Cancer research at Wayne State gaining in status

Staff Writer Out of the public eye, for the past five years Wayne State University has been building a cancer research program that is beginning to rival the major universities. Working through the university, Harper Hospital and the Prentis Cancer Center, a group of researchers that includes nearly two dozen Grosse Pointers has been turning research into a top priority.

Before 1982, the medical school cancer unit was known for teaching and treating, but did little research. A new university president and dean of the medical school wanted to redemade the dream possible.

"Basically, they looked around and bought a research group and brought it to Detroit," said Associate Director Fred Valeriote, who was the first person brought in. "Now we're one of the largest university research groups in the United States."

Getting a program started in the midst of Michigan's massive recession wasn't easy; Valeriote said he was unable to convince, any of his associates at St. Louis' Washington University to join him at Wayne — especially when they heard about the low salaries. Grants and contracts and the possibility of treating pa-

fine the program; a bequest tients through the not-for-profit medical corporation have improved the financial picture since

> Valeriote specializes in leukemia research. He has a doctorate from the University of Toronto and has worked at the National Institutes of Health and Washington University. He has brought in associates from Harvard and Johns Hopkins - and Washington University - as well as European universities. He believes they have been drawn here by the possibility of being on the cutting edge of re-

"Harper Hospital has put a lot of money into this," he said. "That's unusual for hospitals, which are usually dominated by bean counters."

The program is now involved in at least 12 areas of research, pursuing the development of new drugs as well as new technologies like bone marrow transplants and hyperthermia - the treatment of cancer with heat. It is supported by more than $5 million in grant money, including a $2 million grant from the National Cancer Institute to look for new agents against colon can-

As Wayne's "best-kept secret" grows, it gets easier to attract good people, Valeriote said. The financial angle has improved and the program's reputation precedes it. And the good housing and schools in Grosse Pointe don't hurt either.

"Grosse Pointe is the saving grace," said Valeriote, who lives in the Park. He said a few of the program's people live in Bloomfield, but many live in the Pointes or on Detroit's east side. "I don't like to commute. If there hadn't been a nice place like this to live close to work, I probably wouldn't have taken the job."

But he did, and he's glad. "This is an exciting environment. This is where things are happening in cancer research. We're on the cutting edge.

"Usually when people think of cancer research, they think of Sloan Kettering or Mayo. What I look forward to is people thinking of the Detroit cancer center. If things keep going the way they are now, that will happen."

This is the first in an occasional series on Wayne State University's cancer research program. Future stories will look at Grosse Pointers working on hyperthermia, bone marrow transplant, nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy and other new ideas in the fight against cancer.

Day care crackdown

Using the Freedom of Information Act, the city of Grosse Pointe Woods has obtained the names and addresses of state-licensed daycare homes within its borders. Cease-and-desist orders will be sent to each of the three families operating the homes in violation of the city's ordinance against businesses in a residen-

The three homes do not include the Sheila Temkow home, which has been allowed by Wayne County Circuit Court to continue operation for 90 days. Temkow let her license lapse three years ago and is now in the process of renewing it.

If any of the three families refuse to stop offering day care, they will be issued violations by the city building department, according to city attorney George Catlin.

Councilman William Wilson would like to carry enforcement several steps further. "We should charge them the business tax for all the years they have

The state limits its licensed homes to seven children, not all of whom would necessarily attend full time.

Wilson said that if the city is to be consistent, either it should tax the homes or refund the tax paid by full-fledged daycare centers. He said he would also like to sue the state for loss of local control, because they issue licenses without asking the city.

Attorney Catlin said he is still working on a proposed ordinance amendment that could allow daycare homes to operate under city-imposed controls. "The court hopes we'll have addressed the situation and come up with a position the court can look at," he

One-way to end for Bournemouth

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

This week the Grosse Pointe Woods highway department is taking down the one-way signs on Bournemouth. The 90-day trial failed to convince enough people that one way is better in spite of a recommendation from the police department that one way be continued.

One hundred thirty-three residents signed a petition protesting the inconvenience of a oneway Bournemouth. Most of them packed the council chamber Monday to state their opinions

A few residents favored the one-way system, however.

"We really appreciate it — we notice the decrease," said resident Dan Chicklas. "Our kids are even playing a little catch football in the street... Most of the petitioners are angry because they can't get to Mack they have no concern for my children."

New resident Sue Silavs told the council that she only bought her Bournemouth house when she noticed the decrease in traffic three months ago at the time the one-way trial period started.

But the majority of the Bournemouth residents, and those on the neighboring streets, resented the inconvenience more than they liked the reduction of traffic. Besides, the traffic on the other streets increased during the experiment.

"Ironically, making Bourne-mouth 'safer' has made our streets less safe," the petitioners wrote in a cover letter to the council. "Along with increasing traffic on our streets, we are now denied the safety of using the stoplight to enter Mack Avenue.'

The Department of Public Safety conducted a traffic count on the streets during the threemonth period. Director Jack Patterson said the major reduction in traffic occurred when access to St. John Hospital was eliminated. Before that closing, 3,600 cors a day were counted on Bournemouth; afterward, traffic was down to 1,800 cars a day, Patterson said.

During the summer one-way period, traffic on Bournemouth decreased another 978 cars, from 1,833 to 855; traffic on Newcastle increased from 828 to 1,005; on Prestwick from 771 to 867; and on Raymond, there was a decrease from 787 to 501.

Resident Chicklas said he was disappointed at the council decision. He said he and a nucleus of about 10 people have been working on the traffic problem for three years. "It appears the council was swayed by numbers instead of listening to professional advice," he said, in refer-

Bill Jamieson

By Peggy O'Connor

The Detroit Red Wings director of public relations gets a little uncomfortable when it is suggested that it's a tribute to his talent that he was named the Relations Director of the Year for two straight seasons.

Never mind the fact that the first year Bill Jamieson was honored was the worst in Red Wings history and that the second, last season, featured a complete turnaround by the team for which Jamieson has toiled for six years. It takes a top-notch PR man to keep fans and media interested when a team is losing and then to keep them satisfied when the team becomes the talk of North America, right?

Well, almost.

"It takes a talented public re-National Hockey League's Public lations staff," the Grosse Pointe Farms resident admitted. "No way could I have won the awards without them. They're great people and with a job like this, with all its details, you have to have great people to work with.'

Jamieson's staff includes assistant public relations director Russ Gregory, public relations coordinator Kathy Best and department secretary Marilyn Rowe. They assist Jamieson in handling a variety of tasks from coordinating publications (media guides, quarterly newsletters, training camp guide, program notes) to handling personal appearances by the players, to media and community relations and marketing.

It's a job that doesn't end when the hockey season does, Jamieson said. "There's no offseason in professional sports anymore. We take a little time off in July, but June is a busy month because of the entry draft and league meetings, and we have player appearances that go on all summer long. And before you know it, it's time to get ready for the next season."

That next season will probably not be as difficult as the one Jamieson and the rest of the organization endured during the 1985-86 campaign. "That was just a dreadful year. We had the worst record in the league and that just put the entire hierarchy in a poor mood. That kind of atmosphere just permeated the entire office," Jamieson recalled.

The poor showing of that year's team and the resulting dismissal of coach Brad Park brought down a flood of bad feelings which ended 10 days after Park's firing . . . with the hiring of Jacques Demers.

"Jacques Demers just turned off the faucet of criticism. He is an incredible person, one of the finest I've ever met. I'm in the hockey business and Jacques just happens to be a hockey coach, but he'd be my friend if he were a butcher or a salesman or whatever. He's just a people person, someone it's just great to be

"Jacques makes us all look good," Jamieson said.

As difficult as that 1985-86 season was, last year's dramatic improvement was that much more fun for Jamieson and his staff, he said. The Red Wings doubled their point total, won

College-bound kids get ready for SATs with prep courses

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

Some will take two. Some will retake one or both.

themselves nose-to-nose with a nationally standardized test. For some, this will be the ACT (American College Test). For most, it will be the venerable SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test). Most Grosse Pointe students will tackle both tests.

SAT scores are requested by nearly 100 percent of U.S. colleges as part of their routine admission procedures. According to Douglas Norris, math teacher at University Liggett and teacher of the math portion of ULS's SAT prep course, "SATs are supposed to provide a single standard score — for colleges to judge applicants." When applications come to the colleges from thousands of different high schools, the colleges need some standardized measuring tool to evaluate applicants.

SATs are given about nine times a year in this area, and a student may take the test again and again as long as he pays the approximately $10 test fee each time. Only his highest score is recorded on college applications. The test is divided into two parts, verbal and math, with a maximum 800 points on each section. A perfect score is 1,600.

Many educators believe the SAT is, at the least, an imperfect measure of aptitudes, and at most, biased. Because of such dissatisfactions, most public and private schools offer elective courses for students who want to prepare for the SAT.

In addition, some private businesses offer SAT prep courses. Stephanie Keywell, director of the Michigan franchise of the Princeton Review, a SAT prep course, said, "Writers of the SAT say the test predicts the student's first year grades in college. However, the test is biased. Women suffer a 60-70 point SAT lag. The test doesn't measure what it's supposed to measure. It's not a fair test.

"Women suffer because they're less aggressive and because they guess less on questions. Minorities also tend not to guess answers, even when they can eliminate one or two answers. Also students from higher-income families score higher on the test."

Keywell said students can and should - prepare for any standardized tests, especially the

SAT. Linda Banovetz, reading consultant at Grosse Pointe South and teacher of a course called Testing Strategies there, said, "We suspect the SAT doesn't measure what high school kids do." Banovetz doesn't think that every college-bound student needs to take a prep course before the SAT. In last year's junior class, she said 125 out of about 350 students took the prep course. "Generally speaking, high-powered students in advanced placement classes will do well without any preparation. Those who are concerned about a particular college and aren't in advanced placement courses, do better on the SAT after a prep course." South's nine-week prep course is available as an elective, during the school day, at no charge. Banovetz emphasized that a strong background of solid academic courses is the best preparation for the SAT. "But because of the SAT structure," she said, " kids may need to get test wise. They can get confidence, practice, and some ideas about how to psych out the test."

Elizabeth Soby, English teacher and reading consultant at Grosse Pointe North, said, "Students serious about doing well and being accepted in a college should prepare for the SAT. Minimum preparation, she said, can be done in about a half-hour and includes understanding the test, the scoring, and what is expected of the test-taker. But more preparation may be beneficial. "Ideally," said Soby, "A student should be reassured that the test IS hard, should know that it's OK not to answer all the questions, and should get lots of practice taking SATs.'

North offers a 10-week prep course continuously throughout All high school students who the school year as part of the seven-period school day. The elective course costs $10 or $15 the cost of materials. Students work five weeks preparing for During their junior or senior the SAT and five weeks for the year, these students will find ACT. There is also a five-week summer prep course and a twoweek summer mini-course for SAT preparation.

Cathy Schmidt, director of publications and public relations and teacher of the SAT prep course at University Liggett, said the SAT is supposed to be a test of verbal and math aptitudes. But it may actually be a test of a student's ability to read directions.

University Liggett offers three summer courses that are open to any students (not just ULS students) who wish to prepare for proceed on the exam, how to budget exam time, how to approach the test with confidence and a positive attitude. Another private company, Stanley Kaplan Educational Center, has 120 centers in the United States, including one in Southfield. Kaplan's company offers prep courses for 30 different types of student exams, including ACTs, SATs, and entrance exams for law schools, medical schools, CPA certification and more. Its SAT prep course is 11 sessions and costs $450. Debbie Keier, manager of the Southfield center, said their course teaches students how to take the test as well as how to improve their mastery of the content of the test. "We review material kids should have had in school. We also show them how to take the test." Kaplan's statistics, accordthe SAT. Parents protest; get third class for first grade

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

An organized effort by parents of first-graders at Maire Elementary School resulted in the addition of a full-time teacher and one additional first-grade class.

There are currently 59 youngsters enrolled in Maire's first grade, which would have resulted in two sections with 29 and 30 students each. Parents balked at the number, and presented the school board with a petition with 29 signatures Sept. 8 calling for a third section.

