

"Think of how healthy that keeps everyone," Hill said. "All that anger vented. When I first came here, I managed to offend someone at each of the Big Three (auto companies). It's a lightning rod. But it's been a long time since anyone called to scream at Occasionally, a cartoon seems to take on a life of its own.

"Once (in another city) the mayor got me out of be at 8 a.m. to ask me what a cartoon I had drawn meant," Hill said. "It turned out that it meant more than when I drew it." The politician had interpreted the cartoon to allude to a situation that hadn't come out in the newspaper yet, and one of which Hill had no knowledge.

Hill produces a cartoon a day for The Detroit News. Most are political, though occasionally he draws his material from the broader world of experience. The problem is coming up with a new idea daily.

"The day when there is nothing published in the newspaper to give me a peg is a scary thought. But that doesn't happen," he said. "When I was right out of college, I was terrified of gridlock."

Hill starts his work day by making rough sketches of different ideas. He reads newspapers and looks for topics to draw.

"Nothing helps you get a better-than-average idea more than having one you're comfortable with already complete," Hill

Occasionally, an idea falls apart. Breaking news makes a cartoon that is ready to go in the paper invalid. Hill always has to have a back-up idea ready. Sometimes a late breaking story will make a last-minute cartoon necessary.

"If someone is assassinated, you may only have time to draw an American eagle saying 'Not again," Hill said.

Vicariate marriage preparation program opens lines of communication for couples

By Elsa Frohman Feature Writer

Ah, Valentine's Day - opening day for the spring spouse hunting

Hundreds of Grosse Pointe couples will take the plunge this spring, summer and fall. Some will achieve the goal of lifetime companionship and cooperation. Some won't.

But for couples planning to be married in Catholic churches within the Detroit-Grosse Pointe Vicariate, the church is taking steps to increase their chances of success. All couples planning a wedding at an eastside Detroit or Grosse Pointe Catholic church are required to complete an intensive marriage preparation course before the date.

Marriage preparation classes are nothing new. The Catholic was going to be horrid." church has required them for many years. What has changed is the content and format of those

The Detroit-Grosse Pointe Vicariate program, held two Sunday afternoons a month at Our Lady Star of the Sea High School, is operated by John Findlater and Fritzi Bohlmann, two adult education ministers. The program is oriented toward the practical aspects of marriage and focuses on topics such as finances, communication and dealing with in-

Nancy and Chris Jens are among the married couples who assist with the program by making presentations. They too were required to attend a marriage preparation program before they were married 15 years ago.

"We went to a three-day retreat," Chris said. "It was not like this at all. It was basically run by the church. There was no psychologist to talk to us. It was run by a priest. It was more struc-

"We bring some ideas to think about," Nancy said.

"No one is ever an expert on marriage," Chris said. "It's a lifetime of trial and error. We can share some things that will hap-

The Jens present one segment in a program that lasts from 1:45 p.m. until 6:30 p.m.

"We have a list of about 20 couples who come in and help us out," Findlater said. "We try to find couples who have been married for eight to 15 years — long enough to have a track record, but not so long that they have forgotten what it's like the first few

They also look for couples with special skills for communication and helping others. Many are social workers, psychologists and teachers. Two of the couples who participate on a now and then basis are former priests and nuns married to one another. Nancy Jens is a teacher and Chris Jens is a policeman.

While the program is oriented toward the practical aspects of marriage, the religious aspect is not ignored. The program is opened with a presentation by a priest on some of the spiritual aspects of the wedding.

"Marriage preparation has become an evangelism tool," Findlater said. "Couples come here who haven't been to mass in eons. Here they confront the church."

However, the main focus is not religious, Findlater said.

"Except for the portion on the marriage liturgy, nothing we do is so specifically Catholic that it wouldn't apply to any couple. This (program) is not meant to be in place of meeting with their priest. We're not here to talk about philosophy or ideals. We're here to deal with a very, very practical way to deal with the immediate future. Everything is concrete. No program is going to have an effect unless they go away and discuss what they have learned."

The program is divided into presentations on different sub-about handling the family budget. Bohlman gives a presentation on communication. In-laws, wedding ceremony plans and time management are discussed.

"We make them think about issues," Findlater said. "We talk about dealing with anger and jealousy, how to affirm each other and break social stereotypes. The only people they have to look to as models are their parents or "Leave It to Beaver," and that isn't a very realistic model. We show them new ways of looking at things.

Most couples are willing and eager to participate in the program," Findlater said. They are well aware of how many marriages end up on the rocks," he said. "The Catholic divorce, yet, statistics show that Catholic marriages don't last any longer than average. They come here willing to do anything to increase their chances.'

More than 450 couples have attended the program at Our Lady Star of the Sea in the past year. Administered by the vicariate (a subdivision of the diocese), the program is self-supporting. Couples pay a fee of $40 for the oneday course. "This program has been in

Meadow Brook preservationists plan Masked Ball fund-raiser

Ball on Feb. 28 kicks off fundraising efforts by the new Council for the Preservation of Meadow Brook Hall. Proceeds from the event will be used to build a permanent fund to ensure ongoing preservation of the historic home on Oakland University's east campus, Rochester.

The turnout was large and enthusiastic when Mrs. Roger B. Smith and Mrs. Donald E. Petersen invited potential party planners to a December gathering in the Smith home. The Masked Ball committee includes participants from Detroit, all the Grosse Pointes, West Bloomfield, Pontiac, Rochester, Huntington Woods, Dearborn, Troy, Franklin, Birmingham and Bloomfield Invitations were posted this month following an envelopestuffing get-together in the Shotwell-Gustafson Pavilion, where the ball will take place.

A lavish Mardi Gras Masked The morning began with coffee and bagels and a preview of masks and decorations that will be part of the gala evening. Stopping only for lunch, the committee completed more than 4,000 invitations for mailing.

Dress for the festive Mardi Gras Ball will be black tie, with mask required for admission. Masks will be judged during the evening, which begins with cocktails at 7 and dinner at 8:30 p.m., followed by dancing.

The Pastor's Corner Valentine's Day

By the Rev. George Schelter St. James Lutheran be a source of security. Valentine's Day gives us permission to make ourselves vulnerable and to embrace our responsibilities under this feeling called leve. How do we do it? We send cards or flowers, or we give gifts of candy or jewelry. All in the name of love. We give of ourselves, yet we don't quite give ourselves. We reveal something of ourselves, yet we don't quite reveal our whole selves. We want to plunge in completely, yet somehow we cannot bear

Cards range from the humorous, which let us cloak our vulnerability with a laugh, to the sentimental, which overstate our feelings to such a degree that one cannot easily be sure where fantasy leaves off and reality begins. Yet, cards do present our thoughts and feelings. Behind the thought that comes with each card is a human being, daring to love.

Flowers speak the message with splash and color, with delicate beauty and rich fragrance that enwrap the senses. Lavishly overdone, or quietly understated as in the case of a single red rose, they bring life and growth to the feeling of love. Yet to the immature, who knows whether the flowers will have the desired effect?

Candy is the extra, not necessary, but so desirable. To recieve it or to give it says that love for another person is something special, out of the ordinary. But what person can maintain their love for another on that level for a lifetime?

Jewelry, fine gold or precious gems, serves well as a gift for expressing love. First, it has intrinsic worth. In and of itself it has great value. Second, a long and expensive process gives fine jewelry its beauty. Mining and refining, cutting and polishing lead to the purest of gold and the most brilliant of jewels. Just the opposite of candy, jewelry serves to remind us of the endurance and refining that go to make mature a thing of beauty.

