Nine-year-old resident may be youngest to visit North Pole

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

For a 9-year-old, any trip out of state is an adventure, but for Robert "Rocky" Bryant, a trip to the North Pole may get him into the Guiness Book of World Records.

John Bryant, Rocky's father, took the young boy on a nine-day vacation which brought them into Canada's Northwest territories, beyond the Arctic Circle and atop the world.

The Bryants agreed to allow Rocky to make the trip after meeting the man who headed the expedition in Seattle, Wash.

"I had this vision of them flying into the arctic with a cigar-smokman, we were both comfortable that the trip would be safe."

So father and son got on a plane at Metropolitan Airport and flew to Toronto. From there, they flew to Edmonton where they met some of the people they would accompany to the North Pole.

One member of the group was James Lovell, one of the astronauts who landed on the moon.

Bryant said they traveled with noted arctic explorer, Paul Emile Victor. Astronaut Lovell, Bryant said, was with a small group testing arctic clothing.

From Edmonton the group flew on a DC-9 to Resolute Bay, 1,592 ing pilot who was chewing on a miles north, on Cornwallis Island piece of whale blubber," Dottie some 570 miles north of the Arctic Bryant said. "After meeting the Circle. Bryant said that flight north took longer than it does to fly from coast to coast in the United States.

At those latitudes in early April, the sun shines for 24 hours. 'The sun didn't go down and neither did this son," Bryant said, nodding at Rocky.

Rocky said there were a few bumpy landings in the flights they took, especially when they landed at the Pole in a De-Havilland Twin-Otter aircraft.

The Twin-Otters, short take-off and landing planes equipped with skis, are a turbo-prop airplane, fitted with ski-wheels and they have the capacity to land on a dry runway, snow or ice.

"I thought it was fun," the youngster said. "Just getting to the Pole was great. It looked like a desert with snow and a lot of Bryant said daytime temperatures were about 25 degrees below zero centigrade.

After landing at Eureka, a Canadian weather station on the west coast of Ellesmere Island, the group made the assault on the

From Eureka, the group flew to Lake Hazen near the 82nd parallel. A four-man team had landed there in a supply plane a week earlier, and set up a fuel cache and then camped to keep an eye on fuel they had delivered so the pole-bound group would have no trouble refueling.

From Lake Hazen, the world's most northerly lake, the group flew 566 miles in just over four hours across the permanent polar

Bryant said that most of the time, the small twin otters were crammed with people, gear and fuel. The fuel is carried in 55 gallon drums and pumped into the planes' fuel tanks while in flight on long trips.

"There are no gasoline stations to fill up at up there," Bryant

All the efforts of the supply plane team at Lake Hazen, the crew of the Twin Otters and other expeditions members were geared to the one hour the group would spend at the North Pole. The other 13 hours were spent getting there and back.

"When we went over the magnetic pole, our compasses were going around in circles," Rocky said. "When we were at the North Pole our compasses were pointing south.'

At the Pole, the planes had to be kept running the entire time because they could take no chances with the engines not starting due to the severe cold.

Rocky said he was never frightened during the entire expedition, and proudly informed a questioning reporter that he was even allowed to co-pilot the aircraft at one point.

The co-pilot was back pumping fuel into the tanks and I sat up in his seat and helped to fly the plane," Rocky said. "Flying a plane is pretty easy when you are up in the air. It is the take-off and landings that are hard."

Bryant said that the explorers he was with could not recall anvone so young on a trip to the North Pole, and that Rocky may See NORTH POLE, page 20A

Skateboard ramp trial ends in hung jury

After deliberating for more than three hours April 22, six Grosse Pointe jurors couldn't agree on a verdict for or against Nancy Cawley, mother of two, and owner of a large backyard skateboard ramp.

Neighbors filed two complaints against Cawley who allowed her son and five of his friends to build the 15-foot long structure in the yard last year so they could practice their skateboarding.

Cawley said the first charge of "boisterous activity" was alleged to have occurred on Aug. 15, but she showed the court evidence that the ramp wasn't even completed until that day.

The first count was thrown out, but count two, also a boisterous activity complaint, was taken to full trial.

After not reaching a verdict Wednesday, the jury reconvened April 24 for three more hours before coming back with a split 3-3 decision.

Since the jury was not able to agree on a verdict, the case has been dismissed. Charges could still be filed again, and it would be up to the city prosecutor to make a determination at that time.

Higher grades won't be required for sports

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

With an insistent minority of one voting against, the school board two weeks ago voted not to increase grade requirements for sports participation. Board secretary Carl Anderson fought against the policy at both read-

"I have strong feelings that we can do better," Anderson said. "We're a lighthouse district — we should have higher standards."

The Michigan High School Athletic Association has ruled that student athletes must have completed at least 20 hours of course work and achieved a 2.0 grade point average during the previous semester. The new policy represents an attempt by the Grosse Pointe schools to come to grips with their expectations for sports participants.

The athletic directors at both high schools argued against demanding more than a 2.0.

"It's a question of whether we want to broaden sports participation or eliminate students," said Charles Hollosy of South High School, at the March meeting when the subject was first discussed. Hollosy said studies show that students who are dropped from sports for poor grades tend not to improve their academic performance.

"Counselors agree that sports are extremely important to these students," added North's Thomas Gauerke. "It's good for them to rub elbows with kids who have higher grades. If there were a real problem with grades, we should do something about it, but these kids are improving their self-image."

Anderson argued that schools everywhere are trying to raise their standards. "I don't support the minimal standards of the MHSAA," he said. "We ought to do better than that. I feel that way about all extracurricular activities, not just sports.'

To encourage higher academic achievement than the minimum MHSAA requirements, the Grosse Pointe schools have adopted a policy calling for rewarding high achievers with special certificates. Students with a 3.0 who earn varsity letters will receive League Academic Team Certificates; non-letter winners with a 3.0 grade average will receive a Grosse Pointe Schools Cer-

The argument is largely academic, as most sports participants in Grosse Pointe exceed the 2.0 minimum requirement, according to the athletic directors. In 1985, 92 percent of the student athletes had at least a 2.0. The figure increased to 95 percent in 1986.

These figures compare to 85 See ATHLETE, page 20A

Pointer of Interest W. James and Martha Mast

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Several years ago during one of their earlier trips to Central America, it became known to the local workers on the archeological expedition that the Masts had paid to work. It was beyond the natives' comprehension that anyone would pay to be dozens of miles from running water, work all morning and afternoon in 90degree heat with the humidity hovering around 100 percent and deal with poisonous snakes and other pesky critters residing in a tropical jungle.

W. James Mast

Yep, they paid to be there. And they would pay to do it again, except they have become so valuable to the head archeologist, that their expenses will be paid as long they want to continue.

W. James and Martha Watkins Mast, both 55, of Grosse Pointe Farms, have been spending their winter vacations in the jungles of Central America and Mexico for many years. Since the early 1980s. they have become archeological assistants, and the winter vacations have become eight-week stints in some of the more remote areas in the hemisphere.

Mast was born and raised in Grosse Pointe Farms. Martha was born in Normal, Ill., and her family moved to the Farms when she was eight. They met at Grosse Pointe High School. Both were involved with the Pointe Players and Martha was the editor of Tower, the school's newspaper.

They will be married 35 years in September, and say they are going to continue to be archeologists for the forseeable future.

Mast is a builder/developer. He is currently involved with developing Kerby Place, a 16,000 square foot office development on the corner of Kerby and Mack in the Farms. He inherited W.H. Mast Co., a building and real estate development firm from his father. He and his son, Brad, one of the Masts' five children, are partners in the company. Martha has been chairman of the Alpha Phi Foundation, an international women's sorority since 1978. The volunteer job requires 40 to 60 hours a week. She will remain the organization's chairwoman until 1988

Both are members of the Detroit Zoological Society and the Founder's Society of the Detroit Institute of Arts. Mast is on the board of directors of the Child-

Immediately after the explosion. Tujaka conducted a search for Fincham and located him near the basement landing face down.

He pulled him to the landing and up some steps before he was assisted by Rea and Prystup.

Tujaka suffered first and second degree burns and Fincham was treated for smoke inhalation and a concussion.

Rea, Prystup and Onderbeke received first degree burns. Reece narrowly escaped injury since he had just left the basement to

Bournemouth residents complain about traffic

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

Eight residents of Bournemouth Road attended the April 20 meeting of the Woods city council to point out their concern for what they say is an excessive volume of traffic on their street. They also expressed concern for the in creasing amount of traffic that they say will occur during and after the redevelopment of the Pointe Plaza area.

Dan Chicklas, spokesman for the group, said the residents want a cul-de-sac at the intersection of Mack and Bournemouth to eliminate traffic problems. Others in the group expressed concern for the safety of young children playing in front of homes. Kenneth J. Wright, another Bournemouth Road resident, suggested the addition of speed bumps as a solution to the excessive speed occurring on the street.

Councilwoman Jean Rice, responding to a resident's accusation that Bournemouth is a dangerous street, said that one pedestrian fatality occurred in the mid:50s, and pointed out that thecity has a good pedestrian safety record.

Councilman Paul Beaupre said that placing a cul-de-sac on one street "opens up a can of worms" and other streets between I-94 and Mack will ask for the same consideration.

The council voted to refer the matter to a Committee of the Whole, after proper notification.

Meet the candidates

Voters will have their first opportunity to meet the candidates for school board when they gather for discussion and questions next week. The meeting, sponsored by Citizens for Excellence in Education, will be held at the Grosse Pointe Central Library, Tuesday, May 5, at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited.

Street resurfacing program planned

Four residential streets in the Park are tentatively scheduled to be resurfaced this year depending on available funds and bids. The 1987-88 budget has a tentative allocation of $180,000 for street maintenance. Acting upon the recommendation of the Street Improvement Committee, the city council approved the following: Buckingham from Mack to Jefferson; Three Mile from Mack to Jefferson; Pemberton from Jefferson to Windmill Pointe Drive; and Lakepointe from Jefferson to Windmill Pointe Drive.

"We estimate we can do two of the four streets for $180,000, depending on bids," City Manager John Crawford said.

Three shot at in Harper Woods

Three men, two from Grosse Pointe Woods, said they were shot at Tuesday, April 21, around 9 p.m., by a youth who stood up through the sunroof of a silver Escort. The men were driving on Bournemouth near Craig in Harper Woods just north of Moross and east of Mack.

Harper Woods Police Chief Gary Ford said that the three men, who were in their late teens and early 20s, reported that they were driving in the area when they passed the silver Escort with three occupants, which followed them. They, in turn, dropped behind the Escort and followed it.

After taking turns following each other, the Woods men lost the Escort, but later saw the vehicle again at Bournemouth. One individual then popped up through the sunroof and began shooting at them.

Ford said police recovered a spent .25 caliber shell and have a report of a parked vehicle which appears to have been struck by a

Crockett meets with ministers

The annual breakfast Monday with eastside ministers, usually an official opportunity to tell Congressman George Crockett what's on the community's mind, turned into a Crockett love in, as 13th District Democratic party honchos competed to praise their fourth-term representative.

Prompted largely by strong public criticism from the right, the defense apparently surprised Crockett as well as some of the attendees. "I wasn't expecting this," he said. "Of course, I can't say that I mind."

The lengthy praise session cut short the opportunity for feedback that has been a feature of the breakfast in past years, as Crockett and his guest, New York Congressman Edolphus Towns, had a noon plane to catch.

The April 27 breakfast was held for the first time in Grosse Pointe Park, at the invitation of the Rev. Timothy Pelc of St. Ambrose Church. "I am delighted to be invited, and even more delighted to see an integrated audience," Crockett told the crowd.

Park Mayor Palmer Heenan greeted the crowd, telling them that the opportunity to express their views is "essential to the workings of the republic . . . Government can be your best friend or your worst enemy," he said.

The role of the church in politics was the subject of the day. The Congressional Black Caucus now has "more preachers than lawyers," according to Crockett, who has now invited all but one of the congressman-ministers to speak in Detroit.

