What our schoolchildren are learning about AIDS

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is a frightening topic to many parents, but the schools are trying to tackle it head-on. Teachers and administrators at public, private and parochial schools in Grosse Pointe all say they answer every question a student may have - and offer some instruction whether there are any questions or not.

"It's not something that can be evaded," said Donald Sloan, principal at Our Lady Star of the Sea.

Not all the schools are able to be as explicit in teaching about AIDS as they might like. Community and religious values guide their teaching as much as medical facts.

The difference between public and religious schools comes down to what they have to say about the condom.

"I don't see how you can't talk about condoms," said North High health teacher Bruce Bentley. "It's the best prevention. It's in the newspaper and even on television.'

Church teaching about artificial birth control keeps Catholic schools from endorsing condoms as a barrier to AIDS. St. Paul Principal Elizabeth Burns talked about the difficulty of teaching about the disease without infringing on church doctrine.

"Everybody feels kids have to have the information," she said. "Monsignor Canfield wants the information to be taught. (This spring) we're having a doctor come to the school to make a presentation. I'm sure questions will come up then, and the teachers will have to use their best judgment."

Using their best judgment in a Catholic setting means urging abstinence, says Don Sloan.

"AIDS is freely and openly discussed," he said. "We don't want the students to be in a vacuum. We approach it from an ethical and moral viewpoint - from the point of view of abstinence."

Condoms are discussed, but absolutely not endorsed, Sloan said.

The non-religious schools don't exactly endorse condoms, either, but they are clear in their message that the device can prevent sexually transmitted disease.

"We have to follow what the community wants," Bentley said. "We try to stress abstinence. We don't want to try to change their values - just to give them the best information.'

Bentley said he would like to many of them haven't given serier is in the public eye. A few the use and misuse of condoms something that will be available next year in an optional health class unit. Students don't currently get the complete picture about potential failure of the devices, he

"They know they're not 100 percent effective," he said. "They know that — we tell them.

Some parents are nervous about the teaching of AIDS information, but not all. "We've had a lot of parental comment saying 'please teach it,' 'said Mary Fish, teacher of a ninth grade sex education class at University Liggett. "What parents fear most is that some kind of value statement will get into it. I don't get into the religious, ethical, moral.. That's up to the parents. But the kids are the only ones who can protect their own health and safe-

That's what Fish says she wants to accomplish.

She and other teachers are trying to get the message out to students at an early age - before they are old enough to get in trouble. "Sometimes they look at me like I'm from outer space,' she said. "My impression is that give more explicit information on ous consideration to being active. But they're very curious about it. They ask a lot of questions.'

Fish says no aspects of the topic are off-limits. "We are as specific as U.S. News and World Report," she said. "... But I'm not telling them what's okay and not okay.

Students learn specifics about the disease, how it spreads, how to avoid it and prevent it. At Liggett, as at all other Grosse Pointe schools, participation in the class is voluntary, but few students opt

"A few ask to be excluded," Fish said, "but an equal number of parents call to make sure their kids get in."

At the high school level, classes are usually mixed. Bentley said students are not inhibited by having both boys and girls in the class. But the sexes are segregated at the middle school level.

Barbara Sjolander teaches the adolescent concerns class at Brownell. She says her students are interested in the subject of

'Questions come up," she said. "I teach four sections and they come up all the time. (The students) are interested in whatevyears ago, I got lots of questions about toxic shock syndrome. Now, I don't get any, but there are lots of questions about AIDS."

Sjolander said she explains that one of the ways AIDS is transmitted is through sex. "They know what sexually transmitted means," she said. "Some don't know what a homosexual act is but I don't answer unasked questions ... It's not necessary to warn the kids away from it, because they don't see themselves in that kind of relationship."

What to teach about sexually transmitted diseases is an ongoing debate in most schools. The information is constantly being updated and is frequently understood only by experts.

"Sometimes even the experts don't know the answers." says Bentley.

Teachers are required to participate in intensive training. "Just being a teacher or a counselor isn't good enough," Sjolander said. "We have a three-day class with state certification. Teachers are more comfortable and knowledgeable than they used to

Actually, AIDS teaching is not a formal part of the public middle school curriculum, although it has been discussed within the framework of the adolescent concerns class for about three years. A human sexuality curriculum study committee has been looking at the question this year and is expected to issue recommendations this spring.

Liggett, too, is still deciding how best to cover the subject at various age levels. But they're sure of one thing - it is important to cover it.

"It's not whether we should do something, but what we can do," says Peter Lutken, dean of the faculty and chair of the curriculum committee. "I haven't met anyone who isn't concerned about the problem of AIDS.'

The parents at Liggett Middle School have requested that something be taught, according to values teacher Maureen DelGrosso. "We teachers, too, feel the need," DelGrosso said. "We're now researching materials and will have a formalized program for next year - but we're not ready to make recommendations

In the meantime, though, "we answer kids' questions - that's what we're in the business for.'

Schneider has served as a municipal judge.

I just really enjoy the law and working in Grosse Pointe," Judge Schneider said. "And I care about people understanding the law."

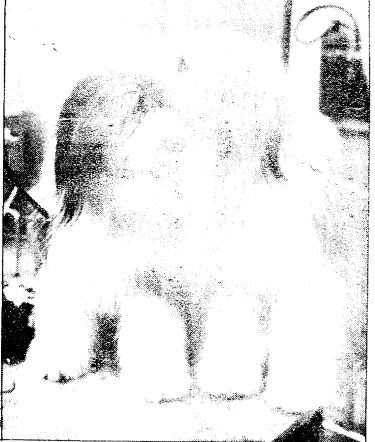

Schneider says her own understanding of the law and the importance of the Constitution in everyday life didn't really begin until she went to law school at the University of Detroit after her children were grown. It was during her first job search that she became aware of sex and age discrimination — both of which she feels still exist.

"I could get interviews, but then I'd walk in and see the look on their face. You can't hide age or sex. It must be the way black people used to feel," she said.

Women lawyers, judges and other officials still band together in professional associations for moral support, even though their numbers have increased. "It helps to be around other women," Schneider said.

"We're still not in the Constitution. There's history that we forget. People like the suffragettes and the Bloomer girls - I didn't think of them as

Park judge resigns

By Pat Paholsky News Editor

Municipal Judge Beverly C. Grobbel submitted her resignation to Mayor Palmer Heenan last week, it was revealed at the Park council meeting Monday night. She did not offer any explanation in her letter dated March 5. Her resignation is effective June 30.

Grobbel is more than halfway through her four-year term, which expires in December 1989. She has served as municipal judge for 9½ years and in her letter, she wrote: "I have always tried my utmost to serve with dignity and fairness. I'm grateful to the citizens of this city who have given me this wonderful opportunity to serve them.'

The city attorney advised the council at the last meeting that Grobbel planed to sue the city if her request for more pay was not addressed. She had raised the issue of salary six years ago and again, two years ago, according to Heenan. Grobbel is paid $6,000 a year, the maximum amount set by the city charter, which was written in 1954.

"I don't think it's just the salary issue," Judge Grobbel said Tuesday morning. "It's difficult for me to resign since I'm elected and I feel an obligation to continue. I think I have done what I can do. The objectives are not shared by the administration and perhaps someone else can persuade them that the objectives of the Supreme Court are what this court is all about.

Grobbel said that when she first started, she worked a full day every day. "At one point I was holding court three days a week and that worked. There's a need for it. Now I'm holding court two days a week. Our custodial problems are great because we have to move people out of cells.'

Mayor Heenan said he asked the judge to reconsider, "but she doesn't consider it appropriate.'

Heenan was generous in his praise of Grobbel, saying, "She has been even handed in her jus-tice, she's been consistent and we have lost a valuable employee and judge.

He added, "I feel our procrastination and inattention to this matter has resulted in the best judge in the Grosse Pointes resigning. We owe our respect to the office by giving a modest salary increase

City attorney Herold McC. Deason was asked at the last meeting to draft a proposed charter amendment regarding the municipal judge's salary. The proposed amendment, which would have to be placed on the ballot for voter approval, calls for the judge's annual compensation to be set by ordinance.

The council did not take action on the proposed amendment until more information regarding salaries and numbers of hours to be worked is received. The matter is scheduled to be put on the agenda again for the next meeting March 20.

Grobbel also conducts court in Grosse Pointe Shores which she said she would continue at this time. She has not other immediate plans.

Candidates sought

To fill the vacancy that will be created when Municipal Judge Beverly Grobbel leaves office June 30, Mayor Palmer Heenan named a threemember committee from the council to recommend prospective candidates for the position. The appointee will serve from July 1 until the Monday following the November election, or about four months.

A new municipal judge will be elected by voters in November and will serve through the end of the current existing term, which is December 1989. The deadline for filing for the scat is June 16. The requirements for the position are that a candidate must be registered to vote in Grosse Pointe Park and must be admitted to practice law in the state of Michigan.

Petitions for filing are available at City Hall.

Members of the committee who will recommend an interim judge are councilmen James Robson, who was named chairman, John Prost and Vern Ausherman.

March 12, 1987 Grosse Pointe News Tree expert hired by Park evaluates elm program

By Pat Paholsky News Editor

When Grosse Pointe Park embarked last year on an intensive campaign against Dutch elm disease, officials expected positive results. And they got them.

Last week, the architect of the plan, Dr. Gerald Lanier, presented his report and recommendations to the Beautification Commission and four members of the city council.

Lanier, professor of forest and shade tree entomology at the State University of New York, was hired by the city last year upon the recommendation of the Béautification Commission.

His elm management program, implemented by him and city forester Robert Tarabula, whom he trained in certain methods, resulted in an overall decrease of 15 percent of elm tree removals. It is expected that losses will be significantly lower in 1987 due to last year's efforts.

More than one-third of the trees removed last year were infected through the roots of diseased trees, Lanier said. He estimates that since fewer trees were infected by elm bark beetles in 1986 because of various controls, about two-thirds of the elms that will be lost this year will be due to root graft-transmitted infections.

"Root grafts are extremely serious in Grosse Pointe Park," Lanier said. "Probably most of the diseased trees are the result of root grafts." He attributes the quick spread of Dutch elm disease to standing rows of elms, which he said are "bloody murder."

'Where the green crowns come together, you can bet the roots come together," he said. There is a machine that will put a slit in the earth in which a piece of tar paper can be dropped, he said. "It will form a barrier that will prevent root graft for years.'

Ninety percent of the root sys-

Another effective barrier is concrete, such as a driveway or the street. "The roots need oxygen and they won't go under concrete," he said. "They'll spend their root-growing energy growing in other directions.

Once a tree's roots are infected, Lanier said there's no way to save it. Injecting the diseased tree with Arbotect or other fungicide may keep it alive for another year or two, he said. He recommended that the city spend up to $10,000 to disrupt root grafts between adjacent elms.

Last year 50 pheromone-baited bark beetle traps were placed in 12 clusters of three to four in locations surrounding the city and in Detroit. The traps caught 729,000 elm bark beetles. The largest catch came from the Detroit traps, as was expected. Grosse Pointe Park, bordering Detroit, has been especially susceptible to the disease since De-

Free Legal Aid Clinic will benefit from party

By Margie Reins Smith

The Free Legal Aid Clinic, Inc. will hold its annual fundraiser Thursday, March 19. A donation of $25 entitles party goers to drinks and buffet dinner.

The clinic provides indigent clients with Wayne State law students as legal representatives. "Students are allowed to practice under two supervising attorneys," said David Wecker, vice chairman.

Mark Mulder, chairman, said the organization helps up to 4,000 people a year, "if you include advice given over the phone and to walk-in clients. We have 250 to 300 cases going on right now," he

The organization is partially funded by Wayne County Neighborhood Legal Services. Wayne State University provides office space, but funds are always short, according to George Matish, one of the founders of the 22-year old organization. "It's a worthwhile cause. It provides legal aid to poor people and it's an educational tool. Students learn from actual practice of law, rather than theory," he said.

Most students spend about two semesters working for the free clinic. Wecker said 40 students are working this year - about

Report drunk drivers

Anyone spotting a drunk driver in the five Grosse Pointes or Harper Woods can now call a central number. Call the Grosse Pointe Woods Public Safety Department at 343-2410 and the appropriate police department will be notified immediately, according to Public Safety Director Jack Patterson.

He said that when his department implemented a drunk driving task force, the number of drunk driving arrests increased dramatically. He said he felt that it showed the problem of drunk driving is prevalent and this program could help to get drunks off the road.

"Having one central number to call may make it easier for people to be our eyes and ears on the streets," Patterson said. "I am glad to have our department used as the jumping off point.

Patterson added that the state police have implemented a similar program on a larger scale, but said that this may be more productive since it is a neighborhood approach.

ten is within 18 inches of the surface, Lanier said, "so you don't have to go deep.'

Another recommendation is to increase the beetle traps to 100, which he said could be accomplished by the participation of adjoining cities.

trol the elm bark beetle in the mid-1970s.

"You should congratulate yourself on maintaining a nice population because you were inundated by Detroit," Lanier told the commission.

He reported that the number of beetles on the traps are less than the actual number since many of them are washed off as the traps weather. Also, he said, it's likely that more beetles die searching for the pheomone source than are caught on traps.

Other recommendations he made are:

· Support the development of a permanent forestry office for all the Grosse Pointes;

• Institute a means of documenting action on recommendations for therapy of private elms; and

 Continue the program initiated in 1986.

Lainier, who spent 29 days in the city last year, and Tarabula made a complete inventory of the city's elms — public, private and county. All elms more than three inches in diameter at breast height were recorded as to address, location on the property, diameter and other pertinent data. The city now has a master list of its tree population.

There are 2,675 elms in the Park with 54 percent on city property, 44 percent privately owned and 3.4 percent on county land. Each elm was inspected intensively on foot at least twice during the year and several times by vehicle.

More than 400 city and private trees were injected with fungicide last year under the supervision of Beautification Commissioner Al Mazur. An unknown number of injections were made by arboriculture companies.

Lanier reported that 110 city elms were removed in 1986 compared to 157 in 1985. An increase in removal of private elms from 77 in 1985 to 89 in 1986, he reported, is suspected to be due to a more complete survey and data collection last year.

In cases where infected trees could not be removed promptly, cacodylic acid was injected into them, killing them and preventing the beetles inside from maturing and attracting new beetles, making the tree in effect a trap tree. The acid was injected into 58 trees last vear.

Farms DPW union requests state mediator

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

After only four meetings between the new Farms DPW Teamsters local and the city, the union has requested a state mediator to aid with negotiations.

City clerk Richard Solak said that Local 214 requested a mediator in a letter to the city dated

"They turned the tables on us," Solak said of the union negotiations. The city had requested a mediator from the Michigan Employment Relations Commission last fall when the DPW workers were represented by AFSCME. The workers, upset with their representation from that union, filed to dissolve that relationship and later voted unanimously to join the Teamsters.

Solak said even though the union has requested a mediator, the two sides have made considerable "We hope that through the mediation process, an agreement can be reached," he said. The union has been working under the terms of its old contract that expired eight months ago on June 31. Last fall the workers picketed the DPW building after hours, in an effort to draw atten-

a lack of good faith on the part of the city. Over the next several months grievances and unfair labor

tion to what the workers saw as charges were filed by both the union and the city.

Jim Markley, business agent for the Teamsters, said that part of the problem has been the charges and countercharges that had already been leveled.

"We had to clear up some of those issues to get down to the economic matters," he said.

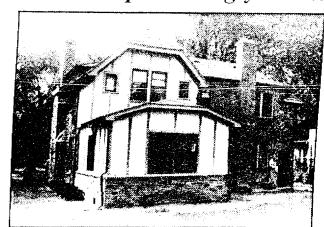

Markley agreed it is early to call for a mediator after only four meetings, but added he thought the two sides had gone as far as they could go without one.

"We feel we have established some rapport with the employer. At least we hope so," he said.

The state mediator will attempt to work out an agreement which will not be binding to either side.

School treasurer won't run for re-election

School board Treasurer Dorothy Kennel announced Monday that she will not seek re-election when her second term expires in June.

"I think I've served my time and I think it's time for me to step aside and let somebody else take over," Kennel told her fellow board members.