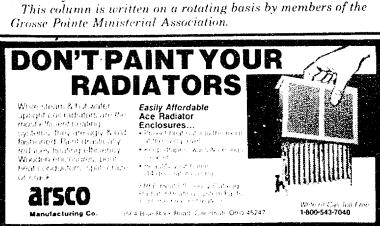

We put them all together or pick and choose from among them to say "I love you" on Valentine's Day. But amid our halting attempts to love, this day and its symbols give us a chance to look at the love of God. With cards we give thoughts that reveal how we are trying to give ourselves. God gave himself in Jesus, his son, to reveal his thoughts toward a world he loved. In Christ God revealed that before the world was made God chose us in love to be his children. That's the message of Ephesians 1.

While we worry about whether the flowers are right or will have the desired effect, we hear Jesus' words in Matthew, "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow. Will not God also take care of your worrying?"

When the special nature of our love, like the sweetness of candy, turns sour, and we feel we have nowhere to turn, we hear the words of Psalm 119: "How sweet are God's words to my taste, sweeter than honey to my mouth." God's words are words of eternal love, understanding, and forgiveness followed by life and growth in love.

When we give jewelry as a symbol of how precious someone is to us, we remember that the love that is precious is the love that ndures. God's love for us has endured through the refining fire of Jesus' suffering and death on the cross. It has been shown to be a thing of exquisite beauty. God's love for us in Jesus Christ has shown us that God declares us to be persons of worth and

Our God knows what love is. Jesus Christ made himself vulnerable for us, vulnerable to suffering and death on a cross. Not to love us to own and possess us, but by his love to give us life. As John reads: "Greater love has no one than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Might that not become the life behind our living? And the Love behind our loving on Valentine's Day?

World Day of Prayer

The World Day of Prayer will be held for the 100th time this March 6, with the theme "Come and Rejoice." The annual event is the product of a worldwide expression of mutual prayer and Christian unity.

The World Day of Prayer is an expression of local communities and its leadership is found among the laywomen of the church.

The event began in the United States in 1887 as a day of prayer for mission, but has developed into a movement in which Christians in 170 countries and regions of the world gather to observe a common day of prayer. The same theme and worship service is shared and translated into hundreds of languages and di-

This year's event will be held at Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church in Grosse Pointe Woods. The speaker will be Mort Crim, anchorman of the WDIVTV news. A fellowship hour will follow the service in the Star of the Sea gymnasium.

The committee consists of: Helen Hart, honorary chairman; Pat Barker, Fran Munaco and Delphine Kosek, co-chairmen; Marge Quinlan, general coordinator; June Promack, reception; Edward Higbee, music director; Zink, ushers.

Buckner Gibbs, cantor; Joann Crabb, leader of the service; Mary Kobuchar, Agape coordinator; Janet Brown and Irene Sowinski, publicity; Mary Ruggiroli and Lillian Rogers, social; and Nancy

League of Catholic Women

"Kids-N-Crime - What Can We Do?" will be the subject addressed by the Hon. Y. Gladys Barsamian at the 12th annual Jewish Catholic Day. This year's event will be held at Our Lady of Sorrows Parish, 23615 Power Road, Farmington, at 12:15 p.m. on March 5.

Presented by the League of Catholic Women of Detroit and the League of Jewish Women's Organizations of Greater Detroit, the program will be preceded by refreshments in the church's reception hall. The public is invited and reservations are not necessary. There will be a nominal donation of $1.

The program will begin at 1 p.m. following a brief welcome by the leagues' presidents, Marilyn F. Lundy of the League of Catholic Women and Dorothy Cohen of the League of Jewish Women's Organizations.

Judge Barsamian is the Presiding Judge of the Juvenile Division of Probate Court and a leading advocate for youth concerns and services. She will welcome questions following the program.

tages that make the program more attractive.

"There is the convenience," he said. "A lot of couples just can't get away for an entire weekend. And the cost of a weekend is significant. A lot of them like the idea of immersing themselves in an intensive program rather than dragging it out. (Some programs meet in the evening for periods of up to six weeks.)

Ironically, neither Bohlmann nor Findlater are married.

"We are the coordinators," Bohlmann said. "We have a very professional outlook. It is not flavored by, look, this is what I do. Some people who do this sort of thing come off as, I'm happily married, look at me.'

"It gives us more flexibilty in choosing couples for the program," Findlater said. "We have no vested interest."

Couples are enrolled in the program through their parish priest. Throughout the Province of Michigan (a larger division of the Catholic church) couples are required to contact their parish priest at least six months before they want to get married. It is recommended that they take the marriage preparation program at least two months before the date.

"Here at St. Paul (on the Lake), we require two or three sessions with a priest or deacon, as well as the marriage preparation program," said Monsignor Francis X. Canfield.

"Most see their priest at least a year before the wedding," said the Rev. Paul Panaretos of Our Lady Star of the Sea. "There are many things to set in motion.'

Both Panaretos and Canfield said that under certain rare circumstances, they might refuse to marry a couple who didn't want to go through the preparation

"If a couple comes to see me, whether they agree with me or not, they can always go elsewhere," Panaretos said. "Faith is an important part of life if they want to celebrate their wedding in the church. If they are uncooperative, I can't assist them on behalf of the church. Marriage is the only sacrament that the priest does not confer. A man and a woman confer it on each other. The priest acts as a witness. Because the couple celebrates the sacrament, the preparation likewise involves them. They must prepare themselves.'

"It's relatively rare," Canfield said. "In 16 years at St. Paul, I haven't had more than four or five couples where I said I can't be a part of this.'

Canfield pointed out that no one is automatically entitled to be married in the church.

"I ask them why they want to be married in the church," he said. "We're not here as a marriage mill. It has to be part of their total life in the church. I will not preside if they are just showing up to use the church."

Canfield said that marriage preparation has changed over the past 10 years.

"Now, couples seem to want to enter marriage with prepara-tion," he said. "This was not so true nine or 10 years ago. Then, they were resentful when they were expected to go to preparation. They've seen the statistics and they are willing to do anything to prepare. There is more time spent with the couple now than 10 years ago.

Sue Jackson from Pettipointe chapter of Questers will present a slide program on "Winterthur" to the Grosse Pointe Questers on Friday, Feb. 13, at 10 a.m., at the home of Patricia Martin.

Winterthur (pronounced Winterter, Swiss) was the family home of Henry Francis du Pont (1880-1969). Du Pont disliked the veneered mahogany furniture of his childhood home in Delaware. It was a pine dresser filled with pink-and-white Stafford-shire pottery in the home of Electra Watson Webb's home in Shelburne, Vermont that inspired Du Pont to "Americanize" the family home.

Structures from the original 13 colonies provided interiors that served as backgrounds for Du Pont's furnishings. Geographically, they ranged from New England to South Carolina; chronologically, from 1640 to 1840. As he became engrossed in collecting and creating period rooms, Du Pont concentrated increasingly on historical accuracy. Winterthur opened as a museum in 1951.

Jackson worked as a docent at Winterthur for six years. She presently is a gallery aide with the Detroit Institute of Arts and gives slide talks for the Detroit Historical Society.

Myrtle Palmer and Muriel Stoetzer will cohost the luncheon.

Grosse Pointe Singles will have an open Valentine's Day Dance for prospective members and GPS members on Saturday, Feb. 14, in the Stephan's Room of the Continental Lanes, 31055 Gratiot at 13 Mile Road in Roseville, next to the Georgian Inn, at 8:30 p.m.

Trial memberships for a six month period are now being accepted. Call the GPS Hotline 445-1286 for more information.

On Feb. 16, at noon, the Ribbon Farms chapter of the Questers will meet at the home of Beatrice Scanlan for a luncheon meeting.

