The things that Benoit does have earned him the honor of being named an outstanding teacher in the awards program sponsored by the Washington Post, Newsweek and WDIV television. The Pierce Middle School veteran teacher is among 12 Michigan teachers to be so honored.

Benoit was a natural for the honor, according to Pierce Principal Donald Bassett. "We have a lot of outstanding staff," he said, "but some things have been happening with Dick lately."

Things like winning a minigrant for instructional materials from the Wayne County Intermediate School District. Like family was raised, starting with coaching two championship basketball teams this year. "He's a different kind of man," Bassett said. "He gives the kids guidelines and boundaries, but isn't punitive. Kids need that.

"He's here in the morning working, he's here in the afternoon. He goes the extra mile." Benoit has been teaching for 30 years and isn't tired of it yet. In fact, one of his goals is to teach in the 21st century. "The kids revitalize you, if you let them," he says.

Even model teachers get tired and frustrated, but Benoit says his outside activities keep him interested. "I coached basketball 31 straight weeks," he said.

He got into coaching after his a boys team, then adding girls. The girls paid back his confidence in kind, going from a 1-9 record to 9-1 in one year.

"Coaching made teaching easier for me," he says. "Before, the 'real' things in their lives were separate from the classroom. Sports are real."

Benoit got into teaching by chance, before he even graduated from college. "My aunt was in teaching," he said. "She always seemed to have life by the tail. Lots of the teachers I look back on seemed satisfied with what they were doing - not everybody can say that.

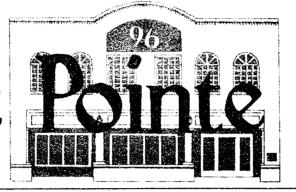

Job satisfaction shows on the outside, too. One of the things that sets Benoit apart is his popularity with his students.

Bassett likes to tell of the time Benoit was participating in a school awards ceremony. Several

Flood committee Putting the T in Tyrannosaurus .....4A says earth berms are the answer

By Pat Paholsky

Earthen berms about four feet high erected in six locations along the lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Park would probably remove the city from the flood plain and, at the same time, provide protection against flooding. That was the finding, and recommendation, Monday night of the Flood Plain Study Committee appointed in October by Mayor Palmer Heenan to research the matter.

Nearly half of the city is located within the flood plain, and includes 975 of the 4,138 properties in Grosse Pointe Park

The six areas, identified by the city engineers as low spots along the shoreline, are located at Windmill Pointe and Patterson parks, other city-owned property, mainly street right-of-ways, and some private property which includes seven property owners.

Recommending that the city obtain approval for the earth fill plan from the Federal Energy Management Agency, Olds said the FEMA Office in Chicago advised the city that it was not opposed to the plan and had sent it to Washington for official approval. "It shouldn't take more than 60 days to hear from them," Olds said.

> The cost of the project is $238,000.

If either FEMA or the affected property owners reject the plan, the flood committee's alternative recommendation is to erect or improve seawalls along the entire shoreline, except for the two parks which would still get the earth fill. It would cost $1,470,000 to erect interlocking steel sheet piling or improve existing walls to a height of 582.1 feet above sea level which is the International Great Lakes Datum recommendation.

"None of the seawalls meet the IGLD recommendation," Olds said. "They need to be improved or rebuilt and they might have to be raised.

If FEMA approves the earth fill plan, the next step is to obtain approval from the affected residents. "We think if it's properly presented, it would make more sense to use the berm approach,' Olds said.

Besides the cost of about a quarter million dollars versus oneand-a-half million dollars, seawalls require a permit from the Army Corps of Engineers and that takes about 90 days, committee member Philip McCallister

Olds added that if the water recedes in the future, the berms could be removed, whereas seawalls are permanent.

The committee's second recommendation is to get Detroit to build a seawall on the eastern edge of Fox Creek, from Jefferson to Lake St. Clair. It would cost Detroit about $9 million to construct a seawall along both sides of Fox Creek and connecting canals and would protect about 100 houses within its borders.

The cost for the seawall along one side of Fox Creek is estimated at $1.4 million and could be paid for by the Park with indirect financial assistance from Detroit, according to alternative financing methods suggested by the committee. They include eliminating the debt owed to Detroit by the Park as a result of the recent boundary settlement; revisions in the water/sewerage rates charged Grosse Pointe Park by Detroit; or annexation of all Alter Road properties between Jefferson and Lake St. Clair.

Olds advised the council to move "immediately and aggressively to secure the financial consideration of Detroit for Fox See FLOOD, page 12A and 19 so far in 1987

Youth assistance program is counseling more offenders

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

As local communities prepare to consider their municipal budgets for the coming fiscal year, the Grosse Pointe-Harper Woods Youth Assistance program is readying its budget requests. The last funding round just took place in September, but the Family Life Educational Council, which runs the program, wants the cities to know what's coming.

The program is operating now on a $21,000 grant from the Skillman Foundation and matching funds from each of the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods. The Skillman grant is non-renewable.

"We expect to ask for the same amount as last time," said Sandy Mignone, outgoing director of the youth assistance program. "We'll try to pick up the remainder from service clubs and foundations. # Two seats open on school board

All potential candidates for the two four-year terms on the Board of Education of the Grosse Pointe Public School System have until 4 p.m. Monday, April 6, to file their nominating petitions.

Candidates for the terms beginning July 1 and expiring June 30, 1991, must be at least 18 years of age and a resident of Grosse Pointe for at least 30 days.

Nominating petitions to place a candidate's name on the ballot may be obtained from the Personnel Office of the first floor of the Administration Building, 389 St. Clair Ave. Ronald Tonks, director of personnel for the school district, reminded voters that they are allowed to sign only two nominating petitions this year because there are only two seats open on the board.

The completion of nominating petitions must conform to the following guidelines: (1) They must be signed by a minimum of 20 registered voters; (2) they must be signed in the presence of the circulator who also must be a registered voter of this school district; and (3) they can be circulated in only the city or township named at the top of the petition.

At the time of filing of a nominating petition, candidates must also file two identification affidavits. Candidates for this office are also required to comply with the Campaign Finance Reporting

Ronstelle Theatre announces new season

The Bonstelle Theatre will begin the season with a musical when Meredith Wilson's "The Music Man" opens the 1987-88 season Oct. 23. The Broadway hit musical will kick off a season of five classic and modern plays.

For the holiday season, the Bonstelle will revive Sir James M. Barrie's "Peter Pan," which has alternated with Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" at the Bonstelle for the past several seasons. It will open Dec. 4.

First production of the New Year will be John O'Keeffe's light-hearted 18th-century comedy "Wild Oats," scheduled to open Jan. 29. Recently revived with great success on two continents, it is about the adventures of Rover, the star of a traveling troupe of actors, who poses as a friend, pursues a desirable lady, and sets off a string of mistaken identities and intrigues.

Hospital bio-ethics committees debate the issues

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

Interest in biomedical ethics ebbs and flows with events. The case of Karen Ann Quinlan stirred an interest in questions of medical ethics; interest later died down and was rekindled with last year's Baby Doe case.

Hospitals have responded to this interest by forming ethics committees, usually composed of a broad range of people with medical and non-medical backgrounds. In most cases, the committees fill an educational function, studying issues and presenting general guidelines. Less often, they deal directly with a specific case.

The issue is how to deal with all the new technology that continues to be developed.

We have the ability to keep people alive practically forever, but a patient has a right to refuse treatment.'

> Terry Brooks, attorney

"We have the ability to keep people alive practically forever, said Terry Brooks, an attorney with Dykema, Gossett, Spencer, Goodnow & Trigg, who is also a member of the Detroit Archdiocesan Medical Ethics Committee and of the Task Force on Biomedical Ethics of the American Hospital Association. "But a patient has a right to refuse treatment. You don't have to use every piece of equipment.'

Hospital ethics committees try to make guidelines that are flexible standards for decisions by doctors, patients and their families. "Family members don't have a legal right (to make these decisions)." Brooks, a Farms resident, said. "We have to remember that. The family acts as a surrogate for the patient."

Circumstances alter treatment decisions, Brooks pointed out. A patient with a terminal illness may not wish to be maintained on a respirator, but if he hopes to stay alive long enough for the family to visit one more time, he may wish to use the machine temporarily. Likewise, if a trauma patient wishes to donate organs, he would be temporarily maintained on a respirator, until a transplant operation can be arranged.

"Nothing is hard and fast any more," Brooks said. "(For instance,) the issue of withholding nutrition. That was something you always, always, always gave. In the area of death and dying, there are some rules, but no formula.

"If in doubt, save the life. That's the rule, but from there, there are all kinds of permuta-

Some hospitals have had ethics committees for some time. The University of Michigan hospitals have a longstanding committee, Brooks says, and Bon Secours Hospital has had one for several years. St. John Hospital's was new last year and Cottage Hospital does not have one, referring the rare ethics questions to the executive committee.

At St. John, the committee is still in a study phase, which is the way it should be, according to Sister Cheryl Allen, an ethicist with the Sisters of St. Joseph Health System, the parent company of St. John. Under her direction, the committee has spent the year looking at past cases and learning about medical ethics before they start working on guidelines.

"The ethics committee has an educational role," Allen said. "It discusses values and consequences and clarifies questions

April Moilanen, who said she told police she acted in selfdefense, was released by Detroit police.

The recent ruling from the Vatican against surrogate motherhood and in-vitro fertilization is considered the "authoritative teaching voice of the church," Allen said. As such, hospitals are expected to follow.it. Neither St. John nor Bon Secours is involved in any advanced fertility research, so the ruling is a moot point here — but a Catholic hospital in Lille, France, that has an in-vitro fertilization program has reportedly protested the rul-

This year an expectant surrogate mother reportedly approached both local Catholic hospitals to arrange to have her baby there. Both reportedly decided against it.

Msgr. Francis Canfield is the chair of Bon Secours' ethics committee.

"It was that case that caused us to develop a policy," he said. "The position we want to maintain is that we don't approve of surrogate motherhood. The decision (not to accept her) was made almost on the spur of the moment - there are so many other hospitals to go to. Then we worked up a policy."

Canfield said the woman's lawyer had approached the hospital almost two months before the baby was due. If it had been an emergency delivery, the hospital would not have turned her away,

Allen agreed. "We would not want to be involved in a surrogate mother contract," she said. "But we don't ask people when they come in how they got the baby. That wouldn't be appropri-

When most people think of biomedical ethical questions, they think about the decision whether to maintain life by artificial means. There isn't a simple an-

"Medical people are attuned to sustaining physical life," Canfield said. "Is that desirable? Is it morally demanded?'

Allen answers Canfield's rhetorical questions by pointing to the difference between spiritual and physiological life. "Life which has meaning is different from purely physiological life," she said. "It falls back on what you mean by life, by the dignity of life. The (complexity of the question) is why it's so important to have a broadly disciplined group that can bring various perspectives."

Ethics committees also consider the benefits and burdens of using antibiotics, dialysis or chemotherapy. They look at allocation of resources, considering such questions as which of several patients should get the last bed in the intensive care unit or who should receive an organ transplant when there is a long waiting list. A current big issue is "DNR," or "do not resuscitate." "You can get someone's heart going over and over again, but it may be futile," Allen said. "No treatment in and of itself is an absolute to be used or not used.'

Bon Secours' ethics committee goes an extra step and considers questions like outreach to the Committees typically meet on a regular basis even if there are no tricky cases currently at the hospital. They study issues from the past and from other areas to hone their ethical sense and to learn to deal with the fact that there are few or no absolutes.

Electrical safety tips in case of flood

Detroit Edison offers seven be advisable to shut off the natusafety tips to help protect your family and your home, especially electrical appliances, before, during and after a flood.

Before flood conditions threaten your area:

1. Have your electrical outlets in the basement or other areas rewired so that all outlets are placed above what you think the flood level might be. Make sure your wiring complies with the National Electric Code.

2. Disconnect electric power to all basement outlets, appliances, extension cords and equipment including furnaces. It also might tion in this situation.

During the time your basement is flooded:

4. Never step into a flooded basement or other area if water is in contact with outlets or any electrically operated appliance that is energized, such as a washer, dryer, freezer, furnace blower motor, dehumidifier, lamps and cords. You may receive a severe shock. Not even rubbér boots can guarantee your protec-

> Officials said they have no suspects at this time, but are investigating.

5. Do not attempt to remove a fuse or turn off a circuit breaker while standing in water or on a damp floor. This should have been done before the basement was flooded. If you must have the electricity to your basement disconnected, call an electrician or Detroit Edison.

After the flood:

6. When the water in your basement has receded, do not attempt to operate or determine the condition of appliances or other equipment that have been submerged. You could be in danger of electrical shock.

7. Your best safeguard is to call a qualified electrician to determine the condition of your basement's electrical wiring, an appliance repair agency to service your appliances and a furnace serviceman to check and restart your furnace.

Brochures listing these tips are available at all Detroit Edison customer offices.

They went on a dig in class

If you want to teach middle school students about paleontology, you could load all the kids on a bus and take them out to the Southwest to work on a dig.

Or you could do what Bill Leleszi did for his sixthgraders at Brownell. You could spend two weeks in the basement with a jigsaw and cut out pieces of plywood "fossils" - then mix them all up, almost like a real-life dig.

The kids cottoned to it. They put the tyrannosaurus together in an hour," Leleszi said.

The brontosaurus was a little trickier. Its long tail and neck have similarshaped bones that stumped the students through an extra class hour.

Dinosaur study carried through art class, where the kids constructed and painted whimsical creatures, and through science, where they first studied the principles of a dig via computer.

The students were happy to explain the theories of what happened to dinosaurs. "Temperature change," "little mammals ate their eggs," "dust from an asteroid blocked out the sun," called out several students.

In the end, no one knows for sure.

Michigan's warmer weather Activity Task Force (MGCATF), usually brings with it an increase in utility imposters. These are people who pose as utility employees to gain access into cutomers' homes to steal valuables and cash.

In 1986, MichCon received 72 confirmed reports of people posing as employees.

"The highest number of impersonations, 15, occured in March, with a minimum of three or four occurring in the remaining months," said Richard W. Zemmin, vice president, MichCon Public Affairs. "Since January of this year, we have received Alleged utility scams, reported to MichCon; cover a variety of frauds. These include offer of a furnace inspection, a follow-up to an energy audit, or the delivery of a utility rebate.