Superintendent John Whritner said the district had already recognized the problem and had intended to have a Defer kindergarten teacher take on a section of first graders at Maire in the afternoon.

Parents had learned of the move, but were still upset. Speaking for the parents was Robin Missant, a mother of three, including a first-grader at Maire, who said that addition of the half-time teacher would only have alleviated the problem in the afternoon.

"The money for a full-time teacher was available," Missant said, "so that wasn't the issue."

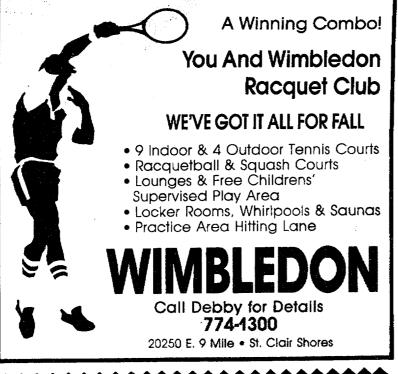

She said the parents were concerned that this particular solution to the problem had not been tried before. Administrators, Missant said, had no facts supporting their belief that a halftime teacher in the afternoon would be sufficient.

Whritner said that the staff and administration were going to evaluate the move, but deent's petitions, to add the third past.

"We were very concerned that the program had not been tried elsewhere in the district," Missant said. "First grade is the introduction to full-day school. The children will get a lot of individual attention with just 19 kids in a class.'

firm, and two private committees have been formed to provide public relations and raise awareness in the community for the need of the expansion.

Steering committee members include Hawkins Ferry, as honorary co-chair, and Donald N. Sweeny III and Frank Sladen Jr. as co-chairs.

The goal for the committee is to win passage of the bond issue and to get a one-mill increase in the library's operational millage.

Though the school system has put the project together and is on record as supporting the project, the district cannot use tax dollars to support passage of the millage or bond request.

Superintendent John Whritner said the district can, and will, provide support and information in regard to the proposed project, but the district cannot take an active role.

"The public has to sell it to the public," Whritner said.

County called an unwanted state stepchild ore and more frequently, Wayne County is seen as a kind of unwanted stepchild of the state of Michigan.

Under its first elected county executive, county government appeared for a time to be making a comeback, but in the last two years of Bill Lucas' term it suffered from lack of direction as Lucas pursued his political ambition to be governor.

Now, with new Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara in place, the public is learning that county government still has the same old problem: lack of money. The county is deep in debt, running a deficit for the current year and facing new cutbacks or increased taxes and higher fees for county services.

To help solve the economic crisis, Mc-Namara is now proposing a number of poOpinion litically unpopular partial solutions. One is a 5 percent surcharge on lottery tickets, an idea that emerged from the Wayne County Board of Commissioners who said the tax might raise as much as $24 million a year for the county.

Other ideas being discussed by Mc-Namara and the board include an increase in the sheriff's department's charges to local and state governments; a $3 million a year increase in filing and other fees in probate and circuit courts, and a bigger cut in revenue from the Cobo Hall expansion tax package passed in 1985.

More important than any of these specific cost-saving proposals, however, is the county's effort to reach an accord with the state government to contain county costs for hospitalizing indigents and taking care of the mentally ill. Wayne is the only county in the state required to operate an indigent medical program and it now is trying to get the state to pick up a larger share of the overall costs.

Currently the program has an annual budget of $32 million. The county pays $12.5 million and the state $19.5 million, but the county also is required to pick up the overrun beyond the $32 million. That requirement is costing the county about $20 million a year.

The problem is complicated by the fact that the state is trying to get the county to pay off its indigent health care debt now estimated at $50 million to $60 million. To press the point, the state has just withheld another $6 million in revenue sharing.

Early in his reign, Lucas considered the possibility of raising county property taxes another mill but was quickly talked out of it. Now the Detroit News says most observers think a general tax increase is only a question of time. It adds that "Gov. James Blanchard, who raised taxes early in his term and then suffered the political heat, clearly is pressuring McNamara to do the

Whether this is true or whether the News is just raising a straw man so that it can express again its horror of any tax increase, we don't pretend to know. But it does appear that the state ought to give the county a bigger hand with its healthcare problem. And, of course, the county ought to do a better job of controlling its health-care costs and also increase the fees charged for many county services as Mc-Namara has proposed.

When Lucas turned Republican, Blanchard lost interest in helping Wayne County government get out of the red. But Democrat McNamara so far isn't doing much better with his efforts to get more state aid. So that's the reason we're inclined to call Wayne County an unwanted stepchild of the state.

Speed compromise ahead?

compromise reportedly is under study in Lansing to raise the state's rural freeway speed from 55 to 65 miles per hour, keep radar detectors legal and beef up law enforcement activities to control speeders.

We still don't think much of radar detectors that enable speeders to escape detection, but neither the retention of the 55mph speed limit in Michigan nor the adoption of the 65-mph limit on rural freeways in 37 states has done much to restrain speeding motorists. So if tougher enforcement can be assured, Michigan might well join the Midwest parade to the 65mph limit.

Gov. James Blanchard earlier vetoed a bill passed by the Legislature that would have increased the legal speed on rural freeways to 65 mph. The governor did so because the bill did not contain the ban on fuzzbusters that he had requested. Now the word from Lansing is that he is softening his opposition to the increase in the speed limit and the use of fuzzbusters if tougher enforcement is also required in the same legislation.

A recent New showed that even in the 37 states that adopted the new 65-mph limit on rural freeways, drivers have increased their speed to 70 and higher. Top officials in most states contend that motorists are staying close to the new limit but police officers and highway patrolmen interviewed by the Times dispute that conclusion.

So, in fact, does the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, an industry group based in Washington, which says its own preliminary surveys suggest that many drivers are taking the new 65-mph limit as license to travel at speeds of 70 and higher.

In New Mexico, for example, the institute found that only eight weeks after the speed limit was raised to 65 mph, 49 percent of the cars were clocked at speeds above 65, as contrasted with 37 percent the week after the new limits were posted. In addition, the number of cars going faster than 70 mph more than doubled, from 5 percent to 12 percent, over the same period, according to the New York Times report on the institute survey.

In Michigan, the negotiators for the Legislature and the governor apparently are moving toward agreement on raising the rural freeway limit to 65 mph and keeping... the fuzzbusters legal but also imposing harsher penalties on speeders, providing money for police to buy more speed-monitoring units that can't be detected by fuzzbusters and putting more state police patrols on the road to hunt down violators.

That is quite a package, but tougher law enforcement ought to be required if the state is going to going to join the swing to the 65-mph limit. Otherwise, we fear, Michigan will simply duplicate the experience of other states in which speeders have taken the new limit as license to drive up to 70 mph and faster.

True, not all speeders cause accidents but high speeds tend to cause more highway deaths. Since this state already has its share of speeders and highway deaths, putting more state police on the highways and ordering them to enforce the new limit should be the only basis for increasing the rural freeway limit to 65 mph.

Response to library questions

To the Editor:

As co-chairs of the Library Bond Issue Drive Committee, we are pleased to respond to the questions raised in the Sept. 3 editorial in the Grosse Pointe News.

First, with regard to the question of declining population in the school district, we would like to point out that the public library itself has experienced no decline in demand for services. In fact, it is the accelerated request for services that has put a strain on the current library buildings. Over the past year, several consultants (namely, King Research and Osler/Milling Architects) have studied the community, conducted a telephone survey, and prepared reports recomending more space for the library. To quote from the King Research report, "The users want more services, more materials, more equipment, better parking, more quiet areas." Few of these things can be accommodated at Central Library. This building has had no addition or renovation since it opened in 1953 and which to this day is required to discard one book for every new book purchased in order to store the collection.

The amount of printed material has mushroomed over the past 35 years and, for the library to keep up to date, it must buy those materials which a highly educated, professional community such as Grosse Pointe demands. If this demand is linked with the need for new library technology, then the present library facilities need modernization in order to incorporate new technology. Money spent to bring the library into the 21st century will be money that results in enriched lives for all of us. The needs have been examined and articulated. The building program was based on thse needs, not on a census count which might reflect a declining population. It is a credit to the library staff that they have continued to provide excellent service within inadequate facilities. It is a credit to this community that so many are working hard on this proposed building project which will benefit every-ven though the 1988 presidential election year is less than four months away, interest in the candidates and campaigns of both parties is still lagging in Grosse Pointe, Michigan and nationally.

Why? Nobody really knows, but informed observers speculate that none of the candidates in either party is exciting the populace. Nobody yet seems to be regarded as the right person to succeed President Ronald Reagan.

Perhaps the strongest claim can be made by Vice President George Bush. He does have a lead of more than 2 to 1 over Sen. Robert Dole for the GOP nomination in a new Time magazine public opinion poll of Republicans and people leaning Republican. And Bush is the first choice of almost half of the Republicans polled.

On the Democratic side, the Rev. Jesse Jackson is leading his closest pursuer for the nomination by the same 2 to 1 margin in a poll of Democrats and Democratic leaners. But Jackson is preferred by only 26 percent and it is widely believed he cannot be nominated.

Bush also has his problems. He has improved his standing in national polls in recent months after suffering a setback along with the president over the Irancontra affair. But he trailed Dole 61 to 66 percent when Time pollsters asked respondents to identify the most decisive leader the GOP could nominate.

Worse, in Michigan, where Bush defeated Reagan in the state's 1980 presidential primary, the vice president is not assured of a majority of the state's delegates to the 1988 national convention. Nor is he even assured of carrying the Pointes' delegates as he did easily in 1980. Instead, the conservatives who have captured the state's party leadership expect to support the Rev. Pat Robertson or Rep. Jack Kemp unless the Bush forces can regain their ground.

Over the weekend, Robertson showed surprising strength in a straw poll at a Republican fund-raiser in Iowa. With 34 percent of the 3,843 votes cast, Robertson led both Dole, who was favored by 25 percent of the respondents, and Bush, who got 22 percent.

True, Iowa Republicans could vote in the poll only if they made a $25 contribution to the Iowa Republican Party, but Robertson's victory warns mainline Republicans that they can no longer dismiss Robertson as just a TV evangelist. Robertson was expected to officially announce his candidacy Tuesday after the Grosse Pointe News had gone to press.

Despite his age, President Reagan probably could win a third term if a constitutional amendment did not bar it. Even after the Iran-contra affair, he has not lost his charm and his ability as a communicator. Furthermore, he is a known quantity as compared with the unknown challeng-

True, the conventions and the campaign are still to come, but at this time none of the candidates can be regarded as a clone of Reagan. Not even Robertson after his surprising victory in Iowa and earlier displays of his strength in Michigan and South Carolina.

He said he had been going on record every year for 10 years, saying that the food served in the cafeterias was high in cholesterol and fats, and was teaching kids two different things.

Kids come out of a third-hour health class and go into the cafeteria and get a burger, fries and ice cream, Gandelot said. School adminstrators and members of the audience chuckeled and nodded knowingly when he said he has the same problem with his kids at home.

Board member Jane Nutter, a registered dietician, said that perhaps pizza has gotten a bad rap from some quarters. She said the flat meal does represent the four basic food groups and can be a healthy meal. More likely, she noted, kids will get a glass of milk, a yogurt and some ice cream. If that's the case, the kids could use a green vegetable. No action was taken.

Almost

There is a story 23 inches long that you won't read in this week's issue, because teachers in the Richmond School District are no longer on strike.

Last week teachers in Local 1 of the Michigan Education Association voted in favor of a sympathy strike with the Richmond teachers if they were replaced, even temporarily, by the Richmond school board.

Doris Cook president of the Grosse Pointe Education Association, said that about two-thirds of the Grosse Pointe teachers present voted in favor of walking out in the event the Richmond board did what it threatened to Teachers' unions from the 16 districts in Local 1 must agree to the walkout by a simple majority, although it is necessary for nine of the 16 vote to walk out ently settled. At least we hope for the general strike to occur, so.

according to the policies set forth by the state association.

We had prepared an in-depth story on the subject, including comments from local school administrators, who went on record against a sympathy strike.

