Spell 'perseverance': Brownell student Brian Duignan's got it

With the thrill of being the second-best speller in the state under his belt, Brian Duignan is already planning to enter the contest again next year.

Easter!

A time to reflect on Christendom's most solemn holy day and a time for Easter eggs and bunny rabbits and a new outfit. In a lighter vein, 9year-old Maggie Mowbray of the Woods, a student at Monteith, greets a larger-than-life bunny who will be passing out balloons and candy on Mack Avenue in the Farms this weekend. In another life, the hig bunny is 22-year-old Dennis Vandekerckhove.

A contingent of Park officials and engineers is scheduled to meet today with Detroit Mayor Coleman Young's representatives to discuss the politically explosive issue of the threat of flooding from Fox Creck.

The two sides will go over several elements of the plan submitted by the Park Flood Plain Study Committee to the Park council-March 23 and will evaluate the costs, City Manager John Crawford said.

The flood committee recommended that Detroit build a seawall on the eastern edge of Fox Creek, from Jefferson to Lake St. Clair, to remove the threat of flooding to 975 homes in the flood plain. Nearly one-fourth of all of the properties in Grosse Pointe Park are located in the federally designated flood plain.

Hertel wants repeal of IRA penalty

Congressman Dennis M. Hertel (D-Harper Woods) introduced legislation to repeal the 10 percent penalty for early withdrawal of money from Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs).

"IRAs were established to encourage savings; however, the 10 percent early withdrawal penalty discourages many would-be investors," Hertel said.

IRAs became popular during the early 1980s after the Economic Recovery Act of 1981 expanded IRAs to cover almost all workers. IRA tax deferrals were designed as a major national retirement saving incentive.

Under the Tax Reform Act of 1986, IRA-deductible contributions were capped at $25,000 annual income for single people and $40,000 per year for married cou-

"I am confident that this measure, which is aimed at the lower income earners, will help stimulate long-term savings," he continued.

In Canada, where a savings plan similar to the IRA has been in existence since the late 1950s. the number of moderate income level contributors exceeds the U.S. plan.

The major difference between the IRA and the Canadian plan is there is no penalty for early withdrawal in the Canadian plan. Statistics show that Canadians are not withdrawing earlier, but prefer having that option available.

The bill to revoke the 10 percent penalty on early withdrawal of IRA funds, H.R. 1404, was introduced by Hertel on March 4 and is pending in the Ways and Means Committee.

Parents discuss ways to curtail teens' hotel parties

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

Woods Municipal Court Judge Patricia Schneider spoke to about 45 parents of high schoolers at South High School April 8. Her topic: teen-agers and hotel parties. The meeting was sponsored by South's Mother's Club and South's Parent Support Group.

"It's difficult to be parents of teen-agers," Schneider said. Her knowledge is first hand. She's been α resident for 23 years and has four children who graduated from Grosse Pointe public schools. Schneider has been a municipal court judge for the last five years.

She clarified several points about local and state laws that apply to teen-age drinkers. "If minors are in a car with alcoholic beverages — even unopened beer cans — they all can be charged,"

"Altering a license is, to me, an alcohol-related offense," she said. "There is no other reason for altering a license. It's a misdemeanor. The child can go to jail. If he or she is convicted, it's a mandatory suspension of his driver's license for one year. Mandatory.

Someone in the audience pointed out that police cannot go into a house where the party is being held unless they've been called by someone inside the house. "Unless there is probably cause that an offense is taking place," she said. "Probable cause can mean seeing a kid come out of the house drunk, or seeing a kid carrying a

Parents at the Wednesday evening meeting were interested in finding ways to prevent hotel owners from renting rooms to teen-agers for prom night and weekend drinking parties. They asked about the legal aspects of teen hotel parties and explored ways to prevent hotels from renting to teens. They also discussed ways to discourage the widespread illegal consumption of alcohol by Grosse Pointe teen agers at school parties, in limousines, at house parties and after school.

They were clearly worried about teenage drinking.

Tom Teetaert, assistant principal at North High School, said. Every weekend some kids somewhere in Grosse Pointe are picked up for underage drinking. I have yet to see one who's paid a penkids are winning.

staffed. The offender would have to be supervised and the hospital would have to cooperate. She said that sentencing of teen-age drinkers 17 and older is an individual, case-by-case matter. Punishments can range from jail sentences to community service to fines. Rehabilitation and counseling is often included as part of her sentences for teen-age drinkers.

Parents were interested in circulating a petition, gathering signatures and sending copies to hotels. The petition explains that hotel parties are an increasingly popular way for teen-agers to hold unchaperoned illegal drinking parties and "as concerned adults, we agree to recommend and patronize only those hotels and motels whose policies would not permit such gatherings and activities by minors.

Bonnie Levitan, coordinator of student activities at South, said she was pleased with the turnout of parents at the meeting - especially because parents represented both North and South high schools. "It shows a lot of concern about teen-age drinking," she said, adding that the teen drinking problem will not be solved immediately. But, like the recent tightening of attendance policies and smoking regulations, "Kids seem to be welcoming more structure in their lives.

Library plans not cast in stone

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

The concept for the three Grosse Pointe libraries just grew like Topsy as the committee got deeper into planning, the architect told the school board Monday.

"We found a prevailing attitude of 'if we're going to do it, let's do it right'," architect David Milling

The Woods branch provides an example. The committee started out with the idea of adding some space, some parking and a few bushes for a total of about $550,000. But, Milling explained, there was feeling against plunk-

Mack and Vernier, so the committee tried to reconsider the whole parking concept.

"When you try to solve the parking problem, you look at the whole site, you reorient the building," Milling said. The current plan calls for wrapping an addition bigger than the old library around the central core. Costs are up to $1.4 million.

But it's only a goal.

"It's an ideal," Milling said. "It doesn't have to cost that much.'

One of the expenses in the project is that the committee hopes to buy new furniture for the public

> Nothing obligates the board to spend that figure, or any other figure on the list, Milling said repeatedly throughout the meeting.

At Central Library, which Milling called his "most interesting challenge," the committee has to work around a building with historical architectural importance.

"You cannot add height to a Breuer building without dramatically altering the building," Milling said. "We are not sympathetic to that." Instead, he plans to extend the addition out the back along Fisher Road, where it will not be visible from Kercheval.

No decisions were made and little discussion was held at Monday's meeting. Several board members noted that changes in the plans are likely to be made.

"We're getting closer to a clear idea of the cost options," said Superintendent John Whritner. 'We'll have to have a joint meeting and whittle away and narrow down.

Board President Vincent Lo-Cicero said that until the parking problems are solved, the plans really can't be made definite. The district has asked the city for a parking variance for the site. Meetings to discuss the request are continuing.

Vice President Fred Adams concurred. "The crux of the whole thing is parking," he said.

Roland didn't start out to teach German in this country. She worked as a legal secretary for many years before agreeing to substitute in a community education German class.

That was 16 years ago. She has taught continuously since.

She continued as secretary to Judge Kaufman in Wayne County Circuit Court until four years ago when she retired.

"My husband retired, too," she said. "And I started looking in the papers for a job for him, when I saw an ad for language teachers."

The ad had been placed by the Carl Duisberg Society, though Roland didn't know it at the time. She went through a number of interviews where the exact nature of the job was not specified.

"I acted like I knew all about it." she said, "though I didn't, I kept thinking, am I being recruited for the CIA or FBI?"

In the end, Roland was informed that she was the successful candidate, out of a field of 14 applicants. She was introduced to the company and its mission to further international understand-

Edison to trim trees in Farms soon be heard in Grosse Pointe Farms. An Asplundh Tree Expert crew, under contract to Detroit Edison, will be trimming trees away from electrical wires.

Trees overgrown into electrical wires can be a major source of power outages, especially during a summer thunderstorm or winter ice storm, Edison reports. Removing or trimming trees away from wires decreases the chances of an interruption in electrical power.

Samuel Lucido, Edison's general foreman-tree clearance said, "We will trim about 6,000 trees this year in Grosse Pointe Farms, all according to National Arborist Standards. We trim all the way to the main branch, so that stubs are not left to encourage insects and disease. It as well as healthier.'

Detroit Edison generally requests a clearance of eight feet the case of faster growing trees, such as silver maples, Siberian elms and poplars, trimming may be necessary. All large saw cuts place to plant them.

The sounds of chain saws will are sprayed with a tree wound dressing containing a growth inhibitor.

The company sends a representative to determine what work has to be done. Residents can help by taking a look in their yards before the representative arrives to see what trees may need removal or trimming away from wires.

For needed trim work, the representative obtains verbal agreement from homeowners. For tree removal, a signed written permit is required. If the resident isn't home during an inspection, a yellow tag will be left on the doorknob detailing the work to be done and requesting a signature.

When the crew arrives, they will perform the work previously agreed to by the customer. If needed, the crew will remove makes the trees more attractive small to medium-sized trees and cut them into manageable lengths for firewood or grind them into woodchips depending between trees and wires, but in on the residents' preferences. State could pay high price for its tax reform

Taxes continue to be the most controversial issue in Michigan politics even though the next state election is more than 18 months away. That conclusion is based on the hassle that has broken out in Lansing between the Republicans and Democrats over Gov. James Blanchard's new state property tax program.

The fact that neither of the Detroit daily papers is especially happy about the governor's proposals adds to the controversy. But while the income tax caused most of the tax controversy last year, it is now the property tax that is the center of the debate.

Not that the income tax cut has been approved, even though it is likely that some Opinion reduction, probably from the current 4.6 percent rate to 4.4 percent, eventually will be agreed upon.

What arouses most criticism in the governor's program is that it amounts to another tax shift, rather than an overall property tax reduction. The proposed $200 million in tax relief would go chiefly to homeowners earning less than $50,000 a year and would be paid for by closing what the governor terms tax loopholes that favor banks, insurance companies and others and by taxing state lottery winnings and the pay of active military personnel.

Also involved in the controversy is the fact that Michigan will reap a $178 million windfall from the new federal tax law revisions that become effective this year. Unless something is done to return these funds to taxpayers or to cut the income tax rate, it means that some people will pay higher overall taxes this year even if the governor's program is approved.

However, the Senate already has passed and sent to the House, not only a bill to cut the income tax rate to 4.4 percent, but another series of bills to increase tax exemptions for the blind, elderly poor and other citizens who otherwise would have to pay higher state income taxes as a result of the federal legislation.

With both parties now apparently dedicated to tax relief of one kind or another, some kind of compromise is likely to be worked to achieve that goal. Unfortunately, the emphasis on tax cuts to stimulate economic growth now has such high priority in Lansing that other needs, such as improving education, reforming welfare, repairing highways and bridges and making other internal improvements, are unlikely to be met. As a result, we question the price of the patchwork tax reform now being debated in Comprehensive tax reform is what is needed in Michigan rather than the continued application of Band-Aids in the form of tax cuts that may provide minor tax relief to some individuals, but little overall benefit to the state's economy.

Vol. 48, No. 16, April 16, 1987, Page 6A

Thank you, Dorothy Kennel s we have done in the past, the Grosse Pointe News again this year plans to interview, as part of our news and editorial coverage of the school board campaign, the seven candidates for the two posts on the board that will be filled in the June 8 election. Before we start that task, however, we want to pay a deserved tribute to a school board member, Dorothy Kennel, who is retiring this year after serving two full terms, or eight years, on the board. She also has served as board chairman and as treasurer, a post she is filling in this, her retiring year.

In supporting Mrs. Kennel four years ago, the News said she deserved re-election "because of her service during the past four years, because of her experience as a kindergarten teacher in the Grosse Pointe schools and because of her continuing interest in maintaining quality education in the sys-

In the past four years, she continued to show that same interest in maintaining quality education in the Pointes. It was not an easy time to serve on the board, with controversies continuing over school building closing and other reorganization moves that to some extent divided the community.

Despite the strong feelings expressed on these matters, Mrs. Kennel did not favor a public referendum on them. Instead, she felt that the board itself should make the decisions after listening to community reaction to the proposals. In our opinion, that was the reaction of a responsible public official who felt she was elected to assume the burden of making such official decisions, controversial as they might be.

While she served under three superintendents, she was never known as a rubber stamp for the school administration. Instead, she showed the initiative of a good school board member in developing policy proposals of her own while avoiding any interference with strictly administrative mat-

Serving on the school board, even in a community with as excellent a system as we have in the Pointes, is never an easy assignment. Over the years, however, the Pointes have been blessed with many fine citizens who have been willing to contribute their time and leadership to this service. Mrs. Kennel surely has been one of the best and most responsible.

Good news for the Pointes

he story in last week's issue of the Grosse Pointe News reporting on the agreement between the Farms council and Wayne County for the resurfacing of Lakeshore Road was good news for Pointers and for everyone else who drives Lakeshore regularly.

The agreement also appears to represent a long-delayed dividend that Pointers finally are going to receive as a result of the abolition of the Wayne County Road Commission which for years had stubbornly refused to negotiate with the Farms over the resurfacing of the highly traveled road.

When the project is completed, perhaps by next fall, Pointers also will reap another dividend. It is expected that the resurfacing will reduce the flooding of Lakeshore near Provencal and Tonnecour by improving drainage even though the road still will be flooded during periods of high winds and storms.