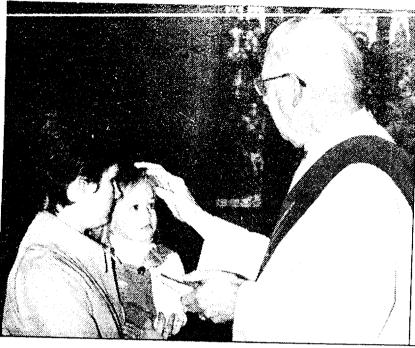

Kennel has served as board president, vice president and treasurer during her eightyear tenure. She also served on two search committees for school superintendents.

Kennel's is one of two terms that expire in June. Board President Vincent LoCicero will complete his first time and told the board he will run again.

The election will be held June 8, the board decided Monday. Candidates for the two seats have until April 6 to file a nominating petition with at least 20 signatures. Petitions are already available at the personnel office at 389 St.

The deadline to register to vote is May 11. Prospective voters should register with the clerk of the city or township where they live.

Board terms run for four years, starting July 1.

It's about time for downsizing the presidency

ith Grosse Pointers as well as all other Americans concerned about the remaining months of the Reagan administration, perhaps it is time to consider "downsizing" the office of the presidency.

Look at the presidency this way: It is one of the three co-equal branches of our federal government, but it is the only one headed by a single individual. Furthermore, the president himself is not only the head of the executive branch but he is also the commander-in-chief of the armed forces, directs the nation's foreign policy through his secretary of state and through his power to make treaties and appoint ambassadors, serves as the ceremonial head of the state in entertaining top foreign leaders, and, in addition, stands as the unofficial chief of his political party. He bears a huge burden in meeting the responsibilities of these and other assignments.

The judicial branch of government, on the other hand, is headed by a chief justice who, however, is only one of nine members of the Supreme Court when it comes to making decisions. Furthermore, while he is regarded as the top administrator of the nation's courts, the chief justice is also backed by a full panoply of other appellate and district judges in the determination of the federal law of the land.

The third branch, the legislative, is, of course, Congress which comprises 50 senators and 435 members of the House of Representatives. While the vice president presides over the Senate and the speaker over the House, Congress exercises much of its authority through the power of its committees and the increasing number of committee staffers who serve their patrons. The legislative power is clearly dispersed into many hands.

The purpose of spelling out these distinctions among the three branches is to illustrate the differences between the responsibilities that are placed in the president's hands and the responsibilities in the leadership of both Congress and the judiciary. These differences also illustrate why the caliber of the White House aides is so important to the functioning of the president.

With former U.S. Sen. Howard Baker now serving as chief of staff, and with new people now serving as head of the CIA, as legal counsel to the president, as national security adviser, as White House press secretary and in many other posts, a whole new staff of "brooms" is in place to serve the president. Most people hope the new appointees will do well because the Reagan regime still has 22 months to run (even though for all intents and purposes it will end on election day, only 20 months distant).

But even if Baker and his new colleagues prove to be as able and efficient as they are reported to be, can they really do the necessary job for the president and the country? That is a fair question.

In recent years, the burdens of the presidency have been constantly increasing. The president today surrounds himself with a force of aides that would have been unthinkable and unneeded just a generation ago. There is now a presidential adviser on science, a national security adviser, and a full staff of people serving the information function so important to all office holders and politicians.

But in view of the problems that occurred in the administrations of Presidents Johnson, Nixon, Ford and Carter as well as Reagan, why shouldn't we now start thinking about taking some of the load off the president? Could not the vice president, for example, serve as the ceremonial head of state? Could not another aide, or even a deputy president, serve as the head of the president's political party? And does the president really need his own mini-state department run by a national security adviser if he has a strong secretary of state?

Political scientists a few years ago often expressed concern about the "imperial presidency." Now there is increasing worry that the duties and responsibilities of the office are overwhelming any current occupant. Perhaps it now is time to consider relieving the office of some of its duties or sharing them with others in order to save future presidents from being worn down and worn out as not only President Reagan but his recent predecessors have been.

How to return a windfall ontroversy continues in Michigan over the state income tax, the issue now being the disposition of the $170 million state windfall arising from the federal income tax law revisions approved last year.

The windfall would result from the higher state taxes that will be imposed because of the elimination of the double federal exemptions for senior citizens and blind people, the tax on unemployment benefits and other federal revisions that will boost state income tax revenues.

The state Senate already has given its opinion of what to do with the $170 million by cutting the state income tax rate from 4.6 percent to 4.4 percent in a rare display of unity with Gov. James Blanchard who favors the same rollback.

But House Democrats aren't so sure. Some of them feel that the windfall ought to be returned, in part at least, to the lower income taxpayers who are paying more because of the federal revisions. Some feel that the $170 million might better be used for property tax relief. And some think the windfall ought to be used to meet the needs of public education, welfare or other state services.

To meet some Democratic criticism, the Senate has tied its income tax cut to a companion bill that would offset the effects of the federal tax law by increasing state tax credits for the blind, low-income elderly people and the unemployed. That tie-in measure would apparently cost the state an additional $15 million to $40 million on top of the loss of the $170 million windfall. In short, the state would be reducing its revenues by more than the amount of the windfall.

It does make sense to return some of the windfall to low-income taxpayers who are heing penalized because the Michigan tax forms require use of the adjusted gross income figure calculated in paying federal tax-

But it hardly makes sense to cut overall state taxes by more than the amount of the expected windfall, even though reducing taxes is a highly popular move in both political parties. Furthermore, the tax cut form 4.6 percent to 4.4 percent would mean savings of only about $38 annually, or about 73 cents a week, for the average family of four earning $25,000. So it's no big deal for anyone.

Such a tax cut may have minor psychological and political benefits, but it is unlikely to provide the lure to business and industrial expansion that some backers claim. That won't stop Lansing from spending an inordinately large percentage of its time debating the windfall issue, however, even though 1987 is not an election year.

Robertson's threat to GOP

upporters of the Rev. Pat Robertson. the TV evangelist who is an unannounced candidate for the GOP presidential nomination, are beginning to flex their political muscle in Michigan now that they have joined a coalition that has captured control of the Republican state central committee.

In a recent appearance on the "Off the Record" public TV show, David Walters, Robertson's top political adviser in Michigan, said it would be in the "best interest" of state GOP Chairman Spencer Abraham to resign before his two-year term ends in Walters said Abraham would face increasing pressure from the more conservative wings of the party because he is a close associate of Vice President Bush's political backers in Michigan. He also contended that Abraham is interested in running for an elected office and that it would be in his best interest to step down a little early.

It is true that Abraham earlier had indicated interest in seeking elected office -- perhaps to the U.S. Senate in 1988 -- but he said last week he has no intention of resigning early. He pointed out he recently had been elected unanimously to a third term because "the various sides feel I have been fair." And then he added:

"Clearly, if I were to seek elective office, I would step aside as chairman because it would avoid potential conflicts of interest and because our bylaws require it. However, as I've stated in the past, I am not exploring a Senate candidacy, nor do I have any plans to do so.'

Perhaps Walters was simply firing a warning shot at the GOP state chairman to make sure he maintains a neutral stance with all the Republicans seeking the party's 1988 presidential nomination. Or perhaps Walters and the Robertson forces really want a GOP chairman who is willing to support the Robertson campaign.

One supporter of Vice President George Bush, when asked about Walters' comment, said some Bush supporters felt that Abraham had shown more support for Rep. Jack Kemp of New York than for Bush. If that is true, perhaps Walters' comments indicate that the Robertson-Kemp coalition that captured control of the state GOP committee and now holds a majority of congressional district chairmanships is already becoming unglued. Walters' comments may well have been more anti-Kemp than anti-

Robertson's backers are well organized and effective in some districts. But if Robertson attracts new Christian fundamentalists into activist roles in the party, as the evangelist claims, he also attracts people who are often not in the GOP mainstream. Even Walters admitted, in his TV interview, that he had doubts Robertson could carry a majority of Michigan Republicans at this juncture.

The Robertson forces apparently want to control the party machinery in order to send as many Robertson delegates as possible to the 1988 national convention. If they succeed in that aim, it is likely that Michigan Republicans once again will be left at the post because Robertson is at best a long shot for the nomination.

Our Maker will judge

Letters

To the Editor: Last week's column contained a letter from a contributor who considers himself to be judge of character and intelligence for the community. I would like to say to him that if you could get beyond those two publications that constitute your knowledge of Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, you might improve your vision of the world and humankind. WILPF, oldest women's peace organization, was founded in 1915 by Jane Addams and other women suffragettes and has a long and honorable history. WILPF has produced three Nobel Peace laureates.

Someday, our Maker will judge us all. Until She does, Mr. Corless, let's leave it to Her. "Pax Et Libertas."

Bring back cable listing

To the Editor:

We are distressed to learn that the Grosse Pointe News is no longer carrying the listings of local cable programs. This seriously restricts the publicity of the very worthwhile, informational programs that are put out by Grosse Pointe Cable for our community. SOC, Services for Older Citizens Inc., produces, and has produced, a program of this kind for our community for the past year. This program, and others, need to be listed by a newspaper with a wide distribution such as yours.

We would urge you to reconsider the decision to drop the cable listings from the Grosse Pointe News.

On crime, punishment

My brother Kevin should have been an Imam.

It's too late now. After all, blueeyed, good-natured, philosophical Irishmen don't seem to be making it big in the Islamic priesthood these days. But I think he'd have made a good one anyway.

Kevin likes the idea of Islamic law, particularly the area which dictates that punishment be tailored to fit the crime. In the Bible. I think they call it "an eye for an eye."

A day doesn't go by without my baby brother — the one I used to take for walks and play race cars with - glancing up from reading some newspaper account of a particularly heinous crime and muttering to no one in particular about the punishment fitting the crime. Usually in these tirades, Kevin advocates evenything from public beatings and imprisonment in stocks to castration.

Sometimes I agree with him, especially if the crime is particularly cruel and senseless and the perpetrator seemingly without remorse. Often, however, we argue about the human rights aspect and the constitutionality of such a plan. I often play the liberal (although I have no idea why); Kevin is neither liberal nor conservative. I think he's a little closer to being an anarchist.

But recently I've begun to consider his side of the argument a little more seriously, after watching numerous crimes being committed all around me. I'm not ready to haul the stocks out into the town square yet, but I have gotten to the point where I've developed my own little list of punishments to fit the crimes. For example . .

The crime: Parents letting their kids roam around unattended at athletic events, theaters, restaurants, churches and beaches, terrorizing otherwise sane, normal adults.

The punishment: Six months of stepping barefoot on tiny, metal toy parts. In the dark. At 3 a.m.

The crime: Failing to rinse out one's drinking glass or food dish when finished with it.

The punishment: One week of drinking from a glass which has a conspicuous dried milk ring in the bottom.

The crime: Using the last of the toilet paper, then leaving the premises without replacing it.

The punishment: One month of being the next person to use the bathroom following the perpetration of the aforementioned crime.

The crime: Feeling free to munch on fruit, nuts, cookies or whatever else is easy to crack open in a supermarket, then not paying for it.

The punishment: Being forced to purchase $175 worth of groceries, stand at the head of a long line at the only open cash register on a Saturday afternoon . . . then find out that you've brought only $153.88 in cash, forgotten your checkbook and that all of your coupons have expired.

The crime: Being told by a bank teller at a financial institution with which you have been dealing for 10 years that he/she can't cash your money order even with proper identification -because it must be deposited til it clears; forgetting, of course. that money orders are cash, not checks. Or worse, being told that you must deposit your U.S. tax refund check until it clears, as if the government wasn't financially solvent enough to cover a $132 check.

The punishment: Said bank teller should be forced to endure six consecutive Friday evenings at work in the drive in window, following which, her/his cash drawer shall not balance properly no matter how many times he/she goes over it.

The crime: Cutting in and out of traffic, tailgating and screeching tires and in general, annoying drivers around you who still have a brain.

The punishment: Hitting every red light for the rest of one's natural life because he has been sentenced to remain behind a driver who is totally oblivious to the fact that he is operating his vehicle at 15 miles per hour in the center of the road. I like to call this punishment "Hell on Earth."

The crime: Reading the newspaper before anyone else, turning all the sections inside out and cutting out coupons, advertisements and any cute stories you see.

The punishment: Six years of having the paper boy toss your morning daily into the mud . . . two doors down.

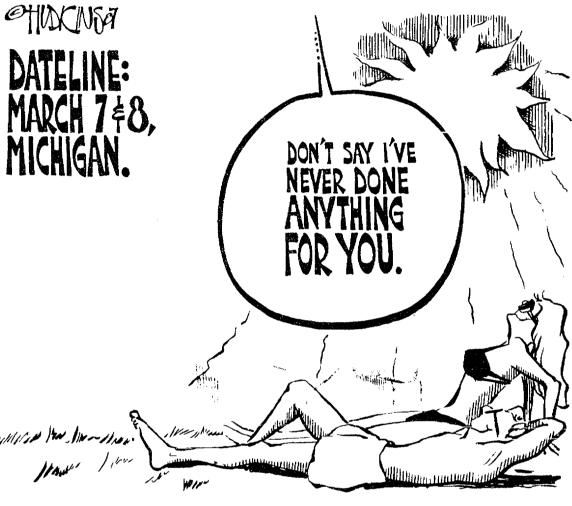

You get the idea. I'm all for those who commit serious crimes being rightfully punished, but I think I'll leave that to our judicial and penal systems. The little crimes, I'd like to take care of my-

Bid on a bachelor

Now you can help out a good cause and bid on a hot date with an eligible bachelor at the same time.

Last year the Michigan March of Dimes raised more than $35,000 in one evening in its Bid for Bachelors auction, and will sponsor the event again Thursday, March 26.

At least one, and perhaps two, local eligibles will participate in the program. Shores resident Wally Leviek is scheduled as a tentative participant, said March of Dimes publicist Mary Giancotti. The Woods' Nino Cueter has confirmed his participation.

Some 19 women won dates last year on bids that ranged from $125 to several thousand dollars.

This year's event will be held at the Westin Hotel's Cabot Ballroom beginning at 5:30 p.m. Bidding starts at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $12 ($15 at the door) by calling Mary or Pat at 423-3200.

Each bachelor is putting together his idea of a terrific date and the men donate the entire cost of the dates.

Among the bachelors are Mr. Michigan, Craig Adamski; WXYZ-TV reporter Chris Hansen; Steven Briggs of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce of Fenner and Smith; and Russ Gregory, assistant public relations director for the Detroit Red Wings.

Soule is finalist

Grosse Pointe North 1986 Homecoming Queen Laurie Soule of Grosse Pointe Woods has been selected to be a finalist in Michigan's America's Homecoming Queen contest.

Soule said she has never won any kind of pageant, until her fellow students voted her in as North's homecoming queen.

As a finalist in the Michigan competition of the America's Homecoming Queen contests, Laurie will attend the event at the Clarion Convention Center in Lansing March 28 and 29.

If selected as Michigan queen. she will receive a cash scholarship plus an expense-paid trip to Hawaii to compete at the national level.

"I'm very excited," Laurie said. "It is going to be a great opportu-

Should legislature cut state tax rate?

By William R. Bryant State Representative

The legislature needs to determine whether and how to cut some tax to reflect a higher income tax yield caused by federal income tax changes. It is expected, although far from certain, that $170 million more will be collected. The governor made a campaign statement last year that he would call for a cut in the state tax rate from 4.6 to 4.4 percent. That was, not surprisingly, a purely political statement. Now the legislature must decide whether to give the governor what he said he wants. If one believes it is always good to cut taxes as much as possible. within reason, then the cut should be $170 million. I could buy that. That would ignore, however, that we have never increased our state rate when the federal government reduced the state yield by federal changes. For the past few years, we have been losing $80 million per year because of I.R.A.s and millions more from changes in depreciation.

But, let's assume we should ignore that about half the "windfall" to the state is making up for prior year losses.

If the tax is reduced from 4.6 to 4.4 percent, that will balance things out and those who would have paid more in state taxes will get to keep the money. Right? Wrong. It is only certain groups who would pay more state taxes if we do nothing. Some of those are seniors, the blind, those with capital gains, those on unemployment compensation, college students or their parents.

