Student visits Philippines; meets President Aquino

By Margle Reins Smith Staff Writer

The chance meeting of an old friend from the Philippines and a conversation about the country's new president, Corazon Aguino, led to the trip of a lifetime for Grosse Pointer Raymond Stocking, 22. Within a few weeks, Stocking had flown to Manila and had spent several weeks traveling around the country talking to students and citizens.

And he'd met President Aquino.

Stocking, a graduate of South High, student at Macomb Community College, part-time worker at Jerry's Club Party Store (which his brother owns), said he will graduate next May, then transfer to another school and eventually find a career in business management.

"I was just an ambassador of good will," he said about his trip to the Philippines. "I met a lot of students and people and we talked about how they view American life. We view them as a troubled country. Economically, they're troubled. But not otherwise. They have a bad taste left from (deposed President Ferdinand) Marcos, but they're re-three weeks I was in Manila," Stocking said.

Stocking first stayed at a guest house at Assumption College in Manila. A couple of students were assigned to show him around the city. "Manila is not glamorous. About 70 percent of the people are living in poverty," he said. "They live in shacks. It's sad.

"The people are incredibly nice," he said. "They have such faith in their country. Such care and concern for each other. They put their hands out to each other. They don't take lots of things for granted, like we do."

Stocking said the people of the He was no good for the country.' Philippines have an unrealistic picture of what life is like in the United States. "They view American life as it is on "Dallas" and "Dynasty" and "The Cosby Show." They get all our TV shows.

"We're uninformed in our view of them, too," he said. "For instance, we read a great deal about the demonstrations by pro-Marcos people. In fact, nobody is worried about the pro-Marcos group. They're just a couple thousand people. Most Filipinos are not concerned. Most have no good feelings at all for Marcos.

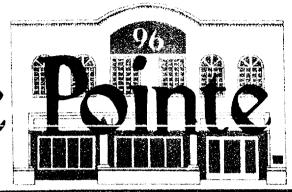

During his stay, Stocking said he was repeatedly told he would have a chance to meet President Aguino, but he didn't know

After four days in Manila, he traveled to Cagayan de Oro, a city on the southernmost major island of the Philippines, to visit Xavier University. There he talked with students and exchanged views of American and Philippine life.

Stocking said he had no trouble talking to people or meeting people. "I'm very sociable," he See PHILIPPINES, page 4A

Board okays parking solution

By Nancy Parmenter

The school board authorized its attorneys to draw up the papers agreeing to the library parking solution proposed by the city of Grosse Pointe Farms but reserved the right not to approve if they don't like the details.

Reservations surfaced when board members realized they have no control over a future determination of a need for additional parking. Part of the proposal stipulates that if at any time the Farms determines such a need, it can require the schools to provide more parking spots. Trustees wanted to make sure they don't end up providing parking for shoppers as well as library patrons.

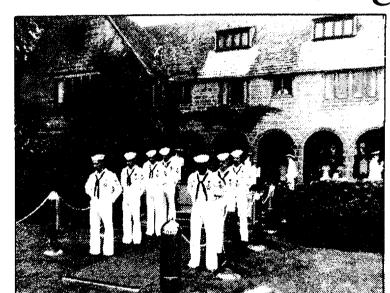

"How would the council determine the need for additional parking?" asked board Secretary Carol Marr.

"They'll be watching after the Bologna and Edgar buildings are completed to see if there's a serious problem," said Vice President Vincent LoCicero.

Treasurer Jon Gandelot noted that the vote to approve simply meant that the lawyers could go ahead and draw up the papers and that the board could still refuse the compromise. "I want to be sure that (if they require extra parking) it's a library problem and not just a Hill problem," he said. Despite that potential glitch, board members seemed satisfied with the compromise, which will provide 48 parking spaces

Change of command

About 250 sailors and more than 100 guests attended a special U.S. Navy ceremony Monday at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House. The ceremony is a time-honored Naval tradition that restates the continuity of authority to the personnel of the command. The command at the U.S. Navy Recruiting District Detroit was last changed in June 1985, when Capt. Kenneth M. Martin, right, came to Detroit. Capt. Robert S. Farms public safety contract still being negotiated

By Peter A. Salinas

All three sides agree that public safety is inevitable in Grosse Pointe Farms — it's just a matter of how and when the new program will be implemented.

July 1 marked the beginning of the third year the Farms fire department has operated under the old contract. The police union has been without a new contract for the same time, but last year they entered into a sixmonth contract for the period of July 1, 1985, to Jan. 31, 1986, so that officers could get cost of living and a slight wage increase.

'We have been at a dead end on the wording for a new public safety department contract for a long time," police Cpl. Otto B. Glanert said.

Glanert, who has been with the Farms department for 30 years, was one of the original founders of the department's union. He became president of the Farms police officers association again recently.

Both the police and fire de-trator with the Michigan Employee Relations Commission in the last several weeks. Both Glanert and fire union President James Turner said they feel that the arbitration will deal solely with the two unions as they now stand, not with the public safety department, which has not yet been created.

Both men spoke positively about reaching an agreement soon.

Glanert said he feels the city and the union are very close on economic issues, but still a great distance apart on the public safety department implementation wording. Both declined to give details, since the contract is under negotiation.

Carrol Lock, Farms city controller and member of the city's negotiating team, said that the police department command officers, the sergeants and lieutenants have already negotiated a contract with the city and are not included in the current round of negotiations.

"Both sides have put a lot of partments have filed for an arbi- energy into working something out," Lock said, "and our latest proposal is now before them." Lock called the latest proposal a tentative contract, but both Glanert and Turner said they were not anxious to take that package back to the rank and file for ratification.

"As always some are for public safety and some are against it," Glanert said. "We are not opposed to public safety, it is just the wording on how it will be implemented that we are concerned about."

Both Glanert and Turner said they didn't feel the city's latest proposal was something that the two unions would agree to, and didn't think that they would bring it to them for a vote.

"As far as I am concerned, we are close," Turner said. "If the arbitration comes down before the contract for public safety is those years, but recently has tinue to discuss public safety with the city. It (the arbitration) will bring us current.

"We've come more in the last three or four months than we have in years.'

Lock said he believes that the city could ask for arbitration and that settlement on the public safety department question could come that way, which is in apparent opposition to what the union officials believe. Lock did concede the issue could be one for litigation.

Lock said the city has been looking at implementing a public safety department for the last seven to 10 years with some informal discussions over that period. The city has remained steadfast on some issues over negotiated, then, we will con- agreed to several of the union's Glanert said that if the city agreed to the union's demands on wording, both unions would agree to a contract "tomorrow." He noted, however, that it's not likely to happen.

"The city has proposed another contract, but we feel we can't bring it to our people because of the unclear wording in Glanert said. "We are not asking for any more than our surrounding peers have got. We just don't want to be at the bottom of the totem pole now. Going public safety, we would never make it up."

Lock said the unions have been patient with the city, but that the administration feels See CONTRACT, page 2A management has to have a certain degree of flexibility.

Lock said the biggst problem in reaching a solution is a fear of the unknown on the part of the union. Since public safety has never been a concern in the Farms before, the rank and file are concerned about how the program will be implemented. Lock said that all the wording cannot be set into the contract, because the city has no way of knowing what is going to come up. He said the city can't very well spell out every contingency in a contract, nor would it attempt to.

Lock noted that there are three or four firefighters who are approaching retirement, and that once they do, they would be replaced with public safety officers. A certain number of firefighters could remain at that status, but there would be an economic incentive to cross-train as public safety.

We think we are close on economics and have proposed a package that is viable," Lock said. "We would sooner see everyone willing to give the new program a good try and have a

The union officials agree. They feel this is there one chance to make sure that union members have a strong contract to start out with.

"I would say that we have been patient," Glanert said. "We have been working straight through all of this, and have continued to negotiate. If the city wants this to go, I can't understand why the city has waited this long to correct the wordage problems. It makes you wonder just how interested they are in this. I had a positive feeling about this two years ago, but after two years..." Turner said that the city has made a lot of concessions recently, perhaps, more than it has made in all the years previously combined.

"They have agreed to concessions they said they would never agree to," Turner said. Lock said that when negotiating a new contract, there are bound to be difficulties, but he said he doesn't think there are too many differences. He said he felt there has been good will on both sides.

"We want to proceed with a willingness on both sides," Lock said. "Since some form of public safety seems to be inevitable, the sooner we get this show on the road, the better for everyone."

Park public safety officers undergo trial by fire

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

When they arrived, they were approached by one of the command officers, who asked if they merely wanted to observe or actively take part in fighting fires. They told him they were there to learn, and for the next month it was literally trial by fire for two Grosse Pointe Park public safety

Sgts. John J. Schulte and Dave Hiller spent nine 24-hour shifts over the last month with Engine Company 23 and Squad 3 at Moran and East Grand Boulevard in Detroit. The training is part of the Park's attempt to thoroughly cross-train the former police officers in firefighting.

"We spent 19-1/2 hours actually fighting fires during that time," said Hiller, 37, who has been with the Park police for 15

"During that month we problably got 10 years of Grosse Pointe Park experience," Schulte

Their's was no small feat. As part of one of the busiest fire houses in Detroit, the two men had to do everything that a fully trained Detroit firefighter would do.

That meant waking up in the middle of one's sleep to fight a fire, running hoses in to burning buildings, cleaning equipment, maintaining the various oxygen and other refiliable tanks, and doing whatever their command officers thought would be a good learning experience for the two

Schulte had nothing but positive comments about his experiences in Detroit - about what he learned about fighting fires and the men who put them out for a living.

"I was totally impressed with their firefighting ability," Schulte said. "If my house was on fire, I would want them to respond."

Both Schulte and Hiller worked with Squad 3. The squad is the smaller unit and basically a personnel carrier. The squad backs up and fills in regularly at fire scenes. It carries cutting torches, the large K-12 saws which can cut through a roof and also the jaws of life tool. The squad will, in many cases, respond to roll-over and other serious accidents.

For the most part, the two men responded to fires regularly. The first day on the job with Detroit, Hiller and Schulte were on the squad when it responded

Jean south of Mack. "It was a hell of an introduction," Hiller said. "It was my first major fire, ever. Welcome to firefighting."

Schulte said during the blaze the house to carry a fire hose inside. The first thing the command officer told them was to look for and remember where the escape routes were located.

At one point when Schulte was carrying a line up the stairs with several other men, including Hiller, and the upstairs door was opened, fire shot down the stairs just over their heads. After the initial blast of flames went by, and the men picked their prone bodies off the steps, they carried the hoses onto the second floor and extinguished the blaze.

It was just another run, if there is such a thing, for the Detroit firefighters, but for Hiller and Schulte, it would be the first of many learning experiences in the hot, smoky and dirty world of firefighting.

"If there is one thing I learned is that no two fires are the same," Hiller said. "No two houses are exactly alike, and fires will behave differently in different kinds of houses. Each fire poses its unique set of problems.'

Both men said they thoroughly enjoyed the experience, and Schulte said there wasn't anything about the experience he could honestly say he didn't

Not even being awakened from a sound sleep at 3 a.m.

"There are two things that happen when the alarm sounds," Schulte said. "First the alarm sounds, which is definitely loud enough to wake you up, and every light in the building comes on at once."

Schulte said the men resign themselves to the knowlege that they will be up in a while, so to a serious house fire at St. they don't mind being awakened. In less than 60 seconds, the squad vehicle is out the door of the station house and the men put their fire gear on while they're on the way.

he was among the first to enter starts around 7:30 a.m. when the new shift comes on duty. Each day the vehicles are checked. and all the apparatus and equipment is tested. The cutting torches are lit, the motorized saws are started and the jaws of life is started.

If there are no fires, some of the men go downtown to fill the airpacks which were used the night before.

"We responded to fires at all times of the day, but there is a statistical increase in the number for fires between 10 p.m. and 2 a.m.," Schulte said. "Each day is different, Some nights you may not have to respond to a fire. Our last night there, however, we responded to four alarms in a row without returning to the quarters."

The men usually go to sleep around 11:30 p.m. or midnight, Schulte noted. Sometimes, depending on how tired the men are, they may take a nap during the day after the morning chores are done. Some men try to get some rest if there isn't a fire in the afternoon, because they know they will be up in the morning.

"I was very impressed with the men," Hiller said of the Detrolt firefighters. "They are totally dedicated to putting out fires." Hiller said there are many similarities and many differences between what the Detroit firefighters do and what the new Park public safety officers đο.

For instance, he said that when the Detroit department gets a fire alarm, police seldom respond, even to control traffic. That's not the case in the Park, where officers always respond, even before the police and fire departments were consolidated.

"Many of the house fires we responded to were vacant buildings," Hiller said. "Sometimes we arrived at a working fire, we put it out, made sure it wouldn't start up again and were on our way back to the station in two hours."

Hiller noted that in Grosse Pointe Park, there are no vacant dwellings, and that the officers almost always are on hand to help the resident with things after a fire. Also, if it's not a serious blaze, the firemen may take the time to cover furniture with a tarp before dragging a hose over it or the carpeting.

"It's definitely a different approach," Hiller said. "We are service oriented, whereas the Detroit firefighters have one job and one job only - to put out fires and make sure they won't start up again. When that's done they are gone. We have time to commit ourselves more to our

Both Schulte and Hiller, said they learned a lot about making decisions in regard to fighting fires, but neither of them will be in charge of fighting a blaze in the Park. That job has been left to the nine Park firefighters who remain full-time fire specialists.

"I got a lot of confidence to work inside of a burning struc-ture," Schulte said. "I also learned there are a lot of variables. There will come a day when I will be responsible and in charge of a fire. There is a lot of responsibility when you commit men to a burning dwelling."

Hiller said he learned a great deal about deployment of men at a fire, And in the Park if there is a fire and he is the first on the scene, he will be able to help with the preliminary tasks such as sizing up the blaze.