The cities are not responsible for the federal deficit. So, why should Congress demand more and more of our taxes to carry out its man-

As a member city in the National League of Cities (NLC), Grosse Pointe Woods officials are kept abreast of what is going on in Washington that will affect our residents - their way of life as well as their tax burden. This year, I am representing the Pointes and the State of Michigan on the 35member Finance, Administration and Intergovernmental Relations (FAIR) Steering Committee of the NLC.

Steering committee members are elected officials of member cities, selected by the committee chairperson on the basis of experience and expertise. The FAIR Steering Committee deals with national economic policy, general financial assistance programs, liability insurance, intergovernmental relations, municipal bonds and capital finance, municipal management, antitrust issues, citizen participation and civil rights. labor relations and fire policy.

We are your "watchdog" in Washington.

Editor's Note: Next week the Grosse Pointe News will present the concluding guest editorial of the series written by the mayors of the five Grosse Pointe municipalities. They have written the pieces at the invitation of editorial consultant Wilbur Elston who usually writes the editorials.

This committee works to ensure that important national policies and decisions reflect and protect the interests of the Pointes and other American municipalities.

The FAIR Steering Committee's primary function is to study policy matters and present recommendations to the NLC Policy Committee, Board of Directors, and finally to Congress. The committee will meet four times this year. Study topics include the municipal pension policy, the impact of alternative federal revenue sources on municipalities, and a framework for evaluating federal mandates. We also will be investigating methods to share any new federal revenue sources with state and local governments.

In February, the FAIR Steering Committee, meeting in Washington, D.C., developed "Priorities for America's Cities and Towns." These priority programs were subsequently adopted by the Board of Directors of the National League of Cities. From this, the NLC has set the year's agenda including action to seek adoption of legislation to require the federal government to pay for costly mandates imposed upon cities and towns, insure that municipalities are given a lead role in the enactment of any welfare reform proposal, and to make sure that key municipal programs are not "traded in" to pay for increased state funding. Other agenda items are to protect municipal rights from further tax reform proposals which could undercut the ability of cities and towns to raise their own revenues, and to gain the full commitment of the federal government to work with local leaders in the battle against drugs.

There seems to be no end to federal demands on city taxpayers for more tax monies. While the NLC is working to reduce government requests for money, the Steering Committee is studying and making recommendations on the best way to use our tax money - ways that will directly benefit the cities and towns of America — ways that will benefit the taxpayers most directly.

I am pleased to report that our voice is strong in Washington, D.C. And our recommendations are given serious consideration when I speak with our House Rep. Dennis Hertel and Sen. Carl Levin. We are being heard and our impact is felt whenever federal legislation threatens our right to home rule.

A new NLC committee, which we will be hearing from over the next two years, is the "Election 1988" task force. It consists of an equal number of Republicans and Democrats who will develop a list of priority policy issues designed to strengthen America's cities and towns. These policy issues will be stressed when working with candidates for national offices in the early stages of their campaigns. We want to see these priority policy issues become an integral part of the platforms of both major political parties and be effectively communicated and promoted to the media and the voting public during the 1988 national political compaigns.

As a member of the National League of Cities and its committees, I look forward to representing not only Grosse Pointe Woods but also the interests of our neighbors in all the Grosse Pointes and cities with comparable concerns across the State of Michigan. Through this link, we can keep government rule and its benefits closer to home.

Public-private cooperation for community improvement

ur Grosse Pointe communities are a distinctive place to live. We have informed and responsive citizens, wellmaintained homes, a beautiful lakeshore and magnificent trees. We are blessed with many churches, fine schools and hospitals, convenient shopping areas and desirable

But there is a challenge to maintaining and improving the quality of our community life. Public/private cooperation through contributions to local government foundations is one way to meet this challenge. The newly established City of Grosse Pointe Foundation, like those foundations now in the Farms, Shores and Park, is a vehicle to help finance quality of life projects.

First some background. We have many fine homes in the city, from bungalow to mansion. With the age of our typical house some 50 years old, periodic renovation and tender care are needed to keep its vitality. Likewise, our city's infrastructure (streets, sidewalks, sewers and water mains) is also aging and it too needs periodic renovation and sometimes replacement. Infrastructure work can be very costly. A new pump installation under way at the city's Neff Pumping Station (58 years old) will cost about $375,000. Four years ago, a second electrical service to the pump station, automatic transfer switch, and new pump control system were installed at a cost of $146,000. Last month, we inserted a new liner inside a one block-long section of a 60-year-old storm sewer on Lakeland at a cost of $65,000. This re-lining technique is more cost effective and less disruptive than total replacement. Consulting engineers have been studying other parts of the city sewer system to determine if lining or other repairs are necessary to prevent blockages or worse yet, collapses as these sewers continue to age. Back in 1965, the city bonded itself for a $1.3 million sewer relief program. That bond issue was retired in 1986. Although costly, these sewer projects are not very glamorous, but then neither is water in a homeowner's basement!

In 1979, we bonded $225,000 to replace the Neff swimming pool filtration system and to make other pool repairs and improvements. This past year, we spent $95,000 over and above city labor cost to combat the high lake levels. This included two seawall extensions at Neff Park, replacing electrical lines and raising docks and water lines at the marina, a new seawall at Lakeland, and flood-control engineering and catch basin work. An additional $9,600 of electrical work is under way at the marina this month. We are presently taking bids for approximately $200,000 of resurfacing and concrete replacement work on our streets.

As you can see, maintaining the city's infrastructure is a costly undertaking. We have remained mostly debt-free while primarily financing these city capital improvements on a pay-as-you-go basis through property taxes, water and sewer rates, Community Development Block Grant funds, Federal Revenue Sharing funds, and user charges such as marina rental fees. The Federal Revenue-sharing Program ended this past September and the Block Grant Funds are being reduced, thereby putting greater demands on local financ-

We will continue our efforts to maintain both city facilities and municipal service levels. As the infrastructure grows older, we anticipate even greater financial demands on city finances to meet this need. Local property taxes and user fees will continue to be the backbone of this effort.

How then do we finance projects and programs to improve our quality of community life? The vital margin may well come from foundation-type financing. Grosse Pointers have been generous through the years in supporting such metropolitan activities as the symphony, the Detroit Institute of Arts and the zoo. Opportunities on the home front now beckon. In the early seventies, over $100,000 was voluntarily contributed for the redevelopment of Elworthy Field facilities. The City of Grosse Pointe Foundation can be an important source of both improvement ideas and funding for important community projects. This foundation is dedicated to providing funds for new facilities when needed and to continually improve the city's amenities. The city budget continues to cover basic services and capital outlay. Foundation help can take us beyond this level. Tax-deductible contributions to the City of Grosse Pointe Foundation (and to those of our neighboring governments) can provide an important new source of local government funding for the 1990's and beyond. I urge your participation in this public/private cooperative approach for community improvement. It can have a most beneficial impact on our common effort to better the quality of life in our communities.

To the Editor:

First of all, I would like to say congratulations to the Norsemen hockey team. The final Class A State Championship game was one of the best games I have ever seen. Good luck to all of the graduating seniors and best wishes for those players who are returning to next year's team.

However, there was an incident that took place during the singing of the national anthem that the residents of Grosse Pointe should be aware of.

As the woman began to sing the anthem, a cappella, the Norsemen fans began to sing with her, OFF KEY, and then proceeded to throw popcorn at her.

I do not know how many individuals were involved but it only takes one person to make an entire group look bad. I am sure if someone contacted Warren McKenzie of the Michigan High School Athletic Association, he could give you the name and address of the woman who sang the anthem. She truly deserves a letter of apology.

I hope this unfortunate incident was a misrepresentation of your community as a

Consider preservation

To the Editor:

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society has sent the following letter to the mayor and council of Grosse Pointe Farms. We urge other citizens to voice their support during this moratorium period. Let's encourage our elected officials to plan for a community that has regard for its past and pride in its future.

To the Mayor and City Council:

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society praises you for enacting the 90-day moratorium on subdivisions in Grosse Pointe Farms. Would that all the Grosse Pointes had taken time to plan guidelines for proper development years ago and had followed them! Perhaps Lakeshore and Jefferson would have retained more of the character that contributed to our community's fine reputation.

We urge you to take this opportunity to rethink the way large estates and other properties have been demolished and subdivided. There are viable alternatives! Adaptive reuse of large buildings can be very successful. Wouldn't Rose Terrace have made an outstanding public library or museum if Grosse Pointe had accepted it as a gift from the estate of Mrs. Dodge? In many instances, large mansions can be con-

Don't cry on that shoulder

Let me tell you a fish story. I have several real good ones, but this was my first solo fish tale, and after I healed, I was rather proud of it.

I had just started my job in Mio in February. My greenness at reporting was only surpassed by my lack of fishing savvy. It was approaching mid-April, and I had heard magnificent yarns of trout fishing on the mighty mainstream of the AuSable.

Purchasing fish poles, reels, lines, lures, knee-high waders, hooks, polarized sunglasses, a tackle box, funny hat, hook sharpeners, camo jacket, flashlight, net, stringer, outdoor magazines and a fishing license was all new to me. Sure, I had bought some of those items before, but never in preparation of the Michigan trout opener, and never with a brand new Visa card.

During lunch at work, I would take my pole out into the parking lot, attach a little sinker to the end of the line, and cast and cast and cast. It was like Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance. I would drift off into a calm alpha state, then go back to work.

I had at least five weeks of that kind of nervous anticipation. I read my fishing magazines, sought out an ideal spot and even got permission to use some private access to the river.

February and March had been extremely warm that year. But as the last Saturday in April approached, the fish gods I had been praying to rebuked my pleas. Angry gray clouds blew over Oscoda County. They were filled with menacing snow squawls, high winds and sub-freezing tempera-

No matter, I thought, fishermen all over the world tough it out in sub-ideal conditions - so could I.

The night before that infamous Saturday opener, instead of getting to sleep early in anticipation. of getting up at dawn, I went to the bar, got hooked up with some evil non-fishermen and drank til

I got dressed, sought some hot coffee and headed out to my spot on the river. It was fairly warm at 10 a.m., but by the time I reached the river, the snow squawls had begun and the wind was whipping like tropical storm Camille. I should have accepted the foreshadowing when my funny hat blew off my head, and I had to spend five minutes chasing it.

With all my fishing goodies gathered, I donned my rubber boots and walked down to the river. I sat on the bank for a few minutes, enjoying the cold, the snow and a cigarette. Then I threw up. The night before had finally caught up with me.

After rinsing out with a little cold river water, I tied my lure on to my line and cast that first that amazing — first cast. It was a good one, too. So good in fact, that my lure kept on going on its own. The knot wasn't quite good enough, and $4.95 was making its way down the river.

Retying, a little more securely this time, I made several successful casts. Then it happened. A fish was at the end of my line. I waded into the river, past my knee-high waders, but no matter, I was a fisherman!

The size limit for brown trout was 16 inches. I had even marked that distance on my pole. But, try as I might, after I landed that 11inch brown, I couldn't stretch him to 16. I threw him back.

This fishing stuff is easy, I thought.

With my feet already wet, and aching from the cold. I decided I might as well stay in the water, as near to the bank as I could get.

I was casting and retrieving for some time, when I happened to glance up at a passing duck, and dropped my rod into the water. There was no way I was going to let my brand new rod get dragged down the river, so I jumped in after it. Slipped in after it is probably a better description of what happened.

I was able to grab the rod with my right hand, but heard this horrible pop. It was my left shoudler. I had just dislocated it.

Getting up from the river bed was somewhat of a chore, but I was able to hold on to my rod. I made it back to shore, dragged my soggy, sorry body up onto the bank, picked up my new tackle box and walked back to my car.

My new hat was gone. My arm hurt — a lot!

I hadn't considered how hard it would be driving my four-speed Facort over six miles of bumpy dirt road back to town, but I think my shoulder knew. When the thought finally came to me, it started hurting worse.

Somehow, I was able to get into the car, and make the trip back to town. I drove into the county sherrif's department parking lot, and spotted the sheriff getting out of his patrol car. He came over when I honked my horn, and brought me into the station.

I was transported to a doctor's office about 10 miles from Mio by a kindly deputy who didn't laugh too much. But the fishing gods had more in store for me.

On the way north along M-33, four deer ran out in front of the patrol car. One slammed into the passenger door where I was seated. The animal looked into the window, and bleated quite loudly. Even in serious pain, the animal was laughing at me, I thought.

Well, after some X-rays and some excruciatingly painful contortions, the doc had my arm back in place, issued me a prescription for Darvon and sent me home.

It was an interesting day. I had caught my first brown trout, and nearly lost my life, twice, doing it. But, I was a fisherman.

I reminded myself of that, as I drifted into a deep, Darvon-aided

We want to clarify a few points about an item in last week's column.

Grosse Pointe Woods has long had a drug identification program for its residents. If parents find a suspicious substance or if anyone finds suspected narcotics, they are encouraged to bring the drugs to the department for identification. We're told that our item in last week's issue made it sound as though the person who brought in a suspicious substance to the Woods department was made to feel uncomfortable Nothing could be further from the truth, and it was not our intention to imply any such thing.

The New York Times reported that anti-war protesters massed on the marble steps outside of the House of Representatives to demand that Congress ratify a "People's Treaty" with North Vietnam to end the war in southeast Asia. By late in the afternoon, District of Columbia police arrested 1,146 young people for 'unlawful assembly" on the Canitol grounds. The actions raised to more than 12,000 the number of arrests since police began dealing firmly with protesters at the beginning of the week. An estimated 100,000 people were gathered for rallies.

Five major central banks those of West Germany, Switzerland, Belgium, the Netherlands and Austria - withdrew their support for the U.S. dollar and closed down their foreign ex-

American travelers in Geneva found that dollar bills and traveler's checks, having long been accepted automatically in every country of the world, had only limited usefulness when they turned them in for Swiss francs. The crisis occurred because, internationally, the United States, living on credit for years, had not been able to pay up.

The Edgar Degas bronze sculpture, La Petite Danseuse de Quatorze Ans, sold for a record $380,000 in New York. It was bought by the Wildenstein Galleries from the private collection of Norton Simon, California industrialist. The bronze, at 371/2 inches high, was considered by some to be the greatest piece of sculpture in the 19th century.

