

Little trees that please:

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

It's an ancient art that has survived for a couple of dozen centuries, and now local bonsai enthusiasts are looking to attract young people to carry the tradition into the next century.

Starr Hammen, a Grosse Pointe Woods resident, has been interested in the 2,000-year-old art of bonsai for about five years. She chairs the Grosse Pointe Bonsai Association, which is part of the horticulture division of the Grosse Pointe Garden Center.

Bonsai are miniature trees grown in small pots, which give the illusion of a fully grown, very old tree. The goal of raising a bonsai is to have it look as though it is in a natural setting with all of the characteristics of a large tree. This is achieved through constant care — branch- and root-pruning as well as shaping, watering and transplanting.

Hammen said the art of raising miniature trees goes back at least 2,000 years.

"They have found scrolls that they know the date of, that show small trees in pots," she said. "The practice probably grew out of finding naturally stunted trees in the mountains. They were stunted by the cold wind which gnarled them."

The art originated in China, and was probably picked up by the Japanese when they embraced religion. Bonsai flourished in China in the 18th and 19th centuries, and Europe saw bonsai for the first time in 1890 at a horticultural exhibition in London, England. The Japanese brought a large display, according to Ham-

men. "Raising bonsai is a very personal thing," Hammen said. "You should get a very personal reaction from it. If you get no reaction, you get bored with the tree and it just sits there."

Hammen's trees don't just sit there.

She spends hours every morning tending to both her indoor and outdoor varieties. She has several near windows in her home, and a yard full of both evergreen and deciduous bonsai. In her basement, she raises a variety of extra small bonsai and some flowering trees under lights.

She calls it a living art form. As chairwoman of the bonsai association she said she would like to see more young people involved with the hobby, which she says doesn't take a lot of money to get started, although it can get very expensive.

Hammen said the Grosse Pointe Bonsai Association is a member of Bonsai Clubs International, which boasts 45,000 members worldwide. People interested in the organization can learn more about it by attending the Grosse Pointe Garden Center's annual membership event Friday, June 5, at the War Memorial, which, this year, features a bonsai show, demonstration and sale.

There is a lot of work associated with the hobby.

"Everyone has their own formula for the potting material they grow their trees in," Hammen said.

She used riversand, calcined clay and even aquarium gravel when she is in a pinch for other See TREES, page 11A

To sea — the world

Grosse Pointe Farms sailor Dick Knoblauch began the first leg of a journey that he's been preparing for and dreaming about for years. He's going to sail around the world. Knoblauch cast off his lines at the Grosse Pointe Farms Park Thursday morning, May 21, aboard his 33-foot double-ended cutter Sea Dreamer. The boat, which he built himself, is well-equipped with radio, compass, depth-sounder, self-steering gear, radar detector and scads of safety equipment. Gini Knoblauch began the trip with her husband. Knoblauch will remain aboard for the entire journey, but his wife, family members and friends will take turns accompanying him during different portions of the trip.

Teachers upset by absenteeism

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

As school draws to a close, more and more students are getting a head start on summer vacation. It happens every year; this year, spring vacation was so late that in some cases it turned into one long holiday.

Last fall the school board reworked the attendance policy. This spring teachers are saying it may not have done any good. Last month board Secretary Carl Anderson asked the administration to put together some data on vacation-related absences.

"I found the information rather vague, so I asked for a further breakdown on the seniors," Anderson said. His original request was prompted by complaints from teachers, followed by a report from his son that his Spanish class at North only had seven students in it right before vacation.

"On a positive note, there has apparently been an improvement in general attendance," he said, "but I feel strongly that students have to be in class (all the time). Our mission is education. If students aren't in class, education doesn't take place."

Administration figures show that during the three days before and after vacation, about 20 percent of the students were absent. On any given day, between 5 and 10 percent are missing, even when no vacation is scheduled, according to Superintendent John Whritner.

The attendance policy will be reviewed by the board sometime this summer, Whritner said. "We'll have to look at the statistics and at what can be done. And we'll have to expound on the importance of being in school."

That's what is bothering teachers and administrators: Parents don't seem to take school seriously and are willing to write excuses for their children. The previous policy allowed six absences, making no differentiation between excused and unexcused. Because students tended to take those cuts as a personal right, the board tightened the policy by defining excused and unexcused and instituting some penalties, Whritner said.

The changes worked fairly well, according to South Assistant Principal Bernard LeMieux. "This policy is keeping kids in class," he said. "They want to avoid that Saturday detention. The policy is good — we may have to take a look at the mechanics."

LeMieux said that absenteeism in the spring is not comparable to the rest of the year. "You have to be careful not to gauge the entire attendance policy in the context of the last five or six weeks," he said. "What's happening now is typical of spring. In essence, the seniors have checked out. Kids who were there all year are bailing out now."

LeMieux and Anderson both suggested that the timing of spring vacation this year contributed to the problem. The break is usually tied to Easter; this year the holiday fell late in the year.

"I'd like to see another serious study," Anderson said. "It might mean calendar considerations. There's something to be said for a break midway between Christmas and summer, but there's no reason to attach it to a religious holiday."

The teachers' union has just completed a survey of its members, soliciting data and comments on the vacation-related absentee problem. Union President Doris Cook is still collating the responses, but has published some of the comments in two issues of the union newsletter.

Teachers are upset and frustrated, Cook said. "If students don't complete their projects, there's nothing to grade them on," she said. "Parents are..."

To be honored

W. Hawkins Ferry, a long-time supporter of the Detroit Institute of Arts, will be honored this weekend with the dedication of a new sculpture, Moonmad, at the museum. Ferry, best known for his book on the architectural history of the Detroit area, has made an avocation of collecting the best in modern art for the museum. For more on Ferry, see page 1B.

Pointer of Interest

Philip J. Meathe

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Philip J. Meathe, chairman of the board and CEO of Smith, Hinchman & Grylls Associates, Inc., the oldest architectural firm in America, can look out and over the city of Detroit from the fifth floor of SH&G's downtown headquarters. The building itself was designed by the firm in 1910 as an investment for a Detroit millionaire. It was purchased in the early 1970s, stripped down to its concrete frame and renovated for SH&G's headquarters. The slick glass and aluminum exterior is a dramatic statement to the years of SH&G corporate commitment to the city of Detroit.

Meathe is personally bullish on Detroit. "There is no question about Detroit's comeback," he said. "Cities are organisms. There is constant decay and growth — they're changing all the time. A city is a beast which, by its very size, cannot be abandoned. A city is always responding to conditions imposed upon it. A city cannot be destroyed; cannot be abandoned."

Meathe grew up in the Detroit area; he lives in Grosse Pointe; he's stayed in Detroit all his life, even though he's had opportunities to move to more glamorous places in the country — in fact, in the world.

"People in Grosse Pointe who damn Detroit make me mad," he said. "You can't survive in Grosse Pointe if there's no Detroit."

Meathe looked out expansively — fondly — over the city of Detroit. "We'll correct social problems. We'll always have slums. Fifty years from now we'll laugh at the racial problems we had."

"Detroit needs three things: a transportation system; the schools stink; and a solution to the crime problem."

Meathe graduated from St. Paul School in Grosse Pointe. His 99-year-old mother still lives in one of the first houses built in Grosse Pointe at the beginning of this century. Meathe attended school for awhile in the old Cadieux School on St. Clair. (He confessed to some boyish escapades, like sneaking into the building through the coal chute after school hours.)

He is a graduate of the University of Michigan's school of architecture, a registered architect, and a member of a number of professional organizations. He's also on some high-powered boards of directors in the area — past chairman of the Detroit Urban League, the Private Industry Council Committee, the Central Business District Association, and the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce.

He's accumulated a nice bunch of awards as well, including the Edward C. Kemper Award from the American Institute of Architects for his contri-

Meldrum, Steele win Lake scholarship

Two high school seniors, Heather Meldrum from North, and Michael Steele from South, have been named 1987 John Lake Scholarship recipients. Each receives a $1,000 grant toward tuition at his or her chosen university.

Meldrum, who has maintained a 3.8 grade average, has been accepted at the University of Michigan, where she plans to major in communications.

Steele will attend Case Western Reserve in Cleveland, where he will pursue his two principal interests, music and astronomy.

The John Lake Scholarship was established by friends and civic leaders to honor the late director of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial for his significant contributions to the center and the community. A history teacher at South prior to his War Memorial post, Lake was deeply interested in education and the scholarship is a suitable tribute to his efforts and memory.

Funds for the program, which has given six $1,000 awards since its inception, have been raised through individual donations and bequests as well as benefit events.

Louise TeWalt, who heads the planning committee, said, "We are nearing our endowment goal, which will make it possible to continue giving two scholarships annually. We welcome donations, whether modest or substantial, from everyone who would like to honor John Lake's memory and help us keep on with this good work."

Call 885-7214 for further information.

Committee members include Fred Adams, Marion Bockstanz, Mr. and Mrs. William O. Bradley Jr., William Dahling, Henry T. Ewald Jr., Lenore Marshall, Lee McKinley, Ruth McNamara, William R. Peters, John Rickel, Hixie Sanford, Gerald Stotzer, Frances Shelden and Dr. Mark Weber.

Seven square off for two school board seats on June 8

On Monday, June 8, seven candidates will compete for two available seats on the Grosse Pointe Board of Education. The Grosse Pointe News has interviewed all candidates and offers the following profiles to help voters make an informed choice.

Alfred Fox

Alfred Fox

Alfred Fox has been interested in running for school board for several years. As a precinct delegate in Grosse Pointe Woods, he says he has been interested in the school board process. As a candidate, "I'm learning even more now," he said.

The major issue facing the schools is getting the most it can out of the tax dollar, he said. The issue will take form first in the library expansion.

"I can't see them getting around the parking problem," Fox said. "Unless the city gives, they're going to have to do something else."

The number of parking places required currently by city ordinance is not realistic, he said. But "I wonder if we're really using all the resources we have at present. (The library) is never so jammed you can't sit down."

Fox is a police sergeant with the Wayne County Sheriff's Department. He has an undergraduate degree from Walsh College and a master's in correctional sciences from the University of Detroit. As the father of two school-age children, he has been involved in school activities for nine years.

Last year he accompanied Mason School fifth-graders on a trip to Toronto. He has worked on the Mason fair and has coached Little League for four years.

Among the issues he sees facing the schools is resolving the ventilation problems at North High School. "I thought they were treating it very lightly," he said. "The problem should be corrected regardless of cost. They may be penny-wise and dollar-foolish."

Fox said he is in favor of the schools' proposed early childhood program, so long as it is self-supporting. He also believes that at least half of the slots should be reserved for children of school district employees.

Of concern to the future of the schools are current legislative moves to change the basis for school funding, Fox said. "If we lose local control, that would be devastating," he said. "I can't see any way Grosse Pointe would benefit."

Local taxpayers, however, are likely to continue supporting the schools if they retain control. "People are willing to pay the money as long as the schools are good," Fox said. He said the combination of increasing enrollment and continuing high property values is likely to keep the schools well-funded and high quality.

"The argument that older people would be hurt by higher taxes isn't so," he said. "People are willing to pay the extra money. People on low income can benefit by the circuit-breaker (that refunds property tax under certain circumstances)."

Fox said he believes that good schools are a heavy factor in keeping property values high.

George Hawkins

George Hawkins is looking to strengthen the curriculum, especially in the areas of counseling and values, and he believes his background in design could be useful to the board in dealing with the library.

Hawkins is a product of the '60s, he says, with "the grand education of the time," attained bit by bit in various European universities. He is a business graduate of Walsh College who started out in pre-med, ended in business and spent most of the time in between studying fine arts. He is now the owner of Design Detroit, an interior designing firm.

Hawkins believes the counseling department is overloaded and needs to be studied, perhaps in conjunction with the talked-of study of the entire high school program. He also believes the system needs courses in "civilian" values.

"I know values are taught in the home but it seems to lose a little in the translation," he said. "We need a values course reflective of community values and ethics. When the school library was decimated, they weren't criminals — it was a value/ethical misjudgment on their part. A course could reduce the chances of that happening."

Hawkins said there is not enough public information about the library expansion to make a firm judgment, but he feels the system may be planning something too grandiose. "The concept of a central library is wonderful, but we may not be able to do it because of space limitations," he said. "The figures show they'll get about a 10 percent increase in usage. . . For what amounts to less than one book per resident (increase), they're going to spend $8 million — I have some trouble with that."

He says he is concerned about the possible loss of South's playing field and believes the board isn't prepared to present the matter to the public.

"Part of the problem with the school closings wasn't so much the issue as that they weren't prepared," he said. "They had planned classes in a water closet with a slop sink for the janitor — those are things the public will take and nail your hide to the wall."

Hawkins said he raised the closing issue to illustrate lack of preparedness. He said it is a moot point now and that the schools are as likely as not to increase population.

"You can't say the community is all built up," he said. "Twenty years from now, there could be a zoning change and we could have six-story high-rises along Mack. The schools need to consider how to use and adapt space, but they shouldn't sell property off."

Hawkins described himself as a believer in a classical education that offers as much variety as possible. If it comes to a budget crunch, however, the board must be able to make cuts in courses that aren't necessary for college.

"I'd put reading before a class on how to fill out a checkbook," he said, "or English before journalism. They need to learn to read a newspaper and discern the issues."

Hawkins is married. He and his wife and children live in Grosse Pointe Park.

Joel Hickey

Joel T. Hickey, 41, is a bachelor with no children, which he believes puts him in a good position to be even-handed on the school board.

"I like to get down to the issues," he said. "I like to get the job done and put aside self-interest. I can do that, being single."

Hickey is a personnel officer with the Wayne County Department of Personnel/Human Resources and operates an import art business, Les Primitifs. He has lived in the Pointes for 12 years, with time out for three years in Indian Village.

He has taught elementary school, worked for the U.S. Department of Labor and had a finance position at Chrysler Corp. for five years. He is a graduate of Michigan State University (political science), the University of Detroit (M.B.A. in finance) and the Detroit College of Law and has done graduate work in child psychology at the University of Michigan and in finance at Princeton University.

"My background in labor negotiating is a plus," Hickey said. "If I give away something, I want to get more in return."

Hickey, who is a resident of Grosse Pointe Park, sees himself as a candidate without special interests. "I have no children in any school, I can look at the whole picture, I can represent retired and single people," he said.

He is anticipating a jump in property assessments in the Park, but said he doesn't expect to see retirees voting against future school tax increases because good schools are good for property values.

"Quality education brings young families into the area," he said. "It keeps the neighborhood lively and evolving and keeps property values up."

A major issue facing the new school board will be the proposed expansion of the libraries. Hickey is wholeheartedly in favor of expansion.

"The library is a wealth — I think it should be expanded. I would be inclined to say 'yes' to supporting the whole library package, but I haven't seen a concrete proposal yet," he said.

"Parking is a problem. I'm not in favor of taking the high school athletic field, but I would use the strip along Kercheval."

Hickey said he has had no prior involvement with the Grosse Pointe schools and has no particular criticisms of the program. He favors full utilization of Barnes School for athletics, for senior citizens, as long as the costs are covered.

"Taxpayers shouldn't be asked to pay for activities that aren't pulling their own weight and aren't directly related to educating kids."

Concerns about declining enrollment may be misplaced, Hickey said. "Families with children are moving in in droves." For that reason, the district may still be in a position to consider adding programs.

"I believe in foreign languages," Hickey said. "I travel a lot and slap the American school system for not teaching languages. We need exposure to other cultures. If you can't understand their history and culture, you can't understand them."

"We should expose ourselves to as much as we possibly can — that's the joy of living."

Vincent LoCicero

Vincent LoCicero has some projects he wants to see through on the school board. The library, teacher contract negotiations, the whole school finance picture are all issues currently facing the district.

LoCicero has been involved in school activities since he was a PTO member at Trombly School. He served as an officer on the PTA-PTO council and on the citizens' advisory committee during reorganization, then ran for the school board. He has served there as treasurer, vice president and is now president.

During his four-year term, the board hired a superintendent, instituted a seven-hour day, reorganized the custodial staff, instituted an energy-saving program, banned smoking at the high schools and is in the process of setting up programs for early childhood and staff development. An attendance policy established this year is scheduled for review this summer, LoCicero said.

The library expansion is probably the biggest single issue over which the voters have immediate control. "I've devoted a lot of time to that project," LoCicero said. "I'd like to see it come to fruition. It's a lot of money, but this community should have an excellent facility for a library. We shouldn't go out and spend all the money we can, but it should be done right — or it shouldn't be done."

LoCicero said the board is frustrated over the parking situation. He said he is hopeful that a forthcoming study will relieve the problem.

A problem the community has less direct control over is the proposed change in the state's method of funding schools. Several measures now before the legislature propose modifying the residential property tax with an eye to equalizing the differences between districts by capping the amount that could be spent in any district. Grosse Pointe has joined an association of schools most likely to be affected by such legislation and is lobbying vigorously against it.

"The only other thing that can be done is to keep the issue before the public and encourage them to write their legislators," he said.

On the shorter term, the board is wrestling with a potential budget deficit. "I'm not sure how that will come out," he said. "We may have to end up collecting more tax — some of the things we're talking about cutting shouldn't be cut."

The board is also going to have to look at class size. "Would the community rather have larger classes and retain more programs or cut programs to keep class size down?" he asked. "We're very proud of our class size."

With enrollment figures on the way up again, LoCicero said he has been urging that the board not consider moving the administration offices to Barnes School. "We might need it as a school again," he said. "I'd love that — it would mean the community is full of young people again."

LoCicero is married and lives with his family in Grosse Pointe Park. He is an attorney with Berschback, Kerwin, LoCicero, Chilingirian & Brennan.

Margaret Monaghan

Margaret A. (Peggy) Monaghan brings a background in teaching and parenting to her campaign for the school board. For 23 years she was a regular and substitute teacher in a variety of parochial schools in the eastern metropolitan area. She is currently putting her energies into her family and volunteer school activities.

"Having children in school, I'm very concerned about education," she said. Monaghan and her husband, William, have two children at South High School and one at Monteith.