"The other important thing I learned is to watch out for each other at all fires," he said. "You have to know where the door is and know where the window is and most importantly know where your other men are."

Both men said there is no way former police officers can get the experience and training necessary to fight fires without practical experience.

"You can only learn the basics in the classrooms or from videos," Schulte said. "Until you feel the heat, and have your lungs filled with smoke do you get an appreciation for fighting

Schulte said there are many differences between Detroit's firefighters and Grosse Pointe Park's, but that both are very dedicated and highly skilled.

"We have excellent firefighters here," he said. "The Detroit men have a far greater frequency of fires they must put out, and experience is essential. The men in Detroit have seen it all - everything from burning high rises to vacant buildings and dumpster fires.

Park public safety officers are now on 12-hour shifts, and every other weekend they get three days off. Schulte said he likes the Park's schedule, but likes the Detroit 24-hour shift better.

"I really enjoy fighting fires," Schulte said. "It's fun and strenuous. I enjoy the work. I didn't dislike any of it. I love that 24hour shift. I think it is a good shift for public safety, Hiller and Schulte have both been police officers for awhile and while they are training to become firefighters, they have both become trained emergency medical technicians.

"Firefighting is just a different facet of the job now," Schulte said. "It's similar to being an EMT. We can respond and it feels good when you've gone in and done it." Hiller said that he feels the Detroit experience is essential if anyone is going to learn how to fight a fire. He added, however, that it cannot be made mandatory for every man on the Park force."

Whereas Schulte found the job very exciting, Hiller pointed out some of the negative aspects of being a firefighter.

"Chores are almost all taken care of in the morning," Hiller said. "Sometimes you have two, three or four hours to sit around and do nothing. It's not like it happens all the time, but that would drive me crazy if I were to do it every week. Sure you can read the paper or a book or watch soap operas in the afternoon, but it would drive me nuts. I like being out on the road on patrol,'

Legislature, governor fail the state

Tow that the Legislature has recessed for the summer, both the lawmakers and the governor are coming in for sharp criticism from the Detroit daily papers for their failure to serve the public better.

The Free Press said in an editorial Monday: "The lassitude our full-time Legislature has demonstrated since January is matched only by the lack of leadership on key issues by Gov. Blanchard."

The Detroit News, returning to a popular theme, commented editorially Sunday: "The House and the governor continue to tie up the tax relief they have promised Michigan citizens for months. State residents have a right to be suspicious of the sincerity of both.'

Tim Jones, the Free Press Lansing bureau chief, added up the Legislature's list of accomplishments for the last six months and found it wanting. He pointed to the time-consuming debate over speed limits and fuzz busters that wound up with a gubernatorial veto, the ban on Medicaid abortions that is now in the courts, the sweetened pension benefits for lawmakers and state employes, the big pay hikes for Blanchard aides and department directors and, in general, "a return to free spending in the 1988 budget" approved last week at $120 million more than the governor's recommendations.

Well, what are we to make of such critical analyses of Lansing's record in the first six months of the second Blanchard administration?

Most of the criticism appears to be welldeserved, although we tend to agree with legislators who dragged their feet on the proposed rebate to taxpayers of an estimated $170 million in income tax revenue. In part, the rebate proposal failed because of disagreements between the Democratic House and the Republican Senate on ways to cut income and property taxes. But the looming possibility of a deficit, in view of the revenue shortfall expected from the closing of more auto plants and rising unemployment, also accounted for a go-slow attitude on the tax refund.

It is true, as the Detroit News insists, the Legislature and the governor will be approving a tax increase, in effect, if they do not act to turn back to the taxpayers the $170 million windfall the state will receive because of changes in the federal income tax law that increased Michigan residents' state income tax liability.

But those who complain that the Legislature has embarked on a new spending spree also have a responsibility to suggest places in which spending should be cut. The critics seem to have almost as much trouble finding such areas as the Legislature itself had in approving a general fund budget of $6.588 billion, or about a 3.3 percent increase over current spending.

It is also difficult to oppose increases in funding for education at both the K-12 and college level and the 3 percent increase in general welfare grants which marks the first such hike in eight years. Questions could be raised, however, about the $20 million increase in payments to medical providers, the pay hikes for state administration executives and the higher pension benefits for lawmakers and other state employees.

There were other complaints about Lansing's record in 1987. One of the major complaints was over the failure to raise the state's fuel tax that helps finance highway and bridge improvements. Such improvements are badly needed, especially to help attract more tourists and to aid business and industry. But the governor's 1986 pronouncements in his re-election campaign against any new taxes apparently covers even user taxes like those on gasoline and diesel fuel.

As we said, we agree with many of the criticisms of the lawmaking activities in Lansing this year, but we would add one caveat. If the economic outlook has changed and Michigan now needs revenue from the income tax windfall to finance needed services, we would not object if the $170 million were not returned to the taxpayers, despite promises to do so. The $170 million figures out to a rebate of only about $55 per average family anyway. Nor do we think it would be unthinkable to hike the fuel tax to improve the state's infrastructure, even though the governor still opposes that needed action.

The problem is that such actions require leadership that is not forthcoming from either the governor or the Legislature. If the people are willing to assume such burdens, they could make their feelings known to both the legislators and the governor before September. But we really don't expect much to happen unless a crisis occurs and a new sense of urgency arises in Lansing.

Detroit retains equity fund

fore the state Legislature recessed for the summer, it finally approved Danother $40.7 million in special "equity" aid for the major cities of the state with most of the money going to the city of

A $34.5 million "equity" fund for Detroit includes $16.4 million for the Detroit Institute of Arts; $3.5 million for the Detroit Historical Museum; $2.5 million for the Detroit Zoo, and $4 million for the Detroit Police Department. Outstate cities get another $6.2 million, which brings the total to $40.7 million.

Earlier, the Senate had voted to eliminate the equity aid for both Detroit and outstate cities on the grounds there was little "equity" in them and that they were "political grab bags." There is some truth to the charges but there is also some truth to the contention that Detroit's cultural assets are used and appreciated by many non-residents of Detroit. Therefore, it is argued, the state has a responsibility to help support these institutions. We agree with that justification for equity aid.

Detroit's equity aid was first recommended by former GOP Gov. William Milliken who saw the necessity of state help for the city and who came up with the idea of state responsibility for institutions used and appreciated by many non-residents of the city. Two years ago, the Legislature created the outstate equity package.

There is, of course, some question as to how many cultural assets of statewide interest and concern in the outstate cities are benefited by equity funds. But there is also some question as to whether Detroit should receive equity funding to help it host special events.

Perhaps it could be argued that the state should help keep law and order during such events, but it seems to us that if additional police protection is required during promotional events, it ought to be paid for by the city or the businesses that benefit.

Yet $40.7 million is but a small proportion of a state budget of more than $6.58 billion to finance the Department of Social Services, K-12 school aid, state universities and colleges, and the many other departments and services of state government. Overall, the proposed spending for the year beginning Oct. 1 represents about a 6 percent increase over the current fiscal year.

That appears to be a fairly small increase, but it may cause trouble because Michigan's unemployment rate is on the rise again.

If so, then the "equity" funding for Detroit and outstate cities at least will help preserve some of the state's cultural institutions in another economic downturn. They say that man does not live by bread alone. That is difficult to believe when there's an absence of bread and yet that point does justify state spending for cultural activities covered in the equity packages approved by the state Legislature.

NANOO, nanoo.

Enforcement now the issue

ov. James Blanchard deserves credit for courage in vetoing legislation that would have raised the speed limit on rural freeways to 65 mph even though his action was unpopular with many motorists.

While 35 or more other states have approved the higher limit permitted under new federal legislation, Michigan apparently is the only one in which a governor vetoed a 65 mph limit. But Blanchard's reasoning, in our opinion, was sound. He said, among other things: "We cannot separate speed from safety. To sign this legislation would violate my duty to protect our citizens."

The governor's comment referred to his earlier threat to veto the measure unless it banned the so-called fuzz busters, the electronic devices used by motorists to detect police radar. The governor's veto came on the day the Legislature recessed for the summer, but it appears unlikely that the issue will be revived even in the fall unless there is a popular demand for it. The governor did say, however, that he hoped agreement on higher speed limits could be reached in the fall and suggested a task force to study the matter.

Some legislators now take the position that the issue is irrelevant because most motorists are driving 65 mph anyway. But Secretary of State Richard Austin, state police director Ritchie Davis and state highway director James Pitz all supported Blanchard's veto and nothing was said about not enforcing the current 55 mph limit. Supporters of the 55 mph limit have said right along that the higher limit would encourage speeds in excess of 65 mph.

Current practice indicates that most motorists will be safe from arrest if they don't exceed 60 mph on either urban or rural freeways when conditions permit that

A state police official, interviewed on television last week, granted that officers are given considerable latitude in enforcing the current 55 mph limit. One trouble with such a viewpoint is that it tends to discredit all law enforcement.

With Michigan being the odd man out among those states that have sought to increase the limit, it may make some sense to give the state police more discretion in deciding when a ticket should be issued, but such a policy surely does not provide much help for motorists.

As we've indicated, we support the governor's veto, but think he and the appropriate officials ought to issue public guidelines to the state police and motorists so that the driving public would have a better idea of the state's enforcement policy. Otherwise, we could have more confusion, more speeding and more accidents under a 55 mph limit that is not a limit than we would have under a 65 mph limit that is fairly enforced.

Begin drug education earlier

To the Editor:

On Jan. 14, Grosse Pointe South's Tower printed the results of a drug and alcohol survey done on South students. These results were not very surprising but do show that something must be done about the drug and alcohol problem with the students in the Grosse Pointes. The only solution to this growing problem is education at younger ages.

As of right now, education on drugs and alcohol doesn't start until middle school. By this time, the student has already begun experimenting with drugs and alcohol.

The schools should get kids at the youngest age possible, third or fourth grade. At this age, they should simply be told the accurate facts and then make their own decision not to use drugs. If they feel pressured into a decision, the students may feel intimidated and their curiosity will lead them into, at the very least, limited experimentation.

Drug and alcohol education is absolutely the best solution to this problem. Something must be done before this problem leads to destruction.

They do it their way

My friends Ron and Linda have decided to leave Tinytown, Michigan, and move to Smalltown, New York. They're looking for a lot of things: better schools for their kids, a sense of community, artistic fulfillment for Ron, a photographer. They want a bigger church than the one we all go to in Utica, the one John Corrado is fond of comparing to an underground cell of early Christians.

Ron and Linda like the challenge of a new experience, so deciding what they want and going after it didn't seem so unusual.

The other day, Ron went in to give notice to his boss, whose reaction was interesting - and a little unexpected.

"I've always heard that there principle, risk-takers, people who pocketful of cards to leave on car opted for home and hearth. A but it's useful to know that it's didn't choose the easy route, but this is the first time I've met one," he told Ron.

That guy doesn't know my brother-in-law.

Kirk is like a teakettle at perpetual whistle. Filled with righteous indignation, he takes on one issue after another and never does anything the easy way. He has subjected himself and his family - to a multitude of inconveniences to prove his independence and willingness to live his own lifestyle.

My favorite magazine at the moment is the "Washington Monthly," an inside-the-beltway watchdog of the foibles and folly of government - especially bureaucracy. It takes the risk every month of rousing some powerful person's ire.

The editor, Charles Peters, has led the kind of life I always carelessly parked across the side-called in to figure out what had out of its doldrums. Now he gets to hold forth in print and vent his many opinions as he will.

The fun thing about "Washington Monthly" is a couple of columns that by their very titles illustrate what kind of a guy Peters is. "Tilting at Windmills" and "Tidbits and Outrages" are a compendium of would-you-believe-this, throw-your-hands-upin-the-air-in-dismay stories. The kind you can't do much about, going on. Stuff like the IRS computer woes, where employees were throwing tax returns in the wastebasket, ends up in these columns.

It takes some nerve to lay your opinions on the line. It's taking the risk of unpopularity. The payoff can come if you have some role in improving a situation, but there are those who would argue that a magazine (or, usually, a newspaper) has no business having opinions, or at least, no business airing them.

One of my early journalistic high points was hearing Kirk Cheyfitz, then with the first Metropolitan Detroit, speak on objectivity. Cheyfitz said that being human and being objective are incompatible and that it is preferable to state opinions publicly and reasonably than to strive for an objectivity that is impossible to reach.

An attempt to be evenhanded can lead to a mushy presentation of opposing viewpoints from predictable sources that nevertheless sheds no light on the subject. Bob and I sat in the audience for a taping of a public forum on the Detroit incinerator a few weeks ago. The four panelists knew their facts and held strong opinions, but instead of enlightening the audience, they just yelled at each other. But everybody had an equal opportunity; it was even-handed.

A newspaper writer shouldn't necessarily be only an invisible purveyor of facts. Analysis and conclusions are an important part - which is where outrage can come in.

It's all too easy to lose your sense of outrage. The older we get, the more we see, the more we're likely to accept as the status quo. "You can't fight city hall" becomes the rallying cry.

It's because they still have a sense of what ought to be that I admire Charles Peters and Doug and Betty and Kirk and Ron and Linda. I feel sorry for the guy who doesn't know anybody who operates in a risky arena.