"Prayer and politics are one," said Dr. Charles Adams, minister of Hartford Memorial Baptist Church and past president of the Detroit chapter of the NAACP. "The Holy Spirit and social works are not independent activities."

Towns, a third-term congressman with a church in Queens, spoke of the need to educate young people to recent social history. As young women today do not realize the opportunities that were closed to their mothers, so young blacks are sometimes unaware of the specifics of the civil rights movement.

Towns spoke of growing up in a small town in the South, the selfproclaimed strawberry capital of the state. The annual strawberry festival was the highlight of the summer - a highlight in which blacks were not allowed to partici-

When Towns was elected to Congress, he received a telephone call from the mayor of that little town - inviting him to be the grand marshal of the strawberry parade.

"I called my aunt, I called my mother and my sisters. I even paid for some of them to come down and see me in the parade. My mother's feet (were dancing) and she was telling everybody, 'That's my oldest son, the one who's leading the parade.'

"But my 12-year-old daughter was looking frustrated. She said, 'Daddy, what's all the fuss? Daddy, this ain't nothin'!'

Amid laughter, Towns said his daughter was too young to know what the occasion really meant. "We have to reflect on the things we want to leave for the coming generation," he said. "Our young people have to have a clear understanding of the past."

Council splits on salary

By Pat Paholsky News Editor

Like Mount Vesuvius, the Grosse Pointe Park city council erupts periodically. It erupted Monday night. A period of outward harmony was broken over the issue of the municipal judge's salary. In the end, however, all of the council members voted in uni-

The 30-minute heated discussion began when Councilman Mark Valente, addressing a proposed charter amendment that would adjust the salary of the municipal judge, recommended that the matter be put on the ballot in November. He proposed a maximum salary between $10,000 and $12,000 a year for the part-time position.

The maximum action that is be paid currently, set by charter, is $6,000. Municipal Judge Bev erly Grobbel earlier this year re signed her post effective June 1.

In the meantime, a committee consisting of council members has been accepting applications for the position in order to recommend a candidate to fill the unexpired two years of the four-year

Valente's support for a referendum elicited surprise from Mayor Palmer Heenan and Councilman Vernon Ausherman who asked what prompted his "change of heart." Valente has been on record as opposing a salary increase.

The sticking point came when Valente proposed that the council examine the language for the proposed charter amendment and vote on it at the next meeting in two weeks. He asked for time to study various options, such as compensation for substitute judges and if the amendment should give the council the authority to increase the salary at Heenan pressed Valente to "address the problem now. I want to address the problem tonight and I'm not going to adjourn the meeting (until we do). Why don't you give in and go all the way and do it right?

Heenan asked. "I'm trying to do it right," Valente answered. "I only ask for a couple of weeks to look at the (amendment language).'

"It seems to me you are going to accomplish what you want, Councilman John Prost said, speaking to Heenan. "It seems to me two more weeks is not unreasonable. You may win the battle and lose the war.'

"I've asked the council to address this issue five meetings ago and I have been tolerant,' Heenan said. "I think it stime we show good faith and not go halfway. We have a judge whose services I cherish and I would like to indicate to her our good faith. Two weeks more might be useless."

Mayor Pro Tem David Gaskin said he didn't think two more weeks would hurt the situation. 'Quite frankly, the judge has resigned and we have 17 candidates who are chomping at the bit. If the judge is going to appear on the scene, I wish she would do it and let the committee go home," (reforring to the possibility of Grobbel changing her mind about reigning).

When the vote was taken to decide on the charter amendment language at the next meeting, all of the council members voted for

Bashara to be honored

For the fourth year in a row, the International Institute of Metropolitan Detroit will honor several community leaders who have demonstrated a strong commitment to ethnicity and who have worked to promote crosscultural understanding among the 100 different ethnic groups which call this area home.

The 1987 inductees to the International Heritage Hall of Fame

are George N. Bashara, Jr. of Grosse Pointe Shores, Bernice Gershenson of Bloomfield Hills, Sylvia Gershenson Sloman of Bloomfield Hills and Walton A. Lewis of Detroit.

A native Detroiter, Bashara began his legal career in private practice with his father in 1960 and nine years later was appointed presiding judge of the Wayne County Probate Court. In 1973, he was appointed to the Michigan Court of Appeals and was re-elected to that court the following year. Bashara served on the Michigan Court of Appeals until 1982, when he resigned to become a partner with Dykema, Gossett, Spencer, Goodnow & Trigg.

Bashara has been a regular lecturer for the Michigan Judicial Institute sponsored by the Michigan Supreme Court and for the Institute of Continuing Legal Education. He is an elected member of the Board of Governors of Wayne State University.

Lebanese by descent, Bashara is an active member of the local Arab community. He is on the Arab-Chaldean Community Council Advisory Committee, the National Arab-American Anti-Discrimination Committee and is a local and national board member of the National Association of Arab-Americans. Bashara is also a member of the Arabic-Jewish Friends Committee, a group formed of Jews and Arabs who wish to foster good will and understanding between their respective communities.

To commemorate their outstanding contributions to the Detroit Metropolitan area, a dinner will be held on Thursday, May 7, at the St. George Cultural Center, 1515 N. Woodward, Bloomfield Hills. Tax-deductible tickets are $75 per person. Black tie is optional for the event, which will include ethnic entertainment.

Parking, cost delay vote on library plans

lans for expansion of library facilities in the Pointes now appear to be temporarily at a stalemate because of parking problems, cost estimates and other questions raised about the project.

As a result, the hope to put the necessary bond issue on the ballot in June has been abandoned and officials now are talking of a November election on the issue, with the specific dollar amount still to be determined.

At the moment, the parking problem involves the need to find additional spaces at or close to the Central Library in order to meet the requirements of the Farms parking ordinance. Under the ordinance, one parking spot would be required for each 100 square feet of usable space in the library. City Clerk Richard Solak has estimated that the library would have to provide about 330 spaces to meet the requirement.

In their preliminary plans, library and school officials had estimated they could provide close to 100 spaces, including the 26 currently available. But that total still would fall far short of meeting the requirement.

Another factor involved in the parking problem is that even to obtain the additional spaces called for in the preliminary plans, some inroads would have to be made on the South High School athletic field. That proposal naturally has upset the athletic department and student athletes.

The other major factor that has put the project on hold is the estimated cost of the addition to the Central Library and the improvements at the Woods and Park branches. When the project was first discussed 20 years ago, the cost was estimated at about $2.5 million. Now the estimate is up to $8 million. Yet the cost of living and the cost of construction are about triple what they were in 1967. So the estimate does not appear to be too far out of line, although it did shock some of the school board members when it came in.

As is often the case in such projects, what apparently is now needed is a compromise or series of compromises with respect to both the parking requirement and the overall cost. The fact is the need for expansion of the library facilities at all three locations is increasing, not declining, because of the high per capita usage. Yet the expansion and the parking have to be planned to meet future demands as well. So it won't be easy to work out satisfactory solutions.

The encroachment on the South athletic field is also a scumbling block, even though the school had become resigned to losing a small part of the field. But if the many additional parking spaces required by the Farms ordinance had to come out of the school field, it might make the playing area unusable. Some people have suggested that an entirely new location be found for the Central Library. But that solution would be even more costly and, in addition, raise a question about the use of the much-admired present building, designed by Marcel Breuer in 1951 and built two years later.

We wish we could offer a solution to the current impasse. But we can't, except to appeal for further consultations between the school board and the Farms council and the other involved parties that have legitimate interests in the final decisions.

However, if there are other concerned citizens in the Pointes who have constructive suggestions to offer, we are sure that the school board and the council would be glad to hear them. In the meantime, we hope the Pointes can avoid public wrangling over the merits of expanding a library and reducing the size of an athletic field. Both activities obviously are essentials in any community and any school system with the claims to excellence that the Pointes can make.

County in the red again

n one respect, Wayne County is similar to the federal government. It is still running in the red. But unlike Uncle Sam, the county has cut its spending and its work force in recent years. Unfortunately, its receipts also have declined. The result is a daily cost overrun of $50,000.

To remedy the fiscal problem, the country is going to have to borrow $60 million for cash and operations because so much of its revenue is committed to paying debts or past-due bills. But Arthur Carter, chairman of the board of commissioners, sees this as a "Band-Aid" approach and says the county may have to borrow another $200 million in order to address longstanding problems.

But that will create another problem: How to pay off the additional debt?

It is easy to say that expenses can be cut by further cuts in personnel and services. But the county already has cut its work force by more than 50 percent, or from about 5,000 to 2,300, in the last decade. Further cuts would be liable to do serious damage to county services.

When he took office in January, County Executive Edward McNamara said he would seek to improve the economic climate in the county in order to obtain more jobs and earn more tax revenues for the county. That, however, is a long-term hope rather than an immediate prospect.

In the meantime, the county may be forced to impose a tax increase just to pay off its debt. Before the crisis reaches that point, however, the public ought to insist that the county come up with new controls on the costs that have created the debt: indigent medical care and operations of the county jail.

McNamara, ever since he began campaigning last year, has said publicly that balancing the county budget would be his top priority. It still is. But achieving that goal will be no easier for McNamara than it was for his predecessor, William Lucas. the county's first elected manager, who made a start toward fiscal sanity through county reorganization but fell short of achieving a balanced budget on a regular annual basis.

Michigan to lead the GOP?

Tichigan, we are told, now is a leader of the national GOP in one respect. It will pick its delegates to the Republican National Convention next Jan. 29 and 30 in Grand Rapids and thus becomes the first state to select the delegates who will name the 1988 presidential nominee.

The early convention in Michigan was approved last week by state Republicans meeting in Troy as part of the party strategy of giving Michigan Republicans a greater say in the selection of the presidential nominee than they have had in recent national con-

At the moment, however, the question is whether Michigan Republicans will be supporting a national party favorite or one of the also-rans in the presidential derby. The question arises because the forces supporting the Rev. Pat Robertson, the TV evangelist from Virginia, and Rep. Jack Kemp. New York congressman, currently control the party organization. Neither is currently a national front-runner.

Vice President George Bush, who won the Michigan presidential primary in 1980, and is the leader in most national public opinion polls this year, still has strong support in Michigan but not on the state central committee which controls the party organization, U.S. Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, another leading candidate in national polls. also lacks support in the Michigan party organization.

So if one of the current favorites of the state GOP organization gets Michigan's 77 votes at the convention and turns out to be an also-ran, the strategy of being the first state to pick committed delegates will have backfired and left Michigan at the post along with its favorite candidate.

There is an out for the Michigan GOP in the situation, however. The state's delegates will be publicly committed to a candidate prior to the convention but will not be legally bound to vote for him at the conven-

The trouble is that states that climb aboard a bandwagon at the last minute in order to support the winning presidential nominee seldom share in the major political rewards distributed later by the winner. There is a political risk in supporting an underdog early in the campaign and that includes the possibility of heavy political loss.

Thus Robertson is an underdog who hopes to parlay his Michigan support into a position as a national contender. But if he persists in his efforts without winning much national support, he will deprive the state GOP of the advantage it hopes to achieve by becoming the first state in the union to pick its 1988 presidential delegates.

Lighten up

Lakeshore To Mayor Fromm and Members of the Farms Council:

We are delighted to hear such good news about our beloved Lakeshore Drive and its future paving - not a moment too soon.

However, we are concerned about the lack of lighting on the lake side of the drive in the Farms. Unlike the Shores, the Farms part of Lakeshore is very dark at night just past the curve at Lakecrest Lane and Warner Road. Could we not have reflectors to help determine the sides of the road, or if that is impossible, perhaps paint the new curbs with luminous material? Both of these suggestions would not interfere with the beauty of the lake, would be affordable and would greatly assist drivers to determine the whereabouts of the road - thereby staying clear of the water.

Susan Lambrecht Kitty Gushee Grosse Pointe Farms Analogy is simplistic

To the Editor:

Your recent letter-writer with the acorn-tree abortion analogy seemed extraordinarily simplistic.