Rita Monterosso will present a program on the "Wonders and Beauty of Silk." Included will be a brief history of this luscious material. From a scientific perspective, Rita will visually explain the mysterious beginnings of silk with the aid of an actual cocoon.

The Eastside Handweavers Guild, an association of persons involved in various fiber arts, including weaving, spinning and basketry, will hold its monthly meeting on Monday, Feb. 16, at the Grosse Pointe Central Library.

Claudia Stieber, a teacher of basketry, will instruct the members in the making of an elbow basket, an open weave basket used for decorative purposes. Kits to make the basket will be available at the meeting for $3.50. This program was originally planned for January, but the meeting was cancelled because of a snowstorm.

Refreshments and social hour will begin at 7 p.m. with a business meeting at 7:30 p.m. and the program scheduled for 7:45 p.m. For further information you may call Sue Ellison at 881-2906 or Mary Leigh Herdegen at 882-2261.

Grace McGill and her co-hostess, May Simon, will entertain the Pointe Book Club at a luncheon at the McGill residence on Monday, Feb. 16.

The club is fortunate in having a well known reviewer, Doris Brucker, present "Contact" by Carl Sagan.

The Grosse Pointe chapter of the American Business Women's Association will hold a membership campaign during the months of February, March and April. The kickoff activity will take place at the chapter's regular meeting to be held Wednesday, Feb. 18, with cocktails at 6 p.m. and dinner at 6:30 p.m. at a Grosse Pointe

According to co-chairpersons Betty Knop, Grosse Pointe Woods, and Rose Casey, Mount Clemens, the campaign will focus on personal and professional growth opportunities for business women. The guest speaker for the evening is Katherine Corrick, executive at Michigan Bell Telephone Company and one of the first two women accepted for membership in the Detroit Athletic Club.

Founded in 1949, ABWA is an influential national organization with a membership exceeding 112,000 women who are employed in all aspects and levels of business. ABWA has more than 2,100 chapters throughout the United States and Puerto Rico.

Women who are employed are eligible for membership. For more information about ABWA and this special meeting, interested business women should contact: Mary Wakeman, membership chairperson, 774-0300, after 6 p.m.

The Theatre Arts Club of Detroit presents "The Supporting Cast" by George Furth, Friday afternoon, Feb. 20, at 1 p.m., at Players Playhouse. This two act play concerns an author who has written a book about characters based on her friends. She has invited them to her sumptuous home at Malibu, Calif. The publisher informs her that she must get waivers from each person before they will finish the job.

Before the curtain rises, Rita Stormes, president, will welcome members and their guests. Refreshments will be served immediately following the performance by Lucille Grenzke and Kathryn Neumann and their committee

The cast consists of Margaret Lindner, Sharon Conti, Karen Quarnstrom, Julia Keim and Maralyn Domzalski who appears for the first time on stage.

The director for this play is Joann Koch. Margaret Guertler and Monica Locke are The cast consists of Margaret Lindner, Sharon Conti, Karen Quarnstrom, Julia Keim and Maralyn Domzalski who appears for the first time on stage.

The Theatre Arts Choral Ensemble, under the direction of Audrey Jennings, will open the program singing the traditional Theatre Arts Song.

The Macomb chapter of Naim (Widows and Widowers) has its monthly meeting the third Wednesday of each month. Feb. 18 is the next meeting at 7 p.m., at St. Barnabas, on 10 Mile and Phlox, East Detroit, Mich., (between Hayes and Gratiot). This month there will be a Valentine Fun Night. Refreshments will be served. Donation is $2. For further information call Stella, 892-6458 or Frances, 526-9365.

The Mah-Nah-Be-Zee chapter of Questers had its February meeting on the afternoon of Feb. 10, at the home of Gladys Canty of Detroit. The program was "The Restoration of the County Building."

Members attended from Mount Clemens, Sterling Hieghts, Harper Woods, the Grosse

Fort Pontchartrain chapter Daughters of the American Revolution will meet on Friday, Feb. 20, at the home of Mrs. Joseph Thomas, 5251 Hillcrest, Detroit.

Pointes, Warren, Roseville and Detroit.

Thomas will give a talk on "The Establishment of the Detroit Symphony." The DAR reminds us that the Centennial of the Constitution of the United States of America is on Sept. 17, and urges us to study this document also to observe February as American History Month by flying the country's flag and learning the Pledge of Allegiance.

A mayoral proclamation from James R. Haley, mayor of the city of Harper Woods was presented to the Fort Pontchartrain chapter DAR stating in part that ... "February 1987 is American History month and and is recognizing the community service performed by the Fort Pontchartrain chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution in our area ..."

Members of the Grosse Pointe Farm and Garden Club met in the home of Janice Cordes on Feb. 9. Hostesses for the meeting were Betsy Maitland, Martha Jean Merry and Mary Flinterman. After a business meeting conducted by club president, Josephine Zara, a program entitled "Historic Gardens" was presented by Charles Cares, professor emeritus of landscaping architecture at the University of Michigan.

Members of the Alpha Mu chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, an international honorary society for women in education, initiated new members: Frances Carnaghi, Elaine Christensen, Joanne DiFazio, Kathleen Gucwa, Nancy Kline, on Feb. 5, at the Grosse Pointe Central Library. President Rachel Brake officiated at the candlelighting ceremony. Following the ceremony, there was a brief business meeting and then a reception to honor and greet the new members.

The Lakeside Palette Club will hold its regular meeting on Thursday, Feb. 19, at the Civic Arena, 2000 Stephens, St. Clair Shores, at 7:30 p.m.

The Project Hope League will hold its annual membership meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 18, at 8 p.m., at the Sterling Inn, 34911 Van Dyke, in Sterling Heights. There will be no admission charge and there will be an open coffee bar and snacks. A cash bar will be available.

After a short progress report, there will be an election for the new board of directors and New Year's Resolutions to advance Project Hope in 1987.

For more information, call Jerry Celeskey between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. at 893-1966. After 4 p.m., leave a message at 649-0614.

The Louisa St. Clair chapter of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will hold its Feb. 19 meeting at the Jefferson Avenue Presbyterian Church at 10:30 a.m. February is American History Month and the chapter will recognize 27 Good Citizen high school seniors who were selected by their peers for scholastic and leadership achievement.

Chairman Josephine Benson will award a pin, certificate and Roget's Thesaurus to each student.

One hundred sixty-two history essays were submitted by middle school students. First place winners were: University Liggett, Kelly Ford; Detroit West Side, Dorinda Cauthon; Detroit East Side, Arthur J. Martin Jr. Each will receive a bond, silver medal and certificate, to be awarded by chairman Elizabeth Ryckman. She will also make a presentation to the Outstanding Detroit History Teacher, Erma Browne of Martin Luther King Junior High School.

Reservations are being taken by Harriette Wheeler and Elizabeth Ryckman.

The Grand Marais chapter of Questers will gather for its Feb. 13 meeting at the home of Kay Welcenbach. The subject for the meeting will be "Valentines, their history and development."

The earliest record of a Valentine is one of Chaucer's from 1370, titled "Parlement of Brydds." In 1840, the printed envelope and the delivery of mail by Penny Post changed the writing habits of Great Britain and North America, making it safer and more dependable.

Jeanne Lorenz of Cady's Corner chapter, named for an early landmark at Utica Road and 15 Mile Road, will share her research efforts and her collection of antique Valentines. Her earliest Valentine dates from 1905

Members are encouraged to bring any examples they may have.

The Grosse Pointe Camera Club will meet on Tuesday, Feb. 17, at 7:30 p.m., at Brownell Middle School. The assignment is "Doors." There will be a mini-program by Alice Goslow. For more information, call 881-8034. Visitors are welcome.