Well, then, couldn't we just change all those back? We could, but do you see Democrats wanting to help those with capital gains or those with kids in college? In fact the Senate Democrats wanted only to deal with seniors, blind and those on unemployment compensation, not an unreasonable position, but not one to deal with all those hurt if we do nothing.

If we take care of all those groups that would take care of it, right? Wrong! Another problem exists in that, for the first time, the federal personal exemption will be higher than the state. That means some people will not have to file a federal return, but will have to file a state return and will owe tax to the state. The problem is they won't be able to file a state return. The state return is based on using federal "adjusted gross income." If you file no federal return you have no such number. And it may affect 300,000 households in Michigan. Could we raise the state personal exemption to match the new federal one? Sure, and that would consume the entire $170 million windfall.

Then there are some who say 'Let's use the money for property tax relief, because that's what people really want!" Could be.

So, all in all, it is a complex problem which this governor, as usual, has dealt with simplistically and less than honestly. He appears to believe and to act on the belief that the people of Michigan only care about symbolism and impression.

Celebrating St. Patrick's Day in Corktown

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

So dear to our hearts are the scenes of our childhood . . . These words express how much we treasure the memories of homes and family; neighborhood and friends. Perhaps we don't consciously call them to mind, but often the treasured incidents of our growing years spring to mind unbidden to cheer us when we are sad or to bring back the joy of happenings.

Long ago when cities were young and people settled in a neighborhood to live out their lives, the past was not easily lost. It gently merged into the present. There were reminders all around of the past to influence and comfort us in times of need.

As cities exploded into impersonal communities, this sense of communion with the familiar was lost. People moved in and moved on. Neighborhoods changed. To visit the scenes of our growing years, except in memory, oftentimes would involve a pilgrimage to many neighborhoods, cities or even states.

This need to establish continuity with roots when possible is what makes St. Patrick's Day Mass at Most Holy Trinity Church in what was once known as Corktown, such an occasion. On that day all those who once lived there come back with sons and daughters; granddaughters and grandsons. It is a link that seems destined to never be bro-

True it's not the same neighborhood, but it takes little to recall landmarks. The church is the focus. The school with its wide stairways and polished banisters is gone. The spot where it once to be Irish is to be blessed, and to have grown up in Detroit's old Corktown in the shadow of Trinity Church is to be twice blessed.

Even those like myself who never knew it in its heyday ap-

Prime Time for Senior Citizens

stood is vacant. There is a sort of pleasure in the fact that it wasn't replaced by some industrial structure, as many of the once familiar sites have been.

There is still a school, a modern one-floor building, directly opposite the church. Many of the congregation will gather there on Tuesday, March 17, to renew old friendships and to listen to the children sing. The songs will be the traditional ones sung over the years, but there will be few Irish faces among the performers. The students now are of many ethnic backgrounds but they, too, will pay honor to St. Patrick. Memories will be shared and stories told, and to add a zest, a few heated arguments. When it is all over and done, the participants will return to their homes reaffirmed in the worth of their heritage and convinced that preciate that privilege.

I was a third generation there. My grandfather who had come from County Cork built a home there for his bride. Ten children were born and grew up in the house. One by one they left. After my father died, my mother and I moved back to be with grandpa.

At that time only the remnant of what had been a solid Irish community remained. Many of those who had come from Ireland to seek their fortune found it and moved on to better houses, finer clothes and privileged lives. There was no envy in the hearts of those who stayed behind. They were proud that "one of their own" had made it. Besides to be bitter was to admit defeat and no Irishman would concede that!

The church was a focal point in the lives of those who stayed in the neighborhood. Mass on Sunday in your best clothes, Saturday confession, Friday night benediction were weekly rituals. All important events in life were church-oriented - baptism, weddings, funerals, and the annual St. Patrick's Day observance.

And what a celebration it was. It began even as now with special church services. Later there were the usual gatherings at the local saloons but it was the evening that was looked forward to the most. That was when the St. Patrick Day's entertainment was held. Around seven o'clock the audience would make their way up four flights of stairs to the auditorium on the top floor of old Trinity School. By eight o'clock there wasn't an empty seat in the

During the performances we would sit entranced as we listened to the local talent sing "The Bells of St. Mary's," "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen," "Mother Machree" and other favorites. John McCormick himself never had a more appreciative audience.

Interspersed with soul-stirring recitations were speeches by 'some of our boys from Downtown" who were probably running for office that year.

Second only to the church in our lives was the school. It was held in almost the same reverence. School was an important stepping stone to success and when it came to learning, well, you'd better and no nonsense about it. If you were corrected in school, you'd better keep it quiet because there was worse waiting at home.

For more than 100 years, the faithful have been gathering at Holy Trinity Church to celebrate the day, recall the past, give thanks for their indomitable Irish spirit and return to their homes renewed and fortified.

As soon as conception has taken place, the new cell begins to change. Within 30 minutes it is ready to divide into two cells. Ten hours later these two make four, etc. All the time the cells are dividing, the cluster is rolling along the Fallopian tube toward the womb. This takes about five days. Rolling down the tube the little collection of multiplying cells now has the form of a tiny fluid-filled sphere called a blastocyst which derives nourishment from itself. Once in the womb it floats for a few days in a fluid rich in sugar and salt. Developing continually, the sphere embeds itself in the womb's wall, usually in the upper part. The wall disintegrates at that point to form a tiny cavity. The blastocyst burrows into the cavity and the womb lining spreads over to cover it. It is in this position, just under the lining of a womb, that the embryo will grow for the rest of the pregnancy.

Some of the cells will develop as the placenta - the bridge of life between the embryo and the mother.

plain to me why this is not a human being! And the state pays for the murder by means of abortion! How can a doctor who has taken the Hippocratic oath perform an abortion?

One hears, "A woman should do with her body as she pleases." If a woman does not want a child, let her practice birth control. If, after a child is born and it gives her trouble, can she murder it and get away scot free?

Also, in my opinion, there is no need for surrogate mothers since there are countless babies or small children who are unwanted and in need of a home and parents to care for them. Adoption could sove the problems of childless couples. In reality the child born to a surrogate mother is born out of wedlock and some lawyers who make these deals do real well financially. I learned the facts of life early. My grandmother was a mid-wife and the data outlined herein was gleaned from her and her books. Thank you for the opportunity to bring these facts to your attention.

"PLEASE, SIR, I WANT SOME MORE."

The above quote is, of course, from Oliver Twist by Charles Dickens but it could also be from your child. Dickens was writing about porridge, but your son or daughter could be asking for a whole potpourri of material objects.

The one thing that you can give your child that will not get old, will not rust, will not break and cannot be taken from them is a fine independent school education. Excellent schooling, simply stated, lasts a lifetime. One would have to surmise that the lack of an excellent education would also last a lifetime.

At The Grosse Pointe Academy we established a Montessori Early Childhood Program 25 YEARS AGO. Each year we have made improvements to the program, materials, and the building. Today we are recognized not only as a leader among the Metro Detroit early childhood programs and described as one of the best in the midwest, but we now are recognized nationally as an outstanding early childhood facility. We teach our students to respect and care for others and we help them to develop a high level of self-esteem. We emphasize the development of appropriate academic skills and include the unique Montessori areas of practical life, geography, language development, the five senses, muscular development and mathematics. serious people. But I do now." Unlike some female lawyers, however, Schneider didn't have trouble landing a job. During law school, she worked for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and after graduation, she moved to the county defender's office, where she did felony trial work.

"I was in court every day," she said. "It was perfect preparation for being a judge ... When you use the rules of evidence, you understand them — but they're hard to understand if you don't use

She used them plenty and when she was appointed five years ago to an unexpired term on the Grosse Pointe Woods municipal court bench, she was ready. A memorable occasion - she was "robed" by Chief Justice G. Mennen Williams. "I was so honored," she says.

There are only six municipal judges in Michigan and Schneider is making the most of her opportunity in a community court.

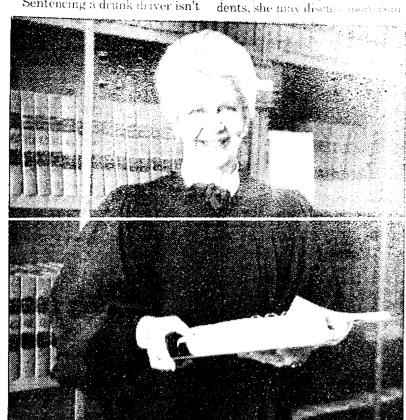

"Municipal court is the first court people come to — maybe the only one," she said. "It's the only view most Americans have of the court system. We want to make the most of it and give a good impression.'

Among the ways to make a good impression are being prepared and maintaining a thorough background. Schneider reads the reports prepared by the probation department before she hears the cases — which start on time, unlike some courts. She recently graduated from a National Judicial College seminar on sentencing for drunk drivers, one of the most frequent kinds of cases she hears.

"There's a 300 percent increase in drunk driving cases (in the Woods) over the last year," she said. "I didn't have anything to do with (increased enforcement) - that was the doing of the public safety director. But I applaud it. When the legislature passes a law, it should be enforced."

simple. The person who rarely drinks, but gets caught on the one occasion he or she is driving drunk, is eager for education, Schneider says. But a person with a chronic problem, a chemical dependency, needs more than a short class.

"A person who is dependent doesn't want to give it up," she said. "As a judge, I'm an intervener. It can be an opportunity for the family to start discussing the problem.

Schneider takes her message about the courts, and specifically about drunk driving, on the road to schools and community groups.

and it comes complete with pictures of the major officers.

"It's the old teacher in me," she says. "When I went to college, women became teachers and housewives, and that's what I Schneider's interest in the problem of drinking also led her to try to start a local chapter of a youth assistance program nearly two years ago. Modeled after a planused in a few other Wayne County communities, the program would have kept youthful offenders out of the juvenile court system, to be dealt with on their own home turf.

She was unsuccessful at getting complete community cooperation, in spite of many evenings spent explaining the program to city councils. But her groundwork may have been of some benefit when FLEC started a similar program last year. Councils that had heard the litany of benefits from Schneider the year before gave their approval - and their money - to FLEC.

Schneider doesn't believe the problems that plague local youth have gone away. She says she has no statistics, but believes that the huge teen parties with drinks and without chaperones still exist, in spite of current community stands against drinking. It is too soon to know whether the youth assistance program will work, but Schneider is hopeful.

"I hope it works, I really do," she said. "It's so sad for a child to have the disadvantage of not learning to control himself."

When she isn't taking her judicial show on the road, Schneider relaxes by reading or heading for the water. She and husband ty. People see friends they ha-Burkhard, a Cornell University classmate, swim and sail and scuba dive. They certified for diving in a freezing stone quarry near Toledo, but since then have kept to warmer waters in the Caribbean or the South Pacific.

Being a municipal judge has meant more involvement in the community where she has lived for 23 years. Twice a year since she took the bench, Schneider has given large-scale teas as one way of staying in touch. Two weeks ago, she had 50 guests.

'It's purely social," she said. "People always want to know what the topic is, but there isn't any. But it's a way to pick up on what's going on in the communiven't seen in a long time.

"I like it because I'm more a part of the community than I was when I worked downtown."

News Some schools to get new windows after all

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

The mild winter and a new approach to buying fuel produced a $400,000 savings in the school budget — a surplus now available to do one or more window replacement projects in the district's elementary schools.

Although the savings had been anticipated, it came as a surprise that the window projects could be realized so soon. Only two months ago, the school board was fretting over a potential long wait before any of the projects could be completed.

The savings are attributable to the weather, to a new arrangement for delivery of fuel gas, and to a low cost-of-living increase, according to David King, director of support services. The budget allows for a cost-of-living increase of 3.5 percent from April to April; as of last month, the increase was only .7 percent, King said.

The largest portion of the sur year to directly purchase gas for four schools, the largest gas consumers. A change in federal regulations made it possible for the first time for large users to bypass local utilities and contract directly with a supplier.

"We knew we'd have a savings when we started transporting fuel," said Business Manager Christian Fenton. "As long as it can save money for us, we'll keep doing it.'

"We buy gas on the open market," King said. "We know the price from MichCon - and we see what we can do. MichCon (and other utilities) tied up a lot of gas during the energy crisis and they're stuck with high-priced contracts."

Of course, the local transporter charges the schools for delivery of the gas, but even with that additional charge, savings of more than $78,000 at one high school were anticipated.

Grosse Pointe was one of the ANR (Pipeline) . . ." he told the first local districts to take advantage of the new arrangement. Grand Rapids, Lansing and Ann Arbor also got in on the ground floor, King said.

Grosse Pointe was buying gas from MichCon at a rate of $5.54 per 1,000 cubic feet. Under the current arrangement, the schools are paying $1.60 per 1,000 cubic feet and an additional $1.87 for transportation through MichCon lines, for a savings of $2.07, King said. There has not been a price increase since the gas started flowing in September.

The transportation contract is "interruptible" during periods of extreme cold when there is increased demand on the pipeline system, but King stressed that only the cheaper gas supply is interrupted. "This does not mean there would be an interruption of gas supplied by MichCon to the schools but only an interruption of the cheaper gas supplied by board in a written report.

King is hopeful that the savings can be applied to one or several window projects this summer. He so informed the board last week, but said he does not expect to have a specific recommendation before next month.

Committees to review proposals for the windows have already been appointed at each of the four schools under consideration. Richard, Mason, Trombly and Parcells have been chosen for initial consideration.

Most of the district's older schools are big energy-consumers and have a high priority for window replacement. Pierce is an exception to that and is not now on

"Pierce is one of the most energy-efficient buildings we have," King said. "It doesn't have very many windows on the north side and it's close to a neighborhood with big trees that protect from the weather. Besides, there's been a lot of mechanical work done there in the last seven or eight years. It's very tight.'

Parcells was put higher on the list than Pierce because it has the highest energy consumption of any middle school and it is believed that window replacement would actually improve the appearance of the building. It is likely that the project will result in a reduction of window area by about two-thirds, by covering the upper panes with a metal panel as was done at Poupard School a few years ago.

Parcells was moved higher on the list because its windows are due to be painted this summer. "That would cost $70,000," King said, "so why paint them if you're going to replace them?

The committee at each school will review the proposals to see if they want architecturally authentic windows all the way around the building or if there are some areas where a cheaper treatment can be used, King said.

The last snow?

Southeastern Michigan woke up Thursday morning to an unexpected layer of snow. Morning traffic was snarled, but it didn't worry Andrew Stevens, 4, and his little brother, Jack, 1, who went sledding at Patterson Park in the Park. The pair were joined in the endeavor by brother Paul, 3, and mom, Barbara.

Bon Secours to be one of three satellites for hospice group

Hospice of Southeastern Michithe central Hospice of Southeastgan and Bon Secours Hospice Home Care Program joined forces to form the first such affiliation of its kind in Michigan, according to Paul Werner, M.D., executive director, HSEM.

The affiliation is part of an expansion program that will create three satellite locations. The first is at Bon Secours Nursing Care Center, St. Clair Shores. The other two satellites opening later this year will be at Seaway Hospital, Trenton, and Henry Ford Hospital, Detroit.

"The satellites, together with ern Michigan location in Southfield, will create one of the largest hospices in the country," Dr. Werner said.

When the affiliation is complete in mid-1988, HSEM and its satellites expect to serve 75 inpatients and 300 home-care patients.

HSEM is currently one of four hospices in the world designated by the Institute as a research and education center. It now serves daily approximately 95 patients from Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

The Bon Secours satellite site, located at 26001 East Jefferson, involves the incorporation of the existing Bon Secours Hospice Home Care Program into the HSEM program. The Bon Secours Hospice has cared for patients since 1982.

The satellite initially opened with two inpatient beds. A total of 14 beds are planned to be in service by mid-1988.

For more information about Hospice of Southeastern Michigan and its satellite locations, call 559-9209, weekdays, 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Bishop Gallagher begins fundraising campaign

A three-year, $1.1 million fundraising effort by Bishop Gallagher High School, called the Vision Campaign, was launched last week by Bishop Patrick Cooney, auxiliary bishop for the Archdiocese of Detroit.