I am pregnant. She is with child. A child has been conceived. All common statements used over the centuries meaning in anatomical terms a female egg has been fertilized by a male sperm and genetically a unique human being has begun life. Anatomy describes stages of development for this new individual using terms such as zygote, embryo, fetus, baby, infant, child, adolescent. adult - but still genetically the same individual who was conceived.

The Supreme Court decision of 1973 gave the medical profession for the first time in the history of this nation a right to kill innocent human life. The word innocent is important here because there are arguments concerning other forms of government-sanctioned killing such as capital punishment and war. Such cases usually assume an aggressor and another set of

So much of what influences teens in negative ways is the result of the drug and alcohol culture of the adults within the community. Not much will be done to help the children unless we can find better ways to attack the problems of addiction and addiction-compelled crime. He made soft squeaky sounds when he wanted somebody to pay attention to him or when he needed to be scratched behind the ears. He purred when he was petted. Gus is a guinea pig.

He reminded me of the parade of pets that have shared living quarters with my family during the last 20 years or so. With three children, 19, 17 and 11, you can imagine the variety of creepy, crawly, furry and finny things that have depended upon us for room and board.

He and the last two-thirds of his tail domestic pressures of living in a parted ways and Jenny was too frightened to tell anybody for a day and a half. I found the tail while I was vacuuming. Evidently it didn't hurt the gerbil because he lived for a long time afterward. After a few months I began wrapping up pairs of the little creatures and giving them to the children's friends for birthday gifts. I had to stop that when the children discovered they weren't getting invitations to birthday parties anymore. We've had a lot of goldfish and insects and odd-looking reptiles all worthless as pets, if you ask me. When you return to the house after taking the trash to the curb, fish don't wag their tails or drool on your shoes or run around in circles because they've missed you. Reptiles don't curl up on your stomach while you read the newspaper or lick your toes when you take your sneakers off. An insect won't lean his chin on your knee while you eat lunch or sit on your foot and gaze into your averted eyes every time you open a can of Obviously, the Smiths' most sucessful pet experiences have been with dogs - currently a 25pound hyperactive black poodle named Jingle. She's 14 years old now, and still keeping the burglers and squirrels on their toes. She's deaf and has cataracts and arthritis, but she's a Smith, just like the rest of us. She sleeps on our beds, begs bits of our food, and constantly checks up on the exact whereabouts of every member of the household. She's been to obedience school and flunked, hands down. She thought it was a social hour and couldn't stop fraternizing with the other students.

Old Jingle has been a good pet. She has provided unconditional, devoted affection since the first day she met us. She has only nipped a few selected people and every bite has been thoroughly provoked.

Pets are difficult to get rid of when you realize they're not suited to your family. We were up to 22 gerbils before we discovered they weren't for us. I knew the fish were a mistake within 15 minutes. It took a few months to discover that cats didn't fit into my lifestyle, as I started sneezing the day the cat moved in, and stopped sneezing the day he moved out.

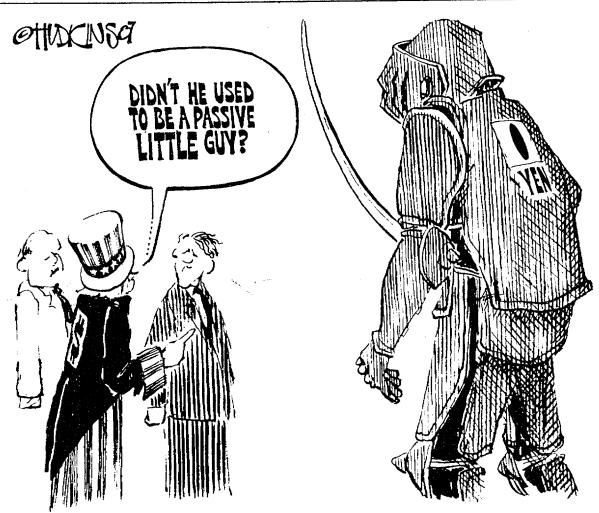

It's hard to get rid of something that sits patiently looking up at you with big brown eyes while you eat a pepperoni pizza and wets on the front seat of your car a few times, keeps you up all night whimpering after its distemper shot, and pushes its head under your hand to be petted when you sit down on the sofa.

We said a fond goodbye to Gus the guinea pig last Monday. But after Jingle goes to doggie heaven, I think I'll stick to potted plants. When a philodendron gets dull, I can trash it without feeling guilty and I don't have to find a good home for a withering fern. If I'm feeling crabby, I can scream at the geraniums and when the chives get on my nerves, I'll just eat them.

A Grosse Pointe Woods co-ed at Oakland University has pleased her parents - not with good grades, but by winning the university's annual Assassin contest.

Assassin is sort of a sport and sort of something to take your mind off of upcoming finals in the spring.

arguments becomes imperative.

Until the past couple of decades, only in countries where human rights have been suspended such as those countries with national socialism (example: Nazi Germany and Russia) have we seen abortions performed with government approval.

Our Supreme Court knocked out laws in all of our states in 1973 thus putting itself in a position of legislating an improper function of a court.

Hence the effort since then to have the appropriate legislative body of our land (Congress) correct the injustice (denial of the right to life) done by the Supreme Court.

Surely after all these years of debate we should have come a little further along than acorn-tree.

The Lakeshore Optimist Club of Grosse Pointe would like to thank you and the staff of the Grosse Pointe News for all of your help and cooperation in our special edition paper sale.

As you know, all of the proceeds go for the funding of our many youth- and communityrelated activities.

We would especially like to thank all of the people of Grosse Pointe and the surrounding communities who took the time to stop and buy one of our papers. It is that generosity that makes this fund-raiser the success it has been over the years.

From the neighborhood To the Editor:

The Grosse Pointe Park City Council should be more selective in choosing an architect for the proposed city hall face lift, (Grosse Pointe News, P. 14A, April 23,

According to statements made by architect John Sheoris and quoted in the story, the city hall is "sootridden, the soffits are an embarrassment and the windows are cracked, peeling and rotten." He further states "we are getting to look like the rest of the neighborhood."

Well, Mr. Sheoris, I have been a resident of the "rest of the neighborhood" for seven years and take strong objection with your last comment. The area that you speak so highly of has been showing its age recently, but I will gladly take the time to enlighten you with a tour of the neighborhood. Many homes and businesses have experienced some form of renovation over the past few years.

The restoration of our neighborhood is an ongoing and sometimes difficult problem for many of us; positive comments from architects employed by the city would provide encouragement for residents and business owners to keep up the good work.

No communication

To the Editor:

There are a few things that I feel that you should know. First of all, at the Grosse Pointe Kresge's store, there is a total of 233 years of faithful service, that has beengiven to the Kmart Corporation. In return these faithful servants are getting a very bad kick in the teeth from their company, so to speak. The store will soon be closing, and the company has not officially informed any of the employees of this matter. They had to hear it from the customers way back in November 1986, and in the newspaper, and on TV just a month or so ago. Why the big secret? They have no official information of any kind, and there are so many questions that need to be answered. Such as when is the closing date, and how much grace time is there on the Blue Cross.

A year ago a few of the Kresges closed along with the Designer Depots (which was also owned by Kmart). The employees were allowed to have a store-to-store transfer into the Kmart stores, or seek out the jobs themselves.

With these new closings, the Kmart Corporation is refusing all store-to-store transfers, and are instructed to refuse employment from the Kresge people looking for work. Shouldn't they have the same rights as those employees before them? Some of these women at the Grosse Pointe store, have from three years up to 39 years of service. A few of them just need a few more years to go to receive full pensions. Is the Kmart Corporation so coldblooded as to let these people go so casually? They should at least give them a chance to accept or refuse employment with their company that they have given their lives to. A lot of these women are the sole support of their families, and they need a job. These women were so loyal all of those years, but they are not getting any loyalty in return.

The orders have been stopped, all layaways have been stopped, soon everything will be at a standstill, and the company still will not tell the employees officially that their store is closing. I guess one day soon they will arrive for work and the doors will be closed for good.

Is there anything that you can do to help?

Can you get the lines of communication open?

Can you inform the people in Michigan, how the Kmart Corporation is treating employees who helped to make their company a big success? After all the Kresge people were the pioneers in the business. They are a part of the company, but feel so sepa-dred fifty people planned to attend the annual event.

An advertisement by a local real estate firm posed the question: What's wrong with women selling real estate? The ad continued that women were as well qualified as men in selling homes for the following reasons: They are basically home-minded and homemakers; they control threefourths of the national wealth; purchase 80 percent of all department store merchandise and 90 percent of all food. "In fact 18 out of every 24 hours are spent by women within the confines of the four walls of their castle, either minding the kids, cooking, washing, sleeping, entertaining...so why wouldn't a woman salesperson be better able to look at a home from a wife's point of view?"

A headline on the woman's page read: Star of Sea ladies to tour inner city. The women were planning to tour several services sponsored by the League of Catholic Women, including the Barat House and Casa Maria Community Center.

A new building begins the second 100 years at the Academy

Founded as the Academy of the Sacred Heart in 1885, the Grosse Pointe Academy has evolved through the years as the community's needs have evolved. Originally a day and boarding school for girls, the Academy became a co-educational day school in the late 1960s. In 1962, a Montessori program was established in the Early School. It is now the longest-running program of its kind in Michigan. Currently, 118 children from 2½ to 6 are enrolled in the Early School program.

Grades one through eight are housed in the main school building. This "new" academic wing was added to the 1885 vintage Lakeshore building in 1929, the same year that the 1899 Gothic chapel was first enlarged and refurbished. The chapel was again renovated in 1985 and restored to its 1929 splendor.

The newest construction on campus is 4,620square-foot addition to the Early School building. Designed by architect Michael Kirk, the new building complements the materials and architectural details of the existing buildings, but stands on its own. The new wing adds a gymnasium, a large classroom, a multipurpose room and an outdoor courtyard.

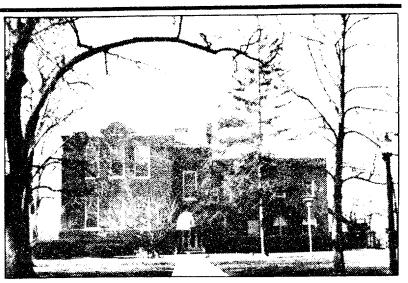

The new building was founded through a contribution by the Michael T. Timmis family in memory of their daughter, Laura, an Academy graduate who died in 1985. The Timmis children attended the Academy from Early School through graduation. The facility is named the Laura Elizabeth Timmis Early School Building and will be dedicated Friday, May 1, with a private Mass, dedication ceremony and reception.

"Laura was a very special girl who embodied the qualities that we strive to instill in our children at the Academy," said Dr. Sidney I. DuPont, headmaster. "The gift of a school building in Laura's memory is an appropriate way to recognize the impact that the Academy environment had on her life, and the positive ways that she touched all of us during her years as a student here.'

On Saturday, May 2, from 10 a.m. to noon, the Academy will host a housewarming in the new facility and members of the community are invited to attend.

The original Early School Building was built on Academy property in 1886 as a parish school for neighboring St. Paul Catholic Church. Enlarged in 1912, the school has been used for the youngest children of the academy since 1926.

With the foundation in place, the initial walls of the frame of the Laura Elizabeth Timmis Early School Building are erected.

The new addition uses material and form to respond to the Gothic heritage of the campus. It houses a large classroom, activity room and a gymnasium - functions that require volumetric spaces. The exterior forms are reflected in the interior spaces, which are modulated by dormers, high ceilings and large, arched windows.

First historic plaques presented

The Ralph Harman Booth House, with its early English Renaissance facade, was built in 1924. Booth was a collector and a Detroit art patron who traveled around the world acquiring interior fixtures for his home.

Some of Grosse Pointe's earliest families are buried at St. Paul Cemetery. Two burials pre-date the cemetery: Catherine Vernier, who died Aug. 21, 1831, and her husband. John B. Vernier, who died Jan. 29, 1834.