The last time such an action was considered was in 1979 when the Armada School District had threatened to fire teachers. Teachers in Local 1 were ready to walkout, but a 5 a.m. agreement staved off the sympathy walkout.

The question of whether it is legal for teachers to walk out in sympathy for another school district, when they have entered into a contract with their own district, is one that will not easily be answered. It is already illegal for teachers to strike since they are public employees, but they have struck and have been successful at winning agreements with that tool.

We won't have to find out what a sympathy strike is like this year though, since all the districts in Local 1 have apparbills, half-dollars and quarters.

Whittier was designated a oneway street going north from Jefferson to Mack Avenue. A Grosse Pointe community orchestra was being organized. A wire recorder was the newest piece of equipment being praised at Vernier School. Adult education classes in Grosse Pointe were drawing more than 1,200 adults each week for classes such as bridge, Spanish, typing, oil painting, cooking, shorthand, tennis and ballroom dancing. A van offering chest X-rays was in the Grosse Pointes during the previous month, offering Point-cab with more than $100 in ers the opportunity of a TB checkup free of charge.

Walton-Pierce advertised a sale of daytime dresses from $10; hats, from $5. At the Farms Market on Fisher Road, opposite Grosse Pointe High School, hamburger was 49 cents a pound; juice oranges were three dozen for 85 cents; and Hills Brothers coffee was 54 cents a pound.

The Punch and Judy Theater was showing "Magic Town," starring Jane Wyman and James Stewart. For the Saturday matinee, the theater featured "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," starring Mickey Rooney.

uncertain and predictions are necessarily flawed. But we do know that in a community like Grosse Pointe that demands high quality and excellence, planning for the new library has involved many diverse groups who have worked to design a library that is both functional and flexible. We are looking at buildings that we believe will serve the community for the next 20 years. For example, if the proposed Community Room should be needed in the future for book storage, it can be moved to the proposed new basement.

At best, the future is always

At each step of the way, the Library Building Advisory Committee, working with the Board of Education and Friends, have examined the question of future use. New wiring and electrical outlets will provide for the electronic equipment that will store some of the material presently contained in books and magazines. We believe the current design plans reflect the flexible nature of a library that can grow to meet the community demands of the future.

As for the cost of the project, here again we have had input from the architects. from library committees, Friends, the Board of Education and from various library staff on what is needed. The costs were examined, re-examined, and debated by the Library Building Advisory Committee. It was decided that $8.625 million was the amount of money required to provide a quality, enhanced library system to the Grosse Pointe community. John Berry, editor of Library Journal, points out that nationally "the public library serves from a third to a half of the population on a regular basis for less than onehalf of one percent of the cost of state and local government." The Board of Education has always acted in the best interests of this community and will con-library project. The fourth question, costs of bond debt repayment, has been addressed by the school board's director of business affairs. The following is a summary of millage rates needed for the Grosse Pointe Libraries and the tax effect on a $100,000 market home with an SEV of $50,000.

tinue this practice with the Debt (new) for new bonded debt = .70 mills = $35 tax.

Operating (new), current operations -.40 mill -$20tax. Expanded operations -.60 mills - $30 tax. Total new millage needed (operating and debt) -1.70 mills -$85 tax.

Operating (current), existing levy -1.30 mills -$65

Total millage (current and new for operating and debt) -3.0 mills - $150 tax.

Finally, the question was raised whether it will be necessary to more than double the millage rate in order to service the debt and finance expanded services. We are certainly aware that any building expansion will require more money for operating expenses. The 20-year bond repayment will involve an increased millage rate, and that this combined with the current operating expenses will result in increased costs for the Grosse Pointe taxpayer. We would like to point out, however, that a superior product and excellent service are always purchased at a price. The library's tradition of service for everyone is an excellent example of why your library remains a source of community pride, community involvement and community

We believe that the needs for expansion have been clearly examined and defined. This community supports and believes in the value of excellent library service. A YES vote in November represents an investment in the continuing enhancement of the value and quality of this community.

A model of the proposed Central Library expansion is available for your examination. Copies of the various studies are all available for your review. We invite your active support as well as that of your readers in the passage of the bond issues.

Closed campuses? Board calls for study of current policy

By Peter A. Salinas

Staff Writer Following a discussion of revisions in the Grosse Pointe school system's master plan related to alcohol and drug abuse Monday night, board member Carl Anderson called for a study to consider ending the district's open campus policy.

Anderson said the board has they have been introduced, he and Mack. felt it was time to consider a trict's open campus policy.

Citing the problems of both substance abuse and safety, Anderson said that the district's 1985 master plan called for the closing of campuses, but had not been implemented.

Divorce support

An ongoing support group for men and women who are divorced, in the process of or contemplating it, will meet Mondays, Sept. 21 - Oct. 26, 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the War Memorial.

Human relations counselor Glen Wegmeyer facilitates the sessions. All are welcome. Cost is $4 per person per session. Call 881-7511.

Students at both North and South high schools are allowed to leave campus during their lunch periods. Anderson said the policy was "an accident waiting to happen.'

At South students line up outside nearby business to purchase food during lunch period, but at North, where there are no businesses nearby, students get into implemented policies on attend- cars and drive to fast food resance and smoking, and now that taurants and stores at Vernier

Anderson said he felt it would behoove the district to study the situation with the goal of closing the campuses.

Non-profit sector fights for turf

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

Competition between the forprofit and non-profit sectors may be the biggest issue facing notfor-profit agencies for the rest of the century, according to the president of a management institute for not-for-profit organiza-

Robert Leduc, a former Detroiter and president of the Institute for Nonprofit Organization Management in Denver, told an audience at the 15th anniversary lunch for the Accounting Aid Society that the U.S. Small Business Administration has made consideration of such competition a priority.

The two sectors have come head-to-head in several areas and Leduc made it clear that he doesn't always come down on the side of non-profits. It all depends upon how the money is raised and what it is spent on.

A clear case of misguided nonprofits, according to Leduc, is the local university that tries to close down its competitors in offering student services: bookstores, movie theaters and even dry cleaners. A non-profit organization should stick to the field in which its tax exemption applies, Leduc said. "I know of no case in which the IRS speaks to dry cleaning.'

But more often, it is the forprofit businesses moving into formerly not-for-profit fields like health care — a particular interest of Leduc's, as he represents the Visiting Nurse Association.

"For 100 years, we've been taking care of mothers and fathers in their homes - and now we should get out because forprofits want in?" he said. "We do it to take care of mom and dad, not for the buck.

What will shed more light on the subject — and probably more controversy, as well, is a court case now pending in Oregon which pits for-profit exercise centers against the YMCA. Leduc describes it as a "bellwether"

"The exercise community is taking them to court on the grounds that they do the same things and the Y has a tax exemption," Leduc said. "The difference is that on Saturday, the Y takes disadvantaged kids and gives them lessons (with the profits from the club memberships). The critical part is whether it's done for charitable pur-

Leduc told his audience of nonprofit staff and board members that they are the hidden leadership of the community.

"Non-profits are too important to be run as hobbies," he said. As a segment of the economy, they account for $300 billion a year. If non-profits were a country, they would have the seventh biggest economy in the world."

The role played by the independent sector is unique to the United States. Leduc disagreed with those who demand that the government do more. "Who would want our government to take care of our arts and music and our children and our parents?" he asked. "That's what we're really talking about."

The role of the board member of a not-for-profit organization has changed over the years from the wealthy philanthropist who helped cover the year-end shortfall to that of the professional who donates expertise. But Leduc emphasized the power in the hands of the board member to change society.

"In 49 of the 50 states, three people can form a non-profit and get help from the state to consider a minority issue," he said. "Social change in the world happens because we consider it first.

"As corny as it sounds, what a board is about is how to make this a better community. If you're talking about how to make money, that's for-profit. If you're talking about Band-Aids for problems, that's up to the government. But if you're talking about social change, that's our responsibility.

Bringing about social change doesn't come easy, Leduc acknowledged.

"If it's done right, you should lose sleep over it," he said. "It should affect your golf swing.

"This is passion, for crying out

Board approves future planning process

A process for developing strategic three to five-year plans was approved Monday night by the Grosse Pointe Board of Education, after a lengthy outline was given by South Principal Edward Shine.

Shine explained the elements of strategic planning, saying a planning cycle could be established that would look toward planning and shaping the future of the school system by developing objects for three to five years.

Recommending the implementation of the preliminary planning process, Superintendent John Whritner called for a consensus of the board rather than a vote. All board members agreed that the idea warranted further exploration, and gave the school administration the nod for the plan's development.

The process calls for the formation of a planning team of 25 to 30 people, made up of board members, central office administrators, building administrators, teachers, parents, community members and students.

Initially, a three-day retreat would be held, where the planning team would develop overall belief and mission statements, strategic policies and finally develop objectives and strategies.

After the retreat, the team would report back to the board on its early progress, and also report to the many constituent groups that make up the school system and the community.

Following Shine's presentation, board treasurer Jon Gandelot asked if the concept of strategic planning was discussed with the district's various bargaining units. Shine did not indi-

Board member Carl Anderson asked if there were any other districts involved in similar strategic planning efforts. In the process of reporting back to the board, the planning team will seek volunteers for action teams that will be eventually responsible for recommending what needs to be done to implement the strategies and achieve the objectives determined by the planning teams and approved by the board.

Shine

Upon board adoption of the three- to five-year strategic plan, it will be implemented by the superintendent. An annual review of the plan will be conducted and an additional year of plans made.

Shine stressed that the objectives determined in the strategic plan must be measurable, so as to determine the effectiveness of the plan.

Shine has been designated as the internal planner and facilitator of this new program, and was trained last spring at a national academy sponsored by the American Association of School Administrators.

Grosse Pointe businesses tailor dress codes to public image

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

Dress codes. For those in businesses that deal with the public, dress codes are facts of life. The nature of the work performed and the image the business owner wants to project are the determiners of employee dress codes.

Grosse Pointe businesses turned up a variety of employee dress requirements and restrictions, and some surprising reasons for them.

At Standard Federal Bank, Doug Graham, branch manager of the Grosse Pointe office and assistant vice president, said the

Michael Maurer, spokesman for Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit, said employees are asked to use good judgment when dressing for work. "We ask them to avoid extreme or informal attire - jeans, Levis, halters, T-shirts with slogans and sundresses. Most people who work for a bank," he said, "realize, as with any customer service organization, they're projecting an image for their organization."

Chimney Sweep Co., is also projecting an image. He wears a black top hat and a black coat customer's door, "It's strictly a tion when I'm not wearing a like it, and so do some older people." He said the traditional formal attire for chimney sweeps goes back to the 17th century when chimney sweeps were at the bottom of the social ladder. "They got their suits and top hats from the local undertaker," he said. Chimney sweeps were associated with good luck and it was considered lucky to touch his top hat. Today, Jiles said, the sweep changes out of his formal attire when he actually gets down to the work of cleaning real estate firm that's been in chimneys. To protect himself from soot and impurities, he is completely covered - head to toe. Jiles said his employees wear a cotton head cover, a respirator that filters out the impurities and goggles."

French restaurant in the Village behind the Merry Mouse, employees are dressed like French waiters. Murielle Hyland, president of the Merry Mouse/Cafe Le Chat Corp., said the waiters wear black tuxedo pants, white pleated tuxedo shirts, black bow ties, and a long white apron tied at the waist. "The outfit is like those I found in French country restaurants. It seems so clean, so French," she said.

Across the street at Benetton's, a retail specialty clothing store, Assistant Manager Kristin Ellstrom said salespeople wear Benetton clothes that they pur-

Orthodontic assistants in the offices of Dr. Thomas Gebeck, Dr. Thomas Jusino and Dr. Peter Witzky wear uniforms in muted colors of pink, gray and white. "Uniforms promote the feeling of being part of a team," Gebeck said. The three orthodontists also ask their assistants to wear a minimum of make-up, no colored nail polish, and to keep their hair tied back, if it's long. "The girls chose their own uniforms," he said. "They come in several styles - there are two slacks and two or three different tops. We pay for the uniforms.' The three orthodontists don't Don Jiles, owner of Coachlight wear white lab coats anymore, he said. "I've decided that not all doctors need to be in white coats. I've found it easier to relate to with tails when he knocks on a patients and to get their cooperaformality," he said. "Children white coat." The dentists wear shirts and ties while they're working.