President Richard Nixon called on Congress to immunize the federal legal services program against "unusually strong political pressures" by re-establishing it as a new independent public corporation.

The Nixon administration was set to impose racial hiring plans on construction unions and companies in Chicago, St. Louis, San-Francisco and Atlanta. Similar action was scheduled to follow in 15 other cities. At the time there were only two such mandatory federal racial hiring plans, in Philadelphia and Washington, under which contractors could lose federal construction work for failure to comply.

The Grosse Pointe News announced it would raise prices, from 10 cents to 15 cents for a single copy and from $5 to $6 for a one-year subscription.

Thomas Nester, the orchestra's founder and officer for 18 years, died the week before, Hehad planned, as usual, to play his violin at the concert. Twenty years before, Nester gathered a small group of friends to practice and in 1952, the first symphony

News From the Capitol Making a difference in education

By William R. Bryant, Jr. State Representative 13th District

Our future depends on our youth, it is often said. More accurately, more pointedly, the future of our young people depends on us. This statement places responsibility for our welfare on our children. It accepts our responsibility for their welfare while they are in our care. (It also accepts our responsibility concerning the environment, the economy and peace, among other things.)

High on the list of our responsibilities is education.

There is a lot of serious study and discussion going on now about education finance. Those discussions need to include the basic question "How will any change in education finance actually result in children being better prepared to live a full, productive, societally useful, joyful, peaceful life?'

It's a tough question. Moving dollars around won't do it. Spending more won't do it, by itself. We need to deal with what schools are and what they could be and what we want them to be.

To try to target some specific efforts I feel would make a real difference in education, I will be introducing a set of bills to provide for initiatives.

- 1. A school improvement process team of teachers and administrators in each school, with training of these in advanced research and school improvement process.
- 2. Each local district will create a broad, conceptual mission statement.
- 3. Intermediate districts will act as catalysts for commu-stately homes, our giant elms, a great part of what made Grosse Pointe unique will be gone. Will community pride and property values follow suit?

Please consider preservation, not demolition and subdivision, as the way to enhance our community. Perhaps the other Grosse Pointes will follow your lead.

Reader upset

To the Editor:

I find it extremely upsetting that the Grosse Pointe News would print a cartoon of a priest making a lewd comment in front of the pope. This tells me that you not only don't respect the priesthood, you don't even consider the impact that has on my 7and 10-year-old children who read your paper.

It is obvious I must even review the Grosse Pointe News for content before my children see it.

William Starrs Grosse Pointe Farms Editor's Note: For the readers' information, the editorial cartoon last week titled, 'The Vatican Decree' had the pope saying, "There's a right way and a wrong way to make babies." A priest in a group responded, "Betcha our education library won't be stocking any graphic videotapes on the right way."

Learn to be assertive

An Assertiveness Training Workshop will be offered by Cottage Hospital in three evening sessions beginning Tuesday, March 31, and continuing April 7 and 14. The group sessions are held in the Nurses' Residence at the rear of the hospital parking lot, 159 Kercheval Ave.

The workshop will open with a look at the four basic styles of communication and behavior. Participants will explore the reasons why some people are passive and others aggressive and how to modify that behavior to be more assertive. Structured exercises, role playing, written hand-out materials and practice exercises are included in this group participation workshop.

The fee is $20. For more information or to enroll for the class. call 884-8600, ext. 2165.

She's a matchmaker — of sorts

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

Looking for an unusual summer camping experience? An offbeat adventure? A trip that will fulfill an exotic or bizarre desire? How about spending a few weeks on a cattle ranch, living in a tent and helping cowboys with their daily chores? Or how about a photography expedition in the Galapagos Islands? A tour of Paris by motor launch? Perhaps heli-skiing, where you and your skis are deposited by a helicopter on the top of a mountain? Want to try whale-watching? Skydiving? An archeological field trip? Perhaps you'd like to spend three days traveling in a covered wagon? Or taking part in a 200mile caravan on a camel.

For high school students, how about a camp that specializes in teaching sailing skills? Or music? Perhaps urban studies? Computer science? Gymnastics? Tennis? Bird-watching? Filmmaking? Studying sharks with a marine biologist?

For the last 34 years, Susan S. Klingbeil of Grosse Pointe Shores has been in the business of matching children with the proper camps and providing adults with a chance to fulfill their fondest vacation wishes. She calls herself a leisure consul-

Klingbeil said that learning shouldn't end on the last day of school in June. Most children, she said, will benefit from some kind of camping experience. It teaches respect for all living things — down to the little ant in the anthill."

The youth immediately accelerated when he spotted the patrol car and drove east on Ridgemont from Harper. The Woods officer turned on his emergency lights and siren, but the youth allegedly continued to try and elude the patrol car.

The youth sped down Ridgemont to Helen, failing to stop at several stop signs, police noted. He then turned eastbound on Brys and then drove over several cement curbs at the Manufachicle then struck a brick wall, and the suspect abandoned the car, jumped over the wall and ran onto the Shorepointe condominium property, where he was later caught by the pursuing officer.

It was later learned the vehicle the youth was driving belonged to his grandmother who pursued charges of auto theft. The youth was also charged with reckless driving, never acquiring a license and fleeing and eluding.

Cities honored by national arbor group

Four Grosse Pointes have received the designation "Tree City USA" by the National Arbor Day Foundation, a Nebraska-based organization dedicated to encouraging tree care and tree-planting programs nationwide.

The honor is given to cities which meet certain critéria and are subsequently recommended for the designation by state foresters. The criteria: $1 per capita must be spent on trees; a tree commission or governing body must be recognized by the city council; there must be a city tree ordinance; and the city must recognize Arbor Day by a proclamation or some sort of public tree planting ceremony.

"The Tree City designation entitles the city to a flag, a plaque, a pin and a patch," said Administrative Assistant Chris Matthew. The City has received the designation for the third year.

"We have a yearly replanting program," said Matthew, but we've found we have the best luck planting trees in the fall. We add at least 80 trees each year mostly where we've removed elms. We found a better survival rate in the fall.'

Nancy Pilorget, chairwoman of the Grosse Pointe Park beautification commission, said the Park has received the Tree City USA designation for the fourth year.

"We'll be planting trees on the easements of the 1100 and 1000 blocks during the year," she said.

In addition, as part of its Arbor Week celebration, the Park distributes white pine seedlings and instructions for their planting and care to all fourth-graders in private and public schools. They'll also have a tree sale for Park citizens.

Russell DuRoss, chairman of Grosse Pointe Woods' tree commission, said the Woods has received the designation for the last nine years, and will probably receive it again for 1987. The Woods' commission sends representatives to elementary schools to present a program to third and fourth graders about gypsy moths and about the importance of trees. Each child receives a small tree to plant.

"This year we'll give out 527 18 inch to 20 inch redbud trees," said DuRoss.

The Woods also plans to plant 100 to 150 trees on city property in the fall. The choice of sites, according to DuRoss, is determined by commission members, and residents may request consideration for a free tree in front of their homes by contacting the Woods Department of Public Works.

Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm announced last week that the city has again been named Tree City USA. "It is fitting that the announcement should be timed with the initial efforts of our newly formed Beautification Commission," he said.

Liz Kuhlman, Shores trustee, said the village is in the process of applying for Tree City USA Status:

We planted over 300 trees in the last year, so this is a good time for it," she said.

lder workers are America's New Frontier

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

Mergings and closings are more than just words to those who lose their jobs in this accommodation that big business employs in the name of profits. It is a frightening experience. It is particularly so for older workers who must settle for a job that pays less than they are accustomed to receiving, if they are lucky enough to find a job at all.

That is why the observance of Older Workers Week in Michigan (March 8-14) was important. It drew the attention of employers to the fact that older workers have much to offer.

Implicit in the theme, "Experience You Can Count On,' was more than just the emphasis on skills It also contains the message that older workers are reliable workers.

Gov. James J. Blanchard said, "I encourage all citizens to reflect upon the needs of our state's business community and the contributions which older workers can make in fulfilling these needs."

In accepting the report of the Governor's Task Force on Employment Opportunities for Older Citizens, he added, "We must guarantee that as our society collectively ages, we don't foreclose the opportunity for aging Americans to remain vital, productive, contributing citizens.

This is the 28th year that organizations interested in promoting or retraining older workers have sponsored Older Americans crimination by employers. Now, almost 30 years later, Congress has passed a bill that strikes down mandatory retirement for employees in this country.

Sometimes companies offer incentives to older workers to leave. In personnel jargon, these inducements are called the "golden handshake." It is a far cry from the "golden parachutes" that compensate executives who lose control in mergers, takeovers and stockholder battles.

Recognition of the older worker's value in the work force is important and pertinent. If we look at statistics, we see how important it is for society to learn how to use those who have reached retirement age. In 20 years the population over 65 will double.

Not only will there be more older people, but with the improvements in health care, they will be healthier, more alert and more productive. We can't afford to ignore what such a large segment of experienced older people have to offer.

As the median age increases, older workers will become a commodity because they possess the skills and experience industry

They will be able to provide business with an important training tool as they pass along good work habits and lifelong experience to younger workers.

A five-year experiment conducted by the U.S. Department of Labor in the Portland, Maine area proved the value of the older

With the cooperation of private businesses, they were placed in jobs that fit their physical and mental strengths. Attitudes of both employers and workers improved and there were no workman's compensation cases filed by any of the 4,000 workers before the project ended.

Such experiments bear out the truth of Blanchard's remarks at the Governor's Conference on Aging last October: "I can think of no stronger commitment to investment in experience than to put an end to unjust discrimination against an individual because of age.

Older workers have made countless contributions to their respective companies and, in turn, to the state's economy. They are America's New Frontier; a massive resource for the country.

Rash of thefts reported in Park

About 15 larcenies, mostly from automobiles, were reported in the Park over a 10-day period earlier this month, amounting to about $3,000 in losses for city residents.

The spree of thefts began overnight March 12, according to Park police. Cars were reportedly broken into on Hally Place, Barrington, Lakepointe, Beaconsfield and several other nearby streets.

Vehicles were entered by the most convenient method, according to Lt. William Furtaw. He said in some cases the cars were left unlocked and in others windows were smashed to gain entry.

The larcenies included AM/FM radios, car stereos, items left in the vehicles and CB radios.

The incidents continued over nine more nights. In one instance a car was broken into and the thief used an electronic door opener to open the garage. Three bicycles were taken in that case. Bicycles were taken from two other residences.

"We believe these larcenies are connected to two suspects who have been arrested in the past," Furtaw said. "They were recently released from custody and these larcenies began.

ties," he said. "We received a lot of casualties from North Africa, and we treated a lot of German prisoners.'

Keyes was always interested in things scientific, and at a young age he had a butterfly collection and was interested in zoology. He had rabbits, pigeons and several dogs as a youngster. In the early years as an intern, Keyes said pneumonia was a common high-fatality disease that had to be treated without antibiotics until the advent of sulfa drugs. It wasn't until after the war that penicillin became readily available.

He knew he wanted to treat heart problems from the start.

"I liked the techniques of physical diagnosis," he said. "Listening for murmurs and rhythms it's a challenge.

Keyes' view of medicine has changed radically over the years. Heart transplants in the 1940s were considered science fiction, and he noted Henry Ford probably performed 40 transplants last year. The technological changes were something Keyes welcomed. The advancements made his job easier, and, of course, more lives were saved. It was the economic concerns that have bothered Keyes for years.

"My view of medicine began to change with the advent of Medicare, he said. "At the beginning I had no fear of what might happen to the practice of medicine," he said. "As the years went on I saw what it was doing.'

Keyes said that once the government began saying it would not pay more for a particular treatment, hospitals and doctors had no choice but to take into account economic considerations in treating a patient.

Keyes said he has become fearful and apprehensive about where medicine is headed.

"A longtime friend and fellow doctor recently said, 'You and I have seen the best days of medicine,'" Keyes said. "I don't know that that's true, but it is a shame that doctors are feeling that

Keyes said he never thought about taking out malpractice insurance until the hospital took out a policy on him. He said that in more than 50 years, he never faced a lawsuit.

"A lot of my compatriots said get malpractice insurance, but I never thought twice about it," Keyes said. "It would be suicide for a doctor to practice medicine without insurance today. People sue because they are injured. I have seen people injured and have had to testify in court about that.'

Keyes noted that there are a lot of silly suits made by people and added he has seen many of those.

Keyes said many pediatricians are faced with lawsuits, but that sometimes the mother had been drinking alcohol or smoking during pregnancy, which he said can cause birth defects and problems such as low birth weight and resulting complications.

"It's not always the doctor's fault," he said.

Aside from the advent of antibiotics, Keyes said the biggest change in medicine over his career is in heart surgery. He said that artificial valve replacements and cardiac pacemakers have saved many lives.

Keyes feels Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) may be a bigger problem than what the media has reported.

"AIDS poses a very real danger," he warns. "It is so dangerous we almost have to think of it in 'plague-like' terms.'' He added that people have been tested for syphilis on a regular basis for 70 years before there was a cure.

"Why not test for AIDS now?" he asked.

When Keyes wasn't working, he could usually be found in the small greenhouse he has always had at every house he has lived in. He raised orchids and is proud of the rare varieties he grows. He has a staghorn fern as large as a bushel basket, and smiles broadly when he talks about his plants. He also does some woodworking and built a large grandfather's clock from a kit. It still bongs out the hours. He has hunted and fished, but gave up hunting many years ago.

"I'll miss working with the patients," he said. "One of the hardest things I've ever had to do in my life was recommend new doctors for my patients. You have to look at each patient as an individual and match their personality with the personality of the doctor. It was very difficult."

He talked about several of the more trying cases he had worked on. He said he had one patient who was a Jehovah's Witness who would not accept blood necessary for heart surgery. The man died. On a brighter note he recalls a woman who has had four artificial heart valve operations, and after 35 years of heart trouble is still leading a productive life.

Keyes and his wife, Colleen, are planning some future trips and intend to spend time with their grandchildren. Keyes has three children from his first marriage and two stepchildren. His son, John Jr., is chief of nuclear medicine at Georgetown University Hospital in Washington.

"Medicine has been financially ewarding for me,'' he said. "I probably could have made money in private practice, but what I enjoyed most was caring for the people. It was a very good career and I will miss that the most - helping people."

idea to negotiate interminably, but to reach an agreement within 60 days.'