- 1/3 cup finely chopped onion
- 1 tsp. lemon juice 1 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. paprika
- 1/4 tsp. nutmeg 1 Tblsp. margarine
- NOODLES:
- 1 pkg. (8 ounces) spinach noodles

2 Tblsp. melted margarine 1 Tblsp. minced parsley

Combine bread crumbs and skim milk and allow to soak a few minutes. Add ground pork, beaten egg substitute, onion, lemon juice, salt, paprika and nutmeg. Mix well and shape into walnutsized balls, about 18 to 22 balls. Melt margarine in 10-inch skillet and brown balls well on all sides. Cover and cook on low heat about 15 to 20 minutes until pork is done. Remove the balls from skillet and keep warm. Prepare sauce: Add margarine to the oils remaining in the skil-mustard. Add skim milk and cook, stirring until sauce has thickened. Dissolve cornstarch thoroughly into yogurt then stir into the sauce until smooth. Add dill weed and pepper. Return pork balls to skillet and heat thoroughly, but do not boil. Serve pork balls over noodles.

Cook noodles according to package directions. Drain well and toss with margarine and parsley. Makes about five servings.

Freezer Bread Sticks

- 3 to 3½ cups unsifted flour 1/4 tsp. sugar
- 1½ tsp. salt 2 pkgs. active dry yeast
- 1 Tblsp. softened margarine 14 cups very warm water
- (120° to 130°F) 1 egg white, beaten
- 1 Tblsp. cold water Toasted sesame or poppy seeds or 1/4 cup finely chopped walnuts In a large bowl thoroughly mix one cup flour, sugar, salt and undissolved yeast. Add margarine.

Gradually add water to dry ingredients and beat two minutes at medium speed in electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough additional flour to make a soft dough. Turn out onto well floured board.

Divide dough into 16 equal pieces. Roll each piece of dough into a rope, 20 inches long. Cut each rope into five pieces four baking sheet, rolling to grease all sides of dough. Cover with plastic wrap. Freeze until firm. Transfer to plastic bags. Freeze up to four weeks.

Remove from freezer and place on ungreased baking sheets. Cover and let stand at room temperature until fully thawed, about 30 minutes. Let rise in warm place, free from draft, until double in bulk, about 15 minutes.

Brush with combined egg white and water. Sprinkle with seeds or nuts. Bake at 375° in preheated oven 20 to 25 minutes, or until done. Remove from baking sheets and cool on wire racks. Makes 80

Chiffon Gingerbread

- 1/2 cup margarine
- 1/2 cup sugar 1 cup molasses
- 1 tsp. cinnamon 1/2 tsp. cloves
- 1 egg, beaten
- 2½ cups flour 1 tsp. soda
- 1 tsp. ginger
- 1 cup hot water

Cream margarine and sugar until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat until very light. Thoroughly beat the molasses into the sugar mixture. Sift dry ingredients together, then add alternately with the hot water. Stir until very smooth. Pour batter into 13x9x2-inch baking pan.

Don't you just love it?

In honor of St. Valentine's Day (contrary to popular opinion, I DO have a heart), I thought I'd dispense with the cards and flowers and get straight to the heart (yuk, yuk) of the mat-

Don't you just love it when ...

... the North-South games are over for another year? Now that we're two-thirds of the way through the 1986-87 round of inter-city contests (with baseball, track, boys' tennis and girls' soccer and softball still on tap), I find myself wondering: what's the big deal?

Maybe there's something wrong with me, but I get a little tired of the hoopla and the rivalry and the nasty comments that fly back and forth between fans of the two schools. What most people don't realize is that the players from North and South don't feel that way at all. For them, it's a matter of pride to beat the "other school," but once the game ends, it's over. You've got to remember that many of these guys (particularly the baseball, hockey and soccer players) played on the same teams with one another before they got to high school. Lots of them — dare I say it? are friends.

Don't you just love it when ...

people who do a good job, work hard and fail to get much recognition finally get the credit they deserve? I'm talking about folks like Reba Torongo and Judy Englebrecht, who work in the University Liggett School athletics office and publications office, respectively. They type - thank goodness! - the press releases ULS sends our way. Then there's Suzanne Raymo, lower school art teacher who develops and prints all the ULS photos we use in the Grosse Pointe News.

Know of any other hard-working, hardlyrecognized folks who deserve a little time in the limelight? Send me their names and I'll be glad to publish their stories.

Don't you just love it when ...

.. you see the big-name baseball players who became free agents and vowed that they'd never again play for their old teams, sitting around waiting for better offers that may not come? I like Lance Parrish and Jack Morris, but I'm anxiously awaiting the outcome of the Parrish situation to see who wins the "Who can shoot his mouth off the biggest" contest for 1987.

Don't you just love it when ...

. . . high school athletes from one sport show up at other sporting events? I saw a number of ULS's basketball players at the Knights' hockey game against DCDS last Saturday night and some South cagers watching hockey on Monday. I think it's neat when players from different teams support their classmates.

I especially liked it when senior William Middlebrooks entertained the crowd between periods with his attempt at "Meeker Madness" - ULS's version of the popular game of Score-0.

I think I'd like to play Meeker Madness one day. I wonder if they'd let me stickhandle my way up to the net and slam the puck through the little slot from about eight inches out?

Don't you just love it when ...

... you find a typo or mistake in a newspaper? I do, when I'm a reader and not a writer. As a writer, I'm not crazy about it, but I recently made an error I'd like to clear up. A sharp-eyed reader called to let me know that I was incorrect when I wrote about South's volleyball coaches snacking on red and green M & Ms during breaks in the action. Turns out they were cinnamon candies, not M & Ms, a fact which surprised even South coach Cindy Sharpe, who bit into a mouthful of hot candies, thinking they were chocolate.

Hey, it's a small thing, but we want to get it right.

Don't you just love it when

.. people do unexpected things? Like last week when a local fitness expert brought me a box of candy, of all things. It was nice, but we're not supposed to accept things like that.

Unless it's Valentine's Day or something (hint, hint).

North strikes back

The No. 7-ranked North High hockey team evened this year's North-South series at 1-1 and increased its Michigan Metro League-East division lead to five points over South with an 8-3 victory before a much improved crowd on Monday night.

North peppered South goalie Kevin Nesler in the first period and midway through had a 2-0 lead on goals by Link Bessert and Chris Matyn. But South's Tim Jerome and Andy Roy converted a couple of rebounds - Roy's on the power play - and the period ended in a 2-2 tie.

The Blue Devils had numerous power play opportunities in the second period, but the high-flying Norsemen had the better chances, forcing Nesler to make several sharp saves. Then with 7:11 remaining, Matyn sent the puck into the crease and Jon Hen-

Grosse Pointe's celebration was a little more subdued than that of the San Diego Yacht Club members when Dennis Conner's Stars & Stripes crossed the finish line last week and regained American possession of the America's Cup, but local sailors were still jubilant over Conner's 4-0 sweep in earning sailing's most prized trophy.

"I think it is a most fantastic achievement for Dennis Conner. It was my prediction that Dennis would do it. He was hungry enough and had the people involved with him to enable him to succeed," said the City's John Stevens. Stevens is one of this area's top sailors. His boat, the IOR-A Sprint, was named ORCD Boat of the Year for 1986 after winning the 1986 Port Huron to Mackinac race.

"I know Dennis and his perseverence is incredible. He doesn't give up. But you also have to have a good team and he did. Stars & Stripes had an enormous technical team and that isn't thrill of America's Cup win

"I'm excited, but I kind of expected it. I wasn't really surprised that Star & Stripes won it 4-0. You could almost tell what was going to happen in the first leg. With the boat speed Conner had, it's hard to make up for that. All things considered, the faster boat is going to come through every time,' Szymanski said.