Joseph Miller, co-president of Chas. Verheyden Funeral Home, said his employees must look dignified. He requires the men to dress in a manner in keeping with the profession - white shirts, dark business suits, black shoes and socks. He said he asks employees to have short hair (not on their necks) and choose conservative ties.

At Johnstone & Johnstone, a the Grosse Pointe area for more than 50 years, General Manager Paris DiSanto said people in the Grosse Pointes expect their salespeople to be conservatively dressed. "This is suits or sport coats, shirts and ties for men -At Cafe Le Chat, a tiny and suits or business attire for women." Women do not wear slacks. He said casual wear is acceptable in some other suburbs.

Those who work in the kennels at the Animal Hospital of Grosse Pointe Park wear blue jeans. They also wear a blue wrap-around lab coat to protect their clothing from dog hair and shampoo and such, according to Leslie Wilson, receptionist.

For the reception area, jeans are taboo; doctors wear shirts and ties, she said.

Academic freedom, it seems, still exists and thrives in Grosse Pointe. Of the dozen employers interviewed, only the Grosse Pointe public schools had no statement of policy or dress code for its teachers.

Crime report: Pointes see drop in serious crimes so far in '87

Law enforcement officials throughout the Pointes are reof auto thefts.

Capt. William Furtaw said 35 break-ins and six attempts over the same period of 1986.

Prompt response time, aggressive patrols and special surveillance are three successful tactics Park police have used in combating larcenies and break-ins.

"I attribute the decline to our neighborhood watch program and our aggressive patrols," Patterson said.

Neighborhood Watch programs are probably one of the most effective ways of combating break-ins and larcenies, Patterson said.

"I would like to see every block in the city have a Neighborhood Watch program," he said. "We are going to be stressing this in meetings with residents this fall. Groups are tough to get together in the summer with so many people on vacation. "I think Neighborhood Watch programs are great. They can have a big impact on crime, just by having neighbors aware of when someone will be on va-

City Deputy Director of Public Safety Richard Clarke said break-ins during the first seven months of 1987 have been cut in half. There were five reported to date, and 11 at the same time last year.

"It tends to run in spurts," Clarke said. "Back in 1981 and 1982 when gold and other precious metal prices were up so high, we had twice as many break-ins as we do now.'

Shores Public Safety Director Daniel Healy is proud that his department has not had a breakin this year, compared to two during the same seven-month period last year.

Healy notes that perhaps as many as 70 percent of the Shores homes have burglar

"We have a program where armed robbery, burglary, larceny we put safety tips on one of the and auto thefts, are below the cable television stations," Healy said. "Our community really responds to that type of program."

Healy said the village has been fortunate this year, and that crime in all areas is down.

"We and eight attempts, compared to will try and stay on top of it. Our record is a credit to the cooperation we have from the residents and the hard, dedicated work of our patrol officers."

Auto thefts are down almost across the board in the Pointes. Park figures show a drop from 57 in the first six months of 1986 to 50 through June 1987. City figures show a decline of six said. The Farms reported five felonious assaults (bodily attacks with a weapon) in 1987, while the Park reported three this year. The Woods had one, in which a man was stabbed in the back during a fight. The Shores and City both reported no such crimes.

Rape was reported once in the Park and twice in the Woods. There were no rapes reported in the Farms, Shores or City.

Total Part I crimes in the Woods were down significantly. Some 257 were reported through July 1987, and 289 were reported in the same 1986 period.

"We are always happy when we don't have an increase," Patterson said. "We do border a major city and an expressway. People do come here with the intent to steal. We have been able to maintain our statistics with no significant increases, and we are still way below our 1981 fig-

Ferber said that overall crime in the Farms has declined.

"Our primary concern is crimes against people, such as unarmed robbery," he said. "We have had a reduction in those kinds of crimes, and we owe this to some arrests that have been made, and police presence.'

Furtaw said he is very surprised by one of the statistics this year.

"Every year the total number of calls we send someone out on goes up," Furtaw said. "This vear our total calls are down by almost 700. We don't have a reason for this, but we hope it is a trend.'

Furtaw added that as far as larcenies and break-ins in the Park are concerned, he would like to say it is through the efforts of the patrol officers and increased surveillance. "It would be easy to say that and in some cases it would be true." he said, "but what is more likely the case is that someone has been arrested and is in jail

Bumper schtick

Bob Wujek, 22, left, and Matt Lucchese, 22, both of Grosse Pointe, put their heads together several weeks ago, and are now in the bumper sticker business. They said they were at an eastside bistro several weeks ago, and came up with an idea they hoped would help folks show their loyalty to the Tigers and make them a few bucks in the process. After contacting their attorney to find out just what was legal and what was not, they came out with their somewhat generic, though colorful bumper sticker. They are available at stores in the area and also at all home Tiger games.

And the public relations department was doubly busy with playoff publications, out-of-town media and a deluge of requests for the players' time, not to mention that of the popular Demers. Jamieson and his crew tried to approach things pretty much the way they did before, he said.

"One thing you'll find out about people is that if they're pretty decent people, they'll swing with you through the good and bad times. We had a pretty cooperative bunch, even when we were losing.

"It is a difficult business sometimes, but hockey is a game, after all. The sun sets in the evening and rises in the morning, whether you win or not," he said.

Jamieson got into the business the way 18 of the NHL's 21 public relations directors did: by way of journalism. He started as a Detroit Free Press copy boy as a senior at Denby High, moved on to work as an office boy for the Detroit Tigers, went back to the Free Press, and after a two-year stint in the Navy, went to work for the Detroit News.

He moved up the ladder at the News, working as a copy editor, photo editor and assistant sports editor. In 1981, the native eastsider moved to St. Louis to accept the job of managing editor of The Sporting News. When Mike Ilitch purchased the Red Wings, a mutual friend notified Jamieson of the job opening in public relations and he jumped at the

"I still miss the newspaper business," Jamieson said with a grin. "Once it gets into your blood, it doesn't leave. I guess that's one of the nice things about this job, that I can retain those newspaper contacts,'

Jamieson and his wife Rosanne have been married for 15 years and have six daughters: Therese, Clare, Bridget, Colette, Veronica and Bernadette. Jamieson's free time — limited, since he must attend every Red Wing home game and about one-half of the 40 regular season road contests — is spent with his family.

Street told the council to hire a professional planner to deal with the problems. He called the current attempts to improve the situation "Band-Aid, primitive solutions." After discussion, the council did agree to hire a planner to sit in on traffic studies now being conducted by St. John Hospitál. Pervading the discussion was the recognition that many streets in the Woods face similar overcrowding. Bournemouth, like Brys and Allard, were designed to be collector streets, funneling traffic from subdivisions to main thoroughfares. But the residents of those streets don't like it.

Aid seminar to aid parents

Last year more than $3 billion in financial aid was left unawarded because many families were not aware that money was available.

Parents and high school students will have an opportunity to learn about college financial aid in a seminar conducted by John Poplawski, former headmaster of Grosse Pointe Academy, and Beline Obeid, past president of the Grosse Pointe North Parent Club, at the Assumption Cultural Center, in two programs, Saturday, Sept. 19, at 9 a.m., and again on Wednesday, Oct. 13, at 7:30 p.m.

The topics covered will include how scholarships are awarded, how the financial system operates, when to apply, techniques for enhancing qualifications and how eligibility is determined.

For program information, call Assumption Cultural Center at 779-6111.

Transformer leak causes toxic spill

A lightning strike which disrupted power at Bon Secours Hospital early Friday morning, Sept. 11, led to a toxic PCB spill from one of the hospital's transformers.

Hospital officials said when power was knocked out, an emergency generator was turned on, but one of the transformers located in a basement boiler room failed.

Two hospital employees were treated and released for exposure to the PCBs, a known carcinogen which is used as a lubricant in electrical transformers. No patients were injured, but because the hospital's ventilation equipment was not operable, about 60 patients were moved to different areas of the facility, according to Michael Balduf, a public relations official.

"Where medically feasible, some patients may have been discharged," Balduf said.

City police responded to the hospital around 1:30 a.m., but there was no apparent threat of fire or explosion, they reported.

There was a significant release of PCBs into the transformer room, Balduf said. The hospital quickly contracted two outside firms. One firm will handle the toxic clean-up of the room, and the other is performing an air quality inspection. Reportedly, no patient areas were affected by the spill. Both the federal Environmental Protection Agency and the state Department of Natural Resources were notified of the toxic

Officials said the inspection and clean-up were concluded by midday on Friday.

Electrical power was restored to the hospital, and emergency backup systems were in place in the event of another power fail-

At no time were critical operations in the hospital such as the intensive or critical care units affected by the power outage and subsequent transformer failure, Balduf said. - Peter A. Salinas

Award-winning Junior League video tells the story of hospice care

By Peggy O'Connor Feature Editor

t seems impossible that one could watch the film "Hospice: A Shared Experience" without being touched deeply by its sadness, its warmth and its simple beauty.

It is also difficult to watch the film without learning what hospice means. Which is exactly why it was made.

"Hospice: A Shared Experience" is a 23-minute documentary-style film which stresses a general approach to the concept of hospice care which is both educational and informative. It is the result of two years of painstaking research and determination by a group of volunteers.

The idea for a hospice video originated with the Community Hospice Education Committee (CHEC), which includes representatives from St. John, Bon Secours and Cottage hospitals. In 1984, CHEC proposed that the Junior League of Detroit produce a well-made, generic film about the hospice concept which could be shown anywhere, to any audience. They also suggested that the Junior League come up with the funds for such a project.

"The membership voted to approve that in 1985, agreeing to provide the volunteers and the financial support necessary to produce the video," explains Martha Hutting of Grosse Pointe, who was a member of the committee which produced the video. "And that was just the beginning."

While the project was competitively bid, another committee member, Betsy Creedon of Grosse Pointe, stepped out of the picture. She is a partner in September Moon Production Network Inc. of Southfield, the production company which was eventually selected from among the three companies which bid on the project.

At that point Creedon stepped back in and stayed for the long haul: nearly two years of research, balancing production needs with hospice needs and struggling with the emotions—both her's and those of everyone involved—inherent in the pro-

"Looking at this film now, it's succinct. It tells the story. But back when we got started, the ideas, the notions of what we wanted just filled the room. We had to get over the idea of what we wanted to show and get down to what had to be shown to tell the story of hospice," Creedon says.

The video committee began its research by watching many films on hospice, most of which were too specialized for their needs. "We needed to make a film which was specific to the philosophy of hospice," Creedon explains.

"The main point we wanted to make is that hospice in some form is appropriate for everyone who wants it," Hutting says. "And that it is available and is always the patient's choice."

The committee felt that the film should stress these points:

- Hospice is a philosophy of care for patients in the terminal phase of illness (usually defined as a life expectancy of six months or less and when curative measures have proven to be of no further value).
- Hospice care is primarily a home care program with inpatient care reserved for symptom and pain control when this cannot be achieved in the home setting, and for brief respite care for loved ones.

• Hospice team members include the physician (who directs plan of care), nurses, home health aides, a spiritual counselor and volunteers.

• The patient and family are considered an integral part of the treatment team and the family's need for emotional support and direction in managing the patient's care are a primary focus of the hospice concept.

• Payment for services is covered under Medicare for eligible recipients and is offered through many third party insurance plans.

• Hospice care may be arranged through a patient's physician, or by contacting a local program directly. It is an alternative for the terminally ill. It is a choice.

IT WAS OBVIOUSLY no small task to incorporate that much essential information into a 22-minute film. That was made even more difficult by the fact that those involved in the production — outside the production company — were volunteers, not communications professionals and certainly not hospice professionals.

One major step was the selection of the executive producer and of the film crew. The Junior League's Christine Kaiser was the executive producer. Creedon and Rosalind Lullove Cooperman were producers and Woody Robertson was director.