The potential for flooding is great, City Manager John Crawford said. "There is a tremendous threat from Fox Creek, with 26 locations of leakage this past spring. The Army Corps of Engineers have indicated the conditions are there and it could cause flooding at the present time."

If an agreement with Detroit is not reached within 60 days, the committee recommends the erection of a flood barrier on the back lot line of properties on Barrington Road from Jefferson to Windmill Pointe Park. The projected masonry wall would cost $2,146, 000 plus easement costs.

The earthen berm along Fox Creek is weak, Olds said, and if it were struck by a car, for instance, and breached, the water could fill all the basements in the 100 year flood plain area. "It may well fill the first floors," he added. "Everybody in Grosse Pointe Park stands to lose.'

The cost of the recommendations would be paid for by Park residents according to the following formula: Property owners

Lake level

Lake St. Clair's water level at the end of February was about three inches below what it was one year ago and about five inches below one month ago. At the end of February, the lake elevation was at 575.69 feet above the mean water level at Father Point, Quebec.

The February monthly mean level was about 36 inches above the long-term average. This level was about eight inches below the all-time February monthly mean high, which was set in 1986, and about 68 inches above the all-time February monthly mean low, which was set in 1926.

For mariners, the end of February level was 48 inches above chart datum.

The six-month forecast of levels for Lake St. Clair shows that the lake is expected to be above its long-term average level during the next six months. The forecast shows that at the end of March, Lake St. Clair will be about three inches above what it was at the end of February. The lake is expected to continue its seasonal rise into June. At the end of Au gust 1987, levels are expected to be about two inches below what they were at the same time in 1986. The August mean would be above the long-term average level for that month but two inches below the all-time high mean for August, which was set in 1986.

within the 100 year flood plain -Creek. It's probably not a good 75 percent; all other property owners - 25 percent. Over a fiveyear period, property owners with a $50,000 state equalized valuation and within the flood plain would pay $253 a year and other property owners would pay $42 a year. The cost over a 10-year amortization would be $145 and $24 a year.

According to the report, the average property owner with flood insurance pays about $450 a year for insurance that would be unnecessary if the flood plain designation were removed. Property owners in the 100 year flood plain are required, since 1972, to obtain flood insurance if a mortgage exists on the property from a federally chartered institution.

Olds said the flood committee has been meeting weekly and biweekly since October. It requested last year, and received $25,000 for a study by city engineers Hubbell, Roth and Clark.

The council voted to accept the report and directed the administration to begin discussions with Detroit. There will be a progress report presented at the April 13

LET'S ZOOM IN ON

a classroom at the Early School of The Grosse Pointe Academy. Let's look out at the highly structured Montessori classroom through the one way mirrored viewing booth.

Yes there is structure, but what we see is a warm, caring, loving environment where 3, 4 and 5 year olds are working at their own pace on the hundreds of Montessori learning tasks. The 28 children are assisted by two adult classroom assistants and the teacher (called a Directress). The day begins with the entire group gathering on the circle. An opening topic could be the classroom gerbils, fish, fox, snake, mice or turtles but will likely be something "special" that the Directress has arranged. The children fill their day with purposeful learning activities in the math area, practical life space, geography center, language development corner, or art area. Yes, there is singing, a story, a nutritious snack, visits from firemen and artists, trips to zoos and shows, recess, free play, a dance class, physical education, art, French instruction, and a naturalist. Young children are at a critical time for learning. For many children, they are able to learn more during this two to three year instructional period than at any other time in their entire lives. The teachers at our Early School understand this and plan for it.

A warm, caring, loving classroom environment at the Early School of The Grosse Pointe Academy is not the only reason to consider having your son or daughter educated at an independent school, it is one of the reasons.

Hard work doesn't discourage these businesswomen

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

Owning your own business is just plain hard work.

From start-up in a one-person office to head of a corporation, business owners are likely to demand as much of themselves as they do of their employees maybe more. But the potential rewards are great.

In recent years, women have begun to notice these rewards and try to claim them for them-

Statistics now show that women business owners are the fastest-growing segment of small business. Four of five new business start-ups are owned by women, according to statistics provided by publicists for the conference of Michigan Women Business Owners.

Grosse Pointe women are right there in the forefront. They agree that as owners they are working harder than they ever did before, that credit is hard to come by and good employees difficult to find and that they'd do it all again if the opportunity presented itself.

Beverly Beltaire founded PR Associates 25 years ago on a shoestring. "It was just me and a secretary and a telephone that's how small it was," she said. "I never said 'no' to anything. I wasn't ashamed to take the smallest job. That's how I learned the business."

Being the boss often means doing the hands-on work along with the employees. Ice cream shop owner Stacey DeLisle scoops ice cream, makes sandwiches, collects money and handles all the behind-the-scenes business. "If you can break even in five years in the restaurant business you're doing well." DeLisle says.

PR Associates is now a marketing and public relations firm with $2 million in annual billings and it is difficult to realize that Beltaire once had trouble getting start-up funding.

"It was very tough," she says now. "I had to start slower. I never had the front money to

Many women still have trouble getting credit, which Beltaire thinks may be because women tend to wait later in their lives to establish credit in their own names. She advises women to establish credit, even if it means borrowing a small amount and making quick repayment. "It shows you're a good risk," she Beltaire is convinced that the era of women's rights has not completely smoothed the path for women. "There's still a lot of resistance," she said. "I can tell you very honestly that the reason most women go into business for themselves is that they can't find the jobs they want.'

Stacey DeLisle, owner of Over the Rainbow ice cream shop, believes new business owners run into trouble over inexperience whether they are men or women.

"The hard part is just getting started," she said. "When you don't know much, they don't take you seriously." Although DeLisle's previous experience involved working in management in other people's businesses, she says she still had a lot to learn when she started her own store.

She used family money to start the business, but is currently planning a major kitchen remodeling project that will be a challenge to finance. "Do you know how many ice cream cones you have to sell to remodel a kitchen?" she says.

The reason many women have problems as business owners is that they retain responsibility for what goes on at home, too. DeLisle says. "Any working woman is still the primary nurturing figure. A business is a financial and personal investment. You can get a guilt complex over sacrificing your family for your business.

There are plenty of physical hazards in the restaurant trade, too. DeLisle injured her elbow scooping ice cream the first summer she owned the parlor. She totes food up the stairs and garbage down, and in between, she does the cooking, planning, ordering and bookkeeping. And clean-

"I won't ask my employees to do something I wouldn't do myself," she said.

DeLisle credits Wesley's Ice Cream, her main supplier, with helping her over the rough spots at the beginning. They gave her assistance with location and concept while she gained experience.

"If you don't know the vocabulary of a business, you've got three strikes against you,' DeLisle said. "Every trade has its lingo. But I sing the praises of Wesley's. They'll help you — it doesn't matter what your sex or color is. They want to be a success.

Help from the franchise was the key to a successful beginning for Sally Mader, as well. When she and her husband bought the Royal Oak SPARKS tune-up franchise, the company was hardly enthusiastic about a woman running the business, she said. But a couple of weeks of watching her in action convinced

"I was nervous at first," Mader said, "I did a telephone follow-up to check out customer satisfaction. After a few months the word got out that Sally runs the shop.'

Although her husband was a coowner, for the first several years, Mader ran the business by herself. "I did the hiring, the firing. I ran the shop." But since she "didn't even know what an ABR valve was," the franchise helped out with technical advice. Soon-Mader was the person explaining to customers what had been done to their cars and explaining the diagnoses.

Mader advises women - or men - starting their own business to consider franchises. "It's hard to get a bank loan without help," she said. "It costs $80,000-$100,000 to start any business. See HARD WORK, page 19A

Property assessments, SEVs up throughout the Pointes

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

County sales studies over the last two years have shown an increase in the selling price of homes in the Grosse Pointes. which has had the resulting effect of raising assessments and state equalized valuations.

Hikes in residential assessments or SEVs for 1987 range from a high of 10.43 percent in the City to five percent in the Shores.

Local city assessors must either adjust assessments to come up to the level the county has set, or allow an equalization factor to be placed on all the property in a taxing category. If assessors decide to adjust assessments, taxpavers are notified by mail of a "change of assessment."

This year all assessors in the Grosse Pointes, except in the City, opted to adjust assessments upwards to reflect the sales study. The City allowed a factor to be placed on all residential properties this year, but next year, City Treasurer Dennis Foran said the city will perform a reassessment of its residential properties.

The world of ad valorem taxation is basically simple, until one begins discussing it in depth, according to Farms Assessor Carrol Lock said this year the Wayne County Bureau of Taxation determined that property values in the Farms increased by a factor of 8.07 percent.

"I determined that to come up to that value, I would increase assessments seven percent acrossthe-board," Lock said. "I then had to adjust the value of some individual properties to make up the difference.'

Farms assessments increased five percent in 1986, and Lock, as well as other city assessors, see increases again next year, because sale prices of homes continue to increase.

Assessments in several of the Pointes decreased two years ago. Those decreases reflected lower residential selling prices from the tail-end of the recession years of the early 1980s.

If a taxpayer is looking for some hard and fast answers as to how the assessment of his property is raised or lowered - there are none. Since the sale price of a piece of property is one of the best methods for determining the worth of a home, lot or building, the county uses those figures in determining the value of prop-

If, however, someone who knows that his lot is worth $30,000, sells the property for $45,000 to someone willing to pay that amount, that selling price reflects in the property values within that taxing category. The beneficiary of the easy $15,000, the 1,156 parcels saw a five perhas helped to increase the assessments, and therefore, possibly the taxes, of his neighbors.

"Assessing is not a true science," Lock said. "Sixty percent is match, the rest is judgment."

In the Shores this year, the sales study showed a five percent increase in the value of residential property. Local officials decided to adjust assessments to reflect the increase. Nearly all of cent jump in assessments.

Mark Christensen, Woods assessor, said that he adjusted residential property assessments up five and one half percent and commercial property up seven and one half percent, due to sales study figures from the county. Christensen said if he ignored the county study, the state has been applying pressure to local assessors to not allow factors of higher than 10 percent.

"If an assessor allows a factor of 10 percent to stand, he may have his certification reviewed by the state assessors board,' Christensen said.

Therefore, a local assessor's hands may be tied as to how to handle sales study figures which show an increase in property values - they have to raise assessments across-the-board or find enough of an increase in individual valuations to fall within guide lines.

The lines behind Damman's in the Village were long Saturday as U-2 fans queued up for tickets for the rock band's April 30 Silverdome appearance. Chris Lopez of the Farms, at the left, shows his tickets. Village Record and Tapes sold 777 tickets Saturday, according to co-owner John Denomme, who said the first person got in line Thursday at 2 a.m. The line was down in little over an hour, he added, once tickets went on sale.

How property taxes are figured

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Each county in the state prepares a study based on property sales for a taxing unit. When a comparison is made between the total sales of property within a taxing category and the assessments for the same property, the assessments should be at 50 percent of the sales value.

If the county's study shows that property values exceed or fall below 50 percent, several things can happen.

The county can apply a factor. This factor is a percentage which is mutiplied with the property's assessed value. If a factor is applied, it will be applied across-the-board to all properties within the same taxing category. This has the effect or raising or lowering the assessments to 50 percent of the county-determined true cash value of a property.

Rather than allow the county to impose the factor, a local assessor may choose to increase or lower the assessments of a taxing category to bring that category to 50 percent of the estimated cash value. Basically, the assessor could change the individual property values or use the percentage factor the county would apply to each individual assessment, and change the assessment by that percentage.

This "change of assessment" has the effect of raising or lowering the value of property for that tax year. A countyimposed factor may or may not be applied the next tax year, and the property's assessment would stay the same.

A property's state equalized value is what the taxing unit uses to levy mills against to generate revenue. A mill is the equivalent of $1 for every $1,000 of valuation.

For instance, if the true value of a home is determined to be $100,000, the state equalized valuation is $50,000.

If the city levies 13 mills, the school district 25 mills, the county seven mills and the community college three mills, the millage rate is 48 mills. The tax bill is determined by multiplying 48 by the number of thousands, in this case 50. The tax bill would be $2,400.

The Grosse Pointe Village Association has scheduled its first Paint the Window Contest for Saturday, May 2. Children, with an accompanying adult, are invited for a half-day of fun and creativity painting the windows along Kercheval between Cadieux and Neff roads.

The contest is open to all first through fifth grade children attending a public or private Grosse Pointe elementary school. Due to available window space, however, it will be limited to approximately 200 entrants, selected on a first-come, first-served basis. There is no entry fee.

European girls become American nannies in a culture exchange program sanctioned by the U.S. State Department

By Elsa Frohman Feature Editor

ndrea Grunberger of Grosse Pointe Park has a very British nanny. La Though both her parents work full-time, the 1-year-old never goes to a daycare center. She spends her days at home, playing, napping and learning. She spends her days under the watchful eye of Natalie Jones of England.

Andrea's parents, Dr. and Mrs. George Grunberger, are participating in a cultural exchange program — Au Pair in America that brings young European women to the United States to live with American families and care for American children.

"I think it's great," Dr. Grunberger said. "My wife and I are able to work without worry. It's been amazing how much progress Andrea has made.'

While Natalie has the responsibility of looking after Andrea and her 4-year-old sister, Jill, she is not a servant in the Grunberger home. Under the program, the au pair girl is to be considered a member of the family — much as exchange students are adopted into their host families.

In fact, au pair girls are brought into the country on student visas. The money they earn is called pocket money — not a salary — and they are required to take some sort of class while they are here. Natalie recently completed a ceramics class.

"Some girls take horseriding or art," Natalie said. "Some join a church choir. A few take computers or something academic."

Au pair girls have long been an institution in Europe. However, the program has only been in existence in the United States since last fall. Natalie is part of only the second large group of girls to come to the United States. While there are a good number of them on the west side in Bloomfield Hills and Birmingham, Natalie is one of only two girls in Grosse Pointe. The other girl, Evelyn Hero of Austria, lives only a few blocks from the Grunbergers.

Au pair girls are between 18 and 24 years old and are carefully selected for their experience and training in childcare. Natalie is 24 and has an educational certificate in childcare. She has worked as a nanny in England, as well as for a day care center.

She saw a story about the Au Pair in America program in a British national newspaper and was intrigued.

"I felt I had had about enough experience in England," she said. "Where I was working, there was just ne future."