The school, located at 19360 Harper Avenue in Harper Woods, is a co-educational high school serving more than 60 parishes in the Detroit metropolitan area. Approximately 1,000 students are enrolled in grades 9-12. It was founded in 1962 by Our Lady Queen of Peace, St. Matthew and St. Philomena parishes and is administered by the Christian

Areas which will receive funding through the campaign include academic and professional development programs, student activities and student financial aid. Academic needs include scientific and technological equipment, grants for instructional improvements, computers, professional development and student services. Development of the Student Activities Complex is currently underway in Clinton Township located in Macomb County.

The campaign also seeks to establish initial endowment support through the Bishop Gallagher Educational Foundation to provide student financial assistance to those who might otherwise not be able to attend.

Gerald Grijak, branch equity coordinator at E.F. Hutton and chairman of the campaign, reported that the initial response has put the drive nearly halfway to its goal. Grijak reported that

ORDINANCE NO. 135

AN ORDINANCE TO AMEND SECTIONS 11-6 AND 11-7 OF THE GROSSE POINTE PARK CITY CODE.

THE CITY OF GROSSE POINTE PARK ORDAINS:

Section 1. Sections 11-6 and 11-7 of the Grosse Pointe Park City Code are amended to read as follows:

Sec. 11-6. Flood plain construction requirements.

The standards of construction and permit requirements in effect from time to time as promulgated by the Federal Insurance Administrator pursuant to the provisions of the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968, as amended, are adopted by reference and applicable to all areas of the city identified as areas of special flood hazard by the Federal Insurance Administration in its most current flood insurance study for the city and the accompanying flood insurance rate map.

Sec. 11-7. Flood plain permits and variances.

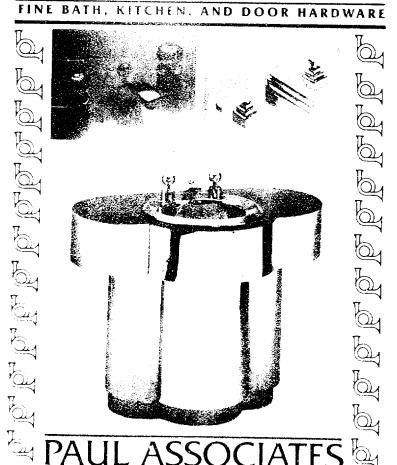

No person shall engage in any new construction, substantial improvements or other development of property in areas of special flood hazard without first obtaining a permit from the director of public service. No such permit shall be issued unless the requirements of section 11-6 are met or a variance therefrom is issued by the director of public service in accordance with criteria in effect from time to time as promulgated by the Federal Insurance Administrator pursuant to the provisions of the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968, as amended.

Section 2. This ordinance shall take effect on March 25, 1987.

Special ed rules to be discussed

The Michigan Association For Children And Adults With Learning Disabilities will present a program by chapter President Julie Gallimore and chapter Vice President JoEllen Lane on "IEPC's Under the New Special Education Rules," Tuesday, March 17, at 7:30 p.m. at Central Library.

The new special ed rules have been passed by the Michigan Legislature and will go into effect in the fall. All IEP's (Individualized Education Programs) currently being written are bound by these rules. The IEPC (Individualized Education Planning Committee) is a team designated to determine the educational needs and correct program for each child receiving special education services.

MACLD meetings are open to the public. There is no admission charge and refreshments will be served. For more information, call 885-8103.

Computer workshop

The fifth in the series of Computer Awareness Labs offered at the Central Library will be held Saturday, March 14, at 2 p.m.

The focus will be "The Computer as Filing Cabinet," and will use the software program "PFS:File" to demonstrate how computers can be and are used to store and organize information. Blaine Morrow, coordinator of automated services for the library, will lead the workshop.

Attendees will learn how to design, add to, delete from, search and print data base information, as well as how to use the program for creating detailed reports, graphs, spreadsheets, mailing labels and form letters.

Registration is limited to 30. Call 343-2074 or stop at the circulation desk.

Trombly enters wellness contest

Students at Trombly Elementary have embarked on a unique wellness program designed to encourage students and staff members to develop or expand mental and physical activities which contribute to healthy life styles.

A "Green Circle" team comprised of 20 students meets monthly to plan themes and activities geared toward the development of self-esteem and respect for others. Weekly activities are then planned to reflect those themes. The program is part of the school's activities in the "Choices for Positive Living . . . Make a Habit of It!" statewide wellness competition sponsored by Comerica Incorporated and the Mental Health Association in Michigan, a United Way Agency. "The program teaches students to work together on topics such as physical fitness, nutrition, stress management and substance abuse," said Principal Sheila Joyce. "It's unique because the students are the primary planners of each event.' Approximately 200 Michigan elementary schools - representing 70,000 students and 3,000 teachers - are competing in the Choices contest. Thirteen cash prizes, including a $5,000 first prize, will be awarded in May to assist schools in continuing their wellness activities. Each school develops its own program based

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

The following, titled "Contributions," was written by Christine Kelley, an eighth-grader at St. Clare of Montefalco School. She is the daughter of David and Patricia Kelley of Grosse Pointe Park.

If we stood back for just a moment, and watched the world go by, I think that everyone even the fraction of today's youth who have turned away from their morals, would realize how truly privileged we are to live in this glorious nation. I also believe that every citizen of this country, in this comparison, would strive to create the most perfect country possible, for it is obvious we have not far to go.

I say that we haven't far to go, for we have laid the foundation upon which we shall build a nation that remains an ideal for the ginning, we fought to govern our- Frederick Douglass? Or Harriet

Families just want to have fun

The last of five "Family Fun Nights" scheduled by the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe Public School System will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. on Friday, March 13, at Brownell Middle School.

A special feature of the evening will be a performance by professional clown Becky "Rainbow" Santora, a local resident who appears regularly at the White House. Students from her recently-concluded "Learn To Be A Clown!" class will also be on hand to add to the festivities.

During the spring session of classes for adults, Rainbow will again teach her "Learn to Be a Cłown" class and her "Balloon Animals" class. In addition, for children ages 9 and up, she will do her "Balloon Animals" class.

Other activities at Family Fun Night include shooting baskets, playing volleyball, swimming, making an arts and crafts project, watching a movie, tumbling, and playing ping pong.

Admission is $1 per person, with refreshments available for a nominal charge.

Sleuth finds little glamour in private investigations

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

It's mostly boring three-piece suit work

His day could include a trip to a county seat for hours of poring over dusty old files and having to deal with dusty old government file clerks. He could find himself driving out to Metropolitan Airport to pick up a corporate executive, driving the magnate downtown, waiting until he's finished his business and then zipping him back out I-94 to the terminal.

Ahh, the glamorous life of the private detective.

James W. Spitz owns a gun but tor or the seven years he spent as a Detroit police officer.

Spitz, 36, a Park resident, runs a small private investigator's office on Groesbeck in Clinton Township. He advertises throughout the eastside area and will take most investigative, bodyguard or undercover jobs that come his way.

He advertises that no job is too small. Spitz will tag along if a customer wants a little security when making a bank deposit or if there is some concern for valuables that are being transported.

Spitz was an officer in Detroit's he has never had to use it in the 7th Precinct and owned a karate five years as a private investiga- and weight training center at Gratiot and Seven Mile roads. When the neighborhood got too tough for him and the other black belts, he closed the center and quit the force.

"I had high expectations for the karate business," Spitz said. "But things in that area just didn't go too well."

A college degree or a minimum of three years police experience are required for the investigator's license and he fit the latter category. A concealed weapons' permit and a snub-nose .38 later, and he was sleuthing for a living.

"A lot of the work I do is background searches for employers," Spitz said. "They get an application and hire me to verify the in formation."

He gets the information mainly by interviewing people and spending time going over government records.

Once an investigator gets the hang of the tools he uses, finding out information on anyone isn't all that difficult.

For a yearly fee and a per request charge, for instance, an investigator can use the computers of the credit bureaus which keep monetary tabs on everyone.

He said that getting his name and phone number out in front of the public is the biggest expense. He charges customers 15 cents a mile, so his transportation costs are covered.

"Advertising is pretty expensive," he said, "and I don't get too many repeat customers. After all, how many times is a person blackmailed. The word-of-mouth advertising is very good."

The fees he charges vary. Obviously, accompanying a store owner to the bank to make a deposit wouldn't be too costly, maybe $20 to $30 for a couple of hours work, Spitz said. That fee could go up significantly, however, if the storekeeper had been robbed several times in the past few weeks.

Jim Spitz has been a private investigator for the past five years. A Park resident, Spitz is a former Detroit police officer.

"Most of the time when I'm asked to investigate someone or find out what someone is doing,' Spitz said, "it's a relative of my client. They are involved in something illegal, perhaps, and they don't want the police involved.

Spitz operates the business himself. There's no secretary and he handles most of the business' finances. He farms out some bodyguard work from time to time as the job requires. He has some black belt friends, including one from Grosse Pointe, that he uses regularly, but for the most part he pounds the pavement alone.

Expense accounts are handled the way they would be in any other business, except for paying a street informant for a tip.

"They don't give receipts," Spitz said.

Keeping in shape is important in the private investigating field.

"You could go for years without ever having to get out of the car to chase someone," he said. "But if you ever had to, you had better be ready.

In fact, Spitz' hobbies are running and karate. He used to be involved in tournament competition, but he said he just works out

At times, Spitz can double his income with one job. He may have to go undercover for the owner of a warehouse who thinks his employees are ripping him off.

"I come in, fill out the application, get hired - do everything I need to get the job." Spitz said. "Then I work my way into the job and do the surveillance as an employee. If I'm doing actual labor, I get that wage plus my fee."

So far, Spitz hasn't had any medical expenses related to his work as an investigator, but said he is trained in basic emergency first aid and CPR for his clients. "It wouldn't do the client much good if he were to be shot and he died from bleeding that I could have stopped," he said.

As for him, he said he has made enemies over the last five years, and gets the occasional death threat left on his answering machine.

"Talk is cheap," he said. "Most of the time it's probably over a family dispute. That is when it seems the emotions run the highest.

His advice to budding investigators is to think things out carefully. He said he is earning enough to keep his life running smoothly, but noted it wasn't always like that.

"If you come into this business cold, it could be hard," he said. "Don't go out and get your license and expect the money to start coming in.'

News Farms sailor prepares to circumnavigate the

By Margle Reins Smith Staff Writer

In the next few weeks, Dick Knoblauch will take a giant step toward realizing his lifelong dream. He'll set sail from the Grosse Pointe Farms pier on the first leg of a five-year journey around the world. He'll do it as captain of his own sailboat - a boat he built himself.

Knoblauch is not trying to set records. He's not pushing for speed. He's not looking for danger or excitement. He's not out to prove how macho or how brave he is. He's not out to show anybody

"There's so many places I want to see. I want to spend some time - to do as much as I can, the good Lord willing. This has been a goal of mine for a long time," he said.

He plans to explore the Caribbean during the first year. For the second year, he'll sail to Europe, Scandinavia, the Netherlands, France and cruise the Mediterranean. During the third year he plans to explore the Aegean. The fourth year he'll trace Columbus' route across the Atlantic back to the Caribbean. Then he'll travel through the Panama Canal, to the southern May 1983. For the last four years Pacific, the Indian Ocean, sail around the Cape of Good Hope at the tip of South Africa ("Smaller ships than mine have made it," he said) through the south Atlantic into the Caribbean again.

He'll retire from his job teaching dentistry and begin his adventure on May 21 - a Thursday. "It's bad luck to start a long sailing journey on a Friday," he said, - an old sailors' superstition."

He's philosophical about the trip. "If I'm blessed with good health - mental and physical -I'll finish," he said. "But I'll stop if I have to."

Knoblauch has about 45 years sailing experience under his belt. He grew up in New Jersey, learned to sail from his father when he was 10 years old, and he's been hooked on sailing ever since. He's built two boats; he's taught sailing; he's logged thousands of nautical miles on the East Coast from Nantucket to Florida, in the Caribbean, and on the Great Lakes. His wife, Gini, has sailed with him ever since they were married, and he has three daughters. "My oldest daughter is a quasi-sailor," he said. His youngest daughter will sail parts of his round-the-world trip with him. Gini will sail with him in the Caribbean, in Europe, the Mediterranean and Australia. But she has declined to join him for long, across-the-ocean jaunts. A good friend will join him for other parts of the trip.

"I like the challenge of sailing. I understand the mountain climber when he says he does it just because it's there. The skier too. I love sailing - communing with nature - learning to live in harmony with the elements," he said.

Knoblauch's home-built craft is a 33-foot Alajuela — a Portuguese design, a double-ended cutter. "There are a few like it on the West Coast, but I've got the only one here in the middle of the country." The name of the boat is Sea Dreamer.

He built the boat himself, from the hull up. He purchased the fiberglass hull in 1981 and launched the finished craft in he's been cruising the Great Lakes - mostly Huron, Michigan and Superior ("It's so pristine and beautiful. They're all gorgeous, but I like the solitude of Superior.") He knows his boat inside and out, forward and aft, above and below. When you've built your own boat, he said, you know exactly how it's put together and by whom. It's easier to fix something that you've put together in Stupid. I don't want to be depenradio, compass, depth-sounder, log and self-steering gear. "I'll have scads of safety equipment and I'll have the boat rigged so that I don't have to leave the cockpit to adjust the sails." He'll use a sextant and dead reckoning for plotting courses. Although he'll have no radar or Loran aboard, he'll carry a radar detector that will alert him when radar is in the vicinity.

five in a pinch. The galley is equipped with three options for cooking - a propane stove, a charcoal stove and a rough weather stove which is a single burner hanging on gimbals so that it stays upright even if the boat is heeling. The boat is equipped with a 125-gallon water tank and he also has a desalinating solar device which can make about 1½ pints of fresh water a day, from sea water.

"My one concession is mechanical refrigeration," he said. "I have a nine-cubic-foot chest that runs on a battery and is recharged by running the engine or by solar panels. It can keep meat semi-frozen for a few weeks.' For the long portions of the

Dick Knoblauch will leave May 21 in his 33-foot sailboat, Sea Dreamer, to circumnavigate the world. He's plotted his proposed route with pins on a wall map. His wife, one of his daughters, and a friend will join him during different portions of the five-year jourpouch that simply need to be heated. He'll replenish supplies each time he's in port.

He'll also be well-equipped with tools, spare parts and supplies for repairs to the boat and sails.

Safety equipment will be plentiful. He said he'll wear a harness whenever he's on deck, so that he's always tethered to the boat. He carries an inflatable life raft with its own supply of emergency food, water and a manually deployable radio signal that can be picked up by nearby aircraft and ships. The signal can run for about 10 days on its own battery.

He'll also carry a well-stocked first aid kit.

"The best emergency protection," he said, "is the practice of filing a plan with the harbor master, telling my primary destination and two or three secondary destinations, depending on the wind and weather."

Knoblauch's longest solo journey will be a stretch of open water in the Indian Ocean between Perth, Australia and Mauritius, an island east of Madagascar. "It's about 6,000 miles," he said. "At 125 miles a day I should make it in about 45 to 50 days." During the long lonely stretches of the trip, Knoblauch plans to read, to write, to watch the weather. He said daily navigational activities will keep him busy too. He has 200 classical music tapes to listen to.

He considers himself well prepared for the adventure. He's talked to a few people who've circumnavigated the globe. He's read everything he can find about the trip. He's working to become as physically fit as possible. He has 45 years of prime, first-hand sailing experience in all types of weather and all kinds of waters. "The major preparation is psychological," he said. "I've asked myself — 'Do I really want to spend a lot of time alone, battling the elements? No — not battling. That's the wrong word. I want to live in harmony with the elements. The answer is yes.'

He plans to leave ports during predictably good weather. "I'll be sailing in June-July-August-type weather everywhere in the world," he said. "But if the weather gets bad, I'll shorten sail, button up and wait out the storm by sailing with it at the most comfortable position.

"Anyone who thinks he can master the sea won't make it. The best advice I've received is to be well-prepared - live symbiotically with nature — and don't try to outdo anyone."

t was a true dog day afternoon at Cobo Hall last Sunday. The Detroit Kennel Club played host to the largest oneday, benched dog show in North America and all the pooches who are anybody were there.

It was big. Some 3,059 dogs were entered. They ranged from celebrity dogs like comedian Bill Cosby's Syclair Special Edition, a wirehaired terrier who won Best In Show, to dogs that may belong to someone who lives down the street from you.

