Teens participate in international youth program

By Margle Reins Smith Staff Writer

Get a gaggle of teenage girls together and the talk will inevitably turn to clothes, boys and school. When the girls have been part of an international youth exchange program — the clothes, boys and school discussions have an international flavor.

Sara Bayko went to Cortina, Italy. "They ate so much," she said. "For lunch we had spaghetti and chicken - more than two full-course meals. They also had something called nutella, which was like melted chocolate shirts for a coral necklace, her - like a chocolate donut glaze. They even spread it on bread. It was sooooo good. I gained a lot of weight." Giggles from the rest of the group.

Michele Evans spent four weeks in Costa Rica, where school was still in session during part of her visit. She attended a few classes. "Their English was equal to the English of our fifthgraders," she said.

Most of the girls negotiated some astute clothing trades. Polly Smith traded one of her cowboy hat for a red ski cap, and a skirt for a Swedish nightgown. Amy Boal traded a jeans skirt for a traditional costume worn by Pakistani teenagers - shoes and a long sari. It even fits.

The eight Grosse Pointe teens represented the Detroit area and the United States last summer in a unique exchange program called Children's International Summer Villages. CISV is a 36year-old non-profit organization dedicated to giving youngsters an opportunity to live with and learn about people of other nationalities. It also may be the only organization that accepts students as young as 11 years old for international travel exchanges.

The CISV concept was born in the aftermath of World War II, founded with the idea of promoting friendship and understanding among children. The premise: By sharing experiences with children of other cultures and by forming international friendships, these children will grow up with the skills and desire to build international understanding. The ultimate goal - the theory goes — is that when the children become adults, they will have the experience, the desire and the the skills for finding peaceful solutions to world problems. The founder of the 36-yearold organization, psychologist Doris T. Allen, believed that education for change should begin before adolescence in order to be most effective. "(World) peace is possible only as individuals and groups learn to live amicably with one another as friends," she Chris Kaiser, vice president of the Detroit chapter of CISV, and the mother of one of last summer's participants, said the organization is enthusiastic about the philosophy of peace through understanding.

CISV participants are divided among three programs, according to their ages. CISVillage is a four-week camping experience for 11-yearolds. Twelve different nations send two boys, two girls and See TEENS, page 4A

Park office complex proposal withdrawn

By Margie Reins Smith

A proposal to build a $4 million office complex on Jefferson Avenue between Westchester and Nottingham has been withdrawn, according to Park Mayor Palmer Heenan.

Omni Inc., owned by Fred Ruffner of the Farms, notified Grosse Pointe Park on Sept. 19 that it was no longer interested in developing an office complex on the Jefferson Avenue site.

Ruffner's proposal was to purchase the city-owned property and build an office complex consisting of an L-shaped building facing Jefferson and Westchester, and a second building near Nottingham, linked to the first by a skywalk. A 37-car parking lot was included in the plan.

The Park council originally approved a rezoning request by a 4-3 vote to clear the path for the plan. Three lots on Westchester, originally zoned residential, were rezoned B1, for local business.

However, because residents near the development signed a petition opposing the rezoning of the residential property. Michigan law requires a two-thirds council vote for approval of the zoning changes. The original council approval was declared invalid. A subsequent vote did not pass by a two-thirds major-the request because the proposal was to rezone the whole parcel to B1. "Ruffner was looking for everything he could get, which is a sound business decision," said Valente. "I would be receptive to possibilities for office facilities.

"I thought Ruffner might come back with a new proposal. I feel bad that we missed an opportunity, but (the council) exercised due caution and care and we didn't sell ourselves down the road and (do something) we might regret in the future.

"Sure the mayor is disappointed. We're all disappointed. An outstanding individual like Ruffner was interested and was financing it with private dollars.'

Valente said the proposal was the best one on the table at the time, but he added, "Other people are interested in developing that block and the Ruffner proposal wasn't the last-ditch last shot at improving the prop-

Prost also voted against rezoning residential property to B1. He said he has no doubt the project was a worthwhile one, but the problem was the rezoning of residential lots. "The residents didn't want this, and I was sympathetic to them," he said.

Evola was unable to be reached by press time.

Joanne Kelly is a Westchester Road resident who is against rezoning residential property for commercial use. "Early on, the character of the Ruffner project was that it would be offices and an art gallery. That would fit. But the developers changed ideas and it was to include a bookstore, a card shop, two retail businesses, offices and so on. It got bigger, broader and the developer wanted broader zoning. We became concerned."