Under the agreement, which covers Lakeshore from Warner Road to the north city limits, the Farms agreed to pay roughly onethird of the cost or about $320,000 while the county will pick up the balance of about $715,000. City officials estimated that about a half-mill of the taxes to be levied in 1987 will be attributed to the Lakeshore improvement. It is estimated that the half-mill levy would raise about $150,000 with the balance of the city's share coming from city surpluses in other funds.

The project will include capping both the external and interior curbs on Lakeshore. It also may include a new left-hand lane at Lakeshore and Moross. That construction is needed for safety, City Manager Andrew Bremer told the council, and if approved, would cost an additional $20,000.

All in all, it appears that the Farms council, the city administration and the Wayne County officials responsible deserve praise for their joint efforts in reaching an agreement to improve a roadway that for years has bedeviled motorists from the Pointes and elsewhere who travel it on a regular ba-

From all accounts, both sides, meaning the city and the county, showed a new willingness to cooperate and to compromise. As a result, the city agreed to make a substantial contribution to the resurfacing costs and the county said it would pick up the major share. Since the money will come from state gas tax receipts, a lot of it will be paid by the daily drivers on Lakeshore.

When the resurfacing is completed by next fall, critical comparisons made by motorists about the differences between the road surfaces in the Farms and in the Shores, which signed its own peace pact with the county several years ago to achieve the resurfacing of its share of Lakeshore, also ought to come to an end.

No consensus

on abortion

To the Editor:

A letter to the editor on March 12 gave a detailed description of the early development of an embryo after conception. That these changes occur essentially as stated in no way leads to the conclusions that an embryo is a "human being," and abortion is therefore murder. Because an embryo has the potential to become a human being does not mean one can logically conclude that it is a human being. An acorn has enormous potential, but it clearly is not an

This writer assumed that because her "facts" came from her midwife grandmother, they were irrefutable. In truth, there is no consensus on the question of abortion in the medical community, nor is there a consensus among the public in general. However, innumerable surveys have shown that the great majority of Americans do not agree that abortion is murder and do not want it to be illegal. again.

Like many others who are anti-choice, this writer ignores the fact that we live in a pluralistic society, the foundation of which is based in large part on the concept that on personal and religious issues like abortion. one group cannot force its views on the entire populace. If we should lose sight of this fact, we are in danger of also losing some of our most fundamental freedoms.

Member praises Newcomers Club

To the Editor:

I am writing to request that an article of interest be written about the Grosse Pointe Newcomers Club.

Four months ago, upon moving to the Pointes, we joined Grosse Pointe Newcomers Club (GPNC) after seeing an ad in your paper about it under Club News. The group has made a great impact on my new life. Moving to a new community is always difficult, particularly when one is at home with small children. The club has enabled me to make friends, to socialize, to be involved in a play group with my children, to have someone to call with a question and to have a regular night out every month. The members of GPNC have been incredibly hospitable, understanding and have made themselves available to others in need of answers to questions from where to buy extra large diapers in the area, to a recommendation for a plumber or a place to get Chinese carry-out!

Grosse Pointe Newcomers Club has made me feel a welcome part of the community and helped my family get through a moving transition that could have been very lonely. I am hopeful that an article or some special mention of the club would allow others new to the community to find out about this very wonderful group of people.

Grosse Pointe certainly can be proud of such a fine organization.

Corinne LaBarge Grosse Pointe Woods

Woods EMS is efficient

To the Editor:

On Sunday the Detroit News published some startling stories about the poor service the EMS provides for the city of Detroit. Hopefully the residents of Grosse Pointe Woods can relax and set their minds at ease.

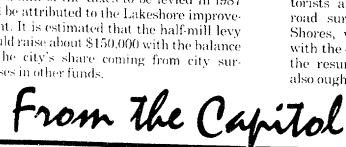

At 2 a.m. March 10, we called the Woods police in an emergency. The first police arrived in 11/2 minutes. They were Officers Harwood and Buckley who were both trained in emergency medical care. They began their preparations as paramedics Gekiere and Marietta arrived.

In seeing the patient was not breathing and beginning to turn purple, they immediately administered oxygen to sustain life. As they were doing that two more back-up officers arrived. They were Sgt. Lentz and Cpl. Murawski.

While the paramedics were busy, the officers were clearing the narrow vestibule of furnishings to make a speedy exit. In just two or three minutes the patient was loaded and the ambulance was on its way to St. John Hospital where they were met by Dr. Lehman who took over the life saving task. According to the doctor, "Time was of the essence, any delay would have been fatal.

We have never seen anyone work so quickly and efficiently as these police officers and paramedics. Many thanks to

As to fuzz busters, radar detectors, I oppose their ban. In this age of super-snooping devices and Star Wars and general invasion of privacy, I feel the best policy is to say that, whenever anyone uses any kind of device or ray on us, we have the right to detect it.

Also, radar has plenty of flaws and bugs in its use. Police, in part, simply dare motorists to spend the time, money and effort to try to fight the odds in a court challenge of a radar speeding

What a difference time and geography make.

Sex education is only one example of the new attitude in some schools, but it's a dramatic one. Today's Grosse Pointe students, whether they're in private, Catholie or public schools, are learning some of the hard facts about AID $\ddot{\mathrm{S}}$ and how to prevent it.

I don't even remember learning about syphillis in my high school health class, except that you become blind in the final stages. Nothing about how to avoid getting it.

I went to public school in a time and place when it was believed that the more teenagers were kept in the dark, the better off they were. Health classes taught you about the basic seven (now the basic four, of course - I'm not completely old-fashioned) and the importance of washing your

Not that washing your hands isn't a good idea, though it does run counter to the adage my father-in-law always used to spout, to wit: You have to eat a bushel of dirt before you die.

But maybe lists of food and advice on hand-washing weren't the most vital things we needed to learn. We all knew girls who made unexpected visits out West to visit their aunt. We certainly all knew couples who "had to get married.

Miss Thompson was our health teacher. With typical teenaged narrowness of vision, we didn't figure she knew much about life outside of gym and health class.

One day in the middle of a warning not to use bar soap to wash your hair, Miss Thompson was interrupted by The Question: How does a diaphragm work? Without skipping a beat, Miss Thompson turned to the board and illustrated the workings of the divider between the chest and abdominal cavities.

We were dumb, but we weren't that dumb. We knew she had evaded the point, and we went out of there laughing at Miss Thomp1 Say son in her ignorance.

What I didn't realize until a long time after, was that Miss Thompson could probably have lost her job if she had told us what we wanted to know.

Some schools were even more reticent. A friend who came up in Catholic schools said their entire sex education consisted of the warning not to touch oneself. "They never explained and we never asked," she said. "We knew what they meant?

Later, in college in Massachusetts, where the blue laws prohibited discussion, as well as sale and use, of birth control devices, our professor tried to teach around the law. "I'm not allowed to tell you about the condom,' he said. "I'm not allowed to tell you that it can prevent conception and the transmission of venereal disease or that it has a five percent failure rate.'

It was a nifty way to provide us with information he believed we needed, but it wouldn't have stood up in court.

The point that kids need more information on avoiding pregnancy and disease is even more true now that there are - literally - more diseases to avoid. Even now, what does the average person know about chlamydia?

But we shouldn't assume that just because the schools in Grosse Pointe are enlightened in varying degrees that students all over the nation are also knowledgeable enough to protect themselves. Access to knowledge about sex is a function of geography as well as

The Grosse Pointe News participates in a newspaper exchange program with other weekly papers throughout the country. It gives us a way to see what other papers cover and how they cover it. AIDS education is a big issue everywhere.

In Lewisville, Texas, the schools don't have a program to address AIDS. Believing that education may be the only way to combat its spread, they are looking into curriculum changes now.

But while they study the question, the local Catholic church has them beat. At a symposium a couple of weeks ago, Catholic students were told the dangers of shooting up with used needles and of engaging in sex without a condom — thus outrunning the pope and most metropolitan Detroit Catholic schools, where students are still told "don't wear anything but a wedding ring.'

In Bellevue, Neb., the schools are not allowed to teach anything about either AIDS or birth control, and they have censored the school newspaper when it attempted to discuss the subject.

School reporter Stacy Herman wrote an article about the lack of information available to teens and the schools' inability to help. She charged that school personnel are avoiding the issue to the point of gluing together the textbook's pages on contraception.

"The idea is that the subject matter should be discussed in the home," the paper quoted Herman as writing. "But what if the home doesn't respond? Where do kids turn? The more that is kept a secret, the more one wants to Parents who keep their kids up to date don't have anything to worry about. Information from school only supplements the free discussions at home — it doesn't replace it.

But as one writer observed recently, if adults like Jim Bakker give in to the temptation, it doesn't seem reasonable to expect our kids to have "no" as their entire arsenal against disease.

Bunnies galore

Easter bunnies will be hopping their way throughout the Grosse Pointes this week, as the community celebrates the holiday.

An eight-foot tall Easter bunny will be hopping in front of The Village Locksmith, at 18554 Mack Ave. in the Farms, for the fourth year in a row.

The tall-tailed fuzzy bunny will be on hand Friday, April 17, from 3 to 5 p.m., and Saturday, April 18, from noon to 3 p.m.

Parents are encouraged to bring cameras because the bunny will pose.

Co-owner Bob Mowbray said some 1,100 balloons were given away last year and this year the rabbit will hand out 1,500 balloons and 200 pounds of candy.

A bunny will also be on hand on Kercheval on the Hill Saturday, April 18, from noon to 3 p.m. The Hill Association has sponsored a rabbit on the Hill for the past three years. Kids of all ages will be treated to Easter candy from the bunny.

There will also be a giant Easter bunny at Kimberly Florals in the Village. Dates are Thursday, April 16, after 3 p.m. and all day Friday and Saturday, April 17-18, from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

News Radiodrama: To each his own fantasy

Radio drama is making a comeback on WDET, Detroit's public radio, broadcasting from Wayne State. At the helm of the new venture, "Dreamliner; Titanic," are a couple of dreamers from Grosse Pointe.

> We want to put out the word that this is what WDET can do," Patouhas said. If he's successful, future shows could be worth some money to the station.

> The thrill of radio drama is that it means something different to each listener. "You challenge the imagination and interpretation," said Barron. "It's personal for each person who hears it."

> To help the listener along, Patouhas lined up an array of recorded and live sound effects. About 40 percent of the sound is live, he said.

Foundation bequeathed $1 million

The Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan announced receipt of a bequest by Elizabeth McColl Wight of an estimated $1 million. Her will provides that the bequest is to supply aid and comfort to the deaf and blind.

Foundation Chairman Joseph L. Hudson Jr., said "This is the largest gift under a will that has been received by the foundation."

The Grosse Pointe resident said the trustees will establish a permanent Elizabeth M. Wight Fund. The income will be used in supplying aid and comfort to the deaf and blind. The selection of specific programs to receive support will be a continuing responsibility and function of the board of trustees.

Elizabeth McColl Wight was 90 when she died in June 1986. She was the daughter of James and Louise McColl, born in Yale, Mich., in 1896, where she lived until 1936, when she married the late Dr. Frederick B. Wight, a prominent Detroit physician.

They moved to Indian Village in Detroit. She and her husband were residents of the Parkstone Apartments on Parker and maintained the McColl family home in Yale as their summer residence.

Shortly before her death, the home in Yale was sold, and she moved from the Parkstone to the Whittier Towers on Burns Drive in Detroit. The provisions of her will for the church, Jefferson Avenue Presbyterian, Children's Hospital, the Center for Creative Studies — Institute of Music and Dance, Wayne State University, The American Bible Society, The Foundation for Exceptional Children and The Clarke School for the Deaf all reflect her particular interests and concerns.

Formed in the spring of 1984, the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan follows a concept first originated more than 70 years ago. It is a permanent community endowment built by gifts from hundreds of community citizens and organizations who are committed to the future of southeastern Michigan. The foundation is governed by a 40-member board of civic leaders.

The Detroit Incinerator

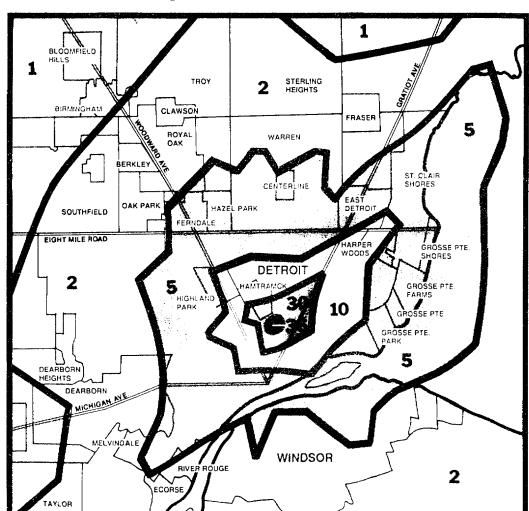

Toxic Fall-Out In Your Backyard

The Pointes are directly downwind from what is to be the world's largest garbage incinerator.

At least 8,000 tons of pollution will be produced every year in the form of acid gases and "particulates" - microscopic particles of toxic chemicals and heavy metals.

Lead, mercury, arsenic, cadmium, chromium, dioxins, and furans. These are just some of the 50 known toxics that will fall on your neighborhood.

These substances will be in the air you breathe and can enter your body through the skin. Many are known to cause cancer and other serious human health problems.

Numbers on the map indicate increased cancer risks per one million people as calculated by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. The cancer risk for this incinerator is higher than for any new facility ever permitted in Michigan.