"Chris Kaiser did a wonderful job. You have to understand that she had to be trained in every aspect of production. Because you are working with terminally ill people and their families, you can't have somebody who doesn't know what's going on when you are filming. Chris spent more time at our offices that I did See HOSPICE, page 2B sometimes. She often worked from 9 to 5 every day learning about production," Creedon says.

"We also thought long and hard about the crew members we worked with. When a film crew comes into a location, they just disrupt the hell out of it. We were going into homes and hospitals with this project and we needed to find people who could do the job without disrupting the dignity of the situation. We were lucky to have found a very good bunch of people," Creedon explains.

The committee also found a wonderful group of patients and families to participate in the video. "They were all just so beautiful. Here they were, dying, and they actually were thinking about helping other people. Chris Kaiser had to find people willing to be interviewed on camera. We couldn't use anyone who was afraid to speak on camera or families who wouldn't be able to do it," Creedon adds.
THEY FOUND PEOPLE

"like "Corinne," a terminally ill patient, who, with her housemate, depicted hospice care for single people. "Corinne said, ' I just want to know that I can help someone else who may have what I have know that it's okay," Martha Hutting says. "And then there was Mr. Tate, a very private person who showed very little emotion. He was included in the film because he said that through hospice care 'life can be as normal as possible,' and we needed someone to say that," Creedon explains.

Editing the film was difficult because the committee didn't want to leave anyone out. The end result is brief, but powerful glimpses of the families and friends of the patients profiled, interspersed with comments from physicians, nurses and volunteers. "We all had things we fought to keep in, but couldn't because we had to use the families and situations which would tell the story. It was so hard because you just don't want to lose those people," Creedon says.

When it was over, the families of those involved - even those who never made the final cut thanked the Junior League committee and the production company. The scenes edited out of the film were given to the patients' families, Hutting adds.

No mention of the outcome of the individuals profiled in the film is made at the end of the film. "We debated for an entire evening over that, but we wound up deciding that the film would have more impact if we didn't tell what happened to the patients and their families," Hutting says.

The film has had an enormous impact on all who view it, the pair add. This spring, it won a golden cassette for merit in public service from the International Television Association. It is currently in competition in the New York Film Festival and in the National Hospice Awards of Excellence.

Winning awards is not why the film was made, Hutting and Creedon explain. "We want this film to be available to everyone. It was made so that it can be used in schools, churches and organizations or go with hospice speakers. Anywhere where the word of hospice can be spread," Hutting says.

The video was awarded a grant of $5,000 by the Gannett Foundation for reproduction and distribution. It is available in 1/ 2-inch VHS or Beta, 3/4-inch Umatic or 16 mm. film. Copies have been donated to the Grosse Pointe Public Library and are available for home viewing. Individuals may purchase a copy by contacting the JLD office at 881-

Hutting and Creedon say that they and the rest of the committee are satisfied with the finished project. "It is a sad film, but really, there is an essence of hope throughout; hope for death with dignity and without pain," Creedon says.

Grab those racquets: Construction has begun on Gary Bodenmiller's new indoor tennis club at Balduck Park on East Warren near Mack. Bodenmiller, of the Farms, says that the Eastside Tennis Club which will include seven courts, four of them clay courts, should be completed by mid-

October. "With the closing of the Grosse Pointe Indoor Tennis Club, eastside tennis players needed a quality club with a great location. The response to our new club has been fantastic and we are really excited about serving the tennis community," Bodenmiller said.

A judicious choice: Putting their best judging talents to use recently were three members of the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center: Flo Kliber of Crosse Pointe Park; Cheryl Waldeck of Grosse Pointe Woods; and Joyce Janowski of Harper Woods.

The Northeast Guidance Center is a community mental health agency which serves the mental health needs of northeastern Detroit, Harper Woods and the Grosse Pointes. The Center, now in its 24th year, has a wide range of programs, serving the community with aftercare and day care, support groups, counseling and therapy for children, adolescents, adults and older adults.

A happy day: Grosse Pointe's Lou Wilcox was one of approximately 75 guests who gathered at the Lochmoor Club Sept. 6 to help good friends Sally and Fred Woelkers of Newport, N.C., celebrate their 40th anniversary. Many of those who sat around tables in the tennis lounge were the Woelkers' children and their families. "Only" 12 of 15 children could make it, but it was a happy bunch which was the talk of the Lochmoor Club, Wilcox says. The United States Navy was well represented, what with several of the Woelkers' children among the Navy's own. Daughter Peggy Woelkers Spencer was one of the three children who couldn't make it to the celebration; the graduate of Our Lady Star of the Sea is in the Naval Reserve, stationed with her Navy husband in Spain.

They and the other Woelkers not in attendance were missed, but the rest of those at the Lochmoor Club and at the 40th anniversary mass at Annunciation Church which preceded the reception, made up for it by having a very good time, according to Wilcox.

Four generations of Woelkers were represented at the mass, which 70 of the guests attended. Making up one of those generations was Sally Woelkers' father, Roland Smith, who, way back when Sally, his only child, was married, probably had no idea that four decades and 15 grandchildren later, he'd be helping celebrate this special day.

A rewarding relationship: Olga and William H. Denler of Grosse Pointe began their relationship with Detroit's Hutzel Hospital when their first child was born in the 1930s.

Olga Denler later became involved with the hospital's Volunteer League, now known as the Auxiliary, and was elected to the Board of Trustees in 1960. William Denler, past president of the American Society of Interior Designers', held the post of vice president of the Hutzel Men's Guild in 1983.

For their long-time service on behalf of Hutzel, the couple received the 1987 Ellen G. Martin Award for Humanitarian Service at the hospital's annual dinner dance Saturday, Sept. 12, at Penna's of Sterling Heights.

September is a busy month for local gardeners

By Ellen Probert Special Writer

Sometimes it seems as if we should celebrate the New Year in September instead of January. So many activities begin - or take up where they left off last spring - that September is certainly one of the busiest and most crowded months of the year. It's an exciting time for new directions and interesting events.

One event that comes to mind is Agnes Crow Day, Sunday, Sept. 20, at the Detroit Garden Center on East Jefferson Avenue. A reception and program will be held at 1 p.m. honoring Agnes Crow, longtime board member of the Garden Center and with a service record as a teacher, garden club officer, devoted church worker and financial advisor to many organizations adding up to 195 years. In her honor, the Detroit Garden Center has established the Agnes Crow Horticulturist Fund to be used to assist people of all ages in their gardening pursuits. For more information, call the

A somewhat daunting statistic tells us that there are about 700 species of poisonous plants in the United States and Canada. No thorough studies as to which plants are harmful have ever been conducted, so most of our information, unfortunately, comes from recorded accidents. It is hard to be accurate about plant poisoning statistics because they are so apt to be misleading. One magazine article a few years back excited a lot of people needlessly because the figures were stated in an irresponsible way, including many calls to poison centers by worried mothers merely inquiring about a plant their children may have eaten. In most cases, there was no danger at all, but the call was recorded in the statistics.

The use of the word poison is also misleading. A plant is considered poisonous only if it causes problems if eaten and these may range in severity from mild stomach upset to death caused by harm to the digestive system, liver or kidneys, or the central nervous system.

Such plants as poison ivy or ragweed are not truly poisonous, but rather are allergens, causing allergic reactions which, in the case of poison ivy, can also lead to immunity after the initial at-

The ingredient in poison ivy, oak or sumac which causes the trouble is called Urushiol and even the fumes from these plants can cause a rash. The leaves are red in early spring and in the fall and shiny green during the summer.

Some common toxic plants which are familiar to us all are ladyslippers, daffodils, buttercups and poinsettias. But if properly treated, plants are generally our friends and some poisonous plants can be used with proper scientific care, as ingredients in beneficial medicines. Foxglove, for instance, gives us the drug

In the European flower calendar the flower for September is the morning glory, while the Chinese calendar lists the mallow blossom as the flower of the month. It is considered a magic charm against evil spirits. The Japanese flower calendar opts for chrysanthemum.

Julia Darlow will speak at AAUW's opener

Julia Darlow of Grosse Pointe, president of the Michigan Bar Association, will be guest speaker at the kickoff meeting of the American Association of University Women, Grosse Pointe Branch, on Thursday, Sept. 24, at 7:30 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

Darlow is a partner in the Detroit law firm of Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van Dussen and Freeman. She will be the first to speak on the AAUW's new issue "Promoting Individual Liberties." She will focus on tensions between individual liberties and the public welfare and address the proper balance between individual privacy versus the public right to know.

The meeting will feature a welcome to AAUW branch members and prospective members. AAUW president Kay Kirby will introduce Viki Adik, vice president in charge of general programs; she will receive the monthly programs for the year. Carla Teagan, vice president for program development, is compiling a handout containing a brief description of the study and interest groups.

Those groups include: art appreciation, book discussion (evening), bridge marathon, chorus, creative parenting, current books, day stitchery, international relations, La Causerie, Catherine Elizabeth Carr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hanson Carr of Grosse Pointe Farms, married John Howard Mecke IV, son of Mrs. J. Howard Mecke and the late J. Howard Mecke III of Philadelphia, Pa., on May 16, 1987, in Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

The Rev. Stanton Wilson officiated at the 11 a.m. ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Essex Golf and Country Club in Windsor, Ont.

The bride wore a white, silk shantung gown. A circle of white flowers held her waist length veil. She carried a bouquet of white tulips.

Amy Lyden of Chicago, Ill., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included the bridegroom's sister, Pamela Goslin of Philadelphia; Ginna Montgomery of Birmingham, Mich.; and Suzy Hull of New York, N.Y.

Attendants wore mid-calf length skirts of seafoam green Dr. and Mrs. Henry Sprague. moire taffeta, with matching seafoam sashes and a large bow at dress, styled with a sweetheart the waist. Their white, V-necked neckline and semi-cathedral collars. Each carried a bouquet of pink tulips.

Best man was Jim Lynch of Gulph Mills, Pa. Ushers included the bride's brother, Robert Carr of Grosse Pointe Farms; Gerry Donnelly of Boston, Mass.; and Frank Selinger of Yardley, Pa.

The newlyweds honeymooned in Bermuda.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip A. Sisca Boydell-Sisca

Patricia Grace Boydell, daughter of Mrs. Henry Sprague of Grosse Pointe Farms and William Boydell of Charlotte, N.C., married Philip Anthony Sisca of Oakland, Calif., son of Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Gasparini of Rye. N.Y., on Aug. 22, 1987, in Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

The Rev. Bruce Ingles of Grosse Pointe Memorial and Monsignor Francis X. Canfield of St. Paul Church officiated at the 4 p.m. ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Grosse Pointe Farms home of cented the short sleeves and bustle of the dress, which also featured pearls sewn on the bodice. She carried a bouquet of gardenias, white Sweetheart roses and stephanotis.

Julie Howell of Boston, Mass, a University of Vermont friend of the bride's, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included the bride's sister-in-law, Diane Boydell of Grand Rapids; Maria Sisca of Harrison N.Y., and Cathy Ponsrock of Rye, N.Y., both sisters of the bridegroom; and Rita Radecki of Redondo Beach, Calif.; Angela Parks of Grosse Pointe Farms; and Jane Donohue of Pennacook, N.H.

The attendants wore polished cotton dresses of rose coral; each was styled with one bare shoulder and one shoulder with a bow. Each carried an arm bouquet of pink gerber daisies, peach roses and white freesia.

Best man was Scott Lombino of Redondo Beach, Calif. Ushers included the bride's brothers, Woody Boydell of Detroit. David Boydell of Brisbane, Calif., and Bob Boydell of Grand Rapids; the groom's brother-in-law, Joe Ponsrock of Rye, N.Y.; the groom's cousin, Paul Vallarelli of Harrison, N.Y.; and Peter Usen of Weston, Mass.

The mother of the bride wore a tea length dress of ivory linen, embroidered at the neck, sleeves and hemline with pale pink satin flowers and white satin flower petals.