She is active in a peer-parenting group, a support she feels many parents need. "My mother didn't belong to a peer-parenting group, but she went outside and hung laundry on a line. Neighbors talked over the fence and had their own peer-parenting group," she said. Her group, which she described as in the formative stages, collaborated successfully on times and rules for the junior prom this spring.

Monaghan sees the establishment of long-term priorities as one of the issues faced by the board. "I wonder if the Barnes closing was considered long term enough," she said. "Now some of the schools are crowded."

Whether schools are closed is not as important an issue as the size of classes, she said. Small necessary for their class papers and projects and have to go down-town to the library. "The librarians are very helpful, but the materials are not there," she said.

Monaghan said that one of her strengths is her involvement and familiarity with the Grosse Pointe schools. She toured all of the elementary schools when she considered first-grade placement for her daughter. She is active in parent groups at Monteith and South.

"I've been a room mother forever," she said.

L. Jane Nutter

L. Jane Nutter has known for some years that she wanted to run for school board. I've waited until I felt I knew the system well enough," she said. "I felt this was the year to do it."

Nutter has been active in school volunteer activities at Defer and won the Outstanding Volunteer award from the school system for her work as co-chair of the successful 1986 millage campaign. She is a graduate of Simmons College and is a registered dietitian.

The library, teacher contract negotiations, quality of education and financing are the major issues facing the schools, Nutter believes. As a member of the library committee, she is in the forefront of the effort to implement expansion plans.

"We definitely need the expansion. The 1966 study showed we were grossly under-spaced. Twenty years later is none too soon to jump into it."

Nutter said the committee looked into other building sites and that the Central Library location is the best available — and the one the community wants. Parking is the obvious problem with that site.

"We must absolutely minimize the loss of the (South playing) field," she said. "We need to be creative about parking, short of building a parking structure."

In terms of finances, proposed changes in funding of schools "could totally change the chemistry of this school system. We need to be on top of that," she said. "If they put us in the position of having very limited funds, we'll have some very difficult choices.

"Money won't solve everything, however. We have things in Grosse Pointe that make it work: committed staff, good leadership, parents who care and who don't expect the schools to raise their children."

The proposed staff development plan is a good one, she said. A teacher should be placed on special assignment to administer the program — and Nutter added that the administrators could benefit from it as well.

"It could be used to help administrators gain financial skills," she said. "As things have changed, the building principals have become budget managers. They need back-up on that."

She said she isn't worried about the quality of the schools. "But we aren't a lighthouse district in all areas. In computer literacy, in staff development, for instance, we haven't led the way.

"One of the best things that happened to this district was the reorganization fight," she said. "It caused an educational reawakening. People looked at other districts and saw there were a lot of things we didn't have."

Nutter was active in the fight not to close any schools and said she had opposed the closing of Barnes. "But I accepted the decision," she said. "I didn't work for recall."

Although she describes herself as an independent person, Nutter said board teamwork will be essential. "You have to work as a team and pick your fights," she said.

Nutter and her husband, Russell, live in Grosse Pointe Park. They have two children.

Marie Wayman

Marie Wayman would like the schools to take a closer look at offering programs that can support themselves and meet genuine needs of the community. She favors looking at programs over the long range.

As a strategic planner for Detroit Edison, Wayman says she would like to "use planning skills to help identify and communicate the issues that face the district, help develop long-term objectives.

"I know there are long-range plans," she said. "I would like to go beyond that and identify major strategic objectives... and link them together so everyone is moving in the same direction."

Wayman is a retailing graduate of Michigan State University with a master's in education from the University of Michigan. She taught school for two years and now has two small children ready to start school in Grosse Pointe.

Marie Wayman

"I would like to put more in than I get out," she said. "Right now we're going to be strong users of the school system."

She has been involved in volunteer activities at school. Wayman organized a parent support group for her daughter's latchkey program, to look at space and equipment and share ideas about games, toys and activities. The group also encouraged the school to hire an additional caregiver, she said.

"I'm pleased and satisfied (with the results)," she said. "The program has grown to be a fine example of what can be done."

The role of the board, as Wayman describes it, is to "identify and establish policies and constraints. Budgetary issues need to be clarified," she said. A major and immediate budget issue is the library expansion.

"To what extent should we invest in the library?" she asked. "What are the needs and how do they stack up against other needs? The library plans look good — but we need to look at the trade-offs and costs.

"I'd like to know more about it."

Wayman said she would also like to review the relationship between the teachers and administrators. She favors implementing a staff development program.

"Any organization that wants to move ahead and prepare for the future has to do that through its people," she said.

A key Wayman theme is long-range planning. "I'd like the schools to establish some kind of relationship with business," she said. "It's a way for the schools to learn some of the information business has, in terms of forecasting and market studies. Many businesses are willing to work with communities and share information.

"There is such an effort in the greater Detroit area to improve the economics, the image, the schools... I view Grosse Pointe as part of the greater metropolitan community — much of what happens to Detroit affects Grosse Pointe. There are so many complex issues — planning is essential."

Olzark to judge essays

Third Circuit Court Judge Roland L. Olzark will serve as a judge in the National Bicentennial Writing Competition for high school students.

The essay competition topic is, "The Constitution: How Does the Separation of Powers Help Make It Work."

Olzark will serve as one of the judges for essays submitted in the seven counties in Region 1. The competition is sponsored by the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution, the American Bar Association, and USA Today/Gannett Co.

The top three essays from each of six regions and sub-regions throughout the state will be considered for state awards.

A panel consisting of Chief Justice Dorothy Comstock Riley, State Board of Education President Barbara Roberts Mason and Wayne State University President Dr. David Adamany will select the state's three winners from among the 18 essays selected at the regional level.

Michigan's first place winner will receive $1,000, plus an all-expense paid trip to Washington, D.C. to meet President Reagan, the Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, members of the National Bicentennial Commission and leaders of Congress. Second and third place winners will receive $500 and $250, respectively. The deadline for submission was April 15.

Peggy Monaghan

classes are seen as essential to learning.

Monaghan is inclined to feel that the board will be able to work out the problems involved with expanding the library. She said she has studied the issue, but that it is too soon to have a stance, since the plans are not final.

"Parking is a problem," she said, "but library-users are not long-term parkers. I've never had trouble parking. Expanding the library means expanding space and services, not people."

Expanding library materials is an important goal, she said. In her experience, high school students often cannot find materials

Crawford to be honored

John Crawford, Grosse Pointe Park city manager, will receive the Local Awareness Leader of the Year award for his support last year of a group home for developmentally disabled adults.

The award will be presented at the eighth annual awards luncheon Monday, June 8, at the Southfield Hilton, sponsored by the Awareness Community Team for the Developmentally Disabled.

Cited for his support of the Lakepointe home, the first group home to open in the Grosse Pointe community, Crawford will be one of several honorees from the tri-county area.

"It is such a very controversial issue and they need all the help they can get in terms of creating citizen awareness of what the laws are and what the program is all about," Crawford said. The award was a surprise, he added.

The keynote speaker will be Virginia Rainey-Harmon, director of Wayne Community Living investigation by the American College of Physicians (ACP).

Dr. Frame was a Henry Ford Hospital physician from 1956 until his death at age 63 last August. His posthumous award was accepted during the ACP's 68th annual scientific meeting by his son, Richard Frame, M.D., former chief medical resident at Henry Ford Hospital during 1984-85.

Masters of the medical specialty society are honored for personal character, eminence in practice or medical research, achievements in medicine or science, and service to the ACP.

Among his roles during 38 years of medical service was that of team physician for the Detroit Lions from 1970-75.

Dr. Frame served as chairman of Internal Medicine at Henry Ford Hospital from 1985 until his death. He was head of Bone and Mineral Metabolism from 1961-85.

Agency seeks candidates

The State Court Administrative Office is looking for candidates to fill a public member vacancy on the Friend of the Court Advisory Committee.

The advisory committee advises the Friend of the Court Bureau in the State Court Administrative Office on matters relating to domestic relations and child support.

Committee members serve without compensation, but are reimbursed for meeting expenses. Public members must have had contact with an office of the Friend of the Court.

State Court Administrator V.

Robert Payant said persons may apply to fill the vacancy for a term ending in October 1988 by submitting a resume and letter detailing their experience in domestic relations and their interest in serving on the committee. Recommendations for appointment to the Advisory Committee are encouraged and should be made in writing.

Applications and recommendations should be sent to V. Robert Payant, State Court Administrator, P.O. Box 30048, Lansing, Mich. 48909. Applications and recommendations must be received by June 2.

News endorses 2 candidates in election

After interviewing the seven candidates running for the two positions on the Grosse Pointe Board of Education to be filled in the June 8 election we are more convinced than ever that this community is fortunate in the quality of residents who are willing to undertake the responsibilities of serving on the school board.

Having made that point, however, we also must add that in our opinion two candidates have superior credentials even though all seven are qualified to a degree. All live in the Pointes, of course, and most have lived here long enough to have a good understanding of the community. All are interested in the schools and most have had experience with them either as parents or teachers. All of them bring certain abilities and backgrounds that would qualify them to serve.

On the basis of our interviews and other efforts to inform ourselves about the campaign, we have concluded, however, that there really are no burning issues in the minds of the candidates. Nor, in fact, did we hear any major, direct criticisms of either the present board or the school administration headed by Superintendent John Whritner.

Among the candidates, the consensus was that the major issues facing the schools are the renewal of the teachers' contract, the financing and parking problems connected with the proposed expansion of the libraries, planning for enrollment increases in the elementary and middle schools as well as decreases in the high schools and, in general, making sure that the system gets full value for the tax money invested in it.

These obviously are important issues but they do not divide the community the way the school-closing controversy did a few years ago. As a result, it appears to be a traditional low-key campaign. In general, the discussions appear to be directed at maintaining and improving the Pointe system's record of excellence which has won it both state and national distinction. Continuing that record appeared to be a common objective of all seven candidates.

Yet we believe two candidates are outstanding because of their records of community achievement, their service to the public schools and their interest in and knowledge about the current problems facing the system.

One is the current board president, Vincent LoCicero, a Pointe resident for more than 33 years, who is seeking a second term after making what we think was an admirable record in his first four years on the board.

The other is L. Jane Nutter who has been involved in a wide range of school programs including service as a Defer PTO board member and president, as a co-chairperson of the 1986 millage renewal campaign and as a current member of the Library Needs Advisory Committee.

LoCicero, who was one of the News' choices four years ago, served as treasurer during his second year on the board, as vice president the third year and as president this year. He is seeking re-election, he says, because he enjoys the responsibilities, likes to participate in the ongoing experiences on the board and is interested in seeing through to fruition such projects as the library expansion.

As he says, it has been a busy four years for the school system. The board approved the closing of Barnes Elementary School after a community-wide controversy. It hired a new superintendent, approved a new seven-period day, prohibited smoking in the schools, reorganized the custodial force, installed energy-saving methods, established a new attendance policy and discussed many other policies and problems.

LoCicero is concerned about the effect of any plan for state funding of the public schools that would limit or minimize local control. Such a plan might curtail the Pointes' spending for the superior education now financed largely by Pointe taxpayers themselves. But LoCicero is also worried about future local funding in view of rising costs which may require the community to make a choice between small increases in class size and cutting some programs to maintain the current class size.

Ms. Nutter, who has been a resident of the Pointes for more than 13 years, said she had decided several years ago to run for the school board but waited until she had learned more about the system and had more time and knowledge to devote to board service.

As a member of the library needs committee, she supported the 1986 committee recommendation for expansion of the libraries. But she acknowledges that the expansion must minimize any usage of the South athletic field and that the parking problem still has to be resolved with the Farms Council.

She still hopes that the library bond issue could be put on the ballot in the fall and that board members then could become frontline soldiers in the effort to win approval of the issue.

She believes the schools in Grosse Pointe do well not only because of adequate funding but because the district employs committed teachers, is getting good continuing leadership and is supported by parents and other citizens who care about and are active in the school system. In fact, she sees the school-closing issue of several years ago as beneficial in reawakening many residents' interest in school problems.

In endorsing LoCicero and Ms. Nutter, we offer our own opinions based on our study of the candidates' backgrounds, qualifications and responses to the questions posed in our interviews. Others may come to different conclusions of course, but we urge our readers to review our news and editorial coverage and obtain as much other information as possible. In a self-governing society, citizens do have a responsibility to inform themselves before they make decisions.

A mutual dependence

The following editorial was written by News Editor Pat Pabolsky, who along with Publisher R.G. Edgar and about 100 journalists from throughout Michigan, attended a Media Day in Detroit as guests of Mayor Coleman A. Young.

Abortion. Gun control. Child abuse. AIDS. The one thing these words have in common is the emotion attached to them. They're not just words. Add another one to the list: Detroit.

People love it or hate it — there's no in between. For those of us who grew up in the city and, even though we've moved away, still maintain an emotional attachment to our home town, it's particularly frustrating to hear people who have never been to Detroit run it down. It's frustrating to read the conclusions of visiting journalists, who, after a day or two of limited observation — such as the drive between here and the Silverdome — are able to neatly analyze all of the city's problems.

It's frustrating and it's amazing, too, when you think about it. People can become apoplectic over the mention of Coleman Young or the People Mover. But what about the Detroit Institute of Arts, Greektown at night or during the day, the Attic Theater, Tiger Stadium, Wayne State University?

This is not to say that Detroit doesn't have its problems. It's in the grip of a major crisis now with the number of children being killed or injured by other children with guns. If it isn't stopped soon, the image of Detroit as a violent, lawless city may become irreversible.

That's why the Media Day that the mayor hosted recently for the second year for journalists throughout the state is a good idea. But not everyone agrees. Some view it as a junket, a freebie by the mayor to buy some goodwill. There's coffee and donuts in the morning, a free lunch and dinner and tours all day. In the evening, there are tickets for the baseball game.

And while some newspapers have strict rules about accepting free anything, the reality is that most weekly newspapers do not have the means to pick up the tab for all the events their people cover. The reality is that if Coleman Young invited all of the outstate journalists to attend a Media Day in Detroit at their expense, he wouldn't have to reserve a bus to transport them.

So he lures them with a day on the city — a ride on the controversial People Mover, a cruise on the Star of Detroit — who could resist? And it's on a Friday, so those people traveling a distance can spend a night or two and make a mini-vacation out of it.

It's still a good idea. The number of journalists who said it was their first visit to Detroit was a revelation. Why do those of us near the city assume everyone — or at least those in the media — have been to Detroit? To me it would be like living in New York and never visiting New York City. I could understand the woman from the Upper Peninsula who said it was her first visit, but the guy from Lansing?

And that's the whole idea. Get the people here to see it, even if it is a pretty tour. What's wrong with showing the good stuff? There a lot going in Detroit that deserves some attention.

If the Media Day accomplishes one thing, it's that it puts a face on Detroit. And when the writers and editors go back to their cities, Detroit is no longer just a name.

That's important to us who share a border with Detroit. We can't ignore it and we can't shut it down. We have to live with it. It's that simple. Those who would make an island of themselves, who feel they wouldn't be affected if Detroit went down the tubes, are dreaming. We need each other.

Protect our legacy

To the Editor:

After reading your article in the Grosse Pointe News May 14 regarding the dismantling of the Ernest Kantzler mansion by Mr. & Mrs. Edsel Ford II, I felt compelled to express my disbelief that such a prominent, cultural and historic community with a deep love and respect for the glorious past would allow parts of their heritage to be sold.

How long will the Grosse Pointes allow their city's treasures to be auctioned off piece by piece?

After the structure is stripped to its bare shell, wrought-iron gates, wood paneling, chandeliers, wall scones, fireplace exterior or brick work, roof, tiles, gutters, drain pipes, etc.; then it is subject to subdividing the lots on a large estate, for developers, for profit, for instance the Kantzler mansion. Thus, creating a situation whereby, financial, fortune seekers, may purchase a home for $200,000 and once the transaction is complete, reap an exorbitant profit of $400,000.

Will Grosse Pointe's history continuously be sold for the almighty dollar?

As precinct delegate of Historic Indian Village, and a member of the National Historic Preservation Society and Preservation Detroit, I am a firm believer in the preservation of historic homes and buildings. I believe we should preserve the past to appreciate the future.

The Detroit area has a wealth of historic neighborhoods in sound older buildings, but, in the past, and yet today, neglect and poor planning within the local, state and national levels of government threaten to rob future generations of Detroit's remaining heritage, and limit the potential for its revitalization as a thriving urban area.

The key to successful preservation efforts in other cities has been the presence of a strong and effective preservation organization.

The Detroit area has never had a private staffed, well-financed, lobbyist membership based preservation organization.

In order to deter future destruction of homes with historic significance by "profit schemers," long- and short-range strategic planning, research and physical surveys should be immediately executed.

My home, the Buhl mansion, in Historic Indian Village, built in 1908, so named after one of the most prominent, civic-minded families of the city of Detroit, Arthur H. Buhl, was recently granted the distinction of a "Certified Historic Structure," for a charitable contribution, for conservation purposes, in accordance with the "Tax Treatment Extension Act of See LETTER, page 8A

Family fun 'n' feuds

I went to three family reunions last month.

Not the full-fledged kind, to be sure, with squads of aunts and uncles, but reunions nevertheless, of people who don't get together often in the normal course of events.

I like it. Bob and I both grew up with cousins. He shared a room with three brothers and never knew when he woke up in the morning whether there might be a cousin or two snoring in the family chorus. A visit to my cousins at the farm was a standard feature of every summer. My parents were so close to another one of my cousins that his father got jealous.

Not that I have a big family. I have no such claims as some of the people in the office who are related to every person I ever interview.

But I enjoy the family I've got. It's heartwarming to see every family get-together follow the same course, the almost ritualistic dredging up of old family anecdotes in a reaffirmation of the closeness that we would like to feel again. The retelling of the exploits brings the next generation into the circle — at the same time the repetition is probably putting the in-laws to sleep.

Our family, like most, is spread all over the American map, so the first order of business at any reunion is introductions. Once Bob's nephew brought an entire photo album of his children and snared every individual present to examine the whole thing.