One thing is for certain — they were all aristocrats. The main requirement for entry in a show like this is an American Kennel Club pedigree.

There were a good number of Grosse Pointe pooches among the dogs who came from every corner of the United States and Canada.

One of the big winners was Champion Winnoby's A Star Is Born, UT, an Old English Sheepdog belonging to Carolyn House of Grosse Pointe Farms. Kristen, as the dog is known to her family and friends, won first place in the Utility Class, the top obedience competition. (Obedience trials begin with Novice A and B classes and move through Open A and B classes, to arrive at Utility as the highest level.)

"She was in first place in the Open Class, too," House said. "But she lay down on her

Kristen has already won her championship in conformation competition and has also earned her UT degree in obedience. House is currently showing the dog for "points," that is, to earn an OTC championship, the highest honor a dog can achieve in obedience competition. There is currently only one OTC champion in the United States, House said. It takes 100 points. Kristen currently has 35.

"It's unusual for an Old English to do this well," House said. "They have to compete against all breeds — against the Dobermans and Shepherds. I'm really proud of her."

A show as large as the Cobo Hall exhibition is difficult for the dogs and their owners. The temperature was uncomfortably high and the crowds were noisy. The dogs were required to be on the premises from 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

"It was very difficult for her," House said. 'She was really panting. The crowds were very noisy. A lot of people won't show here. I had to be here at 7:30 a.m. and stay until Kristen has competed in Buffalo, N.Y., and Florida in recent weeks. The traveling has been hard on the dog and her owner.

"There is a lot of stress," House said. "But you only get a dog like this once in a life-

There were four Grosse Pointe Bearded Collies showing in conformation at the exhibition. Deborah and Mark Rupersburg brought Jande Anna Karenina, who won first place in the American-Bred Bitch class, and Champion Jande Nicholas Nickelby. Herman and Donna Gorenflo brought Charisma's Chantilly Lace. Catherine Fields brought Jandewoods Bonnie Blue Bonnet.

"It's kind of like doggy Little League," Mark Rupersburg said. "If we had kids we'd have them in Girl Scouts or something. This is an activity you can do with your dog."

Donna Gorenflo said that she enjoys showing her dog because of the people she meets. "There is a lot of comradship," she said. Lacey, as Charisma's Chantilly Lace is called, was bred in Grosse Pointe Woods by Maureen and Bob Keller, operators of Charisma Kennels. They have been breeding Bearded Collies for longer than the 10 years that the breed has been recognized by the AKC.

The benches of the Bearded Collies were decorated with red and white balloons to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the Bearded Collie Club of Southeastern Michi-

Other Grosse Pointers participating in the show included: Sandra Battaglini and her Golden Retriever; Bruce and Suzan Benesh, Rottweiler; Steven and Constance Farr, Bouviers des Flanders; Karen Fisher, Keeshonden; Craig and Constance Feringa, Golden Retriever; Joan Morgan, Belgian Malinois, Marilyn and Joan Morgan, Belgian Tervuren; Mary Quarnstrom and Alan Blender, Scottish Deerhound; Pat Redick and Marilyn Hartman, Golden Retriever; Coreen Slanec and Susan Feringa, Golden Retriever; Alan and Jacqueline Stein, Soft-Coated Wheaten Terrier.

2B Community AAUW presents program on Michigan women of past

The American Association of University Women, Grosse Pointe Branch, will be celebrating both Women's History Month and the Michigan Sesquicentennial at its annual meeting and spring luncheon on Saturday, March 21. The program will feature Candace Anderson, singer and songwriter who will bring history alive in songs of "Women in Michigan History, 1809-1912." The performance is made possible through two grants from the Michigan Council for the Arts/Touring Arts Agency and the Michigan Council for Humanities.

The AAUW annual meeting will include the election of officers for the coming year, a salute to Eloise Spencer, designated Education Foundation Program honoree, and the introduction of six AAUW scholarship recipients for 1986-87.

Following the business meeting, President Ann Nicholson will introduce Anderson, a singer and songwriter from Kalamazoo. The women that Anderson will portray in ballads are Michigan women, many of whom were famous, others not, that lived a century ago. This one-woman show will be done in costume and she will accompany herself on the guitar and dulcimer. Each woman has been thoroughly researched through diaries, articles and interviews.

"These are not women who have been published or whom you'll find in history books," Anderson said. "I'd rather call it hidden literature. This is a literary project, a creative composition, that brings history alive.'

The idea for this project was born in 1984 when she received funding from the Michigan Council for the Humanities. Since then her program has been seen by more than 7,000 high school students and other large audiences numbering in the thousands. These include historical societies. universities and women's interest groups.

The March 21 meeting and performance is free of charge. Anyone interested should call 884-0936.

Lenten guide

By the Rev. Edward Cobden Christ Church Grosse Pointe

selves and others. For conturies the church has invited us to treat Lent as a mini journey -- a practice pilgrimage -- in order to discover some resources and techniques that we can use more generally to grow in maturity. One of those resources I have discovered is a guide. Goldes are common to the genre of spiritual journeys: Dante had Virgil; Pilgrim had Evangelist. But at first when I set out I thought I could find my own way. Guided tours were plebian.

Having wasted valuable time lost and trying to draw my own maps. I now unashamedly seek a guide. Not only do they help you find the way, but spiritual guides also challenge your preconceptions, give you moral support and expand your horizons.

This Lent I have returned to a guide who first helped me some 35 years ago — C. S. Lewis, Lewis, who died on Nov. 22, 1963, the same day as J. F. Kennedy, was one of the most articulate spokesmen for the Christian faith in our century.

What brought me back to Lewis was seeing the recently released Emmy award-winning movie "Shadowlands." It tells the gripping story of the loss of his wife and his recovery from despair.

This led me to the final story of his seven Chronicles of Narnia. "The Last Battle." (Actually, my wife and I read this aloud on a short trip we took together a few weeks ago; these books are really best enjoyed as they are shared orally.) The book ends with the great lion Aslan (the Christ figure) explaining to the heroes about their death: "Your father and mother and all of you are - as you used to call it in the Shadowlands - dead. The term is over: the holidays have begun. The dream is ended: this is the morning.

The journey is, of course, more than leaving this life for the next. It is the pilgrimage of leaving illusion and delusion and moving into the truth about ourselves and values and relationships which endure and are ultimately trustworthy. Lewis describes this journey into reality and maturity in his version of the Divine Comedy which he calls "The Great Divorce."

He means by the title not to speak about human marriage but about the great difference between heaven and hell and the impossibility of embracing both alternatives as those of us like to do who always insist on keeping our options open. This attempt is based. Lewis warns, "on the belief that reality never presents us with an absolutely unavoidable either-or; that, granted skill and patience and (above all) time enough, some way of embracing both alternatives can always be found; that mere development or adjustment or refinement will somehow turn evil into good without our being called on for a final and total rejection of anything we should like to retain."

I though others might welcome a chance to become acquainted or re-acquainted with Lewis so this Lent we will have at Christ Church Grosse Pointe four Tuesday nights with him. All are wel-

Christ Church-Grosse Pointe is sponsoring a series of lectures, films and discussions on the life and thought of one of the century's most eminent spokesmen for Christianity - C.S. Lewis.

The series will consist of four Tuesday evening lectures and an all-day seminar on April 25. The evening sessions will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the church.

On March 17, the program will be "C.S. Lewis - Images of His World." There will be a film presentation on the life and thoughts of the author followed by a short introduction to the written legacy of Lewis by the Rev. Duane Arnold. Arnold is interim minister of the First Congregational Church of Detroit. He is a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Durham, England, and is an author and lecturer in the field of church history.

C.S. Lewis: Christ Church-Grosse Pointe presents series on noted Christian author

On March 24, the program will be "Mere Christianity — Christian Believing." There will be a dialogue presentation of Lewis' book by the Rev. Edward Cobden, rector of Christ Church. Arnold will focus on questions of belief which face Christians today. He will take questions from the audience.

On March 31, the program will be "Mere Christianity - Christian Behaving." Discussion groups will consider issues of sexuality and social behavior in light of Lewis' book, "Mere Christianity.'

On April 7, the program will be "Sound Advice from Uncle Screwtape." Lewis' senior demon, Screwtape, and his junior tempter and nephew, Wormwood, will come to life in a dramatic presentation as they conspire to dissuade their Christian patient from his journey of faith.

On Saturday, April 25, there will be a day-long symposium on the life and literary work of Lewis. The day will include morning lectures and discussion groups on varied topics connected with Lewis' career; lunch; an afternoon showing of the film "Shadowlands," followed by an expert panel discussion, a special Eucharist with Lewis' prose and poetry and an evening meal.

At 7:30 p.m., there will be a public lecture titled, "C.S. Lewis: The Keys to His Extraordinary Effectiveness," by Dr. Lyle W. Dorsett. Dorsett is the curator of the Wade Collection at Wheaton College which contains the largest holding of Lewis papers and related memorabilia in existence.

The cost for the entire day, including meals, will be $20. Call 885-4841 for more informa-

Mini-retreat for women

St. James Lutheran Church and First English Lutheran Church are sponsoring a miniretreat for women on Saturday, March 28, from 9:15 a.m. to noon featuring the Rev. Margaret Sammons.

Sammons' presentation is "Joy and the New Life." It is an opportunity to spend a quiet morning with God, reflect together on Lent and Easter, plus the new life God is offering. She describes the experience as akin to sitting on a porch swing talking with the Lord.

Before coming to Christ Episcopal Church in Grosse Pointe three years ago, Sammons spent three years in the Peace Corps in Liberia, West Africa and since her ordination served churches in Massachusetts. She is the mother of two daughters and her husband, Greg, is also a clergyman on the staff of Christ Church. First English is located at 800

Church Events

Book Review Group

The Book Review Group of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church will meet on Tuesday, March 17, at 1 p.m., in the church lounge following a noon luncheon in fellowship hall.

Dorothea Bush, chairwoman of the Day, will introduce Joyce Edwards, president of the Women's Association, who will review "When the Legends Die," a novel by Hal Borland. Saturday Review ranks this book with only three other masterful works of fiction about the American Indian.

This review promises to be a story-telling surprise that will be a fitting conclusion to the weeks of becoming better acquainted with the American Indian through the ecumenical ministers who recently have been guests at Memorial Church.

Junior League supports OmniArts program

OmniArts in Education has school settings. received a gift from the Junior League of Detroit to help underwrite the cost of one of OmniArts' 1987 Orchestra Hall concerts for local elementary and middle school students.

The Junior League award, received the second week in February, is scheduled to be used for a May 6 morning concert at Orchestra Hall. The program, yet to be determined, will include several of the 77 local dancers, artists, musicians and dramatists from which OmniArts draws its professional performers.

The Orchestra Hall concerts, which debuted in February 1986, provide students in the Detroit public schools participating in OmniArts in Education's In Person arts education curriculum an opportunity to be in the audience in historic Orchestra Hall. Other In Person programs are held in OmniArts' premier Orchestra Hall season featured, in three separate programs, the Hal McKinney Jazz Reunion, the C.S. Mott Community College Percussion Sextet, soprano Jacqueline Green, pianists Charles Lloyd Jr. and Martin Burwell and clarinetist Stephen Millen. The first 1987 presentation, Wednesday, March 4, presented James Underwood, trumpet; Stephen Millen, clarinet; Gordon Finlay, tenor, and Martin Burwell, piano.

OmniArts in Education is a non-profit Detroit-based educational organization with an 11year history of arts education programming in public schools in Detroit and Pontiac. The 10-week In Person series was presented in 27 schools during the 1985-86 academic year before a total of more than 11,000 young people.

The Junior League of Detroit, founded on 1914, has a current membership of more than 1,000 whose common goal is promotion of volunteerism for the improvement of the community. The educational and organization was one of 30 charter members founding the national Association of Junior Leagues in 1921. This is its first gift to OmniArts in Edu-

WADSO prepares for Fashionscope '87

Planning a spring luncheon is not unusual for Detroit-area women, but a luncheon and fashion show for 1,000 of one's nearest and dearest friends might give one pause. However, Alice Haidostian, president of the Women's Association for the Detroit Symphony, had no qualms as she appointed Lorraine Schultz, Birmingham, and Harriet Fuller, Birmingham, to chair the committee for Fashionscope

With a 30-year tradition of presenting a spring fashion luncheon, the WADSO members have planned the gala event for Wednesday, March 18, in the Renaissance Ballroom of the Westin Hotel, An 11 a.m. social hour will initiate proceedings with the luncheon scheduled for noon. The fashion show will follow at 1 p.m. with designer fashions from Hudson's Oval Room.

Chairmen Schultz and Fuller have the assistance of a full cadre of experienced committee heads covering the details involved in an event eagerly awaited each year by the women in Detroit's three-county area. WADSO members who have undertaken responsibilities are: Marian Impastato, East Detroit, invitations; Joan Sankovich, Franklin, addressing; and Fay Ann Resnick, Huntington Woods, mailing.

Tickets for Fashionscope '87 are priced at $25 for regular admission, $50 for Patrons and $75 for Benefactors. Chairing the ticket committee is Joan Stern, Birmingham, assisted by Lucy Debol, Troy, who is handling reser-

Patrons and Benefactors had a preview of the designer fashions at a Patron Luncheon planned for March 5 at the home of Harriet Fuller, Professional models showed some of the outfits at this luncheon while Detroit Symphony mucisians serenaded the patrons with music. Chairman of the Patron Party was Stephanie Germack, Grosse Pointe Farms, aided by Barbra Block, Bloomfield Hills.

Gini Heffner, Troy, and Helen Peterson, Bloomfield Hills, are organizing a hostess committee for the 1,000 guests expected to attend the luncheon.

Following the fashion show a drawing will select the winners of a glamorous trip to New York, diamond jewelry donated by Bongiorno Jewelers, and luggage donated by the Auto Leather Guild. These are the prizes of a raffle coordinated by Gina Bedrosian, Dearborn Heights.

Keeping the communication lines open between all the dedicated volunteers working on Fashionscope '87 are Winnie Schafer, Birmingham, telephones; Barbara Zobl, Bloomfield Hills, and Sharon Rees, Royal Oak, public relations.

Louise Papista will present a slide program on "Russian Treasures" to fellow Grosse Pointe Questers at the Lakeshore Road home of Myrtle Palmer on Friday, March 13, at 10 a.m.

Icons have a fixed place in the Russian Orthodox church. St. John Chrysostom and St. Basil, the two saints who originated the Eucharistic liturgies, are found in the chapel of the altar where the Eucharistic elements are prepared. Icons of Christ, St. John the Baptist, the Mother of God, the saint to whom the church is dedicated, the archangels Michael and Gabriel are found on the iconostasis (alter screen). From the skylighted dome the pantocrator, a representation of Christ, looks down holding the book of the Law.

When the Great October Socialist Revolution took place in 1917 the icon masters turned their talent to the creation of a new Russian folk art - the modern lacquered miniature. The villages of Palekh, Fedoskino. Kholui and Mstera have their own distinct style in this folk art.

Papista will also discuss the Russian samovar and Baltic amber.

Mable Van Dagens and Louise Couger will co-host the luncheon.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Metropolitan Detroit will hold its annual spring fashion show and luncheon on Thursday, March 12, at the Detroit Yacht Club on Belle Isle. "Promises of Spring" is the theme for this year's show

The recipient of the Woman of the Year Award from the Federation will be Daisy Griffin, past president of the federation and parliamentarian.

Rosemary T. Elias, second vice president of the federation, is chairman of the day. She will be assisted at the platform by President Arlene Baum and First Vice President Mary Continuous entertainment by a string trio from the Tuesday Musicale of Detroit provided by Emily Austin during the reception hour. Johana Gilbert, contralto soloist will provide a "Medley of Song.

Tickets may be purchased by calling Margarite Gutt at 548-2240 or Eleanor Shively Colony Town Club members and their guests will gather Thursday, March 19, at the Bloomfield Hunt Club in Birmingham for a St. Patricks Party.

The social hour begins at 11:30 a.m. followed by lunch at 12:30 p.m.

Barbara Pierce will be giving a Color Me Beautiful Demonstration and choosing some Colony Town Club members as models.