The bridegroom's mother chose a dress of turquoise-green silk; her flowers were white Sweetheart roses and a gardenia.

The bride holds a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Vermont. She is assistant property manager at I.M.A.

The bridegroom attended the University of Vermont and the University of Southern California and holds a bachelor of arts from the University of San Francisco. He is assistant vice president, foreign exchange trader, at Wells Fargo Bank in San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Ward White-Ward

Mary Elizabeth White, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph M. White Jr., of Grosse Pointe Park, married Harry Thomas Ward III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Ward Jr., of Grosse Pointe Park, on April 11, 1987, at St. Martin's Church. The Rev. Nicholas Prickel officiated at the 4 p.m. ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. The bride wore an ivory satin dress, which was covered completely with Illusion ending in a short train. She carried a loose, spring bouquet of daffodils, iris and alstromeria. Maid of honor was the bride's sister, Anne White of Grosse Pointe. Bridesmaids were Joan Sullivan of Chicago, Ill. and Elizabeth Johnson of Boston, Mass.,

both former Grosse Pointe residents. Genevieve White of Harper Woods, the bride's niece and godchild, was flowergirl.

Attendants wore tea length dresses of sapphire blue. Ivory Illusion, accented with a lace top and border, covered each dress.

Best man was the bridegroom's brother-in-law, Jay Pfieffer of Wichita, Kans. Ushers included David White of Detroit. Jerry Suminski of Grosse Pointe Park and Todd Platt of Grosse Pointe Park.

The mother of the bride wore a two-piece dress of pink silk. Dark pink tea roses formed her corsage.

The bridegroom's mother chose a lavender silk suit and wore pink roses in her hair.

Soloist for the ceremony was Alvin Johnson; organist was Rory Bolger. Lisa Toteff and Joan Dennehy were scripture readers.

The bride holds a bachelor of arts in English from Aquinas College in Grand Rapids. The bridegroom holds a bachelor of science from State University of New York in wildlife biology and fisheries management. He is employed by a private animal control firm.

Manipulation starts quite early

With the start of another football season, college recruiters will soon be attempting to knock on the doors of high schools in search of the ideal football player.

Before the season is over, many bids will be made and several recruiting "tactics" will be displayed. However, some fish will bite and others won't. In Grosse Pointe, an area where academics are proudly rated high, football recruiters may find the ideal athlete in the library more than in the film room. Not because the athletes aren't here, but because they don't seem to be concerning themselves with a possible misconception of what college and professional football has to offer.

With the recent terrorism in the NCAA and NFL and how the flood gates have been pushed open to allow collegiate athletes the opportunity to step onto professional turf after taking money (or any number of reasons) the more impressionable high school athletes may be misled. Do they stick around the college campus, where they were led to believe life's simplest pleasures rest, until they've had enough and then call for a draft? From high school to college, life changes and it doesn't seem right that some college recruiters implant glorious ideas into 17-year-old minds. It's a big-business game played by people who try to tempt a kid into playing football "at the greatest school in the coun-

Playing the pawn

Recruiting seems to be a life-size chess game, but it's too bad that they play the human pawns in order to pack a stadium or "steal another player from possibly attending another school." From day one, when an athlete is being recruited, the truth is sometimes very far away. It may be neglected in order to force a kid into believing he or she can become the top gun See FULTON, page 2C

Sumbera looks to turn it around Eisenhower stops Norsemen streak at 26

Waterford Kettering. Remember that name? It was a 21-13 win over Kettering that started the longest regular-season winning streak in Grosse Pointe football. The 26-game streak is proudly owned by the Norsemen football team. However, their bid to make it 27 consecutive wins came to an abrupt ending last Saturday night as the Eagles of Utica Eisenhower handed the Norsemen their first regular-season loss since Sept. 8, 1984,

"We've had a lot of success in the past, but we have accepted it (the loss)," said North Coach Frank Sumbera. "Sure it is disappointing to lose, but the kids have accepted that and are ready to

Twenty-six straight wins is a city record, but 27 would have added another feather to the cap for

"We were going for 27, as well as an undefeated season again this year, but it just didn't happen," Sumbera said. "We've had back-to-back undefeated seasons and it would have been nice to do it again. It just wasn't meant to be.'

In those two undefeated seasons, the Norsemen earned two berths in the state playoffs. Last year their season ended in the second round against Henry Ford, 48-6.

The loss against Eisenhower was reminiscent of the Henry Ford game as North committed six turnovers, including four lost fumbles.

"We kept giving them the ball in great field position," said Sumbera. "When you give a good team the ball that many times inside your own 20, they are bound to score.'

North fell behind early, 7.0, but a touchdown, on a broken play, to close out the first half truly did the damage.

"If we could have gone in down 7-0 at the half, it would have been a feather for us because we were playing poorly," said Sumbera. "But we didn't and that was a major setback."

North ran only eight plays in the first half and went on to rush for only 71 yards and pass for 83. "We just wanted to get on the scoreboard," said Sumbera. "It's disappointing to be shutout. We've disappointed that the streak is over. It's one of those things. It's nice while it lasts, but when it's over, it's over. The guys want to get rolling for this weekend.' White-Division rival, Warren Cousino, steps thing's going to give.'

What gave was the streak.

"This is a big game for us," Sumbera said about the Cousino matchup. "We will be trying to piece things back together. Good football teams can bounce back after a loss. This weekend we'll see what we're made of.

"I feel confident these kids will be ready," said Sumbera. "Losing isn't something these guys haven't shared, but I know they felt badly about losing. They felt bad the streak is over, but I think they felt worse because they didn't play that

Marc deManigold and Karl Schultz are the only two current Norsemen who were on the team when the 26-game streak commenced. They are hoping they can give birth to a new streak, but Sumbera is hoping it's not in the opposite direc-

"The kids are a bit more relaxed now that the streak is over," said Sumbera, "but you don't want to start one the other way. You don't want to win 26 and then lose two in a row.'

Bruno Giglio (22) is hoping to release many more passes that will lead his offense down the field to another winning streak. The Norsemen quarterback was 7-for-20 against Eisenhower for 83 yards. However, Coach Frank Sumbera is hoping Giglio, through the protection of Jay Tobias (25) and Mike Hagen (77) can direct the Norsemen to a much needed victory over White-Division rival Warren Cousino. Game time is 2 p.m. at the Norsemen Field, Saturday, Sept. 19.

'It will never happen to me. I read about things happening to other people, but I am careful and won't have a problem.'

How many times have we heard people say those things? Often we ignore the possibility of catastrophe occuring aboard our boats. We feel immune to disaster and therefore we are neglectful.

The nature of boating, however, makes it imperative to be prepared. What are some of the major areas we need to look at?

We need to prepare for a "man-overboard" situation. Too many have been lost at sea because a spouse or guest did not know how to maneuver the equipment and vessel to safely retrieve the victim. This is a serious situation and needs to be taken very seriously by every boat owner.

If someone does go over - from child to adult - the crew needs to have instant access to throwable devices that will help locate the person and offer them some assistance. Too often life rings are lashed so securely that precious time is lost untying lines so the ring can be thrown. Eyes of everyone except the helmsman need to be on the victim — not on the knots and lines.

The ring should have a whistle so the victim can get the crew's attention. It requires much less effort to blow a whistle than to yell and scream at a boat moving away. A small sea anchor should be attached to the ring that will keep it from drifting too fast. The life ring could float right past the person needing it if not slowed down in some way. A light attached is also helpful; especially at night. Some sort of high intensity stobe is most easily

For crewed boats, a man-overboard pole is also desirable. With its flag up in the air, it can be seen above the wave crests and helps locate the person in the water. Man-overboard poles are generally attached to the life rings with about 25 feet of floating line. It also needs to be in an accessible place aboard the boat.

Life jackets are required. The problem with life jackets is that so few actually wear them. If that is the case aboard your boat, then you need to keep them where they are close at hand in the event they are needed. Attach a whistle to each as well.

Safety harnesses are an often overlooked piece of safety gear. They can remove the panic from situations where people fear they may go over the sides. Safety harnesses, with their long tethers, can secure a person to the vessel with a minimum of bulkiness. Safety harnesses work best when attached to a jack line that runs along the deck, enabling the wearer freedom of movement without unhooking the tether from the vessel. If crew should be swept off their feet in bad weather, or even stumble and fall on a nice day and lose footing and go over the side they do not become detached from the boat. Hence, disastrous consequences are avoided.

Handholds need to be kept free for their intended use. Too many of us use them as places to stow gear like boat hooks and dingy oars. Avoid the temptation. It defeats the purpose. Have you ever grabbed for the handhold only to have it come away with you; discovering it was the boathook instead and you get a sinking feeling? Handholds are for you — not your gear. Stow that type of gear in the lazarette.

Non-skid decks are another safety feature we just take for granted. On most fiberglass boats, the non-skid surface is moulded right in. On many boats, that non-skid is a great dirt collector and nothing more. Check your non-skid. Maybe it needs to be refreshed. It, like everything else, wears. There is non-skid tape that can be applied as well as self-adhesive panels and non-skidpaint that will provide sure footing. A slip and fall can cause serious injury. Non-skid should also go anywhere and everywhere the foot needs to be secure — a varnished bowsprit perhaps or the companionway or even on the lexan hatch.

Not all non-skid is compatible with all boating shoes. Experiment with shoe soles to see which ones work best on your boat. If the shoes prove to be too slippery on a wet deck, it may be best to save them for "shore duty" and get another pair for the boat.

Sometimes the simplest procedures are the ones that prove to be the most effective in an emergency situation. Don't be afraid to go out and practice. Even large cruise ships practice life saving procedures and we should too.

Safety can't and shouldn't be taken lightly. If it is, we may be the ones saying "but I never learned how because I never thought it would happen to me!"

Footballers even record; runners go 5-0

After dropping an 8-6 decision to Utica Eisenhower in the season opener, the Blue Devils of ning their record at 1-1 and giving them a 1-0 clip in the E.M.L.

"We executed things well." said Blue Devil mentor Jon Rice. "We wanted to shut them out and score points on defense and we did all that." Three safeties and five touchdowns combined for 40 points and the final three came on a 37-yard field goal off the foot of Doug Lucas.

"It was just one of those nights that everything went our way," said Rice.

South took the opening kickoff and drove the length of the field to open the scoring. Roger Hunwick, who rushed for 135 yards on 10 carries, scampered 35 yards for a touchdown and later added a 60-yard run to a rather fabulous performance. Ted Mills scored on a five-yard plunge and pulled in a 40-yard pass from quarterback Bryan Jones, who passed for over 100 yards, to put six more points on the board.

Other touchdowns came from Steve Rice (5 yard run) and Brett Hanson.

"We did a lot of things well," South showed no mercy as they said Rice. "I think what made over-powered Roseville, 43-0; eve- the difference was that we got the first game jitters out of our system against Eisenhower and then worked hard in practice. It showed against Roseville."

> South will try to make it two straight in the E.M.L. this Saturday when they face defending league champ Port Huron Northern at home.

"This could be a preview of the league championship," Rice said. "We've said all along that they (PHN) would have a hand in deciding who would win the league.'

The Huskies sport a strong backfield, including Todd Morgan who ran back the second half kickoff a year ago to score the only points of the game in a 7-0 South loss.

"They are a well-coached team," Rice said. "They also have a very explosive backfield and a strong quarterback in

According to Rice, the Huskies are a team that can strike at any moment.

"They won't get anything for a while and then all of a sudden they break a big play," said Rice. "We are hoping to control the ball and keep it out of their hands. If we can do that and keep them from the big play, we should be okay."

Game time is set for 1 p.m. at South.

North sports Seasons start well for Norsemen

By Josh Abbott Special Writer

The high-scoring Norsemen varsity soccer team has kicked into the season with four consecutive wins in running up some impressive numbers. They have given up only two goals and scored 23.

In their opener, the Norsemen were led by the quick foot of Chris Caldwell who led the attack with four goals and Glen Nadeau's three tallies to topple Lake Shore, 10-0. Ben Black, John Drummy and Angelo Gritsas had one goal each.