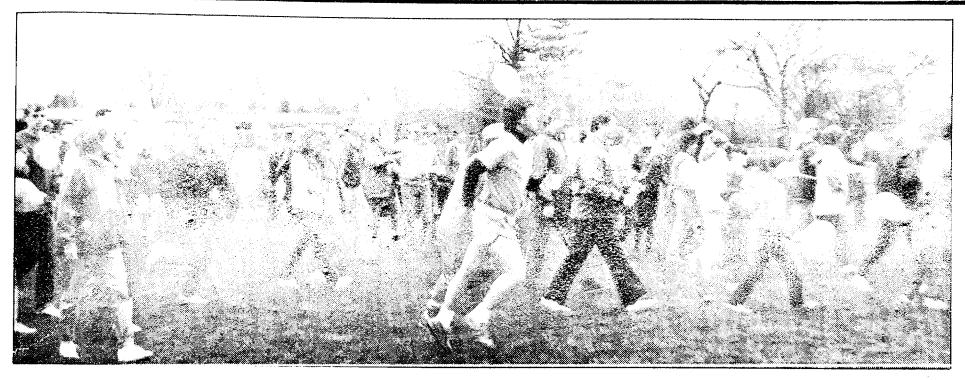

The Detroit Audubon Society, North Cass Community Union, Sierra Club, and Environmental Defense Fund have filed a lawsuit to stop the pollution from the Detroit Incinerator.

We need your help now.

Environmental lawsuits are expensive. Expert witnesses, court documents, attorney fees, and other costs can reach thousands of dollars a day. Your contributions are needed to put up the best legal fight possible.

Some walked, some ran, but fast or slow, several hundred people left the University Liggett Upper School Sunday afternoon for the annual CROP walk to help the hungry. The course was 10 miles long and the weather did nothing to make the task easier. But despite several rain showers, a large number of the walkers and runners completed the entire 10 miles. Participants had gathered pledges before the Palm Sunday event and the proceeds will benefit programs to feed the hungry in the Detroit area and around the world.

Keegan, a Cairn terrier, has his own CROP balloon. Keegan belongs to Susan and Leonard Page who participated in the walk. "He loves to walk." Susan said. "He takes us out for drags."

they rode skateboards or skates. However they went, several hundred Grosse Pointers demonstrated their concern for the hungry last Sunday at the Church World Services CROP Walk which started at 1:30 p.m. at the University Liggett Lower School on Cook Road.

The course was 10 miles long, beginning at ULS and continuing southwest on Chalfonte and Mack to Audubon, east to Kercheval, northeast to St. Clair, southeast to Jefferson, northeast to Deeplands, west to Ballantyne, back to Cook.

It rained. When it wasn't raining, the skies were dark and threatening. But the walkers weren't intimidated. Most finished the course, returning to Liggett hours later, tired but triumphant.

"I don't know how many people finished," said Sister Eileen Meyers of St. Paul on the Lake Church. "We ran out of thank you slips. We ran out of pizza." Walkers were greeted with a snack of pizza when they returned.

Last year, about 500 people participated in the walk. This year, though the returns aren't in yet, it seemed that nearly as many people were on hand.

Locally, the walk is organized by the Grosse Pointe Ministerial Association. Seventy-five percent of the funds raised from pledges gathered by the walkers will go to emergency feeding and self-help programs of Church World Services. The other quarter of the money stays in the community. Twenty percent of the total will be divided equally between Crossroads East, People in Faith United, Calvary Senior Center

Shores considers $3 million budget

Staff Writer

A new fire truck, a major sewer line project and Phase III of a Lakeshore Road recurbing project are the highlights of the Grosse Pointe Shores 1987-88 preliminary general fund budget.

Shores Village Manager Michael Kenyon said approval of the almost $3 million budget is the first of three steps in the village's budget-making process.

The council first approves a preliminary budget, then waits for final budget figures to come in before it amends the budget. Once amendments are approved, the village adopts its millage levy.

A new $103,000 fire truck is expected to be delivered next month. Kenyon said the village will pay for it over five years, with the first payment about $25,000.

naud Road will cost the village about $270,000 this year and the third phase of a Lakeshore recurbing project should cost $90,000.

Even though the $385,000 total for the three expenditures are not ordinarily part of the budget, Kenyon said he expects the total village budget to rise from $2.85 million in the 1986-87 fiscal year to just $2.95 million when the final amendments are made to the budget in late-May.

The preliminary budget approved by the village council on March 31 shows a $3.1 million expenditure total, but Kenyon said that figure is not likely to hold.

There are several items which will cost us less than we had andicipated," he said. For instance,

A major sewer project on Re- we are going to purchase three new patrol cars. We had expected to pay $36,000 for them, but they will only cost us $26,000. The bid on the recurbing from Moorland to the north city limits came in at $90,000. We had anticipated that work to be about $170,000.

Since there are no union contracts to be settled this year, wage increases for the public safety officers and public works employees have already been determined. The officers are scheduled to receive a 3.5 percent increase and public works employees are to get 3 percent this year."

Kenyon said wage increases for the administrative staff have not yet been negotiated, but will be by budget amendment time in May.

The Public Safety Department consumes the lion's shares of the village budget, with almost 40 percent of the expenditures. The department's preliminary budget was approved at $1.14 million.

The federal government has ended the federal revenue sharing program, and the Shores, along with communities all over the country, will no longer receive the federal money. The Shores received $10,000 last year.

"You don't like to lose $10,000 at any time, but it will not have any impact on the budget," Kenyon said.

Overall the budget summary. except for the three major expenditures, remains fairly close to the previous fiscal year.

Last year the village levy was 15.54 mills, and Kenyon said he expects the new tax rate to be close to that.

Red Cross needs teen volunteers

Youths age 14 through 17 can make their summer more meaningful this year by becoming a Red Cross youth volunteer in their community. Volunteers have opportunities to explore different career possibilities and to make new friends of all ages.

Activities could be sharing skills and interests in crafts, swimming, baseball or basketball with kids with handicaps at Easter Seal Day Camps. It could mean dressing up as a clown and visiting day care centers and nursing homes to make people smile. Youth volunteers also help maintain the community blood supply by working at bloodmobiles during the summer months when the need for blood is especially critical.

Interested young people should sign up no later than June 1 to plan their summer activities. More information is available at the American Red Cross, 100 Mack, or by calling 494-2858 between 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

Bunny hop

Students at St. Clair Shores Co-op Nursery School hopped for Easter Seals last week. They will collect pledges per hop and they hope to break last year's record donations of $975.18.

Bridge to be abridged

The wrecking ball was poised and ready last Friday to begin demolition of the pedestrian bridge at Grosse Pointe Woods Lake Front Park. Woods Mayor George S. Freeman and council members Thomas J. Fahrner and Jean B. Rice witnessed the first step toward the $3,500,000 improvements that will be taking place at Ghesquiere Park and Lake Front Park during the next few years. This bridge, which was too low to permit boats to pass under it, will be replaced with two new bridges — a two-way vehicular bridge and a pedestrian bridge with ramp access.

THE PEOPLE AND PLACES OF WESTIN. Caring Comfortable Civilized.

ISN'T THIS THE GOAL THAT WE HAVE FOR OUR CHILDREN?

We have all seen the statistics on how much more college graduates will make during their lifetimes than high school graduates. The tale is the same for an individual who has completed post college studies vs. the simple B.A. degree individual. After all is said and done, the ultimate dream of parents is that their child will be a successful, productive member of society. Our hope and desire is that our children are able to "make it" into a fine secondary school, a prestigious college, and then . . . law school or medical school or an M.B.A. . . . This goal certainly is more important than the fine automobile, the vacation . . . almost anything a parent chooses in a lifetime.

When does a child develop ACADEMIC ACHIEVEMENT MOTIVATION? The psychologists generally agree that it is obtained between ages six and ten. Yes, folks, the desire to achieve in academics is developed in the first through the fifth grade and certainly by middle school. At The Grosse Pointe Academy, we believe children become good students because teachers in small classroom settings have taught the value of academic success during these important years.

Don't leave that most precious commodity, your child's future success, to chance. Look into the independent school education program at The Grosse Pointe Acade-

Lake level

Lake St. Clair's water level at the end of March was about six inches below what it was one year ago and about the same as one month ago. At the end of March, the lake elevation was at 575.63 feet above the mean water level at Father Point, Quebec.

The March monthly mean level was about 29 inches above the long-term average. This level was about 10 inches below the alltime March monthly mean high, which was set in 1986, and about 59 inches above the all-time March monthly mean low, which was set in 1934.

For mariners, the end of March level was 47 inches above chart datum.

The six-month forecast of levels for Lake St. Clair shows that the lake is expected to be above its long-term average level during the next six months. The forecast shows that at the end of April, Lake St. Clair will be about four inches above what it was at the end of March. The lake is expected to continue its seasonal rise into June.

At the end of September 1987, levels are expected to be about 14 inches below what they were at the same time in 1986. The September mean would be above the long-term average level for that month but eight inches below the all-time high mean for September, which was set in 1986.

It has been one year since a city smiled at the birth of a set of quadruplets, and the media turned out in force to help celebrate the first birthday of the brothers Methven. It's been 13,000 diapers and hundreds of bottles of formula, but parents Gayle and Norman have had a lot of help from family and community. Doctor Zahra Kashef, of the Shores, shaking hands with the father while mom stands watch over the active youngsters, delivered the boys April 10, 1986, at St. John Hospital. The boys, Robert, James, Daniel and Jason, have had a financial assistance fund set up for them. Schools Student Spotlight Amy Hathaway

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a pacture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

The following short story was written by Amy Hathaway, a 10th-grader at South High School. She is 16 years old and the daughter of Ann and Edward Hathaway of Grosse Pointe Park.

Witness

"If you'd listen, I'd tell you why she's crying. Will you please hey, don't walk away from me, especially without giving me a chance. Will you wait please!"

Policemen sare think that gold badge and blue uniform gives them a lot of authority, don't they? If he'd stop running around making illegible markings in that little, black book of his maybe I could clear a few things up for him. Why won't people listen to me? Christopher is even ignoring me. Actually he's ignoring everyone, drowning himself in an ocean of tears. I'm not sure which has gotten him wetter, his tears or this blasted rain. Why are you questioning a blubbering three year old? Do you expect straight answers from him? I'll just step in here between them. Oh, now I have your attentin huh. Mr. Policeman? Well, you just stand there and I'll tell you about this

As the final bell rang this afternoon, I stepped outside the stuffy school, grateful for the coolness of the rain upon my hot, tired face. reviving and refreshing it. Upon my arrival at home. I was completely soaked. Sliding my hand under the first step I felt the key, icy to the touch, under my fingertips. On the other side of the door was my mother on her way out. Hurriedly she instructed me to care for my brother and infant sister, then, with a quick peck on the cheek, she left.

I dropped my books, relieved my shivering body of the dripping jacket and ran three flights up to check on Christopher and Rebecca. Reaching Christopher's door slightly out of breath, I heard humming and swinging back the door, I slipped inside. There, in the center of a menagerie of toys, was the three-year-old devil, Christopher.

"Hi!" He popped up and toddled over, arms outstretched, to seize my knees in a welcoming hug.

"What are you doing up?" questioned as I hoisted him into a big, bear hug.

"Mommy's gone," his face grew sober with new found maturity, but his eyes still danced with mischief. "I was up all by myself!" Glowing with pride, he tilted his baby face toward mine.

"Becca's still sleeping," he informed me.

"Let me check and make sure," Quietly I peeked into the dark room. Sure enough, she was still snoozing contentedly; the corners of her tiny, rosebud mouth upturned slightly in a dreamy

The den, downstairs, seemed to be the perfect place to relax with a mug of hot chocolate. Settling Christopher with "Sesame Street" and some army trucks, his latest craze, I departed to concoct my mixture. I opened the door to the non-stop express, as we have been known to call the staircase that leads directly to the third floor, in case Rebecca began to cry. Soon I had a solution which faintly resembled hot chocolate and set it on the gas range to heat. In the distance, I heard Christopher turning the volume on the television set up and down, then begin to change the channels. Everyday he played this game. When he found a channel with poor reception, he screamed. I decided to catch him before he had the chance to start a tantrum. The longer Rebecca slept, the better. Closing the kitchen door firmly behind me, forming a barrier between the susceptible kitchen cupboards and Christopher, I stalked into the den. In my haste, I failed to notice the smoldering hot pad on the stove. "Christopher!" I declared sharply. His hand flew from the dial as if he had just touched a burning ember. "I told you not to do that anymore!" His eyes pleaded with me. A smile was all the reassurance he ever needed. I ambled over to the set, turning it back to "Sesame Street," and made him sit down with his trucks. I must have made myself comfortable because I inadvertently dozed off.