David Lockhart, a Westchester resident, is also fighting the Ruffner project. "This is a bedroom community," "Quiet. Very sedate." he said.

Heenan said, "The council really wants (the Ruffner project). The whole thing is an irony. The proposed office complex was the linchpin in the redevelopment of the Jefferson Avenue commercial area.'

There were not many nurseattorneys then, but the field has grown. There is now a national organization, and a Michigan group is in the process of forming. Lutz says being a trained nurse brings a different dimen-

Apartment project falls through By Nancy Parmenter

Staff Writer

An apartment project for senior citizens planned for the St. Ambrose Convent ran up against the hard financial facts of life when the developers were unable to find financing. The project, planned since last year, was finally dropped at the end of

"We were unable to get a bank willing to be confident with Alter Road," said developer Chrystem Piku, who, with his father, Frank, planned to renovate the convent for retirement living. The Pikus had expected to line up financing last winter; in fact, they went to a number of banks, pension funds and even the archdiocese and couldn't find a willing lender. They even had letters of support from the church indicating that the building could be filled with tenants from the parish, Piku said.

"We probably spent an additional 70 days with banks," said Chrys Piku. "We put so much work into it. But, as you know, banks are ultraconservative. They have more demand for their money than they have supply - and one of their criteria is location."

An official at the Archdiocese of Detroit said loans are never made to individuals. "There would be no basis for anybody asking for a loan, because the archdiocese doesn't make loans except to parishes," he said.

Piku said his other projects are going well and have not experienced financing problems. He attributed the difficulties with the convent rehabilitation entirely to location.

"We're doing basically the same project in Birmingham (in conjunction with American House, which would have operated the Grosse Pointe facility)," Piku said. "And we're still looking for an eastside loca-

The Rev. Timothy Pelc is disappointed, but said the prospects for renting the building are good. When the financing fell through the first time, he said, St. Ambrose parishioners got together and sought financing from banks farther away from Detroit.

"We did get a promise of underwriting," he said. "It worked until the group paid a visit and saw the drug house across the street. That scared them off."

The house was occupied by squatters, Pelc said. For two years, the parish and the Alter Road block club worked to have the occupants removed. This summer, they were finally suc-

"They were a danger to our school as well as to property values," he said. "Now we just need to get the substandard housing out of the way."

Pelc said it is difficult to communicate to lending institutions that an area is on the way up. "It's hard to explain the kind of optimism and vision this corner of the city can have. I'm confident that this area will be completely changed in a few years.

Schools seek answers to low science scores

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Study findings on why Grosse Pointe 10th-graders did not perform well on a state standardized science test last year are in. While school officials see room for improvement in some areas, part of the reason why the students didn't do well is that the district's curriculum didn't correspond to the new test.

Now that results have been compiled from around the state, the findings show, at least in the elementary and middle schools, students in Grosse Pointe performed significantly better on the science test than students from around the state. Only three other school districts around Michigan performed better than the fourth-graders in Grosse Pointe, and only two other districts performed better than the seventh-graders.

The results of the Michigan Education Assessment Program the study of the test results is test in science for 10th-graders that several students with high prompted a study by the district's research and development department, because students in 62 districts around the state performed better than Grosse Pointe's 10th-graders.

Roger McCaig, director of research and development for the district, said part of the problem in trying to understand what the scores mean, is determining what needs to be studied.

McCaig said that if the problem is that students entering 10th grade simply had not yet been taught what was included in the test, then the question of whether the district should change its curriculum to fit the test arises.

"Some would say we should do that," he said. "Others would argue that our curriculum is fine. They would say, 'What I teach is more important than what is on the test. Why change our curriculum just because the state comes out with a new

Each year on a five-year rotation, a different area of the district's curriculum is examined in detail from kindergarten through 12th grade. This year is the year the science curriculum is examined, which is working out well for those studying the science curriculum questions raised by the test scores.

It was discovered that some of what was on the test was not covered in the ninth grade. Mc-Caig said that in the ninth grade, science is an elective. About half of the ninth-graders opt not to take science.

Making science a required course for ninth-graders is not as easy than it sounds, and probably wouldn't solve the problem of poor test scores on the state's Patty is ready. Even though no one has told her to be on the alert, the equipment is set up and she knows what's coming.