Every reunion should have a bevy of ancient uncles nodding and mumbling. At Uncle Verne's funeral, they all — individually — accosted Bob, asking, "You Al?"

"Nope, I'm Al's boy," replied my decidedly middle-aged husband, who, with his shining pate, now looks exactly the way his father did the last time they saw him, 30 years ago.

It's interesting to sit back and just observe how the California

I Say

cousins and the New York cousins have changed from the Detroit cousins.

The LA branch has gone gaga over movie stars and limos and condos in Hawaii and claims to know Frank so well that they're embarrassed to go to Vegas for the weekend because he always picks up their tab.

The New York cousins live in Queens and ride the subway.

There's always a certain amount of jostling for position.

Somebody always feels a need to impress the others with his wealth. There are some with leftover '60s idealism who need to impress everyone with their disdain for materialism. And there are a few who need to remind us how wonderful their children are.

But the best part of a reunion is that some of the family can get past that kind of rivalry. Lots of us relish argumentation and aren't afraid to tackle the most controversial topics. The old rule about never discussing politics or religion with family doesn't apply here.

In fact, religion is one of our favorites. Individually, we participate in most of the spectrum from mainline Protestant to Pentecostal to Eastern rite Catholic to liberal religious humanist to lapsed, but we leap eagerly into discussions of the role of the clergy in the Nicaraguan civil war or whether the church should take a stance on social issues or why so many people prefer religions with answers rather than religions with choices.

Coming together with family is one of the foremost ways to see things from a different angle. All I have to do to hear about stunt-filming or artificial intelligence or chimney-sweeping or computer-aided design or hand-stitching a quilt or building The Bomb is to talk to somebody in my family. Social criticism is as prevalent as criticism of each other.

When I was 20, I couldn't wait to get away from family and try my own wings. The urge toward independence was strong then, but I've noticed as the birthdays go by that getting together again assumes ever-greater importance. After all, these are the folks who know about all our warts and put up with us anyway.

Yesterday's Headlines

Aug. 4, 1977 —

The New York Times reported one man killed and seven injured when terrorist bombs exploded in two midtown Manhattan office buildings. The twin towers of the World Trade Center were evacuated as were seven floors of the Empire State Building. The Puerto Rican terrorist group, FALN, took responsibility for the explosions and called for independence of Puerto Rico. The group had been setting bombs in Manhattan, Chicago, Newark and Washington since 1974.

Israel Prime Minister Menachem Begin endorsed the proposal by President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Secretary of State

Cyrus Vance that Arab and Israeli foreign ministers meet in the United States preparatory to a peace conference in Geneva.

The Soviet Union's most prominent specialist on American affairs stated that Moscow was sincere about its unhappiness with the Carter administration and that Washington should not avoid the responsibility for the current chill.

Auto industry executives issued brief statements of praise of a House-Senate conference committee's decision to again extend the 1975 auto emission control standards of the Clean Air Act to cover 1978 and 1979 model cars. The automakers had threatened to shut down plants and lay off thousands of workers if the decision was otherwise.

CIA Director Adm. Stansfield Turner said that the agency had secretly supported human behavior control research at 80 institutions, including 44 colleges or universities as well as hospitals and prisons.

President Carter's lower-priced postage rate for consumers, recently presented to the U.S. Postal Service, encountered opposition from a surprising quarter — the consumer. Nearly 900 letters to the commission called the proposed rate unfair and unworkable.

A ruling by a Texas judge that a TV cameraman could film executions of condemned prisoners was reversed by a federal appeals court. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit said that First Amendment protection of a free press did not cover "matters not accessible to the public generally."

Our little Runaway...

About 30 Grosse Pointe North seniors probably outdid all their classmates with the transportation they pulled off to get them to the annual North senior prom this year.

Runaway III, a 62-foot yacht owned by Tony Nalbandian will take the 30 seniors on a three-hour cruise in between Jefferson Beach Marina and the Detroit Yacht Club, where the prom is being held.

Senior Ian McNeil said after the prom the graduates will board the ship after the bash and go on another tour of the Detroit River and Lake St. Clair, before having breakfast on board.

McNeil said two of his friends, Laura Vittoe and Jamie Eliades knew the ship's captain, Woods resident Jerry Hensen, who thought it would be a great idea to shuttle the kids to the prom.

The seniors are getting a bargain rate. The ship will cost the prom-goers $100 an hour. Twelve of the guys will fork out $100 for the 12-hour excursion and a prom to remember.

If anyone can top this means of transportation, be sure to let us know.

Not on Mack

ZaPaul's almost got an OK to operate an outdoor cafe at its restaurant located at 18450 Mack.

The restaurant's request for the permit appeared on the city council's May 18 agenda.

Residents did not have to be informed of the request, however, Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm notified some by word of mouth.

Several residents voiced strong opposition at the meeting and at least one wrote a letter to the council opposing the move. They feared noise, litter and possible pest infestations in the area because of the outdoor cafe.

Several residents also felt that the outdoor cafe would block the sidewalk, a suggestion with which several councilmen agreed.

Councilman John Crowley said he thought the idea was a good one at first, and that the Farms was starting to take on the air of Birmingham. Then he heard the arguments from the nearby residents and changed his mind.

Fromm also said he thought it was a good idea, but probably not for Mack Avenue.

"I don't think (an outdoor cafe) is appropriate there," Fromm said. "I wouldn't want to sit outside on Mack Avenue and have dinner."

One minute after five

It was just after quitting hour when dozens of anxious gardeners descended at the Woods city hall for the Grosse Pointe Woods Beautification Commission annual flower sale. From all indications, this year's sale was a success.

Three Village council seats filled in Shores voters approve charter amendment. About 8 percent of the village of Grosse Pointe Shores registered voters turned out Tuesday, May 19, to give approval to the three unopposed candidates to the council. Voters also gave the nod to a charter amendment, which will allow trustees to contract for legal and financial assistance from outside of the village.

Incumbent councilmen John Heutteman III and Daniel Beck and newcomer Rose Garland Thornton were approved to sit on the village council. Lee McKinley received four write-in votes. Heutteman garnered 161 votes, Beck, 149, and Thornton, 143.

The ballot question for the charter amendment was passed by a 2 to 1 margin, 121-61.

Village Manager Michael Kenyon said the charter amendment was necessary to allow the village to do business with outside financial and legal firms. Prior to the vote, it was not within the bounds of the charter to hire outside firms.

Jewelry taken

A Bedford resident in the Park is missing about $20,000 in jewelry and about $2,700 cash which was reportedly taken from her residence sometime between May 11-12.

Park public safety officials said they believe the incident occurred during the day May 11 when the woman was outdoors in her garden.

Officers said there was no sign of forced entry.

As preservationists, we can be the muscle of definite change in the future policy decision making process.

In a joint-effort, the Detroit area and the Grosse Pointes must unite to identify individuals who share our vision and concern for heritage. The preservation of our architectural legacy is irrelevant without the input of the individuals who have shared it and who live and work within it.

Car break-ins reported

A Farms college student is going to have some problems getting ready for school next fall.

All of his college possessions, including his stereo, were taken from his car which was parked in front of a Beverly residence overnight May 14-15.

Farms police said they have no suspects at this time.

A radar detector valued at about $400 was taken from a 1978 Mercedes Benz while it was parked in the Farms east municipal lot on Mack.

A radar detector was also taken from a car which was parked on Mack Avenue just west of McKinley May 11.

Farms police said that someone smashed the driver's side window and removed the detector.

Grosse Pointe's heroes

Memorial Day services were held Monday morning on the terrace of the War Memorial to honor men and women from Grosse Pointe who died in World War II, the Korean and Vietnam Wars. Participants in the ceremonies were John Lewis, War Memorial vice president; Dr. Stan Wilson, associate pastor of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church; Mark Weber, War Memorial director; Joseph Fromm, mayor of Grosse Pointe Farms; the Detroit Street Railway Band — with Civil War uniforms and instruments; Girl Scouts; Boy Scouts; and representatives from the American Legion. Approximately 500 to 600 people attended the lakeside services.

Edward J. Wasner

Services for Edward J. Wasner, 90, were held Wednesday, May 27, 1987, at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church. Mr. Wasner died May 21 at Bon Secours Hospital.

He was born in Detroit and was an owner of Broth Tool & Die Inc. in Warren for nearly 40 years.

Mr. Wasner was a veteran of World War I, a member of the National Tool & Die Association, Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, a life member of the Detroit Yacht Club, a former member of the Detroit Athletic Club, a 32nd-degree Mason at the Friendship Lodge No. 419. He was also active in the Big Brother movement and the United Foundation.

Survivors include a son, Edward J. Jr., and several nieces and nephews.

Burial was at Roseland Park Cemetery in Berkley, Mich.

Arrangements were handled by the Chas. Verheyden Funeral Home.

Joseph J. Raulinavich

Services were held May 26, 1987, at St. Paul Church for Joseph J. Raulinavich, 63, of Grosse Pointe Farms. Mr. Raulinavich died May 20 at St. John Hospital.

He was born in Duryea, Pa., and was a carpet installer.

He was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post 6782.

Survivors include his wife, Eleanor; a sister, Betty Laurinatis; and a brother, Thomas.

Burial was at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Arrangements were handled by the Chas. Verheyden Funeral Home.

Robert Rathbun

Robert Rathbun

A memorial service for Grosse Pointe South art teacher Robert Rathbun, 54, will be held on June 7, 1987 at 1 p.m. in South's auditorium. Mr. Rathbun died of cancer May 18.

He was born in Grosse Pointe Farms, graduated from Denby High School and received his B.A. and M.A. from Wayne State University.

Rathbun served in the U.S. Army from 1951-53 in Germany. He was a teacher for 29 years in the Grosse Pointe school system — at Richard, Pierce, Grosse Pointe North and Grosse Pointe South. He was a member of the Grosse Pointe Artists Association and was well known for his drawing and painting.

Survivors include his mother, Lydia Rathbun; and a sister, Barbara Keaton.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Grosse Pointe

South Mothers' Club, Robert Rathbun Scholarship Fund, 11 Grosse Pointe Boulevard, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236.

Allyn E. Gerds

Services were held for former Grosse Pointer Allyn E. Gerds, 74, Saturday, May 23, 1987 at the First English Lutheran Church in Grosse Pointe. Mr. Gerds died May 20 on Harsens Island.

He was born in Detroit and was a mechanical engineer with the automotive industry.

He was a member of the Moslem Shrine and the Grosse Pointe Senior Men's Club.

Survivors include his wife, Marion; two sons, Allyn Jr. and Gary; and four grandchildren.

Burial was at Grandlawn Cemetery in Detroit.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Michigan Cancer Foundation or to the First English Lutheran Church, 800 Vernier, Grosse Pointe Woods 48236.

Arrangements were handled by A.H. Peters Funeral Home.

He joined SH&G in 1969, became president and CEO in 1971, and was named chairman of the board in 1986. More than three dozen downtown Detroit buildings have been designed by the firm. Some of the most notable: the Guardian Building, the University of Detroit law library, the downtown branch of the Detroit Public Library, the J.L. Hudson Company, First Federal Savings & Loan, the Penobscot Building, the Buhl Building, Michigan Bell headquarters, Joe Louis Arena, Hart Plaza and the Dodge Fountain, and the current Renaissance Center renovations (which are still in progress.)

Other well-known buildings in Michigan are: Meadowbrook Hall, Jefferson Avenue Presbyterian Church, The Players Club, the Country Club of Detroit, Yost Field House and the Horace H. Rackham School of Graduate Studies in Ann Arbor, Kmart Corporation Headquarters in Troy and the General Motors Technical Center.

National and international credits include the Lunar Receiving Laboratory in Houston, Texas, the U.S. Defense Office Building in Washington D.C., Hartsfield International Airport in Atlanta, the University of Saigon Medical Education Center, the Royal Saudi Air Force Headquarters in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. A world map on the wall of SH&G's offices marks all the places in the world the firm has worked. Pins mark cities throughout the United States, in most European countries, in Australia, Russia, Hawaii, Alaska, the Middle East and South America. Along with the corporation's extensive collection of original art and sculpture which is displayed in the office building, there is a large model of the city of Detroit, which highlights the several dozen buildings that have been designed by Smith, Hinchman & Grylls.

Meathe calls Mayor Coleman Young a good friend. "I have respect for the mayor," he said. "Sometimes he says things in haste, but he cares about the city. He's often misinterpreted."

About the much-maligned People Mover, Meathe said that many people don't realize its historical background. "During Carter's administration, the Democrats decided they wanted to use federal money to do some experimentation in urban mass transportation. They asked cities to apply for a grant. Several responded. Three were selected — Miami, Los Angeles and Detroit. We tend to forget that the figures for the budget were set by Washington with no engineering studies. Since then, the political party has changed and the Democrats are being blasted for what is, in fact, an experimental system."

Meathe said when the People Mover begins operation, it will be judged first technologically: how well it works. Then it will be evaluated by how people use it. "We'll have to wait five years to see if people use it. We have to wait to judge its success."

Detroit is improving. Meathe is certain of it. Riverfront development — Harbortown — the Stroh development project are all pieces of a puzzle that are falling into place. So is the improved medical center.

Concerning the Grosse Pointe area, he lamented the demolition of such masterpieces as Rose Terrace and the Ranger estate. "It's a shame they're gone. But that's change." Preservation efforts always involve a trade-off, he said. "Would Grosse Pointers change their zoning laws to save Rose Terrace? No. Would they allow a high-rise or a condo to be developed in order to preserve an old mansion? No."

Old buildings can be rehabilitated and reused, he said, citing the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House as a successful example. "The question is, who's going to step up with the money and the resources? Will the city change its zoning laws? So far there have been no takers (for many old mansions.)" He said an addition is feasible for the Grosse Pointe Central Library — one that would solve the library's problems while preserving the architectural integrity of the building.

Meathe has four years and seven months until he retires. "After 40 years, I'm in the twilight of my career. I announced my retirement early so that the young people in the company know. They can build a team, set goals, make plans. I'm backing away and giving them a chance to stand on their own feet." Meathe doesn't see retirement as the end of his architectural career, however. He plans to lend his architectural expertise to organizations and people who need help, but don't have the resources or the know-how to purchase it — organizations like FOCUS:Hope. "I've been very fortunate," he said. "I'd like to give something back."

Meathe will add yet another honor to his list of awards on June 7, when he receives an honorary doctor of architecture degree from Lawrence Institute of Technology.

In spite of his strong commitment and dedication to business, Meathe said he knows how to relax. He's an avid gardener. "I dress up on weekdays. I'm a slob on weekends. I love to get dirty and play in the mud."

Philip J. Meathe, chairman of the board and CEO of Smith Hinchman & Grylls, looks over a model of the city of Detroit on the wall of the firm's headquarters. The dark-colored buildings were designed by SH&G. Meathe is pointing to the firm's headquarters in downtown Detroit, 455 West Fort St., near Cass.

Teachers

cuses for anything — to go to the beauty parlor to get their hair done for the prom. By doing that, a parent downgrades a child's education."

According to union statistics, the average number of vacation absences at the high school was 17 per class, with 34 being the highest.

Responses show that teachers are angry.

"Usually I warn kids that absence will affect their grade, but sometimes kids/parents become hostile. The administration is soft on discipline."

"The policy is not being uniformly enforced for pre-arranged absence. Students are excused by parent call for 'only a day or two' without going through the procedure. Thus they are given make-up privileges as if they were ill."

"I bridle at having to go to extra lengths for students whose parents allow them to miss school for extra vacations."

"I have to schedule review or enrichment activities so that the class doesn't fall behind and to avoid extra remedial teaching."

"I am concerned about an attendance policy that warns students about the consequences of unexcused absences and then does nothing (except detentions) when the unexcused far exceed the minimum for being dropped from class."

"School board members and PTO members seem not to heed the message as they, too, take their children out when they want to."

"Now ask me how many have brought back any completed assignments!"

Cook says the absentee problem has existed "forever," but has grown worse in recent years as more people take extra vacations or schedule a trip around a time-share instead of taking the traditional two weeks in July or August.

"My solution is not to have excused or unexcused absences — just absences," she said. "It's more workable. It does away with all this business of why a kid is absent. The school has to be willing to enforce it and cut the kids off."

But even if the system is changed, the schools will still have the problem of some parents who don't care if their children miss a few days.

"Parents take school for granted," Cook said. "Schools will always be there, even if they vote against taxes. There will always be a teacher to help my kid make up work after I take him to Florida."

"There's a large segment of this community that looks upon us as being their servants. We're the ones who have to do all the shifting and give their kids an education while they do their own thing."

Anderson said much the same thing. "Parents are willing almost to lie about why their child is out," he said. When the board takes up the question, it will be important to listen to the views of the teachers "in the front lines," he said.

"Given time to study it, I think we can come up with a plan."

Con men attempt scam in Woods

An elderly Woods woman residing in the northwest section of the city was nearly tricked into allowing two thieves posing as water board personnel to steal from her home.

The incident began Wednesday, May 20, when the woman was approached by a short white male with a large beer belly. He wore black pants with white stripes.

Telling the woman that he was with the water company and that there were problems in the area with the sewer, he asked to go into her home to check the plumbing.

After banging on several of the pipes for a few minutes, he asked the woman if she had $50.

Purse taken from woman in car

A woman who was exiting the Grosse Pointe Farms city lot behind Seven and Mack had her purse taken Thursday, May 14, around 4:30 p.m. when a man reached inside her open car win-

"I'll give you $100 if you give me $50," the man said to the elderly resident as he flashed a $100 bill, according to the report.

The woman said she didn't have a $50 bill, but the man persisted and asked her to get any combination of bills to get $50.

While the woman was searching for some money, another man entered her home.

When the woman came back into the kitchen, she spotted the second man and screamed for him to get out.

It appeared as though the two men partially searched the house, but apparently nothing was taken.

Woods officers are investigating the incident.

dow and grabbed the purse.

According to Farms police, the man said, "I'll take that," and then fled on foot over the wall at the rear of the lot.

Cherry fest trip

In celebration of Michigan's Sesquicentennial, the War Memorial will sponsor a two-day journey, July 8-10, to the 61st National Cherry Festival in Traverse City.