I awoke to Christopher's frightened voice. A distinct smell reached my nose, sending me into a minute of frenzied panic. Smoke clouded my eyes and I began to cough violently. Grabbing Christopher around the waist, I bolted to the front door, showed him out, telling him to stay in the yard. The fire engines were arriving, but I had not time to spare. Up the stairs I flew, one flight, two, three. Seemingly impassible walls of smoke surrounded me, but almost ghostlike, I passed through them to Rebecca's room. Shrill squeaks could be heard from inside and even though they were painful whimpers, they were comforting in the sense that she was alive. Scooping the shaking baby into my arms, I rushed down the back stairs. Flames filled the kitchen below. As I raced towards safety, one fleet foot slipped and Rebecca and I plunged into the darting arms of destiny. A fiery curtain of smoke dropped on my stage but obviously the audience called me back for an encore because here I am! I got her out, didn't I? A scratch here and there but we're okay! Where's Rebecca? No, don't walk away, please! Now look, you're worrying me! When I worry, I crv. I'm starting my own stream of tears. I'm as bad as you, huh, Christopher. Christopher? Wait, where are you taking my little brother? He doesn't like strangers; he won't talk to you! Did you get my story down in that black book of yours? That looks like a body, ugh, must be a dead fireman or something. Too small for a man. Wait, I don't understand. Sounds like you think you have Rebecca and me lying there, covered in soot and charred to death. That's ridiculous because I'm here and fine . . . or am I? Oh, no! That's me and my adorable baby sister, dead on my driveway! I wish I wasn't here to see all of this. My body, mangled and destroyed; Rebecca, her tiny rosebud mouth that will never again smile and Christopher, alone, afraid, forever scarred, overcome by shock, all because of my carelessness. This must be my punishment. I'll follow the ambulance for a while, down the street, around the corner, far, far away . . . "and miles to go before I sleep."

The Importance of a Strong Doctor-Patient Relationship

Francis Wilson, MD Chief of Medicine Saint John Hospital

Even doctors need doctors. When my wife and I selected a family doctor more than 20 years ago, we made the choice as carefully as we did a home to live in and a school for our four children.

Our family's health depends on a good patient-doctor relationship. So does the health of your family. As a practicing physician specializing in internal medicine for the past 22 years, I've seen how the strength of the patient-doctor bond can make the difference in how well a patient can ward off disease, recover from illness and cope with disability.

In selecting a doctor, you're choosing a champion for your good health-someone in whom you can have the utmost trust and confidence. After all, you'll need to depend on this person as a full partner in making some of the most private and important decisions affecting your life and lifestyle.

Your doctor must also care about you as a whole person, not just as a sore throat or an aching back. You need someone with a total commitment to your good health to arrange for your care any time day or night, year in and year out, as your medical needs require.

Your primary care doctor: a partner in good health

Thirty years ago, doctors were called general practitioners or, simply, family doctors. Today they're known as primary care physicians. They specialize in family practice, internal medicine, pediatrics and obstetrics/gynecology. They're well prepared to coordinate your total health care because they're trained in the broad field of medicine.

Should a special health problem arise, your primary care doctor can refer you to another doctor with more specialized expertise. Your primary doctor will stay involved, advising your specialist to make sure that all of your medical problems are met. This role is especially valuable for older patients, who often have multiple, complex problems.

Forming a healthy patient-doctor partnership takes time, but the bond can last a lifetime. In my own practice, patients whom I first saw 20 years ago are now bringing their own children in for examinations.

The best time to begin building a lasting partnership is before you need to rely on it. Seeing a family doctor for regular preventive care and early detection of health problems means that in a crisis you won't have to put your trust in a stranger. Such preventive care can include weight control, cholesterol monitoring, and detection of serious illness such as high blood pressure and cancer

What to look for in a doctor

How do you find such a health care partner? I'd recommend that you: • Ask other health care professionals you trust. Nurses, doctors, dentists and other providers can recognize a fellow professional.

· Ask your friends who have established good doctor relationships. Successful doctors have many new patients referred to them by satisfied patients. Consult the physician referral service of a medical institution that you trust. A hospital's good reputation is usually built by the efforts of its highly regarded

When you're visiting a doctor for the first time, look for these signs of courtesy, caring and competence: Prompt return of your phone calls

· A thorough examination, including a review of your medical history

. Answers to your questions in terms that you can readily understand, combining a reassuring manner with a thoughtful, honest assessment of your

Prompt appointments when you need them

• Access to the doctor, or good backup coverage, during off hours · Prescriptions for only those tests and medications that you need

Reasonable fees

Today more than ever, you have the opportunity to play a decision making role in your health care. Choose carefully. You'll make few decisions more important for yourself and your family than choosing your health care partner - for life.

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

Easter is one of the most joyous holidays of the year. Christmas is festive and fun, but along with the merriment, gifts and happy reunions lurks the nagging thought that the worst of winter has yet to be faced.

But Easter is a herald of the loveliest season of the year. It is not an end but a beginning, for with it comes spring, a time when earth shakes off the shackles of winter and opens its arms to the warming sun, gentle breezes and

Trees are just beginning to clothe their bare branches with tiny buds that scarcely hide their stick-like limbs, but shyly promise that soon their skimpy dress will be changed into verdant green and then into vibrant reds, yellows and browns before they once again shed their raiment to rest beneath the snows of winter.

Spears of green bravely push up through the edges of straggly dried-out lawns. We know that soon there will be the delicate petals of jonguils, yellow as the sun itself, to greet our mornings.

There is a softness in the air, a freshness that will become parched and dry in the heat of summer.

Sounds muffled by winter come alive again: sparrows scolding a threatening cat, the whirl of cars in a rainy street, the thud of a ball against a wall as a young would-be Kirk Gibson works out. It's time now to forget those seem so ominous in the confines of a housebound winter. Somehow it seems easier to lay them aside and step out into the year and plan for the beauty that will be dancing over their rippled waves. Sailboats will be bobbing along their swells. Swimmers will cut through the surface causing splashes of foam to rise and bloom once again as it has in all the summers gone by.

It's time once again for leisurely walking and pausing here and there to admire the newness of spring fashions; to visit a garden center; to check out what's new in equipment and what wonderful beauty the seed companies have concoted for us in those irresistable packets.

For some the true significance of Easter time is the religious observance, with its promise of everlasting life. Hymns are sung, homilies delivered, exaltations chanted - all proclaiming a theme of hope and rebirth.

There is the exotic scent of the stately Easter lilies that bank church altars and clings as we march out into the clear spring air, renewed and confident of a happy day ahead. We give thanks that we are here to enjoy once again the glorious Easter time and rejoice in the promise of the good living that summer brings.

And what of the symbols and customs of Easter? Many of them evolved because people believed that Easter was truly a time of rebirth and renewal

For instance the custom of new outfits for Easter evolved from the belief that a newly baptized person should be clothed in new garments.

And what about the Easter eggs, the Easter egg hunt and the Easter bunny?

You've heard the old puzzler: Which came first - the chicken or the egg? But when it comes to which came first — the bunny or the egg, there is no problem.

It is told that once baskets were filled with eggs and hidden in the woods. Children would go poking under bushes to look for the eggs. When they did, scared little rabbits would run out of their hiding places and the children believed that the rabbits had laid the eggs.

The egg became an occasion for a national event when President Rutherford Hayes organized the first Easter egg roll in Washington in 1800. Since then it has been an annual event. Thousands of youngsters gather on the White House lawn for the Easter egg roll. It's a fun time that culminates in an exciting moment when the president himself and his family appear.

Ethnic groups have their own Easter customs. Slavic people take great pride, and rightfully so, in the beautiful designs they paint on eggs. Many of them are works of art, intricately conceived.

Another custom is the creation of an egg tree. A tree branch is stripped and painted white. Eggs are colored, blown out and hung from ribbons on the branches.

Then there are the outdoor sunrise services. The largest of these is held in the Hollywood Bowl, where thousands gather to greet the Easter morn. This is a traditional custom that goes back to Medieval days when people gathered by the river at daybreak on Easter because they believed they would see the sun dance on

In Medieval times, the pig was regarded as a symbol of good fortune and was the meat served on Easter. Over the years, the pig has maintained its place of honor on American tables in the form

Grosse Pointe Twp. adopts $200,000 budget for 1987-88

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Township plans to spend just $4,500 more during the new fiscal year than it did during 1986-87, according to Michael Kenyon, the township's manager.

Kenyon said that the $198,000 budget adopted by the township at its annual meeting March 31 is used primarily in the collection of taxes for the county and the local school district.

No residents attended the 8 a.m. meeting, which Kenyon said lasted only about an hour.

The township is charged pri- from interest on investments. The marily with assessing, collecting taxes and administering elections. All of the township officials and administrators are employed by the village of Grosse Pointe Shores, and do receive a salary in their roles as township employees.

The township receives one mill for its operations, allocated by Wayne County. Officials say the one mill will generate $110,000 during the fiscal year. The township also receives a one percent administration fee for collecting the taxes which generates $50,000. Other revenue cornes.

township anticipates earning $20,000 in interest during the Kenyon said that the township is in the process of paying off a lease/purchase agreement for the computer system used by both the township and the Village. The payment on that agreement this year will be $50,000.

A tree-spraying program in the township will cost an estimated $9,000. Some $77,000 will be used for operating and maintaining the township hall and grounds, and the remaining $62,000 will be used to pay the salaries of the administrators and elected officials, general office expenses, legal fees and dues.

Kenyon said that no raises were awarded to any of the administrators or elected officials, and there were few changes in expenditures.

He did note, however, that the township expects to earn less in investment income in the coming year due to decreases in interest rates. The township earned $27,500 in interest income last fiscal year.

Ferry goes to Lansing

The first-graders in Henry Pichla's class at Ferry School took a trip to Lansing April 2. A tour of the Capitol with state Rep. William Bryant provided the opportunity to see the Senate and House in session.

The Senate voted to approve a measure and then voted to reopen discussion on the same bill, prompting the children to ask why they couldn't make up their minds, Pichla said. Later, the children went down on the House floor and sat in several of the representatives' chairs, while Bryant explained how voting is tabulated by computer.

The afternoon was spent visiting the Impression 5 museum's hands-on science experiments.

Two-alarm Farms fire extinguished

A Moross Road home sustained difficult time ventilating the basefire damage from a blaze that was confined to the basement, but started about 1:30 a.m. Monday, April 13, according to Farms Fire Chief Sam Candela.

Candela said the fire was apparently caused by paints, mineral spirits and lacquer thinner stored in the dwelling's basement.

"The basement windows were of glass block and the men had a

He does the walking and talking for new car buyers

News Editor

You're in the market for a new car. You know exactly what you want - the make, the color, the options. Or maybe you only have an idea of what you want: It should get good mileage, it shouldn't be too small, it has to have four doors.

Whatever type of new car buyer you are, you know that making these decisions is the easy part: The hard part is shopping around. Tramping through showrooms, talking with salespeople, comparing prices - just the thought of it sends some people straight to a bottle of aspirin.

That's where John LaFave comes in. He's an auto consultant who will do the walking and talking for you.

LaFave says he can save a person $1,000 or more.

"I can buy Fords at $100 over factory invoice," he said. "Chevrolets I can buy right at factory invoice, Pontiacs - depending on whether it's in stock - 1 percent under or over invoice.

"Ninety-nine percent of the time, my price will be better than any deal from the dealership," he LaFave, an admitted car fanatic, said he's able to get a better deal because he has an agreement to do business only with specific dealers - in his case, 10. "I have a dealer for every car made in America," he says, listing two for Ford, five General Motors, two Chrysler and one for American Motors.

"I don't want to offend anybody, but I'm a strong believer that if you make your money in America, you ought to spend your money in America," he said.

What he has done is made an sales training course to prepare they want in a car and they tend rect his customers to them and the dealers in turn sell the customer a car at a price reserved for fleet buyers or employees eligible for company plans.

That's the only deal LaFave says he can't match - employee plans. "The only one I can beat is the Ford X plan for retirees.

"Dealerships like me because they don't have to pay me and they're getting business they may not get," he added.

Ironically, LaFave tried to get a job selling cars and said he took a because he is legally blind. "When they found out I couldn't drive, they would say if you can't drive cars, you can't sell them.

"I don't believe that's a legitimate excuse," LaFave adds.

"I've always been a fanatic for cars," he says. "New cars, I just go nuts over them. I love polishing and cleaning them. I'm in my glory out there.'

And LaFave does know cars. That's why he feels this business is custom-made for him. "Some people really don't know what

UF adopts admissions process

The United Foundation Future Program Committee has adopted an admissions process for charitable organizations to apply for Torch Drive funding. Interested non-profit 501 (C) (3) organizations are requested to submit complete applications to the Agency Relations Department at UF at 1528 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. 48226, by May 1 in order to be considered for funding to begin in January 1988. Applications and admissions criteria are available by contacting UF at 965-7100.

So he advises them on the differences between two lines of the same make. "One might have fancier wheel covers, but when it comes to resale, you're not going to get much more.

He'll tell you which cars consistently hold their resale value.

His fee is $100 for a $5,000 car, $125 for $6,000. "It goes up $25 for every $1,000 in value," he aid. "That's based on the wholethe price of the car before any opons are added."

If a person cancels an order within the three-day period allowed by the state, LaFave said he would get $25 for his time.

The one drawback, especially when a prespective buyer has a specific car in mind in a specific interior and exterior color, is time. If the car is not in stock, it could take one to three weeks, LaFave said. "If the person can wait six to 12 weeks, I can get a better deal."

The problem, he said, is the dealership might be reluctant to sell a car on hand at a reduced price that a retail customer is likely to buy.

The other drawback is LaFave doesn't deal with trade-ins that's up to his customer to handle by trading in or selling privately.