Afterwards there will be bridge for those who wish to play.

Our chairman for the luncheon is Betty Henderson, and her committee: Dorothy Bagley and Lillian Dorsey.

Grosse Pointe Woman's Club members and guests will meet Wednesday, March 18, in the Crystal Ballroom of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial at 12:30 p.m.

The afternoon's speaker will be Nancy Williams, the administrative assistant and public relations representative for the Detroit and Canada Tunnel Corporation. She is also the supervisor of both the Detroit and Windsor Tunnel Money Exchanges. She will give a presentation about the first construction of the tunnel.

Lucy Chielens is social chairman. Marion Hopson and Janet Allen will be hostesses for the tea. Assisting will be Charlotte Collins, Mary Fitzpatrick, Ruth Knapp and Leone Schneider. Joan Kirk, Camille Duffy, Mercedes Jacobs and Elinor Giblin will pour.

Members planning to invite guests are requested to make reservations by contacting hospitality chairmen, Aline Saverino, or Irene Dettloff, not later than Saturday noon, March 11.

On Friday, March 13, the Grand Marais Questers will hear from a much travelled speaker about the travel habits and lifestyles of those other special travelers, the Gypsies.

Virginia Kasza of Windmill Pointe chapter will come in costume to the home of Jan Wright, hostess for the day. Margaret Brown, program chairman, is responsible for arrangements.

The Grosse Pointe chapter 2151 of the American Association of Retired Persons will hold it regular meeting on Monday, March 23, at 1 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

March 12, 1987 Grosse Pointe News Community Zucchini is a nutritious vegetable choice Used widely in the Mediterranean area, and prized by the Italians and Greeks, the zucchini has been neglected in the United States un-

an area, and prized by the Italians and Greeks, the zucchini has been neglected in the United States until recent years. The delicious, tender zucchini is becoming a part of the modern hors d'oeuvre table. popular steamed or in stir-fry dishes and a real flavor-blender with eggplant, tomatoes and many other vegetables.

The following recipes are from the low-calorie, low-cholsterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Lightning Zucchini

It is so utterly delicious that one thinks it should have taken a lot of preparation. Very tasty when hot and good when served cold. Ideal accompaniment for almost any entree. It is wise to double the recipe as everyone will be wanting

1 pound very fresh zucchini 1 small onion, finely diced 2 tsp. margarine

Wash zucchini and trim off ends. Pat dry. On the coarse side of grater, shred zucchini. Melt margarine in Teflon® lined skillet, add the finely diced onion and saute until soft. Add shredded zucchini and stir-fry over medium heat one to three minutes, stirring constantly. Sprinkle lightly with seasoned salt and pepper. Zucchini will be crisp and tasty. Makes four servings.

Calories about 35 per serving. Cholesterol 0.

Zucchini Delight

Oh, how beautiful, so tempting, this is a dish that your whole family will love. Not only is it a lot of good eating, inexpensive, and low in calories, but it is cholesterol

6 firm zucchini

tomatoes

- 1 small onion, chopped
- 2 Tblsp. unsalted margarine 1 pound medium size
- 3/4 cup grated cholesterolfree cheese

Salt and pepper to taste

slices and saute with the chopped onion in the heated margarine for 10 to 15 minutes.

Skin the tomatoes. Cut the tomatoes in slices; reserve six of the nicest looking slices. Add the remaining to the pan with the zucchini. Cook for a few minutes. Grease an ovenproof dish and layer the zucchini and tomatoes with the cheese. On the top layer of zucchini cover with the reserved slices of tomatoes. Cover the tomatoes with the remaining cheese. Bake in a preheated 350°oven for 45 minutes. Makes six

Zucchini with Herbs 1/4 cup oil, preferably olive 1½ pounds zucchini, sliced 1/8 inch thick (6 cups)

- 1/4 tsp. salt Pepper to taste
- 2 Tblsp. margarine
- 2 tsp. chopped garlic
- 1 Tblsp. each parsley, chives, dill
- 1 Tblsp. finely chopped fresh basil or 1 tsp. dried 1 tsp. chopped fresh tarragon or 1/2 tsp. dried

In skillet in hot oil, cook zucchini with salt and pepper over relatively high heat, shaking skillet and tossing and stirring zucchini gently with spatula, about five to seven minutes. Drain in sieve. Do not wipe skillet - add margarine. When melted and hot, add zucchini, garlic and herbs. Toss and serve hot. Makes six servings. Calories per serving about 135. Cholesterol 0.

Zucchini Medley

An unusual combination providing a delightful taste change for the always popular, low-calorie zucchini.

- 1 green pepper, finely slivered
- Cut the zucchini into two-inch 1 medium sweet onion,

chopped

- 4 large zucchini, thinly sliced or coarsely grated 1 Tblsp. margarine
- 1 can (8 ounces) pineapple chunks canned in juice, drained

Dill weed

Cherry tomatoes, halved

Melt margarine in medium skillet, add onions and green pepper and stir-fry for a few minutes. Add zucchini and continue to stir continuously while gradually adding the pineapple chunks until vegetables are crisp tender. Sprinkle generously with dill weed. Garnish with halved cherry tomatoes and serve to four.

Calories about 100 per serving. Cholesterol 0.

Oven-Fried Zucchini Sticks

A really delicious treat when served with baked fish and sliced

red tomatoes. 2 zucchini (about 8 ounces)

Salt and pepper

- ¼ cup egg substitute, well beaten
- 1 Tblsp. water
- 1 cup coarse cracker
- crumbs, about 18 saltine crackers

2 Tblsp. margarine, melted Trim zucchini and cut into sticks about the size of french fries. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Roll each zucchini stick in egg mixture and then into the crumbs. Place on a wire rack while oven heats to  $400^{\circ}$ .

Place coated zucchini sticks on a baking sheet and spoon the melted margarine over them. Bake 15 to 20 minutes until tender and lightly browned. Serve immediately. Makes about 26 sticks or four servings.

Calories about 169 per serving. Cholesterol 0.

Zucchini and Walnuts 4 Tblsp. unsalted margarine

1/2 cup coarsely chopped English walnuts 3 pounds zucchini 1/2 tsp. salt

Heat two tablespoons of margarine in a large skillet. Stir and toss walnuts until lightly browned (about 10 minutes). Remove from skillet.

Wash and trim ends from zucchini. Slice 1/2 inch thick. Saute slices in remaining margarine in skillet plus the other two tablespoons of margarine until they begin to soften.

Combine walnuts and zucchini. Add salt and pepper and serve.

Note: The zucchini may be trimmed and sliced and the nuts sauted, several hours ahead of time. Makes 12 servings.

Calories per serving about 85 Cholesterol 0.

Zucchini Nicoise

This terrific dish will make the most ardent meat eater admit that vegetables can be wonderful especially when served with a mushroom omelet and crusty bread.

- 2 Tblsp. vegetable oil 1 medium onion, chopped 3 to 4 cups thinly sliced zucchini
- 10 ripe olives, thinly sliced 1 Tblsp. pimiento, chopped 3 medium tomatoes, peeled,
- seeded, and chopped 3 oz. tomato paste 2 Tblsp. minced fresh

parsley 2 cloves garlic, minced

Salt and pepper to taste Heat oil in skillet over medium heat. Add onion and cook until translucent. Stir in zucchini and cook, stirring frequently, two to three minutes. Add olives, pimiento, tomatoes, tomato paste, parsley, garlic and salt and pepper to taste. Cook, uncovered, over medium-low heat for about 10 minutes or until flavors are blended and zucchini is tender. a legal assistant. Stir frequently. Makes six serv-

Playoff notebook . . .

It's playoff time for winter sports participants and, coincidentally, my favorite time of year. It's also the season I get to moan and groan about the scheduling genius who manages to do things like plan last Saturday's Class C volleyball district matchup between University Liggett and Star of the Sea in Southfield for the very same time North and South were playing for the Class A tournament in Harper Woods. (Hey, it would have been great if I'd had a pilot's license. Not to mention a plane.)

Another side effect of state tournament time (other than basketball's March Madness, which is a whole other column) is the onset of what I like to call "Darned if I Do Syndrome."

It happened for the first time this season last week, while I was sitting in beautiful Wyandotte Yack Arena watching South's hockey team pound Wyandotte, 11-1. No fewer than four parents approached me and expressed their astonishment at my presence in a place so distant from Grosse Pointe.

I merely smiled and nodded to each one, knowing all the while that if I didn't show up at these games — no matter if they held them in Livonia, Lansing or London - I'd hear about that, too.

Speaking of watching South - which saw its season end in a not-so-fun loss to Trenton on March 5 - you could have knocked me over with a feather after I noticed that some South skaters had one skate blade painted blue and one painted gold.

Now I've seen six or seven South games this season and only noticed the artwork on the blades last week. (If I find out that the skates have been like that all year, I'm going to feel awfully silly. A lot like I did the year they replaced the green wooden seats at Tiger Stadium with the blue plastic ones and I noticed - after 15 seasons' worth of sitting in the wooden seats - that they had had metal tigers sculpted into their sides. Pretty observant for a reporter, huh?)

Hey, I AM observant enough to know (after exhaustive research on the subject) that the skate blades were blue and gold because those are South's colors.

I didn't really have to be observant at all to know that the best player on the ice in Saturday night's regional final between North and Trenton was Norseman goalie Matt Dennis. Dennis was fantastic in the nets, including turning aside several dangerous shots by the No. 1-ranked Trojans in guiding North to a 4-2 win.

Hockey experts said before the game that the winner of that match-up would most likely go on to take the state Class A title. If North does, it will be on the strength of Dennis, its stingy defense and because Norseman forwards jump on mistakes and cash in on them. That's the mark of a good team.

Speaking of North, the girls' volleyball team turned in a gutty performance against power-hitter Regina on Saturday in the districts. Regina has a 6-0 sophomore who can spike with the best of them and North captain Barbie Loeher and company had all they could handle.

I've watched Loeher play volleyball and basketball for the last couple of seasons and next year, I'll really miss watching her calm. quiet, take-charge attitude out on the court.

It's a tie . . . Regina High and Troy Zion are deadlocked in the race for the "Best Winter Sports Facilities" contest, held informally among the east side's finest sports reporters. Regina's gym is nice from a spectators' point of view (and the cafeteria is something) and Troy Zion earns points for its down-front seating (but they have to do something about that weirdly-echoing trumpet version of the National Anthem).

Worst moment of the season: Hearing that ULS hockey player Bob Jewett had broken his neck. Rumors were flying last week that Jewett had been the victim of an illegal check which had caused him to break his back in a game against Lakeview. Totally untrue, says ULS coach John Fowler. The check was legal, and it was merely a "freak break" which resulted in the crack in Jewett's sixth vertebrae. He spent a couple of days in the hospital, is back in school wearing a neck brace and is in good spirits, despite the injury and the fact that he won't be able to play lacrosse this spring, Fowler adds.

Worst moment II: Sitting in of Yack Arena last Saturday night North fans got a little boisterous: yelling obscenities at Trenton plan ing with Wyandotte cops and in show, giving a pretty poor showing of themselves.

It was all in the heat of the moment, I'm sure, but didn't give downriver hockey fans a very nice picture of Grosse Pointe, I'm

It should be understood that Chuck Peters really doesn't need to box. The Grayton Road resident is gainfully employed as coowner of a Detroit sausage factory and dabbles a bit in real estate, as well. So after he hurt his hand last September in winning his only professional bout, "Cheesecake" Peters had pretty much resigned himself to giving up his boxing.

Then he received a fan letter by way of the local newspaper from one Gerd Riethenauer, of Frankfort, West Germany. Gerd wrote that he has been following Peters' career and encouraged him to keep up the good work.

"He really made my day," Peters said of Riethenauer. "At first, I thought the letter was a set-up from my trainers so they could get me back into training. But finding out that this guy has been following my career from so far away really made me feel I'm getting hungry. I want to box again."

Peters started boxing as a teenager after his father had purchased boxing gloves for him and his brothers in the hope they might learn to defend themselves. "I used to hate it when I was a kid because back then the bigger kid always won. Then when I was a little older, I started working on the speed bag and I did so well, it gave me confidence to get into boxing a little more,' Peters recalled.

The Peters family had a makeshift boxing ring in their backyard and when Chuck began to beat local kids with regularity, he decided to look for a local boxing club. That's where "Ducky" Deets came in.

Deets is a veteran boxing trainer at Cannon Recreation on Detroit's east side. Peters said he blossomed under Deets' tutelage and in 1979 and 1980, won the Detroit/Southeastern Michigan Golden Gloves titles in his weight

What followed then was what has become a pattern in Peters' somewhat strange boxing career. "I took time off and went back to work. Every once in a while, I'd fight to stay in shape, but I wasn't really serious about it. Then after about four years, I started seeing guys I used to fight and beat making it big. Guys like Phil Morefield and Alvin Hayes.

"Everybody told me that I could have been right up there too, if I'd stuck to it after Golden Gloves.

So Peters talked to well-known boxing trainer/sculpter Don Thibodeau, who told him to get back into training.

"I was pretty terrible for a while," Peters admitted. "Then I got myself into better shape and started beating people in the gym and impressing folks. Ace (Johnny) Smith is a promoter and he saw me and signed me for a show at the Premier Center.

'I won by a technical knockout in the second round against a guy by the name of Bruce Card, out of Memphis, Tenn. I beat him up pretty bad.

Peters also beat his own hand up pretty badly in the Sept. 30 bout. And after X-rays, examinations and bone scans disclosed that there wasn't any apparent injury despite his intense pain, Peters resigned himself to another interruption of his career.

For a while, he said, he went to Cannon Rec because he knew he could use his left hand in sparring against amateurs, rather than risk further injury to his right hand by training in the bigger gyms.

"I knew if I went back to Coleman Young Center where there are some really tough boxers, they'd kill me if I wasn't ready," Peters explained.

One thing led to another and he quit training completely, gained weight and pretty much dropped out of boxing o concentrate on See CHEESECAKE, page 2C

After six months away from boxing, Grosse Pointe middleweight Chuck Peters still remembers the stance.

By Peggy O'Connor Sports Editor

Juse one week into the playoffs, Grosse Pointe has a pair of titlewinners. North's varsity hockey team caputred a first-ever regional championship by defeating perennial champ Trenton, 4.2, on Saturday. And the girls' volleyball team from Our Lady Star of the Sea added its first district crown to the Catholic League Class C win it netted earlier.

At the Southfield Christian District No. 38 tournament Saturday, Star's spikers topped crosstown rival University Liggett in three sets, then polished off Lutheran West in a pair to gain a finals' spot against a strong Lutheran East squad.

And just the way they have all season, the Tunas started out slowly but bounced back.

"We lost that first game, 15-0. I think it was more a case of nerves." said Star assistant coach Margaret Spindler. "But there was also a little lack of communication there and that started some slight dissention out there among the kids.

"Val (coach Johnston) called time out and reminded the girls that their 'enemy' was across the court . . . not next to them on the floor. That worked, the kids got hyped and took a 5.2 lead in the second game. We never trailed again.'

Star took the match, 0.15, 15-10, 15-9. It earned the Tunas a spot in this Saturday's regional against Almont.

'They beat Pontiac Catholic and St. Clement, but they are similar to us . . . we may have the edge defensively," Spindler said. In other volleyball action, ULS ended its season at 14.7 with that three-set loss to Star; North and South High fell victim to a powerhitting Regina squad in the Class A District No. 7 tournament in Harper Woods Saturday. The Lady Norsemen lost in the semifinals, 15-1, 15-6. Captain Barbie Loeher led a furious North comeback in the second game to give the visitors the lead, 6-3, but Regina stormed back to win a berth in the finals.

South topped Finney and Kettering to make it to the finals, where the Blue Devils made it close with an exciting, see-saw battle in the second game, but came out on the short end of a 7-15, 17-15, 5-15 final.

IN HOCKEY, No. 7-ranked North surprised Trenton to win the Class A Wyandotte regional on Saturday, earning a spot for the first time in the semi-finals against Brother Rice on Wednesday night (after press time). North edged Livonia Franklin, 7-6, in overtime and topped Southgate Anderson, 6-4, to reach the regional finals.