She watches intently, saliva dripping off the end of her tongue. The three-year-old Australian shepherd has earned her Companion Dog Excellent degree and has come to Frank Kowalski's backyard in the Woods to show her stuff.

"Patty gets excited as soon as we start to work," said her owner, Christine Kloski.

Sure enough, she moves smartly into position, heeling, sitting, leaping over high and broad jumps. All the while, Ruffles, a five-month-old dachshund, dashes around with pieces of sticks, but Patty keeps her mind on her business.

Kowalski and Kloski are both trainers for the Southern Michigan Obedience Training Club, an affiliate of the American Kennel Club and one of the oldest volunteer dog organizations in the state. The group is holding a show this Sunday, Sept. 27, at North High School.

Dogs will compete in three field trial events and a "dog extravaganza" fly ball relay tournament. Teams of dogs will leap a series of hurdles, trip a lever that releases a ball and retrace their steps.

An intense Patty trips the lever and catches a ball on the fly. Fly ball is a favorite exercise that she goes at unflaggingly. The one blue eye is a frequent variant in the Australian shepherd.

Patty loves fly ball.

As soon as trainer's assistant

Ruffles checks out the fly ball machine while trainer's assistant Margaret Kowalski tries to coax her to trip the lever.

Margaret Kowalski loaded the arm of the fly ball box, Patty was quivering and waiting for the command. She flew over the hurdle, tripped the foot lever and was back beside Kloski in a wink, ready to go again. She did the exercise over and over, sometimes missing the lever in her excitement. But she'd jump right back, stamping on the lever repeatedly until a ball flew out.

But not every dog owner is interested in having a dog jump hurdles. All most people want is a dog that will behave.

"That's the main reason (for our club)," Kloski said. "Most of the people who come to our classes just want their dog to behave in the house. People have come to class and said, 'this is my last hope — it's either this or the pound."

Trainers in the club teach obedience classes all over the metropolitan area. "It's a hobby," said Kowalski. "These dogs come in the first night barking and uncontrollable. Eight weeks later, you can't believe the difference."

McReople come in asking, 'can anything be done for this dog,"" Kloski added. "After just one night, they can't believe how much can be accomplished."

Not all dogs can be taught to mind, but most of them can learn the basics within a couple of months. The important things to remember are to be consistent, repeat the training frequently, be strict - but not mean - and reward the dog often. Not with food.

"Patty works for the love, the petting," said Kloski. "I never give treats - I just love 'em up.'

"Treats aren't allowed in the ring," added Kowalski. "You can't bait a dog.'

Kloski said she has only used biscuits twice in training Patty. 'She didn't want to 'down.' She's a dominant dog, and the down position is a submissive position. She didn't want to be submissive to anyone. So I used a biscuit to give her the idea that lying down could be pleasant."

There are currently 26 members of the club. Their shows attract exhibitors from all over the country. About 200 exhibitors are expected at Sunday's show. which will run from 9 a.m. to 5

Visiting youngsters participate with their hosts in family activities and travels.

Interchange participants were Michele Evans, 13, from Pierce Middle School, and Mary Beth Kaiser, 13, from Brownell; both went to San Jose, Costa Rica. Sara Bayko, 14, from Grosse Pointe South, went to Cortina, Italy.

Darrow School in New Lebanon, Conn., went to Finland as part of the Seminar Camp.

Seven of these youthful world travelers got together recently to talk about their experiences. The entire group brushed off language differences as being a problem. Not important, they said. "Just about everybody spoke English," said Polly, "except the kids from Romania and Bulgaria." The girls said they did a lot of talking with their hands and a lot of pointing and gesturing. Amy learned some French. Polly learned a bit of Pilipino.

The girls talked about the cultural differences they observed when they stayed with individual families. In Costa Rica, Michele said, "Everyone had at washed, starched and ironed our

"It was hard to get used to having a maid in the house," said Mary Beth, who also went to Costa Rica. "We were told not to do the dishes; we were supposed to leave them in the sink for the maid. She made our beds about 10 minutes after we got up in the morning."

Polly said her summer in Denmark was one of their coldest on record. She visited Tivoli, which she expected to be like an American amusement park. "It was more like gardens and restaurants and a couple of rides that weren't even scary." She said topless bathing suits were common on Danish beaches. "The boys liked this.'