The Cadieux farmhouse is one of the oldest houses in the Grosse Pointes. The exact age of the modest white clapboard house is unknown, but it is estimated to have been built before 1880 and perhaps as early as 1860.

St. Paul Cemetery, two historic homes selected for honor

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society awarded its first three historic markers at its annual meeting yesterday at the Country Club of Detroit. The specially designed bronze plaques were presented to the owners of the Ralph Harman Booth home, the Cadieux farmhouse and St. Paul Cemetery.

The Ralph Harman Booth House on Washington Road was designed by Marcus R. Burrowes of Detroit in 1924 and is currently owned by Peter and Cynthia Ruffner.

The Cadieux farmhouse, on the corner of Jefferson and Notre Dame, is one of the oldest houses in the Grosse Pointes. Originally built closer to Lake St. Clair on the old Cadieux ribbon farm, the house was moved to its present location around 1900. Current owner is Peter Kauffman.

St. Paul Cemetery, on Moross, was purchased by St. Paul Catholic Church in 1868 to replace the original cemetery site behind the church. Some of Grosse Pointe's earliest families are buried at St. Paul Cemetery. Accepting the award on behalf of the church was Msgr. Francis X. Canfield.

Future site and building nominations for marker awards will be solicited from the general public, according to President Lisa Gandelot.

The bronze plaques, which are designed to be mounted in a visible location, feature an interpretation of the society's logo, a windmill that was erected sometime before 1750 in the Grosse Pointe area.

The historical society was founded in 1945 and currently has 412 members. Its goal is to preserve Grosse Pointe's rich heritage by increasing awareness of the area's history and educating its residents through lectures, workshops and field trips.

Effect of new immigration act

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial Council of Sponsors will present "Immigration: Will We Need Guarded Borders?" on Wednesday, May 6, at 7:30 p.m. The program will clarify the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986

James H. Montgomery, Detroit district director for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), will discuss this important piece of legislation and how it will affect the entire U.S. population.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service predicts that the 1980s will become the busiest decade in history for the arrival (legally and illegally) of foreigners in the United States, with numbers surpassing the 8,795,000 new Americans who entered the country between 1900 and 1910.

In Michigan alone, there are approximately 100,000 illegal aliens living and working within its borders. The new law, which is designed to stem the tide of illegal entry into the country, will have great impact on the entire population of the State.

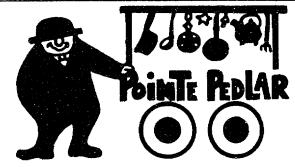

The law provides amnesty for illegals who can prove they have lived in the United States before Jan. 1, 1982. It also requires employers to certify all new hires.

The program is $5 per person; $2.50, students with I.D. The War Memorial is located at 32 Lakeshore Road. Call 881-7511.

Watch the young artists brighten the Village

The Grosse Pointe Village Association is inviting all first through fifth grade children, attending a public or private Grosse Pointe school, to a half-day of fun and creativity, painting the windows along Kercheval between Cadieux and Neff Roads. This first "Paint the Window" contest will be held Saturday afternoon, May 2.

This year's theme is Michigan's Sesquicentennial, so children are encouraged, although not required, to paint something about Michigan. All children will receive a certificate of appreciation. In keeping with the Michigan theme, letters from Governor Blanchard will acknowledge the child who best reflects some aspect of our state, and the school whose students best portray Michigan as a whole.

Painting will be done between noon and 2 p.m. and prizes will be awarded on the same day at 5:30 p.m. on the Village Plaza. The painting will be left on display the following week, so that the entire community can enjoy them.

Assumption Cultural Center is community success story

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

As Grosse Pointe churches go, Assumption Greek Orthodox Church is a young upstart. Ten years ago, the land at 21800 Marter Road was a vacant field. Neighbors were not sure whether to boo or to cheer when they heard that Assumption Church, then located at 11000 Charlevoix, bought 10 acres of land and was planning to build a hall, classrooms, offices, a gymnasium and a new church on the Construction began in 1976, and Joan DeRonne began working as business administrator for the church in 1977. "My position was a new one for the Greek Orthodox faith," she said.

When it was time to begin construction, the council decided to put the church on hold for awhile, and get started instead on the gymnasium, the fellowship hall and some classrooms. "They decided to build the community center first," said DeRonne, "because it would be used more than once a week.

"John Bruce from the Neighborhood Club came to me to say there was a need for a community center at this end of Grosse Pointe. Wayne State University approached us, too.'

In 1977, fitness was just coming into vogue, she said. "I thought it might catch on, so I considered starting an exercise program for our own parishioners. Father (the Rev. Demetrios S. Kavadas, pastor) said OK, and he even pointed out the ancient Greek idea about healthy bodies being just as important as healthy minds. He said that whatever we decide to do, we should be sure to do it with 'Christian elegance.'

In the fall of 1977, DeRonne also persuaded a few friends to share their expertise by teaching some classes at the center — Greek folk dancing, Greek language and Greek cuisine. The Assumption Cultural Center printed up one page of class offerings and mailed it to church parishioners and to families living in the immediate neighborhood. Women's Fitness - "fitness, firming and cardiovascular development - all to music," was one of the 14 classes listed.

About 250 people signed up for classes that season.

Today, 10 years later, 500 to 700 people are in the exercise program alone, which has been named Kalosomatics. Thirty-two instructors teach 14 different sessions each week, according to Barb Otul, Kalosomatics director. Sessions meet two or three times a week. Kalosomatics is now offered all over the state and she estimated that about 3,000 people participate in the three-level, nine-week Kaiosomatics programs. Different sessions are modified especially to suit the needs of women, men and children. There's even a special version for senior citizens or people who want a less strenuous exercise workout. The term Kalosomat-

"Our main concern is our own parishioners," DeRonne said. These ac-

Kalosomatics isn't the only success story to come out of Assumption Cultural Center. The babysitting service was begun so that young mothers could join the daytime exercise groups. Today it has expanded into a nursery school that is licensed for the care of children from 12 months through kindergarten age. Assumption Church recently purchased Eastpointe School from the Southlake school district. They currently employ a staff of 30 teachers and aides and have 360 youngsters attending the nearby facility.

The church's community programs have expanded to include a catering service that provides banquet facilities and food for large dance to picture-framing and calligraphy; from flower-arranging to financial fitness; a driving school for teens; yoga; arts and crafts classes; even a Dale Carnegie course.

"By doing community activities this way, we didn't isolate our religion," DeRonne said. "We wanted to make this into a community and family center. We're not a copy of community services in Grosse Pointe or St. Clair Shores or of the War Memorial's activities. We try to have only original offerings.

"This has also provided cash flow for the church," she said. "The church is of course, never in a profit position. For churches to survive to day; they need to be prudent and frugal with finances."

In 1981 and '82, with the help of tivities have been an outgrowth of an attempt to serve our own families." She estimated the church membership to be about 1,000 active families. Sixty percent reside in Grosse Pointe or St. Clair Shores, she said. DeRonne's job as church administrator has gotten too large for one person and she is now coordinator of activities only. Someone else has taken over church administration duties.

DeRonne said her own personal ambition is to take all the classes that the cultural center offers. "I've tried. But I get into Kalosomatics, for instance. I get down on the floor to do the exercises and I see the floor needs cleaning, and I in off to tend to that.

"Down the road, we hope to get into some sort of a senior citizens' housing project.'

For some kids, spring vacation isn't a time for playing outdoors and getting muddy. For 20 Grosse Pointe kids, it was time for the annual science day camp.

Presented by the Living Science Foundation, the program was a time for finding out about toads and helicopters and dinosaurs and rockets.

"Lots of kids have an interest in science," said program coordinator Terri Brewer. "This is sparking their interest. It touches on a little bit of everything.'

A visit to science day camp is a brush with controlled pandemon-

Kids climb on tables to drop whirling paper helicopters. They stretch out eager hands to poke at sleepy toads. They wince and groan as a boa constrictor wraps around their shoulders. They shout with glee at the sight of the huge inflated planetarium in the gym.

"Awesome!" "Can we jump in it like a trampoline?"

Each spring vacation, several classrooms in Barnes School are turned over to Living Science and its certified science interpreters for a five-day taste of physics, zoology, astronomy - courses that may be experienced in greater depth during summer science

ULS summer school

New courses in drama and science highlight the University Liggett summer school program for 1987. Beginning June 22 and ending July 31, the summer school will also feature Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) preparation courses and regular academic classes in the traditional areas of learning.

In addition to the June 22-July 31 offerings, an Intensive SAT Workshop, with limited registration, will take place from Aug.

Taught by experienced faculty, these classes are designed to meet the needs of both inquiring, aggressive students who wish to broaden their bases of knowledge and of young people who have experienced some difficulties. Particularly noteworthy are the study skills courses, which help students learn how to organize their time, how to get the most from each assignment, and how to avoid common pitfalls.

So, what the heck are these people doing plodding through the jungles of Guatemala and Belize? "Many people have told us that we are really very lucky to have a common interest we are both so dedicated to,"said Martha, who gives talks to local students about archeology.

The interest in archeology began when Martha was young. She said she remembers looking through old National Geographics and being thoroughly fascinated with the ancient peoples and the way they lived.

With the desire there, she spent much of her time at Grosse Pointe High working toward becoming an archeologist - that is until she wrote a paper on the subject for a civics class.

"I interviewed an archeologist at the Detroit Institute of Arts who had an office in the basement of the museum," she said. "He was so negative about the field that I began questioning why I wanted to get into it. He said things like you could look for seven years and find nothing. He made it sound terrible. I wrote the term paper, and decided I didn't want to become an archeologist. I majored in political science in col-

In 1966, the Masts went to Mexico with friends. "We went to Acapulco, but decided that since we were there, we would go to Mexico City and see some of the ruins and other sites in the country," Jim said. "The Museo de Anthropologia is so fantastic, it isn't hard to get excited about archeology."

Martha said the trip rekindled the feelings she had, and from then on vacations were planned around visiting some exotic archeological site.

With their interest in archeology growing and their children grown, the Masts decided to take their knowlege and enthusiasm in archeology a step further.

They spotted an advertisement for an Earth Watch expedition in an archeology magazine in 1981. Earth Watch is a non-profit organization that allows archeology buffs to work on an expedition while helping to fund the project. In other words, the Masts were going to help finance an expedition, and at the same time, work on a dig.

"On this particular expedition an archeologist had spent three months looking for Mayan jade, and found the source of the jade," he said. "There was a known ceremonial site in that same area, and the archeologist wanted to dig around to look for the Mayan workshops where the jade was processed.'

The Masts went to work for Gary Rex Walters, an archeologist from the University of Missouri. In a short time, Mast, because of his skills as a manager, was helping Walters run the pro-

"We had planned to stay three weeks," Mast said. "We stayed seven, and became very involved with the project."

The Masts had found their calling. They have worked on three expeditions since then, except for the winter of 1982, when they went to a language school in Mexico and lived with a Mexican family for three weeks to improve their Spanish.

Answering another advertisement for workers in 1983, the Masts paid to work for Dr. Norman Hammond, a well-known British archeologist, who is head of the Anthropology Department at Rutgers University. Hammond was excavating Mayan mound sites in Belize.

The area was heavily populated by the Mayans from about 2000 B.C. to 1000 A.D. and was probably a major agricultural center for the 20,000 Mayans who lived in the region at the civilization's peak, according to Mast

"Dr. Hammond had placed the ad looking for volunteers who would pay their own transportation and expenses," Jim said. "He checked our references with Walters, and we were asked on the project. We were the only volunteers he took on."

This past winter the Masts spent four weeks at Cuello, Belize, in the country's tropical jungles. Jim had worked as a surveyor for the previous two years with Hammond. His skills as a builder and knowlege of surveying made it an ideal job for him. Martha said she

Jim worked in the field with a crew that located and mapped the

The mounds are fairly distinguishable in the thick jungle growth, but doing the actual survey work is extremely difficult.

882-9732 881-4233

That old cameo that you haven't worn in years could be worth more than you think.