LaFave said his goal is to get a broker's license which will enable him to buy cars under his name. As a consultant, he can only direct the buyer to the dealer for a previously agreed upon price. In order to be a broker in Michigan, it's necessary to post a $20,000 bond, he said. As a broker, he would do all the negotiating, up to delivering the car to the buyer.

"Time is money today," he says, adding that a broker's license would enable him to better serve his customers.

LaFave will advise a prospective buyer on the advantages of leasing, which he says is not for everyone. "Most people who want to own a car want to own it. People who lease trade their cars in every one to two years.'

LaFave, 31, is a lifelong Harper Woods resident. He is a member of the Harper Woods Lions and a past president of the Jaycees. He also served for two years on the Community Development Advisory Committee in Harper Woods.

He has an office with Beverly Flowers at 19566 Kelly Road and he offers free price quotes. His phone is 372-0300

Students at the School of Medical Technology at St. John Hospital score in the top 10 percent on their national certification examination scores.

'Our students have a 99 percent pass rate on the test which is very unusual," said Margaret Kluka, program director.

The students are responsible for performing laboratory tests on blood, body fluid and tissue to assist the physician in determining the presence or absence of disease. They also follow the response of disease to medical treatment and help overall management of health care.

The school started at St. John's in 1955. Eight students are selected each year to do an internship through a competitive matching program.

Emergency

Fontbonne fashion show to purchase equipment for St. John ER facility

By Elsa Frohman

The atmosphere in the St. John Hospital Emergency Room is one of calm efficiency. "You don't tend to see the kind of scenarios that you see on television where everyone is running around shouting," said Dr. Anthony Southall, chief of the Department of Emergency Medicine at the hospital.

The St. John Emergency Room the hospital began its Express is one of the major emergency medical facilities on the eastside. It is designated a trauma center making it a primary resource for patients suffering from major, life-threatening injuries.

changes in the nature of emergency medicine call for more and threatening illnesses and injuries more sophistocated equipment.

"Treatments have changed will be the beneficiary of the proceeds from the Fontbonne Auxiliary Spring Spectacular fashion show and luncheon to be held April 30 in the Riverview Ballroom at Cobo Hall.

"As with most hospitals, most of our income comes from patient fees, insurance payments and the government," Southall said. "But those sources don't meet our full requirements. If we wish to keep improving, to be up to date and have the latest equipment, we have to look to other sources of funding.

The St. John Emergency Room (particularly in the field of cardiology)," he said. "We have more methods open to us. There are more treatments to prevent damage (to the heart muscle). We have greater needs because these treatments entail sophistocated equipment." A major part of the management philosophy at St. John involves separating the different kinds of patients, Southall said.

> "What happens in most emergency rooms is that patients with less severe problems must wait." he said. "The person with a minor problem may have to wait a long

Care clinic which is adjacent to the emergency room, but staffed independently. "Its sole function is to take care of less acute problems," Southall said.

The Express Care clinic is Southall explained that much like a private doctor's office - treating people with non-life at times and in circumstances when they cannot visit their family doctor.

> "However, if what seems to be a minor illness turns out to be serious, they are right by the emergency room," Southall said.
> "Sometimes people come in complaining that they have a little bit of gas, and it turns out to be a heart attack.

"We decided to have the fashion show benefit the emergency room because we felt it was a medical resource for everybody," sald Patricia Ostosh, president of the Fontbonne Auxiliary, "At some time in their lives, everyone has contact with the emergency room. We wanted to help purchase equipment for top quality

The auxiliary holds a number of fund-raisers each year, including the White Christmas Ball, the Spring Spectacular Fashion Show and the Fontbonne Fair.

"We don't just settle on one department," Ostosh said. "We move around." Last year's White Christmas Ball benefited the Cardiac Catheterization Laboratory and last year's fashion show benefited the pediatric department,

"The emergency room is an important part of any hospital," Southall said, "We see a large number of patients and many are admitted to the hospital through the emergency room." Recently, attention in the press has been focused on emergency rooms that close their doors to the most critical patients at times. Southall explained that the St. John Emergency Room is seldom closed.

"Being a trauma center and designated emergency room," he said, "we would attempt to remain open to Code 1 patients." Code 1 patients are those who are critically ill or injured, in need of immediate attention, who might die if treatment is delayed.

"Over the last 18 months, we have never been closed to Code 1 patients," Southall said, "We have been closed to Code 2 and Code 3 patients only three days," Code 2 patients are in less serious condition than Code 1 patients, however, they require close monitoring. Code 3 patients are nonurgent.

Southall explained that the decision to close the emergency room to any classification of patient is based on space, equipment and personnel available and the facility is only closed when there as many patients being treated as the emergency room can handle.

"We attempt not to close, but when it gets to the point where we have no space, we have to close the doors," Southall said.

The funds from the fashion show will help purchase more equipment to increase the emergency room's capacity.

Tickets for the fashion show are $25 per person and can be ordered through the Fontbonne Auxiliary

The theme of the fashion show is Happy Birthday Michigan for the state sesquicentennial. There will be birthday cake and special segments of the show to commemorate the anniversary.

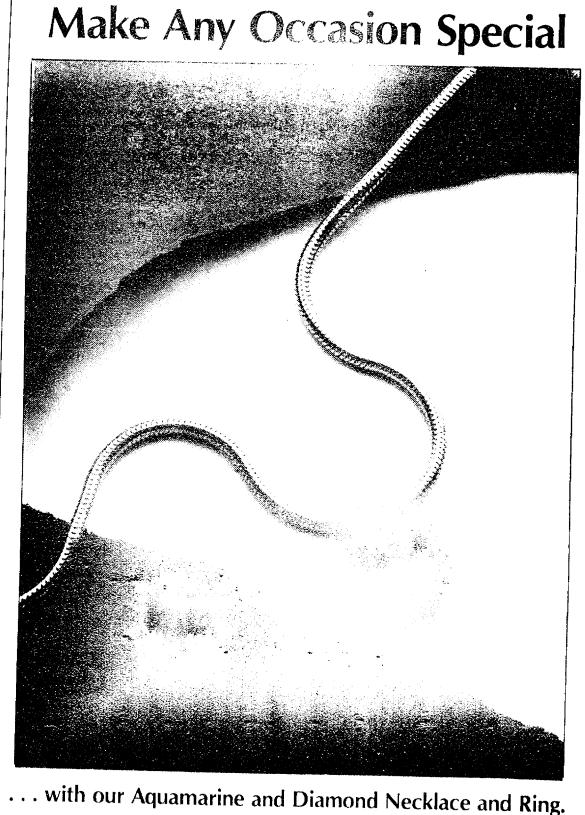

The show is being staged by Crowley's and will include a multi-media approach. There will be fashions for the entire family and many surprises.

Any day now we will be seeing birds gathering wisps of this and that for nest building. Sometimes one wonders if there is some sort \cdot of competition among neighborhood birds for the most attractive nest considering what interesting odds and ends get woven into them.

There is, for instance, the local lady who has a favorite classic cotton dress. Even after several seasons of wear it is still her favorite and last spring she washed it and hung it outside to dry. When she brought it in she dis-out and went south for the winter she retrieved her sash and plans to wear her favorite classic cotton dress THIS summer with its own sash.

A lot of people are very superstitious about insects. In an old book written during the early years of the 19th century there are some remarkable attributes given to insects. All you have to do to find out your destiny in any department is to consult them.

For instance, if you step on a cricket it is sure to rain. If you catch the first butterfly you see in the spring you will be unlucky all summer. Kill a lightning bug and you will be struck by lightning in the next storm. If you disturb yellow butterflies clustered together you will lose all your money. If you knock down a mud-dauber's nest you will break all your dishes and if you see a swarm of bees light on a dead branch there will be a death in the family.

To dream about ants means you will move to a big city, and if a bee circles around your head you will get an important letter. If a fly persistantly buzzes around you a stranger wants to meet you and if a bee flies into the house in the morning it means good luck but if it comes in in the afternoon it means the opposite. The belief that killing a ladybuo is bad luck has probably saved more of these little critters than any number of statistics showing their value to the farmer. The best protection in the world for a wild animal, bird or insect may well be superstition.

The Pastor's Corner

The Lord is risen!

By the Rev. David Wick Grosse Pointe Baptist Church

During the darkest days of the Stalinist oppression in the Soviet Union, a brave and well-loved village priest was arrested by the Communists. The village church had thus far survived the innovations of communism, and was in fact thriving. The local commissar reasoned that if he could break the priest, get him to publicly deny his faith, he could break the hold of the church on the yillage. The priest was not a young man, and did not appear robust in health. But he proved a difficult subject. It took torturers weeks of inflicting starvation, beating, sleeplessness and nameless torments, not only on the priest, but on members of his family, before he was broken.

The priest signed a document recanting his faith on the Thursday before Easter. The commissar nailed the church doors shut and gave orders that everyone in the village should assemble in the village square at sunrise on Easter day. He planned a day of great triumph for the party, and a day of disastrous destruction for the church. He prepared a platform on the square so the priest could be seen and heard by all as he read his recantation to the villagers. At last Easter came, and the whole village, some 1,500 souls, assembled in the cold, pre-dawn darkness in the village

As the sun began to rise, the commissar marched into the square and up onto the platform. Behind him, stumbling, shivering in the cold, his body bruised and his wounds just beginning to heal, came the priest. Two machine gun-toting guards accompanied him. A small company of soldiers, similarly armed, ringed

The commissar gave a speech extolling the glories of the revolution and the promise of a new day; then introduced the beloved priest as one who had become "enlightened" and who would help the people break free from the shackles of superstition. The priest stepped to the front of the platform and fumbled with the papers he had signed.

The commissar hissed at him, "Well, go on, go on; read your

The priest looked down at the papers, looked up at the crowd, took a deep breath, and said in a loud voice, startling in its clarity, "The Lord is risen."

The words were hardly out of his mouth when the air was shattered with the staccato of machine gun fire, and the priest was cut down in front of the crowd. When the guns ceased and the priest's body had hit the floor of the platform with a dull thud, there was the briefest moment of deathly silence in the square. Then the crowd answered as one man, as they had answered all their lives, as their ancestors had answered for centuries.

"The Lord is risen indeed."

Whether there was more machine gun fire, whether the villagers paid with their lives and won a better resurrection because of their testimony, I do not know. But I do know what they knew: that the resurrection of Jesus Christ is the central fact on which the reality of Christianity rests. The Apostle Paul wrote, "... and if Christ has not been raised, your faith is worthless, you are still in your sins." (I Corinthians 15:17)

If Jesus rose from the dead, then he is the son of God; if he is the son of God, then his death on the cross for our sins has made peace for us with God, and He has a right to claim our faith and our

If Jesus rose from the dead, we cannot relegate hime to the realm of great teachers, he is Savior and he is Lord.

Do you believe it? I affirm and proclaim it, "The Lord is risen." What is your reply?

Lecture to focus on divine love

Since 1954, when the congregation at First Church of Christ, Scientist, Grosse Pointe Farms sponsored its first public lecture on Christian Science, lectures have been held in the Grosse Pointe community each year.

This week, guest lecturer Kay R. Olson of Raleigh, N.C., will be speaking on "Divine Love: Answer to Crime."

In the late 1800s, Christian Science lectures were introduced at a time of great public interest in the new denomination which had been founded in Boston in 1879. Newspaper reports regarding adherents' practice of Christian healing were widespread. The lectures offered the public the opportunity to hear firsthand accounts of what Christian Science teaches and to learn something about their Christian Science neighbors' beliefs. The settings were public and the event was informational rather than proselytic.

Over the years, the lectures have retained the same basic purpose - providing the public an opportunity to learn something about a church with a long history on the local religious scene. This year, the lecturers are focusing on three growing areas of concern: violence, the breakdown of the family, and health tian healing as a Christian Science practitioner. (A Christian Science practitioner gives his or her full time to the public practice of Christian Science healing through prayer.) Her lecture on "Divine Love: Answer to Crime" will include accounts of physical healing that have come about as the result of prayer and a spiritual understanding of God.

The local congregation has scheduled Olson's lecture to begin at 1 p.m. on Friday, April 17, at Grosse Pointe War Memorial. It will last an hour.

The public is invited to attend the lecture on Friday, April 17. There is no charge and child care will be available

Single Way

The Rev. Robert Harris continues his discussion of "The Blisses and Blisters of Single Life and What to Do About Them," at the next Single Way meeting on April 17. The 8 p.m. meeting will be held at the Salvation Army Community Center, 4820 East Nine Mile Road, Warren, and is open to Christian singles of all ages. A $3 donation will be asked at the door.

after Mozart's death. Sussmayer knew Mozart's work and style in-Christ Church Grosse Pointe on timately. Orchestral parts and outlines were sufficiently developed to be the catalyst for Sussmayers writing. At least 6 percent of the work was completed by Mozart and is one of his greatest works.

The Mozart "Requiem" is one of the finest settings of the Mass for the Dead. The first and last movements include Mozart's "Requiem Aeternum," which is one of the great double fugues ever composed. Equally interesting are the unusual movements, the "Tuba Miram" and "Lacrymosa." The pompous trombone solo describes the fearful moment of the "Dies Irae," in the Tuba

Miram, and the sadness is beautifully expressed in the "Lacrymosa."

The Christ Church Chorale. and orchestra perform the work with four soloists: Karen McConachie, soprano; Elisabeth Elvidge, mezzo soprano; Paul Nelson, tenor; and David Ludwig, Winners and losers.