Natalie will return to England after a year with the Grunbergers. While she is here, she will be included in Grunberger vacation trips and family outings.

"It's like adopting another child," Grunberger said. "But she's not a child.'

In addition to a social life with their American families, the au pair girls have an organized social life. The Detroit-area coordinator of the program holds regular Sunday afternoon teas and other social gatherings for the girls. Natalic also spends time with the other Grosse Pointe au pair girl.

'Evelyn is like my sister while I'm here," Natalie said.

Grunberger emigrated to the United States from Czechoslovakia 18 years ago. With two children and two careers, the family has found America often disconcertingly short on childcare op-

"We started thinking about this a long time ago," Grunberger said, "being from Europe ourselves. We thought about importing someone from the Caribbean, but that's not exactly legal."

The Grunbergers tried sitters who kept children in their homes, but were never quite satisfied that they were doing the best they could by their children. They were relieved when Jill became old enough to attend the Grosse Pointe Academy Montessory Early School, but Andrea's care still presented a problem.

Then, by a chance not unlike that which brought Natalie into the program, they saw an article about Au Pair in America in a newspaper. They applied immedi-

Host families are screened and weeded out as carefully as the girls are. Both the host and the au pair girl undergo extensive interviews and applications. The rules of the program are spelled out clearly.

The au pair girl will be required to work no more than nine hours per day, no more than five and a half days a week. Her duties will include child care but no heavy housework. She will have at least one full weekend off a month. She will have be paid $100 a week pocket money, with two weeks paid vacation. The host family will pay her tuition in whatever courses she takes. She will have her own room in the host family's

In return, the au pair girl will assist the parents with child care and stay with the children while the parents are not home. Drive the children to school and appointments (au pairs must have a valid international driver's license) and assist with light housework. She will keep her own room tidy and do her own laundry. Au pair girls must be fluent in English and have experience or training in child care.

Grunberger explained that the au pair's position in the family is a delicate balance.

"She can't be like a guest, or it will be more work for the family than before," he said. "And she can't be like a servant either. There has to be goodwill on both sides for it to work.'

The match between the Grunbergers and Natalie has been a good one - according to both

"We get on very well," Grunberger said.

Spring time in your heart

By the Rev. Don Lichtenfelt Redeemer Lutheran Church

If your experience in Christian living is anything like mine it's sorta up and down, hot and cold, sunshine and rain, dormancy and growth - just like the earth itself. There are seasons of the soul. Sometimes they correspond with seasons of the

Sometimes we feel like we're growing and find out later we were only swelling. Sometimes we feel wiped out by some experience -- we're in a spiritual blackout -- and find out later that we can say with Jacob in the Old Testament, "Surely God was in this place (or experience) and I didn't know it.'

As spring approaches I draw encouragement from the knowledge that it doesn't come all at once, any more than you and I "become saints suddenly!" The sun stays around a little longer each week, a robin sings, the temperature rises, buds start appearing - here and there one bursts open, the grass grows greener, the crocuses and tulips poke their heads out. It's as the scripture says, "First the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear."

I like what happens to the earth in Spring. I like to see it happen in people too. That's what Easter and Resurrection are all about - new birth, new life, new fruitfulness through the spirit of God working in us. How does the heavenly kingdom come? It's like spring. It's an inside job, the work of God. How do we keep it alive? "With deeds of love and mercy the heavenly kingdom comes," says one hymn writer.

How? Like springtime! A new spirit of generosity stirs in someone, a special need is championed by another, someone volunteers for a job that needs to be done, some of us become more flexible, some find ourselves a little more courageous for truth, we scatter "a few more flowers on the pathway of life," a little thawing of the heart, a little less "block" and a little more "tackle," a little less grumble and a little more gratitude, a little less self and a little more of God's spirit - and before you know it - springtime, resurrection and renewal!!

As the Indians say, "May the Great Spirit bring springtime in your heart!'

This column is written on a rotating basis by members of the Grosse Pointe Ministerial Association.

The program will be held in Barbour Chapel at Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore Dr. The public is invited to attend.

"The Easter Experience," a musical passion play, will be presented at St. Joan of Arc Catholic Church, 21620 Mack Ave., in two performances, at 8 p.m., April 5 and 12. The play was conceived by Maureen DeFour Neuhaus in 1980, based in part on the Dallas Holm musical, "His Last Days." It is an annual event in the parish. There will be a cast of 100. Above, Michael Maurice plays Christ, as Beverly Goll is the Virgin Mary and Ray Bezy is the Centurion. Admission is free, but a donation of one can of food for the poor is suggested.

Sports, to coin a phrase, just ain't what they used to be.

I came to that realization after the recent hub-bub over poor fan behavior at some local hockey games. Lately, I've had occasion to spend a lot of time watching basketball, hockey, volleyball and gymnastics in gyms and arenas from Fraser to Flint. For some odd reason, I noticed that I began to dread attending the very events I used to look forward to. Sure, everybody gets a little tired now and then, but when you start looking for excuses not to go and the cons outweigh the pros, you've got a problem.

Then I realized just what it was I was dreading. It wasn't really the games or meets themselves, it was the behavior of many of the people in attendance at the events. I'm used to the odd person-and I do mean oddapproaching me at athletic events and yelling things (often unintelligible things) about how I don't know what I'm talking about or that my column stinks, etc., etc. But what I've been running into lately is different.

Now before North fans start running for the telephone to tell me what a jerk I am or South fans start writing letters to the editor about me, let me say that I am not the only person who has noticed that the behavior of fans at many sporting events-at all levels from youth sports to the pros-isn't what it used to be.

We were talking about it here in the office a few weeks back. Our resident baseball expert recalls that it used to be a special thing to go to a Tiger baseball game. "Women would get dressed in their best dresses, with a hat and gloves and everything. You wouldn't be caught dead in pants," she recalled. We're talking about 25 or 30 years ago, I know, but the point is the same: people look at sporting events in a much different way than they used to. Back then, it was special. Now people go to sporting events demanding to be entertained - and not just on the

I talked to another veteran of sporting events about it and he pointed out that people seem to come to, say, high school hockey games, not just to watch the games, but to be part of the action themselves. It isn't enough, he says, for the kids to watch and cheer their team on. They have to be involved.

I understand that I guess. It's just that the involvement is less and less positive these days. Back when I was a junior at Servite High in Detroit, the varsity basketball team made it to the state Class C finals in Saginaw. Servite was a tiny, parochial high school on the east side of Detroit and this was just about the biggest thing that ever happened to the team or the school. The three days previous to the game were about as exciting as you could imagine. We had a pep rally every one of those days. The team was pumped, the teachers were excited and the kids -even the serious, studious ones like me-were getting into it.

And do you know what? So few tickets were available to the general school population, that most of us stayed home. We wouldn't have dreamed of showing up without a ticket. I can remember listening to the game on the radio with my entire family - not known as basketball fans - around me. Friends of mine went to the game by bus, cheered the Panthers on and came home teary-eyed when they lost to Bay City All-Saints.

There weren't any obscene cheers, no fights in the stands or on the court. No bad taste left in the mouths of those who had attended the game. Unfortunately, it isn't like that anymore. I've been to an awful lot of games this year in which the bizarre, the weird, the tasteless and the downright nasty is the norm when it comes to fan behavior. And often, the poor behavior trickles down to the floor or the court or the ice and the players get into fights or shoving matches or take unnecessary penalties.

If it sounds like I'm harping just on hockey, maybe I am. Hockey, because it is a fast, emotional game played in a very small, enclosed space, seems to foster the type of behavior I've described. It happened several times this year at regular season high school hockey games and by now, everyone knows that it happened in North's state finals appearance in Flint.

Know what bothers me most about that? I love hockey. Faithful readers know that it's probably my favorite non-baseball-season sport. I played it. I've watched it for years, even become somewhat of a student of the game. And I tried my hand at coaching it (sort of). So when fans who think that injecting their rude presence into the game is more important than the game itself, or that hockey just isn't fun without going down to the rink, getting together with your friends and making jerks of yourselves, I feel pretty badly about what's happening to the sport, to spectator sports in general, for that matter.

It's too had when all games can't be like the basketball game I saw between Detroit Finney and Warren DeLaSalle in the playofficiast week. It was a good clean game, not many fouls, no stupid plays. The lead seesawed back and forth for four quarters, then See O'CONNOR, page 2C

Solo sailor looks to 'ultimate challenge'

By Peggy O'Connor Sports Editor

Cristina Staats will decide to take on the biggest challenge of her life - sailing non-stop, alone, more than 500 miles up Lake Huron to Mackinac Island and down Lake Michigan to St. Joseph - the day she signs the check to pay her registration fee for the event ... and not a moment sooner.

Once she signs the check, the Grosse Pointe Farms mother of two will commit herself to what the Great Lake Singlehanded Society calls its "ultimate challenge."

There have only been two such events in the Society's history, in 1981 and 1984. Only 10 sailors have ever attempted the "Huron-Michigan Singlehanded Challenge"; just three were able to finish.

Staats, a veteran singlehanded sailor who has completed two Port Huron-Mackinac events alone, (and is one of only three women to have sailed it) says that if she does decide to complete the additional challenge, she'll do it for some very personal reasons.

"The challenge for me - like the solo challenge was - would be my personal mountain. If I can do this, I can do anything," Staats says.

Solo sailors are of a different breed . . . and they are a well-trained breed before they ever sail a big race alone. In order to compete in the GLSS challenge, the sailor must have completed a documented 1,000 hours as skipper of his/her own vessel, and have made a qualifying sail of no less than 100 miles over a 48-hour period.

It's also important to sail a boat in which the sailor is comfortable. Staats' first solo in 1981 was in a custom-made, 36-footer; her second in 1984 was in a 26-footer. "The bigger boat was a lot to handle, I had a much easier time with the smaller boat," she ex-

Staats sailed that first solo challenge in 1981 simply because she felt qualified to do it. "I'd been sailing for 13 years at that point and I saw an awful lot of other people around me doing things with fewer skills than I had. I thought to myself: 'if they can do it, I can," Staats says.

he vividly recalls sitting out in tually completed the ultimate and he the cockpit against the cabin in the said that the one characteristic a permiddle of Lake Huron riding out a terson needed to accomplish this was tenacity. You have to be someone who rible storm in the first event. "I keeps coming at a brick wall until you remembered how upset my mother was when I told her I planned on sailing the loosen the bricks. event. She told me that a woman with

"And that's the type of person I am." Fred Locke, of Port Huron, is one of two men to have finished the ultimate race twice. He advises Staats to focus on the Mackinac Bridge and don't make a decision on quitting until after she hits the Straits of Mackinac . . . if she decides to take the challenge.

"The worst time of the race is when you hit Mackinac Island and everybody else is done and you're barely halfway through," Locke says. "It's hard to pass up that party on the Island when you know that everybody is there having fun and relaxing and you've still got Lake Michigan ahead

"When I sailed it the first time, I knew when I hit the Island I could have dropped anchor for a while and rested. I didn't because I wasn't sure I'd want to go on if I had," Locke said.

The winds should be pretty fair for the June race, Locke says. Maybe. In his first ultimate, he finished in five days, despite the fact that the entire event was really a first. "To our knowledge, no one had done it before. Going into it, nobody really knew what we were taking on. So maybe I was a little more cautious in that first race."

In 1984, Locke set his sights on improving his time and at one point, was 18 hours ahead of his pace. "Then I hit the Manitou Islands and there wee 35 to 40 knot winds which weren't in the forecast. I tried to make it to Frankfort to get some rest, but all of a sudden, the wind died and I spent 40 hours drifting. That really killed me . . . it took almost six days to finish," Locke

For Locke's family, that's the hard part: not hearing from him for so long. That'll most likely be the thing that bothers Jack Staats and the Staats' children Elizabeth, 16, and Bill, 15, should Cris Staats decide to take on the ultimate.

If she does, it'll be in the 26-footer, adapted to make it easier for her to handle alone. It probably won't be as fast as the other boats, but she'll have to spend less time on the foredeck, which eases her mind somewhat.

"Yeah, I'm scared. And I have to work a little about getting into shape. And sure, sailing like this is a chore. But then again, having children is a chore. But when you do it, all you do is look back and feel good about what a terrific job you've done," Staats says.

"Like they tell me, you just take it

Sabres' victory sets up first place showdown

The Century 21-East Sabres prepared for this week's showdown for first place in the Over 30 league with Burke's by topping J & D, 4-1, and clinching a second place finish at the same time.

The Sabres came out flying, pressing the J & D squad early in the game. The Sabres' tenacious forechecking forced countless turnovers which resulted in four unanswered goals. Goal scorers were Jerry Rajter, Dennis Galli, Tony Morici and Kevin Roseborough.

The showdown for first place is set for 10 p.m. tonight, March 26, at the Grosse Pointe Community cial post-season game on March 21. Each team scored a goal in the first period; Nugent notched the Chiefs' tally from Watkins and Kisskalt. After the Penguins took a 2-1 lead in the second period, Kisskalt and Russell scored from Nugent (two), John McGlone and Kisskalt to secure the win.

Bantam Division CHIEFS-WINDSOR

It was a long trip home for the Chiefs, who suffered their first shutout loss of the season, 4-0, at the hands of the Windsor Nationals Bantam "A" team.

The Chiefs were never able to get on track in this road game and were beaten to the puck many times. Mike Watkins played well for the Chiefs and Jim Alderton — just back from an injury - seemed to return to his fast-skating form.

CHIEFS-WINDSOR

The Chiefs hosted the Windsor Nationals in a rematch and played them to a 1-1 tie. The Chiefs played much better in this game, which remained scoreless until the third period thanks to the fine efforts of the defense and strong backchecking by the forwards. Scott Soule put the Chiefs on top when he defeated Juan Ganum's shot from the point. But the Nationals remained on the attack and whistled a shot past goalie Blum for the tie. Jack McSorley and Ganum did some hard hitting for the Chiefs.

Finney took a 61-60 lead with three seconds left. DeLaSalle called a time-out, then inbounded the ball at the other end of the court. The senior forward took the ball, passed it to the 6:10 center who looked. thought about shooting and then thought better of it when he noticed that he had four Finney players draped all over him. So he fired the ball to the guard, who had managed to position himself just at the side of the net. With no time left, he lofted a shot into the net to give DeLaSalle a 62-60 win.