The luxurious Grand Traverse Resort Village, a Jack Nicklaus golf resort and site of the 1987 National Governor's Conference, will be home base while in Traverse City.

Highlights of the trip include bleacher seats for the Junior Royale Parade and a guided tour of Old Mission Peninsula.

There will be a "very cherry" buffet at the Embers-On-The-Bay as well as a guided tour of Amon's Orchard and free time to enjoy Cherry Festival activities.

Reservation deadline is Monday, June 1; $239 per person; $80, single supplement. Payment in full is due at time of reservation. Call 881-7511.

Youth charged

Detroit police have charged a 15-year-old Detroit youth with the shotgun slaying of a 30-year-old man who had car trouble at Mack and Lakepointe in Detroit.

Park officers had transported the man to St. John Hospital where he later died of the wounds he received in the robbery.

Park officials said the man was walking down Mack when he was approached by a group of four youths. When the man resisted, the youth allegedly shot him.

Jewelry valued at $28,000 missing

A Grosse Pointe Woods woman, who said she hid jewelry valued at $27,800 under her bed, claims that the jewelry has been stolen.

The 58-year-old Lochmoor resident said that she had several workmen in the house between May 8 and May 14 who could have had access to the bag of gems.

Woods public safety officials are investigating the loss.

Car stolen

City public safety officers are investigating the theft of a 1984 Oldsmobile taken from the Bon Secours Hospital parking lot sometime May 17.

The Woods resident said she left the car in the early morning and when she returned around 3 p.m., the car was gone.

Police have no suspects at this time.

material. The pots of preference for most bonsai growers are made in Japan. They are of a porous clay and come in a variety of shallow shapes including rectangular, circular and oblong.

"Pines stay in the same pot for two to five years before they must be transplanted," she said. "When you transplant them, you prune the roots."

While pruning the roots is a relatively infrequent chore, pruning branches, leaves or needles is done almost on a weekly basis.

Bonsai have both a front and a back. The front of the tree should allow the eye to see through the tree. The creation of the illusion of an older tree is often done by shaping the branches into gnarled shapes. This is done by wiring the branches with copper or aluminum wire into the shape desired. Branches are kept wired for only several months at a time. Branches can not be immediately shaped into the position desired, and if often takes years to shape a branch.

When the roots are pruned, about one-third of them are clipped off, and as the years turn to decades, pots get larger.

"A bonsai gives the impression of a tree the way Van Gogh is an Impressionist artist," Hammen said. "A tree doesn't have to be very old to give the impression of an old tree."

A buttressed root system (one that protrudes up through the ground) and trees with naturally small leaves or needles are ideal for starting bonsai. If purchasing a bonsai already started, be prepared to shell out some green. Some older trees may cost between $1,200 and $1,000.

Another of Hammen's favorite bonsai - a conifer.

Recital

Diane Littlefield, above, and Barbara Berger Carbery, pianist, will perform in recital Sunday, May 31, at 3 p.m. at St. Columba Episcopal Church, located at 1021 Manistique at Jefferson, two blocks west of Alter Road. They will perform works by Schumann, Debussy, Moussorgsky, Beethoven and Telemann. Littlefield is a member of the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra. There is no admission charge and supervised parking is available.

Library to begin reading program

The Grosse Pointe Public Library summer reading program will open Monday, June 1 and runs through Aug. 13. Young readers will register at their branch library, take part in weekly contests and games, and keep a record of their summer reading.

The theme of the program, "Join the Parade of Books," is part of a statewide sesquicentennial summer reading program.

The library's summer film festival for children will begin

Thursday, June 18, at the Central Library, running Thursdays through Aug. 6. Movies at Park and Woods Branches will begin July 7 and 8 respectively, continuing through Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 4 and 5.

Farms has rash of thefts from cars

Four auto larcenies were reported last week in Grosse Pointe Farms, resulting in the loss of about $1,000 in property.

The driver's side window of a vehicle parked behind a business on Mack was smashed Sunday night, May 18. A portable radio/cassette player valued at about $70 was taken. Damage to the window was estimated at about $100.

A radar detector valued at about $250 was reportedly taken from a locked car on Manor sometime during the day Tuesday.

May 19.

A black and white television valued at about $180 was taken from a car parked in front of a Manor residence May 19 around 9:30 p.m.

Clothing and a duffle bag valued at about $200 were reported stolen from a car parked just west of Manor on Mack Wednesday, May 20. The items were taken from the car between 6:30 and 11:30 p.m.

Farms police report there are no suspects in these incidents.

Waldmeir 'tells all'

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Pete Waldmeir seems like the kind of guy who — if you asked him, "Have you ever committed adultery?" — would probably tell you. And he'd tell the truth.

Waldmeir, Detroit News columnist, spoke to the Grosse Pointe Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) May 11 at the Neighborhood Club. Unlike Gary Hart, who's been having trouble disclosing details of his private life, Waldmeir came across like an open book, waiting to be read aloud.

He blabbed his age (56), his wife's age, (41), his children's ages and occupations (33, attorney; 31, editor for the Financial Times in London; 7, 4), he described his two families: two grown children from a first marriage and two elementary-age children from his second marriage; he told about his mother's divorce, how his father dropped out of their lives, then reappeared (to be buried beside his stepfather, by mistake); he described his 85-year-old mother's recent automobile accident (she went straight to the beauty shop, not to the hospital); he told about his rise in the ranks of newspapering from copyboy to columnist; he told why he was fired from his job as a radio columnist for WWJ (he maligned Tony Franco for insider stock dealings. Franco's public relations agency turned out to be working for WWJ in some of their other operations.)

Waldmeir told the group of 122 senior citizens what he thought of the proposed joint operating agreement between the News and Free Press; legalizing gambling in Detroit; Detroit Mayor Coleman Young's plans for an airport expansion; Irangate; Jesse Jackson; George Bush.

He told some jokes; exhibited a few good-of-boy, down-home gestures like jerking his thumb over his shoulder; laughed a lot; and kept repeating, after yet another candid statement — "...and I don't care who knows it."

The senior citizens were delighted. Waldmeir clearly enjoyed fielding questions from the audience afterward. He probably would have disclosed his salary, if someone had asked him.

"Detroit is too big for just one newspaper," he said when asked his opinion of the proposed JOA between the News and Free Press. "My personal theory is that Gannett (owner of the Detroit News) won't be disappointed if it doesn't go through. The Free Press will be finished. If the JOA goes through, the News will have to split profits with the Free Press."

"This is the biggest city that ever tried to put through a JOA," he said. "I'm not trying to stop it. I just want people to get a fair shake. Lots of people will be out of work. (The division of responsibility) won't be separate but equal. (If we get the JOA) we can say, 'Let's not send a reporter. Let's just use the wire services.' We can say 'Hey, let's not pick on the mayor anymore. Let's get along'"

Waldmeir said his columns and his opinions have generated threats. "I've been sued about 30 times — both the company and me personally. I've never lost one. I've never paid one off. I've never settled one."

He was once served a summons while standing on a street corner, selling newspapers for the Good-fellows. Another time his daughter answered the doorbell. "I told her to invite the man in and tell him to sit down. He served me a summons."

Waldmeir said he'd like to see Jesse Jackson in the presidential race, "to keep the other guys on their toes. I don't think he has a chance to win. If Jesse Jackson was here today," he said to the seniors, "he'd have you all holding hands and singing. He has an aura about him. He puts tears in your eyes."

Waldmeir clearly enjoys being a columnist. "I'm doing my best to keep people in line. I have a vehicle and some freedom. Columnists are like the calvary," he said. "They sit on top of the hill and watch the fighting and when the battle is over, they swoop down and shoot the wounded."

"I've had more columns killed recently than in the past. The JOA is going to be a problem. Bad for the readers. It's not going to give them a well-balanced news operation."

He also clearly enjoys his second family, and doesn't mind breaking into the ranks of the senior citizens. "I hope to grow old gracefully. I didn't do it the first time (with the first family) so I'm giving it another try."

Canine carnival coming up

The War Memorial's fourth annual "My Dog's Better Than Your Dog" competition will be Sunday, June 7, from noon to 2 p.m.

It's your chance to show off your favorite pooch. Ribbons will be awarded in such demanding events as youngest dog, oldest, smallest, largest and most unusual dog.

There are also categories for dog-owner look alike, cutest mutt, most friendly, biggest paw, smallest paw, longest tail and best trick.

Emcee Mark Weber, executive director of the War Memorial, and a dog loving panel made up of War Memorial board members and community dignitaries will serve as judges.

The public is invited and the event is free. There is a $1 entry fee per dog. Advance registration is required.

For further information, call the War Memorial at 881-7511.

Cybil, who shares a home with Feature Editor Elsa Frohman, is deciding whether she wants to enter the "My Dog is Better Than Your Dog" contest at the War Memorial.

Walkers wanted

Cottage Hospital's new Ageless Walk Program can provide a refreshing start to the day.

The group meets informally every Tuesday and Thursday morning at 8:30 a.m. for a walk, some talk and a healthy breakfast. No reservations are required and there is only a nominal charge for the optional high fiber and fruit breakfast which follows the one- to three-mile walk.

The distance walked each is determined by the participants. Beth Ayn Deutsch, director of CHAMP (Cottage Hospital Athletic Medicine Program), coordinates the group which usually is divided into two sections — those who want a brisk walk and those who prefer to move more leisurely. Athletic medicine personnel accompany the walkers.

The Ageless Walk program begins from the main entrance to Cottage Hospital on the main parking lot side of the building. Participants meet at 8:30 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday. Loose, comfortable clothing, appropriate for the day's weather is suggested. Good, supportive walking shoes are recommended.

Officer saves choking infant

Quick action by a Shores public safety officer probably saved the life of an infant May 14.

When Officer Gary Boudreau and other emergency officers arrived at the Driston residence, their one-month-old granddaughter, Katy, had already turned a bright red and was apparently choking.

Boudreau, an emergency medical technician, turned the baby over with her head tilted slightly downward and mucus drained from the baby's nasal cavities and mouth. Breathing was restored and the infant began to cry.

The baby was transported to Bon Secours and turned over to the emergency room staff.

"This is a good example how the cross-training and continual in-service training of our men pays off," Shores Public Safety Director Daniel Healy said.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the City Council will hold a Public Hearing in accordance with the provisions of Section 6-12-5 of the 1975 City Code of the City of Grosse Pointe Woods of 1975 in the Council Court Room of the Municipal Building, 20025 Mack Plaza, Grosse Pointe Woods, on MONDAY, JUNE 15, 1987 at 7:30 p.m. to hear the appeal of James Doyle, 723 Lochmoor, Grosse Pointe Woods, who is appealing the denial of the Building Inspector to issue a Driveway Permit for property described as: Lot 217, Lochmoor Subdivision.

A Driveway Permit was denied because Section 6-12-3 of the 1975 City Code prohibits a paved parking area that exceeds thirty percent in coverage of the required front yard area for a residential lot in an R-1 zoned district. According to the provisions of Section 6-12-5 of the 1975 City Code, such drive cannot be constructed unless a variance is granted.

This will be a public hearing and all interested parties are invited to attend.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL ASSESSMENT HEARING

City of Grosse Pointe Park Michigan
WAYNE COUNTY

The City Council of the City of Grosse Pointe Park will conduct a Public Hearing for receiving public comments in regards to the construction of sheet steel pilings along the eastern portion of Fox Creek and placement of selected fill along designated areas of Lake St. Clair shoreline. The Council proposes to special assess a part, or all, of the cost of said improvements.

The City Manager has prepared plans, estimates of costs and recommendations as to what part of the cost of said improvements should be paid by special assessments and what part, if any, shall be a general obligation of the City, the number of installments in which assessments may be paid and the lands which should be included in the special assessment district, all of which are on file with the City Clerk and available for public inspection.

The Public Hearing will take place at Pierce School Auditorium, 15430 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Park, MI 48230 at 7:00 P.M. on June 8, 1987, for the purpose of hearing public comment.

Receive awards

Five Grosse Pointers received National School Public Relations Association Awards of Honor May 11 in recognition of their support of education.

Honorees included Joan Hanpeter and Dorothy Kennel, Board of Education members; Ruth Zinn, founder of SAC; Chuck Hollosy, administrative assistant for athletics for South High School; and Gail Erickson, student assistance coordinator for the Grosse Pointe public schools.

NSPRA annually selects a number of outstanding professional school workers and volunteers for this honor. This year only 110 from throughout the United States were chosen. Nominations are accepted from school districts, colleges and private citizens for all members of the school family including the instructional staff, the support staff, administrators and lay citizens.

Science day camp starts in June

The Living Science Foundation and the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe Public School System will present a series of 10 day camps this summer for elementary-age children. Registration is urged by June 1.

First in the series, a "Science and Nature Day Camp" will run the week of June 15, to be repeated beginning Aug. 17. The second is an "Air and Space Day Camp" to begin on Monday, June 22.

The featured activity for the week of June 29 is the "Animal Family Introduction Day Camp for Pre-Schoolers and Parents."

may elect either 9 a.m. to noon or noon to 3 p.m. Fee for the four-day camp is $72 for parent and child.

An "I 'Dig' Dinosaur Day Camp" has been scheduled to begin on Monday, July 6, to be repeated beginning July 27 while the "Physics Is Fun Day Camp" begins Monday, July 13.

A "Science and Nature Day Camp for the Gifted" has been set to begin Aug. 10.

With the exception of the "Animal Family Introduction Day Camp for Pre-Schoolers and Parents," daily all camps run from Monday through Friday.

For more information, call 343-2178.

North soloists to perform

Grosse Pointe North's Annual Concerto Concert is scheduled for Tuesday, June 2, at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Performing Arts Center at North.

Several North students will perform concerto movements accompanied by North's band or orchestra in the school year's final concert. A recognition program for members of the instrumental ensembles and their parents will follow the concert.

Some students who will perform are: John Applegate, violin; Lisa Inoue, cello; Denise Kowalke, alto saxophone; Kurt Linebaugh, violin; Marlisa Miller, violin; and Elizabeth Nixon, bassoon.

George Deeb, Bands and Orchestra president, will chair the program following the concert. He will be assisted by members of the B&O Council. Gloria Kuszynski, B&O Parents, will also honor graduating members. Admission is free.

Patrollers honored

Twenty-six students from Our Lady Star of the Sea will be among more than 5,000 Safety Patrollers who will visit Boblo Island June 1 for AAA Michigan's annual Safety Patrol Recognition Day.

The patrollers will be honored for their efforts to protect fellow students at street crossings and on school buses during the 1986-87 school year.

Student Spotlight

Hannah Merz

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

The following was written by 10-year-old Hannah Merz, a fifth-grader at Trombly Elementary School. She is the daughter of Charles and Julie Merz of the Park.

The Strange Garden

Melissa walked in the door mopey. She dumped her bag on the floor and put her jacket away. Being a kid these days was hard. Her head spun and she was filled with all different feelings like anger, excitement and stress. She decided to go into the secret and strange garden. She had discovered this hidden garden when she was five years old. Melissa called it the Strange Garden because it was filled with exotic, beautiful flowers and trees. It was hidden just beyond her backyard and when she was in it, it was like she was in a different world.

Melissa stepped in through the secret passage and immediately all the busy sounds of the outside world disappeared. A gentle breeze swept through her dirty blonde hair. She loved being here, where all her worries left her.

From that very day on, Melissa still visited the strange garden, and she always left it carefree.

I think everyone has their own kind of strange garden. I know I do. Don't you?

This space is open to any student in the Grosse Pointe public or private school system from grades 1 through 12.

Send your entry along with a picture to Student Spotlight, Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms 48236, or drop it off at the office. If you would like everything returned, enclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Assumption Nursery to begin summer program

Assumption Nursery will begin a summer program June 15 and continue through Aug. 14 with weekly special interest offerings.

For children 24 months to 2½ years, and 3 to 6 year olds, theme weeks center around Dinosaurs, Science, Creepy Critters, Body and Belly, Music, Art and Transportation. Classes are from 9 a.m. to noon and full day child care is available from 6:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Available for children ages 4, 5 and 6 are computer classes sponsored by Computer Learning Paths.

Class size is limited to six children per session and runs from June 22 to Aug. 13.

A kindergarten brush-up course will be offered for children who will be attending kindergarten in the fall. The class will be held from 9 to 11 a.m., Aug. 17-21.

Assumption is also registering for the fall session for children ages 12 months through 5 years: toddler, transition, preschool, young fives, and kindergarten.

The Assumption Nursery School and Toddler Center is located at 22150 Marter Road. For registration information, call 772-4477.

Our Town

Halli Villegas will play Emily Webb and Robert Perini is George Gibbs in the Greasepaint Players production of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town." to be presented Friday and Saturday, May 29-30, at South High School. Villegas, a South graduate, has worked with the Grosse Pointe South Players, The Barn Theater and the Port Huron Little Theater. Tickets will be available at the door and are $5 for regular admission and $3.50 for senior citizens and students. For more information, call 882-9326.

War Memorial plans day trips

The War Memorial is planning the following six day trips:

- Theater buffs will enjoy visiting Stratford, Saturday, June 27, for the 2 p.m. performance of the comedy "The School For Scandal." The trip leaves the War Memorial at 8 a.m. and returns at 11 p.m. The $75 per person fee includes a box lunch before the play and dinner at the Elm Hurst, a restored Victorian gothic home.

- Wednesday, July 1, is for musical comedy fans. The Huron Country Playhouse, located in a 100-year-old barn, is the destination. Participants will see "Babes In Arms" followed by lunch in the rustic English style pub atmosphere of the Thirsty Fox. $34 per person.

Reservation deadline for both trips is Monday, June 1.

- On Saturday, June 6, celebrate the 40th anniversary of the founding of the U.S. Air Force with a trip to the 13th annual London International Air Show. Approximately 85 contemporary military aircraft, representing five countries, will participate. $33 per person includes transportation, admission and box lunch. Leaves 9 a.m. and returns at 6:30 p.m.

- A day for gardeners is planned

Thursday, June 11, from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Tour the Sunshine Herb Farm where 200 varieties of herbs are grown in several garden settings. Lunch will be served at the Country Epicure Restaurant followed by a tour of the Mohawk Liqueur Corporation. $28 per person.