We've got losers, too. Sore losers. Poor losers. More and more losers. Since everybody loves a winner, we may as well start with the champs and move on to the chumps.

The champs are Our Lady Star of the Sea's volleyball players who earned post-season honors following what was one of the bea year's Star has had in a while. They are All-League selections. Kelly Kiefer, Doreen Pellegrom and Buffy Stumb and All-Catholic choices Beth Allor, Jeannie Purrenhage and Tracey Walker, who earned honorable mention.

And even though spring has finally sprung and hockey is the last thing on folks' minds these days, we still have some hockey heroes to decorate. They are North icer Rob Marshall and South's Andy Roy and Jeff Le-Febvre. The trio was named to the Michigan All-State team which played the All-Stater game in Dearborn March 29 and Roy and LeFebvre went on to play for the two Michigan teams in the U.S. Invitational Tourna-

Proof positive that sometimes brain beats brawn are the Pacemakers, a team of volleyball fanatics currently participating in the women's competitive volleyball playoffs out of the Neighborhood Club. Sponsored by Robert Griffin, M.D. and "managed" by Amy Argo, the Pacemakers include Martha Schroder, Donna Griffin, Argo, Bev Zuelch, Mary O'Donnell, Cindy Meier and current and former South coaches Cindy Sharp and Jan Hooper.

Last week they beat a team of younger, stronger former high school spikers. . .much to the delight of the, um, more experienced Pacemakers. "That was pretty neat. They were a bunch of kids I used to coach at South and I think they were out to get their old coach. Talent-wise, they had the edge, but I think they found out that sometimes smart beats talent," laughs Hooper.

The win was no fluke. The Pacemakers have won both sessions of the competitive league for the past several seasons.

Since we're on the subject of what-beauswhat, I'm here to tell you that thoughtfulness wins every time. Winners of the "Most Thoughtful Gesture of the Week" award this week are the members of the University Liggett School hockey team, which took time out to send the News a thank-you card for its coverage. Nice guys, those Knights.

Another nice guy is Detroit Free Press sports reporter Terry Foster, who soon will leave his Macomb/East sports duties to cover University of Michigan football for the Freep. Pointe sports fans know what a fine job Foster has done for the last few years and he will be missed . . . particularly by other local sports writers who enjoyed his running commentary on the sidelines at football Enough of the champs, you say? Bring on the chumps? Okay, how about these. . .

Detroit Tiger fans. (I don't think that you can call folks who spend an average of $7.25 per ticket to watch a team which doesn't think enough of its own top-notch players to keep them, winners).

Trophy-winners

They're looking for room in the trophy cases in the Grosse Pointe homes of Donny DeSeranno (left) and Tripp Tracy after the pair brought home these beauties when their team, the GPD Pee Wees, won a national championship in Amherst, N.Y., recently. It didn't take long before the girls realized that the reality wasn't as bad as the expectation. After trailing 7-0, South called upon its newfound offensive weapon - speed - and stormed back for an 11-10 win. "It's going to take time for the girls to establish their own identity, but I think we walked off the field knowing that it probably won't be as difficult to do that as they first be-

Bruce said that this year's South squad is probably the fastest he's coached. He'll combine that speed with a few twists: the Devils' four switch-hitters (Turner, Asmus, Amezcua and sophomore Lee Leonard) and two lefthanded pitchers. "We'll capitalize on our speed, do more drag bunting and put offensive pres sure on other teams by having them fear us as runners," Bruce explained.

Top contenders for the EML crown should be South, East Detroit, Port Huron and a rejuvenated L'Anse Creuse North, Bruce said."We're looking to have a good time. Having fun at softball is really our main goal. And if we can be a good team and have fun all in one, well, that's all the more South's next action is at Port Huron on April 27.

Track

Another South team which is back after its most successful season ever is the girls' varsity track squad. The Blue Devil runners set nearly two dozen school records enroute to a 10-0 finish and an EML championship. Coach Steve Zaranek says that this year's squad strikes a balance between strength at the sprint, distance and field events.

"In the past, we've been stronger in distance but I think that we'll see that talent distributed equally in other events," he added.

Leading the sprint corps are returners Traci Lee, a sophomore who specializes in the short dashes; junior Reba Uthappa, sophomore Nicole Tocco and junior Julie Burke. Record-holding senior Erin Kershaw, junior Wendy Berger and sophomore Laura DeMercurio return as hur-

Leading what Zaranek calls 12 are sophomores Micha Song and 4. Toni Tedesco and freshman Ann Llewellyn. South will again be strong doubles duos, led by brothtough in the field, with state-caliers Brad Cooksey, a senior, and ber discus thrower Dunrie Greil-ing returning, as well as high jumper Sarah McCabe and shotputter Kellie Buchanan.

"This is a nice group of kids we've got this year and with 70 out, it's our largest, too," Zaranek said. "There are a lot of good teams in the EML, but I think that'd we'd have to be the favorite and that Port Huron will probably be our biggest opponent. Assistant coaches Leo Lamberti, Mike Novak, Al Moebus and I are really encouraged. . . we look forward to a good season."

Tennis

North boys' tennis coach Tom Berschback says his team can be described in one word: depth. Returning lettermen fill nine of the 10 positions on the squad and seven of those players are seniors who led the Norsemen to the No. 13 spot in the state Class A finals a season ago.

Leading that lineup is No. 1 singles player John Grierson. Chris Herman is at No. 2, with junior Patrick Hopper in the No. 3 "really good" distance runners slot and senior K.C. Gutow at No.

Insurance — what you should know

Insurance — one of the necessary evils of ownership. It protects us from the unforseen. It insulates us against catastrophe, helping us replace a loss. Insurance is often just taken for granted. We rarely question the advise of our agents, except about the costs. We assume they know their business and will advise us.

We are used to having insurance on our cars. It is required by law. We buy and sell automobiles and call our agents to make the necessary changes. We pay little attention until we have a problem.

Insurance for our boats is not quite so easy. For the next two weeks we will explore some of the specifics of boat insurance in this column. Boat insurance falls into two categories: boats under 26 feet in length and boats over that length.

This week we will look at the insurance spectrum for boats un-

Liability seems to be one of our greatest concerns these days. As boat owners we are concerned that we may become involved in a lawsuit and we want liability incurance against that event. For boats under 26 feet, with an inboard engine of 50 horsepower or less, or an outboard motor of 25 horsepower or less, liability insurance is covered under your homeowner's insurance. You may buy extra liability insurance if you choose. For a 26-foot sailboat, $300,000-worth of liability insurance would cost approximately $31 a year. Liability insurance for a powerboat costs more.

Liability insurance insures you against damage or injury to another or property. It also protects you against negligence suits brought against you by a guest aboard your boat.

Just as with automobiles, companies need to know the make, model and year of your boat. Sailboats are cheaper to insure than powerboats. Sailboats travel slower, and have the right-of-way when under sail. Research by some companies also indicates that people who have taken boating courses are a better risk — they tend to have fewer boating accidents requiring companies to pay claims. Many companies allow sailboats to race and maintain coverage, but do not allow powerboats to race. Insurance companies cannot stand the high losses which would be incurred if they covered powerboat racing. This is not to say that one cannot get coverage for racing, but you need to discuss your needs with your agent.

We also need to insure the boat itself against loss. This is called Hull Insurance. The two types of hull insurance are: Actual Cash Value and Replacement Coverage.

Replacement coverage will replace a boat if it is a total loss, or repair it with no allowance for depreciation. In other words, the coverage will replace old with new. All you pay is your deductible. This coverage is more expensive than the Actual Cash Value type.

Actual Cash Value takes depreciation on repairs or losses, taking into consideration the age of the boat and the life expectancy of the material the boat is made of. Wood does not last as long as fiberglass, which is why owners of old wood boats have difficulty insuring them.

Antique boats and boats that have undergone restoration are special cases and are handled in a special category. Owners of older boats find their rates are higher. Generally boats over 10 years old pay a slightly higher premium. Another increase occurs at about 15 years. Most companies require marine surveys for older boats to give the insurance company an indication of the condition of the boat and the maintainance it receives.

Shopping around for insurance

Once you have purchased your boat and you have decided you want it insured, you begin to shop for insurance. Insurance companies are under no obligation to insure you. There is no such thing as "no-fault" in the marine insurance field and some companies will not insure first-time boat owners. That is to say they will not insure someone until they have two or three years of boating experience. Many companies ask about driving records, prior claims, cancellations, boating courses, boating experience, boating organizations you belong to, as well as the relevant information about the boat. Companies want to know where you intend to use your

Here in the Great Lakes some insurance companies only cover the Great Lakes, inland lakes and their tributaries. If you have a trailerable boat and take it to Florida, you may not be covered. Insurance companies also want to know what other insurance you have with that company. The more policies you have with one company the more likely you are to get coverage. The new boater is well advised to go to the same company which provides his auto and homeowners insurance.

Boats under 26 feet are less expensive to insure because it is anticipated that owners do work on boats in this size category themselves. The owners do not expose themselves to the liabilities of having paid employees who work on and operate the boats and this would come under the Longshoreman's and Harbor Workers Compensation Act.

Insurance has its fine print. It is a section in the insurance policy that will state that if the insured assumes liability under contract, the insurance company won't provide coverage for racing. In other words, the person who carries the insurance on a boat cannot sign an agreement (that would be a contract) to insure someone else (like a race committee or a yacht club). Such an agreement might be a hold harmless clause found on some race entry froms. If one should sign such a contract, and be involved in a lawsuit, then the insurance company would simply exclude that condition where you assumed liability under contract. You would be left to assume that liability yourself.

This may be a bit difficult to comprehend because everyone who races a sailboat signs something. The question is does one enter into a contract or simply sign a waiver?

The United States Yacht Racing Union (USYRU) defines a waiver as "a signed statement by which the one person (a competitor, for example) agrees that he will not hold another person or organization (a race committee or a yacht club) liable for any injury or damage which the competitor might incur as a result of an event being run by the race committee or yacht club." The validity of waivers varies from state to state. They basically are simple statements that the competitor enters an event at his own risk.

An indemnity agreement, however, is a contract between the signer and the organization.

According to USYRU "an indemnity agreement indicates that one person agrees to indemnify (pay) another person or organization against the claim which a third party may make against the

For example, assume a crew member is injured when the main boom of the skipper's boat hits the crew member during starting maneuvers of a race run by a yacht club. The skipper has liability

The "champs" are back.

Donny DeSeranno of Grosse Pointe Park and Tripp Tracy of Grosse Pointe Farms are back home from Amherst, N.Y., where their GPD Pee Wee Major team won the Tier I national championship. GPD defeated teams from Chicago, Alaska, Cleveland and Connecticut before edging host Amherst - New York state champs - in the finals of the fivegame series.

DeSeranno, a right-winger, scored four goals and had 16 assists for 20 points in the series. Tracy, a goaltender, posted victories in the two games he played.

During the course of the regular season, GPD won championships in the Christy Cookie Tournament in Mississauga, Ontario and the Thornhill Thunderbird Tournament in Thornhill, Ont.; and took a consolation round victory in the Wally Beavis Tournaments in Peterboro, Ont. GPD lost in overtime at the Kinsman Tournament in Oshawa. The squad also qualified for the Esso Challenge Cup, winning two games before losing in overtime to the Toronto Red Wings.

In February, GPD traveled to Quebec for an international Pee Wee tournament, skating in the America's Cup Division. GPD defeated squads from California, Pittsburgh, Montreal and Toronto before bowing to the New York Rangers from Rye, N.Y., in the fi-

In league play, the GPD team won the league championship, posting a 22-2-1 mark. It also took the Michigan AAA state championship by posting four straight victories in the semifinals and finals in March. DeSeranno sparked his line over the crucial six-week period of the season, scoring the first goal in four tournament games. Tracy was undefeated in 17 league, playoff and state championship contests.

Both DeSeranno and Tracy started their hockey careers in the fall of 1980 as members of the Grosse Pointe Mite Sabres of the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association. They were coached by Jerry Walsh, a major in the Canadian Army on temporary assignment in Detroit. Both were first-year skaters and played defense. That team started slowly and eventually won the playoffs championship by defeating the Seals the first play team - in overtime in the semifinals. The following year, Tracy played on the Maple Leafs and his friend DeSeranno, on the Flyers. In the 1982 playoffs, the Flyers defeated the Leafs, 4-3, in overtime with DeSeranno scoring all of his team's goals.

That fall, both Tracy and De-Seranno entered travel hockey with the Squirt A Grosse Pointe Blue Devils. That team finished second in its division in the Adray League and was a two-goal loser to Livonia in the finals. The next season, the pair again played together on the Blue Devils, then moved up to Squirt AA where their team won the Little Caesar's championship and took the playoffs at Joe Louis Arena with an overtime win over the Warren Blues.

In 1984, Tracy and DeSeranno entered open, or AAA, hockey. DeSeranno played two years for the Michigan Travelers Pee Wee Minor team and Tracy played goal for the GPD Pee Wee Minor squad in 1984-85 and for the GPD Pee Wee Major in 1985-86.

They were reunited this year on the GPD team which was put together in the spring of 1986 and traveled to the Ottawa Capital Tournament in July.