FOR EXAMPLE... Ordinary old cameos, in simple gold frames, range in value from $25 to $150. Out-of-the-ordinary cameos bring from $150 to $500. Extraordinary cameos can be worth from $500 to $5000 and more.

Like an oil painting, the value of a cameo lies in its age, condition, rarity and artistic merit. Shell cameos are common, but finely carved shell cameos are not.

HINTS: Finely engraved or jeweled frames enhance value. • Yellow gold frames are best. • Repaired frames reduce price. • Broken, cracked or chipped cameos are worth little. • We don't buy unframed cameos or those made after 1935. • Cameos the size of our illustration and larger are usually more valuable than smaller ones. •Classical subjects are good. Portraits of specific people are rare. High relief is always desireable.

If you think you might want to sell your cameo, send it to us today. Or Call us for an evaluation and shipping instructions.

City of Grosse Pointe Park, Michigan NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES

The City Council of the City of Grosse Pointe Park will hold a Public Hearing at 7:00 P.M. on Monday, May 11, 1987, in the Council Chambers of the City Hall, 15115 E. Jefferson, Grosse Pointe Park, to receive comments and discuss a proposed additional 1987 City operating mil-

In 1986, the City levied 16.50 mills ($16.50 per $1,000 SEV) for City operating purposes. Because of an estimated increase in the State Equalized Value of existing property in the City, State law (Act 5 of 1982) provides that the base tax rate for 1987 City operating taxes be reduced to 15.32 mills ($15.32 per $1,000 SEV). This is 1.18 mills ($1.18 per $1,000 SEV) lower than the 1986 operating rate.

In order to fund the City's proposed 1987-88 budget and maintain essential City services, the City finds it necessary to restore its levy reduction. The City proposes to levy an additional millage rate of 1.83 mills ($1.83 per $1,000 SEV) above the 1987 base tax rate. This will provide an estimated 8.48% increase in City operating tax revenues and would result in a 1987 operating tax rate of 17.15 mills ($17.15 per $1,000

It is further noted that the City has complete authority to establish the number of mills to be levied within its authorized millage rate.

Public comment on this proposed increase is welcome at the Public

The rich, aromatic essence - a mixture of shoe polish, glue and leather - emanated from the open door of Jakob Greuling's shop, Grosse Pointe Shoe Repair. "One of my customers said how much she liked that smell," said Greuling. "So I got a plastic bag. I waved it around the shop a little bit, tied it shut and handed it to her. She carried it outside and down the street with her." He laughed. "We try to please the customer here.'

Greuling and his wife, Margarete, know most of their customers by name. Grosse Pointe Shoe Repair has always been on Fisher Road. It's been at 365 Fisher, in the Fisher Mews, since 1969. The Greulings have been repairing Grosse Pointers' shoes and selling trees and the like — since 1955.

Grueling was born and grew up in Jarek, Yugoslavia; Margarete was born in Germany but came to America when she was a baby. They met in 1950, at a German park near Eight Mile and Harper, and were married in 1952. Jakob had already learned his trade in Europe, serving a three-year apprenticeship. After becoming a journeyman, he left home in 1944, and moved to Germany just as the Russians were moving into Yugoslavia.

Construction starts on health care center

Groundbreaking ceremonies vation of the existing school for a April 27 launched construction of the new $28 million St. John-Bon Secours Continuing Care Center in northeast Detroit.

The center will offer extended and residential health care and housing for older adults. The project is a joint venture of two Detroit-area Catholic health systems: St. Clair Health Corporation (parent company of St. John Hospital in Detroit) and Bon Secours of Michigan (parent organization of Bon Secours Hospital in Grosse Pointe).

As now planned, the center, on the 12-acre former campus of Wayne County Community College and Austin Catholic High School, will include two major phases.

Phase One will include new construction of a 150-bed skilled care facility, for those requiring full-time nursing care; and reno100-bed residential care facility for those needing assisted care.

The new and renovated building will be connected by a ground floor walkway. Services such as a chapel, gift shop and beauty shop will be convenient to both the extended and residential care facilities. Construction is scheduled for completion on this phase in spring 1988.

Phase Two, which will include independent living units or senior citizen apartments, a variety of support services and common dining area for self-sufficient individuals, is still in the planning stages. Construction is scheduled to begin in 1989 and be completed in 1990.

The range of services on the campus will include both skilled and basic nursing care, personal care, physical and occupational therapy, indoor and outdoor recreation, transportation, security and food service.

At a time when most health care providers find themselves in a competitive environment, the hospitals decided to become partners in offering skilled and residential health care services to older adults in their community.

A totally new corporation will be formed to operate the Continuing Care Center, which will include its own board of trustees, administrators, management and staffing, all to be equally provided by the two sponsoring organi-

In addition to each organization's own investments, the balance of the funds for the development of this project will be obtained through the sale of bonds.

That was one of the key findings from the ERA National Real Estate Poll, according to John R. Moss, of Tappan and Associates. ERA, Inc.

C.O.D. change planned

Mail fraud schemes connected with C.O.D. mail will be reduced as a result of action taken by the Board of Governors of the U.S. Postal Service recently.

The service estimates that consumer and business losses due to C.O.D. fraud are in excess of $13 million annually and could approach $75 million a year. In 1985, based on the only number of open Inspection Service cases involving C.O.D. fraud, approximately 600,000 parcels - five percent of all C.O.D. packages were directly connected to some deceptive scheme.

Board approval of a change in Postal Service rules will allow C.O.D. parcel recipients the option of paying by check made out to the mailer. The change will take effect no later than June 7.

The existing regulation requires payment to be made either by check made payable to the Postal Service or by cash. A postal money order is then issued and sent to the mailer.

The rule change will give consumers a self-help method of combating fraud: If there is some problem with the merchandise, the addressee can stop payment on the check before it is received and cashed by the mailer. Instead of receiving a Postal Service money order or having the article returned, the mailer would receive a personal check.

American search for community yields new societal inventions

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

What do the telephone, the shoelace, the paper bag, the atomic bomb and the motel have in common? How about the money-market fund, the revival camp, the welfare state, the pieced quilt and rock'n'roll?

They are all examples of American inventiveness, an ingenuity that is - and always has been applied to a search for community. They are also the beginning of an intriguing argument in Philip Abbot's seventh book.

Abbott, a Wayne State University political science professor and Grosse Pointe Woods resident, takes on critics who charge that Americans have withdrawn from the idea of community in favor of indulging political and economic individualism. He theorizes that Americans have invented a series of social communities and that observers have failed to notice it.

"I argue that (scholars) are looking in the wrong places for a sense of community," Abbott said.

In fact, he argues, the communities haven't necessarily changed as much as observers believe.

Take quilting, for instance. The image of quilting bees 100 years later is that they typified the kind of close-knit village life that America will never see again. But, Abbott says, Americans were mobile and rootless in those days

'Quilting bees were actually the 19th century version of the Tupperware party - a way to meet people you didn't know very well," he said.

Basically, getting to know people is what the book is all about. Because Americans are historically a rootless people, they don't have a built-in infrastructure. They have to invent one - and they have. They are on a constant quest for "instant community."

We are a nation that prides ourselves on being individualist." he said. "We haven't developed traditions. But nobody can live his life as a solitary self, so we form 'ad hoc' communities. We keep trying to do it again every generation.'

To illustrate his thesis, Abbott selected the quilting bee, the telephone, the motel, the penitentiary and the revival camp. It wasn't easy narrowing the list down to those five.

"I thought of doing the mall," Abbott said. "It's a sheer economic institution, but teenagers go there to meet people, there are classes offered. In one way, it's a serious erosion of small communities, but even though it's created for convenience, we manage to turn it into Main Street.'

The paradox in the search for community is that we want to keep a measure of control, to be able to keep the involvement at arm's length. We can achieve instant togetherness on the telephone - and cut off the relationship in a split second just by hanging up. We can enjoy spiritual closeness on electronic gospel shows, but avoid the burdens of church committee work.

"We reach out and pull back at the same time," Abbott said.

"Community usually means submerging the self. We want both things. I call it 'intimate anonymity.' That's what enables us to call a suicide prevention center and spill our guts to a complete stranger.

"Seeking Many Inventions: The Idea of Community in America" had hardly begun to cool on college bookstore shelves when Abbott's next book - on political autobiographies — came out. He writes a book on the average of every two years, partly because it's expected of a university professor and partly because he just plain likes it.

"If I really had my druthers, I'd be a free-lancer," he said. He writes in a small study at the back of the house and hopes to hit the big-time of college textbook publishing - coming out in paperback. College professors like to limit required outside reading lists to $35 or $50, so at $20 a crack for a hardcover, a textbook is doomed to a limited readership.

"Actually, I was worried about getting this one published at all," Abbott said. "It's sort of off-beat."

If a reviewer from Princeton is correct, this off-beat book will set off a lot of good arguments. The communities Abbott writes about have two sides to them: The telephone, for example, links distant people in an intimate electronic community, but it also permits invasion of our privacy by strangers. It provides instant counseling and prayers — and pornography.

"I tried to withhold judgment on whether instant communities are pathological," Abbott said. "There's always a possibility of change toward the positive."

In true academic fashion, Abbott observes and draws conclusions without forming judgments.

"I tried to pull the book together using the idea that we talk about inventions, but we don't think about societal changes as inventions," he said. "There's a commonality between the light bulb and the revival camp - they are both things we change to try to make our lives better.

"We construct communities to meet our needs, then we throw them away.'

Mack Avenue to get a clean sweep

Mack Avenue business people and volunteers will make a clean sweep along Mack Avenue between Balfour and Alter roads Saturday, May 2, between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

The Grosse Pointe Business and Professional Association of Mack Avenue (GPB&PA) and the Mack Avenue Renaissance Alliance (MARA) will be working together to help colleagues between Balfour and Alter spruce up the facades of their business places. Volunteers will help clear the street, clean curbs and sidewalks, wash windows, plant flowers, and haul trash away.

One of GPB&PA's goals is to keep the entire stretch of Mack Avenue attractive. Working with MARA, they have been able to get facade improvement grants from Detroit. The "Clean Sweep" project is a way of showing continued interest in the overall look of Mack Avenue.

Volunteers should meet in the parking lot at 15206 Mack, Grosse Pointe Park, at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Local man works to save rare Michigan bird

By Elsa Frohman

Feature Editor tephen Stackpole claims he isn't a bird watcher — he just happens to know a little bit about hawks. Fish hawks, to be exact. Stackpole is an expert on, and one of the state's most active protectors of the rare osprey.

Osprey are found in several areas of North America, usually in swamps where there are dead trees for nesting and water for fishing grounds. They are migratory and territorial that is, they migrate south each winter and return to the same general nesting area "The osprey aren't really endangered anymore," Stackpole said. "But they are threat-

Stackpole explained that the osprey are threatened for two reasons. First, certain pesticides (most notably, DDT) cause the birds to lay eggs with thin shells that break before hatching time. An outcry by environmentalists brought about a ban on DDT in the United States a number of years ago. However, U.S. chemical companies are still manufacuting DDT and other persistent pesticides for export, particularly to Central and South America, where the birds winter.

While the elimination of the pesticides in the United States has reduced the number of eggs that never hatch, the problem remains.

The second problem, Stackpole explained, is the destruction of the birds' habitat. As more and more of Michigan's undeveloped land is taken for development, fewer and fewer undisturbed swamps remain. The osprey prefer dead trees standing in water for nesting sites. When a flooded area is managed, for drainage, for recreational use or other purposes, its boundaries become fixed. The dead trees within the swamp gradually rot at the waterline, falling into the water and providing fewer and fewer nesting sites.

As man encroaches farther and farther into the wilderness, the remaining nesting sites are disturbed because they stand near to waterways.

The bottom line is, without help from concerned human beings, the osprey would disappear from Michigan forever in only a few

''Man ought to think of himself as a part of nature," Stackpole said. "This is symbolic of something. If people care enough to save the osprey, by this attitude we can show we care about the whole ecosystem. Everytime we lose a creature, the web of life is torn. This is a rallying point.