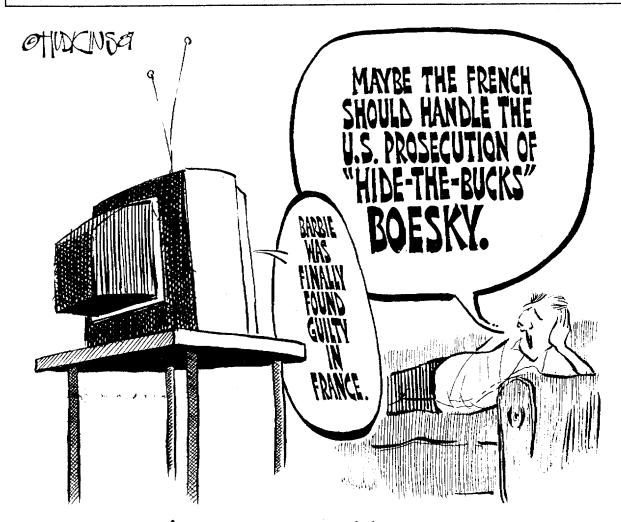

But I do wish they wouldn't

In Grosse Pointe, the Park council once again resolved to prepare a report on the advantages and disadvantages of incorporating as a city. But the News reported that the "real issue" of whether to combine all the Pointes into one city was still being ignored. The "obvious taxpayer savings" is "secretly acknowledged" by a few council members, the paper said, but discussion never comes out in the open because of the "strong disposition for rigid home rule.' The paper called the incorporation issue "piffling."

A recently approved Senate amendment to a higher education budget bill has stirred up quite a lot of controversy among University of Michigan officials, alumni and friends. Although the amendment was not intended to arouse the ire of U of M aficionados, maybe it did because the shoe

At any rate, I supported the amendment and helped persuade my Senate colleagues to vote for it, although I did not sponsor the proposal. This amazingly controversial measure requires that qualified Michigan applicants be given priority for admission to our 15 state-funded colleges and universities.

It was introduced following reports that the University of Michigan's overall enrollment in undergraduate, graduate and professional programs has increased from 26 percent out-ofstate students to 37.5 percent during the past decade. Most of Michigan's 14 other public colleges and universities have nowhere near that percentage of out-of-state students. University of Michigan officials have said that the almost $5,600 extra in tuition and fees that they obtain from each out-of-state student is a major reason for the rise in their out-of-state enrollment.

Michigan students deserve fair consideration

I backed this amendment because it's anti-elitist and pro-Democratic. We have to look at what the function of the Legislature is in providing money to the state's public colleges and universities and our first obligation is to the people of Michigan. After all, they help support these schools with their tax dollars and it would be very unfair to denv their qualified sons and daughters admission to our state-supported schools because some administrator wants to make more money on out-of-state tuition.

After the Senate adopted this amendment, U of M President Harold Shapiro complained that it might "undermine the historic mission of the University of Michigan to strive for excellence in the quality of education provided its students as well as undermine the vitality of all public higher education provided in Michigan."

I don't believe that will happen or I would not have voted for the amendment. No one denies that the University of Michigan is a great school with an outstanding reputation for academic excellence. In fact, it is because of its fine reputation that I, and the other Senators who voted for this amendment, want to make sure that Michigan's qualified high school graduates get the chance they have earned academically and their parents have paid for with their tax dollars - to attend

I voted for the amendment on behalf of the children of Michigan and to send a message to our public school administrator that they can't run these colleges and universities without demonstrating accountability to the people of Michigan. How to lessen cancer risk

Outdoor cooking has become a summer tradition and the charcoal or gas grill is a common fixture in most backyards. But recent stories about health risks associated with barbecuing have made people wonder how safe this form of food preparation is.

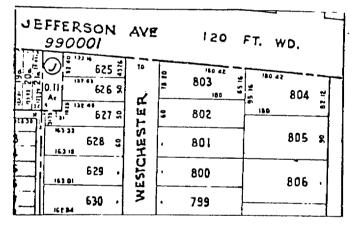

According to the American Institute for Cancer Research, there is very little health risk in the traditional outdoor barbecue as long as it is done in moderation. While the institute does note that there have been increased cancer risks associated with consumption of grilled foods, this increase occurs mainly in countries where cooking over charcoal or open fires is the principal means of preparing food and where daily consumption of such foods is considered normal.

For most Americans, the summer barbecue should be a time of enjoyment. To help make it so, the institute has prepared a booklet called, "Facts You Should Know About Ourdoor Cooking.' To receive a free copy, send a stamped, self-addressed, business-sized envelope to American Institute for Cancer Risk, Dept. OC2, Washington, D.C. 20069.

1. The appeal of Mr. Albert H. Zimmerman, owner of the premises located at 178 Lakeview, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a Building Permit for the construction of an addition to the front is his existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that:

a. The residence located on the foregoing premises is nonconforming for reason that it is in violation of the minimum front setback of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.

b. The proposed addition on the front would further infringe upon the minimum front yard requirement of 25 feet, leaving a front yard of 17 feet thereby requiring a variance from the provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance.

2. The appeal of Mr. Ross Kogel, owner of the premises located at 69 Meadow Lane, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a permit for the construction of a detached garage located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that the building plan of the proposed structure shows the detached garage with a side yard of 2 feet and a rear yard of 1'6", while Section 1503, Item 3 of the City's Zoning Ordinance states that accessory buildings must have a minimum side yard and rear yard of 3 feet unless there is a reserved easement, thereby requiring a variance from such provisions to permit the construction of the proposed garage.

The Hearings will be public. Interested property owners or residents of the City are invited to attend.

Berries and vegetables are about three weeks ahead of schedule, according to some of Grosse Pointe's more knowledgeable gardeners.

Gardens in the Grosse Pointes aren't paying any attention to the dates on the calendar, rather they're moving along at their own pace.

That pace has put the potatoes, broccoli, lettuce and snap beans about three weeks ahead of schedule. Local gardeners feel the mild winter in conjunction with the unusually hot weather has prompted vegetables to arrive and appear in salad bowls already.

George Vincent, 71, a longtime Farms resident and member of the Grosse Pointe Men's Garden Club, said the heavy rain weeks ago made things difficult in his garden. The tomato plants probably suffered the most. They would look fine in the early morning, but once the sun hit them, they would look Vincent said that good mulch and compost are the two most important ingredients in the soil that makes for a good garden. He has a small area at the rear of his yard in which grass clippings, plant cuttings and any other plant material, like leaves, goes into. Next spring, he'll add the mulch to the soil. Vincent said the nutrients and mulch being added will hold water all are very important to a successful garden.

Another great addition to the soil is horse manure, which is available inexpensively.

Harold Lee, 67, a City resident and past Men's Garden Club president, said he hasn't ever seen potatoes this early at the size they are right now. He said they are eating size, and in some gardens, broccoli and cauliflower have already been harvested.

"We give a lot of our vegetables away," Vincent said. "It really is a great hobby. It gives you a chance to work on something and when it's harvest time, you get a great sense of satisfaction from having made things grow. Then you get to eat what you've grown."

We have all seen it, or at least heard of it. A young child takes a bike up to the store, parks it up against the wall. When he comes out, ice cream cone in hand, he discovers that the bike Mom and Dad bought him has disappeared.

It may not occur just that way, but it is a similar scenario that happens with greater frequency in the Grosse Pointe area. At least once a week during the school year, a bike disappears from a local elementary or high school. Several weeks ago, seven bikes were reported stolen in one city alone in one week, while other cities reported several taken.

It's gotten to the point where Farms Detective Earl Field said he's tired of the thefts and is going to do everything in his power to see that parents and their children learn to protect their property better.

"Last year we had 26 taken all year," Field said. "Already in 1987 we have 22 stolen.'

Field said that inevitably a parent will buy a bike for a child and buy a bike lock as well. The problem, Field said, is that the locks are often made of lightweight chain links or plastic-

When a bike is stolen, there is one way to improve chances of recovery, and that is to get it licensed.

When it is licensed with the police, the department has a record of the bike's serial number. If someone has just taken it for a quick joy ride, and even if the stick-on license has been removed, police can track down the bike's owner.

Once the owner reports the bike as stolen and turns in the serial number to police, the information is put into a law enforcement computer network, and can be tracked down if found anywhere in the country.

The sad fact is that many bikes are found which have not been licensed and the owner is out of luck. Many cities hold yearly auctions where the property rooms are filled to capacity with good quality, good condition bikes.

A trip to the Orient used to be an extended vacation covering several countries and including extensive sightseeing. More recently, one destination packages have sprung up at rates which are low enough to make such a trip not only affordable, but too good to pass up.

Hong Kong, Seoul, Singapore, Malaysia, Bangkok, Tokyo, Bali or just about any other place which has always been your secret dream is now available on a short, reasonably priced package. These trips usually include a half day sightseeing tour and lots of leisure time but we can, of course, book as much additional sightseeing as you wish. You can also choose the category of hotel you prefer, ranging from lower priced budget hotels to the most luxurious. You won't be forced to be on a tour bus every morning at the crack of dawn unless you want to plan your trip with as much sightseeing as you can squeeze in.

Inasmuch as the Orient is a shopper's paradise, most travelers prefer to alternate sightseeing with leisure time for bargain hunting and you won't need to look very hard to find the bargains. In fact, it's almost addictive and the "Orient shopping habit" is tough to break.

In addition to shopping and sightseeing, you'll experience culinary delights in any of these countries. The variety is endless and the price range can be as low or expensive as you wish. Clients who have been apprehensive about Oriental food usually come back raving about the great meals they've had and astounded at the reasonable prices.

If you can't decide where to go on vacation, come on in and we'll be happy to discuss the various options available for a trip to the Orient. It's a great vacation with countless choices in addition to the one destination packages I've men-

They also discussed current medication and side effects.

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

Home garbage incinerators went out with... I was going to say miniskirts, but that's pretty meaningless these days. Actually, they went out with the paper bag and they've been outlawed by county ordinance for the last year.

That has not stopped a few people from continuing to burn their garbage, either in a home incinerator or in the fireplace. The county health department has sent an inspector to the Grosse Pointe area in response to complaints from residents.

Offenders have not been ticketed or prosecuted, according to the health department's Howard Murray, of the air pollution division. He is trying the informational approach first. The department issued a press release about the ban, published in the Grosse Pointe News last November, and Murray is sending copies of it to offenders.

"Home incinerators used for burning household trash are now history in Wayne County,' states the release. The county's 1985 air pollution control ordinance allowed for a one-year phase-out of the incinerators, effective in November. The division had issued permits for more than 4,000 of the devices over the years; the last permit was issued in 1979.

But the burning goes on. "There are five around us that do it," said one Woods resident. "It gets pretty smelly when you're sitting on the back porch.'

The resident said the neighborhood burning is a regular event and that neighbors have not been responsive to casual comments. "I don't want to make a formal complaint," the resident said. "I want to keep it on a friendly basis."

There's no question about the odor, Murray said. It doesn't smell remotely like wood.

"The things really stink," he

The saga of the home garbage incinerator illustrates American feelings toward conservation and convenience. They became popular both as a way to decrease landfilling and to avoid scrubbing out garbage cans. At one time, some cities had ordinances requiring new houses to have them.

"They were a great alternative to landfills in that sense,' said William Church, manager of media relations for MichCon, which used to sell, install and service incinerators and other appliances. "I'm told the advent of the plastic bag had something to do with (the incinerator's demise.)"

The devices were highly popular during the '60s, Church said. It's hard to remember that plastic garbage bags just weren't around then. MichCon stopped marketing incinerators before 1970, when they started to wane in popularity.

"Frankly, I was surprised at your inquiry (after all these years)," Church said.

Incinerators are not banned everywhere. Murray said this ban applies only to Wayne County. However, people who own property in other counties should check with the local health department before burning garbage.

Nurse of the Year competition opens

The March of Dimes is now accepting nominations for its fourth annual Nurse of the Year Award. The recipient will be honored for outstanding efforts in improving the quality of nursing care to mothers and infants in Michigan. The focus of this year's selection will be on nurses working in a clinical/office setting, one-on-one, with mothers and babies.

The recipient will be chosen by a committee drawn from the Perinatal Association of Michigan, the Michigan Nurses Association, the Nurses Association of the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology and the Michigan Department of Public Health.

The winner will be presented with a $500 award and a plaque at the Perinatal Association of Michigan annual meeting.

Nominations should be sent to Mary Ellen Gleeson, Director of Programs, Southeast Michigan March of Dimes, 17117 W. Nine Mile Road, Suite 820, Southfield, Mich. 48075. The deadline is Aug. 15. For more information, call the March of Dimes at 423-3200.

That, too, was a concern raised at Monday's board meeting.

"How much money could we be talking about for required additional parking?" asked trustee Carl Anderson. "We really don't know what they could require."

Superintendent John Whritner said he wasn't expecting the Farms to ask for more than that. "I don't think there's anything that implies going beyond the 54 lots on Kercheval," he said. "That's the worst-case scenario."

The agreement also calls for the board to sell the Richard Lot to the city, which is currently leasing it from the schools. That transaction is not expected to occur until after a vote on the library bond issue in November.

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

The following essay was written by Amy Balok while she was in the sixth grade at St. Paul School. It was an assignment for art class. She is the daughter of Joseph and Joan Balok of the Farms.

What is Art?

Art is a splash of color on a dove-white canvas, a sculpture with every feature complete. A collage of colors that sometimes speak. Art is the imagination of one man or being.

Art can be serious. Art can be funny. It's whatever you want it to be. From a painting to a wire figure twisted into humans or animals. Art is something we can all enjoy. A picture made of yarn, a collage made of pictures ing and setting of the sun. The of everyday scenes. A sculpture above our head like a giant.

Nugent selected for science camp

Tim Nugent, son of Richard and Mary Nugent of Grosse Pointe Farms, has been selected to represent Michigan at the 1987 National Youth Science Camp held near Bartow, W.V. Nugent will be one of 102 recent high school graduates from throughout the nation attending the three-week camp, which will run from June 29 to July 20.