Donny is the son of Susan De-Seranno, of the Park and Don DeSeranno, of St. Clair Shores. Tripp is the son of Mickey and Emmet Tracy of the Farms. Donny is an eighth grader at St. Paul School; Tripp is in the seventh grade at University Liggett.

All Pointes Swim Club was represented by 11 swimmers in the "Fifth Annual 8 and Under Regional Championships," sponsored by the Holt Swim Club and Burger King held at the Hill Vocational Center, Lansing, Michigan, Feb. 28-March 1.

The girls' 8 and under freestyle relay team consisting of Rachelle Atrasz, Amy Booher, Madeline Emery and Jennie Loranger, started the meet off with a sixth place finish with a time of 1:19.32. Soccer

If vacation doesn't play total havoc with its conditioning, North's varsity soccer team should be able to give a pretty good showing against almost any team it faces this season, says coach Guido Regelbrugge.

"But we've had all kinds of problems with the weather and I won't even have everybody back from Easter vacation for our game against South (April 28), so I really haven't been able to say for sure what we'll do this year," he adds. "I do know that we'll give everybody a good battle and we'll have some class out there. That, I am certain of."

The Lady Norsemen had played two games at press time; neither contest - a 12-0 win over East Detroit and a 0-0 tie with Ann Arbor Huron — gave North much of a test, defensively. "Right now, about all I could tell you is that we'll be a good team, not a great one, but one capable of surprising just about anybody this season, Regelbrugge says.

War Memorial crowd meets man behind byline

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

Mitch Albom's awards stretch from here to Miami to New York. He's been praised by United Press International and The Sporting News, and recently, by editors of the Associated Press who voted him the No. 1 sports columnist in the nation.

But deep down, the 29-yearold sports columnist of the Detroit Free Press doesn't feel he deserves all the praise he

"I'm flattered to speak to a group of people who compliment me on my work, because I'm not a particularly good writer yet," Albom said last week. "In comparison to some of the all-time great authors," he says, "I'm on the bottom rung. I do someday aspire to be a good writer.'

Albom was speaking the morning after a lecture he gave to about 100 people at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial last week. The audience was filled with men and women, young and old, almost all of whom feel strongly that Albom does indeed deserve the kudos he receives.

"I read him first thing every morning," said Janet Allen, 68, from Grosse Pointe Woods, "I'm crazy about his writing. He's thorough and he's humorous.

Karen Kersten, 24, of Grosse Pointe admits that she doesn't even like sports. She reads the paper cover to cover every day, but the only thing she looks at in the sports section is Albom's column. "He seems like a very sensitive writer," she said. "He doesn't dwell on how a team won a game but on what happened behind the scenes. I like his style and his humor."

Some call Albom a sports writer, some call him a psychologist and others are already calling him a legend in his own time. His popularity throughout the metro areachas skyrocketed and his talent transcends simple sports journalism.

Albom, a Philadelphia native, holds a BA from Brandeis University and masters degrees in journalism and business administration from Columbia University in New York. In conversation just as in his writing - the education is obvious. He is Mitch Albom articulate and shows respect for the language, yet he does not condescend to an audience.

After graduating from college, Albem spent seven months playing jazz piano and singing in a little nightclub in Greece. "It was wonderful," he recalls. "I worked at a little resort in paradise. The only reason I came back was to get a career started."

Since starting, he hasn't stopped. While working for the Ft. Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel, he was recruited by both the Free Press and The Detroit News. That was two years ago. Since then Albom has taken the city by storm, making former Free Press "star" columnist Mike Downey little more than a pleasant memory. "I was hired by the Free Press for the purpose of maintaining Mike Downey's audience, the non-traditional sports people," Albom says. "I have always been interested in the human side of sports . . . of anything. The Free Press is more suited to the audience I want to reach. The writing style of the paper is close to the way I want to write."

Albom's columns range from the sublime to the ridiculous. Often he writes serious pieces on people who make the headlines; other times he puts tongue firmly in cheek and fires off a column aimed straight at readers' funnybones. He almost always provides a different perspective on a timely subject.

Doing that requires virtually constant rushing and traveling. The day of the War Memorial speach, Albom had arrived in Detroit at 2 a.m. after covering the Sugar Ray Leonard-Marvin Hagler fight in Las Vegas. After doing his morning radio show on FM 98 WLLZ, he spent the afternoon at Tiger Stadium. Before the lecture, Albom drove Red Wings coach Jacques Demors to Joe Louis Arena in order to get a story about the coach's pre-playoff feelings. After the lecture he was back at JLA writing his column.

The next morning a reporter eaught up with him between his radio show and another trip to Tiger Stadium, Later that evening, he would cover the Red Wings second playoff game, then prepare to head off to Chicago with the Wings.

Albom, who is single, spends his limited free time playing the piano and reading. "Next to my piano, my books are my most treasured possession," he says. "One of the biggest thrills I had when I moved into my own house was having a library. I don't read sports books - ever, I read classics.

The hope is that I can pick up a little of what I read and use it to develop my own style."

That style, he says, means a lot more than simply putting words on paper. "A columnist's best tools are his eyes, not his writing. Seeing the concept is 70 percent of the job, writing is the other 30 percent. I keep my eyes open. I try not to go into a locker room holding my pad out. Some days I'll just look around. Maybe I'll see a guy sitting there eating a jar of peanut butter. I'll start talking to him and maybe there's a whole story there. Or maybe not. The thing is, I don't go in thinking 'I'm going to do (a certain thing).' If I did, it would show. It would come out forced. "The people I work best with are those I get to hang around with over time. I spend a lot of time just being with these guys and not writing. Often the athletes can't separate the presence of a writer from the story. Athletes have a lot to tell you. Anyone who reaches the upper echelon has seen quite a bit. If you can pull that out of them, it's great. I try to spend enough time with them without writing stories so that they get to know me and I get to know them.

Because of his close ties with athletes, Albom knows when and how to speak out on an issue. He acknowledges that it's tough to write something bad about an athlete because of the working relationship he must maintain. But he also doesn't pull punches when he feels strongly about something. "I'm not in the business of taking pot shots at people," he says. "I have to deal with athletes for a while before I write something scalding. Those I have written negatively about have really deserved it." He mentions recent columns about Indiana University Basketball Coach Bobby Knight and America's Cup winner Dennis Conner as examples.

Furthermore, he has extensive views on the recent scourge of drugs in professional and college sports.

'These guys are magnificent in the way they play sports in their fields," Albom said at the War Memorial lecture. "But they don't understand any obligation to kids and to the world. When a situation comes where there's a question of 'Are they going to have fun or are they going to fulfill their expectations?" they're going to have fun. We expect these guys to behave differently. They didn't ask for that.

"We have to stop letting our kids think that athletes should be imitated off the field. That guy isn't in charge of bringing up your kid. You are. It's possible to be a bad person and a good athlete. We have to teach kids to admire athletes for their excellence, not their off-the field habits. It's in our hands."

Such comments round out the picture of Albom's philosophy on writing. Throughout his work, people are emphasized first, on-the-job heroics second. "I try to give people a different angle on sports, to be human and funny," Albom says. "I almost always want to do something different. Maybe along the way without people realizing it, I can slip in a little message. If someone walks away saying to himself, 'I've never thought about that before,' then I've accomplished everything I wanted to."

What's next?

Albom laughs and says he has no idea. "I don't think too far ahead," he says. He would like to write a book some day but "so far, I don't have enough to say to justify a book." He mentions that he might like to do a general column some time, but says he's not sure he's good enough. "I won't be doing the same thing for too long," he says. "I move at too fast a pace. I'd blow up. Unless I get an incredible offer from New York or Los Angeles = and that won't likely happen - this will probably be it.

In person, Albom's humility comes through loud and clear. And his written word speaks even louder.

Speaking of the Wings and their playoffs, my nomination for "Poorest Sport and Least Likely to Be Emulated" is Black Hawks forward Denis Savard. Savard had a less-than successful playoff against the Wings, smashing his stick and pouting whenever Detroit forwards did their jobs and checked him. The low point of the week came when he reportedly agreed to a between-periods interview, then cancelled after the Wings made him look bad during that period. In the next three weeks, we will play against seven of the top 10 teams in Class A, and six of the top 10 teams in Class B. It all starts tomorrow at the East Grand Rapids Invitational and I know our players look forward to the challenge."

Feeling By Deanna Hawthorne

Impact of exercise on the brain

Carol felt depressed. College graduation was imminent and she had just received a "D" on her latest biochemistry exam. She was extremely worried that the low mark might jeopardize her chances for medical Pulling on her jacket, she went out for a long, brisk walk on the hilly roads on the campus. By the time she returned to her dorm, her spirits were lifted, her depression was gone and she sat down at her desk with renewed determination.

Is it really true that exercise can help with mental anxiety and depression? The Greeks believed in the "cerebral satisfaction" of exercise and, in fact, many of the Greek scholars were referred to as "walking scholars.

The late president John F. Kennedy echoed this ideal as well, saying "Physical fitness is not only one of the most important keys to a healthy body, it is the basis of dynamic and creative intellectual activity. Intelligence and skill can only function at the peak of their capacity when the body is strong. Hardy spirits and tough minds usually inhabit sound bodies.'

If we were to take a poll, I would venture to guess that the majority of those sampled would believe in the concept of "strong mind in a strong body.'

Well over 1,000 studies have now been conducted which investigate whether or not exercise really results in measurable improvement in depression, anxiety, intelligence, self-concept and other psychological parameters. A team of researchers at Duke University has shown the importance of exercise on various psychological traits.

In essence, the group which exercised showed decreased anxiety and depression, less fatigue and confusion and elevated energy. This study basically showed that healthy, well-adjusted middle-aged people can increase their sense of well-being by exercising. The University of Wisconsin compared the effects of a running program against psychotherapy with depressed subjects. Running was found to be effective in alleviating moderate depression.

Exercise does more than decrease anxiety and depression and elevate mood. Self-concept is also improved and has been strongly correlated with exercise in many studies. In one, Dr. J. Eickhoff has shown that a 10-week aerobic exercise course increased self-esteem and self-concept, especially for the subjects who were in the lowest category to begin with.

The National Institute of Mental Health has concluded

a) Physical fitness is positively associated with mental health and well-being;

b) Exercise is associated with the reduction of stress emotions such as anxiety;

c) Appropriate exercise results in reductions in various stresses such as neuromuscular tension, resting heart rate and some stress hormones;

d) Current clinical opinion holds that exercise has beneficial emotional effects for all ages and both sexes.

If you want to feel better about yourself, exercise! See you at the Cottage Hospital Run on Sunday, May 3.

Finess Nothing is worse than a spring moaning

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Sports shops are abuzz with activity and teams are being organized for the upcoming softball season. It's spring, and if you're like most people, you'll put on a pair of shorts after work and head out to the ballfield or tennis court. It won't be until that night or the next morning when you realize a body was never made to handle as much pain as it is experiencing.

There will likely be little sympathy from an unforgiving spouse.

"You did it to yourself," your mate will say."You'll think better next time you exercise like a maniac. You have to go to work

And that is the problem. You have gone out and exercised because it's good for you, but now agony has set in and it is difficult to move.

It's a common problem that many weekend warriors and even those who stay in relatively good shape throughout the year experience in the spring.

Beth Ayn Deutsch, director of athletic medicine with Cottage Hospital Athletic Medicine Program (CHAMP), said doing moderate warm-up activity and flexibility stretching before performing an athletic activity is essential to avoid common sports injuries.

'Softball players take their winning and losing seriously, but not their conditioning," Deutsch said. "There is a lot of drinking involved with softball too, which can be a problem. What people need to remember is that there will be more wins if there are fewer injuries.'

Doing several minutes of flexibility stretching prior to getting out on the field will help the athlete avoid muscle pulls and possible muscle tears.

COMMON SENSE will help too. Don't throw hard and far when you start. Working up progressively to the long toss is a lot more sensible.

Deutsch says the most common injuries from softball are sprained ankles, shoulder injuries, muscle strains and sprained or twisted

"A lot of people still use the three-quarter-inch metal cleats which are too long for grass," Deutsch said. "Footwear is important — they need a turf shoe or a Deutsch said she has spent nine years working at the collegiate and university levels as an athletic trainer. She has also worked as an Olympic trainer for winter sports in Colorado Springs and Lake Placid. She has administered to many athletic injuries.

"One way to avoid the sprained ankle or twisted knee is to keep a close eye on the playing surface," she said. "Look for chuckholes and uneven surfaces.'

A twisted ankle is a fairly common problem in just about any sport, and Deutsch recommends ice for at least 24 hours to keep down swelling.

"Ice, compression and elevation," she said. "I keep ice on for at least 24 to 72 hours, and I don't put on any heat at all. The ice reduces swelling and controls hemorrhaging and pain. Once the pain has subsided, then you will be able to start using the ankle again."

She said it is important to get the ankle X-rayed if the swelling becomes severe and if the pain prohibits putting any weight on the foot. She noted that sometimes a severe sprain may require a cast to control swelling.

BICYCLING is a popular springtime activity, one that is very good for the bicyclist's cardiovascular system, and is relatively safe.

"You have to watch the laws and watch where you are riding,' Deutsch said. "Most injuries related to bicycles come from falls, and they are mostly head and facial injuries.'

Deutsch said she recommends wearing a helmet at all times when riding a bicycle. She said if someone spends $200 on a bike, $40 for a helmet is not out of the question.