Caldwell continued his assault on opposing goalies the next time out as he had two goals in a 5-0 triumph over Warren Woods Tower. Drummy added two goals as well and Gritsas chipped in with one. On Sept. 9, the Norsemen toppled Romeo 5-2 as Caldwell hit for two goals while Brian Metry, Link Bessert and Drummy each booted goals.

Two days later, Lakeview became the fourth straight Noresmen victim, 3-0. Caldwell provided all the scoring with a hat trick; bringing his season total to 11 goals. Glen Nesom registered his third shutout in four attempts.

G. P. Hunt Club to host final show

Riders from across Michigan and Ohio will converge at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club, in the Woods, Sept. 19-20 for the final Michigan Hunter/Jumper Association B-Circuit horse show of the summer.

This show is the rider's last opportunity to collect points towards the year-end championships awarded at the Michigan Hunter/Jumper Association Awards Banquet held in the fall.

The Grosse Pointe Hunt Club show will feature classes for hunters, jumpers and equitation riders. Hunter classes are judged on the horse's style of jumping, manners, way of going and smoothness of performance. Jumpers on the other hand, are only judged on their ability to clear the jumps without knocking them down. The fences in the jumper classes are usually much higher than those in the hunter division.

Equitation classes are judged on the rider. Their ability to handle the horse, the smoothness of performance and position are all taken into account when

Do real men do aerobics?

Real men are wonderful Many of them call our studio inquiring about classes for their wives because they care about their wives and want them to be physically fit.

Those calls always touch a special portion of my heart; not the part strengthened or enlarged from oxygen consumption, but the "soft" spot in my heart that does a little "blip" when feel someone really cares. How better to exhibit your love than to say I care about how you feel, how you act and about the quality of your life? I want you to be with me for as long as divinity has planned. I want to help you because I care about you.

Is your mate helping or hindering your efforts to feel better about yourself? Are you thwarted at all attempts to eat healthy diets, or are you encouraged in your efforts?

Watching the Michigan State football game which was televised last week, I wondered who in the world the man was in the green shirt standing by the sidelines with the huge pot belly who looked terribly concerned. It was, of course, the coach! The coach, the man to whom these young physically fit men are to look up to. The man who ran their young lives. Not that that man with a pot belly can't be a role model, but, lets face it, maybe not on the playing field.

Now, in your mind's eye, imagine this man in his football prime. Large shoulders, nice trim abdominals, tight rear end is that a position in football?). firm thighs. Ah! Is this a message that football or baseball is only a game and not a measure of physical fitness? I think so. I've had many conversations with mostly males recently who feel that the terms "athlete" and 'physical fitness" are synonomous. Au contrare!

I'm certain that most coaches oday consider themselves ath letes; even after the bloom has faded. Yet, look, just look, at most of the coaches of today's major teams. One should know that physically fit doesn't describe them.

Another example might be exemplified by the golfer who has mastered the game. He is obese, has high blood pressure, a low aerobic capacity, but his mastery of golf is tops. His athletic ability in this sport is superb. He is, however, not physically fit.

Men, what's important? To live a longer quality lifestyle? There's ultimately no question.

"Aerobics" simply means with oxygen. So, get moving! The law of life is movement. Healthy men do aerobics. They do more than that. They care about themselves and care enough to have a low percentage of body fat. They want to see their families grow and become independent. They care about thier blood pressures being low. They learn to look outside of themselves and care about the activity rather than the social feedback of the situation.

Join a class, even if there are no other men in the class. You'll get lots of positive attention! Be at ease with yourself, focus on your goals which should be an aerobic conditioning program geared to lower blood pressure and increase stamina. It's an hour that you'll spend on yourself for us. You'll love yourself more and you'll be around more for those who love you. Real men do aerobics - for the health of it.

Fueling the system with fiber is helpful

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

Just like a car runs smoothly with proper gas and efficient parts, a body needs a good dose of fiber in order to function prop-

According to Beth Naber, registered dietician of St. John Hospital, fiber is highly recommended in daily consumption.

"Fiber is beneficial in helping to lower serum cholesterol levels and as a preventative measure in lessening the risk of certain forms of cancer," said Naber. Bowel cancer and cancer in the rectum area are most common, so fiber in the diet helps in keeping the bowel stimulated and decreases the transit time of food in the system.

"Food moves through the system faster when fiber is in the system."

According to Naber, if food is in the system for an extended period of time, which generally occurs if there is a low level of fiber within the system, binding can result.

"Research has shown that if the transit period is slow, then there is a tendency to bind up the serum cholesterol in the body," she said. "The plaque and cholesterol build up in the arteries around the heart causing the arteries to deprive the heart of sufficient oxygen.'

In order to prevent this type of situation, Naber suggests you keep the arteries clean.

"Keeping the arteries clean isn't all that difficult," she said. "Having fiber in the diet helps keep them clean as well as being a health benefit. Keeping the arteries clean causes good blood flow and helps prevent possible

Fiber does not automatically appear in the diet. According to Naber, a concerted effort is important for proper fiber intake.

"A lot of people tend to think that they are always taking in fiber," said Naber. "People have to make a conscious effort to get more fiber into the system.'

Fiber intake is essential and according to Naber, an abundant amount is not necessarily detrimental to the body.

"A lot of fiber is not necessarily harmful to the system, but more advantageous" she claimed. "Food will process in and through the system better."

Fiber can be found in any number of foods. The most common are fresh fruits, vegetables and whole grain bread, according to Naber.

"Foods that are highest in fiber are those where the whole grain skin or seed is left on the food," said Naber. "If foods are processed or refined, then the fiber content is going to be less and that's not good. If people are trying to get more fiber through fruits and vegetables, they should leave the skin intact because it increases fiber content." Naber also suggests that keeping vegetables crisp and not over-cooking foods is essential in order to keep the fiber from being displaced.

"The more you cook something, the more you are softening the fiber and its content," she said.

When increasing fiber to the diet, one precaution is necessary in order to maintain proper body functions.

"When a person increases fiber it means more solid waste will be accumulated," she said. 'You have to increase fluid to maintain proper elimination of body fluids."

Fiber is an essential part of the diet. Naber suggests that maintaining an ideal weight and eating foods low in fat will also contribute to a healthier body.

What is PMS?

PMS has affected women since the beginning of time, but it has only been the last several years that some of the medical community has started to recognize its existence and devote serious study and research to the cause and alleviation of this problem. One of the pioneers in the field of PMS is Dr. Katharina Dalton of London, England.

to 40 percent of the female population is affected by PMS, their symptoms ranging from mild to severe.

"Ten percent need treatment," she explained. PMS may start in puberty, but tends to be more prevalent in the 20s and 30s; getting worse with age. It also shows signs of being hereditary.

In her 30 years plus of dealing with PMS sufferers, Dr. Dalton has had good success in treating patients with progesterone, a female hormone produced by the ovaries that is present in the body prior to menstruation. Dr. Dalton feels that PMS may be due to a hormonal imbalance, in other words, women who suffer from PMS have a shortage of progesterone.

Because this hormone is only present during the two weeks prior to the onset of menstruation, the women only have symptons during these two weeks. After the period, progesterone is not present, and therefore, the PMS sufferers are sympton free during the following two weeks.

The length of time these symptoms occur may vary with individual cases, but to be classified as a PMS sufferer by Dr. Dalton, a woman must have "recurrent symptoms before menstruation or the first few days of the menses, with complete absence after menstruation." As she pointed out, "It is something that comes and goes like clockwork." The list of PMSassociated symptoms is extensive, numbering into the thousands. Among the most common symptoms are depression, irritability, headaches, food cravings, tension, fatigue and water retention.

Food cravings are one of the most common afflictions shared by PMS sufferers. A woman can be eating healthfully and feel she is in control of what she eats and then, all of a sudden, she is craving foods and feels that she is completely out of control. Each woman is different, but these foods usually fall into the main categories, highly sweet or highly salted:

These cravings can trigger a "vicious circle" effect. The highly sugared foods upset the blood sugar level in the system and the salty foods increase the already present problem of water retention.

During this time, most authorities recommend that women eat six small meals throughout the day to keep the blood sugar level from fluctuating. By avoiding highly salted foods and drinking plenty of water, you can help alleviate or reduce the water retention.

Authorities also recommend that women make sure they are receiving adequate supplies of vitamins and minerals. All of these factors, working together, are usually enough to help the milder cases of PMS.

According to Dr. Dalton, one of the first things a woman should do is chart her symptoms. "She should decide what her symptoms are, and what annoys her the most. If she has a lot of symptoms, decide the priorities...chart the three worst symptoms every single day for the next couple of months." Both physical and emotional symptoms should be included, anything that is out of the ordinary.

Here are some basic guidelines that all women could apply during those pre-menstrual days:

. Increase intake of complex carbohydrates, such as fruits, vegetables, wholesome, heavy-grained breads and cereals and legumes.

· Reduce refined sugar intake, or eliminate altogether. Eliminate candy, chocolate, cakes, pastries and ice cream from your diet.

· Reduce salt intake to a drinks, club sodas, even diet drinks, have large amounts of sodium benzoate. Drink mineral or seltzer waters instead, but make sure the one you choose does not contain salt. (Read the ingredients!)

· Sharply reduce or eliminate caffeine, (coffee, tea, cola drinks, chocolate). Caffeine can cause irritability, hyperactivity and headaches.

• Be sure and drink water throughout the day. Water is one of the most natural diuretics to be found.

 Avoid most processed foods, and fast-food meals. These often contain large amounts of salt, sugar and chemicals.

• Include a daily exercise routine. This should be practiced throughout the entire month. It helps avoid the premenstrual cycle from sneaking up on you.

• Practice a relaxation technique, again on a daily basis. Stress can increase the severity of PMS symptoms, so it is important to reduce the level of stress as much as possible during this time.

· Choose lean meats, chicken and fish for protein. Eat small amounts throughout the day. It is encouraging to note that the more we listen to and understand our bodies, the more we can do as individuals to respond healthfully to those signals within. Listen. Your body is talking

After 50 years, '42nd Street' is still fresh, snappy

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

It's something of a minor miracle for a musical that entertained Depression-ridden audiences of the '30s to still be fresh and exhilarating more than 50 years later. David Merrick's "42nd Street" achieves that distinction.

When it opened as a film, it was billed as a classic "putting on a show" with a genuine backstage background. The cast boasted such notables as Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers and Bebe Daniels. When it appeared on stage in 1980 at the Winter Garden Theatre on Broadway, it was an immediate smash hit and went on to win the 1981 Tony Award for best musical.

Now at the Birmingham Theaglitter and glitz that won such chance to play the lead. acclaim and makes the show the answer to a joyous night at the theater.

The songs have been sung and danced to for two generations, Gower Champion. "42nd Street" opening night, after repeated curtain calls, David Merrick, the show's legendary producer, took the stage and announced Champion's death. John Engstrom, a member of the original company, has since adapted the choreogra-

The title song lends itself to many different styles - lively with the ensemble, bluesy and slow as sung by Billy Lawlor or seductively by Trano.

David Brummel as Julian Marsh, the director who is counting on the show within the show, "Fretty Lady," for a comeback, takes a firm hand with his group. He gives terrific pep talks and drills them until they're exhausted. This insistence on perfection provides a logical excuse for outstanding dance ensembles.

Brummel doesn't do much dancing, but he has a voice that is rich and mellow, and when he sings "Lullaby of Old Broadway," it is an experience.

'Big Easy' is Cajun-cooking hot

By Michael Chapp Special Writer

Set against a backdrop of sultry women, steamy streets and strong individualism, "The Big Easy" is a film about misplaced mores and faulty ethics. It's a story about initial lust, eventual love, and everything that propels its main characters from the former to the latter.

It's difficult to determine who deserves our attention and sympathy in "Easy," since all of the characters are less than perfect.

Difficult, but essential. For once we understand the mindset of the characters, we cannot help but be drawn into their story. When first we meet New Orleans Police Lt. Reni McSwain (Dennis Quaid), he comes across as a rugged hotshot, indifferent to the murder around him. The blood is as much a part of the job to him as the perks - like convenient parking spots and free meals at the city's hottest Cajun restaurant.