Stackpole's interest in nature goes back to his childhood. His involvement with the osprey goes back to 1966 when he learned that the osprey were on the verge of disappearing from Michigan.

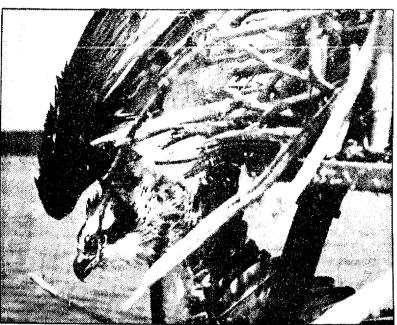

He learned of the plight of the osprey from a naturalist, Sergej Postupalsky, who was involved in work to save the bald eagle. From talking to Postupalsky about raptors (birds of prey) in general, Stackpole became interested in the osprey.

"The osprey is a unique fish hawk," Stack-

Stephen Stackpole displays an art print of an osprey at his home on South Deeplands. Stackpole has devoted more than 20 years to helping the osprey survive in Michigan.

An adult osprey hangs from a noose carpet off the edge of a nesting platform. The bird is being captured for banding. A piece of chicken wire fitted with nearly invisible monofiliment nooses is placed over the nest. The bird's feet become entagled and a scientist is able to capture it. This bird, in its struggle has tumbled over the side of the nest. The picture was taken moments before it was rescued, Stackpole said.

chairmen Cathy Groustra and Ann Hathaway will be on hand to assign garden plots and distribute checks for this year's seeds and plants which will in due time create a scene of color and fragrance. The Garden Center's Trial Gardens, supported by the DePetris Memorial Fund, annually attract thousands of visitors and are the scene of countless weddings and other testivities every summer.

On the lake side of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, they were designed by famed landscape architect Eleanor Roche in a wheel design which is centered by the original Windmill Pointe millstone dating back to the 18th century. The gardens are annually vear will carry a new listing of all the plant material used in the many plots, enabling visitors to know just what is planted where.

Funds for this very important addition were donated by Robert Brinkman in memory of his wife, Julie, an ardent gardener, and by Albert Raisch, who also designed the sign.

Other improvements which have been under way for some time will also make the Trial Gardens more accessible to visitors this summer and for many summers to come. The Grosse Pointe War Memorial has created a new hillside entrance to the gardens, with wide, shallow steps and a secure railing leading gracefully down the slope.

Everywhere we look, lately, it seems that the lovely lavender pink magnolias that many people call tulip trees are embellishing the Grosse Pointe landscape. It seems almost as if they were competing to see which one can have the most lush flowers, and which one can strew the most pastel petals on the burgeoning grass beneath the trees.

Magnolias are very regional things. In this part of the country the purple-pink-white Magnolia soulangeana lennei has large cup-shaped flowers which appear before the leaves creating enormous bouquets which decorate our gardens while leaves are only just beginning to appear on most trees. In the south Magnolia grandiflora bears large white fragrant flowers in summer among its gleaming large green leaves and is almost a trademark of southern ambiance.

The star magnolia appears in the eastern part of the country and has white or pink flowers. It shares honors in that section of the country with the umbrella tree and the sweet hav, both varieties of magnolia.

In the Chinese flower calendar the magnolia is the flower for May and the symbol of feminine sweetness.

Did you know that the color of hydrangeas (except white ones) depends on the acidity of the soil in which they are grown. In acid soil they are blue and in neutral soil they are pink.

If you plan on starting an herb bed for this summer in your garden now is a good time to begin. A sunny spot near the kitchen door or in a corner of your vegetable garden is ideal. Basic herbs for a beginning garden might include basil, thyme, savory, chives and parsley which all like full sun. Rue, sweet cicely and many of the mints like semi-shade. Sage is easy to grow, and all of these will spread so don't plant them too close together. Most of these are equally happy in pots on a sunny kitchen window sill

This is nesting time for birds and their territory sense is very strong. It is not unheard of for a pair of robins to have territory feeding rights under a tree while another pair has nesting rights in the same tree and neither pair will encroach on the other. Male birds violently defend their own territories. If a male robin catches sight of himself reflected in a window he will dash to drive the in-reflection disappears the robin will think it has vanquished its rival and will go off happily to other pursuits.

Right now the spring flower show at the Anna Scripps Whitcomb Conservatory on Belle Isle is going on and will be on view until mid-May. Marvelous displays of tulips, hyacinths, narcissi, genistas, azaleas and rhododendrons provide a background for the hundreds of traditional Easter lilies which are really spectacular. The color and scent of this show are unforgettable - a real must-see!

Deforestation

Iceland had lush meadowlands dotted with stands of birch and mountain ash when Norse settlers began arriving, but, in little over 1,000 years, man and sheep have destroyed virtually all of the country's forests, says National Geographic.

This magnificent magnolia tree is in the yard of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Kennedy on Kensington in the Park.

pole said. He explained that the osprey is distiquished from other hawks and raptors by the unusual configuration of its feet which are specially adapted for fishing. The osprey has two toes pointing forward and two toes pointing backward, unlike the three toes forward and one toe backward of most birds of prey. The arrangement is ideal of snatching fish out of the water.

In 1966, Stackpole was approached to help in an emergency effort to save the osprey which were facing a crisis. The first project he participated in was at Dead Stream Swamp near Houghton Lake. The Michigan Department of Conservation had performed a management procedure on the swamp resulting in less open water and less nesting sites, most of which were too close to traveled waterways for the comfort of the birds, Stackpole said.

The problem was to provide new nesting sites, away from the boat traffic. The answer was nesting platforms.

Stackpole worked with Talbot and Meier Construction to design and build three legged platforms that could be set in the water. (The first platforms were set up on the ice before the spring thaw, however, now the platforms are constructed from boats, after

The design of the platforms has changed over the years, as Stackpole and his associate, Tom Fraser, have discovered better ways of doing things. The base of operations has changed, from Dead Stream Swamp to Fletcher Pond, near Alpena, but after 21 years, the effort continues. It isn't a job that can be finished.

Each year a number of platforms are destroyed by the freezing and thawing of the pond. Every spring the platforms must be repaired and replaced. The osprey are winning, their numbers have increased dramatically since 1967 and 1968 when the first platforms went up. But without regular human intervention, the osprey's gains could be reversed in just a few years.

Today, there are about 100 pairs of osprey in Michigan, Stackpole said. Nearly all of them nest on man-made platforms. In 1967 only 13 chicks hatched successfully in the state. This year, about 30 chicks should be hatched. However, only about a quarter of those will survive to adulthood.

Besides simply preserving the osprey population, the nesting platform project has offered a wonderful opportunity for scientific study of the birds and their habits. Birds are regularly captured and banded at the platforms. Stackpole helped produce a film on the bird which he is currently working to up-the bird on the nest.

While Stackpole enjoys observing the birds, he warns amateur birders to be careful of how they watch the birds. Staying too long at any single nest site can keep the mother away from her eggs for too long, and may cause harm to the young.

"It's all right to come to call, just don't hang around," he said.

Stackpole is also concerned about people who may remove eggs from osprey nests, because they are rare, or because they hope to raise the baby bird.

"You can't turn an osprey into a falcon," he said. "And most people don't have the knowledge to raise a baby chick."

Stackpole and Fraser have formed their own organization to help the osprey, "Conservation for Survival." While Stackpole and Fraser are the only members of the organization, the name sums up Stackpole's attitude about conservation.

"This creature, man, is such an unruly species," he said. "You can only push Mother Nature so far. She has the final word." Stackpole does not accept donations but recommends that anyone who would like to support the efforts to save the osprey may contact the National Audubon Society. Funds may be specifically earmarked for the Michigan osprey.

Christian Family Month

By the Rev. Joseph P. Fabry Christ the King Lutheran

Many churches throughout the land observe May as Christian Family Month. The observance highlights the needs and problems facing families today and seeks to provide God-pleasing solutions for them. Helping families is an eminently worthy aim and one which deserve our concerted effort, 52 weeks of the year.

On one will argue the point that the American home is facing desperate times. Like a bulldozer plowing through a Grosse Pointe living room, the destructive forces of drug and alcohol abuse, desertion, divorce and child abuse are ravaging countless households in our community. The appalling rate at which our young people are killing themselves and killing each other is a dramatic commentary on the hopelessness which characterizes much of society.

What can we do? Where do we go for help? I firmly believe that what is needed is for parents and guardians to take seriously their divinely-given roles to be models and examples for their children. For better or worse, the way our children act is a clue to how we are acting.

The simple truth is that in many ways, children grow up to be carbon copies of their parents. That's what St. Paul asserted when he told the believers in Ephesus, "Therefore be imitators of God, as His beloved children. And walk in love, as Christ loved us and gave himself up for us as a fragrant offering and a sacrifice to God.

Children are good imitators of their parents and elders. You know that and I know that. But that obvious truth only compels us to ask the million-dollar question: Whom shall parents imitate in order to be exemplary role models for their children?

St. Paul answers, "You should be imitators of God - as His beloved children!"

There is to be an unmistakable family resemblance between God and His people. We can never qualify as God's children on our own, but Jesus has graciously brought us into God's family by his death and resurrection - that is the message of Good Friday and Easter! Now God is our dear Father and we are His beloved children!

The virture which is most visible in a Christian home is the virtue of Christ-like love. It characterizes the daily relationship between husband and wife, parents and children, brothers and sis-

It enables us to be patient, considerate and understanding with one another. After a family quarrel, it makes a fresh start possible through genuine forgiveness. It provides support and reassurance for a disheartened son or daughter. And it gives all of life eternal value and purpose by relating it to God's will.

Let me conclude with 10 helpful tips for parents which can make life in your home a happier and more rewarding experience for everyone:

- Be appreciative of each other.
- Recognize the value of team work.
- Encourage -- do not discourage. Set the right example in speech and conduct.
- Promote respect for authority.
- Make Sunday worship a family experience.
- Stimulate your children to be creative. Keep communication lines open.
- The family that prays together, stays together.
- Develop a family sense of humor.

Bernstein indicated four specific areas of concern that will be addressed: Aging, Education,

The Junior League of Detroit has developed programs on a number of the issues that will be explored at the conference, including the Tutoring T.R.E.E. Project, the Alcohol and Drug Community Education Project and the Hospice Video Project.

"Through participation in an international conference of this scope, our local league is able to learn how other leagues in cities across the country are impacting the critical challenges of today's world," said Hoag, president of the Junior League of Detroit.

Ann Hoag, president of the Junior League of Detroit, second from leit, accepts a plaque from Mike Slubowski, leit, vice president of the hospital's Satellite and Prepayment Programs, at the hospital's Volunteer Services Awards banquet. # Exchange Club to sponsor annual bowl-a-thon

The Exchange Club of Grosse Pointe/St. Clair Shores will sponsor its 5th annual Bowl-a-Thon on Saturday, May 16, beginning at 7 p.m. The event will take place at the Shorecrest Lanes located at Nine Mile and Harper in St. Clair

Proceeds raised will be donated to various centers and agencies in the area to aid in the prevention of child abuse and other youth-

The event is open to the public and all participants will be allowed to bowl free of charge, provided they obtain pledges from individuals based on total pin count for a three game series of bowling, or, pledge a certain amount themselves. All pledges are tax deductible and receipts will be

Bowl-a-Thon chairman Ralph Defour said, "This is our fifth year in holding this event. Last year, well over 100 bowlers participated and our club raised almost $5,000. This year we would like to see an even greater number of bowlers and dollars pledged."

All bowlers will be able to bowl three regular games or participate in three games of "fun bowling." A "fun bowling" participant will follow a given direction for a style of bowling, such as bowling with the opposite hand that they are accustomed to. Higher scores would be achieved in a game where all nine pin counts would equal a strike.

"We have added the fun bowl this year to add some fun and excitement to our event and to bring out the average bowler. The serious bowlers can still bowl their regular three games without participating in the fun bowl," Defour said.