- Birmingham is the destination Wednesday, June 17. A guided tour will focus on the architecture and restoration of some of the city's privately owned historic properties. There will be a champagne box lunch at Allen House, a tour of two homes and gardens plus free time to shop. $30 per person.

- The Chesaning Showboat is the highlight Wednesday, July 15. Leave Grosse Pointe at 2 p.m. There will be time to explore Chesaning's Olde Home Shoppes on the boulevard before a 5:30 p.m. dinner at the Heritage House and the evening performance at the showboat featuring Roy Clark. $44 per person.

- Trips to the Symphony Showhouse and Grosse Ile are currently sold out. However, there are wait lists and, if there is enough response, additional dates may be selected for these events.

For further information, call the War Memorial at 881-7511.

New agency for hearing-impaired counseling, individual therapy, crisis intervention, daily living skills, in-service training, sign language classes, psychological testing and parenting skills training.

All staff use American Sign Language including the clinical social worker who is deaf.

For more information, call the office on 986-8118 TDD and 961-8120 voice.

Residents honored by Red Cross

Sixteen American Red Cross volunteers from the Central Region were honored recently for 25 years or more of service in their communities. A recognition ceremony and reception was held at the Southeastern Michigan Chapter Headquarters.

Among those honored were the following Grosse Pointe residents:

Eleanor J. Buhl, 45 years; Donald Joseph Hallman, 35 years; Carole Ann Currin, 30 years; Joan B. Warren, 30 years; Dorothy Davis, 25 years; and Evelyn Stearns, 25 years.

Donna Rutledge, as Ginger Brooks, sings like a million in Grosse Pointe Theatre's production of "The 1940's Radio Hour" at the Fries Auditorium of the War Memorial.

GP Theatre to perform 'The 1940s Radio Hour'

An unforgettable era of crooners and coosers come magically alive on the War Memorial's Fries Auditorium stage when "The 1940's Radio Hour" by Walton Jones is presented June 2-13.

Completed with an 11-piece studio orchestra, flashing applause sign, sound effects booth and authentic commercials, "The 1940's Radio Hour" affectionately conjures up a December 1942 radio broadcast "live from the Algonquin Room of the beautiful Hotel Astor in New York City."

The final production of Grosse Pointe Theatre's 39th season, "The 1940's Radio Hour" was conceived by Walton Jones and Carol Lees in 1974 as a cabaret and was later produced in New Haven and New York. This production is directed by Michele Karl and produced by Marge Chesnick.

Highlighting the show is a panorama of memorable swingtime tunes, including "Tuxedo Junction," "All The Things You Are," "Blues in the Night," "Top Hat," "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy," "You Go To My Head" and, of course, "Chatanooga Choo Choo," as well as singing commercials, contests, comedy routines and smooth-talking banter.

If station WOV ("V is for Victory!") and its "Mutual Manhattan Variety Cavalcade" are slightly second-rate, the 14 characters who inhabit it are decidedly full of life, ambition and the verve that marked the wartime era. "The 1940's Radio Hour" follows them through one characteristic night of backstage shenanigans and on-the-air sparkle.

During the broadcast portion of the show, the theater audience becomes the studio audience.

Appearing in the cast are John Diebel as "Pops" Riley, the crusty stage doorman; Martin Bufalini as Clifton A. Feddington, the glib-talking producer and announcer; Timothy Higgins as Wally Ferguson, the hopeful young drugstore delivery boy; Bob Montgomery as B.J. Gibson, the good-looking Dick Powell of the group; Donna Rutledge as Ginger Brooks, the screwball blonde who can sing like a million.

Also, Emma Jean Evans as Geneva Lee Browne, the sassy, brassy black singer the band adores; John Dickinson as Zoot Doubleman, leader of the band; Ed Guay as Neal Tilden, the aging juvenile who's dying for the featured vocalist slot; Tom Kern as Johnny Cantone, the slender and sexy star who's on Sinatra's bandwagon; Tony Amato as Lou Cohn, a fanny-patting stage manager; Tom Shields as Biff Baker, the handsome young trumpet player who's being shipped out overseas the next day; Terri Turpin-Amato as Connie Miller, a 17-year-old bobbysoxer from Plainville, Iowa, who sings with a bounce; Ruth Ellen Mayhall as Ann Collier, the aloof, sophisticated singing beauty who's never quite made it big; and Don Cilluffo as Stanley, the not-too-bright "Joe Fix-it" of the radio station.

The sets are designed by Jacqueline DiSante and Paula DiSante, costumes are by Lois Constant and Ric Selke, and the technical director is Art Thompson.

Tickets for all performances are available by calling 881-4004. Performances are scheduled at 8 p.m. every night except Sunday, when the curtain is 7 p.m.

Dinner first

Enjoy candlelight buffet dinners at 6:30 p.m. in the Fries Ballroom of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial prior to some 8 p.m. performances of the Grosse Pointe Theatre production, "The 1940's Radio Hour."

Dinner will be served Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 2-6, also Wednesday and Friday, June 10 and 12.

Buffet is $10.25 per person and includes parking, tax and tip.

Check for dinners should be made payable to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial and mailed to the Center with a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Reserve early as dinner seating is limited. Be sure to indicate date desired.

Performance tickets at $9 must be purchased through Grosse Pointe Theatre, 881-4004 and patrons are requested to have theater tickets before ordering dinner.

College graduates: Tips for that important job interview

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Sweaty palms, wobbly knees, a churning stomach and a crackly voice are not necessarily the death knell for job candidates at an important interview. Gordon Connell, senior vice president, director of personnel at Standard Federal Bank and Thomas Conley, director of human resources at Bon Secours Hospital, agree that nervousness is a common — even expected — condition for college graduates who are interviewing for their first job.

"Most of us remember our first interview," said Conley. "We see it as a challenge to get the person to relax."

Connell said he is not turned off by nervousness, but the interviewee should display some poise and self-confidence as well. "He or she must project a good image; be pleasant; well-groomed; have a knowledge of the job and the company; and be prepared to ask some questions of the interviewer."

Jack Crusoe, director of placement services at Wayne State University, offered a list of six cardinal sins of job applicants. Crusoe has had 25 years experience finding positions for graduates. He emphasized the importance of the job interview for launching a successful career. The six sins:

Failing to research the company and/or position. "Students are supposed to develop research skills while they earn their degrees, but they often do not utilize these to learn about companies where they want to work," Crusoe said. "They prefer to wing it during the interview. The result: mediocre questions which leave a bad impression on the employer."

Lacking knowledge about potential jobs. Crusoe said that many students do not seek advice about the kinds of jobs that fit their academic credentials. Grads should intensively study their fields and become aware of the job assignments they are prepared for.

Raising questions about salary and benefits too early. Crusoe said job candidates often adopt a "what's in it for me?" attitude when beginning the interview. Normally, he said, the employer will discuss salary when the time is right. First-time job seekers are generally not in a position to negotiate about salary anyway.

Conley, of Bon Secours, said, "Once I had a person come in whose first question was 'What's the pay?' After I answered, he got up and walked out."

Expecting the employer to ask all the questions. "It's a two-way street," Crusoe said. "The graduate is also interviewing the employer."

Conley said the job candidate should have some good questions of his own. "It's an indication of interest, an interest in staying in the company."

Flunking the professional dress code. "Believe it or not," said Conley, "one time an interviewee came in wearing cutoff blue jeans. We sometimes interview nurses who are wearing their uniforms. We expect this if they have a job already. I expect interviewees to dress professionally. In my mind that means a suit — for men and women." A job candidate who smokes, chews gum or does not talk and does not respond to open-ended questions also turn him off.

"A male graduate showing up in an orthodox blue suit, sporting unorthodox tennis shoes — or a woman wearing a chic cocktail dress — are red flags to an employer," Crusoe said. "Conservative business clothing is always a good bet."

Neglecting adequate follow up. Crusoe said employers will generally give a date by which the applicant can expect to hear from the company. Because many graduates fear rejection, they avoid contacting the employer if they have not received word on their status. "It's up to the job applicant to aggressively pursue the employer. The follow-up contact demonstrates good business practice and a more than passing interest in the job," he said.

Connell indicated that resumes are very important. Graduates, fresh from college, often think they don't have anything to put on a resume, but he said they have more than they think they do. "Put down your education, your accomplishments, achievements, work history, volunteer jobs you've held.

"And get as much interview experience as possible," he added, as a final word of advice.

New hospital to replace three Detroit hospitals

The new 315-bed Detroit Riverview Hospital, located on East Grand Boulevard between East Grand Boulevard and Van Dyke near Belle Isle, replaces three Detroit hospitals which collectively represent 252 years of service.

The 98-bed Jennings Memorial Hospital was closed in 1977 after 47 years of service and converted to the hospital's headquarters and the Riverview Medical Offices (formerly the Jennings Medical Offices); the 117-bed Alexander Blain Memorial Hospital will close after 63 years of service; and the 262-bed Detroit Memorial Hospital, the city's oldest, will close after 142 years of service.

The new hospital, along with the corporate headquarters of its parent organization, the Detroit-Macomb Hospital Corp., will employ nearly 1,000 people, most of whom will transfer from the existing facilities.

The state-of-the-art community hospital offers a broad selection of in-patient and out-patient services, including general medical/surgical, obstetrics and gynecology, out-patient surgery, psychiatry, substance abuse treatment, community health education programs and diagnostic and treatment equipment. Additionally, the facility will provide a complete emergency service department.

The eight-level Detroit Riverview Hospital was designed to provide convenience and a pleasant atmosphere, including skylights above the newborn nursery, surgical recovery room and waiting rooms; and a view of the Detroit River and the Detroit skyline from patient rooms. Patients and visitors will have a gift shop, a two-story atrium, airy lobby and corridors, and a cafeteria with a picture-window view.

Detroit Riverview Hospital

Riverview Medical Offices, located adjacent to Detroit Riverview Hospital, contains more than 30 medical specialists in internal medicine, obstetrics and gynecology, ophthalmology, cardiology, neurology, surgery and podiatry, all part of the new hospital's medical staff.

Detroit-Macomb Hospital Corp. is one of southeast Michigan's major providers of in-patient and out-patient services.

Hardware, drugstore relocate

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

There will be a new kid on the block in the Village this summer when Arbor Drug moves in. Damman's Hardware plans to move across the street to the soon-to-be-vacated Kresge store and Arbor will move into Damman's, according to George Bashara, landlord to both.

The plans were discussed at the Grosse Pointe city council meeting last week. The council gave preliminary approval to Damman's plans for the Kresge building and listened to a general description of the Arbor plans.

Arbor will not use the word "discount" on its sign, Bashara said. The chain expects to make the Village store its flagship, matching the decor of the Bloomfield Hills store, and plans to spend more than $250,000 on the building.

"They have promised to carry the notions that were so popular at Kresge's," Bashara said.

Bashara, who, with Edward Froehlich, owns both buildings, said the two had received inquiries from several other prospective tenants and turned them down as not suitable for the Village. Arbor officials have agreed to join the area's merchants' association, Bashara said.

The building will be redone in a colonial motif. "The motif will be subtle and in keeping with the Hickey store," Bashara said. "It won't be red, like their other stores."

Arbor officials will have to appear before the council later in the summer when their plans are specific. No approvals were asked or granted at last week's meeting.

Conditional approval was given to Damman's plans, however. If the sign meets the requirements set by the council, it will be approved administratively.

Damman's has been working with city planner Brandon Rogers to conform to the council's wishes for the Kresge site, according to the hardware's architect, Gus Daniell. Under Rogers' guidance they have already made several changes to the entrance.

"We've added architectural detail to make the passerby aware that there is something happening in this recessed entrance," Daniell said.

An awning and coachlights are planned to set off the entrance of the building, which will be painted in shades of light and darker beige. There will be awnings over all the windows and a bench and shrubs in the center recessed window. The rear of the store will have a similar treatment.

"It will be subtle, not garish," said Daniell. "There will be no writing on the awning, no graphics of hammers."

Most of the council discussion revolved around the proposed sign. Individual backlit letters will spell out "Damman's Hardware" across the front of the building. The problem was that in order to be in scale with the size of the building, the letters are three feet high and extend across 40 feet. The ordinance specifies that signs may not exceed 5 by 7 feet.

Owner Bill Damman protested the limitation. "We might as well put it in the mailbox and mail it," he said. "The customers would think we couldn't afford a big sign."

Daniell explained that the size of the building determines the size of the sign. The proposed sign is smaller than the one currently on the building.

Lombard appointed DCL dean

The Detroit College of Law board of trustees has appointed Arthur J. Lombard, 45, dean and chief administrative officer of the college, effective June 2.

Formerly an associate dean and professor of law at Wayne State University Law School, Lombard's appointment was the culmination of a year-long search.

Lombard will be the college's fifth dean in its 96-year history.

Lombard earned a bachelor of science degree from Columbia University in 1961 and a juris doctor degree from Harvard Law School in 1964. Following law school, he was law clerk to Chief Judge J. Edward Lombard, U.S. Court of Appeals, 2nd Circuit.

For more than 20 years, Lombard has been a legal educator serving in various positions at Harvard Law School and WSU. He joined the law faculty at WSU in 1966 after serving as a teaching fellow at Harvard Law School.

Appointed associate dean at WSU in 1978, he served in that capacity for seven years. He then returned to full-time teaching. During his tenure at WSU, Lombard held several significant posts including Secretary of the University Council, the highest elected office on WSU's faculty senate. He also served on the university's Budget Committee, the Promotion and Tenure Committee and various other councils and committees.

Recent public service activities have included serving as reporter, Committee to Revise the Rules of the U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Michigan; Chairman, Michigan Supreme Court Committee on Revisions of Michigan Class Action Rule, and reporter, Rules Commission off the U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Michigan. He also has been a lecturer for the Michigan Judicial Institute.

Lombard is admitted to practice in New York and Michigan and the U.S. Supreme Court and U.S. Court of Appeals — 2nd and 6th circuits.

He and his wife, Frederica, who is a professor of law at WSU, live in Grosse Pointe Park with their two children, David and Lisa.

"It's a neat, clean, upscale, upbeat sign," added City Manager Thomas Kressbach.

The council gave Damman conceptual approval conditional on the size of the sign, which they asked be reduced by a few inches in height.

Damman said he expects to spend July renovating the building and will move in August. Arbor Drugs is expected to move in to the old Damman's at the end of August.

TRAVEL TIPS
by Winnie Manley

Alaska has such a short season that cruises and tours must be booked very far in advance to get your first choice of accommodations. 1987, believe it or not, is already heavily booked, especially on cruises which are a "must" on any Alaskan trip.

Most of the cruise lines offer advance purchase discounts, but space sells out so fast that it's seldom available if you wait until the deadline. Therefore, for those who have decided on Alaska for their next trip, it's best to make reservations without further delay. Air space is also always at a premium so you'd be well advised to book now.

Alaska is one of our most beautiful states as well as one of the most unusual. The splendor of the landscape blended with the unique and varied life style makes Alaska an unforgettable vacation. The glaciers and national parks will provide you with a glimpse of America far removed from our bustling cities and ordinary suburbia. In addition to the scenic beauty, there's a feeling of adventure no longer found anywhere else in this country.

If an all-inclusive package with a cruise isn't in your budget or doesn't appeal to you, we can also arrange other types of travel to Alaska, perhaps combining city packages with ferry travel within the state. This, of course, is a more "do it yourself" type approach which isn't everyone's cup of tea but if that's more to your liking, we'll do our very best to help you plan it. Because air space is often difficult to find at the promotional rates, even do-it-yourself travel to Alaska must be booked far in advance.

This agency is dedicated to service and a personalized approach so call us for your trip to Alaska or anywhere else. We aim to please!

The Modern Art Man

DIA to honor W. Hawkins Ferry, who has left a mark on art, architecture and the landscape of Grosse Pointe

By Elsa Frohman
Feature Editor

W. Hawkins Ferry is a collector, but not the sort of collector whose every tabletop is crammed with nicknacks and memorabilia. His William Kessler-designed home on Lakeshore is full of open space, clean lines and sweeping vistas seen through vast windows.

Ferry's collection is primarily housed at the Detroit Institute of Arts. During the past 40 years, he has been one of the DIA's strongest and most generous supporters, donating more than 50 works of modern art and organizing the Metropolitan Art Association, which later became the Friends of Modern Art. Ferry was chairman of the Friends for 21 years.

This weekend, the DIA will honor Ferry with a black-tie dinner and the opening of the W. Hawkins Ferry Collection, 33 works from his private collection and his numerous gifts to the museum, that will be on display from Sunday, May 31, through Sunday, Sept. 27. In addition, the Friends of Modern Art have donated "Moonmad," a 1944 sculpture by surrealist, Max Ernst, to the museum's permanent collection in Ferry's name.

But Ferry's involvement with the DIA goes back even farther. He was born in a house that stood on the ground the museum now occupies.

"That was my grandparents' home," Ferry said. "We moved to Grosse Pointe when I was 1 year old."

Ferry's grandfather, Dexter M., founded the Ferry Seed Company. The Ferry family have been staunch supporters of the DIA since its founding. Ferry's father, Dexter M. Jr., contributed heavily to the museum's collection of 19th century art.

Growing up in a young Grosse Pointe, Ferry was educated at the Grosse Pointe Country Day School and later at Cranbrook.

"I used to ride my bike from where my parents' house was, where Stratford is now, to school," he said.

Graduating from Cranbrook in the class of 1933, Ferry went to Harvard where he graduated in 1937.

"I was always interested in art," he said. "(When I was a child) I was always drawing little plans, and I was always interested in buildings under construction."

Ferry's first vocation was architecture. The duplexes and flats in the area of St. Paul and Neff in Grosse Pointe were his designs.

"They were in what was considered modern in that period — the 1950s," he said. "The last ones were Italian modern. I was influenced by what I saw there." But Ferry's attention was turned away from building in the 1960s.

"My course was changed. I was asked to write a history of Detroit architecture for Wayne State," Ferry said.