He wins over Assistant District Attorney Ann Osborne (Ellen Barkin) much quicker than he wins over viewers. Osborne, who had been assigned to investigate cops-on-the-take, very quickly becomes as infatuated with him as he with her. Indeed. the heat between them is every bit as real as the heat on the street. And that makes it difficult for her to prosecute him in court when he is caught accepting a bribe from a bar owner.

Meanwhile people in the underworld are getting killed and illegal drugs are disappearing. While most of the city suspects gang warfare, Osborne suspects the police department is responsible. Where lesser films would stop, "Easy" continues. And it's at this level of the story that the real meat can be found.

McSwain, his actual guilt notwithstanding, manages to beat the bribery rap. And though Osborne knows he's guilty, she also senses a deep-seated sense of right and wrong in McSwain. The police department is his family. Literally. Uncles, cousins, and late father all wore a badge in New Orleans. So when his blue brothers become murder and drug-trafficking suspects, McSwain's moral dilemma hits hard. He becomes torn between himself, the department and Osborne, and all that each repre-

"Easy" presents a powerful story, both morally and dramatically. Nothing is done simplistically in the piece. Viewers sense the difficulty each of the characters is facing. Each has a dimension and humanity that provide a sense of individuality, yet all contribute something to the multi-faceted whole.

Quaid, who was seen on the screen this summer in "Innerspace," gains a lot of credibility with this role. Now, in addition to being a pretty face on the screen, he has some serious dramatic leverage for the future. Barkin, meanwhile, can boast her own achievements. Her reading of the district attorney is convincingly layered. At times tough, at times tender and at times sensual, she demonstrates an effective versatility in this film. And Ned Beatty, who's been seen with less frequency these days, adds a touch of class in a lesser role as an aging police captain.

"The Big Easy" is a mix as spicy as a good Cajun dish, and as those indigenous to film's location would say, "Oh, baby, that's hot!"

Enterlainment 'Happy Days' Marion Ross loves being Aunt Martha

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

Actress Marion Ross is best known for her role as a traditional all-American housewife -Richie's mother - Mrs. Cunningham of TV's long-running series, "Happy Days." She received two Emmy nominations for the role, which she played for 11 years.

"I walk down the street and people say, 'Hello Mrs. C.,'" Ross said in a recent telephone interview. "But that role didn't make me feel limited. It doesn't bother me.'

Ross is co-starring (through Sept. 27) with Jean Stapleton in "Arsenic and Old Lace" at the Fisher Theater. Ross is Aunt Martha. Stapleton plays her sister, Abby. The sweet and spooky Brewster sisters gleefully pursue their "charities"; they send homemade soup and jam to the neighbors and donate toys to poor children. Their favorite charity, however, is serving arsenic-laced elderberry wine to lonely old men.

Ross grew up in a small town called Albert Lea, 100 miles south of Minneapolis, Minn. "Michigan reminds me of my childhood in Minnesota," she said. "We had long winters which were sort of compressing times. Actually they were long incubation periods for fueling since I was 13 years old. I was totally driven. I went to the library to read about the theater. I read autobiographies of actresses and actors. I read Who's Who. My mother was always telling me to get somewhere, be somebody, do something.

"While I was in high school, my family moved to San Diego. I was disappointed because I wanted to move to New York to Broadway." But San Diego had lots of little theater groups. Ross got involved with local theater during her high school and college years. She graduated from San Diego University and launched her acting career at San Diego's Old Globe Theater.

In addition to her 11 successful years as Mrs. C. on "Happy Days," she's had a variety of other acting experiences. In the theater: "Summer and Smoke," "The Time of the Cuckoo," and "Never Too Late" were a few highlights of her career. In films, she's done "Teacher's Pet," "Sabrina," and "The Proud and the Profane." Television: the "Life With Father" series, "Blithe Spirit" and a "Love Boat" episode that was written especially for her.

She recently hosted a Los Angeles talk show for six months for USA Cable called "Alive and Well." "It was easy for me," she

"I wanted to be an actress said. "I found I could ad lib, read cue cards, and keep up an intelligent conversation on camera all at the same time.'

> "Arsenic" is a particular joy, she said. She loves theater, but wants to do another TV series, if possible. "I like variety and I like changing a lot. This is the first time I've toured with a play. We go next to Chicago, then Baltimore, Oklahoma City, San Antonio and Cincinnati. We end mid-December. And I'll be ready to end then."

> As for what she's planned next: "I roll with the punches. I'll wait and see. I'm taking a Royal Viking Cruise to the Caribbean during Christmas.

> Ross said the cast of "Happy Days" is still close. "I keep in touch with Ron Howard, the writers, the producer, Henry Winkler. We're all very nice people. We're very close. After all, we spent 11 years together.'

Like the Brewster sisters in 'Arsenic," Ross has some charities of her own. She was spokeswoman for the American Heart Association last year and did print ads, commercials and some convention work for the organization. She has set up a scholarship for drama students at her alma mater, San Diego University. And she works for the

March of Dimes. About Detroit: Ross said this is the first time she's been in Detroit. "Gavin MacLeod (of "Love Boat") said I'd love it. He said Detroit is a good theater town. He was right.

"Your papers shouldn't print all those negative things about Detroit," she said. "The papers pinpoint all the little murders. But Detroit's problems aren't unique. You should verbalize a different image. I can see empty stores; wasted motion. But it happens to every city. Detroit will come back. Detroit has lots of spirit — the jazz festival — the People Mover - the suburbs are beautiful - the river - it has a lot of good points.

Ross said the cast of "Arsenic and Old Lace" was pleased with their performance on opening night at the Fisher, Sept. 1. "We had been off for two months. We were thrilled with ourselves. We did the kind of subtle acting we love to do.'

Ross is divorced and has a son who is with the National Improvisational Theater in New York and does voiceovers for commercials. Her daughter is going to be an actress.

Pruett shines in 'Dogman's Last Stand'

By Pat Paholsky News Editor

"Dogman's Last Stand," the season opener in the Attic Theatre's 12th year, is a one-act play in which the main character and the script are the play - everything else is incidental.

Dogman is a laid-off steel worker and an ex-Hell's Angel who guzzles beer constantly while he talks, constantly, alternately dispensing knowledge, tongue-in-cheek, and advice to a younger friend who looks up to him.

The last stand in the title refers to Dogman's run-in with the law over his dog which has bitten a neighborhood kid. The police tell him they have to take the dog in for rabies observation and Dogman tells them the dog doesn't want to go.

The dialogue is littered with numerous small jewels of humor, pathos, bravado, anger and hope, and Glen Allen Pruett, who lays Dogman, is the Dogman. From his sweat-stained purple Tshirt stretched across his beer belly to his occasional munching on a Milk-Bone ("cleans your teeth and freshens your breath it says so on the package"), Pruett brings an energy to the role that must leave him exhausted at the end of the play. His character is larger than life a real character who brings home stray dogs and who snarls and growls at the world when

His friend, Wally, played by Dana Gamarra, is a perfect foil for the forceful Dogman. He hangs on to Dog's words, imitates him and worries about him. His is an extensive role and he's on stage almost as much as Pruett who is on throughout the

'Fourth Protocol' is thrilling

"The Fourth Protocol" is a fascinating thriller that commands close attention. Based on the bestseller of the same name and written for the screen by its author, it builds suspense on a series of incidents that lead up to the possibility of international disaster.

KGB generals plot against each other in a struggle for power while at the same time they plan to detonate a small nuclear bomb on an American base in Britain, ignoring the secret fourth protocol against nuclear proliferation signed by Russia, America and Britain in 1968.

Not only would the bomb annihilate 2,000 people, but it would create a wave of anti-Americanism in Europe and signal the death of NATO.

Petrofsky (Pierce Brosnam), a highly regarded Soviet agent, is chosen to go to England to assemble and supervise the detonation of the bomb. There is a power struggle between the Russian generals which is mirrored by a similar struggle between the English generals. In Russia. the destruction wrought by the bomb is incidental. Despite its horror, it is regarded simply as a means to attain personal gain In England, sure signs of espionage at work are disregarded in order for one faction to win control over another.

But there is one honest British agent, John Preston (Michael Caine), who is determined to the trap a double agent operating within the British foreign service. He stages a burglary in the suspect's house and tracks how to a pizzaria where classified at a uments are concealed in take of boxes. It all comes to believe when Preston's temporary superior not only discounts the findings, but has Preston transferred to another department.

In his new assignment, Preston finds an important piece of evidence that involves him in a race to track down the Soviet spies who are assembling an atomic bomb.

In the meantime, Petrofsky has moved into an apartment right beside the airbase to await the arrival of materials he needs and the courier Vassilieva (Joanna Cassidy), who will instruct him how to assemble the bomb. Brosnan's good looks, charm and manner enable him to move without suspicion on the base. These qualities also emphasize the Machiavellian person he is; evil, ruthless and weirdly repressed with no life whatever except to carry out this assignment.

Cassidy, as the agent who delivers the necessary components for the bomb and supervises the assembling, is crisp and cool at first, apparently immune to Brosnan's charm.

Caine is outstanding in his portraval of a man with a mission who refuses to be threatened by double dealers or careerists. He is an actor with an enormous amount of professional restraint. He is a master of understatement, capable of delivering a scathing putdown with a steady look. There is a quiet terror conveyed in "The Fourth Protocol," engendered by the clash of good and evil, of minds working against each other. But the most frightening aspect of the story is the realization that it is possible for a small group of people with the right components to construct a weapon of annihilation.

The Missing LINCS

Linking individuals to Needs in the Community is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to coordinate needs with resources. This is accomplished by placing goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of Metropolitan Detroit charitable agencies. Operating since 1971, LINC is proud of the accomplishments it has made and strives to increase its resource base. If you have recyclable items, no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100 with your donation. KEEP IT MOVING!

DETROIT AMERICAN INDIAN HEALTH CENTER is seeking office equipment and furniture; VCR; STACKING CHAIRS, conference table, BOOK CASES, TV and filing cabinets. This would greatly enhance their office and counciling center where they provide assistance in dental and medical services, substance abuse.

ARTS & CRAFT ITEMS, Board GAMES, and outdoor PLAY EQUIPMENT sought by UNITED SISTERS OF CHARITY. These and more items would be used in their summer program for ages four to twelve and in the latch key program during school year. Any EDUCATIONAL MATERIALS such as story books, tapes, records and materials for math and reading can also be put to good use here.

CYSTIC FIBROSIS FOUNDATION is desperately in need of a "heavy work load" COPIER. Operating budgets are cut and most funds generated go to research in finding a cure. An ELECTRIC TYPE-WRITER and inexpensive office space in being sought

CEILING FANS, large wall MIRRORS (4x6) and latex flat wall PAINT would be put to good use at the PARADIGM DANCE THEATRE where teaching the arts of dance and performances are held regu-

EOPLE IN FAITH UNITED, a housing cooperative, is searching for any items to update homes for their Beautification Project. PANELING, HOT WATER TANKS AND LUMBER are especially important to the program's success

ASEBALL BATS, SOFTBALLS, GLOVES, CRO-QUET SETS, WATER TOYS, BOARD GAMES for all ages and CRAFT SUPPLIES desperately sought by CHILDREN'S HOME OF DETROIT, CURTAIN for a theatre stage would also be greatly appreciated.

FOR ONCE HE CRITICS AND THE PUBLIC AGREE

It happens once in a great while. A performance so stunning, it galvanizes the critics and public alike.

It happened this year. And it happened to a newcomer named Acura.

Witness the accolades. First from the critics: The Acura Legend Coupe was named the 1987 Motor Trend Import Car of the Year. And from the public: Acura was ranked number one in customer satisfaction as reported by the independent and influential J.D. Power and Associates Customer Satisfaction Index.

Was it the advanced technology? The exhilarating performance? The precision craftsmanship? The bold and ergonomically correct design?

The reviews say it was all of the above. Why read the reviews? When you own an Acura automobile, you can experience the performance.