League bowlers may also participate by obtaining pledges and using their regular league night score. For more information, or to obtain pledge sheets contact Ralph Defour at 881-8970 be-

Golf: It really is a four-letter word

Somehow, word has gotten around that I don't like golf. I really don't know how these rumors get started.

All I remember doing is writing a column about three or four years ago on the fact that I don't like to watch golf on TV. I think I said I thought that televised golf is boring, or something like that. Well, I guess those are fighting words in Grosse Pointe - surrounded as we are on three sides by golf courses - and I think I ticked some people off . . . big time.

Recently, I've been asked why I don't do more stories on golf. Oh, I write here and there about holes-in-one or high school golfing champs; but I will admit that those are few and far between. I really can't write any of your garden variety get-ready-for-golf stories, since most of the local golfers do their playing at private clubs. And descriptions of private clubs, and their facilities are nice once, but hold little interest for nonmembers (other than to make them drool a

So you can see my problem. I'd love to write more about golf, but I don't play it (I don't belong to a private club, either) and not too many golf stories ever come knocking on my office door.

I really do like golf, however. I watched Jack Nicklaus win the Masters last year and this year, I watched Larry Mize ruin Greg Norman's Masters by birdieing the 11th hole with a 140-foot chip shot in sudden death. And when I go to a family get-together, I sit spellbound as my uncles tell and retell their golfing war stories (some of which are almost true). And someday, if I find someone with the patience of Job, I'll get someone to teach me how to play golf.

I guess I bring all of this up because I was quite intrigued by last week's newspaper re-port about a little disagreement which came up between two foursomes on an Oakland County course. Apparently, there was some discussion about the trailing foursome refusing to play through, then hitting the ball into the lead four-some anyway. The lead foursome allegedly returned the ball . . . smack dab into the middle of the trailing group. According to the report, a fight then ensued in which clubs were used . . . to hit golfers, not

The best part of the whole newspaper story was a statement made by the golf pro, who said that obviously, the two foursomes (the eightsome?) had committed a breach of golf

A cheerleading crisis?

Michigan high school squads await decision from athletic directors regarding their future

By Peggy O'Connor

Sports Editor

Give me a "C-O-N-T-R-O-V-E-R-S-Y." What's it spell? It spells out the unusual situation the normally-uncontroversial Michigan high school cheerleading squads find themselves in these days.

"It's a hot issue right now," says Grosse Pointe North Administrator for Athletics Tom Gauerke, "Because of the changes which have occurred in the past 10 years - where the high schools are following the lead of college cheer-won't be. Then we have to wait and see what happens if the Michigan High School Athletic Association accepts that recommendation.'

North's Gauerke would not disclose what the recommendation was. But Ritter says that the whole situation will probably come down to whether the MHSAA assigns "support group" or "sport" status to state cheerleading

รนุนสนิธ. "The thing is, we don't care if you call us a support group or a sport, as long as they make a decision and let us

"I'm worried about our lack of input in this issue. They didn't allow our organization any input when they decided that no pyramids or stunts would be allowed in tournament play. I just don't want to see that sort of thing happening this time."

PART OF THE problem, Ritter says, is that many people have an outdated idea of what a cheerleading program should include.

"Our impression is far different than that of the athletic directors'," she adds."We want to emphasize the athletic portion of cheerleading. We believe that you can motivate a crowd with a stunt just as well as you can by coaches and a dearth of competitive experience could threaten the popularity of the sport in Michigan. "Sure it's difficult to get coaches because of low pay and a lack of safe, organized practice areas. And if we can't get qualified coaches, the programs will certainly suffer. One major focus is getting those coaches.'

The cheerleading coaches' association is concerned with getting some sort of direction from the state, then moving on from there, Ritter says."We're trying to offer clinics for coaches and kids and emphasizing safety, since the big controversy has been about the safety of cheerleading routines. And we'd like to get where we could come into every league with mandatory clinics for kids and coaches to learn stunts, gymnastics and pyramids.

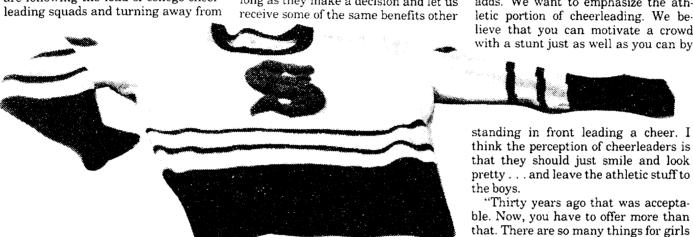

"We're at the point where we're saying if somebody will take over so that the next school down the road will have to do what we do, we'll almost be willing to live with anything else they impose. The way it is now, you can do stunts in one league and not in another, or do stunts in competition after perhaps a whole year of not being able to do them in your own league.

"That's not safe."

What it comes down to for Ritter and her organization - and for the athletic directors who are equally anxious for some firm decision in the matter - is the outcome of the May 11 board meeting. Ritter says that she and her group are simply hoping for the best . . . and perhaps a departure from the attitudes of the past.

"We told the ADs that we told our membership that if they couldn't find qualified coaches to teach stunts, that we agreed (with the ADs) that we don't want them to allow the stunts to continue until the qualified coaches are found. They seemed shocked that our attitudes were so close to theirs'.

"That worries me a little

leading chants and cheers and toward a more performance-oriented program a question has arisen regarding the status of cheerleaders in high school.

"More and more schools throughout the state are doing things other than school events. Who determines whether they can go? Cheerleading squads have been more and more under the AD's jurisdiction, and in the past five years, there has been a cry from building principals for some guidelines. Even the Michigan Cheerleading Coaches' Association is asking for someone — anyone — to define the role of cheerleaders in the schools."

Former North cheerleading sponsor Linda Ritter is now president of the Michigan Cheerleading Coaches' Association. She and other members of her group are awaiting the recommendation of a group of state high school athletic directors who met April 13 to try to decide under whose guise cheerleading programs should be. The Michigan Interscholastic Athletic Directors Association will conduct a board meeting May 11. They are expected to determine whether or not to accept the committee's recommendation.

"Just what that recommendation is is anyone's guess," Ritter says. "We have not been told and I suspect we sports do. If they decide to make cheerleading a sport, we want to be figured in the athletic budget and have a safe place to practice, just like the other

"By the same token, we certainly would follow the same set of rules sports teams have to follow. We have all along, you know. When the schools set down a set of rules for their athletes, we adhered to those rules. We can accept that. We don't just want the benefits," Ritter says.

Cheerleaders have long been accustomed to being sort of the "orphans" of high school sports. But a continued lack of direction could seriously effect the activity, Ritter says.

Ritter and her nine-year-old organization claim that the Michigan Cheerleading Coaches' Association is rarely allowed any input into decisions made for the state's cheerleaders. "We ask to be present at the athletic directors' committee meeting and although they said it was a good idea, we weren't invited. We contacted five of the seven committee members on our own and I'm glad we did. It turned out that many of them just don't realize that the state organization has some of the same concerns the athletic directors have," Ritter explains.

petition-oriented. "When I coached, North went to the national championships and if anything, we worked harder than ever at keeping one-half of our material to crowd-response, echo-type cheers. And we continued to do it. But if there are only 10 kids in the crowd and they don't respond, that's not the cheerlead-to do, sports-wise. You have to make it offer a state cheerleading championship as a way of establishing a goal so that the athletic requirement of cheerleading is reached. She disagrees with the notion that cheerleading is too comers' fault.'

North's Gauerke says he feels that cheerleaders still need to place further emphasis on the leadership aspect of the activity. "But as AD, I'm on the fence about this. I'd like to see the cheerleaders be part of the crowd, leading the chants and getting a positive response from the kids. But I also know that a competitive experience like the girls get from these competitions is worthwhile.'

More than 450,000 teenagers nationwide are involved in cheerleading, but Ritter says that a lack of qualified

Keeping an eagle eye on your boat

The Wayne County Sheriff's Department will introduce a new program to the boating public in the coming weeks.

It's called River Watch and it will recruit boaters who will work with the Sheriff's Department and report boating incidents requiring assistance. Incidents could be boating accidents, vandalism, breaking and entering into boats or medical problems; as well as a host of other on-the-water problems boaters encounter.

"The program is very easy for boaters to participate in," says Sergeant Schmoekel of the Wayne County Sheriff's Department, Marine Patrol. "When any River Watch boater encounters a situation, they simply contact the marine emergency service. This will expedite our response time.

Participating boaters will receive a decal to display in a prominent place on their boat, identifying them as River Watch participants; a radio sticker will also be included. The sticker will give directions, exact radio format and proper codes to be used when calling in to the marine emergency service.

This way, each boater can become the eyes and ears of the marine patrol," Schmoekel says. "It will aid in deterring crime and speed up our response time. They do not give their name or the boat name, but only use their radio call letters, so they can't be easily

"It's a great way for all boaters to really get involved and help out their fellow boaters.

Schmoekel added, "We are really looking forward to having this program in operation this summer. It will support us and help us provide the kind of support boaters need around this area."

The Sheriff's Department will be contacting area clubs and marinas about how to participate in this new program.

Besides the new River Watch, the department already maintains the Marina Watch Program. Marina Watch began four year ago. It is a program of identification of boating equipment. The equipment is engraved with an identification number which is also recorded on a card maintained by the sheriff. In the event of theft, boating equipment is more easily identified.

Marina Watch also encourages boaters to become familiar with their neighbors in the marina, so they know if something out of the ordinary is happening and can summon help if it is needed.

Yacht clubs and marinas may want to renew their Marina Watch forms. People may be new to the area or new to boating and not be aware of the Marina Watch program. Also, people buy and sell boats and boating equipment and things change, so it's a good idea to keep your Marina Watch IDs up -to-date.

All that's necessary is to make a phone call to the Wayne County Sheriff's Department, Marine Patrol, at 381-8100. They will make arrangements to have a deputy visit . . . and they will be happy to discuss the new River Watch program at the same time.

DNR seeks conservation memorabilia

One hundred years ago, the first Conservation Officer (CO) was appointed in Michigan and his successors are looking for memorabilia from the early days to help them mark this historic event. The Department of Natural Resources (DNR) will use items donated to create an exhibit they hope to circulate in September.

We've already collected an incredible amount of memorabilia commemorating the history of the CO, including photos and background information on Michigan's first game and fish warden (appointed, March 1887)," said Herb Burns, DNR Law Enforcement Chief. That warden was William Alden Smith of Grand Rapids, who also became the first salaried game warden in the U.S.

"With the public's assistance, we'd like to add to our collection any other CO articles (donated loaned), particularly from the pre-1930 era," Burns added. A fire in the Cass building in downtown Lansing in the 1950's. destroyed almost all DNR Law Enforcement records

Items needed for the exhibits include uniform parts (badges, patches, etc.), old publications, newspaper clippings or magazine articles on Michigan COs, Michigan game law digests, dated pictures of COs performing duties (car boat foot patrol), and names of past Michigan COs, living and deceased.

Those wishing to donate or loan CO memorabilia for this special museum display should first contact Roger Wood with DNR's Law Enforcement Division, P.O. Box 30028, Lansing, MI 48909 517-373-1230 or contact a DNR Law Enforcement Officer at the nearest DNR Regional or District

Grosse Pointe South's varsity baseball team won five of six games last week, sweeping doubleheaders from Roseville on April 21 and Lake Shore on April 23 and splitting a twin bill with North High on April 25.

South took the opening game at Roseville, 9-0, behind the two-hit pitching of John Joliet. Jollet fanned 10, walked four and hit one Wildest batsman. No runner got past second base.

Marty Sand, Doug Lucas, Dan Cimini and Matt Montagne had two hits apiece for South. Saad and Montagne also drove in two runs each, as did Mike Paull, who tripled.

Rusty Knowles earned the decision in the nightcap, tossing a sixhitter. Knowles struck out 13 and walked just three. Sean Bruce and Dave Arnold had two hits apiece; Cimini and Lucas accounted for two RBI each.