Szymanski credited the crew of Stars & Stripes for the quick victory. "The men in the afterguard are the best match racers in the business. Stars & Stripes simply outperformed Kookaburra III. It's hard to judge a boat until you race against it and what happened was that Dennis Conner just had the fastest boat and the most experienced crew."

The sense of pride and accomplishment which was most certainly felt by Conner and his crew has filtered down to American sailors in general, according to both Stevens and Szymanski. "I think America has the best talent and the best thing to come out of this victory will be that yacht racing is being publicized more. CHIEFS-MAJOR MAGICS

The Sequoia Chiefs took a 3-1 win in this close game highlighted by scoring opportunities on both sides. Rami Zayat opened the scoring with two quick goals, one on an assist by J.C. Tibbits. The Magics' Sawaf scored to make it close, but the Chiefs iced the game in the third period with an unassisted goal. Elich tested Chiefs' goalie Todd; Zimmer and Baskel also played well. LaPiana, Meldrum and J. Lariscy also turned in good games.

CHIEFS-LEAFS

Another fine team effort made it seven in a row for the Chiefs as they beat the Century 21-East Leafs, 4-2. Jason Popham scored twice and Coates and Zayat once each. Tibbits drew an assist. Leafs' goalie Merriweather stopped several breakaways. K.C. Anderson, Brad Balesky, Meade, McCain and Knudsen played well for their teams.

LEAFS-MAGICS

The Leafs topped the Major Magics, 4-1. Ryan Allard scored twice in the first period, once from Tony Barratta. Mary Meade made it 3.0 when she converted a Ryan McCain pass. Brian Everham scored for the Magics from Daniel Baskel. Goalie Richard Carlson made some sharp saves with help from Danny Magdowski. Geoff Kimmel added the final Leafs' goal from Georgie Massu. Turning in excellent performances for their teams were Jonathon Bayko, Jacob Linder, Brent Kuhar, Sebastian Yofre, Todd McCain, Tim Kimmel, Sara Nixon, Browe Merriweather and Jason Santo.

ARROWS-HAWKS

The Arrows got back on the winning track, edging the Proform Hawks, 3-2. Hawks' goalie Robert King turned away several shots, but Matt and Ben Debski and C-liner Chris Mitchell scored for the Arrows from Rocky Bryant, Billy Crandall and Joseph Wernet. CHIEFS-FLAMES

The Warren Flames edged the Chiefs, 2-1, in the first game of the district playoffs. The Chiefs had numerous opportunities, but couldn't connect. Warren took a 2-0 lead, including a strange goal which struck a Warren stick, hit the crossbar and fell into the net. The Chiefs closed the score to 2-1, but failed to tie, making it necessary to win in game two. Shots on goal were even at 17 apiece.

FLAMES-PIZZA I

The Flames and Pizza One squared off for their second contest within a week. Adam Tanielian started the scoring when he converted Frank Lucido's pass. After Pizza One tied the score in the second period, Tanielian teamed with Lucido and Dan Grundman to put the Flames back into the lead. Seconds later, the three again combined, with Lucido getting the goal. Before the period ended Lucido had garnered a three-assist game and Tanielian a hat-trick as the Flames led 4-1. In the third period. Andy Bond and Blake Crawford worked the puck to Derek Smith who pulled the Pizza 1 netminder and fired the puck into the net. At the other end of the rink the defense of Grundman, Nick Black, Bond and Crawford broke up rushes and Jim Bunn turned aside every shot. Smith scored again from Black. Dan Strader, Tanielian and Lucido along with Scott Collins combined on their familiar play and Renato Roxas used Crawford's beautiful centering pass from Paul Cavazos to score the final goal for an 8-1 Flames' victory.

FLAMES-RAIDERS

The Flames traveled to St. Clair Shores, beating the Raiders, 8-0. Andy Vyletel and Roxas each notched his first hat trick of the season and Bunn stoned the Raiders in the nets for his fourth shutout. Crawford led the defensive play, stopping the Raiders numerous times at the blue line. He also assisted on three goals. Bond had two assists and Lucido grabbed a goal and three assists. Tanielian had a goal and two assists; Black, a goal and an assist; Grundman and Strader each had an assist. The victory raised the Flames record to 21-9-2.

FLAMES-WHALERS

The Flames played a game against their older compatriates in the Midget Division and skated off with a 4-2 victory. Tanielian used passed from Lucido and Vyletel to put the Whalers up 1-0. After the Whalers tied the game in the second period, Tanielian put the Flames ahead from Gabe Benvenuto and Bond. Before the period was over Bond took the puck after Lucido won the faceoff, skated around behind the net and stuffed the puck into the net for a 3-1 lead. In the third period Tanielian scored for the third time in the game on passes from Roxas, Black and Strader to increase the lead to 4-1. Goalie Bunn victimized the Whaler marksman until the final minutes of the game when a series of crisp passes enabled the Whalers to score.

CHAMP focus: safety

Cottage Hospital Athletic Medicine Program (CHAMP), in association with the Athletic Department of Macomb Community College (MCC), will present a Safe Sports lecture at the South Campus, on Twelve Mile Road in Warren.

"The Effects of Exercise and How to Begin a Regular Program" is the topic of the Tuesday, Feb. 17, CHAMP presentation at Macomb Community College. This program is designed to encourage an active lifestyle. Material covered includes the effects of exercise on the body, detailed information on how to develop a Zack Van Auken, Dennis, Tanya regular exercise program, and methods to record and reassess progress. The program is set for 8 to 10 p.m., in Room P-130 of the Physical Education Center.

> Future CHAMP programs at Macomb Community College will deal with the relationship between leg, ankle and foot injuries and proper footwear, back problems and their prevention, and common knee, shoulder and throwing injuries.

The lecture series is free, but space is limited and reservations should be made by calling the MCC Athletic Department at 445-7476. MCC is located on 12 Mile Road, between Schoenherr and Groesbeck, in Warren.

In addition to the Safe Sports lecture, Macomb Community College Physical Education Center is the site of a CHAMP Injury Clinic. The clinic is open to the general public, recreational sports enthusiasts, athletes and nonathletes who suffer from muscle strains or other injuries resulting from daily living.

The clinic is held from 4:30 to 5 p.m., every Thursday through May 14, except March 19 and April 16. An orthopedic surgeon and the CHAMP staff of athletic trainers assess injuries and recommend treatment. No appointment is necessary. The initial consultation fee is $20. Physical therapy, if needed, is available through Cottage Hospital.

61-40 in their first round game on Feb. 6 and came back on Saturday to whip a powerful Maumee Valley squad, 66-56. Maumee had beaten Ann Arbor Greenhills by 10 points on Friday night.

ULS began the contest determined not to let Maumee Valley get any fast break points. Coaches Chuck Wright and Domenic Facciolla felt that Maumee's Achilles' heel was its halfcourt offense. The strategy paid off. Thanks to balanced scoring from John Yancey, Kandia Milton, Kevin Crociata and Bill Lucken, the Knights led 17-10 at the end of the first quarter.

Foul trouble slowed III.S in the second quarter. William Middlebrooks picked up his third foul early in the quarter and Milton was hit with his second. Maumee Valley crept back to trail 30-27 at halftime. The third quarter remained extremely close. The Knights rattled Maumee with a half-court trap defense and led 46-42 heading into the fourth quarter.

Then Yancey took over. He hit five perfect long-range jump shots to give ULS a 10-point bulge. Middlebrooks scored twice on crucial baseline jumpers and Crociata sealed the win with four clutch foul shots late in the game.