If you ask Ferry what his profession is, he will tell you he is an architectural historian. His book, "The Buildings of Detroit: a History," is widely considered the primary authority on the subject.

Ferry collected his first piece of art during the years that the Alger House, now the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, was a branch of the DIA. A show of African art was held there and Ferry saw a piece he liked.

"I was pleased to find something in my own community," he said.

The first piece Ferry donated to the DIA was called Space Modulator. The piece was displayed in a temporary exhibition of modern art at the museum.

"I was called in and asked if there was anything I would like to give to the museum," Ferry said. "I had an interest in building up the collection. The museum had never built up its modern collection."

In the 1940s, Ferry took his own turn as an artist.

"I tried it as a weekend artist," he said. "But I gave it up. I used to hang my own paintings around in my father's house."

Ferry said his own work was influenced by paintings he saw in museums.

"The next step was getting the real artists," he said.

See FERRY, page 7B

Moonmad, by Max Ernst, was completed in 1944. On May 30, it will be donated to the Detroit Institute of Arts in the name of W. Hawkins Ferry, to honor his long and generous support of modern art at the museum.

Winter's cold makes us appreciate spring weather

By Ellen Probert
Special writer

We complain a lot about Detroit weather and indeed it can sometimes be variable in the extreme. But perhaps we should be counting our blessings a little too. After all, if we had never experienced a Detroit winter, would we really appreciate spring?

And spring in Grosse Pointe can be a happening of pure delight. Lilacs and tulips and flowering fruit trees and daffodils and violets refresh our vision in all directions. Now the wisteria is hanging its lavish garlands of flowers from branches that only a few weeks ago were bare of any sign of life. The wisteria garden at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, always a must-see in May, makes one remember ice and snow and arctic winds off the lake as if they were conditions experienced on another planet.

Wonderful things are happening in the spacious gardens at the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House, as well. During the months of winter cold, much research has been going on in the records of the estate, and now the actual restoration of the gardens to the original plans of world-famed landscape architect and naturalist Jens Jensen, tempered here and there by the suggestions of Eleanor Ford, have begun to take shape.

Very close to 2,000 rose bushes have been planted in the wide circle of the rose garden, where they are already budding and promise a June display of bloom which, for the first time in many years, will be like that of the original garden.

Planting around the pool will bring back the lush cool green of a natural woodland glade and create reflections of moving branches in the water. New trees are replacing those which over the years have become the victims of storms and other damage.

"Gardens are multi-dimensional," said Pat Victor, head of the garden staff at the Ford House. "There is the dimension of sound, and we are planting trees and flowering plants which will bring more birds to the gardens. There is the dimension of color, which includes degrees of light and shade, and the dimension of texture, which contrasts the solidity of stone walls covered with ivy to the delicacy of plantings of wildflowers. Perspective and space; vistas and reflecting pools; and the contrast of banks of solid color to green expanses with no other color at all, are all important."

There is much emphasis on yellow and white in the new plantings since Mrs. Ford preferred to these colors. In the rose garden, there are many of her favorite yellow roses. Another of her most loved colors was blue, and the blue of the blossoming scillas in early spring creates what seems from a distance to be a wind-rippled lake under the trees.

Flowers of small size surround Josephine Ford's miniature playhouse and large blooms in pastel shades fill the ornamental urns on the terraces.

When you visit the Ford House for a tour of the house itself, or a tour of the dazzling exhibit of Gold and Silver Treasures from the world-renowned collection of the Baron Thyssen-Bornemisza which will be on view through the summer, plan to spend some time in the lovely gardens as well. For more information about the gardens or tours, call 884-4222.

Sometimes unwelcome plants appear without invitation in our gardens and a notable example of this is the purple thistle. Although the flowers are pretty, we go to great lengths to eliminate the spiky, prickly and tenacious plants while we mutter angrily about weeds. But the thistle is the national emblem of Scotland, dating back to an ancient time when most civilized people fought only in the daytime.

Some sneaky Danes thought they would take advantage of the Scots by night. To be even more sneaky, they took off their boots and tiptoed soundlessly and bare of foot across the fields — until they stepped on a lush patch of flourishing Onopordum acanthium and let out screeches of pain which aroused the Scots and made them fighting mad. In gratitude for the timely warning provided by the thistles, the flower has been the national emblem ever since.

However, the Grosse Pointe Garden Center hopes that the national flower of Scotland will not invade the Trial Gardens on the lake side of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, which were planted a few days ago and promise to be a glorious bouquet of color throughout the summer. The theme for this year's planting is a bow in the direction of Michigan's sesquicentennial, which is being celebrated this year. Plants used in the garden of early settlers in Michigan have been chosen.

This is the time when the lovely orchid-like iris makes its appearance in our gardens in every size from miniature to giant, and in a multitude of colors. This plant is a native to the Mediterranean region and to southern Europe. It was considered by the ancient Egyptians as a symbol of power and placed on the brow of the Sphinx. It decorated the sceptors of kings and rulers because the three petals of the iris symbolized faith, wisdom and valor.

This lovely flower was named for iris, the Greek goddess of the multicolored rainbow. The Greeks planted irises on the graves of women because one of the duties of this goddess was to lead the souls of dead women to the Elysian Fields.

According to French historical lore, the iris was the flower symbol of Gaul as far back as the first century A.D., and at the Battle of Tobiac, the victorious soldiers of King Clovis I of the Franks adorned themselves with irises to celebrate their victory. It was Charles IV in the 13th century who used the Iris in the banner of France. The name, Fleur de Lys, is derived from Lys, the manner in which the first 12 Louises, kings of France, signed their names.

The Grosse Pointe Bonsai Society, affiliated with the Grosse Pointe Garden Center, is meeting today, Thursday, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, for a symposium on the subject of the use of maples in Bonsai. Demonstrations and instruction are on the agenda and information about the International Bonsai Congress for 1987 to be held at the end of June in Minneapolis, will be discussed. This congress is sponsored by Bonsai Clubs International and the Minnesota Bonsai Society.

If you are planning your vegetable garden, who not consider a bed of asparagus? It can be called a perennial favorite for two reasons. First, as early as 200 B.C., the Greeks prepared detailed instructions for growing asparagus that are still applicable today, and, second, a properly planted and cared for bed of asparagus can remain productive for 20 to 30 years.

Garden clubs include eight gardens on tour

The Council of Grosse Pointe Garden Clubs has set Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, June 26, 27 and 28 as the dates for their 14th annual Garden Tour. The hours will be from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. each day (rain or shine). The presale price of the tickets is $6 and may be purchased at Vintage Pointe, 16941 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Florists, 174 Kerby Road, Hollywood Pharmacy, 20853 Mack Avenue or by calling Margaret Borden, 884-2775, or Hannah Mammen, 884-0966. The Garden Center Room at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore Road, will also sell tickets on Tuesday - Thursday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. On the days of the tour, tickets will be available at each of the gardens on the tour from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and the price per ticket will be $7.50. A brochure describing each garden and a map with garden locations will accompany each ticket.

There are eight private Grosse Pointe gardens on this year's tour. In addition, the Trial Gardens at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial will be on view. These gardens are planted and maintained by the various garden clubs in Grosse Pointe. Other attractions will be the sale of crafts from the Upstairs Shop from the Detroit Garden Center. Mrs. George H. Lieber will be in charge. Their wares will be seen at the Eldridge Garden where complimentary refreshments will be served by the Tour Committee.

Each garden on the tour will be marked with a yellow flag. Those to be seen are: the DeWindt Garden, 1052 Audubon; the Mosher Garden, 1000 Yorkshire; the Mebus Garden, 1015 Bishop; the Jones Garden, 254 Charlevoix; the Valade Garden, 37 Willow Lane; the Eldridge Garden, 535 Lakeshore Drive; the Lamparter Garden, 665 Lakeshore Drive; and the Lopiccolo Garden, 7 Belle Meade.

The general tour chairman for this year is Jeanne Lowe, assisted by Jane Mertz. Other members on the committee are: Mary Krueger, scrapbook; Elizabeth Ledyard, treasurer; Dorothy Smith, assistant treasurer; Margaret Gram, garden procurement; George Vincent, map; Margaret Borden and Hanna Mammen, ticket chairman; Grace Harrison. Be you

By the Rev. John Corrado
Grosse Pointe Unitarian

Whoever you are
You don't have to be "them" anymore.

Them:
Your fears
Your bad habits
Thoughts that obsess or confuse you.

Them:
Other's expectations
What "they" say.

Be you:
Your own integrity
Your own body-mind-soul to possess
Your own Christ-child, born humble but with infinite promise.

Be ever new-born in your integrity by the power within to be and become.

Pray be filled with desire — not want, or even need, but desire.

Desire:
Not for the pretty, but for the truly beautiful;
Not for the truths, but truth;
Not for the sentimental, but the truly sorrowful, so that your inevitable acquaintance with grief
might turn to healing;

Desire:
Not for happiness, but for joy;
Not for affability, but for friendship and love;
Not for "have a nice day," but for take your blessings.

Pray be filled with desire and be ever new-born in your integrity by the power within you to be and become.

Chorale presents soprano

The Fort Street Chorale concludes its 1986-87 music season with a performance of Bach's masterpiece, the "Mass in B Minor." The concert is Sunday, May 31, 5 p.m., at historic Fort Street Presbyterian Church.

The concert will feature nationally renowned soprano Doralene Davis. A former Detroit, Davis has distinguished herself as a soprano soloist in both concert appearances and recordings.

Other soloists in the performance are Imogene Bird, soprano; Elsie Inselman, mezzo-soprano; Phillip Mooney, Tenor; and Carroll Strickland, bass. Dr. David Daniels will conduct the Fort Street Chorale and Chamber Orchestra.

Tickets are $8 and can be ordered by sending a check (payable to Fort Street Presbyterian Church) and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Spring Concert, 631 W. Fort Street, Detroit, MI, 48226. For further information, call 961-4533.

Episcopal bishop to discuss human sexuality

The next meeting of the Open Episcopal Forum will be June 3 at the Troy Hilton Inn, 1455 Stephenson Highway, Troy, Michigan at 6 p.m.

A program on "Human Sexuality" will be presented by the Bishop of Eau Claire, Bishop William Wantland. Bishop Wantland has had articles published on theology and the priesthood in The Living Church and the Evangelical Catholic, and has authored "Foundations of the Faith" and "Canon Law in the Episcopal Church."

He has appeared on Bill Buckley's "Firing Line" to debate Bishop Spong of New Jersey, who has inferred the Episcopal Church sacramentally bless homosexual "marriages" and has stated that "open" marriage is acceptable.

Bishop Wantland's commentary will include criticism of the "new sexuality" and will call for a return to traditional biblical sexual behavior.

Bishop Wantland is a citizen of the Seminole Nation of Oklahoma, and a member of the Tuskeia Harjo Band of the Seminole Nation. He has previously served as Attorney General of the Seminole Nation and Executive Director of the Oklahoma Indian Rights Association.

In the legal field, he has served as a Municipal Judge in Oklahoma, and is past President of the

Wantland

Oklahoma Conference of Municipal Judges. He is the recipient of the American Bar Association

Award for the most outstanding court in the United States.

Bishop Wantland is also serving on the Presiding Bishops Advisory Committee on Navajoland, and is President of the Wisconsin Conference of Churches. He is also a member of the Board of Trustees of the Nashotah House Seminary.

Tickets for the presentation and dinner will be $15 with advance reservations, which may be made by telephoning Steve Marr during the day at 965-1540, and at 881-9078 in the evening. Tickets for the presentation only, which will begin at 7:30 p.m., are $5 each and may be purchased at the door.

Church Events

Patriotic

Sunday, May 31, the Chancel Choir of Grosse Pointe Baptist Church will present a Morning Worship service of patriotic music to give tribute to the democratic principles of America.

This program provides an occasion to honor and acknowledge our country and all who have served America to make it great. The 30-voice Chancel Choir will perform such patriotic classics as: "God Bless America," "It's a Grand Old Flag," "Let There Be Peace on Earth," "Give Me Your Tired Your Poor," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and "The Star Spangled Banner."

The public is invited to attend this patriotic celebration and share the fine musical concert recognizing our country. Plan now to join us at 11 a.m. on Sunday, May 31.

Watson to speak

Susan Watson, columnist for the Detroit Free Press, will be the speaker at the Sunday morning Adult Forum at Christ Episcopal Church, Grosse Pointe Farms, on May 31.

Members of Christ Church spent three weeks earlier this year looking at the problem of gun-related violence in Detroit, particularly that against children. This is an issue in which Susan Watson has also taken a great interest and about which she has written extensively. She will conclude the Forum year by reflecting on recent efforts to curb the violence and will offer her thoughts on what might be done to make Detroit a safer place in which to grow up.

The Adult Forum meets on Sunday mornings at 10:20 and explores a wide range of topics, seeking to look at the issues facing people today, in the light of the Christian faith. The public is always welcome.

Music Sunday

On Sunday, May 31, at 9:30 a.m., The First English Evangelical Lutheran Church at 800 Vernier Road in Grosse Pointe Woods will hold its seasonal Music Sunday. Participating in musical worship service will be four of the Church's six choirs, as well as a brass quartet. Among the selections to be performed are the final "Amen" from Handel's "Messiah," as well as Brahms' "How lovely is Thy Dwelling Place," and Pitoni's "Cantate Domino." Also featured will be an arrangement of Pachelbel's Canon in D performed by antiphonal bell choirs. There will be a free-will offering taken during the service. For more information, please call the Church office at 884-5040 during regular business hours.

Holy Trinity Church

Friends of Most Holy Trinity Church will dance on the river with the renowned Glenn Miller Orchestra 8 p.m., June 2 at the Roostertail Club, 100 Marquette (at East Jefferson).

The event will celebrate the progress made toward the "Continuing the Legacy" restoration campaign.

Dance ticket donations are $25 per person or $45 per couple and may be purchased in advance by calling 965-6292.

Memorial Circles

Grosse Pointe Memorial Church Women's Association Circles will meet next Tuesday, June 2, at 9:15 and 9:30 a.m., 1 and 7:30 p.m., according to their regular time schedules. Serving as hostesses are: Eileen Siloway of St. Clair Shores, Helen Kipka and Caryl Kerber of Grosse Pointe Park, Pat Brown of Grosse Pointe Farms, and Lorine Forster of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Refreshments and fellowship precede these monthly circle meetings. Visitors are welcome. Further information may be obtained by contacting circle coordinators Helen Kipka or Marion Wilson at 882-5330.

Episcopal missionary

Susan Anslow graduated from Yale this month and in a few weeks will be leaving for Liberia where she will be a missionary in the Episcopal Church. She will preach at Christ Church Grosse Pointe at the 9:15 and 11:15 a.m. services on May 31 to describe how she felt called to this ministry and what she expects to accomplish.

Anslow grew up in Christ Church, attended church school and sang in the choir. In February, she presented her plans to the Vestry. She explained that she would be stationed in Bolahun, Liberia, working with the Episcopal Church. She would teach the Christian faith, help with the administration and finances of the mission, and assist wherever else she was asked. The Vestry supports her in this venture and endorses the offering which will be given to help with Susan's expenses.

Fontbonne plans membership tea

A new member tea will be held by the Fontbonne Auxiliary of St. John Hospital on June 10 from 1 to 3 p.m., at the home of Marlene Boll in Grosse Pointe Shores.

Recently elected Auxiliary

President Pattie Klimchuk, of St. Clair Shores, formerly of Grosse Pointe Farms, who is an auto racing enthusiast, encourages everyone to race on over, become a new member and enjoy an afternoon of piano music by Janet Drolshagen and informal modeling of fashions from Maria Dinon.

The event will be chaired by Lucille Knop of Harper Woods and other past auxiliary presidents.

For information, call the Fontbonne office at 343-3675.

Michigan Opera Theatre plans jazz party

The Michigan Opera Theatre Guild will sponsor a spectacular "Porgy and Bess" jazz party on Tuesday, June 2, beginning at 6 p.m., in the Rackham Building Ballroom of the Engineering Society of Detroit. This festive and exciting mini-fund raiser with its "Porgy and Bess" theme, will serve up a delicious and mouthwatering menu of southern and spicy Cajun delicacies along with some of the hottest jazz and Gershwin tunes ever composed.

The MOTG party comes on the eve of the company's presentation of Gershwin's acknowledged masterpiece, "Porgy and Bess," scheduled to open at the Masonic Temple Auditorium on Wednesday, June 3, through Sunday, June 7, for a limited engagement of seven performances. Michigan Opera Theatre's presentation of "Porgy and Bess" is a national co-production among 13 opera companies that began in Miami in December 1986.

Premiered in 1935, George and Ira Gershwin's legendary musical score and lyrics are internationally renowned for the infectious classical and jazz sounds heard in "Summertime," "Bess, you is my woman," "It ain't necessarily so," and "My man's gone now."

Tickets for the jazz party are $37.50 per person and include a menu of beer, wine, mint juleps and a buffet supper of fresh oysters on the half shell, shrimp creole, cajun-style fish, barbeque ribs, chicken gumbo, crawfish, red beans and rice, cooked greens, corn bread, and a dessert table.

During the evening, the Earl Van Dyke and Company jazz band will provide musical selections from the jazz and Gershwin era.

The MOTG party will be held at the Engineering Society of Detroit, located at 100 Farnsworth in Detroit's Cultural Center. Secure parking will be provided. For information and reservations, call Nadine Slowik at 874-7850.

Bartkiewicz to perform Beethoven

Institute of Music and Dance faculty member Leszek Bartkiewicz will present an Orchestra Hall recital on May 31. The 3 p.m. performance will feature music of Beethoven, Schubert, Debussy, Chopin, Rachmaninoff and Barber.

Bartkiewicz has received critical acclaim on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean. He was the winner of the "Young Polish Pianist Prize" in 1978, designating him as the top young pianist in his native land. Prior to defecting to the west in 1981, his last professional appearance was a highly praised performance of Chopin's Concerto in F Minor with the Krakow Symphony.

Recital and concert performances in this country include appearances in Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, and Boston as well as throughout Michigan. Mostly Music in Chicago called him, "A sparkling talent." The Boston Globe noted that "Bartkiewicz has all the technical accomplishment necessary for his demanding repertory, and tremendous control of all musical levels."