The fans streamed onto the court to congratulate the Pilots. It had been a fun game, unblemished by the crowd. Fans left the arena chattering excitedly about it being the best game of the year. It was, but in a way, it was also the worst because it may have been the last of its kind. I hope not.

Fatty acids — what you should know

Saturated. Unsaturated. Polyunsaturated. What do they all mean?

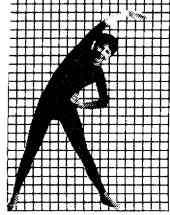

These are the names of three general types of fatty acids. The "good fats" are those which are unsaturated and polyunsaturated. The fats you should avoid are the saturated fats. People who have diets rich in saturated fats have been found more likely to develop heart disease.

Some of the following information may be surprising:

Saturated fats include: beef, butter, cheese (whole milk), chocolate, coconut, cream, ice cream, lamb, margarines (ordinary), pork, shortenings (hydrogenated), veal.

Unsaturated fats include: almonds, cashews, chicken, duck, olive oil, peanuts, peanut oil, pecans, turkey.

Polyunsaturated fats include: corn oil, fish, herring oil, margarine (special), safflower oil, soybean oil, walnuts, wheat germ oil.

Keep a watchful eye when reading labels. Polyunsaturated and unsaturated fats do not last long on the store shelf. They spoil. Food manufacturers increase the shelf life of their products by hydrogenating them. Warning signs for such additives are the words: hydrogenated, partially hydrogenated, hardened or partially hardened. That means an unsaturated or polyposaturated fat has now been saturated.

Get involved

Take your children to the grocery store with you and have them read the labels on food. Give them the job of being the family watchdog where nutrition is concerned. They'll love the important role and you'll be doing them a major service by educating them in the area of nutrition.

The coronary attack of middle age has its roots in childhood. In elementary schools, four percent of the children have elevated blood pressure, 10 to 20 percent have elevated blood fats and 19 percent carry too much body fat. Over 60 percent have at least one cardiac risk factor and 36 percent have two or more. Frightening? You bet it is!

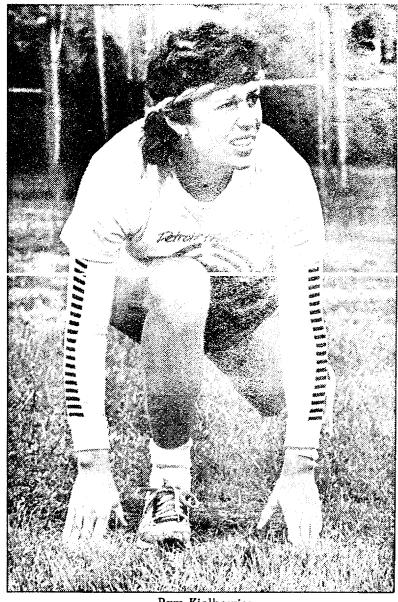

Do your part. Read labels and remind the kids that every double "cheese Whopper" has nine teaspoons of saturated fat. That's the thing we should be most aware of with the everpopular fast foods: the fat con-

Saturated fats tend to clog the arteries in our system, impeding the blood flow and setting us up for a heart attack

Your family's nutritional goal should be to control high risk factors early in life. It's never too early to start!

Running a marathon isn't exactly an easy task for anyone and for a beginner the experience can he overwhelming. The Woods' Pam Kielbowicz, a registered nurse at Saint John Hospital, overcame her aching cramps and other obstacles and completed her first 26.2 mile Detroit Free Press marathon race in just under five

"I wish I could have completed the course in less time, but I didn't count on the painful stomach cramps," she says.

Kielbowicz, who works in surgical intensive care, decided to train seriously for the marathon this time last spring. She then developed a recurring asthma problem but underwent treatment and continued to train for the Oct. 19 race.

"I feel that it has helped me to know my own capabilities," she says. "I tried not to let my problem with asthma get me down. Sometimes when I was running, I would feel an attack starting. I would use my inhaler and walk for a while until the attack subsided then I could continue to Kielbowicz started running gained," she says.

three years ago after the birth of her second child. "Running gives me time to meditate," she says. "It's a wonderful way to disperse my energy. And when I run, I am competing only with myself."

She supplements her training program with aerobics, rope jumping, cross country skiing and cycling with the Cadieux Cafe Easy Riders.

Kielbowicz has already been training for this year's marathon so she can improve her time. "I think I'll do a better job next time with the experience I have

Mary Smart Reprogramming = success

Ah, sweet spring, buds bursting, lawns greening; time to shed those heavy clothes of winter, experience the freedom from bulky coats and sweaters. But that also means swimsuit weather is not far away! Ahhckk! We once again resign ourselves to try one more diet, one more "quick fix." Do you struggle to lose 10 pounds only to regain 15, then move on to yet another "miracle diet?"

Well, the problem may or may not rest with your diet, (that's another topic completely). A major reason for the inablility to maintain weight loss may be that while you have acheived a thin body, you have retained a "fat" head. For example, do you give up your ritual bowl of ice cream while dieting, but constantly dream about the day, after losing those unwanted pounds, that you'll go back to all your favorite foods, especially those rich, creamy chocolate bars? If so, your head may still be "fat" and you will continue to struggle to maintain a healthy goal

Two things that cannot go together are a slim body and a "fat" head. You cannot return to previous eating habits and maintain your weight. It was those habits and that way of thinking that led to a weight problem in the first place.

So how do you rid yourself of a fat head? You must devote as much time to changing the way you think about yourself and food as you do to changing the way you're eating. This procedure is known as behavior modification: changing habits to support a goal. For the weight conscious it means learning to make correct food choices, to make exercise a daily habit and to take control of who you are and what you

Successful behavior modification involves education. You must learn what types of food to eat, why those foods are selected and how to prepare them. Learning and adopting new information takes time. Keep in mind that the eating habits which led to your weight problem have developed over a period of time and it will take time to change

Have you ever noticed that the words self-control, selfdiscipline, and self-motivation all begin with the word "self?" That is because to accomplish those attributes, you must begin with you.

Daydreams to reality

Another important concept is the self-fulfilling prophecy. William James said "Belief at the beginning of a doubtful undertaking is the one thing that will guarantee the success of any venture."

Think of your brain as a small, but complex computer. For years you have been running the same program: poor eating habits and a "fat head" image. Now you want your computer to do something different. You want it to make intelligent choices so you can lose weight and maintain that weight permanently. Consequently, you must reprogram your brain and supply it with the information necessary to accomplish the task successfully. The integral parts of that reprogramming are relaxation and visualization. Close your eyes, relax and visualize your weight loss as a reality. You can journey to the future and supply your brain with the information needed for success. Through visualization you can "see" a course of acceptable behavior in the present which will make your future goal attainable.

Wouldn't it be sheer heaven never having to diet again? It is something that can happen. But first you must understand that reaching a good weight for your body is not a destination ... it is a starting point for a lifetime free from obesity and the roller coaster ride of losing ang gaining, losing and gaining. And it is up to you to make changes, not only in your eating habits, but also in your behavior, to ensure a healthy and permanent weight maintenance.

Diet Center Relaxation Technique

1. Sit in a comfortable chair.

2. Starting with your right foot, tighten your muscles, relax. Now tighten your left foot, relax. Next, tighten the right leg, relax, now the left leg, relax. Work your way up your entire body, tighten the muscles, relax. Remember to breathe slowly and evenly.

3. Now that you are completely relaxed, (shake out any tightness that remains) close your eyes and visualize yourself at a favorite place. (This could be at the beach, the mountains, a favorite room.) Go through each part of your "vacation picture," noting the beautiful sounds, smells and colors. You are at peace with yourself. You like the way you look, you like the feeling of good health, you are in control of your world. 4. Spend at least 10 to 15 minutes on this "minivacation." Do not look at a clock. If other thoughts enter the picture, let themcome and go as feathers in the wind.

5. Now, at the count of three, open your eyes and stretch, again starting with your legs, working your way up your body.

6. Breathe easily, remembering how peaceful it felt in your special place. Promise yourself you will come back soon, because you felt so wonderful and full of promise.

Each time you practice the relaxation technique you will be able to imagine it in greater detail, and you will be able to imagine yourself in greater control over vour behavior.

'Burglar:' The comedy isn't especially funny

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

There's a scene in "Burglar," the new Whoopie Goldberg film, in which a rerun of "WKRP in Cincinnati" is showing on a television set in the background. Hugh Wilson, the director of "Burglar," was also one of the creative forces behind the popular TV sitcom. That little bit of allusion is what's called an inside joke on movie sets.

Too bad it's the only effective joke in "Burglar."

Indeed, for a so called comedy starring a so-called comedienne, there is little to laugh at through- life on the right track. Problem is, out the 90 minutes of this picture. And if mystery is supposed to be the hook here, it too fails to catch on. The problem, quite frankly, is that the film does not know what it wants to be. The choices are comedy and mystery. Since the comedy isn't funny, we're left with mystery. And since the mystery isn't mysterious, we're left with nothing.

there's a crooked ex-cop by the name of Kirschman (G.W. Bailey) who has evidence of her afterhours job, and he's constantly threatening to squeal if she doesn't share some of her goodies with him.

So he continues to blackmail and she continues to steal. One night Bernie is robbing an apartment when the owner comes home. Someone - she doesn't see who - murders the owner. Knowing that she will be convicted for the murder if she doesn't clear herself, Bernie investigates the case with the help of her hyperactive friend Carl (Bob Goldthwait). The police, meanwhile, are on her case.

Critic's choices

Who should get an Oscar?

Special Writer

Spring is in the air and that means many things. Flowers are beginning to peek out from under their soiled blankets, sailboats will soon dot local lakes and the Tigers will open the 1987 season in a few weeks.

But for avid moviegoers, spring means something entirely different – the Academy Awards. This year's event will take place, Monday, March 30, at 9 p.m. on Channel 7. To assist those who didn't have a chance to see all of the nominated films, a list of the contenders has been compiled below, along with this critic's choices for winners in each major category.

Best Picture: This year's nominees are all of very high quality, and singling one out should in no way lessen the impact of the others. "Children of a Lesser God" features strong performances from William Hurt and Marlee Matlin, both of whom are nominated in their respective categories. "Hannah and Her Sisters" is quintessential Woody Allen, and he received a directorial nomination for the film. "Platoon" is a stunningly descriptive and realistic look at the Vietnam war through the eyes of those who fought there. And "A Room with a View" is a subtle yet very poignant character study of a young woman's inner conflicts. The winner though, is "The Mission," because it combines intellect, emotion and sheer beauty better than any of its competitors.

Best Actress: Few of the performances given by the nominated actresses this year are memorably deep and exceptional. Jane Fonda was acceptable as a drunk, ex-actress in "The Morning After," but not especially engaging. Kathleen Turner was nothing special in "Peggy Sue Got Married," and Sigourney Weaver deserves an Oscar for "Aliens" about as much as Sylvester Stallone deserves one for "Rambo." Sissy Spacek was very quirky in "Crimes of the Heart," and hers is one of the two nominated performances that deserve the honor. Marlee Matlin, the deaf actress from "Children of a Lesser God," is the other, and she wins - not because she did such a good job for a handicapped person; she did a terrific job for any Best Actor: Since most viewers didn't see Bob Hoskins in "Mona Lisa" or James Woods in "Salvador," the list gets narrowed down a bit. Dexter Gordon is sublime as a venerable jazz saxophonist learning how to enjoy life in "Round Midnight." And Wiliam Hurt is as good in "Children" as he was in last year's "Kiss of the Spider Woman," for which he garnered an Oscar. But Paul Newman gets the nod for his portrayal of a fading pool shark in "The Color of Money," not only because Newman has never won before, but because this performance is one of the most rounded he's ever given.

Supporting Actress: Piper Laurie in "Children" and Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio in "The Color of Money" were satisfying but little else in their roles. Tess Harper, the nosy neighbor in 'Crimes of the Heart," is good. And Dianne Wiest is noteworthy as Mia Farrow's older sister in 'Hannah and Her Sisters.'' Maggie Smith wins though, for a role in "A Room with a View." As a pestering but well-meaning aunt to the film's center of interest, she balances her character's dramatic and comedic aspects with bra-a wonderful embodiment of radical thought as an aging sage in "A Room with a View." And Michael Caine is hilariously believable as a man trapped by his emotions in "Hannah and Her Sisters." By far the most inspired performance in the group though, is the one given by Dennis Hopper in "Hoosiers." As an alcoholic trying to get back on his feet while his son's basketball team is fighting for the state championship, Hopper created what is perhaps the most memorable characters of the year.

Best Director: The nominated directors are, with one exception, those responsible for the Best Picture nominations above. That exception is David Lean for "Blue Velvet." The other contenders are Allen for "Hannah and Her Sisters," Roland Joffe for "The Mission," James Ivory for "A Room with a View," and Oliver Stone for "Platoon." The winner is Joffe for "The Mission." He put brilliant performances, beautiful scenery and a host of less obvious elements into perfect harmony in his story of moral and religious

'Heat' won't help Burt

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

Quiet violence may seem to be a contradiction in terms, but in 'Heat," Burt Reynolds' first movie in three years, violence abounds. This absence of the usual racket of blazing shootouts and skidding tires fits in with Reynolds' laid-back portrayal of Nick Excabante, a compulsive gambler who dreams of making a killing at the gambling tables in Las Vegas and retiring to Venice.

Director R.M. Richards wastes no footage in establishing the fact that this screenplay, written by William Goldman, adapted from his novel of the same name, is a violent story.

The film opens with a young woman thrown from a car. She has been raped and beaten.

The next episode shows Reynolds sitting at a bar. He gets into a violent fight over a girl, a fight he loses to a rather wimpishlooking character.

What gives? Has Burt lost his touch?

And what is the connection with the first scene and where is the film going?

The scene showing Burt getting worked over is a staged fight to impress the girl. Reynolds is a Las Vegas tough with a mercenary past that has made him a legend in "Soldier of Fortune" magazine. He is often called upon for such tasks and worse.

As for the girl, she is a friend. Trading on that friendship, she enlists his aid to get revenge on the hoodlums who beat her up. It is not an easy assignment. Her assailant is the son of the head of a tough and influential group of hoodlums.

It is obvious that "Heat" is intended to be a showcase for Reynolds. It shows him as being fit, well able to take on a cortege of dangerous criminals under impossible circumstances.