Students spend three weeks at a rustic campsite in the Monongahela National Forest. While in West Virginia, campers attend lectures given by leading scientists from around the nation. Lecturers for the 1987 camp include jo Dr. Susan Gottesman, senior investigator at the National Cancer Institute, National Institutes of Health, Dr. Thomas Spelsberg, professor of biochemistry at the Mayo Graduate School of Medicine, and two research scientists from United Technologies who will speak about advanced computer systems and materials science. The delegates also participate in outdoor activities and a trip to Washington, D.C., where they attend a Senate luncheon held in their honor.

The National Youth Science Camp experience is provided to its 102 participants at no charge, transportation included.

In addition to being selected as a delegate to the science camp, Nugent was named as a National Merit Commended Student, a Phi Beta Kappa Outstanding Scholar and a Detroit News Outstanding High School Graduate. He also participated in baseball, Ski-Hi Ski Club and National Honor Society. His main interest is golfing. This fall Nugent plans to major in engineering or business at Duke University.

She was born Lillian Beall March 25, 1896 in Lima, Ohio, where her father was editor of the Lima News. She helped read proof and wrote society news before going off to a hospital in White Plains, N.Y. to train as a nurse. World War I was on and there was a shortage of nurses, but as she recalls, all she learned to do was make beds. She said she had visions of helping to win the war and there she was, making and unmaking beds.

Instead she made her way to the Shubert office in New York and landed a role in the play, "Her Soldier Boy." She traveled with the play along the east coast and the southern states and thus began her long career in the theater.

While she was on tour, she said Fred Astaire and his sister danced in the same hotel where they were performing. Back in New York, she got roles in other plays and also began singing at night at Rector's, which she described as an elegant club. Diamond Jim Brady came every night, she said.

With the war on, New York was full of uniformed men. She met a Commander Beech, nicknamed Daddy Beech, who invited her to christen the Manchuria, which was being called into service with her sister ship, the Mauritania.

Hicks recalls that New York was a whirlwind. Then came the armistice. "It was a joyous, mad, hysterical day, with millions of Americans, solid masses of people. I got caught in this maelstrom of ticker tape - a wild, singing, yelling mob. You went where the moo took you. It was troit though her mentor, Harriet all so joyous," she writes.

She married David Denison, who died a few months later. His death, she said, was war-related. She returned to her parents' home in Ohio, and after a couple of years, made her way to DeIngersoll.

She went to work at the Detroit Free Press in commercial advertising and it was there that she met Charles Cornelius Hicks, whom she later married. They were married 25 years

Lillian Hicks' paintings reveal an eclectic nature. Besides acrylics, she uses markers and pencils.

She began doing solo dramas, a new art form devised, she said, by her and Lady Mayer. It was a one-woman show in which she acted out the various roles. The first was "Beloved Friend," about Tchaikovsky and Nadjedja von Meck. Next came a drama about Jenny Lind, then Dolly

Madison, then Becky Sharp. During this period, she was a member of Fine Arts. In her 50 years with the group, she acted and directed. She appeared as Madame Arnfield in Stephen Sondheim's "A Little Night Music" when she was 81. Hicks was also manager of the Theater Guild at the Fisher Theater. She traveled to New York for the Theater Guild many times, "from the other side of the footlights." When Sophie Tucker, Ted Lewis and George Jessel came to the Fisher, Hicks was their stage manager.

She also taught voice. She had a piano in the room that is now a gallery for her art. And for 10 years, she sang with the Leonard Smith band.

She has some favorite quotes that she delivers like the professional actress she is. One is: "First you learn the plan, then the technique, but only through their mastery is freedom realized. But whether the resulting composition is a winged creation or a pedestrian annotation depends on the individual genius." That applies to anything, she

But her favorite is something by Alexander Woolcott who said that his knowledge was not learned in an academy, it was learned from a tune in his head. "The tune in your head," Hicks said, "is your imagination. Actors have only bodies, voices and imagination. I'm made up of nine-tenths imagination and it grows every day.

She adds, "I still have many tunes in my head."

Local booksellers offer a potpourri of lively topics

By Pat Paholsky News Editor

Grosse Pointe is a bibliophile's heaven. Whatever one's heart's desire when it comes to the printed word, the odds are it can be obtained here.

There are two general bookstores - Grosse Pointe Book Village, which is locally owned, and Waldenbooks, a national chain that bills itself as the world's largest bookseller. For used and out-of-print books, there's James Monnig, Bookseller, and for anything pertaining to travel, there's Banana Republic, which stocks 4,000 volumes. Hedy's Book and Gift Shop and Krieg-Maltese Religious Supplies, both on Mack in the Woods, have a selection of religious books. And of course, there's always the public library...

The Grosse Pointe Book Village, owned by Gwen Samuel, has been in business for 13 years. It moved to its current location at 17051 Kercheval two years ago.

If you like owning books signed by the author, this is the place to come. The store hosts about five authors a year, and this year to date, has had Elmore Leonard, Robert Lacey and William Kienzle. Samuel also arranges the Book and Author luncheon held every year at the War Memorial.

The 3,600-square-foot building contains a complete children's book section, and the theater section, according to Samuel, is probably one of the largest in the Midwest. "That's because almost all of us in the store are in the theater or associated with Grosse Pointe Theater," she said.

The store, at full inventory, will stock 20,000 titles, Samuel said.

The Grosse Pointe market is interesting, intelligent and challenging, she said. "They want to come in and talk about books and not just the best sellers. We have a large group of people interested in history and biographies and we cater to them. There's just a tremendous variation of interest and you just can't take the Grosse Pointe reading public and fit them into any category.'

Samuel said she got into the business because she's been a writer since she was 6 years old. "I've always read avariciously, I was a teacher of English and social studies and I'm a book person and have always been.'

The store employs about 10 people part time and three full time. It offers a host of other items, such a puzzles, playing cards, books on tape, both abridged and unabridged, sheet music, posteards that include scenes of Grosse Pointe, greeting cards, posters, calendars, maps, magazines, games, foreign language tapes and discounted books.

Grosse Pointe Book Village will also special order books, gift wrap free and ship them anywhere U.P.S.

Waldenbooks, which opened at 16980 Kercheval nearly two yeas ago, also carries a line of items not necessarily book-related, such as stuffed animals, video cassettes, greeting cards and maps.

Manager Mark Walters said that when he first started in the business in 1982, bookstores sold books and magazines. When the reference - titles one wouldn't video craze hit in 1983, it forced bookstores into carrying video and audio cassettes and that led to other items.

Walters, who last worked at a bookstore in a shopping mall, said he enjoys working in Grosse Pointe. As a book lover who enjoys owning hard covers. Walters said, "That's one of the things I've enjoyed most (in Grosse Pointe). We do not sell a lot of paperbacks here and it's a lot easier to talk about books with customers. It feels more like a neighborhood."

The average inventory is about 12,000 titles per store, Walters said, and the company stocks about 40,000 titles annually. Waldenbooks is owned by K mart Corp. and there are 1,100 Waldenbooks in 50 states. There are, under the Walden name, six divisions.

Another is Waldenkids, a learning center for children that has just been started. There are 18 stores in the country, none yet in Michigan. Then there's Waldenbooks and More, a super store in which almost every title will be available. A store is scheduled to open in the Detroit area in the fall. There are Readers Markets, a discount store; Waldensoftware, which will deal with computers; and Waldenvideo, a video store.

"We sell a lot more literary type books," Walters said. Everybody here reads the New York Times Book Review and they'll come in for those books."

James Monnig, who at one time dealt primarily with rare books on Mack Avenue, has expanded his services at his current location at 15133 Kercheval to used books, which he buys, sells and trades. He carries some new books - cooking, art and find in a general bookstore, he said.

He rents videotapes - classic or vintage films like "African Queen," "The Thin Man," "The Outlaw" and "Rain," and newer, limited market films, like "Ran." And the price is right -$2 for two days.

Monnig also stocks old sheet music, old and new postcards and a line of note cards.

Monnig, whose background is in finance, got into the business after he was laid off from the Bank of the Commonwealth in 1971. "I traveled around the world for a couple of years and realized it was time to get back to work, so I opened a used bookstore." He added, "I always wanted to have a used book-

His patrons range from 4 to 90 and from the person who browses while a chauffer waits in front to the person who takes a bus to get there. Now in his 13th year, Monnig has built up a clientele from Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor, Flint and the far eastern suburbs as well as the local area.

"The young people in the area read way above their heads," he said. "I'll see 7- and 8-year-olds who have read all of Stephen King and 10- and 12-year-olds who are into pretty heavy science fiction and mystery beyond the Hardy Boys."

While it's unusual to have an author signing books in a used bookstore, Monnig will host such an event sometime this year. William Darby, a local author for whom Monnig provided research, wrote "Necessary American Fictions," a study of the literature of the '50s.

Monnig said mysteries, which always had an audience, are enjoying increased popularity due to the writings of Michigan authors Elmore Leonard, William Kienzle and Loren Estleman.

Westerns, too, are popular, he said ... "You'll find a guy in a $500 suit standing next to the guy going to the factory (in the Western section.)"

Banana Republic at 16824 Kercheval, one of 77 in the United States, is one of only 20 stores in the country that are also bookstores. The complete name is Banana Republic Travel and Safari Clothing Co. and Travel Book Store.

Manager Mike Schieble said that besides a complete selection of travel books, the store carries maps, guidebooks, foreign language tapes and specialty books, such as a book on marathons that are held throughout the world and a book on the golf courses of the world.

One of the services the store offers is a toll-free climate desk number. A traveler can call 1-800-325-7270 and get a weather forecast for the next three days of any place in the world. The climate desk will also give the current exchange rate for any country and political information that could affect a traveler's plans.

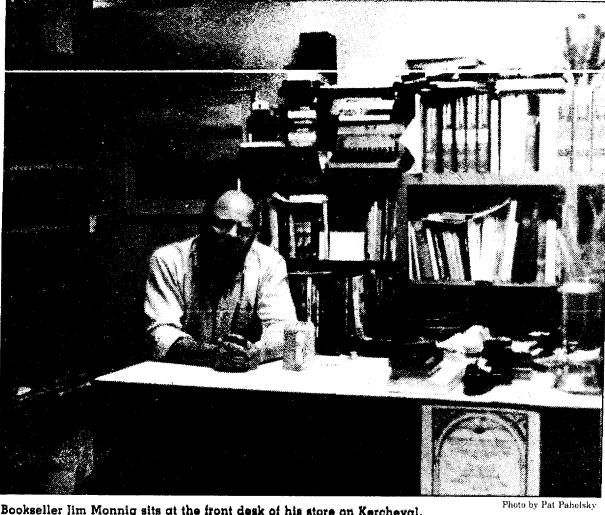

Vickie Horsely is the store's travel specialist who will help anyone plan a trip. She recently helped a couple in their 50s, who were traveling to Europe, plan a trip. They were taking their mother, in her 80s, along, and they wanted to arrange day trips that would accommodate an older person.

The bookstore is an integral part of the business, Walters said, "Like our clothing, our books are geared for the beginner or the seasoned traveler."

For books of a religious nature, Hedy's Book and Gift Shop at 19451 Mack in the Woods, offers thousands of titles for both its Protestant and Catholic customers. Owner Eleanor Hedman has been in business for 17 years. She takes mail and phone orders and says her clientele comes from throughout the state.

Hedy's also sells church sup-

Krieg-Maltese Religious Supplies, formerly Kreig Brothers, also sells Christian books. Amy Maltese bought the store, which had been in business for 50 years, in January. Located at 19595 Mack, between 7 and 8 Mile, the store stocks thousands of titles, according to Maltese, and offers myriad items from church furniture to vestments to greeting cards and candles.

A new directory listing all Amoco Oil Company service stations in Michigan and northern Indiana that offer a program to assist physically disabled motorists with their gasoline purchases, is now available. The directory lists more than 250 Amoco stations in the area which are participating.

The directory is available from various state agencies, including the Statewide Communication and Dissemination Systems, 300 S. Capitol Ave., Suite 1311, Lansing, Mich. 48933.

Amoco dealers offering the Handicapped Service Program have agreed to pump gasoline for disabled motorists at designated self-serve islands, and charge them the self-service price. Motorists can identify Amoco locations offering the service by looking for the nationallyrecognized handicapped logo - a person in a wheelchair. These signs are posted in windows of participating stations and at the designated self-serve pump 🕾

Motorists without handicapped license plates can obtain a visor card by showing an Amoco dealer an I.D. or other card certifying their disability. Disabled motorists should prominently display the visor sign each time they wish the service to be furnished, look for the handicapped service island, and notify dealers of their presence by honking their horn.

Local participating stations are Rick Gram, 19100 Mack; Michael Onofrey, 20675 Mack; and Thomas Onofrey, 66 Kercheval.

Currently, two endoscopy procedure rooms are adjacent to the hospital's emergency services. They contain equipment used by physicians to view the stomach, esophagus and large intestine. Remodeling of the area began this spring. When completed midsummer, the area's recovery and holding area will be enlarged providing greater patient privacy and comfort.

The hospital plans to install a centralized computer system. The main computer will be installed on the lower level. Installation is scheduled to begin this September with completion in late December. The second part of this project is installation of computer terminals throughout the hospital in 1988.

Air conditioning and new roofing

New air conditioning units are being installed providing yearround cooling to the laboratory, emergency room and radiology. The project is scheduled for early August completion. The roof garden area is receiving a new asphalt roof to repair water leakage. In the process the roof garden deck will be expanded. The project is scheduled to be completed late summer.

Eastside shelter manages on a shoestring budget

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

Twelve cents a pound is a pretty good deal for food - and it's available for certain community groups from the Gleaners at that price. But the price is too steep for the Eastside Emergency Center, which hasn't bought any Gleaners' food since it scraped together enough cash to pay the last bill.

Instead, the center relies on donated food for its neighborhood soup kitchen. Sometimes it works out pretty well. Other times, there are shortages.