Icers beat CC, Rice, lead MML east with 13-4 record

By Brian Nettle Special Writer

North's hockey team completed an excellent week of hockey, upsetting No. 2 ranked Catholic Central, 5-4 and knocking off a tough Brother Rice team, 7-4. North is now 10-3 in the Michigan Metro League, and first place in its division, five points ahead of cross-town rival South.

North opened the scoring in the first period against Catholic Central when Rob Marshall made a few nice moves and put North up 1-0. Central tied it a few minutes later, and the first period ended 1-1. North played a flat second period, and CC took advantage of it to take a 3-1 lead. North came out flying in the third period. Marshall scored his second goal of the night to cut the lead to one, but Central retaliated with a goal to make the score 4-2 with nine minutes left. Link Bessert took a nice pass from Bob Poulos, went in alone on the Central goalie, and buried it. Brian Schweitzer tied it on a nice pass from Chris Matyn. Then, with about five minutes to go, Bessert took a pass from Brian Nettle and scored to give North the win. Rob Koehler played a key role in the last goal.

Cagers win

North's varsity basketball squad captured a pair of Bi-County affairs, downing both L'Anse Creuse and South Lake. The Norsemen are now 9-3 overall and 4-1 in the league, tied for first with Clintondale.

North went on the road on Feb. 3 at L'Anse Creuse and overtook the Lancers in the fourth quarter for a 49-41 win. The Lancers led most of the game and held a 32-28 advantage heading into the last quarter. North stormed back, outscoring L'Anse Creuse, 21-9, the rest of the way.

Senior guard Dave Justice led the field in scoring for the Norsemen with 17 points; junior forward Karl Schultz added 14. Junior center Kirk Lowry pulled down eight rebounds.

On Feb. 6, North returned home for a big game against a tough South Lake squad. The Cavaliers had defeated Clintondale only a week earlier. South Lake couldn't handle the Norsemen, however. North led by five at the half and rolled to a 56-39 victory.

Senior guard C.J. Anderson paced North with 15 points. Senior forward Scott Reiter chipped in with 12. (By Josh Abbott)

Spikers streak

The girls' varsity volleyball team took sixth out of 16 teams at the Grand Blanc Tournament on Jan. 31. The team showed excellent all-around play; Julie Cook and Mary Lex each served 35 35 points.

On Feb. 2, the girls battled Lakeshore and came up with a victory, 15-1, 15-5. Beth Nixon had seven service points. Brablec beat North Feb. 4, 11-15, 15-12,

You've gotta have heart

Valentine's Day is just around the corner, so it's an ideal time to talk about the most important muscle in our body: the heart. It's an extraordinary pump. Based on a typical resting heart rate of 70 heats per minute, the heart beats at least 37 million times a year. It weighs about a pound and is divided into two chambers. To visualize this make a fist with your left hand and wrap your right hand around it. Your fist represents the muscular left chamber which receives oxygen-rich blood from the lungs and pumps it into the cells throughout the body. Your right hand represents the less muscular area of the heart which accepts oxygen-poor blood returning from the body.

As the heart ejects blood, it is doing two kinds of work: volume work and pressure work. To maintain a healthy heart, it is far better to have your heart do volume work, such as that associated with endurance exercise, than it is to do pressure work associated with purely strength exercises such as lifting heavy weights.

The heart is amazingly responsive to the internal and external demands placed on your body. Exercise, emotion, heat, digestion, anemia, body position and level of fitness all change heart rate.

As a heart attack is the leading cause of death in America, doesn't it make sense to take care of your heart by exercising and eating less fat to decrease the chances of narrowing the arteries?

According to the American Heart Association most heart attacks result when a blood clot forms in a narrowed artery and blocks the flow of blood to the part of the heart muscle supplied by the artery. Some of the symptoms are: an uncomfortable pressure, fullness, squeezing or pain in the center of your chest (that may spread to your shoulders, neck or arms) and discomfort that lasts for two minutes or longer. Sweating, dizziness, fainting, nausea, a feeling of severe indigestion, or shortness of breath also may occur.

If you should experience any of these symptoms, don't shrug them off. Over 350,000 people die each year before they reach the hospital as the average victim waits three hours before deciding to seek help.

There are 4,740,000 people alive today with a history of heart attack, chest pain or both. In addition, as many as 1,500,000 Americans will have a heart attack this year and about 550,000 of them will die.

A new life cycle

Valentine's Day is celebrated each year to let our family and friends know how much we love and care about them. Candy and flowers, or mushy or funny cards are sent as symbols of this love. How about adding your name to your list of people you care for and give yourself the perfect gift: a "Life Cycle?"

The Life Cycle is perfect for any level from beginner to expert. Accessories can be added as needs arise throughout the years. The best thing about it is that it can last a lifetime. It cannot be purchased for any amount of money, and the only person who can give you a Life Cycle is you.

What exactly is a Life Cycle? It is unique, unlike any cycle you have owned. The frame is a wellbalanced diet. Exercise forms the pedals and gears. The tires are weight control. Relaxation and visualization are the handlebars. Sufficient rest is the seat which makes the ride go smoothly. So even if it seems a little bit early in the season, let's put your cycle together.

The frame: A well-balanced diet. The framework is crucial to any structure. It's what holds everything together. That's what a well-balanced diet does for a healthy lifestyle, it makes all the other parts work smoothly and in unison. Any cyclist will tell you that the best frame is both light and strong. The same is true with diet. It consists of foods that support you; strong in nutritional needs, yet light enough to provide good energy and not bog you down.

The tires: Weight control. An over-inflated tire makes the ride a lot rougher and it is also a potential hazard - an accident just waiting to happen. So it is with our Life Cycle. Weight control is essential if you are interested in maintaining a healthy life. Obesity is a risk factor and can aggravate other existing health conditions. It can be controlled through close monitoring.

Exercise: The pedals and gears. The pedals and gears serve as the driving force for continuous action. Exercise keeps your Life Cycle moving. It increases your body's strength and health, tones muscles, burns calories and strengthens the cardiovascular system.

The seat: Adequate rest. If you want to enjoy your ride, a wellfitted seat is a must and plays an important part in your endurance. Getting the proper amount of rest assures you time for your body to repair and rejuvenate itself. Attitude, body functions and overall health can all be adversely affected by a lack of sleep, and no amount of exercise and nutritious foods will compensate for it.

The handlebars: Relaxation and visualization. If you want to control the direction in which you are going and avoid road hazards, you must use the handlebars. They help to brace and support you on the bicycle. When you want to control the direction in which your life is traveling, relaxation and visualization act as a support system, enabling you to direct your life, and helping you to deal with stumbling blocks along the way. When you are able to visualize problems that may lie ahead, you can make a "game plan" to deal with them successfully.

There are two things you must remember: 1) your Life Cycle won't go unless you put aside terests you and work out at least your excuses and get on it; 2) your Life Cycle requires balance. Each part is integral to the whole.

Your Life Cycle requires maintenance and like the yearly servicing that keeps your bike in good condition, an annual physical examination can do the same for you. It can be the confirmation that you are maintaining good health, and if a problem should arise, it can be dealt with before it becomes serious.

Manual and Maintenance guide

• Enjoy the natural, fresh taste of foods. Don't squelch the flavors in heavy sauces and gravies.

• Replace half of your beverage consumption (coffee, tea, soda pop, alcohol) with water.

• Eliminate or at least cut back on junk foods and decrease the amount of white flour and refined sugars in your diet.

• Set aside 15 minutes each day to relax and visualize. This is like taking a "mini-vacation" away from the daily stresses.