Seeing him perform is good news to Reynolds' fans who have been disturbed by rumors of his failing health. "Heat" does not do much, however, for his ailing ca-

A PLACE TO HIDE by Evelyn Anthony

Sometimes labeled the Mistress of Romantic Suspense, Evelyn Anthony cannot actually be categorized so easily. Her novels are often pegged to current events; they sometimes deal with espionage and assorted intrigues, and they eschew popular conceptions of ideal-

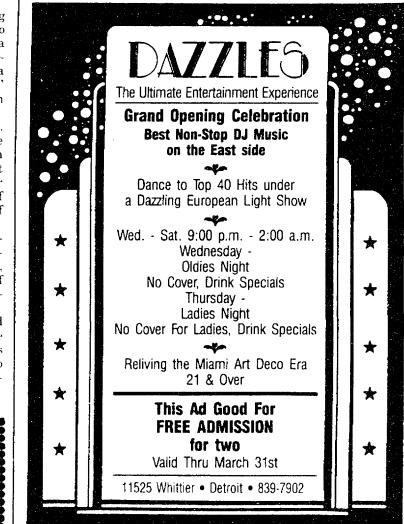

In A PLACE TO HIDE, Anthony describes an Anglo-Irish family with conflicting allegiances. A young man slowly develops an IRA partisanship. His half-sister, married to a British MP, does not share his feelings, but the closeness between them since childhood is never shaken. When the brother seeks escape from political assassins, she is certain that clues from the past will lead her to his hiding place. She is not alone in searching for that particular fox's blind.

Whatever else is contained in an Anthony novel, the overriding element is suspense, and A PLACE TO HIDE proves to be a - S.A.S.

There are a variety of looks from which to choose for spring '87. Skirts that are short and flirty and jackets that are short and cropped, as well as ankle-grazing skirts that are softly tapered with nipped in waists and worn with camisoles or off-the-shoulder bandeau tops, are all very much in evidence.

Perhaps the nicest aspect of this season's collections is the availability of these many different looks. No longer are women expected to adhere strictly to the dictates of a few chosen designers.

Today's designers are more aware than ever before of the variety of women that they cater to, and this has prompted them to create a multiplicity of looks to appeal to younger women, working women or mature women. However, clothing is no longer broken down into these specific categories.

Designers have also become aware of types of clothing that cross age and lifestyle barriers.

Sportswear, leisure activewear, and a wide variety of evening and weekend wear are showing up in any number of styles and hemlines, proving once more that today's women want, and are getting, a wide variety of fashion styles.

The short, full skirt has made its way back into the fashion scene and, for those with long, slender legs, this season offers the perfect opportunity to bare all.

Slightly different from the short "mini" skirts of the '60s, this season's short skirts are more romantic and flirtatious.

Shown either with crinolines or flounced and ruffled, these skirts have already started making their way into evening hour balls and parties. These skirts are also shown — in a more peasant look — for daytime wear.

Another option is represented by the longer, full-flared skirts accompanied by scarf-tied halters, softly belted jackets or camisoles and bustiers in luxuriously lightweight linens and silks.

The flattering shapes of designs such as these will easily take women from a day at the office, to a night on the town.

The "walking suit" — walking shorts with a matching jacket that is usually loosely constructed or softly belted — is making its way onto urban streets, and promises to be this season's answer to the tailored suit.

Black and white — a classic combination — can be spotted in everything from linen chemise dresses to those more tailored dresses with cap sleeves, cinched waists and soft pleating on the hip.

As always, white, paired with soft aqua blues or shades of peach rose, is important. White on white, separated by only a lizard belt, is a big look that has all the makings of a classic.

White is especially big in evening wear. Shown in organza, lace, embroidered linens and silk, it evokes the feminine prettiness of another time.

Halter dresses, those that V in the back, sundresses, and the new shoulder wrap bandeau style dresses are among the newest looks this season. Many designers have taken these romantic and feminine looks and pared them down or tailored them a bit. The result: Classic good looks that are, believe it or not, understated and elegant.

All in all, this season's most outstanding fashion contribution is the many options — short and long, tailored and feminine — now available to women when it comes to dressing in style.

Executive style in sportswear separates that mix feature and prints with authoritative panache by Constance Saunders for Richard Warren II. Left: The oversized navy and ivory rayon linen pincheck blazer opens over a diagonally striped silk shell blouse and navy linen pleat-front trousers belted with a mother-of-pearl buckle. Right: The draped navy and ivory silk print blouse complements the reed slim, pincheck skirt with its high narrow waistline and the clongated navy linen blazer dashed with an ivory pocket square. All separates are available in Misses sizes 4-14.

Light weight doubleface wool in navy and white shapes a beautifully tailored three piece suit from Pauline Trigere's Spring 1987 Collection. The long sleeved, V neck blouse is in "Creme de la Creme" silk jacquard.

The dash of unexpected color in executive separates by Constance Saunders for Richard Warren II. A brilliant Cezanne-inspired print jacket of silk charmeuse vividly colored in scarlet, yellow, black, and turquoise on a pure white ground sparks the pairing of the draped red silk jacquard blouse and sarong draped skirt. All separates are available in Misses sizes

Black and white positive/negative bow print in silk crepe de Chine makes a dramatic long sleeved dress and sleeveless coat costume from Pauline Trigere's Spring 1987 Collection. Jewelry by Trigere.

Pretty in pink — a dotted dazzler from the Spring 1987 Collection of Richard Warren, designed by Constance Saunders. The hot pink dotted silk jacquard top with a trapunto stitched hipband of white, blousons over a crisp, knife-pleated skirt, also in white.

The zebra stripe dress in black and sand linen weave has oversized patch pockets. A large companion scarf completes the look for Pauline Trigere's 1987 Spring Collection.

The Classic Cardigan: As Versatile as it is Indispensible

The cardigan has always enjoyed a certain place of honor in the fashion world but, this year and particularly this season, the cardigan becomes a separate that no woman should be without. A resurgence of strapless dresses, scarf-tied halter neck tops, sundresses, and the latest shoulder wrapped bandeau tops have made the cardigan an indispensable piece in any wardrobe.

Softer than a tailored jacket, the cardigan can be sporty or dressy depending on fabric, style and details such as buttons.

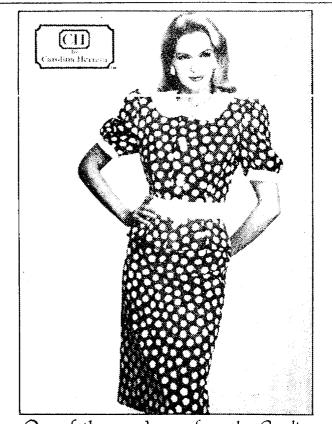

Aside from being very comfortable and easy to wear, the cardigan has a certain elegance and moneyed look that is hard to duplicate. In fabries such as eashmere it is truly luxurious.

However luxurious, cashmere is also probably one of the most practical fabrics you can buy in a cardigan. Warm and lightweight, it can be worn year round. It's perfect for traveling because of its weight and wearability.

A cashmere sweater can be worn with everything from shorts to a chemise, or teamed with a string of pearls, rhinestone buttons or silk shantung slacks for an evening look.

Last but not least, a cashmere cardigan sweater is an investment that you'll never regret making; it will last practically forever and never go out of style.

Plan wedding in keeping with your personal taste and lifestyle

A wedding is a celebration universal yet diversified in style and presentation. No other event creates as much joy and excitement - not only for the bride and groom but for everyone involved!

What makes it even more exciting today are the different options that are available to couples. Marriage today has no one formula. Whether you opt for getting married when you are older or younger, decide to have a dual-career marriage or a more traditional union, the one thing most brides and grooms agree on is that you can make your marriage what you want it to be.

This idea also carries over to the actual planning of the wedding. Most couples today share the responsibility of planning a wedding.

Getting involved in the planning of the ceremony as well as the celebration afterwards is the best way to make your wedding a personal statement of whom you

Choosing the vows with which you feel comfortable, or writing a good deal of the ceremony yourselves, can help make you feel that your wedding is a reflection of whom you are as a couple

Your reception, too, should be planned according to what you as a couple want

There are many types of receptions from which today's bride and groom can choose. A traditional sit-down dinner is as popular as ever. Many couples like the orderly, organized feeling this type of seating arrangement conveys. Large as well as small groups can accommodate themselves to this type of arrangement.

A buffet dinner is also very popular. More casual in feeling, this type of reception allows people to move freely amongst the other guests

A buffet dinner also allows the bride and groom more freedom when choosing a menu. With this type of dinner, an appealing variety of dishes can be served. Also, in many cases, a buffet dinner is less expensive than the traditional sitdown reception.

Another alternative that is becoming increasingly popular is a cocktail hour reception. Similar to a buffet reception, a cocktail reception usually includes champagne with hot and cold hors d'oeuvre being circulated, or a buffer table with hors d'oeuvre that people can help themselves to, and a bar complete with wine as well as hard liquor.

For those more interested in a reception with a "country feeling," outdoor luncheons complete with tent or awning are always nice. You might even want to serve a picnic lunch complete with individual baskets that would make the event fun as well as easier to serve!

It is always the small details that really stand out when it comes to judging which receptions are the most special.

Balloons, ribbons or netting — all relatively inexpensive — can add a special flair when it comes to decorating for a wedding reception.

Flowers - whether exotic or wild add to the ambiance, as does music. Both flowers and music can run into some money, so it is best to research the different types available to you.

Flower arrangements range from potted plants placed on tables and arranged strategically throughout the reception area to wild flowers strewn in baskets, to the very delicate single white lily in a

There is music to suit everyone's taste and, because it is a universal language you can be sure that no matter what type you choose, it is sure to be enjoyed by most everyone.

With so many options to choose from in terms of both lifestyle and types of weddings, today's couples have to remember to follow their hearts and do what reflects their personal taste and style

Short, full crinoline skirts, reminiscent of can-can girls and the Moulin Rouge. are thrown in for color and a touch of

As always, jewelry plays an important role in achieving a sense of style. And, the cultured pearl, whether simple or elaborate, classic or dramatic, remains the perfect accompaniment to this season's ladylike looks.

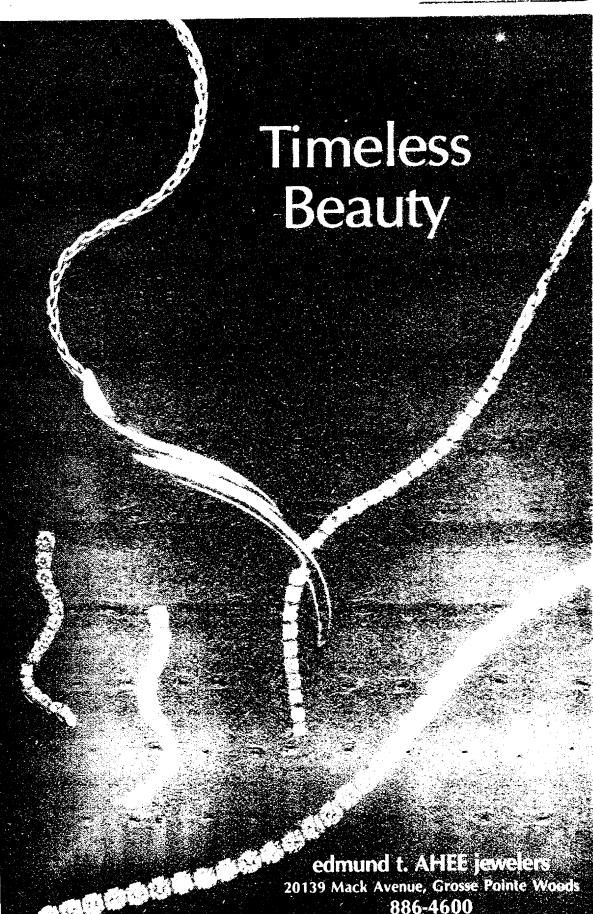

Throughout the ages, pearls have come to represent regality. It is no wonder then that cultured pearls are more popular than ever.

A return to "quality dressing" and classic moneyed looks has put real pearls cultured or natural - in the spotlight once again. Timeless and elegant, flattering to all skin tones, cultured pearls can be worn for day or evening.

This season's strapless dresses and shoulder wrapped bandeau tops are perect for displaying a cultured pearl neck lace. Especially pretty is a single strand choker or multiple strand "dog collar" with a gemstone clasp.

The more conservative longer skirts with camisole tops and matching jackets or cardigans, or the sportier new linen walking short "suits" (shorts that are longer and resemble culottes with a matching jacket), require jewelry that is just as subtle and chic

A classic single strand matinee length cultured pearl necklace or a pair of mabe pearl earrings edged in gold are perfectly simple yet sophisticated choices for

Italian geometrics capture spring fashion scene

Always on the leading edge of high fashion ready-to-wear, leading Italian designers seen at the recent Donna Moda Show in New York, sponsored by the Italian Trade Commission, predict a strong trend toward futuristic geometric shapes both in silhouettes and fabrics—for spring '87 fashions.

Sportswear, separates, knitwear, eveningwear and leathers all go "Back to the Future" in terms of bold, dramatic paterns, always with clean, definite lines and a strong balance in proportion. The look is, however, always tempered with an easy, relaxed femininity — dramatic, yet not overstated.

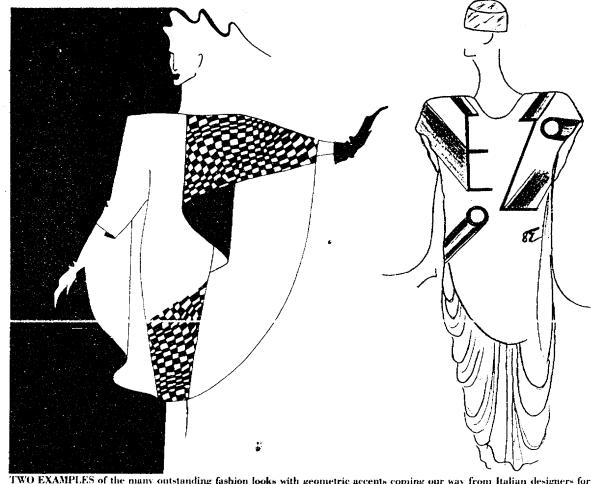

Fabrics receive special emphasis, and are cool, natural and easygoing — crepe de chine; crisp cottons and linens; silk, cotton and linen jerseys and lightweight, versatile gabardines.