Senior goaltender Matt Dennis was outstanding in the nets agains the tough Trojans, turning aside 25 shots, many of them dangerous. The Norsemen overcame the tendency to be cautious and managed to shake off some questionable tactics by the Trojans to take the 4-2 win.

"The thing was, we went into a defensive shell. With four minutes left, I told them to go all out and take chances. We were lucky and got those two quick goals," said coach Mike Manzella.

Trenton coach Skip Howey delayed the game for several minutes when he pointed out to referees that North goalie Dennis had a white helmet, rather than the gold-colored helmet worn by his teammates. The game was stopped, Dennis switched helmets with someone on the bench and for seven minutes, played without the special throat protector which fastens onto the white helmet while North's trainer searched for yellow spray paint to apply to Dennis' usual helmet.

"We could have lost all our composure, but we didn't. I kind of lost all my respect for that guy (Howey). They wanted us. They shaved their heads for us and this guy pulls this," Manzella said.
"THE THING IS: we really wanted to play them in the finals. We wanted to beat the best. But Dennis could have gotten hurt physically by wearing the helmet he's not used to. And I believe that the game is won by the kids between the boards, not by the coaching.'

scoreboard first when Brian Nettle tipped in Dave Johnston's shot from the point; Rob Koehler also assisted.

Trenton tied it at 1-1 with a second period goal on the power play, then grabbed a lead when a centering pass just trickled behind Dennis with 1:52 remaining in the second period.

Then North went into that defensive shell Manzella talked about and stayed there until with less than five minutes remaining, John Quinlan picked up a loose puck in front of Trojans' goalie Allan Avery for the 2-2 tie. With 2:33 to go, Rob Marshall sent the excited North crowd into a frenzy when he fired the puck into the net for a 3-2 North lead. Nettle snatched a bad pass from the corner and fired along the ice for the final goal and the victory.

We're happy, but not satisfied," Manzella said Monday. "I've said all along that someone from the Metro League will win the states. And we're down to just two from the league: Rice and us."

In other hockey, ULS, rated No. 7 in Class B-C-D, thumped Lakeview, 8-1, before losing to Cranbrook, 5-0, in the regional finals at Southfield. And South High ended its season at 13-8-3 by falling to Trenton, 6-3, in the regional semifinal, after beating Wyandotte, 11-1, earlier.

Basketball's March Madness the second season - began Monday night with the opening of districts at North High. The 17-4 Bi-County champion Norsemen lost to Detroit Finney, 64-55. (ULS's MIAC-titlist Knights faced St. Clement on Tuesday and South met Detroit Southeastern after press time.

Stoyka 'spectacular' in nets during regional playoff loss

Junior goalie Steve Stoyka was spectacular in the nets against top-ranked Cranbrook, but it wasn't enough to help University Liggett's varsity hockey team get past the Cranes in the regional finals last Saturday.

The Knights played a fine, welldisciplined game against Cranbrook, but wound up on the short end of a 5-0 score. "Cranbrook is the best high school hockey team in the state, even though Trenton and North High may have very powerful teams this year. It was obvious to me and my coaching staff that we needed to play a good game defensively and work for breaks on offense.'

ULS earned a few scoring chances in the third period, particularly from Shannon Nowowiecki and Jonathon Davis, but Cranbrook was simply too strong for the Knights. Stoyka was outstanding in the nets, keeping ULS in the game with an astounding 51 saves.

"Steve was spectacular," Fowler said. He's been a very good goalie for us all season long . . . and he's only a junior. Steve has tremendous college potential." Thanks to Stoyka's work, the Knights held Cranbrook scoreless for most of the second period and all of the third.

The No. 7-ranked Knights got to the finals behind an 8-1 victory over Lakeview on March 2. The Knights completely dominated Lakeview, opening the scoring in the first period on center Gordie Maitland's unassisted tally. Junior linemate Bill Jewett and Maitland set up Charlie Roby for the Knights' second goal; Roby added another goal from senior defenseman Blasko Ristic. Chip David converted a pass from freshman scoring ace Doug Wood to close out the first period scor-

Wood opened the second stanza with a goal from senior defenseman Pahl Zinn. Maitland added two more goals and Greg Petrilli closed out the scoring when he took a pass from freshman winger Davis. Stoyka stopped 21 of 22 Lakeview shots enroute to the

Cagers win in OT

The ULS varsity basketball team won its final game of the regular season March 6, nipping Southfield Christian, 61-60, in overtime. The Knights finished their regular campaign with a 18-1 record. They faced Class C power St. Clement on Tuesday (after press time).

The Southfield Christian game was a tough, closely contested affair. Both teams led occasionally throughout. Midway through the fourth quarter, the Southfield Eagles took a four-point lead and seemed to be gaining control of the game. But then freshman guard Kevin Crociata began penetrating, scoring and dishing off. He scored eight of his 14 points in the fourth quarter and had three assists. High scoring John Yancey added six fourth quarter points.

The score was 58-58 at the end of regulation. Both teams squandered numerous scoring opportunities during the overtime. With 10 seconds left and the score 60-60, the Eagles' Dave Gerard was fouled. He missed the front end of the one-and-one. Yancey got the rebound and was fouled from behind. After Southfield called a time out. Yancey sank the first foul shot. He went over the line on the second one. Southfield had fourth quarter with the score tied at 51-51. With about three minutes to play, Harper Woods' Derek Schafran fouled ULS's Kandia Milton. Both players went to the floor. Milton jumped up and kicked Schafran. Both benches immediately cleared and fans from both sides ran onto the floor from the stands. Order was quickly restored, but officials dent Athletic Conference league championship and a tournament victory at the Maumee Valley Invitational.

The ULS JV basketball team lost its last two games of the season. Coach John Wienshienk's squad lost 58-49 on Tuesday, March 3, to Harper Woods. On Friday, March 6, ULS fell 58-44

The changes include an earlier season opener in the lower peninsula for walleye, sauger, northern pike and muskellunge; an increased catch limit on Atlantic pink salmon; and an increase in the minimum size limit on muskellunge taken from Lake St. Clair and Chicagon Lake in Iron County.

his work at the factory and in real estate. Until last week.

"That letter really got to me," Peters said. "I'm really getting hungry. I'd like to get back into boxing.

"See, you have to understand that I don't box because I have nothing else going in life. I have lots going: I work, I ski, I play all sports. It's just that to be a good fighter, you have to be hungry. I think I'm a good fighter . . . I'm just not as dedicated as I should

So Chuck "Cheesecake" Peters who got his nickname as a joke, but now tells people that he's called Cheesecake because he's "sweet and everybody wants a piece of him" - is going back into training as soon as he can. If nothing else, he said, Peters wants to prove something to him-

"If I was to get into it full steam, I'd want to stay in until I either reach my goal and become a successful boxer or until I find out that I don't have what it takes. I box because I love the challenge of the sport. And I'll be the first to know if I can't hack it.

"Right now, there are too many unanswered questions. I don't want to be punchy in 20 years from staying in boxing too long, but I also don't want to kick myself in the rear 20 years down the road because I never found out whether I could make it," Peters

And when you've sparred against the likes of Hector 'Macho" Camacho and Hilmer Kenty -- and more than held your own, as Peters said he has you'll always wonder if you could have made it.

Spikers win EML, drop district

South's varsity volleyball team won the Eastern Michigan League championship with a 15-6, 15-7 victory over Roseville on March 5. Seniors Patty Hess and Barb VanWingerden each had four kills. Senior Heather Imel led South in service points with 11; she also contributed three kills.

On Saturday, the girls participated in the District No. 7 Class A volleyball tournament at Regina High. South topped Finney High and Kettering to get to the finals against Regina.

Regina proved to be much more of a challenge than Finney or Kettering, running out to a 12-2 lead in the first game, which ended in a 15-7 final. In the second game, South trailed 7-4, but engineered a great comeback thanks to Chris Schulte, Megan Keller and VanWingerden. After the lead changed hands several times, South emerged with a 17-<sup>1</sup>5 victory.

Regina charged back in the final game, taking a quick 9-0 ad-, vantage and rolling to a 15.5 win to end South's season. South got excellent play in the three-game set from Schulte, Keller, Van-Wingerden, Pat Hess and Carrie Donaldson, as well as Imel.

South's JV volleyball team closed out its season with easy, 15-7, 15-4 wins over Roseville. Sophomore Jessica Risher had eight service points and two kills; sophomore Meg Blondin added six service points and Traci Lee had five. Blondin and Lee had one kill apiece.

South finished the year at 9-5 in the EML.

South's frosh crushed Romeo, 15-9, 15-7, March 2. Top scorer Ellen McGahey had nine points, Melissa Cavanaugh slammed home 12 spikes. Katie Kolp led with 20 sets. (By Matt Aldrich)

Beware of snake oil salesmen . . . understand the truth behind popular myths and misconceptions.

Cellulite cures - "Cellulite" is nothing more than unsightly FAT. It is a popular term used to describe the dimpled, orange peel-like appearance of primarily the thigh, buttocks and knees. Proponents of cellulite cures claim that cellulite fat is trapped fat in abnormal connective tissue with impeded blood flow and lymph access. Most medical and nutrition authorities contend that cellulite is simply fat packaged somewhat differently.

As body fat levels increase, more and more fat is proportionately deposited just under the skin, causing the dimpled appearance.

There is only one machine that will do the job for you: your body'

High protein diets, massage, saunas, special creams or body wrappings all claim to break up or reduce cellulite — and all at exorbitant fees for unfounded cures. Don't waste your money. The only cure is fat loss through regular aerobic exercise and improved diet.

Vibrating machines -Roller machines, vibrating tables and massage tables are equally ineffective gadgets touted as devices for taking off fat. It's similar to shaking a bowl full of Jello. You can watch it shake, but the Jello doesn't disappear.

What's the answer? Aerobic (with oxygen) exercise.

Sauna suits, weight reducing clothing, heated belts or pressure wraps - These items do not decrease body fat. They rely on dehydration or loss of body fluid through sweat and or localized pressure. Scale weight may temporarily decrease, but take a drink of water and you'll find yourself right back where you started. Rubberized suits may also be dangerous when worn while exercising as they block body heat loss and sweat evaporation.

Electrical muscle stimulators - "Lie on this table and you won't have to do one situp!" Sound familiar? Don't believe it. The Food and Drug Administration considers such claims to be fraudulent. However, "EMS" devices can be and are legitimately used medically, usually for physical therapy.

There is only one machine that will do the job for you: your body. It's the most amazing machine ever built. Feed it properly, keep it welllubricated through exercise and the engine will heat up and burn those extra calories

Fitness after 50 — how important is it?

By Peggy O'Connor Sports Editor

You're 65, retired from the fastpaced lifestyle of the working man and ready to sit down, relax and enjoy the food, drink and leisure practices you've denied yourself for so long. On your present pace, you can look forward to another 10 or 15 years of living it up, right?

Probably not, according to researchers. A sedentary lifestyle combined with poor dietary habits can add up to a shortened lifespan, medical experts say. If you correct that lifestyle before you reach 60, you can add five years to your life expectancy.

In light of that information, how vital is physical fitness after 50? Extremely important, according to Dwight Gaal, exercise physiologist and director of Bon Secours Hospital's Health and Fitness Center.

'We hear a lot of fallacies associated with exercise, but if there was one rule I could say really rings true, it would be the one that says: 'if you don't use it, you'll lose it.' And that means muscle tone, flexibility, cardiovascular capability ... everything you need to enjoy life as you age," Gaal says.

Research has shown that even people in their 70s and 80s show a significant, measurable increase in their cardiovascular function and flexibility when involved in regular exercise programs. More and more people that they can improve the quality of life by maintaining proper diets and engaging in regular (three to five times weekly) exercise, Gaal says.

"Our exercise class 'Fitness is Ageless' is quite well-received," Gaal says. There are two sections of the class, one with 40 members and the other with 30. The earlymorning sessions are the most popular among folks over 50, he EXERCISE PHYSIOLO-GISTS like Gaal emphasize that in dealing with older people, they like to target that group of those just over 50, who have yet to suffer damage from heart or other diseases. "We like to introduce them to exercise early enough to make it a lifetime habit, rather than along the lines of tertiary or corrective treatment.

'More and more hospitals nationwide are beginning to see that exercise and preventive fitness are the way to go ... 10 years ago, I couldn't sell a preventive program to those same places," Gaal adds.

The media have had a great deal to do with that, he says. People who once didn't know a triglyceride from a blood cholesterol count can now quote statistics from fitness research like the heart study done in Framingham, Mass. "They are now aware that with proper diet and exercise, they can increase their cardiovascular functions over the age of 50 are recognizing and reduce their blood cholesterol," Gaal notes.

> The best bet for folks after 50 who are interested in improving their level of fitness is to start at a low level of activity and build up. "Of course, there are limiting factors in individual cases, but the best activity is any aerobic activity, like cycling or walking."

> Team sports like racquetball, softball or tennis are excellent additions to a regular fitness routine, but should not be used in place of other exercise, Gaal cautions. "I've found that most people who play, say softball, don't do any type of specific conditioning before they play. They lack flexibility and muscle control and are in line for just about any injury you can imagine.

"I think that many times the only thing they practice religiously is going out to the bar after the games," Gaal says.

A total, sensible fitness program for those over 50 should include exercises to improve cardiovascular action, flexibility and muscle endurance and strength. "I'd tend to shy away from power sports like weight lifting. But muscle endurance is very important, especially because as we get older we lose the ability to last throughout the day. When you lack muscle strength, you tend to

Diet and disease

As emphasis on physical fitness has intensified in the past 20 years, so have medical and dietary studies concerning the role food plays in helping maintain optimum health. While the findings fall short of providing absolute answers to this complex debate, guidelines have been set.

The following information provides a discussion of some common diseases and the role diet may play in their development.

Osteoporosis: A bone disease characterized by a reduction of bone density, osteoporosis is associated with a loss of calcium. The bones become porous, brittle and easily fractured. Although it has been known to manifest itself in men, its most common victim is the Caucasian post-menopausal woman.

According to the American Dietetic Association, "prevention of osteoporosis begins during the teen years. Bones grow to their maximum strength only if a girl consumes enough calcium." The extent of the discase may not be realized until later in life.

Dairy products - milk, cheese, yogurt, etc. - are the best sources of calcium, but be cautious about the fat content of these sources. Using the lowfat varieties will still insure a rich source of calcium. Also, buying plain low-fat yogurt, then adding your own fresh fruit will prevent taking in added sugars you do not need. Green leafy vegetables such as broccoli and spinach contain modest amounts of this mineral.

It has also been found that consistent daily exercise and activity aids the body in calcium usage, helping to keep the bones strong and firm. The adult R.D.A. for calcium is 800 milligrams. Some authorities suggest up to 1,500 mg per day for women after menopause, and other groups feel the F.D.A. should be raised to 1,000 mg for women in their childbearing years.

While a woman cannot undo years of calcium neglect, an effort at any point to rebuild bones can help. An increase in dietary-rich foods in calcium, plus a return to daily exercises (take a walk), is recommended.

Diabetes: Studies from the past few years support theories that factors such as obesity and diet play a significant role in the onset of diabetes. Statistics indicate the diabetic is more likely to be obese than the non-diabetic. Similarily, there is a greater probability of diabetes occuring in an obese person. Therefore, it is frequently assumed that the two are casually related. However, although the relationship between obesity and diabetes does exist, research indicates that the obese whose glucose tolerance tests show a tendancy toward diabetes are twice as likely to develop the disease. If they have a normal glucose tolerance, they are no more likely to develop diabetes than a slender person is.

The consumption of highfiber foods, (i.e., whole grains, fresh fruits and vegetables), seems to lessen the risk of the development fo diabetes. Populations which consume a highfiber diet tend to have only a slight incidence of the disease. But once these societies adopt Western eating habits, the rate of diabetes increases rapidly.

In the October, 1984 "Nutrition & the M.D." article, "Dietary Fiber and Diabetes," we read, "Evidence continues to mount establishing the therapeutic benefits of increased fiber intake for many patients with diabetes. Some researchers have documented the effects of fiber on improving blood glucose control and, in many cases, decreasing insulin requirements." A fiber rich diet evenly regulates the absorption of sugars into the blood and can help to reduce the insulin needs in diabetics.