The Institute of Music and Dance, an affiliate of the Center for Creative Studies, is the largest school of its kind in Michigan. Bartkiewicz has recently completed a year as Aetna Artist-in-Residence at the Institute.

Tickets for the May 31 recital may be purchased by phoning the Orchestra Hall box office at 833-3700. Admission is $5 ($3 for students and senior citizens).

Society of Fund Raising executives honors local volunteer

Beth Moran of Grosse Pointe Farms, was selected as one of several outstanding volunteers honored at a luncheon sponsored by the National Society of Fund Raising Executives — Michigan Chapter on Thursday, May 14. Moran was chosen as one of Michigan's outstanding volunteers for her leadership as president of the Assistance League to Northeast Guidance Center.

During her presidency the Assistance League has continued its dramatic increase in fundraising revenues, along with valuable public relations and direct volunteer service to the center. Not only was Moran honored for her own personal volunteer leadership, but also as representative of the 200 members of the Assistance League and the commitment to the Northeast Guidance Center which this represents. In addition, she has been at Grosse Pointe Pre-Kindergarten and is President of the PTO at Kerby School in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center, Moran is also a member of the Center's Board of Directors; she teaches preschool

A half-century old Grosse Pointe tradition is renewed

It's been a Grosse Pointe tradition since 1935 — the Detroit Artists Market Garden Sale.

This year, Grosse Pointe Farms residents Mr. and Mrs. Richard Goodyear are hosting the art sale, scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, June 3, in their garden. Detroit Artist Market volunteers will be arriving when the dew is still on the clematis to set up the paintings, prints, photographs, sculptures, jewelry and works in glass, clay and fiber.

The garden sale is open to mem-

Club News

The Grosse Pointe Farms Boat Club will hold its annual Blessing of the Fleet Breakfast on Sunday, May 31 from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at the Pier Park on Lakeshore and Moross Roads. Delphine and Walter Klein are the chairpersons of the event, whose menu will consist of scrambled eggs, servelki (Polish sausage) and rolls. The cost per ticket is $3.

The ceremony will feature Margaret Ahee, soloist, clergy from three denominations who will offer their prayers and blessings and the presentation of the colors by the Sea Scouts. The U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary and the Wayne County Sheriff's Department will offer their services for a free boat inspection for all boat owners in the harbor.

The Macomb County Singles announces open Saturday Night Dances to be held at bers of the Artists Market, a non-profit art gallery located in Detroit's Harmonie Park, dedicated to exhibiting and selling works by area artists. Persons interested in joining may call the Artists Market at 962-0337. (Annual membership fees are $25 for individuals, $40 for families.) The garden sale is considered a benefit of membership and there is no admission charge.

A special feature of the sale this year will be four table tableaux. Grosse Pointers Jean Hudson and Jack Tarpley have selected from the Artists Market's extensive objets d'art to create special and unique table settings. Florence Barron and Suzy Farbman are also designing table tableaux.

Again this year, the downtown art gallery has invited selected artists to attend the sale, to be on hand to discuss their work with interested patrons.

Connie Goodyear organized the 1987 Garden Sale. Starting with a January planning meeting, she enlisted the talents of many Grosse Pointers to fill key volunteer positions.

Wendy Barroll and Dede Booth have been working with designer Tarpley, of William Denler, to plan the design and display of the show. They are also in charge of securing a tent as protection organized by Mary Anderson and Sheila Ingwersen.

Scholarship winners

Every year, the Grosse Pointe Women's Club awards two scholarships, one to a student from Grosse Pointe North High School and one to a South student. This year's achievement award winners were, Barbara Loeher, seated left, daughter of Betty and Chuck Loeher, from North; and Christine Eskilsen, daughter of Frances Eskilsen, from South. The students were chosen on the basis of scholarship, achievement and citizenship. Standing, at the left, is Rosemary Elias, president of the Grosse Pointe Women's Club. At the right, is Jean Rice, scholarship chairman. The students are honored each year at the club's annual luncheon, held this year at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. Christine plans to study liberal arts at Michigan State University. Barbara plans to study biomedical engineering at University of Michigan.

Although "you gotta have art," a person does not live by art alone, so Mary Kay Crain and Mary Stroble are in charge of food. Anna and Rick Platt are marshalling the bartenders.

Heading the parking logistics committee are Billy Chapin and Peter Kauffman, who have promised some innovative solutions to the frequently long trek from car to garden party.

Henrietta Fridholm was responsible for the invitations which were addressed at a luncheon hosted by Melodie Scherer.

A sure gauge of the interest in the 1987 Garden Sale is the response to the patron letter sent out by Hudson. Patrons, with contributions of $100 each, and sponsors, with contributions of $50 each, have tripled this year.

Navy Ball

Two past presidents of the Detroit Women's Council of the Navy League of the United States, are co-chairing the annual Navy Ball, which will be held on June 13, at the Lochmoor Club. Norah Houlihan and Frieda Kunert are the co-chairmen. The official hostess will be the council's president, Eileen Doyle, left. The honorary chairmen are Geraldine Fisher and Lois Nair. Also pictured are Lou Wilcox, publicity chairman; and Marian Qualey, vice president of the council.

Pride of the Pointes

The following local students at Michigan State University earned 4.0 grade point averages for the winter quarter: Christopher Bollinger, Grosse Pointe Park; Giannina Licata, Grosse Pointe Woods; Lilith Tatham, Grosse Pointe Woods; James Valice, Grosse Pointe Woods.

Jeffery Kline, son of Kenneth and Nancy Kline of Grosse Pointe Park, has been elected for membership in Tau Beta Pi, the national engineering honor society. Kline is a junior at the University of Michigan and will graduate in mechanical engineering in May 1988.

Navy Ensign John M. Stickford, son of Charles J. and Barbara Z. Stickford of Grosse Pointe Farms, has been designated a Naval Aviator. Presentation of the Wings of Gold marked the culmination of 18 months of flight training. A 1985 graduate of the University of Detroit High School and a 1985 graduate of College of the Holy Cross, Worcester, Mass., he joined the Navy in May 1985.

Kathryn Gracey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Gracey of Grosse Pointe Farms, was selected to give the salutation at the Helen Temple Conke Founders' Day Convocation at Pine Manor College, Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Madelyn L. Nichols, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gust Nichols of Grosse Pointe Woods, is one of 28 students named to Who's Who American Universities and Colleges from the University of Michigan. She is president of the senior nursing class, co-chairman of the Senior Pledge Program in conjunction with the Campaign for Michigan Fund, a member of the Student Alumni Council, the Alpha Chi Omega sorority advisory board and Adara, the U of M senior women's leadership society.

George P. Nichols of Grosse Pointe Woods has been named to the dean's list at Wayne State University for the fall term. He is a freshman in the College of Engineering.

Lynn Shier of Grosse Pointe Park has been awarded the $1,000 American Association of University Women scholarship at the Marygrove College Spring Honors Convocation.

Stephen Schmidt, a senior at University Liggett School, attended the second annual Scholars Forum at Earlham College as a scholarship finalist. He is the son of Joel and Cathy Schmidt, Grosse Pointe.

Jay Williams has been named to the dean's list of Cornell University for the fall semester. He is a 1986 graduate of Grosse Pointe South High School.

Kevin E. Trim and John B. Walker of Grosse Pointe Woods have earned master of arts degrees at Eastern Michigan University.

Carol Helen Paed of Grosse Pointe Woods has been named to the dean's list at the Detroit College of Business for the winter quarter.

Alice B. Youn of Grosse Pointe Woods has earned high honors for the fall semester at Case Western University in Cleveland, Ohio.

Sixty-three Kalamazoo College students are participating in the college's foreign study program. Among them are Stephanie S. Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Smith, Grosse Pointe Farms, Hannover, West Germany; and Kerry A. Bruce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bruce, Grosse Pointe, Madrid, Spain.

Kathryn Thibodeau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thibodeau of Grosse Pointe Farms, is participating in the Babson College undergraduate internship program this spring. She is working for INC. Magazine in Boston, Mass. She is a marketing major.

Ferry gave up painting, and when he moved into his own home on Lakeshore, those paintings he had hung in his father's house didn't fit with his personal collection of modern art, so the paintings went into storage.

Ferry's home is one of the most distinctive modern structures in the Pointes. He selected William Kessler as the architect because he had seen Kessler's work and felt it would provide a good showcase for his collection.

How does an architect work with an architect to build his dream house?

"I had quite a definite idea of the rooms and the general location," Ferry said. "I think I had two basic requirements. I wanted plenty of wall space and plenty of windows to take advantage of the view."

Ferry said he and Kessler formed a good working relationship in building the house.

"We seemed to work well together," he said.

While he is a collector of the modern, Ferry is also concerned about preserving the past. He involved himself recently in the protests against the auctioning of architectural details from the Kanzler house, farther down Lakeshore.

"I was very distressed about the Kanzler house," he said. "It's one of the very few great mansions left. There are so few now that you can count them on the fingers of one hand."

Sometime in the future, Ferry said he hopes someone will think to preserve his own home as an example of architecture in its period.

The highlight of the dinner honoring Ferry on May 30 will be the presentation of Moonmad, by Max

Ernst. Ferry chose the sculpture on a trip to New York with DIA director Samuel Sachs II last year.

"A bell rings very quickly when I see something I want to buy," Ferry said.

Moonmad is an example of surrealist art and an excellent sample of the work of Ernst, Ferry said.

"Not many American museums have pieces of his work," he said. Sachs agreed with Ferry's evaluation of the piece.

"It was wonderful trip," Sachs said. "It's great fun to go shopping. We both reacted immediately to Moonmad. It was the best thing we'd seen."

Sachs expressed great admiration for Ferry.

"He is precise, supportive, generous, intuitive, gentle and perceptive," Sachs said. "He has meant everything to the museum. He is one of a handful of the greatest supporters ever, and he is the third generation of his family to support the museum. His contributions alone would be outstanding, but combined, they are monumental."

Today, Ferry is still a busy man, even though he has left his post leading the Friends of Modern Art. He remains on the board of the philanthropic foundation established by his father. He has been active in the People Mover Art Commission, choosing artists to work in the stations of Detroit's new transportation system and he remains active in the Friends. A history of the Friends he has written is included in the catalogue of the Ferry collection.

The W. Hawkins Ferry Collection will be located in the Textile Galleries at the DIA. For information on the tribute dinner, please call 833-7969.

Grand Prix ball plans under way

The race is on, preparations for the 1987 Detroit Grand Prix Ball (Wednesday, June 17, at the downtown Westin Hotel) are roaring into high gear. A host of Detroit's civic and business leaders will join international celebrities for this fifth annual charity Ball. This gala event will benefit the Music Hall Center for the Performing Arts, an art deco theatre constructed in 1928 by Matilda Dodge Wilson.

The Music Hall Center, one of this city's jewels, is a not-for-profit organization located in the heart of downtown Detroit. Its programming includes dance, theatre, opera, family and music attractions.

Susie Lambrecht of Grosse Pointe, Terry Rakolta of Bloomfield Hills, Marilyn Schlain of West Bloomfield and Barbara Wrigley of Grosse Pointe have teamed up as co-chairmen for this year's Grand Prix Ball. Governor and Mrs. James J. Blanchard and Mayor Coleman A. Young will once again serve as honorary chairmen for the event.

The Allied Signal Corporation and Mr. J. Mason Reynolds, executive officer with the corporation, are providing a substantial grant to underwrite the cost of the evening's entertainment.

Highlighting this international evening will be cocktails, dinner and for Grand Prix Ball guest's dancing enjoyment, Woody Herman and the Young Thundering Herd.

Invitations to the 1987 Detroit Grand Prix Ball may be obtained by calling the Music Hall Development Office (313) 963-7622. Individual tickets are $150 per person ($250 per person for Patron reservations); tables (seating 10) are $1,500 and $2,500. Tickets are tax-deductible to the extent provided by law.

The worst word

After nearly eight years in this job, I've discovered that of all the words I write, read and speak, "goodbye" is my least favorite. I've had to say it a lot lately and with high school graduation coming up, I'm sure I'll be using it even more.

I never did get around to saying "so long" to longtime North High athletic department secretary Andrea Reeder. Andrea left her duties as North's "Ms. All-Around" at the end of March to put her unique problem-solving talents to work managing a local softball field. We miss her a lot, especially since she hasn't phoned home lately.

Over at University Liggett School, athletic department secretary Reba Torongo has always been known as one lady who would be impossible to replace. But ULS athletic director Bob Wood is going to have to do just that, since Reba is leaving ULS this summer after 10 years and heading for greener pastures.

Actually, Reba is heading for greener and whiter pastures, since she's moving up to East Lansing to be close to her family and to her beloved Michigan State University.

"She's a wonderful lady," Wood says. "She's done so much for this athletic department. I wish her all the best and I know she'll be happy now living close to her daughter... but she really will be impossible to replace."

When she first came to ULS, Reba told Wood that she intended to stay for just one year. "I wondered if I could handle a job after 25 years. Then after a year, I was the one who didn't want to leave," she recalls with a laugh. "Really, it's been a great place to work and he (Wood) is a neat guy to work for," Reba added. (Even if Wood, the biggest Wolverine booster this side of Ann Arbor, did tease her a lot about being a Spartan fan.)

Wood, by the way, does need someone to fill the department secretary's job. Interested applicants should contact him at 884-4444 as soon as possible.

The goodbyes I hate the most are the ones I have to make to the athletes I've followed for Good effort...

... bad odds described the situation for South's varsity soccer team against Troy Athens in a pre-regional game last week. South lost, 5-0. That's Sarah Dow trying to get a shot away at the Athens' goalie, who had 16 shots in 17 games this year. More South sports on page 3C.

Prep teams playoff-bound

It's all over for some teams but for other Grosse Pointe preps, the fun is just beginning as the state playoffs get serious this week. Here's a look at who's left in the running and what they can gain with victories this week:

Baseball: Grosse Pointe North will host the district tournament this Saturday, May 30. East Detroit and Notre Dame will play at 10 a.m., followed by South and North at noon. That North-South match-up pits the No. 9 (South, at 24-6) and No. 10 (North, 22-8) ranked teams in Michigan. The championship game will be played at 3 p.m.

Admission to the districts is $2 and entitles spectators to attend the entire day's games. Saturday's champion advances to the June 6 regional tournament at North.

Softball: The North and South softball teams are still in action, too. On Saturday at East Detroit's Memorial Field, South High will go up against the No. 2 team in the state, East Detroit, at 10 a.m. North High will face Regina at noon and the championship game will be held at 2 p.m.

Tennis: It's state tournament time for netters at South, North and University Liggett School. ULS will be led by No. 1 singles seed John Yancey, a junior coach Bob Wood calls the "best player I've had since Aaron Krickstein." Yancey will lead the favored ULS Knights in search of their second straight Class C-D tennis championship in Kalamazoo.

In Class A regional action last week, South's netters outpointed the Bi-County championship North squad to win the regional title. The two teams will advance to the Class A finals in Midland. East Lansing is favored to win the tournament.

Track: The Pointes will send a large contingent to the Class A boys' and girls' track finals at Alma College this Saturday, May 30. Grosse Pointe North's boys' team will advance thanks to its regional championship May 16. And traveling to the finals individually are South's Brian Stratton (100 dash, 400 dash), Kevin English (1600 run), and Chris Gross (long jump). North will send Liz Bolden (long jump) and Barbie Loehner (800 run) to the states, where they will join their South counterparts Toni Tedesco (1600 run, 3200 run) and the members of the regional championship 3200 relay, Tedesco, Micha Song, Traci Lee and Wendy Berger.

University Liggett School will send Alexis Collins (high jump) and senior Agu Nwoso (300 hurdles) to the Class C finals

Summer fun at Assumption

There's something for everyone this summer at the Assumption Cultural Center on Marter Road in St. Clair Shores. Here's just a sampling of what the center will offer in fitness, sports and dance camps:

- Kalosomatics, the center's popular exercise program, will have 14 classes in the women, coded, beginner, advanced, moderation, pre-natal and post-natal levels. Flexible scheduling is available.

- Health seminars will be offered in conjunction with St. John Hospital and its health care partners, St. Clair Ambulatory Care Corporation and Harrison Community Hospital. St. John's Patient Education Department will certify students in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (new students or recertification) on June 11. A five-week experimental interactive class designed to offer participants specific directions to improve their diet and health begins June 18. Back Care and Injury Prevention will cover the anatomy of the back, common back problems and causes, as well as prevention hints on June 16.

- The Angela Kennedy Dance Studios and the Cultural Center will present what's billed as the first "east side" dance camp, Monday through Thursday, June 15 through 25. Beginners will report from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., followed by intermediate dancers from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Fee is $48 and includes an introduction to staging, costuming, choreography and studio classes in ballet, tap and jazz.

- Karate returns this summer, beginning June 16 for adults and June 20 for Pee Wees (5-11). The Panagos Brothers, accredited ITKF Black Belt instructors, will teach beginners through advanced ranks in Tae Kwon Do Karate and self defense.

- Soccer coach Guido Regelbrugge will lead a beginners soccer clinic for boys and girls 8-11 and 12 and over in two camps: Camp I runs June 15 through 19, Camp II, June 22 through 26, 4:30 to 6 p.m. Fee is $35. Cleats, T-shirts and shorts must be worn.

For more information on any of these activities, call the Assumption Center, 21800 Marter Rd., at 779-6111.

City park open

The city of Grosse Pointe opened its Neff Park swimming and wading pools for the summer season on Saturday, May 23. Weekday pool hours (while school is in session) will be 3:30 to 8 p.m.; Friday and Saturday closings will be 9 p.m. with Saturday and Sunday openings at 10 a.m.

Swim lesson registration will begin on Saturday, June 6. Lessons begin on June 15. Classes include 3-and 4-year-olds, beginners through swimmers and Red Cross. Water aerobics classes for adults will be offered in the evenings. Further information may be obtained by calling the pool office.