At the end of the month when food stamps run out, the center routinely tries to handle 150 people a day. "That's how many we have on-site to eat, but we don't always have enough food," said the Rev. Ann Johnson, director of the center.

At Christmas, the center spent $8,000 on food baskets - and turned away more than 300 fam-

The shelter is the only one on Detroit's east side, Johnson believes. "I know we're the only self-owned, self-operated black group that offers these services,'

Thomas got a big surprise, arriving at the center on the very day it was being closed down for non-compliance with zoning regulations. "Here were all these newspeople and cameras," he

His work cut out for him, for six weeks Thomas helped the agency deal with the city so the center could be reopened.

Ironically, the shelter was closed just at the time it was reorganized in order to become more professional, Thomas said. It had operated in two churches: St. John on Kercheval at Lakewood and St. Anne on Gratiot. The reorganization incorporated the shelters separately from the churches, but are still renting space there. A board of directors with professional backgrounds in accounting, law and business was formed.

But the core of administrators and workers remained and the program was unchanged. The center at St. John Church opened again in six weeks; the center at St. Anne is only open for food distribution.

"We asked for $100,000 from MSHDA (the state housing authority) and when we get approval, we hope to be a showcase over there," Johnson said. 'We're going strictly by the book.

The Kercheval center is anything but a showcase. Administrative offices are jammed with desks. The neatly made beds in the shelter have torn mattresses. The blankets are folded and stacked on a table for lack of storage space. There is a pile of unusable beds, missing head or footboards. Kitchen cupboards are only half-full. Light bulbs are burned out. The chatter of 150 kids eating lunch ricochets around the bare, stuffy room.

The center needs furniture. food and all kinds of baby supplies. Clothing, toothpaste, garbage bags. Almost everything except bread, which is amply and regularly supplied by two nuns.

"We've got mothers we're putting into houses (arranging rentals), but what good is a house if you don't have anything to sleep on, you don't have a fork or a spoon?" said Johnson.

Prime Time for Senior Citizens How to avoid the joys of aging

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

It's better to be rich than poor, and any honest older person will admit that it's better to be young than old.

The first condition, being rich, is possible to achieve by hard work, good luck and the right timing. There is only one antidote to old age, however, and it's not at all an attractive alternative.

So it's best to accept the aches and pains and problems that are part of the aging process. And that doesn't mean being miserable. On the contrary, meeting each day with a light heart and a heavy dose of humor can make those added years happier. Laugh and the world laughs with you, even when you laugh at yourself.

These observations are brought home in "The Joys of Aging and How to Avoid Them" by Phyllis Diller (Doubleday). Her ability to combine comedy and truth makes her book fun to read and offers insights into how it is possible to accept the toll the years take and still retain a zest for life.

In the foreword she writes, "This book is a primer on how to look and stay young" but she readily admits that it's a little incongruous for her to write such a book, "somewhat like Don Rickles writing a book on common courtesy." She says she has dedicated her life to staying young. She admits to having worked so hard at it that "it's beginning to age me." She promises to give inexpensive practical ways to make old age work for you and advises you to not worry if you can't afford plastic surgery, because you can always touch up the date of birth on your driver's license. She concludes that there are no magic formulas for getting younger. "You have to start to think young, talk young, act young," she advises. "Get rid of and re- healthiest thing you can do is feel place everything that even suggest old."

warns that "not everyone needs a facelift. You only consider it if your face is sagging or if you occasionally trip over your neck."

Rejuvenation is another subject researched by Diller. One method cited is to join the people in the Caucasus Mountains of the Ukraine where the natives, through diet, exercise, climate, mental outlook and "Never having to listen to Musak in elevators," live to the ripe old age of

Clinics and spas come under scrutiny. She seems to favor a Health Institute in Berne, Switzerland, where patrons pay $1,000 a day to receive injections of lamb placenta. She bases that conclusion on the theory that she has never seen a lamb that looked

Health is an important contributor to a happy old age, although Diller places it third on her list, number one being gold and number two, jewelry.

"Thank God, I feel better than I look," she writes. Generally most of us can echo those sentiments, thanks to improved medical care. She begins this discussion with a story about the man who went to the doctor complaining of aches and pains. "There's nothing wrong with you," the doctor said. "I know — I've been a doctor for 38 years."

"That may be so," replied the man, but I've been a patient for

Being a patient for 65 years is no mean accomplishment and can only be achieved by attention to diet and exercise. Of course, first it is necessary to cure any ailments. Diller has a whole list of remedies from acupuncture to home remedies. She is convinced that beer is brain food.

Diller also advises that the good about yourself. She had a wig, capped teeth, false eyelash-On the subject of facelifts, es, fake fingernails, rear padding Diller is both pro and con. She and a silicone job. She then went Interest rates on Adjustable Rate Mortgages are the lowest ever at Standard Federal.

30-Year ARM

Before you buy or refinance your home, consider the advantages of our Adjustable Rate Mortgage (ARM).

Many of our ARM loan customers have saved a lot of money in mortgage interest costs over the past few years. And, at present interest rates, borrowers are finding our ARM loans to be an even better bargain. The first-year interest rate on our 15-year ARM is now only 7.25% compared to much higher rates on fixedrate loans. What's more, with the 2% annual and 6% lifetime interest rate caps that we have placed on our ARM loans, you'll pay less interest and have greater principal reduction over at least the first four years of your loan.

The lower initial interest rates on our ARM loans result in lower initial monthly payments. And, the lower monthly payments mean that it will be easier for you to qualify for the loan that you need to buy or refinance your home.

So, come to any Standard Federal branch office and learn more about our ARM loans. We'll help you find the loan that is just right for you.

*All annual percentage rates are calculated based on a 2% loan discount fee, a loan amount of $50,000.00, a 20% down payment, and monthly principal and interest payments of $456.43 for the 15-year loan and $349.61 for the 30-year loan. These estimated annual percentage rates are subject to increase or decrease on an annual basis after the loan is closed based on the formula set forth in the loan contract.

All the couple could determine missing at the time was a quartz watch. They did not report the incident until the following morning.

Step was a natural for New Center area's booster

By Peggy O'Connor Feature Editor

Mary Hebert's biggest problem since she was installed last month as the first female member of Lions Club International was that she wasn't quite sure when she should start wearing her Lions Club pin. And that dilemma was solved when the Lions Club voted July 4 to formally allow female membership for the first time in its 70-year history,

The media made much of Hebert's installation into the Lions and she thought that that might generate a flood of phone calls from women who might like to follow Hebert's lead and join the 1.35 million-member service organization, but that hasn't happened yet.

"I've gotten calls, but they were from men who were finding that they couldn't fit their suburban Lions chapter meetings into their work schedule and wondered if I might sponsor them for the New Center Lions since we meet downtown," Hebert says with a chuckle.

Actually, Hebert is a little embarrassed by all the attention. Her Lions Club membership was just a natural step for her to take, she says, not the work of a trailblazing feminist.

"You see, the New Center

Lions Club was one of the most active Lions Clubs in the country from the 1920s through the 1960s. But for one reason or another, it died out and its four remaining members were sort of scattered around. One of the members of the Highland Park chapter called me and suggested that we get the New Center chapter going again.

"So we got together and came up with some names of business people and residents and started driving them to meetings and getting them involved in the Lions," Hebert recalls.

The result was the rebirth of the New Center Lions Club, which at present boasts more than 90 members and is recognized as one of the top four fastest growing chapters in the world.

Despite her involvement, Hebert was still not a member of the Lions. "I worked with the club closely and always enjoyed it. I was never offended because I wasn't a member. Most of the members I worked with were very progressive and worked with women in their jobs daily. I think that the Lions were working toward admitting women anyway. I really don't believe that this was a revolutionary idea."

It's a sixweek program which offers kids the opportunity to participate in art, drama, creative writing, dance and music programs during the summer. "And that's really a lot of what we're about," Hebert says. That is also part of what Hebert is about as the community relations liaison with the New Center Council. She works with youth programs and membership activities, serves as the go-between for the public and private sector, looks after New Center beautification projects and works with the area's retailers and restaurateurs.

"The New Center Council is similar to Detroit Renaissance and the Central Business District Association. But we're most like a miniature Chamber of Commerce. The feeling we have is that we want to contribute to the community. We want to belong.

The New Center takes in the 14-square block area behind the Fisher Building. That area was once one of the most prestigious in the city, and a recent revitalization may make it that way again, Hebert says. "First of all, major companies have made a commitment to that area. The windows of Europe can give us a lesson in sharing beautiful plants with passersby. In Stockholm, Helsinki, Amsterdam and many other cities every window is a composition incorporating plants and personal treasures. A small shining brass tray or a beautiful colored cloisonne jar or a cut glass bowl to catch the light add interest and plants are arranged to have equal balance of form and height from each side. Try a little theatrical staging and you will make your house look a lot smarter and give the neighbors a special treat besides.

Roses are flourishing in our gardens now and it is impossible to decide which of the many varieties, sizes and colors is the most beautiful.

If you've visited the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House recently you have probably noticed the lovely vellow roses which add color and scent to the big, gracious rooms all through the house. Yellow roses were Mrs. Ford's favorite

In earliest recorded history there is frequent mention of the rose in literature, music, poetry, cooking and medicine. The rose was called the Queen of Flowers by the poet Sappho and roses were grown in the ancient royal gardens of Persia and China and in the Hanging Gardens of ancient Babylon. The Egyptians cultivated roses extensively and the perfume oils extracted from them were used abundantly. Roses were placed in the golden coffins of Pharaohs and Cleopatra welcomed Anthony with a 24-inch thick carpet of rose petals on the palace floor.

Galen, a famed Greek physician, developed a face cream using oil of roses, rose water, rose vinegar and white wax. The formula is still used today as the basic formula for cold cream.

Roses were in such demand by the Romans that they developed vast nurseries and later, hothouses heated by hot-water-filled clay pipes to keep them in bloom the year round. The early Christians cultivated roses in monas-its name from the fact that the first ones were made of roses and rose hips.

Crusaders returning to Europe brought seeds of new species of roses and the famous rose windows of cathedrals are patterned from them. Roses were an important ingredient in medicine, cooking and perfume. Many early coins depict roses and in England the Wars of the Roses led to the choosing of the rose as the floral emblem of the country.

Josephine, Empress of France, appointed Andre DuPont as rose supervisor at the palace of Malmaison and he was the first to hybridize roses. Prior to that time all crossing had been by natural means.

Each year new roses are created and rosarians still seek for the perfect rose.

The gardens surrounding the fort and its several outbuildings recreate historic planting and enhance the view across the water.

The Indoor Light Gardening Society of America is making a collection of references to early examples of light gardening. For instance, in 1908 a patent was filed by one Carl Helmshmeid for an "Illuminated flower pot having a conductor designed for use as a conduit for electric wires, gas or oil, and an electric, gas or oil lamp carried upon the upper end of said conductor." They sold well in 1908. A far cry from modern methods of using grow-lights.

Children love to dye flowers but grown-ups find it pretty fascinating too, and the possibilities are endless. If you can't find the color you want in food coloring you can use ink or showcard tempera diluted in water.

The Pastor's Corner

By Pastor George M. Schelter

for the 1,200 mile trip. There were no interstate highways in the early '50s. Air conditioning was foreign to a 1948 Frazer. So in the heat of summer we made our way through every city as well as every village and hamlet along the way.

I am sure you can imagine what took place in that car. Two boys, irritable in the heat, impatient in such close quarters, mingled with their own quibblings the plaintive query, "Are we there yet?", muttered at 10-mile intervals. When it all grew unbearable, my father's strong right arm and hand would suddenly appear in the back seat, flailing wildly at us bickering brothers, as his left hand tightly gripped the wheel of the car, now weaving its way down the road.

But you know as well as I that none of us would have given up that trip for all the world. It was a continuous delight of new sights and new sensations. There were no McDonald's around then to fill our stomachs with transcontinental uniformity. Each cafe in each little town was unique. And to stop in the afternoon for an ice cream cone after hours in the glazing sun in the Frazer offered refreshment that cannot be matched in the days of air conditioning.

What pulled the whole trip together and enabled us to make it in that hot car, through those little towns, with our short tempers, was our goal. We were going home. Grandpa and Grandma awaited us. There everything was peaceful, everything was cool, everything was right. We could tolerate each other, even love each other because we had a goal. We were together, drawn toward a reunion with those we loved.

For persons gifted by God with faith in Jesus Christ, life is like that trip in the hot 1948 Frazer. The promise of Christ himself is that those brought into his family have a home. The promise of Christ is that we await a reunion with all who have been made part of that family through faith. Oh, difficulties are still part of our lives. We are not perfect people, and we know it. But we can begin to tolerate each other, dare to reach out to each other, even forgive each other and love each other because we have a brother, Jesus Christ, whose death and life have made us part of God's family. His suffering was caused by human insensitivity, his death by human intolerance. Yet by his suffering and death, he showed God's sensitivity and God's forgiveness toward us. And by his resurrection he proclaimed for all time that God's love will last, and even more important, that we have a home.

One of my favorite Bible stories is the "Prodigal Son." In it the son rejects his home and his father. He focuses, rather, on the trappings of home, asking his father for his inheritance. He travels to a foreign land. Far from the reach of home, his life deteriorates until the reach of home touches his memory. He remembers that he still has a father, that he still has a home. No longer is he without direction. Now he decides to return home. It is not easy. He must recognize his failure and confess it. But his life changes from aimless preoccupation with the trappings of security to the source of security, found in a loving father who awaits his return.

That loving Father is ours. And suddenly the world is a good place to be. We travel through it. We endure it. We embrace it. For we are children of a Father who waits for us and sends his Son to join us on our way. So if summer is for us a time of homecoming, remember that life itself is a homecoming. As a gracious Father draws us to himself, we know that it is good to be on our way. For then our way, and our ways of dealing with each other become good. And that will make a big difference in our world.