Diverticulosis: In the early 1900s diverticular disease was virtually unknown. But with the increased consumption of refined sugars and white flours, the disease has become the most common colon disorder in Western countries. Studies in the United States and other industrialized nations show that diverticulosis affects 5 percent of the population by age 40. That number increases to one person out of three by age 60, and to two out of three by age 80.

Since the publication of a medical report by Neil Painter in 1972, fiber has become prominent in the treatment and prevention of this disease. Currently, 90 percent of gastroenterologists prescribe a high-fiber diet for irritable bowel syndrome, including diverticulosis.

However, one should be cautious about the overconsump-tion of fiber. For instance, bran can bind essential minerals such as zinc, calcium, iron and magnesium so that they are not absorbed into the body. When a balanced fiber-rich diet is consumed, there is no reason to add fiber to foods that already contain good fiber, or to take fiber supplements. Good sources of fiber include: whole grain breads and cereals, (look for the word "whole" before the word wheat), vegetables and fruits with edible skins, stems and seeds, dry beans and peas, nuts and seeds.

21800 Marter Road, St. Clair Shores Dramatic Results Can Be Yours

ΑŢ ROY O'BRIEN FORD St. Clair Shores 776-7600

March 12, 1987 Grosse Pointe News Entertainment Angel Heart' will reward adventurous moviegoers

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

Given all the preliminary talk about "Angel Heart," one would expect a horrifying, seedy film filled with shocking material. On the contrary, "Angel Heart" is a psychological, slowly paced film filled with shocking material.

Indeed, there are few pictures in recent memory so chock full of spilling blood and graphically repulsive material. But "Heart' uses such elements only for dramatic plot development, not for cheap thrills. The result is a stylistically rich piece, not pleasant to watch, but still quite rewarding for daring moviegoers.

Based on the novel "Fallen Angel" by William Hjortsberg, the film follows a private investigator Harry Angel (Mickey Rourke) through 1955 Harlem and Lousiana. Angel has accepted a missing person case from Louis Cyphre (Robert DeNiro) - a case which eventually reveals Angel's own dark past.

In the course of the investigation, Angel is drawn deeper and deeper into the world of black magic and the occult, partly because of his own psyche and partly because of his many contacts in the case. Among them are Margaret Krusemark (Charlotte Rampling), a fortune teller who dabbles in the occult; Epiphany Proudfoot (Lisa Bonet), the daughter of the person for whom Angel is searching and a dark priestess in the backwoods cult; and Toots Sweet (Brownie McGhee) a blues musician and worshipper of Satan.

Most of the first 90 minutes of the film documents Angel's search. Characters enend endless moments in conversation and slowly revealing dialogue, while the visual leitmotifs that play such a big part in the film's climax are constantly revisited.

There is extensive exposition in the first part of the film, to be sure, but the aforementioned visual elements actually tell more of the story to observant viewers than all of the dialogue combined. A fan's blades revolve listlessly through many of the scences, and an elevator carrying Angel plunges to hellish depths in his dreams.

Actually, Director Allen Parker, who also adapted the screenplay, takes a downright literary film. One can almost feel the ris- And the symbolism and visual

We would like to share our most recent reading with you

ONLY WHEN I LAUGH

by Len Deighton

Len Deighton's sixth novel is the first one that is not a spy story. Instead, he has chosen the "sting" theme, wonderfully played out by two men and a woman.

From start to finish the reader is aware that these three are a confidence 'trick team,' their livelihood dependent on conning their victims. The cons are grand, each being different, each fast paced and well-planned.

As in all his prior novels, Len Deighton writes in the first person, but in ONLY WHEN I LAUGH, he employs the device of rotating the narration among his three protagonists. Each recounts the same story from his point of view, but with each succeeding chapter taking the story further than the last. The equation of a different approach plus an exciting theme by a well-known author equals an ex-GROSSE P cellent book. -N.B.B.POINTE feeling of surrealism and, eventually, horror.

DeNiro is hauntingly subtle in his reading of Cypher. Much of his true identity is revealed to viewers through his careful mannerisms and inflections. He goes beyond the parameters of the script to deliver a very memorable performance.

Rourke, meanwhile, plays his character much more down-toearth. Viewers can identify with him as an ordinary guy in extraordinary circumstances. Rourke, too, reveals much of his character through his mannerisms and eye contact.

"Angel Heart" is rich with meaning, and no one will walk away with a complete understanding after only one viewing.

There is a valid argument that the film is about religion. There can be just as valid an argument, however, that the film is about personal struggle and psychology. And too, there is plenty of evidence that the picture is meant only as a detailed character study, with the extensive leitmotifs and symbolism meant as nothing more than visual embellishment. The exact meaning, as in any good piece of art, probably lies within the interpretation of individual viewers. Viewers will leave the theater with a variation of the attitudes they brought in with them. Parker is specific enough to reveal the main action of the piece, but vague enough to let subjective interpretation be the final word.

Two nights of "Rock Around the raucous early-rock era and backed by piano, bass, horns and drums, the ensemble will take off on hits like "Peppermint Twist," "Runaround Sue," "At The Top" and "Jailhouse Rock." The program features an assortment of solos and full cast productions.

Tickets are $6 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens at the Center's box office or reserved on credit cards by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday,

The Detroit Institute of Arts is currently featuring 150 photographs it has acquired in the last two years in the museum's Albert and Peggy de Salle Gallery of Photography. The exhibit runs through May 10. The examples range over 135 years, from 1850 to 1985.

Hungarian-born Andre Kertesz (1894-1985) is represented in 43 photographs. Dating from 1925 to 1963, many emphasize the physical patterns of objects and the patterns created by the contrast of shadow and light.

Eighteen works depicting 19th century European and American views represent another major gift from Dorothy and Eugene Prakapas of New York. This selection includes two stereo cards - early 3-D images - of Niagara Falls by George E. Curtis, displayed in stereopticon viewers.

Also shown are examples of 19th century photography by William Henry Jackson, Eadweard Muybridge and Timothy O'Sullivan. Twentieth century photographers represented in the exhibition include Berenice Abbott, Imogen Cunningham, Harold Edgerton, Arnold Genthe, Gertrude Kasebier, Heinrich Kuhn, O. Winston Link, El Lissitzky, Irving Penn, Man Ray, Ralph Steiner, Karl Struss, George Tice, Jerry Uelsmann and Edward

Two donors will give informal talks in the gallery. At 2 p.m. Wednesday, April 1, and Friday, April 3, Warren J. Coville will speak on collecting photographs. At 2 p.m. Wednesday, April 29, and Friday, May 1, Frederick P. Currier will speak on selected works in the exhibition.

"Recent Acquisitions: Photographs" is open free to the public during regular museum hours, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday; closed Mondays and holidays.

Number One With a Bullet' is formula film

By Marion Trainor Special Writer

It all depends on your expectations. If you go to see "Number One With A Bullet" expecting to see a polished police drama that delves into character, motives and a well-written storyline that involves you as a viewer, then you may go away disappointed.

But if you go with the attitude that you just want to be entertained for a couple of hours, this film can do that for you. It has action, comedy and likable characters. It is a good brand of formula film that follows the adventures of two cops, one white (Robert Carradine) and one black (Billy Dee Williams).

Carradine is an impulsive screwball who never hesitates to jump into action. Williams is the smooth, suave back-up who goes along for the ride. Carradine enjoys playing jokes; Williams likes classical music. One is a junk food addict and the other eats yogurt and wheat germ. In spite of their differences, they work well to-

The film opens with them trying to track down a mystery man who heads a big time drug operation in Los Angeles. In the process they manage to infuriate the police captain by insisting that one of the town's leading citizens is suspect. Turned down on that lead, they patrol the sleaziest streets of Los Angeles searching for informants.

Sometimes the methods they employ are unorthodox and may involve going to such lengths as hanging a reluctant witness by his feet out of a structure several stories tall. This works best when they walk away for an hour and let him think about appropriate and helpful answers.

Also to be noted is an imaginative twist to the usual cops and robbers chase where they careen through the streets in hot pursuit of each other. Here we have a helicopter chasing an airplane, a shoot-out in the sky, a car closed in between trucks equipped with compactors and a limousine carrying drug dealers being transported in a van.

Romance and comedy enter the scene when Williams, who is often referred to as a black Clark Cable, attracts beautiful women wherever he goes. All his opportunities are blasted away by his dizzy partner who steps in with some outrageous story that scares the women off. Carradine is determined that no outside interests interfere with the project at hand.

Carradine works hard in this film to turn in an intense, if hyped-up performance, as the non-stop, fearless young cop who refuses to give up. Williams as the soft-spoken, handsome partner who plays a neat saxaphone on the side, glides through with Bertinelli is pert, pretty and fetching as Carradine's affable wife and Doris Roberts is amusing as the mother hen who drives her son up the wall with her hovering.

- MOST holy Apostle St. Jude, faithful servant and friend of Jesus, the name of the traitor who delivered the beloved Master into the hands of His enemies, has caused thee to be forgotten by many but the Church honors and invokes thee universally as the patron of hopeless cases, of things despaired of. Pray for me who am so miserable; make use I implore thee, of that particular privilege accorded to thee, to bring visible and speedy help, where help is almost despaired of. Come to my assistance in this great need that I may receive the consolations and succor of Heaven in all my necessities, tribulations and sufferings partic-

Linking Individuals to Needs in the Community is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to coordinate needs with resources. This is accomplished by placing goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of Metropolitan Detroit charitable agencies. Operating since 1971, LINC is proud of the accomplishments it has made and strives to increase its resource base. If you have recyclable items, no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100 with your donation. KEEP IT

LATIN AMERICAN FOR SOCIAL AND ECONOM-IC DEVELOPMENT (La Sed) is searching for a vacuum with a shampoo attachment for a client with a medical condition. La Sed is an information and referral center for those individuals who do not speak English.

REFRIGERATOR sought by Neighborhood Services Organization. Low income family's present refrigerator is marginally operating. Cost of repair is more than buying a new one. Therefore they are looking for a used refrigerator.

SIBLEY HOUSE has a very out-dated kitchen which they are trying to upgrade. Needs include a MICROWAVE, GAS STOVE with range and oven in one piece, and a COMMERCIAL COFFEE POT.

BOOK SHELVES of any type are desperately needed by many of our agencies. These would include wall mounts, or free standing units. "GROWING ROOTS" PROGRAM -- 4th Urban Gardening Program is requesting assistance for obtaining FOOD PRESERVATION SUPPLIES. They conduct classes for individuals of Hamtramck, Highland Park and Detroit to teach CANNING, FREEZING AND DRYING of FOODS. Supplies that would be helpful are pressure canners, water bath canners, large pots, commercial hot pads, hairnets, aprons, and plastic gloves (for food handling).

TYPEWRITER sought by People Community Services for volunteer to type reports to the Federal government. Present typewriter is barely functional and should be put to rest.

Mite Division

ARROWS-BLACK HAWKS

The Arrows displayed awesome power and teamwork in topping the Hawks, 6-1, in the second game of the playoffs. Arrow Bliner John Staniszewski scored twice late in the first period, from Peter Sullivan, Joseph Wernet and Rocky Bryant. Sullivan scored in the second period from Matt Debski and Staniszewski. The Hawks got on the board with Leo Salvaggio's goal from Chris Gibson, but Arrow's goalie Billy Crandall shut the Hawks out the rest of the way while Ben Debski Chris Mitchell and Staniszewski added goals.

Playing well for their teams were Chris Amsden, Mark Aronson, Lisa Aronson and Tim French, as well as Patrick Pound, Charlie Braun, Stephen Andris and George Andary.

LEAFS-ARROWS

The Century 21-East Maple Leafs became the only undefeated team and the Flight B champs in the playoffs as they skated to a 3-2 win. Geoff Kimmel opened the Leafs' scoring, Ryan Allard assisting. Mitchell tied it for the Arrows when he converted a pass from Pound, but Allard answered with two quick goals in the third period. Bill Faber scored to put the Arrows back in the game, but the Leafs were able to hang on for the win.

Crandall was excellent in goal for the Arrows, as was the Leafs' Jason Santo. Peter Knudsen, Todd McCain, Sara Nixon, Ali Quinn and Charlie Eldridge also contributed to the win. Staniszewski, Walter Belenky and Braun were hot for the Arrows. who earned a spot in the playoffs as the Flight B runners-up.

LEAFS-COUGARS

The Leafs edged the tough Crain's Cougars, 2-1, in the second playoff game. Jason Santo, playing with borrowed skates helmet and gloves, turned away 10 of 11 Cougar shots. G. Kimmel scored the winner for the Leafs late in the third period, converting an Allard pass. Allard scored the Leafs' other goal from Mary Meade. Behi Rabbani, probably the best goalie the Leafs have faced all season, was outstanding, shutting them down for two periods and for four minutes of the other stanza.

Paul Huebner played one of his finest games of the season, as did Ian McMillan, who scored the Cougars' only goal. Gene and Joe Baratta, who were pitted against their cousin Tony Baratta of the Leafs, played well, as did Matt Moran and Richard Wolney for coach Rick Wolney's squad.

MAGICS-CHIEFS

The Major Magics and Chiefs played to a 1-1 tie. The Chiefs scored early in the first and Matt Elich's goal in the waning seconds of the game tied it for the Magics. Mike Paul was impressive in goal, making several sprawling saves. Frank Zimmer and Kevin Baskel kept the Chiefs busy. Brent Kuhar, Jake Linder, Andrew Warner and Danny Baskel displayed some fine playmak-

MAGICS-BRUINS

The Magics edged the Bruins, 2-1. M. Paul and Sarke Solomon did a great job in goal for their teams. The Bruins took an early lead on a goal by Tim Miller, but the Magics tied it up on Elich's goal from Danny Magdowski. After the Bruins had a goal disallowed, the Magics' Sebastian Yofre notched the winner from Jon Bayko and Colin Darke. The Magics' C-line couldn't penetrate the excellent defense of the Bruins. Steve Owens, Joey Lucido, Matt Descamps, Tim Brady, Nick Allen, Nate Bayko, Matt

Nickel, Ronnie Sawaf and Brian Everham played well for their teams

COUGARS-HAWKS

The final game of the year was the most exciting for the Cougars as the players' mothers coached them to a 2-0 victory over the Hawks. Led by Debbie Wolney, Margy Robson, Mary Baratta and Mary Kay Crain, with assistance from Laura Huebner, Anne Birgbauer, Beth Moran and Viju Karnik, the team played well (as the fathers cheered from the stands). Matt Moran opened the scoring for the Cougars and John Lawrence added a goal in the third period. Anne Platt, Booth Platt, Jonathan Solaka, Byron Brewer, L. Aronson, Jim Custer and Behi Rabbani (who ended his Mite career with a shutout in goal) played well for their teams.

Squirt Division

WINGS-SHAMROCKS

The Grosse Pointe Squirt Red Wings defeated the St. Clair Shores Shamrocks, 7-2. Chris Crain led the attack for the Wings with four goals. Also scoring for the Wings were John Wise, Eric Kisskalt and Amy Kendall. Jeff Adams, Kip Gotfredson and Kisskalt earned assists. Strong performances were also turned in by Jordan Jones, J.P. Sweda and Greg Ryan.

WINGS-BLAZERS

The Red Wings defeated the St. Clair Shores Blazers, 4-3. After a scoroloss first period, Gotfredson put the Wings on the scoreboard with his unassisted goal. Crain assisted on Adams' goal, Amy Kendall assisted on Crain's goal and Jordan Jones assisted on Augustine Yofre's game-winner. David Collins, Peter Anthony Brown, Jay Ricci and goalie Kenny McIntyre played exceptionally well.

Correction

A photo of pre-mite skating clinic participants which appeared in the March 5 Grosse Pointe News was incorrectly identified. The caption should have identified the persons in the photo helping the young skaters as Mike Anway and Ilya Snyder.

Sabres tie leaders, 1-1

The Century 21-East Grosse Pointe Sabres challenged the over 30 league's first place team, Burke's (Team Cottrell) last week. The teams played to a 1-1

The victory allowed Burke's to maintain its four-point lead.

Bob "Cheese" Nowaczewski scored the Sabres' only goal with just six minutes left in the game.