Deutsch said that the cardiovascular benefit of riding a bike four miles is equivalent to running one mile. She said that would be riding at a moderate pace over a variety of uphill and flat terrain.

Tennis injuries often show up in a variety of ways. The most common injury is probably tennis Tennis elbow is usually due to faulty mechanics of ground strokes," Deutsch said. "In fact most tennis injuries are due to improper warm-up or improper training." Most injuries come in the form of inflamation from tendonitis or bursitis. "Bursitis and tendonitis are almost always a result of overuse," she said. "You've just done too much, too soon.

MANY INJURIES from tennis occur because players have selected the wrong equipment. Deutsch said that the weight of the racquet and the string tension are very important, and that age, conditioning and strength are all important in selecting the right racquet.

"Your sports shop should be able to help you in choosing the correct racquet," she noted.

Finally when you wake up in the morning feeling as though you've been hit by a truck, Deutsch recommends a little of the hair of the dog that bit you.

"If you're feeling very stiff or sore, a light jog, flexibility work or stretching should help alleviate the stiffness and soreness," she said. "I wouldn't go out and repeat the activity, but a light workout is a good idea.'

Deutsch strongly recommends not using heat ointments or lini-

Wellness - part 3

For most of us, making changes in our lives is a welcome excitement, a tantalizing opportunity to improve what no longer works for us. Once we step into the early stages in the process of life change, a very real fear must be over-

In the first article on wellness, you were exposed to the concepts of wellness, followed by the article on "Rating your Wellness." In the last of this series, we will cover primary methods of initiating changes.

Take time to review last week's rating chart to determine an area in which you recognize you have more potential. Next, on a separate piece of paper, list specific reasons why it would be personally beneficial for you to improve in this area.

While we are involved in this process, let us consider for a moment one of the most useful means of long-term self-

Journal-keeping takes a step beyond merely thinking something, to actually taking time to write it down. The writing process not only helps to resolve internal conflict, but also documents our path on the wellness journey.

Following is a topic list for you to consider while setting up your journal:

• Techniques for growth: exercise, tests and evaluations you have done to see yourself more clearly.

• Peak experiences: any high or deep feelings you have experienced when you met a challenge and succeeded. A real

End negative thoughts

Let us start by reversing a program that has not served us well and which is largely responsible for repeating failures one's life: negative thoughts. It takes time and practice to replace negative thoughts. One of the fastest ways to reprogram your thinking is through a relaxation and visualization technique. Simply put, this is a method to 'see" ourselves as successful in an area of our lives where we could only "see" failure previously.

For example, let's use a baseball player who has struck out in his last several at-bats. The player now can choose to continually relive his failure, or practice a form of visualization: "seeing" himself at bat and knocking the heck out of the ball.

No matter what the situation, if we can see ourselves with a success, the seed for that success has already begun to take root. We tend to produce according to the best or worst visions we have of ourselves.

Designing affirmative reminders is an attempt to impress upon the subconcious a more desirable imagery. Therefore, the wording becomes important.

• Describe what you want as opposed to what exists.

 These affirmations are for you to use on yourself only, not for changing another's be-

• Use realistic standards such as "regularly," or "consistently," rather than perfection words like "always" and "every time.'

• This is your program, dealing with your attitudes and behavior, not to compare with another person's.

Be willing to accept others where they are and understand that their timetable for change is different than yours. Make changes. Become what you want

'Street Smart' about N.Y. magazine writer

By Marain Trainor Special Writer

Fans of Christopher Reeve's "Superman I, II and III," soon to be a TV series, will be taken aback at seeing him wandering in and out of back street dives consorting with pimps and hookers. Nothing to be alarmed about, however. Reeves, as Jonathan Fisher, is there to write an inside story for the New York Journal. He does have a problem though. He can't find anyone who will talk to him. Harvard-educated and dressed accordingly, he doesn't inspire confidence among the girls or their associates.

Right down to the wire with an editor, Ted Avery (Andre Gregory), barking at his heels, he fakes a sizzling story that makes him a news celebrity. He gets his picture in Time magazine and his own roving reporter TV program, "Street Smart.'

It's all too wonderful until he finds that the ficticious character he has described exactly fits the real-life counterpart, Fast Black (Morgan Freeman).

Freeman is suspected of murder and needs an alibi. On the advice of his shyster lawyer, he goes along with Reeve's story. When the D.A., Leonard Pike (Jay Pat- matter.

terson), subpoenas Reeves' nonexistent notes, Freeman seizes on the opportunity to beat the murder rap. Reeves will fake notes to fit the story and include in them an alibi for Freeman. Reeves refuses and goes to jail for contempt

A star is born in this film and it's Morgan Freeman. His performance of Fast Black is phenomenal. Alternatingly charming and violently psychotic he is so much the ruthless, brutal Fast Black that he succeeds in making what could have been a stereotype.

Reeves still looks like the all-American hero Clark Kent, but he has some gray areas. He fakes a story. He loves his girlfriend but he cheats on her. Even so, the aura of nice guy surrounds him because of his clean good looks, that little grin that has become his trademark and his obvious good nature. We accept the premise that what he has done is a mistake, but one we can overlook. The fact that he is never part of the violent action helps even though he is the cause of some of it. His best scenes are those showing him as a reporter for "Street Smart" exposing various rackets.

Kathy Baker as Punchy gives a sympathetic performance as a hooker in Fast Black's cortege. Jack Patterson as the district attorney is a starchy but persistent prosecutor.

The cast makes "Street Smart" fascinating in spite of its subject

'Secret of My Success' is formula Michael J. Fox performance

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

The secret of Michael J. Fox's success is that he doesn't cross the Line of Expectation set up by his audience. On the positive side. this means moviegoers know exactly what they're in for when they buy a ticket to one of Fox's films. On the negative side, this means there isn't much spark or spontaneity in said films.

Case in point: "The Secret of My Success.'

This time, Fox plays a young college graduate who eschews his rural lifestyle for a career in New York. He kisses ma and pa goodbye as the titles roll, then spends the remaining two hours of the picture walking around wideeyed, trying to find a niche for himself in The Establishment.

Sounds familiar? It should. The character Fox plays, one Brantley Foster, is about as close as you can get to "Family Ties" " Alex Keaton without cloning him.

Here's the potential junior executive, conservatively dressed in gray pinstripe suit with red suspenders, looking bleary-eyed while employers tell him he doesn't have the experience necessary for the job.

Here's the smart-aleck upstart, his short hair slicked back, marching into the boardroom to butt heads with the chief executive of his company.

Need more? Here's the prettyboy hotshot, fantasizing over and chasing after a beautiful manager at his company (Helen Slater), being rejected at first but accepted at last. Surprise!

In "Success" we have the epitome of laziness. Everyone involved is afraid to take chances, so cliche and the expected rule the roost. What results, quite unsurprisingly, is a film with which viewers grow weary far too early. And which delivers any payoff far too late - like once you've left the theater.

"Success," which is supposed to be about Foster's unorthodox rise to the top of the business world, spends most of its running time engaged in glitzy, video-type sequences played to background if he alone bears the weight of the music, asking viewers to do little more than tap their feet to the beat. While we're supposed to be wondering, for example, how Foster will work his way out of the mailroom job his uncle (Richard Jordan) gave him, we instead see a drawn-out sequence played to rap music about Foster's adventures as a limo driver.

Better than half the movie is filled with such drivel. The other half contains numerous close-ups of the lead actor looking perplexed. Nobody in movies spends more time with horizontal lines tracking across their forehead because of perpetually inquiring eyebrows. Fox constantly acts as world's problems; He's a guy always in situations beyond his control. Many actors - Charlie Chaplin comes to mind immediately - are quite convincing as situational victims. Fox is merely going through the motions.

"The Secret of My Success" plays much like a Blake Edwards movie. It's full of people running around while rock music blasts on the soundtrack. It stresses visual elements over plot and character development. It is style over substance.

Fans of Michael J. Fox will be pleased with his "Success."

Others would do just as well to stay away. One suspects a similar scenario will be played out on a screen nearby in a few months. And Fox will probably be the star. The Line has been drawn. Don't expect Fox to cross it any-

DEADLINE FOR A CRITIC

By William X. Kienzle

Bill Kienzle has written an exceptionally fine character study of a man bent on deadly revenge in DEADLINE FOR A CRITIC, Ridley Groendal has convoluted the events of his life into a vendetta against those who had. however innocently, been involved in all of his failures. Groendal, himself, bears responsibility for everything which has happened to him, but he cannot accept this and assesses blame to others. Then, as a critic of the arts of vast reputation, he destroys the lives and careers of those four people who had the talent to best him.

Groendal dies, with the four having written him hate letters immediately before the event. Father Robert Koesler, Kienzle's sleuth, becomes more a catalyst than a detective as we weave into and out of the lives of Groendal and his victims. Their stories, and Groendal's, are fascinating, and DEADLINE FOR A CRIMC is as indecesting as a narrative mainstream novel as it is as a mystery. And that is, at the end, what it becomes . . . a very,

'Raising Arizona' is funny, endearing

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

"Raising Arizona" is an original - a wild, lovable comedy written by Ethan and Joel Coen. Produced by Ethan and directed by Joel, it has no precedent or counterpart. The two brothers will be remembered for their lowbudget successful suspense puton, "Blood Simple."

It is a hilarious story that begins with a 11-minute credit warm-up where viewers meet H.I. McDonnough (Nicholas Cage), a compulsive thief who robs convenience stores because they are on the way home and easy to til he meets Ed (Holly Hunter), a prison officer who books and fingerprints him. His third time in, he slips a ring on her finger, she accepts and they are married in the prison chapel. Along with his

The newlyweds settle into a trailer home in Arizona and spend their evenings sitting in campchairs outside their trailer watching the sunset. They are a happy, satisfied suburban couple until they decide they should have a child to complete their family unit.

When they discover that Ed is sterile, they are crushed until. It doesn't disturb H.I. that more they see a television news broadoften than not he gets caught, uncast featuring Nathan Arizona (Trey Wilson), a furniture magnate, and his wife, who have just become parents of quintuplets.

When Nathan says he doesn't know how they will handle five babies, H.I. and Ed opt to take one off his hands. So begins a wildy funny story with edges of poignancy.

The camera moves relentlessly, making all the zaniness of the story work. At the same time, there is depth and sweetness. H.I. is not too smart but he is likable. Ed is demanding but ardent. The result is a feeling of something special between them.

The supporting cast from Nathan Arizona, a caricature of every high-powered huckster ever encountered, to H.I.'s neighbors (Sam MacMurray and Frances McDurmand) who drop over to see the baby with their housewrecking crew of kids, to John Goodman and William Forsythe, H.I.'s former prison pals who escape from prison through a sewer and arrive smelly and confident of shelter; to Randall (Tex) Cobbas, the motorcycle bad man, are all well cast.

And if this is not enough, "Raising Arizona" has an ending that will delight you.

Linking Individuals to Needs in the Community is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to coordinate needs with resources. This is accomplished by placing goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of Metropolitan Detroit charitable agencies. Operating since 1971, LINC is proud of the accomplishments it has made and strives to increase its resource base. If you have recyclable items, no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100 with your donation, KEEP IT MOVING!

Supplies that would be helpful are pressure canners, water bath canners, large pots, commercial hot pads, hairnets, aprons, and plastic gloves (for food handling).

insurance against any claim which a crew member might raise. He has also signed an agreement to hold the yacht club harmless against all claims which the crew may make against the yacht club or race committee. As a result of the injury the crew member sues the skipper and also the yacht club. The skipper's insurance agrees to defend him against the direct claims of the crew member. The yacht club reminds the skipper that he agreed to indemnify the yacht club, so the skipper tells his insurance company that they must also defend the yacht club.

The insurance company states that they will defend against the skipper's negligence but if the race committee or yacht club was negligent and the skipper, by contract, (the pre-race hold harmless agreement that was signed - remember?) agreed to indemnify the yacht club and/or race committee, the insurance will not respond, for that portion of the claim against the yacht club, because the skipper assumed liability under contract. The skipper is left to respond himself. As you can see, the consequences could be "devastating," according to the USYRU Race Management Hand-

Insurance can be confusing. It behooves us to question our agents on the type of coverage we have on our small boats. We cannot afford to be careless with this facet of our recreational dollars. We need to know what is in the fine print. We can ill afford the high costs of ignorance. (Technical information for this column was provided by The Leonard-Gerow Agency).

NEXT WEEK: insuring boats over 26 feet.

Macomb Maidens win title

The Macomb Maidens - a team; they are North High stugroup of female high school basketball players from the Macomb County area — won the Michigan State Junior Olympics 18 and under basketball championship last Sunday, beating the Flint Dream Team All-Staters, 65-58, at L'-Anse Creuse North High School.

The victory gave the Lady M and Ms the right to represent Michigan in the National Junior Olympics Tournament in New Mexico in July, according to team coach Bob Majchrzak.

Two Grosse Pointe girls are members of the championship dents Barbie Loeher and Leslie Talos, who also played basketball for the Lady Norsemen for four years. Loeher also earned the academic athlete award given to four members of the Lady M and Ms for their outstanding classwork and their achievement on the basketball court.

The Macomb Maidens 16 and under team lost in the finals on Sunday, 79-64. South High student Carmina Amezcua and North's Robin Wheatley played on that team; Wheatley also earned academic athlete honors.