Marcus Wysocki registered 15 strikeouts, walked four and gave up two hits in beating Lake Shore, 7-1. Saad and Paull collected two hits apiece for the win-

How fit are you?

Evaluations or tests help us understand ourselves better. They give us an indication of where we need to improve. Today, we see the word "aerobics" everywhere. If you would like to do your own aerobic evaluation, here is a simple cardiovascular test. It was developed by Dr. Kenneth Cooper over 20 years ago and is surprisingly accurate and accepted by the medical community. It requires very little time (12 minutes), no equipment and is easy to administer.

Caution: If you are over 35 and not physically active, please get your doctor's approval before taking this maximum test. Medical clearance is very, very important.

If you are under 35 and in good health, go for it! What to do?

The easiest way is to find a track. The tracks at North and South high schools are onequarter mile; four times around makes one mile. Go to the track, dressed comfortably and wearing a good pair of running shoes and a jacket (which can be removed if you get too

Make sure your watch is accurate, because you want to time yourself for exactly 12 minutes. It's also a lot easier if you can get someone to go along with you to time you.

Start running and if your breath gets short, walk for a while until you can run again. Keep going for the full 12 minutes. When you've checked the distance, compare it with the chart below to find your fitness category:

DISTANCE/FITNESS CATEGORY Less than one mile ......

Very poor 1.0 to 1.24 miles . . . . Poor 1.25 to 1.49 miles . . . . Fair 1.50* to 1.74 miles . . . Good 1.75 miles or more ...... Excellent *For men over 35, 1.40 miles in 12 minutes is consistent with the good fitness category. For women, the good fitness category appears to be 1.30 miles in 12 minutes. However, performance studies on women are not complete.

How did you rate? If you fell into one of the first three categories, you're not in very good condition, but 80 percent of the population is right there with you. You want to strive for the Good or Excellent category to be considered "Fit."

If you didn't do well, you know what you have to do: Start a conditioning program. Use this test periodically to check your progress. If you're really serious, this information is from the book "Aerobics" by Kenneth Cooper, M.D., and is available for $3.95 at local book stores.

Don't ever forget to cool down. Once you've completed the 12-minute test, continue to walk around the track at a much slower pace to bring your heart rate to a lower level. Then do some calf stretches, holding the stretch for about 20 seconds.

Try this evaluation this week before you enter the Cottage Hospital 3.1 mile walk/ run, so you'll know what to expect from yourself.

Let this be your springboard into fitness!

It's a gloomy Thursday morning in late April and the LAST place anyone wants to be is in an exercise studio in the basement of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. But there they are, about onehalf of the normal number of class members usually present for one of Valerie Pokorny-McHugh's Walking for Fitness classes.

Pokorny-McHugh bustles into the War Memorial with a smile that's a lot sunnier than the weather, grabs her attendance sheet and heads down to the exercise room.

"Hey, Valerie," shouts a student "You're here, that's why the weather's so crummy," she jokes. "Sure, when the substitute is here, the weather's great. When I show up, it rains," Pokorny-Mc-Hugh shoots back.

Despite the dismal weather, the class will walk. "We walk, rain or shine. Listen, if we in Michigan waited around for nice weather to

"I hope none of you lied about your ages because I told the newspaper reporter how old you all are," Pokorny-McHugh says, drawing a mixture of laughs and groans from her class.

The class is made up mostly of women; 72-year-old Arthur Arduin is the only male in attendance. The students range in age from young mothers in their 20s to Katherine Pingree, a pert, healthy-looking octogenarian.

"Make sure you get your heart rates at the War Memorial gate and again at St. Paul's; we want to make sure we're burning that fat," she tells her students. "Be careful of the wet cement, but walk with your heads up. We're going to get out there and walk like we own Lakeshore.'

Understanding

metabolism

There is no doubt that the body is a marvelous mechanism. We are self-contained, walking, power generators. The process by which that generator converts food to energy is called metabolism, from the Greek word meaning "change" or "alter."

Metabolism does everything in its power to take care of you. Part of your metabolic rate, known as basal metabolic rate (BMR) regulates functions which you may never really be aware of such as breathing, maintaining constant body temperature and keeping your heart beating.

Quite simply, metabolism is the conversion of the food you eat into energy and tissue. It is basically broken down into two processes: anabolism and catabolism.

Anabolism occurs as the body builds and repairs tissue. Catabolism involves a process of breaking down. When distinguishing the difference between metabolism and basal metabolism, it may be easier to compare them with the functions of an automobile. An idling engine would be the same as the basal metabolic rate. The gasoline being used is only the amount necessary to keep the motor running. When you wish to move the car, you must push on the accelerator to supply the engine with additional fuel to move.

As with the engine, any additional moves you make with your body require extra energy. This causes an increase in metaoblism, but does not necessarily affect your basal metabolic rate.

Your basal metabolic needs can be influenced by several factors. Men seem to have a higher BMR than women because of a higher percentage of lean body mass (muscle). The amount of skin surface is another factor. For example, a 5-10 individual would have a higher BMR than a person who weighs the same but stands at 5-5. The taller person has more skin surface.

Other influencing factors include:

- Age The average BMR decrease is approximately two percent with each decade of adult life.
- Temperature People in cold climates tend to have higher BMRs than those in warm climates.
- Body composition The more lean muscle tissue in the body, the higher the BMR.
- Nutrition status During states of starvation or malnutrition, the body can drop its BMR as much as 50 percent.

To calculate an easy estimate of your basal metabolic rate, add a zero after your ideal weight. If you work at a desk all day or are basically an inactive person, you will require only an additional 30 percent calorie intake abpove your BMR. A slightly more active person would require approximately 50 percent more calories above their BMR.

Although many dieters would like to blame metabolism for their weight problem, it is usally not a plausible excuse. While the metabolism may be slower in people who are overweight, it is very unlikely that the overweight condition resulted from a metabolic disorder.

It is crucial that after losing weight, you learn how to maintain your new weight successfully. Losing weight is only the first step in a total program of healthy eating habits and lifetime maintenance.

Unwise dieting can actually slow your metabolism so that each time you unsuccessfuly attempt to lose weight in this manner, you make it more difficult to shed unwanted pounds. It is in your best interest to select a program which features a sensible, well-balanced diet and combine it with a regular exercise program.

Although calories are taken into consideration, you must also place emphasis on the types of foods consumed and on counting nutrients those foods contain. When the body is receiving these essential nutrients, it is less likely to slow down its metabolism because there is no impending threat of starvation or malnutrition. The best ways to give your metabolic rate a boost include:

• Increase your amount of physical exercise.

 Stay away from crash/lowcalorie diets.

• Increase the ratio of lean muscle in your body (muscle tissue requires more energy to sustain it than fat cells do).

Three for the Road' tries to be everything

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

The film is called "Three for the Road;" a misnomer for sure since the plot eventually tangles up the lives of four people. It's a movie that can't even get its title right, and it only goes downhill from there. Indeed, the one consistent thing about "Three for the Road" is its inconsistency.

At times the picture looks like a drama. After all, it's about a powerful senator who's slighting his daughter Robin (Kerri Green) because his political career is more important.

But at other times it looks like a romance. After all, it's also about the feelings that develop between congressional aide Paul Tracey (Charlie Sheen ) and the senator's daughter - feelings that may jeopardize Paul's political future.

At still other times it looks like a comedy. There are any number of scenes in which Paul and his supposedly intellectual friend T.S. (Alan Ruck), fall face down in the mud or get caught with their pants down. Literally.

And it looks like a slapstick chase film much of the time, since there are more sounds of screeching tires on the soundtrack than dialogue.

Will the real movie please stand up?

Metropolitan Detroit's premier wood's Le Gala de Cuisine — will be celebrated for the ninth con-

Cranbrook to host gourmet's dream

Granted, there's nothing wrong with variety in a picture. Exclusive romance, drama, comedy or adventure - no matter how well done - can get tedious. But films that try for everything usually end up getting nothing. And the final product almost always looks sloppy. Too bad, because Sheen is coming off his immensely lauded part in "Platoon" and Ruck is in his first role since playing the title character's best friend in "Ferris Bueller's Day Off." This picture is a roadblock on their previously obstacle-free career

In its lucid moments, "Three for the Road" is about Paul's political problem. A senator Paul knows and respects askes him to drive Robin, a problem child, to a reform school in another state. Paul is happy for the opportunity to polish the proverbial apple. Happy, that is, until he realizes that the senator is a poor father who simply hasn't the time or inclination to be with his daughter.

Of course, this doesn't happen overnight. Well, on second thought, it does happen overnight. After spending 24 frenzied hours with Robin, Paul realizes he loves her. The senator and Paul's career can go hang. That's the gist. There's all kinds of superfluous material thrown in, ostensibly to make things more insecutive year from 3 to 7 p.m.

teresting — like Robin's repeated escape attempts and T.S.' roadway fling with a southern belle (Blair Tefkin).

None of it is particularly memorable stuff. None of it will do much for the careers of those it features. Ruck, Green and Sheen have all done better work.

Perhaps worst of all though. none of it will do a thing for audiences, except maybe make them wish they had chosen another movie.

The Elephant Man' next at Bonstelle

"The Elephant Man," a haunting drama based on the real-life John Merrick, a monstrously deformed young man in Victorian England, continues at the Bonstelle Theatre Friday and Saturday, May 1-2, at 8 p.m., with a matinee performance Sunday, May 3, at 2 p.m.

Merrick, a victim of the degenerative disease known as neurofibromatosis, is a sensitive, creative man, trapped in a distorted body, whose only means of livelihood is in carnival side shows, where he suffers intolerable cruelties at the hands of the carnival operator. Rescued from his hopeless circumstances by a London hospital surgeon, Merrick becomes the object of medical study, achieving notoriety and becoming the pet of the haut monde, including the actress Mrs. Kendal and the Princess of Wales.

Out of this story, playwright Bernard Pomerance has created a complex, subtle play dealing with injustice and justice, cruelty and mercy, man's inhumanity and humanity to man.

"The Elephant Man" won three Tony Awards, including Best New Play of the 1979 Broadway

Anthony Schmitt, who directed 'Equus" and "Amadeus" at the Hilberry Theatre, is the director.

Chimp is the star in Project X'

By Marion Trainor Special Writer

Matthew Broderick, star of "Project X," usually has no trouble getting the full attention of his fans. His good looks and boyish charm make him totally irresistible.

In "Project X," however, he has some competition from a scenestealer with soulful brown eyes and beguiling antics whose name is Virgil. Virgil is a chimpanzee.

Virgil enjoys a carefree life in his natural jungle habitat until he is shot with a tranquilizer gun, shoved in a cage and shipped off to be the subject of a study on behaviorism. Lucky for him, the graduate student in charge of the study, Teri (Helen Hunt), is enthralled by him. Virgil is smart, a quick learner and the two have a great time.

He even becomes proficient in sign language. When word comes that funds for the experiment have been withdrawn and Virgil must be taken away, Teri is distraught. She is somewhat mollified when she is told Virgil will go to a zoo.

In reality he is sent to a top se-

"Hamlet of Ballet" that tells of fair maidens who rise from the grave to frolic in their dance of death, will be presented by the prestigious Tulsa Ballet Theatre and the Lake St. Clair Symphony Orchestra at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts.

Showtime for the fully-staged, full-length production is 8 p.m. for both Friday, May 8, and Saturday, May 9.

"Giselle," which made its debut in Paris in 1841, was created around the Germanic-Slavic legend of the Wilis, the ghosts of beautiful maidens who died before their wedding day.

Dangerous as they were irresistible, the Wilis were thought to rise from their graves at midnight and dance seductively until dawn in dresses of bridal white. And any young man who happened by was forced to dance with them until he fell dead. "Giselle" is considered the ideal s a magazine editor, I travel a lot, and know what I like. But my spare time's a luxury. That's where Ethan Allen helped me. With their complimentary decorating service. My designer listened to my ideas, visited my home, then helped me select fabrics, wallcoverings, everything. So in the end, I got what I wanted ... without the hassles.

Personal service makes Ethan Allen different.