Exotic fabric combinations underscore the best that Italian designers have to offer: Famous Italian knits with leather, jersey with leather, silk with snake or lizard.

Stripes are imaginatively mixed with other geometrics — look for solids, colorful plaids, contrasting floral prints, and assertive combinations of polka dots and stripes.

Shapes are feminine and flattering, rounding the curves with body-conscious ease. Shoulders are broad but not exaggerated, as the timeless elegance of classic couture is reinterpreted for the '80s.

Italian designers are known throughout the world for their fresh, dynamic and forward-thinking contributions to fashion. With the intriguing fabric mixes, feminine shapes and outstanding geometrics they bring to the fashion scene for spring '87 they continue to flatter and enhance the female form.

TWO EXAMPLES of the many outstanding fashion looks with geometric accents coming our way from Italian designers for spring '87. Black and white geometrics enliven the sleeve and hem of the crepe de chine dress by Eli Colaj; bold graphics add a sense of the dramatic to the black jersey dress with softly draped skirt by Emanuel Zoo.

EXCITE THE EYES of those around you with the lively, jazzy designs of Miguel Cruz. Straight from his men's spring and summer collection for '87, come the electric patterns of roundneck pullovers in cotton and linen intarsia, in four colors: blue, denim, azure and white.

MEN'S ACCESSORIES ARE MAKING THEIR MARK

The corporate world has never been known for its fashion éclat. Nevertheless, while for men, pin stripe suits, wing tip shoes and white shirts are still considered de rigueur, some originality and flash, in the form of accessories, has of late begun to creep into the staid corporate world of American business.

On urban streets everywhere, men in trenchcoats and horn-rimmed glasses can be seen wearing brightly colored scarves in jade greens, stripes and plaids.

What is even more revealing is that. beneath their trenchcoats, these urban professionals are sporting an assortment of braces or suspenders in every conceivable color, and in patterns that range from stripes to paisleys, plaids and polka

Available in a variety of styles and fabrics, braces have taken the corporate world by storm and added a touch of fun and whimsy to the men's fashion world — a luxury long enjoyed exclusively by women.

What is less surprising is that men are enjoying this opportunity of taking their-selves and their clothing less seriously. for it is now easy enough for any man, young or old, successful or just starting out, to sport a pair.

Suspender appeal seems to cross all age barriers, with younger men enjoying the outrageousness of a pair of braces dotted with dollar signs or tennis racquets, and older men enjoying the sense of old world charm that they impart.

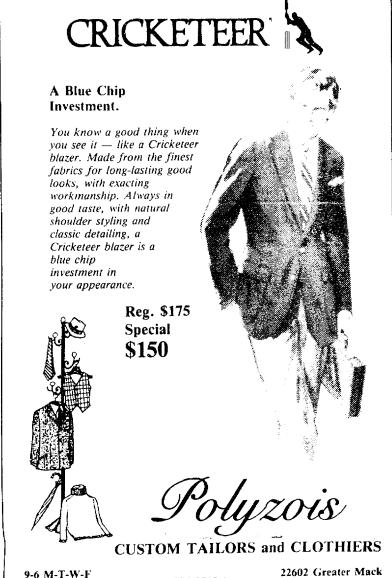

Ties too have become a way for men to express their creativity and individuality. Rich paisleys, bold geometrics and jungle prints are showing up on all age groups.

Men are discovering what women knew all along, that a little color and fun in dressing can go a long way toward making it an enjoyable experience.

Men's Jewelry Comes of Age

Distinctive accessories for the well dressed man are the choice for the men of the '80's. The right piece of jewelry affords the expression of individuality and personal style. No longer do we see the watch - and - a - wedding - band - only rule for today's man. Chains, bracelets, and cufflinks have gained popularity with a growing enthusiasm for accessories such as key rings, money clips, tie tacks and bars, collar pins and tuxedo studs.

Men don't agree that diamonds are only a girl's best friend. Currently the Diamond is reported to be the favorite stone among men while Black Onyx and Lapis are other notable contenders.

THE UNDENIABLE CLAS-SIC – a navy worsted wool suit by Evan-Picone for Men. Wearing this uncontestable winner is like wearing a welltailored tapestry. The 100 percent worsted wool fabric reveals differing shades of color, as subtle, yet precise lines of rose, blue and wheat converge and intersect to compose distinctive overchecks. With natural proportions, a design focus emerges, guided by the traditional sense of two-button, singlebreasted styling, with notched lapels, center vent and flapped pockets.

This season, hats - and for that matter, all types of headgear, including turbans and wide headbands in cotton jersey or terry - are very much in evidence

The romantic look of the large circular hat can still be found, but more apparent are the smaller scale cap style hats that include knotted bands, sailor caps and boaters. This newer, smaller hat is both functional and sassy.

How to choose

There are many bodices to suit all types of figures and personalities. "A young woman should choose whatever she feels comfortable in," suggests buyer Susan Thompson of Susie's, a national chain of women's apparel stores.

"There are high necks for those who like to keep covered up, and bustiers for the more daring. But the most popular seem to be dresses that can be worn either on or off the shoulder.

White remains popular color

White continues to be the big prom color, with pink running second. Other pastels, such as aqua, peach and yellow, also look pretty. There are some brights, but "not too many." says Ms. Thompson, and a few black and white combinations.

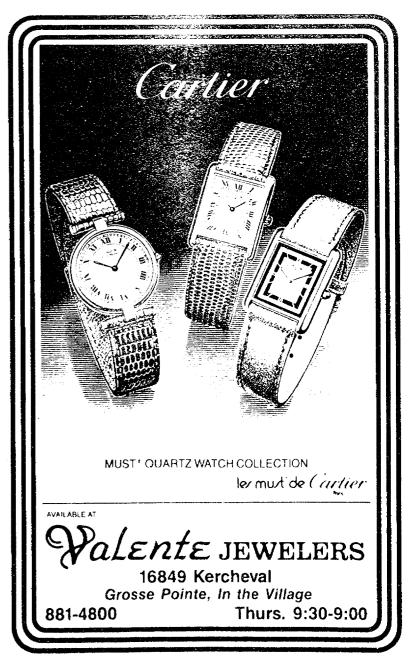

To-the-floor lengths are the most popular, but tea lengths, which fall mid-calf, and the exciting new party lengths, which end at the knee, add variety.

Accompanying these dresses are fun accessories like faux pearl and jewel necklaces and earrings. Decorative hair combs and small handbags also add to the feminine look on that very special

Striding into spring

LOOK SHARP — Styles for spring '87 are sleek, sophisticated and pared-down for a look that's crisp and trim, but still soft. City shorts, left, by Ron Leal for Betty Hanson & Co., are worn with a soft cardigan and a subtly patterned cotton shirt. A mannish hat tops off the outfit. Classic coordinates, center, are by Bill Blass, who opts for bright colors and bold stripes to complement the clean lines he favors. # Decorated denim resurfaces as fashion and art leaders customize an American denim classic

The current resurgence in the popularity of decorating good old basic denim is bringing out some of the hottest, most imaginative and downright zany forms of fashion self-expression in years. And the revival is widespread.

There is a lot that can be done to denim. Some of the most impressive examples have come from more than 85 top fashion designers and artists, including Yves St. Laurent, Kenzo, Hermes, Andy Warhol and Keith Haring.

They each took a century-old American classic — a Levi's denim jacket — and created one-of-a-kind wearable art, all of which was auctioned off recently at a charity fund-raising event.

The creations included glittery and elegant evening looks with sparkling rhinestones, sea pearls, fur, suede and leather trim; jackets with floral appliqués, quilted silk linings and silver stud work; colorful back-of-the-jacket artwork; and, in the outrageous category, a bolero jacket with fir tree sleeves and holly wreath scarf. Madonna, one of several celebrity models, wore a multicolored design by Martin Burgoyne.

You don't have to be a fashion leader or an accomplished artist to get into the act.

Virtually anyone can dress up their denim easily and inexpensively, and many people nationwide are doing just that. You can see it on urban streets, college campuses, prime time TV shows and even among the fashion-forward social set.

Spring is upon us, and the new colors for "87" are the soft muted pastels. Such as peach soft and supple, or moss moist and cool. How about tantalizing toast or calm cream colors to indulge yourself in? Or go back to the basics with black and white which are always a delight.

A short history of cool, durable and inconspicuous cotton khaki

In 1846, an otherwise obscure, Punjab-based Britisher named Lieutenant Harry Lumsden came to the realization that there were few greater idiocies in the world than blundering through India in a uniform of sweltering and peacockish bright red felt.

Protocol aside, he therefore cast aside his scarlet tunic and reached into his steamer trunk for the one garment in his entire kit that was suited to the oppressive climate - his pajamas.

Borrowing a trick from the locals, he dyed the natural cotton with an extract of a native plant called mazari, and from that day forth he distinguished himself as the only comfortable Anglo-Saxon south of Liverpool. He distinguished himself, as well, as the inventor of khaki.

Genius does not need to proselytize, and Harry Lumsden, having made his breakthrough, did nothing more than go about his business unchafed and unconstrained. But so clearly superior, albeit in the quietest of ways, was his attire that other far-flung Englishmen groped toward emulation.

Not privy to the secret of mazari, howtheir cottons with coffee, tea, tobacco juice, ink and mud. It wasn't until 1884, in fact, that a standard tawny dye was patented back home in Manchester.

But no matter - 1846 will stand as the year in which the spirit of khaki was made manifest, in which Western man reached a plateau of evolution wherefrom he could see that it was absurd, unnecessary and pathetic to be outshone, incommoded and tyrannized by one's clothes.

Khaki. The word derives from the Hindustani word for dust. Not a very romantic association, but then, khaki never set out to be romantic. Still, just as style had beaten a path to Harry Lumsden's door around 1846, so romance came to khaki, around the turn of the present century, largely through its adoption by a new breed of journalists known as foreign correspondents.

In peacetime, correspondents were suave and worldly devils, and in wartime they were heroes. Decades before Hemingway defined guts as "grace under pressure," front-line scribes were already turning out dispatches within spitting distance of exploding shells.

During the Spanish-American War, no loss a wordsmith than Stephen Crane was reporting on the hostilities in Cuba

For Crane, a red badge might have been just the thing for proving courage; for demonstrating common sense in extremis, however, it could only be khaki cool, durable, and sensibly inconspicuous against the sandy backdrop of Havana. What worked in Havana worked, too, in the savannah, as Teddy Roosevelt would amply illustrate in his sanguineous East African expeditions.

But T.R. did more than bring khaki to a new part of the world. Under his squinty yet visionary aegis, khaki cloth reached its apotheosis by being wedded to the outline of the safari jacket.

Like milk and cookies, like Burns and Allen, this was a match that had to be, and, by the 1940s, Hollywood, with its splendid knack for trivializing an epic to foster a myth, had made the epauletted khaki jacket a staple in the wardrobes of its mega-manly romantic leads.

Now, in the eighties - well, it's not exactly that khaki has reemerged, since it was never gone; rather it's that the glare and blather have subsided around it, letting khaki's mild merits shine serenely through.

Which leads us to ponder the bottomline reason for knakl's remarkable per-sistence. Alone among the world's myriad of cloths, cotton khaki has transcended ali its associations, whether Imperial, venatical or cinematical, to remain precisely what it is, nothing more and nothing less. And this, in turn, has intimately to do with the sane and simple purpose for which khaki was first devised: From the moment that mazari first touched Harry Lumsden's p.j.s. the whole idea was to achieve a garment that would blend in, absent itself and come as close as possible to disappearing. One didn't want to draw fire; one didn't want to show grime.

Well, khaki still disappears, and its disappearance still constitutes the crux of its delicate magic. Not that one worries unduly these days about Punjabi ambuscades or looking dusty after a grueling day of facing the haboob.

On the other hand, one has more cause than ever for concern about being upstaged by, and lost within one's clothes. Shrouded in designer labels, manacled by someone else's notions about what goes with what, the individual personality shrivels like an ancient

The spirit of khaki lies precisely in the recognition that drama inheres not in clothes but in the personality of the wearer. Either the wearer is the star of the show, or the show isn't worth anything. Khaki seems, somewhere in its cotton soul, to know that.

This spring wear accessories that have a rich look

Rich and elegant are the key words for accessories this spring. Graphic shapes, a mix of metals and sophisticated materials combine to bring a distinct regal feeling to spring's rich looks.

Aris Isotoner, the leading glove and accessories manufacturer, suggests these accessories as some of the season's winning looks:

• The Big Belt - The focus on the waist in ready-to-wear means big, beautiful belts. Look for alligator, "moc-croc," metallics, black patent, iridescent snakeskins in pastel colors, and "denim" leather. Structure will be important and buckles will be classic or geometric. Oversize Bows — As hairstyles grow longer, calling for romantic hats and hair accessories, the return of the big bow in a range of materials such as silk, velvet, taffeta and linen seems natural.

Other headwear growing in importance this spring are lace headbands (especially eyelet), hair clips and barrettes, tortoise headbands, oversize natural straw hats and cloches.

• Gorgeous Gloves - The perfect gloves for neat, clean dressing this spring are short white cotton gloves, lace gloves and light colored leather gloves in bone, white and camel.

For those romantic evenings, Aris suggests over-the-elbow in white or black, or any length as long as they're adorned with rhinestones or sequins.

• Sophisticated Scarves - The right touch at the neck calls for just the right scarf - from abstracts and florals to stripes and animal motifs.

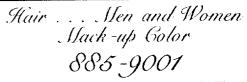

Squares and oblongs are the shapes to look for, as is the color brown, from taupe to chocolate.

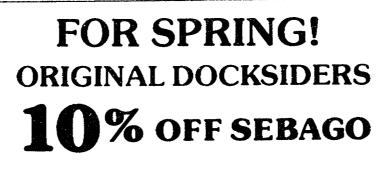

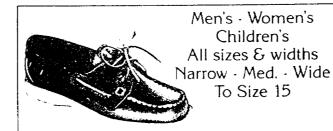

Get more mileage out of your pearls with a 14K "Pend-a-lock." An innovative way to combine a strand of pearls with your favorite pendants for a whole new look. Available at Valente Jewelry, Grosse Pointe.