• Cut down on the amount of fats you consume by baking or broiling meats. Steam your vegetables instead of boiling them. Pass on butter, using herbs and seasonings instead.

• If you gain more than three pounds above your ideal weight, take immediate action and get it

• Select an exercise that inthree times a week. Take advantage of daily opportunities to exercise: use the stairs instead of the elevator, park at the far end of a parking lot, get off the bus one stop sooner than your regu-

on fast foods Go easy

Fast-food eateries are now offering nutrition booklets "to go," but the largest group of nutrition professionals says healthy fastfood eating requires meatier information.

"For the 48 million Americans who eat meals on-the-run each day, just knowing ingredients in fast food is not enough," said Anita Owen, Registered Dietitian (RD) and president of the 55,000member American Dietetic Association. "They key to nutritious fast food eating lies in rounding out your diet the rest of the day, because fast foods generally are high in calories, fat, and sodium (salt)," she said.

In addition to recognizing that salads, fruit juices and low-fat milk are nutritious food and beverage choices, Owen said consumers can make wiser fast-food selections by being aware that:

• Fried foods, such as chicken and fish, pies and fries, contain as much as 45-60 percent fat. (No more than one-third of the day's calories should come from fat.)

 Foods and sandwiches served without condiments are lower in sodium. For example, one tablespoon of ketchup contains about 150 milligrams sodium, and one tablespoon of mustard contains about 180 mg. – together nearly 1/5 of your total daily salt allotment. (Experts recommend 2,000-3,000 mg. of sodium daily - approximately one teaspoon of salt.)

• One serving of mayonnaisebased topping, often found on hamburgers, can add more than 100 calories (mostly fat).

• Pizza topped with vegetables instead of meat is much lower in

• You can special order fast food too. Many customers say "hold the pickle" or "hold the relish," but you may also wish to "hold the salt" or "hold the sauce." (Be patient, though, as these orders may take an extra minute or two.)

To compensate for fast-food eating, make sure the other meals you prepare are low in saturated fat, often found in shortening, meat drippings, salad dressing and butter. Cholesterol, found in dairy and meat products, should also be eaten in moderation, as should sugar. During the day one should eat fiber foods — e.g. fresh fruits, vegetables, bran and nuts - which are seldom found in fastfood eateries.

Dietitians recognize that fast food is a way of life today - working people often eat it because they only have time for a quick lunch; teens like it as an afterschool snack; and parents want to take the family out for an affordable treat. The ADA has developed sample menus with such age groups and lifestyles in mind.

Special Writer Though Woody Allen does not make a single appearance in "Radio Days," there can be no doubt the picture is his. Allen has a humanistic style unequaled in Hollywood. And that style is as distinctly Allen's as his signa-

"Radio Days" is by no means one of the best pictures he has ever done, but it still puts most of its competition to shame. Allen is first and foremost a storyteller, and he demonstrates that skill in this film

"Radio Days," as the title indicates, is a potpourri of vignettes from the heyday of radio. Allen takes viewers back to the time when "The Lone Ranger," "The Shadow" and "The Masked Avenger" competed for the hearts of adventurous listeners. Before there was an "A-Team" to beat up the bad guys, Allen recalls, there was The Shadow. Before there was "Wheels of Fortune" to play along with, there was

Allen tells the story as an adult, reminiscing about his youth in Rockaway, N.Y. He remembers living with his parents, grandparents, aunts, uncle and cousins. That alone is enough for a fulllength comedy, but he also throws in some hilarious tales they got to be that way. Chief among them is the story of Sally White (Mia Farrow), a dumb-blonde candy and cigarette girl at a nightclub who takes a rocky ride to the top. The murderer, who just happens to be from the same neighborhood she's from, gets her a big role in

Allen weaves this story throughout the rest of the film, dropping it and then picking it up much the same way an old friend might tell a long story - in installments with lots of related information in between.

That is fitting, of course, because that is what Allen has become to viewers - an old friend. When he tells us about his Uncle Abe's obsession with fish, we find it fascinating. When he tells us about his Aunt Bea's constant attempts at finding a husband, we can't help but find it engaging. When he tells us about his parents' ability to fight about anything, we find it hilarious.

Allen has that type of style. He can take even the most normal things and make them something extraordinary. He takes family a radio show. The night of her life in 1943 and makes it as funthe characters. He takes memories of the great radio shows and makes them as immediate for us as they are for the characters experiencing them.

Most of all though, Allen uses the piece for self-reflection. In paying homage to the hyperbole of old-time radio, he draws a parallel to contemporary cinema. At the end of the picture, the radio stars are assembled on a New York rooftop ringing in the new year. They philosophize about the passing of years and their place in the hig picture of entertainment. One can't help but feel that it's Allen talking through each of the characters, theorizing about how future generations will remember his work.

If he continues to make pictures like "Radio Days," it's a good bet future generations will remember his work as clearly as he remembers the sounds of "The Masked Avenger" riding the midnight airwayes.

'Black Widow' poisons her husbands

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

A sailboat in stormy waters needs a steady hand at the helm. So does a film that depends more on character than plot to carry it through. Thanks to Debra Winger and Theresa Russell, "Black Widow" charts a even

The story revolves around Alex Barnes (Debra Winger) an energetic investigator for the Justice Department. When a series of murders show up on her computer, all of them involving wealthy men who die suddenly, she becomes suspicious.

Her search leads her to Catherine (Theresa Russell) whom she suspects of poisoning the victims. The motive is clear. In each case the men die soon after marrying her and the widow disappears with their fortune.

Suspicion is one thing. Proving it is another. There are no clues to substantiate foul play. Experts agree that the deaths were due to a rare condition that caused a malfunction of the part of the brain that controls breathing.

Winger is not so easily put off. She wonders why the widow of these men disappears immediately after their deaths and why there is no record of her past.

Winger's boss, thinking that she needs a change from work, reluctantly lets her pursue the

Film

Let loose, Winger trails Russell to Hawaii, where sure enough, she has already embarked on a venture to increase her growing wealth by using her wiles to entrap a good looking rich native, Paul (Sam Frey).

Alex contrives to meet and become friends with her and, in spite of herself, becomes strongly attracted to her. In fact this attraction becomes a disturbing element in the film. One wonders why the director chose to inject it, unless it was to emphasize the sexual power of the black widow over her victims.

"Black Widow" is an intriguing film, due largely to Debra Winger. As Alex she displays an energy and intensity that makes her thoroughly believable as the investigator who refuses to give

Russell brings to her several guises a tantalizing allure that is never cheap nor obvious, but up-

The main element of suspense in the film comes from two women playing the hunted and the hunter, a situation where usually it is a man tracking down a woman suspect.

Another attraction of the film is Conrad L. Hall's outstanding photography. There are some beautiful scenes on the island featuring a blazing volcano, a forest misted over from the heat of day and a spectacular sequence of the two stars deep-sea diving.

The main force, however, of the 'Black Widow" is the chemistry that results in the splendid performance of Winger and Russell. They're quite a team.

Prince of Tides' is top fiction

Marion Trainor Special Writer

The Prince of Tides By Pat Conroy Houghton Mifflin 578 pages, $19.95

Masterpiece is a word reserved in fiction for only the best. It means the author has written a good story that moves the reader to laughter and tears; one that creates characters in all their complexities; one that establishes a real sense of time and place and presents it all to the reader in lyrical prose.

Pat Conroy's new novel fills all of these requirements in "The Prince of Tides.'

His territory is the low country of South Carolina. Here, on Melrose Island in the town of Colleton, live the Wingo family.