Christ Church choir to tour Scandinavia

The Choir of Girls and Men of Christ Church-Grosse Pointe heads for a three-week tour of Scandinavia July 16, but will take time to treat their home community to a concert before they go. The pre-tour concert will be held at the church July 14 at 8 p.m.

This is the second European tour for the group, which went to Italy in 1984. This time they will tour the fjord country, with stops at Stavanger and Bergen and the great Nadaros Domkirche, the cathedral at Tronddheim. From Norway, they will head to Finland and Sweden, where they will sing at a Sunday morning Anglican service, then finish in Denmark. Their last concert will be sung in Copenhagen's Tivoli Gardens concert hall.

The choir has prepared an extensive repertoire, with works as varied as "Five Mystical Songs," sixth motet, "Lobet den Herrn," plus directors and chaperones.

Church picnic

St. James Lutheran Church held its summer church picnic on July 5. The event was hosted by Millie and Louie Neuder at their farm in Richmond. Members of the congregation attended the morning service, then drove to the farm for swimming, tennis, games and fellowship.

Beginning in the 1840s, commercial whalers hunted gray whales in their breeding lagoons along the Baja California coast and later in their northern range, reducing the eastern Pacific stock to a nearly fatal level, says National Geographic.

The Christ Church Choir of Girls and Men will spend three weeks touring Scandinavia.

Women's board raises funds for Northwood

The Greater Detroit Chapter of the National Women's Board of Northwood Institute, chaired by Sharon A. Snyder of Grosse Pointe, hosted a black tie scholarship benefit at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, June 5. The evening included a silent and live auction which raised over $50,000 for the Northwood Institute Scholarship Fund. More than 75 Detroit area civic, professional, business, arts and cultural leaders were recognized for their contributions.

A highlight of the evening was the review of the rare and exciting Northwood Costume Collection containing remarkable pieces spanning a time period from the turn of the century to the present. Viscountess Harriet deRosiere of Houston, National Chair of the Costume Collection, was the commentator.

Members of the Starry Night Gala were Sharon A. Snyder, Mr. and Mrs. J. Addison Bartush, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Germack, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ingwersen, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Piku, Mr. and Mrs. George Slezak, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl E. Larson.

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

A Cultural Cornucopia Appreciation of the arts begins at an early age for Grosse Pointe children. The public library, a division of the Grosse Pointe Public School System, offers, at no cost, a variety of children's reading programs at its three locations.

For adults, the library programs range from travel films to informative presentations on subjects of current interest. These, too, are free to residents of all the Grosse Pointes.

Another great source of local culture is the beautiful War Memorial Center, the former mansion of the Russell A. Alger family. With its subsequently added ballroom and theater overlooking Lake St. Clair, the center is a community attraction that rivals the many private clubs in the area. Here—open to all residents—are offered art classes and exhibits, lectures, concerts, plays, ballet and social dancing instruction, and children's theater, as well as membership in a long list of special-interest clubs whose focus is either cultural, informative or just plain fun.

A more recent addition to public property is the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House. Designed by architect Albert Kahn and supported by a $15 million endowment, this gracious replica of an English manor house is now open for tours and is used for meetings, fund-raising events and several series of "house" concerts.

Architectural Diversity As the great variety of home sizes and styles suggests, growth has continued slowly over many years. It continues even today. Old estates are subdivided for building contemporary homes, making the mansions that still survive (and many do) all the more treasured by their owners and tradition-minded residents. At the same time, the area includes homes of just about every style and size-from townhouses, two-family units and other small homes to gracious English Tudors, colonials, executive mansions, contemporary ranch styles and a variety of modern designs, including condominiums.

This diversity has helped make Grosse Pointe attractive to all who value well-maintained quality which far exceeds its price.

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

A Romantic Past As a Grosse Pointe resident, you'll walk upon grounds that were once the swamp, marsh and meadow haunts of deer, buffalo and beaver. It was this profusion of wildlife-plus fish from the 460-square-mile Lake St. Clair-that attracted the French farmers who first settled the area in 1701

During the century that they tished, farmed and traded with the local Indians, many legands began. And many infamous locations were indelibly named: Fox Creek, graveyard of the Fox Indian nation; Bloody Run. where a company of British soldiers from Fort Detroit were ambushed and

From Pristine to Prosperous After a brief period under British rule, the area began its history as an American settlement. Its beauty and bounty made it an ideal resort area for families from the growing city of Detroit. Between 1875 and 1925, Grosse Pointe became the elegant summer residence-and then permanent home-of families who had amassed fortunes in lumber and automobiles. In the midst of the lavish mansions, farm cottages and resort ambiance, there gradually grew a year-round community of quality homes for families from all walks of life.

How'd that old Mickey Mouse Club song go? "Now's the time to say goodbye to all our company . . . " And, sad as it is for me to say, that's exactly what I'm doing with this column.

Next week, I move to the desk across the room and assume the duties of Feature Editor. On these pages will be the work of a new addition to the Grosse Pointe News staff, Sports Editor Robert Fulton.

Believe it or not, I find myself at a loss for words when it comes to writing my "farewell column." After all, I've been filling this space for better or worse for six years now, and saying goodbye is awfully hard to do, not to mention totally unfamil-

So I guess I'll do it the only way I know how (you didn't believe that part about me being at a loss for words, did you?) and take a look back before I move on:

Five best memories:

The last second come-from-behind victory by the North football team over Murray-Wright in the 1985 high school playoffs. Covering my first playoff game - South vs. Milford Lakeland - in 1983. David Waldeck driving in the winning run to end an eight-hour (double-header AND extra innings) North baseball marathon in Hazel Park in 1983. A.J. Gibson's goal in overtime to give South a 4-3 victory and its first regional championship — over the reigning state champs, no less. Watching Jimmy Carson being chosen by the Los Angeles Kings in the NHL draft in Montreal in 1986. Least favorite memories:

Walking into the boys' lockerroom at South High while looking for coach George Petrouleas' office. (Hey, I've never seen a bunch of skinny 15-year-olds move faster. The only thing that could have topped em was me, making my exit.) Getting lost on Fort Street in the dead of winter looking for Wyandotte's Yack Arena. Watching injured athletes standing on the sidelines watching their buddies play - there's no sadder sight. The time the soccer mom called me up and threatened to put me out of my misery because I didn't get her kid's name in the paper.

Best interviews:

Talking to a joyous ULS tennis coach Bob Wood after his team set a national record for state championships. Tim Zimmerman - anytime. Ditto for Guido Regelbrugge and John Bruce. North baseball coach Frank Sumbera, when he gets all wound up talking about his baseball facility. ULS grad Oscar Alcantara, for my money the nicest, brightest, friendliest kid I've ever interviewed.

Worst interviews:

My very first on staff here - four foreign exchange students at South High. They were from Denmark, Finland, Japan and Mexico and no matter what I asked them, they just kept telling me that they liked it here, yes, but the bread we eat was no good, no. The time I interviewed a local man who was a big booster of figure skating and he See O'CONNOR, page 4C

'The race': It's not for money, just love

By Peggy O'Connor Sports Editor

hey come from all over the world to sail the 259 nautical miles from the southern end of Lake Huron, to the Cove Island Light and on to Mackinac Island. They sail in little boats, like Rick Semack's 27-footer "Athena." They sail in big ones, like Dutch Schmidt's 78-foot "Sassy." They do it just for the right to say: "I sailed the Port Huron to Mackinac this year."

And they'll do just that in two weeks, when the 63rd Bayview Mackinac Race starts from Port Huron's Black River on July 25.

Each skipper's approach to the historic race is as different as the style of boats in competition. One veteran of 25 Mackinacs who has piloted his boat to several class finishes, pooh-poohed the idea of listing statistics, worrying about weight and changes in measurements. He wasn't even sure of how long some of his crew members had been along for the ride. "We do it because we like to race in the Mackinac. That's about it," he told reporters at the pre-race photo session at Bayview last week.

When they get together, they tell tales of past Mackinacs - most of them unprintable in family publications - and agree on one thing: It's a matter of pride.

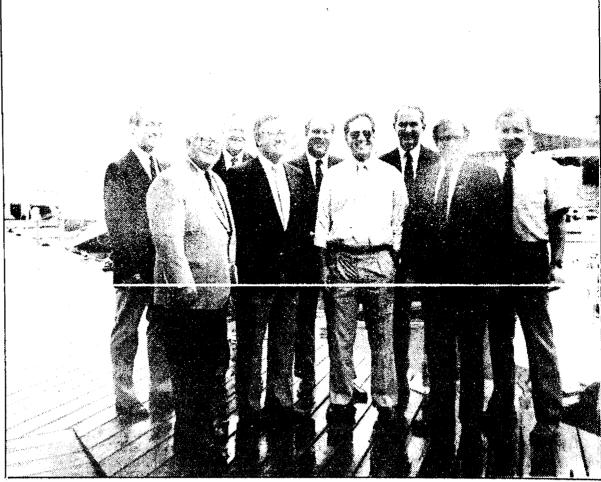

"Let's face it, we do it for the glory . . . not much else," laughs skipper John Stevens, of the IOR Sprint USA. "There's no money involved, nor should there be. This is a local race that means a lot to the sailors around here."

Stevens, however, is a bit more aggressive in his approach to the Mackinac than some Mackinac competitors. "Sure, I get all psyched up to win, I don't go into it that much for sentimental reasons. Maybe sometime down the line I'll do that, but for now, I set out to put together the best possible program I can.

"I analyze the situation the best I can and cover as much ground as possible. I want to win this race and that's it," Stevens admits.

Stevens, who won the class championship and was overall IOR winner in the 1986 Mackinac (with his first boat. Sprint) says that this year's field is a good one. "Midtown is a contender, Fujimo is hot, Trader .. really, it's a wide open race. We won the SORC, but on a boat set up for the circuit and heavy air, not for the lakes. If the wind blows 12-14 knots, we stand a tremendously good chance. We'd like it at about 20 knots," Stevens says with a laugh.

Jerry Blake and Jon Breckon; (front) Charlie Bayer. John Stevens. Mack Hollerback and John Bar-

New to the Mackinac Race this year is the IMS Division. It does not dictate the style of boat like the IOR rule; rather, it attempts to measure the potential speed of a particular boat through a rigorous set of measurements. The speed potential is used to determine the boat's handicap. Traditional boats with full acommodations can compete under this rule.

"We're getting a lot of interest in this division, there are 55 entries," says race chairman Russ Nutter. "We think it will allow people who want to race the family cruiser competitively a little more leeway. The IMS is a little less subjective than PHRF and not in the 'Formula One' class of IOR, if that explains it.

More than 300 boats have registered for the July race which, Nutter says is popular in part because it gives the Lake St. Clair sailors "something to prepare for, something to work toward.'

PIRATES-INDIANS

The regular season co-champs met for the playoff championship with the Pirates defeating the Indians, 4-1. For the third time this season, the Pirates' Colm Moore faced the Indians' Kevin Brennan in a classic match-up of pitching aces. Moore gave up six hits and struck out five; he also aided the Pirates' cause with two hits and two RBI. Brennan yielded six hits and struck out eight and added two hits on offense. The key play of the game may have been Steve Solaka's fine catch of Brennan's long fly ball at the fence with bases loaded.

Tom Kolojeski singled in Robby Tiede with the Indians' only run in the first. The Pirates fought back with two in the first on Moore's single, scoring Todd Scallen and Chad Hepner, who had doubled. Paul Gentile executed a perfect delayed steal of home in the third. Gentile, who had a perfect day at the plate with two hits and a walk, fourth for the Pirates' final run.

Gary Campbell, Jay Ricci and Pat Brennan had Indian hits. The win capped a Cinderella season for the Pirates (19-3), who last year finished with a 2-18 mark. The Indians finished at 18-4, with three of those losses coming at the hands of the Pir-

PIRATES-ASTROS

The Pirates had opened the playoffs with a 6-5 victory over the Astros. The Pirates trailed, 5-3, going into their final at-bat when Prvsak reached first with his third hit, Jason Geideman was safe on an error and Paul Gentile singled to score Prysak. Eugene Agnone hit an infield single which scored Geideman and Moore won the game with a long single to the fence, scoring Gentile. Steve Solaka, Rich Reynolds and Agnone had the Pirates' other RBI.

Beth Weyling doubled to score Steve Strehler, who had singled. In the fifth, the Astros mounted a four-run rally and seemingly had the win on ice. Jay Harrington doubled in one run and Schoenherr singled in two knocked in Geoff Prysak in the runs to pace the surge. Pirate center fielder Mike Formolo ended the rally with a nifty grab of John Wortman's vicious linedrive, turning it into a doubleplay. Britt Stebbins pitched the distance for the Astros, giving up eight hits and striking out five. Agnone and Prysak combined to give up seven hits for the Pirates. It was the fourth consecutive win for the Pirates in their last at-bat and sent them on to the game against the Indians.

METS-INDIANS Indians trounced the Mets. 13-2. Campbell was fourfor-four and had two RBI, Rob Tiede batted in a run and scored two, Jay Ricci pitched well and Tom Kolojeski singled and doubled to lead the Indians. For the Mets, Justin Ronayne singled, Cusmano singled and scored and Crowley played well in the field.