Swim team practices begin Wednesday, June 3. Practice time is 4 to 5:30 p.m. on weekdays and 8 to 10 a.m. Saturdays. All swimmers between 6 and 17 are welcome.

Tennis court registrations at Elworthy Field are now being taken at the courts. Reservations may be made for play during the hours of 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Weekday reservations for the weeks of May 25 and June 1 will begin at 2 p.m.

Health walks

The City of St. Clair Shores Department of Parks and Recreation has organized a series of walks in conjunction with the annual "Walk Michigan" program. There is a choice of one- and two-mile walks with free refreshments, raffle prizes and a special weekend on Mackinac Island on Labor Day.

Walks dates are 9 to 10 a.m. Saturday, May 30, at Brys Park (Harper and Eight Mile, adjacent to Vic Tanny); 2 to 3 p.m. Sunday, June 7, Kyté Monroe Field (Harper north of Masonic); 9 to 10 a.m. Saturday, June 27, Bon Secours Health and Fitness Center.

For more information, call 445-5350.

Jim Ramsey street race is June 7

The fourth annual Jim Ramsey Street Race is scheduled for Sunday, June 7, at 9 a.m. The 10K (6.2) mile run is open to all ages and will start at the corner of Warren and John R and finish at Frederick Douglass and Brush, the site of the new Museum of African American History. All proceeds from the race will go to the Museum's building fund and are tax deductible.

Entry fee is $8 and includes a T-shirt, race number, refreshments and entry into the post-race events.

The race is named after Jim Ramsey, a 79-year-old Detroit resident known for his running abilities. Ramsey won first place in his age division in the 1985 Boston Marathon.

For more information about the race, contact F. Johnson at the Museum of African American History at 833-9800.

'Y' offers summer excitement

The Lakeshore Family YMCA is offering a summer program which includes sports and activities for all ages. Classes begin the week of June 15; registration will be held on June 4 and will go on until classes begin or enrollment is closed.

Adult classes include swimming, fitness, body toning, yoga, aerobic dance, women's weight training, karate and aikido (self-defense). Youth classes include swimming, gymnastics, parent and tot together time, pre-school sport readiness, Fit by Five and Wigglin' Book Worms.

New for kids this summer are pre-school bowling and Judo for boys and girls 7 through 14. Judo class will be held on Wednesdays from 2 to 3:30 p.m.

The YMCA is also offering summer camp experience for kids at Holly's Camp Ohiyesa, which has resident camping programs for children 7 to 10. Camp Nissokone in Oscoda offers a variety of programs for those 10 to 16 and includes boating, canoeing, hiking, horseback riding and more.

Currently the Lakeshore 'Y' is offering a special summer physical membership, which is good from June 1 through Aug. 31. Fees are $70 for the family, $48 for adults and $16 for youth.

For more information on any of the Lakeshore YMCA programs, call 778-5811 or stop in at 23401 E. Jefferson Ave., St. Clair Shores.

Smart

On the road again

It's that wonderful time of year again: school will be over in a few weeks and those well-deserved vacation days are getting closer to reality. You're ready to hit the road... until you remember how well you've done to change and control your eating habits and in one swift thought about the upcoming vacation, you resign yourself to failure. You tell yourself that there is just no way you can travel and be true to your diet.

Well, there's good news — that trip, those picnics and family get-togethers need not spell doom to your healthy eating habits.

First, make a "game plan." Just as you plan each step of your trip, make a list of what you will eat and how you will handle meals each step of the way.

Plane trips

- Pack individual packets of salad dressing, lemon juice in ziplock bags or tightly sealed plastic bags. These can easily be placed in pockets of your suitcase. (These individual packets are sold in local stores and are also available at the Diet Center.)

- Pack a small bag to carry on the plane with you. It can include sliced apples or a variety of crackers to use as a snack during the flight.

- Call the airlines ahead of time to find out if your flight includes a meal. Avoid the normal airline meals, which can be extremely high in calories. Instead, order from the airlines' alternative plan, which often includes a seafood salad or fresh fruit salad.

- Pass up alcohol and order a refreshing glass of club soda, or a glass of mineral water on ice. These drinks are also better than a diet cola, since they do not leave you with that "bloaty" feeling that often accompanies flying.

- Plan your food choices for

Here's an exercise that's pretty hard to resist

Kami Auld says that some people come into her exercise class, take a look at the big purple or green bands and think: "Heck, I can handle that exercise, it's just a rubber band."

Auld, of Merriweather Road, sets them straight right away. She's an IDEA- and AFAA-certified instructor at Vital Options Inc., and one of only six people in Michigan who can train and certify instructors in the use of Dyna-Band, which isn't just a big, colorful rubber band.

It's actually a piece of progressive resistance exercise equipment that is not unlike weights for lifting. Dyna-Band is the brand name for what amounts to a large, elastic band. The band is incorporated into regular exercise classes with the primary purpose of increasing strength and endurance through progressive resistance. The lighter (green) band offers the least resistance and students move on to the heavier (purple) band, which allows greater resistance for those ready to make that step.

"I've had really good response from my classes. You see, when you work for cardiovascular fitness you have to go to 60 percent of your maximum heart rate to see any improvement. It's the same with muscles.

"When you are a beginner and work against your own weight, that's fine. But after a while, your fitness level improves and you aren't adding endurance, just keeping your strength. I've found that my long-time students like the Dyna-Band because they are ready to add something to their routines to overload the muscles and improve strength AND endurance," Auld says.

Auld received her training on the equipment at the University of Michigan, which serves as consultant to the program. "I wanted to make sure I knew the proper way to use the bands. And I wanted to know all the injury risks. For example, if your arms aren't properly aligned, you will not get much use out of the band. And in terms of injury, every day use could cause tendonitis in some people."

Students in Auld's class are encouraged to start slowly; in the aerobics classes, the band is used only on the legs. A typical routine with the band includes seven minutes of general warm-up, work with the band on each muscle group of the upper body, then down to the muscle groups in the legs and lower body.

It's quite easy and even fun, Auld says. "I use it and I also lift weights with my son three times per week. In fact, that's what I tell the women who come in and say they're afraid that the band will cause bulky muscles. They don't realize that you're not going to get weight lifting-type muscles unless you have enormous amounts of testosterone or have drastically reduced your percentage of body fat the way women body builders do.

"What the band does is help increase your strength. It doesn't offer enough resistance to bulk muscles up. What I like about it is that after I've worked with it, I go to carry the groceries in or the garbage out and realize that my hands and wrists are strong enough to do it in one trip."

Students new to the equipment are carefully observed in order that they don't try to use too heavy a band or do too many repetitions. They may be purchased at the studio for use at home, but Auld says she prefers exercise enthusiasts to become familiar with the Dyna-Band under class conditions first.

"You don't always know what they're doing with them at home. I had a student come in here and pick up a purple band. I watched her for a while and when she began to struggle, I asked her if she wanted to try a lighter one. She said she hadn't realized there was a difference... she'd just picked the purple because it matched her leotard," Auld said.

"If you know what you're doing and take it slow and work up, it can really be effective."

Medal-winners

More than 800 runners and walkers took to the streets of downtown Detroit in April to compete in the ninth annual Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan Fitness Runs and Walk. Grosse Pointers competed in three of the four events of the day. Left, Dennis and Vicki Choate, of Grosse Pointe, receive their medals for the 5K run and 5K walk, respectively, from Leonard Peruski. And at right above, are Pointers Mike and Kathy O'Boyle, with daughters Heather and Andrea. Mike O'Boyle won a medal in the 10K run; Kathy took home a prize for her efforts in the 5K event. Proceeds from the fitness runs and walk will be donated to the U.S. Olympic committee.

the day, according to your flight time and length. Eat light, satisfying foods which will not lie like a rock in your stomach. Do not skip a meal; this will leave you hungry and tired by the time you reach your destination.

Car travel

- One of the greatest aids to car travel is the cooler. The length of your trip will help determine the size cooler you'll need. Pack fresh fruits, such as easy-to-carry apples and oranges. Individual packets of cooked chicken breast, (off the bone with the skin removed) are great protein foods, low in calories. You can take these packets into any fast-food restaurant that has a salad bar and you have created a tasty meal.

- Make your own ice blocks for the cooler, using paper cups filled with water and frozen.

- Fruits and low-sodium crackers are perfect snack foods for travel, especially with traveling with children. Do not pack high-sugar, empty-calorie-type foods for you or the kids; these tend to make you tired and crabby, especially on long trips. Granola bars are fine, as long as they are the no-sugar or low-sugar brand and not chocolate coated. Those are empty of nutrition and can make a mess of the car.

- Be sure to include a thermos of cold water for the trip. Everyone in the car will find this a welcome drink when thirsty.

- Pack fresh vegetables to snack on. Carrot sticks, celery, green pepper wedges, raw cauliflower and broccoli travel well and are neat eat-in-the-hand snacks.

- Lemons and limes also travel well. Slices of these lively fruits adding to ice water.

Restaurants

Whether you are on vacation or taking a business trip, these hints can help determine the success of a healthy eating commitment.

- For breakfast, order your eggs poached. Omelettes can be ordered made without milk or cooked without butter or margarine. Dry whole wheat or rye toast, plus one-half grapefruit is a good start to the day.

- Instead of wine or cocktails at dinner, rely on club soda or mineral water with a twist of lemon or lime.

- During your trip, take 10 minutes per day for a refreshing walk.

- When eating at a "set meal," such as a business banquet, don't just give in and eat whatever is served. Remove skin from chicken. If a large portion of red meat is served, eat half of the serving. Eat all of the salad. Don't use butter or margarine on the rolls. Separate vegetables from heavy sauces. Ignore dessert.

These few simple tactics will save countless calories and added pounds. You don't need to return home feeling defeated and angry. Next time you plan for that business trip or vacation, pack those healthy eating habits with you.

CHICKEN BREAST ON THE GO

Place 4 oz. boneless, skinless chicken breast on a square of aluminum foil. Sprinkle with dash of salt, pepper, lemon juice, seasonings as desired. Fold up foil, sealing edges tightly.

Bake on a cookie sheet at 400 degrees for 20 minutes. When completely cooled, store in freezer. These packets are great for traveling and can be used, cold and cut up, placed on tossed salad.

'Beverly Hills Cop II' is showcase for Eddie Murphy — again

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

"Beverly Hills Cop II" has one really big thing going for it: Eddie Murphy. The young star again proves himself to be a first-class comedian and a force to be reckoned with on the big screen. It should be noted in the same breath however, that while "Cop II" may be funny in many parts, it grabs those laughs with much baser comedy than its predecessor.

Some will care. Many others will not. And those who are not offended by its condescending attitude toward females or its downright primitive comedy gags will walk away more than satisfied.

Murphy reprises his role as Detroit Police Officer Axel Foley, the smart-aleck detective with a gift of gab and a heart of gold. When Foley's professional associate and friend in Beverly Hills is shot by a group of high class hoodlums, he drops his hometown investigation and catches the next plane to California.

Voila, the Motown Man is once again a Beverly Hills Cop.

Credit Murphy and Robert D. Wachs, who came up with the story idea, for not only devising a plausible reason for Foley to re-gets gunned down because he knew too much. Foley, not one to let something like bureaucracy stand in his way, grabs Beverly Hills officers Rosewood (Judge Reinhold) and Taggart (John Ashton) and chases around town trying to solve the case and avenge the wounding of Bogomil.

Prerequisite for the quest, of course, is Foley's ability to get anything he needs with a little bit of baloney. Foley's style is smoother than 10-year-old before victims know what's happened, Foley has reduced them to rubble. Witness the scene in which Foley garners himself a beautiful mansion for a week by convincing the carpenters working there that the owners don't want any right angles in the construction plan. Or the scene in which he escapes reprimand by telling a superior that he's

Eddie Murphy

Johnny Wishbone, Psychic Extraordinaire. The list goes on and on, and where Murphy's raw talent is concerned, so do the laughs.

The problem however, is that the picture sinks to previously uncharted depths in search of laughs. Throughout the movie, with one exception, women are either sex toys, brainless bimbos or immoral killers. Many of the picture's biggest gags are based on a derogatory statement or gesture toward a female, including the film's key moment near the end.

Also, there are extensive car chase sequences in this picture. Some of the sequences are acceptable, but for every car crash we have to watch, we're deprived of

And that can be a real loss, because Murphy is truly one of the comic greats of our time. Early in the picture he demonstrates what he can do with nothing more than the rolling of his eyes and neck. When he adds dialogue to it, things can only get better. Unfortunately, this doesn't happen near enough.

Most everything else in the film is quite credible. Jurgen Prochnow and Allen Garfield play the gang leader and the mayor respectably. Both are very detectable. It's not hard to figure out who's side we're supposed to be on in this picture. And Gil Hill, Detroit police inspector, again does the city proud with a very credible reading of Foley's boss.

The editing is noteworthy if only for the fact that viewers will not be able to tell that the footage of Detroit and the footage with Murphy were shot on opposite ends of the country. And the soundtrack, again by Harold Faltermeyer, is as good as it gets in pop movies.

It's obvious in "Beverly Hills Cop II" that the filmmakers had to stretch just a bit in terms of new comedy routines. No sequel will ever be as spontaneous or as downright zany as the original "Cop." But you can bet they'll keep trying.

One wishes the producers would let the first installment stand alone and give Murphy something new to sink his teeth into. For now, though, "Cop II" is the only Murphy we've got. And most viewers will gladly overlook the faults and savor the good moments.

turn to the West Coast, but also giving him quite an adventure once he gets there. It seems that a big, blonde bombshell of a burglar (Brigitte Nielsen) has been perpetrating letter-perfect crimes all over town — the case of the alphabet crimes. And it's Foley's pal Bogomil (Ronny Cox) who

Rivertown Festival scheduled for June 2

Rick Neumann, president of Rivertown Business Association and Grosse Pointe resident, will preside over the third annual Rivertown Festival Tuesday, June 2. The event will be from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. in the courtyard and six-story atrium of Stroh River Place, at Jos. Campau and the Detroit River.

The festival will give the public an opportunity to meet the leaders behind Rivertown business development. Special guests include Detroit Mayor Coleman

Young, Community and Economic Development Director Emmett Moten, Stroh Brewery Chairman Peter W. Stroh, Crain Communications Vice Chairman Keith Crain, River Place Properties President Ted Moss, ANR Development Director Lawrence Marantette, Renaissance Center Venture CEO Stephen Horn and Doctors Hospital President William Hettiger.

An admission price of $25 will cover food, drinks, entertainment and door prizes. Proceeds from the ticket sales will be used by the Rivertown Business Association to further enhance the Rivertown area.

The Rivertown Business Association is comprised of 67 member companies from the area of Jefferson Avenue to the Detroit River and Belle Isle to the Renaissance Center. Neumann, president of Walter Machine & Screw Company, has been president of Rivertown Business Association since 1985.

Boston-Edison homecoming

On Sunday, June 7, from 1-6 p.m., the Historic Boston-Edison Association will host a neighborhood homecoming in Voigt Park, located on the north side of Edison Street between Second and Third avenues in Detroit.

The event, presented in conjunction with Michigan's Sesquicentennial Celebration, will be patterned after an old-fashioned ice cream social, featuring band music, an awards presentation, and self-guided walking tours highlighting homes located around Voigt Park.

The homecoming is open to the public, with a special invitation extended to all former Boston-Edison residents to bring along any old photographs of the neighborhood they might have. Representatives of the newly-formed Boston-Edison Archives will be on hand to meet with former residents and record accounts of life in the neighborhood in years gone by.

MOT auditions

The Michigan Opera Theatre will hold chorus auditions for the company's six 1987/88 season productions on Monday, June 1. Auditions for soprano, alto, tenor and bass positions will be held at the administrative offices, located in Detroit's New Center Area at 6519 Second Avenue.

Singers interested in auditioning must call the MOT Production Department at 874-7850 no later than Friday, May 29, to schedule an appointment. Applicants must prepare two arias from the standard operatic repertory, one in English and one in a foreign language, and one musical theater selection. All pieces must be performed from memory.

Farmington reunion

Farmington High School's Class of 1962 will hold its 25th anniversary reunion in Farmington the weekend of Aug. 28-30.

Class members can receive information on the reunion weekend by contacting Dan Gerber at 625-9162 or Jerry Nelson at 312-682-0019.

The reunion committee is also interested in hearing from teachers who were on the staff of Farmington High School in 1962. They are invited to be guests.

Other Rivertown Business Association board members residing in Grosse Pointe include: Brian McDonald, Soup Kitchen Saloon; Marcia Cron, Woodbridge Tavern; Lawrence R. Marantette, American Natural Resources; and Jon Gandelot, Gandelot, Stoepker & Dickson P.C.

Tickets will be available at the door, or by calling 393-2700.

Autograph session

Grosse Pointe resident Neal Shine, Detroit Free Press columnist and senior managing editor, will autograph his book, "Neal Shine on Sunday," 4 to 6 p.m. Wednesday, June 3, at the Detroit Press Club, 516 Howard Street.

The public is invited to attend the autograph session, and to chat with the veteran Detroit journalist. Shine's book is a paperback edition of his favorite Sunday columns published by his newspaper.

Book fair

The 15th Midwest Antiquarian Book Fair will be held Saturday, May 30, at the Bloomfield Township Public Library, 1099 Lone Pine, Bloomfield Hills.

Books in all subject areas, maps, prints, postcards and ephemera will be exhibited and offered for sale.

Hours for the fair are 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. There is no admission charge. Plenty of parking available.

For information, call Galerie de Boicourt at 540-0166.

"THE SURPRISE IS INSIDE"

Book Of The Week
AT GROSSE POINTE Book Village

We would like to share our most recent reading with you

BOONE
by T. Boone Pickens

This is the compelling autobiography of one of America's most controversial, and most successful, businessmen. The book is lively, while providing the reader with an astute analysis of the problems of today's American Corporation.

While not everyone may agree with his philosophy, T. Boone Pickens' unique story will intrigue anyone who has felt an entrepreneurial urge. It has great appeal for those who have felt themselves trapped within a large corporate bureaucracy.

This book will provide hours of interesting reading for any American who wants to "make things happen," and is a prime suggestion for Father's Day for a vital businessman.