Henry, the father, captains a shrimpboat. Lila, the beautiful and unpredictable mother, mourns the day she ever met Henry and hopes that she will one day know a better life. There are three children, twins Savannah and Tom, and an older brother Luke. The island where they swim and crab and sail and explore is a paradise setting for the growing children but it is a paradise marred by the terrible things that happen there.

The story of the Wingos is told by Tom. At his mother's request, he has come to New York to try to help Savannah, a renowned poet, now confined to a mental hospital.

Hoping to shed some light on his sister's repeated attempts at suicide, he relates to the psychiatrist who is treating her, a series of vignettes describing the black, hidden side of family life, the stories that Lila claims never happened.

"My life did not begin until I summoned the power to forgive my father for making my childhood a long march of terror," Tom Yet his memories also encompass recollections of his father at sea, happy, relaxed, genial and sure of who he is.

Tom both adores and hates

Lila, his mother. She is a woman determined to be accepted and honored at whatever costs to her family. Of her, Tom says: "I will forever praise her for teaching me to seek out the beauty of nature."

Looking at the two of them, he observes: "They began as lovers and ended up the most dangerous and unutterable enemies. As lovers they begat children; as enemies they created damaged, endangered children."

'Miss Firecracker' next at Attic

"The Miss Firecracker Contest" by Pulitzer Prize winning playwright Beth Henley will open at the Attic Theatre Friday, Feb. 27, at 8 p.m.

The comedy centers around Carnelle Scott, a waning "hot tamale" seeking to be a winner for once in her life by gaining the title of "Miss Firecracker" in the local Fourth of July beauty and talent competition.

The characters who rally round her poke funny and fierce holes through traditional notions of beauty, intellect, aesthetics, and most of all relationships. They include Popeye Jackson, her costumer, who as a child made dresses for frogs because she had no dolls; Carnelle's quasi-crazed cousin Delmount who has an eye for beauty and a taste for the bizarre; Delmount's sister Elaine, an ex-Miss Firecracker; Mac Sam, the mysterious sickly balloon man; and Tessie, the contest coordinator.

"The Miss Firecracker Contest" is one of four plays dealing with the zany lives of small town southern characters written by Beth Henley whose "Crimes of the Heart" earned the New York Drama Critic's Circle Award and the Pulitzer Prize.

The cast includes Cheryl Williams as Carnelle; Dona Werner as Popeye; Bethany Carpenter as Elaine; Glen Allen Pruett as Delmount; Sandi Litt as Tessie; Robert Grossman as the balloon man. Director is Ron Martell. Previews will be Wednesday

The Chapman Collection of Fine Brass

Grosse Pointe Farms

Monday thru Saturday until 8:00 p.m.

By Appointment 884-6502

An array of the finest brass period pieces made in America.

Finally you can stop traveling across state to purchase fine brass accessories, or being limited by the few product choices local stores carry. No more sight unseen catalog ordering either. Now in Grosse Pointe, you can see and buy from a growing selection of top-of-the-line brass pieces

The Chapman Collection contains no Asian or Indian Imports. Each piece, superbly hand-crafted by America's top manufacturer of brass, is an authentic, hand-finished reproduction, possessing the matchless quality of the original antique from which it has been faithfully reproduced. Many bear the hallmark of a prominent historic foundation assuring you of authenticity of design and the highest manufacturing standards.

Select something from The Chapman Collection for your home or business — our timeless designs are classic additions that will always speak of quality and value.

IN SOLID BRASS each of heirloom quality - priced affordably, saving you 20% off retail: Candle Wall Sconces to create a feeling of warmth and gracious elegance in your home, one and two-arm styles, hurricanes with handblown crystal shades. Our Lustrous Candlesticks add excitement to candlelit buffets, or intimate dinners for two, in a range of styles and sizes, to enhance any decor

Rich Tabletop, Desk and Window Lamps reflect your good taste. All using fine silk or parchment shades. Whether your setting is traditional country or classic contemporary, each one is timeless in design

Our Sparkling Multiple Arm Candelabra on your dining table or sideboard cannot go unno-

Gleaming Table and Dining Compliments give your tabletop a new ambiance, also perfect for the friend who deserves that special gift, including bowls, napkin rings, trivets, compote, snack dishes, urns, ashtrays and more.

(1-94 & Allard) HARPER WOODS Friday, February 13

9:00-5:00

Saturday, February 14 9:00-3:00 The contents of a 100-year old home near downtown

Detroit have been moved lock, stock and barrel to this location to be sold. Walking into this house was like walking into a museum. We hope you will enjoy the nostalgic feeling of a bygone era as you peruse this sale. The parlor contained a Victorian upright piano, flax spinning wheel, overstuffed sofa and chair in green floral tapestry, marble-top table, umbrella stand, plant stand, what-not shelves, side chairs, carved tables, lamps, pictures and mir-

The living room was home to cozy chiars, Tiffany-style lamps, beautiful oak tables, oak rocker, walnut cabinet, plus quaint needlework and knickknacks. The dining room held a stately round oak pedestal table, seven oak dining chairs, a curved glass china cabinet, ornate doubledoor china cabinet/bookcase, lovely area rug, and a breath-taking collection of china and glassware. China includes Nippon, ironstone, R.S. Prussia, hand-painted Bavarian pieces, Limoges, Warwick, a large set of Francisan "Apple," and more than 100 salt and pepper shakers. The sparkling includes glassware Fostoria, Brides' Baskets, ruby souvenir items, hobnail, milk glass and many others. A French clock has been keeping time since 1858 In the kitchen we found a maple table and chairs and the usual kitchen goodies. But the pantry - cupboards filled to overflowing with more glassware, pottery and bric-a-brac. The den housed a spectacular oak secretary/bookcase, oak lingerie chest, maple desk and Tiffanystyle desk lamp, as well as books and memorabilia. The three bedrooms upstairs contained bedroom sets of different style one, an exquisite double set of ornate maple with high-back bed, dresser, chest of drawers and nightstand; another, a dainty antique-white double bed, chest and dressing table, and lady's rocker; the third, another Victorian high-back bed (three-quarter size) and sturdy matching chest of drawers. The bedrooms were crammed with linens, ladies' accessories, collectibles, memorabilia and even a pristine mahogany Victrola all ready to play . . . Each bedroom had a quaint area rug. The attic was a virtual storehouse of the past with trunks, pictures, frames, chests, linens, and most outstanding of all quilts. There are two of the most exquisite quilts we have seen. One is Log Cabin, the other, a Star pattern, both of brocades and in mint condition. These quilts will be sold by silent auction to allow everyone to admire them and have the opportunity to purchase them. The basement contained canning jars, bottles, cigarette tins, baskets, and pottery. From under the house we unearthed several stonewear jugs and some ornate bed parts which can be used for shelving or mantels.

There will be loads and loads of jewelry and small collectibles. This was truly an experience for us and will be for you when you come to the sale NUMBERS AT 7:30 P.M.

The Missing LINC

Linking Individuals to Needs in the Community is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to coordinate needs with resources. This is accomplished by placing goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of Metropolitan Detroit charitable agencies. Operating since 1971, LINC is proud of the accomplishments it has made and strives to increase its resource base. If you have recyclable items, no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100 with your donation. KEEP IT

THE BEST JAGUAR EVER BUILT:

Breeding tells. While trends in automotive

design come and go, the 1987 Jaguar XJ6 remains defiantly true to its heritage:

lithe, graceful and utterly distinctive.

It is the nature of automotive styling to be transient. And it is the nature of Jaguar to create cars of classic grace: cars whose beauty endures long after the fads are forgotten.

Such a car is the Series III. Combining beauty of form with quick response and notable luxury, the XJ6 rewards its driver in many ways. Come in and experience the pleasures that have been bred into the best Jaguar ever built.