INDIANS-CARDINALS The Indians outslugged the Cardinals, 7-4. Campbell singled and scored, Kevin Brennan pitched and went two-for-four at the plate and Ryan Messacar was also two-for-four with one RBI for the Indians. Kolojeski knocked in two runs. For the Cards, Lulis singled and scored. Dorda singled and had an RBI

INDIANS-PHILLIES

The Indians defeated the Phillies, 8-2, behind the five-hit pitching of Kevin Brennan. He also had two homers and five RBI. Matt Stentz singled and scored for the Indians in the fourth and Gary Campbell was two-for-three, scored two runs and played well behind the plate. Ricci had a double. For the Phils, Cugliari pitched and Alle had a single, double and RBI. Hanawalt singled and scored a run and Hix played well in the

ASTROS-INDIANS

The Indians topped the Astros. 6-3. Messacar pitched three innings and allowed three hits; he also had a homer and two RBI. Kevin Brennan also homered, his 10th of the year. Kolojeski pitched three no-hit innings and Matt Stentz had a single. For the Astros, Gough singled and had an RBI, Gandelot pitched and Kazul singled and had an DODGERS-INDIANS

The Indians beat the Dodgers. 12-4. Jordon Jones singled and scored, Pat Brennan doubled and scored. Ricci pitched and held the Dodgers to three hits; Messacar also pitched. Kolojeski had a double and a single for two RBI. Miller doubled in two runs and Spicer added a double for the Dodgers.

MIAMI-ROCHESTER

Matt Moran's clutch triple for Miami with the bases loaded in the bottom of the sixth inning gave Miami this dramatic playoff victory. Leading Miami at the plate were David McCann (double), Jeremy Burkett (three singles), Billy Crandall, Steve Davis, Andrew Shipton, John Staniszewski, Joe Choma, Billy Gmeiner and Jay Lambrecht (two singles each). Chris Mitchell and Larry Marantette displayed some fine base-running.

Leading Rochester at the plate were Kyle Bott and Erich Springstead (three singles each), Terry Brennan (three doubles, three runs scored), Mike Veda (two singles, a double and two runs). Nicholas Bruscha (two singles), Richard Sudney (double) and Martin Matthews, Christopher Robinson, Roger Mason and Jeff Wattrick (one single apiece). Greg Dely, Kevin Fischer, Brennan and Springstead played very well in the field for Rochester, as did Miami's Davis, Burkett. Staniszewski, Marantette, Gmeiner and Choma.

MIAMI-NEWARK

Miami came out on top in the Class C championship game, 13-9. Moran, Davis, Burkett, Shipton, Staniszewski and Gmeiner had three hits each for Miami; Crandall and Marantette singled twice each and Mitchell, Choma, McCann and Lambrecht had one hit apiece. For Newark, Peter Birgbauer doubled twice, singled once and scored two runs. Jay Radtke, Brad Hohlfeldt, Tim Lindow, Brad Cenko and Dan Gough each got on base twice. Tom Gough, Nelson Ropke, Kasey Perry and Joe Retoff singled once each. Starring on defense for their teams were Newark's Eric Neveux, Tom Pozios, Caitlin Shapiro, Cenko and Tim Lindow and Miami's Moran, Lambrecht, McCann, Crandall and Mitchell.

ALBANY-ROCHESTER

Albany took a 17-14 win over Rochester behind the great late inning defense of Ryan Zeller, Matt Benfer and Cort Messacar and two homers each by William Stentz and Steve Gayman. T. Brennan had two homers and Bruscha had a three-for-three day to pace Rochester, which got

Hypothermia: It isn't just a cold weather problem anymore

Summer is in full swing now, with days in the 90s and the water slowly warming for comfortable swimming. Rarely do we think of the threat of hypothermia on these idyllic summer days. But we should.

Hypothermia is not just a cold weather problem. Many boaters, campers and others suffer prolonged exposure to the elements in the summertime. They do not lose fingers and toes, but their bodies react to cold in exactly the same way, summer or winter, and death can result even in the summer.

For boaters, the threat is especially acute. The beach-goer can get out of the water when chilled, but one who has fallen overboard must wait until rescue comes. For boaters, a fall into the lake can become a life-threatening experience. Merely falling into the water can cause an injury which may make it more difficult to contend with the lake conditions, waves, wind and cold water. You are isolated, insecure and scared.

Body heat is lost 30 to 35 times faster in the water than in air alone. It is important to conserve body heat, even when one falls into a warm lake. If you fall into water that is 91 degrees Farenheit and are there long enough, hypothermia will become a factor Prolonged exposure in 70-degree water might even be fatal.

The best way to minimize problems from an unexpected dunk in the water is to get out as quickly as possible. Climb into a dinghy, life raft or anything which will get you as much out of the water as possible. Exertion increases heat loss, so getting as much of your body out of the water as you can and remaining as still as possible can minimize that loss. If that is out of the question, a survival suit is the next best source for conserving heat. They keep you warm and they float. If neither of those solutions are possible, then you must wait in the water until rescued.

Hopefully, you will be wearing a PFD - personal flotation device. That will help you to conserve heat in the torso region. Bring your legs up close against your body and let the life jacket do the work of keeping you afloat. Double up your arms and hold them close against your body to conserve as much body heat as possible. Try to keep your head out of the water, because 50 percent of the heat loss occurs around the head and neck.

Hypothermia is sequential. First, when you hit the cold water, your heart fibrillates and you gasp involuntarily. You can't hold your breath for very long, either. But your body will adapt a little, in time. Most people, when they go overboard, haven't had much time to prepare, naturally. When that happens, the body "a dapts" to the sudden entry by shutting down all systems in seconds, espcially if the water is very cold. We have all read of the recoveries of people who were thought to be dead at the time of rescue from ice cold water, but were not.

The human skin seems to thicken as the blood vessels constrict. Therefore, you are not able to use your fingers easily. You may also hyperventilate and you might swallow water when this hap-

At this point, you will start to shiver. This is involuntary muscular contractions which increase the body temperature by elevating metabolism. Later, you will stop shivering when your body heat no longer supports the involuntary contractions. Next, you will notice that you cannot move your body. This happens when the blood is being withdrawn from the limbs and sent into the torso area of the body.

After that, there is a sequential shutdown of body organs. The body favors the most essential organs, like the heart, lungs and brain. The last stages of hypothermia feature loss of consciousness as the brain receives less and less oxygen. The body sends the oxygen to the heart, which slows down until it, too, shuts down.

In spite of all of this, you can still live through the entire sequence . . . if you have not drowned. That's why it is most important to be wearing a life jacket that supports your head out of the water should you become unconscious and unable to do that your-

Hypothermia can be defeated if we have the right equipment when we need it and are aware of what to do and when to do it. Skippers need to practice their man-overboard rescue techniques in order to minimize the time a victim has to spend in the water. Victims need to be subborn and not give up. Help will come.

Jorsemen end final Bi-County year with awards

By Josh Abbott Special Writer

This was the final year of existence for the Bi-County League and appropriately, the conference's All-Sports Trophy will be permanently retired at Grosse Pointe North, the school which this year won 13 of the 15 league-sponsored sports.

The Bi-County included North, Clintondale, South Lake, Brablec, Lake Shore, Lakeview and L'Anse Creuse. The All-Sports Trophy was initiated in 1978 and was presented each year to the school that fields the most successful overall sports program in the league. North won the trophy nine times in 10 years.

This spring, Norsemen squads won three out of five varsity sports. In boys' track, North was undefeated, winning all nine dual meets. The tracksters were Bi-County dual and league meet champs and state regional champions. All-Bi-County performers included sophomores Bob Yonker, Tom Justice, Dan MacDougall and Brian Maniere and seniors Allen Thomalla, John Van Syckle, Adrian Weyhing and Mike Wujek.

North's girls' team also fared well, winning the dual meet season with a 9-0 mark and beating rival South High.

The girls' softball squad was a disappointing 8-14, fifth in the league. Seniors Julie Cook and Missy Preston were named All-Bi-County. Earning All-District honors were Preston and senior Lynda Rayos.

North's tennis team was 5-3 overall and again won the Bi-County title. The boys also won the Grosse Pointe Tournament. Junior Pat Hopper and seniors Ralph Barbier, Brad Cooksey, Roger Eger, John Grierson, K.C. Gutow and Chris Herman were each All-Bl-County first team members.

On the sorger field, the Lady out of 16 teams in the Expressway Soccer League. Seniors Alexa Parmentier and Laura Vititoe were named to the All-League and All-Division teams.

North's varsity baseball team regained the Bi-County title it lost in 1986 by finishing 10-2 this season. North was 24-9 overall and won the Alpena Tournament. Juniors Chuck Thomas, Steve Neiman and Rick Regalado and senior Mike Miller were All-Bi-County performers.

Van Hee, Scholar Athlete Awards

Miller and senior Barbara Loeher were doubly-honored during the last week of school as each were presented with the Van Hee and Scholar Athlete awards

The Van Hee Award is made annually to the most dedicated Norseman athlete. It is named for Eric Van Hee, a 1974 graduate of North. Van Hee was a swimmer who is remembered for his hard-working, spirited atti-tude and athletic prowess. He was killed in an automobile accident in 1979. The following year, the Van Hee Award was instituted at North to be presented to the senior male and female who best exemplified those traits displayed by the late Van Hee.

Things I'll miss about covering sports: Those lazy Wednesday afternoons in the spring when I can sprawl out on the bleachers and pretend like I'm watching a ballgame. Football Saturdays. Hockey night at the GPCR. Clintondale vs. North in basketball. Thinking up new and different ways to tell people that Liggett won another tennis title. Dual track meets. Laid-back basketball at ULS. Hockey rink hot chocolate. Watching the freshmen report on the first day of football practice. North vs. South in girls' volleyball. Confederate flags. Talking volleyball with Margaret Spindler and Valerie Johnson. Thinking up new and different ways to write about another John Stevens win.

Hitching sailboat rides. Pre-Mackinac hoopla. Interesting mail. Talking about the Tigers. St. Clare sports.

In fact, I think I'm going to miss it all so much, that I might just start talking sports with anyone and everyone who will listen. And I'll still be around, wearing my feature editor's hat (which like it or not, is going to be a baseball cap; easily removed for garden parties, don't you know!), so if you see me, stop and chat.

Because I hate to say goodbye.

Babe Ruth Tigers, Yanks take playoff lead

Tiger hitters took over at that point, knocking in two runs and scoring two more on a triple and

Khoenle, Molloy, Leins, Montagne, Oliver, Henry and Nes-

Weissert, Roxas and Wisniewski had Sox' hits. The final playoff games were scheduled for July 6 and 8 (after press time).

How do we rate on fitness scale?

The Russians and Americans will soon be cooperating to promote better understanding through youth fitness and to strengthen youngsters' physical fitness in both countries. As the level of physical fitness in our nation's children has decreased considerably in the past few years, it's going to be very interesting to see how our children perform when the American kids take a fitness test designed by the USSR's Committee for Physical Culture and Sports.

The Soviets, as well, will challenge themselves against a test used and designed by the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports. This all came about under terms of an agreement signed in February, 1987. It is hoped that this common interest will help further the cause of mutual understanding between Russian and American children. Kids of America: Get in shape. You are our hope for the future.

I found this USA-USSR agreement to be especially interesting in light of the fact that the President's Council recently updated its 1990 objectives for the nation in order to make the guidelines more "realistic."

Realistic in the sense that we Americans aren't in as good a shape as was previously thought. The new guidelines designed to promote physical fitness outline a more "attainable" set of goals to be met by the nation by the year 2000.

Will you be included in these percentages?

- Seventy-five percent (down from 90 percent) or more of youngsters aged 10 to 17 will exercise at least three times per week for a minimum of 30 minutes per session.
- Forty percent of adults 18-64 (down from 60 percent) will participate three or more times per week for at least 30 minutes in activities that promote flexibility, muscular strength and endurance.
- At least 50 percent of adults 65 and older will participate in physical activities three or more times per week for 30 minutes or more.

Did you notice that most percentages were down from 15 to 20 percent? Also, according to Prevention magazine, in 1983 33 percent of those surveyed reported exercising strenuously three days per week or more as compared to 30 percent in 1986.

Is 30 minutes three times per week too much to ask? We're talking about feeling fit and adding quality to your life. There are 10,080 minutes in a week - and you can't allot 90 minutes of that time to yourself? Think about it.

If this trend continues and each year the percentages of healthy Americans decreases, we, as a nation are in trouble. Our children are our future and surveys indicate that today's youngsters have lower fitness levels and weigh more than their peers of 10 years

It seems that parents are out of touch with the health and fitness habits of their children. According to a Harris survey, 76 percent of parents questioned believe that there are "about the right number" of physical education classes in their child's schedule. In reality, only 36 percent of school-age children have daily physical education classes.

Dennis Conner was so serious about winning the America's Cup, he went so far as to hire a physiologist-fitness expert who spent six months in Australia helping keep the crew of Stars & Stripes alert, in shape and ready to race. As unusual as that sounds, the addition of a fitness routine to a sailing program isn't all that rare these days, according to local sailing experts.

"I think it's really important to be in top physical shape, says the City's John Stevens, owner and skipper of Sprint USA. Stevens and Sprint USA won the class championship and IOR overall title in this winter's SORC (Southern Ocean Racing Conference). "And it's not just to help you perform physical tasks, but as you get to where the battle is endurance, you'll really need to be in shape," he adds.

"Basically, every spring I imply to my crew that they should make sure that they're fit and ready to go. And that means eating the proper foods, not eating too much or eating greasy foods. That's really the key," Stevens says. Simple common sense eating is what the trim Detroit architect usually employs when it comes to his sailing fitness program; still, he did experiment with a vegetarian diet during the SORC series in March.

The 27-year-old Michigan State University alumnus hasn't eaten red meat in two years, he says. At his heaviest, he tipped the scales at 250 and is currently at 205, thanks to his improved diet and an exercise program that combines jogging, riding a stationary bike and lifting weights.

"I did it pretty much for my general health, but I also wanted to be in the best shape possible for the work I do on the sailboat. When I was in Australia for the Cup challenge (crewing aboard Courageous IV), we got up at 6 a.m. to train and that included stretching, 45 minutes of 'Ultimate Frisbee' - which is really a good cardiovascular exercise done with Frisbees — and a mile

"Being in shape really improved my quickness, which will show up in maneuvers. And in long campaigns, it shows in your endurance. After all, sailing is very competitive and you've got to stay on top of the game," Szymanski says.

"Women have plenty of stamand work when men would be just dead tired. But we don't have any upper body strenth, no matter what shape we're in. So we have to adapt our equipment to make up for that.

"I get a bigger winch, for example, instead of trying to rely on brute force," Staats says.

"Really, though, physical fitness is important to a sailor. I don't train for sailing as much as I should. But strengthening is important. I ride my bike to keep my legs strong. And I've found (as an ex-smoker) that it's a lot easier to sail if you don't smoke. You have lots more air and lots more energy," Staats explains.

On her solo sails, Staats sticks to high protein foods and no junk food. She says she tries to get in some time on the racquetball courts and does walk regularly in between excursions on the lakes.

"Toning up is the thing. You want to stay on top of things out there," she says.

And that's probably true whether you're Dennis Conner or a singlehander on a 26-footer.

What's Shaping Up in Grosse Pointe?

St. John runners, walkers set pace

More than 220 runners and walkers participated in the St. Clair Health Corporation's seventh annual Fun Run and Fitness Walk with entrants ranging from a 2-year-old walker to a 74year-old runner.

Employees, family members and friends of St. John Hospital and its health care partners gathered in June at Windmill Pointe Drive for the two-mile and six-mile runs.

John Burrows, M.D., of Grosse Pointe Park, chief of oncology at St. John Hospital, implemented the Fun Run in 1980 and said he was pleased with this year's turnout.

"It's been a very successful event and this year, I was especially pleased because the weather was great and we had more of a turnout than in the past," Burrows said.

"We had many competitive walkers, 18 cardiac rehabilitation participants and families who walked at a pace that was enjoyable for the children," said Davis Sabo, of Plymouth, director of Cardiac Rehabilitation at St. John and one of the event's coordinators.

Rose Serdoz, of St. Clair Shores, secretary in the hospital's pastoral care department, was one of the top 10 finishers in the two-mile fitness walk. She said that she finds walking improves her cardiovascular system and helps her maintain her weight.

"My doctor recommended I start exercising when I was diagnosed in 1981 as having mitralvalve prolapse (a heart valve that doesn't close properly as blood is circulated throughout the heart)," she said. "My heart problem isn't much of a problem anymore because my body is in better shape."

This year's men's and women's first place overall age group winners and best team participation winners include: Rosemary Degowski of St. Clair Shores and Christopher Novack of Harper Woods in the two-mile fitness walk; Frances Van Huysse of Mount Clemens and Robert Buhl of Grosse Pointe in the two-mile fun run; and Maggie Zidar of Pontiac and Jack Kline of Detroit in the six-mile fun run.

Each entrant received a Fun City tennis Run and Fitness Walk T-shirt. tournament Trophies were awarded to top finishers in each age category of the winning event.

By Mary Sodium and you

Jim is a hard-working executive in a major corporation. Each summer, he gets out his fishing pole and golf clubs to enthusiastically launch into a schedule of non-stop activity. This year, however, his enthusiasm has been replaced by a sluggish tiredness and a "something isn't right" feeling. After a physical exam, Jim learns he has moderate hypertension (high blood pressure). To combat this problem, Jim's doctor suggests he restrict the amount of sodium in his diet.

While this may seem like an easy task, it isn't! Jim's first response is to simply give up the salt shaker. Unfortunately, this is only a partial solution. In the breakdown of salt intake in the average person, 25 percent is consumed through naturally-occurring sources in the foods themselves, 25 percent from added table salt and a whopping 50 percent of sodium consumption comes from the processed and packaged foods we eat.

Suppose Jim had followed this routine this morning (every asterisk denotes a food or product containing sodium): He took two aspirin* and some cough syrup* for his cold, brushed his teeth with toothpaste*, gargled with mouthwash*, and sat down to a breakfast of eggs*, bacon*, toast*, cereal* and orange juice* Within a few hours, Jim could easily fulfilled his daily recommended sodium allowance. Like Jim, the average American can consume 20 to 50 times what the body actually needs in sodium. We must first learn the facts about sodium and apply them to our eating habits.

Sodium —life sustainer

A common mistake is to equate "sodium" with 'salt." Table salt is actually composed of both sodium

(40 percent) and chloride (60 percent). Sodium is necessary for survival as it is the major mineral component in blood and tissue fluids. Sodium enters the body through the foods you eat and is absorbed from the intestinal tract into the bloodstream. It helps to regulate blood pressure and control blood volume, aids in heart and other muscle contractions, affects nerve impulses and enzyme action and controls the fluids surrounding

Too much — life strainer

Controversy rages over the question: "So what happens when the body must deal with a consistently excessive intake of sodium and does this excess cause hyptertension? While no definitive research demonstrates a direct cause and effect, the "possibility" is enough for many. Hypertension is a serious disease affecting one out of every four Americans. It is a major risk factor for stroke and one of the major risk factors for coronary heart disease. And yes, even children can have high blood pressure.

One-fourth of all the sodium you consume comes from naturally occurring food sources. Foods such as meats, poultry, fish, milk and cheese are all natural sources of sodium. It is also found in grains and vegetables as well. A second source of sodium is direct use of salt shaker and seasonings. Be cautious when seasoning foods - garlic salts, onion salts, etc., are simply flavored salts. Soy sauce can fulfull recommended daily sodium allowances with one shake! Many salt substitutes simply mix potassium chloride with sodium. Even black pepper contains sodium.

The largest and most unrecognized source of sodium is in processed and packaged foods. Here are a few examples: breakfast cereals (average of 1,200 to 1,400 mg sodium per serving), margarine (1,000 mg. per serving), dried soups (1,000 mg.), bottled dressing, Italian-style (2,000 mg. per serving), frozen dinner (2,000 mg. per

Did you know that one cup of fresh green beans has 12 mg. of sodium, while one cup of canned green beans has a whopping 1,200 mg.! The difference between natural foods and the prepared meals could be the difference between a daily intake of under 800 mg. of sodium or one of over 10,000 mg.

Take the time to read labels on all packaged and processed foods. When a company uses the term, "new, lower sodium," ask yourself: "Lower than what?". The previous sodium content? The competitor's sodium content for the same product?

You can control the foods you eat and how you prepare them. Replace the salt shaker with lemon and herbs (but remember to read the label when buying dried herbs since many companies use a salt base). Diet Center carries a number of different flavored herbs and seasonings that do not contain sodium. These are available to everyone. Also, check your grocery's seasonings section and the local health food store.

Give your taste buds a chance to work for you and in the process, your entire body will thank you. Here's a Diet Center recipe to get started:

SEASONED CHICKEN-VEGGIE KABOBS 4 portions (four ounces each) chicken breast, boned and skinned

4 Wasa Brod crackers, crushed (or other no-salt crackers)

2 Tbsp. seasonings or herbs

4 Tbsp. lemon or lime juice

1 egg, beaten

2-3 cups of fresh vegetables, (mushrooms, zucchini slices, onion, green pepper or tomatoes) cut

Cut chicken into medium-size pieces, marinate in lemon or lime juice for 10 minutes. Dip chicken pieces and vegetables in beaten egg, mix seasonings with crushed crackers. Dip chicken and vegetables in cracker mixture. Place chicken and vegetables on skewer, rotating between the two. Cook under broiler or on grill for about 10 minutes, turning skewers frequently.

Yield: four servings.

'Full Metal Jacket': Kubrick's different approach to Vietnam

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

"Full Metal Jacket" is exactly the kind of film you'd expect from Stanley Kubrick. The latest entry in the current waterfall of Viet-nam war films, "Jacket" is neither an in depth analysis of the horrors of war like "Platoon" nor a philosophical think-piece like "Apocalypse Now." It is instead a highly stylistic and carefully crafted work that relies heavily on metaphorical symbolism to convey its messages.

Whether this approach is ultimately more effective is up to the individual judgment of viewers. One thing is clear; The piece is so painstakingly conceived and executed in every aspect that it earns itself a place of distinction in the genre.

Kubrick takes every element at his disposal to tell the story - including a symbolic use of geometry and color, just as in his past projects. The final product is nothing less than a brilliant piece of work - a piece which touches viewers in the heart, mind and

The first hour of the film takes place at a South Carolina boot camp, where viewers as well as soldiers are given a hard-hitting indoctrination into military life. Things start innocently. The second half of the flim the part that takes place in Vietnam - occurs just after the Tet Offensive. We follow a young

"Stars and Stripes" reporter trying to salvage a positive story out of the American rubble. In his quest, he sees the murder of friends and enemies. His world and ours - suddenly becomes a place where your worst enemy is a teen-age girl with a deadly aim. A world where memories of boot camp scoldings and workouts now become bittersweet blurs. A world where singing "The Mickey Mouse Club" while marching next to the burning ruins of a village smacks with perverse irony.

Through all of this, violence is used relatively sparingly - only for its emotional effect. More prominent here is the use of symbols. The milky white, perfectly symmetrical confines of the training camp barracks draw a marked contrast to the dingy gray, jagged ruins of the battlefield. The soldier who wears a peace symbol on his chest and a helmet labeled "Born to Kill" communicates more than his very verbose counterparts.

"Full Metal Jacket" is a film of images. Though it is nowhere as graphically hard-hitting as "Platoon," it is every bit as distrrbing. That this can be so, given the different approaches the directors chose to take, is testament to the artistic genius of the man behind

Dragnet' comes back as a comedy

By Marian Trainor

"Dragnet," one of the most popular radio and television police series in the '50s and '60s, is back. This time it's a $20 million film. The cast of characters are the same, but the stars playing the parts are not. None of the names have been changed to protect the innocent.

Jack Webb's Joe Friday is now Dan Ackroyd, a slightly altered facsimile. He is introduced to the audience as Friday's nephew and namesake. Irrepressible Tom Hanks takes over the Ben Alexander role of Friday's partner.

The film begins with the familiar "This is the City of Los Angeles" and the memorable four notes - dum-de-dum-dum. There is a difference between the original and the screen version. Drag-suits instead of sports jackets befor many laughs.

Ackroyd's Joe Friday is almost a parody of the original. He delivers lengthly renditions of codes and rules in the same stacatto, clipped manner. He never goes anywhere without his hat. He goes one step father in protocol than Webb. He wears Michigan's Statehood Sesquicentennial and the 150th anniversary of its first operating railroad will be recalled on Saturday and Sunday, July 11 and 12, with the "Yes! Michigan 150 Steam Train."

These two one-day public train excursions between Detroit and Fort Wayne, Ind., will be pulled by one of the last steam locomotives operating in the United States, Norfolk & Western 611.

For more information, call the Bluewater Michigan Chapter, National Railway Historical Society at 455-4455 or 264-4418. The chapter is providing chartered bus service on Sunday, July 12, from Harper Woods to the train boarding site in Allen Park.

He is so rigid that just watching him walking the straight and narrow in his perfectly shined shoes is funny.

And then there is his newly assigned partner played by Hanks who arrives in a beat-up car in his most shocking undercover hippie attire. Friday dresses him down good, but from then on, Hanks scores all the points.

Wild and crazy, witty and willing to not only bend the rules but break them if need be he drives Ackroyd up a wall. Much of the hilarity of the film rises out of their by-play. They are a terrific

Before justice reigns again, Ackroyd and friend become engaged in high speed car chases, careening around the streets of Los Angeles, dodging cars and storefronts and sometimes not missing them.

Ackroyd and Hanks work well together. Hanks keeps the action going with his enormous vitality and devil-may-care attitude. He accents Ackroyd's gloomy deadpan approach.

The prognosis of Dragnet as a film apparently is good. A sequel is in the works.

LADY YESTERDAY by Loren D. Estleman

The DIA, the Fisher Building, a deadly denouement on Belle Isle on a chill February morning. All these are part of LADY YESTER-DAY. So. too. are glimpses of Detroit's jazz past.

Amos Walker, private investigator, pursues the trail of a young woman's father, a musician long disappeared from the nightclub scene. There is a death in a motel (on Tireman) and Walker subsequently finds himself drawn into a bitter gang war between established Mafia-types and Colombian newcomers.

Deft characterization, flashes of sardonic humor, decisive action scenes are what we expect from Estleman. These elements are, of course, present in LADY YESTERDAY. Then there are those sharp little twinges of nostalgia as he both takes us back and keeps us current . . . no mean trick. This is excellent Estleman.

EVOLUTION OF THE SPECIES

The New Breed Jaguar XJ6

Introducing the 1988 Jaguar XI6. Like its forebears, its sleek form is taut and well-muscled. Yet it faces the wind with greater aerodynamic efficiency.

True to Jaguar tradition, its new aluminum alloy, fuel injected six cylinder engine has double overhead cams. However, the added sophistication of 24 valves further enhances power and high-speed response.

To the classic interior splendor of supple leather and fine wood, the new XJ6 adds advanced computer-age technology—in everything from its climate control system to its Vehicle Condition Monitor, which continually checks 27 critical functions.

The 1988 Jaguar XJ6. It is totally new, yet it reflects the finest traits of its forebears. It marks the evolution of a legendary species. It's little wonder that upon previewing it in Europe, CAR magazine called it "the best sedan in the world."

MOTOR TREND WON'T STOP PICKING ON US.

Once they got started, we couldn't stop them. This year, after the arduous task of sorting through the 1987 imports, Motor Trend wouldn't stop calling us names.

First, the Legend coupe was selected Import Car of the Year.

And then the Integra came in second. Which is a lot to take. Especially when you consider that this year the competition was pretty stiff. But Motor Trend kept coming back to us. For the precision engineering. The styling. The power.

The exact qualities you're looking for. You only have to put yourself in the driver's seat of either car to see what Motor Trend sees in us. And then you'll be picking on us, too.