July." And Katharine, who was host to a teenager from Norway, said her guest was not prepared for our summer heat. Jennifer said many of the guest teenagers thought Americans would be much richer than Americans really are. "They also thought we eat too much - too much junk food. Also that we watch too much TV."

Asked if they'd participate in the exchanges again, all answered with unqualified yesses. Amy wants to be part of the Interchange program next year, and Jennifer wants to be a junior counselor. "You have to be willing to accept things as they are," she said, and Amy added, "You should be willing to participate (in most of the activities) or it's not worth it."

Polly was conscious of projecting an image of the United States. "Some other kids think of American kids as snobs," said Michele.

In 36 years, CISV has grown to involve 6,000 participants from 71 countries. CISV has 16 U.S. chapters. One is in Detroit.

Teenagers' families pay transportation costs. CISV is a nonprofit organization and depends upon donations and fund-raising by local chapters. Participants are chosen by the local chapters.

For those interested in CISV next summer, a meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 29, in the Grosse Pointe Central Library's exhibition room.

No clergyman for president? Don't be sure ow that the Rev. Pat Robertson has shown that he indeed is a serious candidate for the presidency, the question arises as to whether a clergyman should be elected to the nation's top office.

In a non-scientific reader-opinion poll in the Detroit Free Press the other day, the answer was a resounding no. Two-thirds, or 66 percent of those responding, said they did not think it appropriate for a clergyman to run for president while only onethird or 34 percent said it was appropriate.

Yet Robertson must be regarded as a viable candidate in Michigan and several other states. His forces, with the help of other conservatives who favor Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, now control the Michigan GOP organization and they have just beaten back an attempt by the supporters of Vice President George Bush to enlarge the field of those who will select the state's delegates to the 1988 Republican National Convention.

Unless the pro-Bush people are successful in their suit to include state and local elected officials in the delegate selection process, the TV evangelist from Virginia now must be seen as the favorite to capture a majority of the state's delegates early in 1988.

He also is regarded as having strength at this early stage in South Carolina, Florida and Iowa, where he won a Republican straw poll last week over Vice President Bush, still regarded as the front-runner nationally, and Sen. Robert Dole of Kan-

He promises, after he formally announces his candidacy Oct. 1, to make an all-court press for the GOP nomination with the help of 3.3 million supporters who have already petitioned him to make the race and another 4 million backers he expects to enlist. He sees 7 million votes in primaries and caucuses as sufficient to win the nomination, pointing out Walter F. Mondale won the 1984 Democratic nomination with 6.8 million primary votes.

So the question now appears to be not whether it is appropriate that TV evangelist Robertson enter the race but whether he will be successful in his quest for the nomination and the presidency.

Robertson is 57, a Southern Baptist who is president of the multimillion-dollar Christian Broadcasting Network that he organized in 1959, chancellor of the CBN University since he founded it in 1977, TV host of "The 700 Club" from 1968 to 1986, and a former member of the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve. He never before has sought government office.

In a biographical sketch, the New York Times said Robertson as a minister believes in faith healing and other religious miracles. But in his campaign, according to the Times, he emphasizes his secular accomplishments as a broadcast executive and founder of CBN University, which offers graduate programs in secular as well as religious studies.

In the most recent Gallup Poll, Robertson ranked well below front-runners Bush and Dole. Bush led with the backing of 40 percent of the Republicans and GOP leaners, Dole ran second with 19 percent, Kemp third with 9 percent and Robertson fourth with 8 percent.

Up to this point, much of Robertson's strength has come from his fervent support among evangelical and fundamentalist Christians, his capacity to recruit new GOP voters and the fund-raising success of his highly professional staff.

In Michigan, he also showed his political clout over the weekend by calling for replacement of both the GOP state chairman and the national committeeman because they favored Vice President Bush. Robertson's advance man in Michigan, David Walters, is a carpet-bagger from Arkansas who met the candidate at Robertson's CBN University in Virginia Beach., Va., while a student in 1984, and has been supporting him ever since. He has been in the state since 1985.

Robertson's political views to date have not been specifically highlighted, although he has supported the Reagan administration's social agenda and its effort to provide financial aid to the contras as well as other anti-Communist programs endorsed by the far right. Now that he has achieved a new level of importance, his views and programs will be and should be subjected to much more critical review.

Yet with Bush faltering and Dole not yet up to speed, it is possible that this TV evangelist with no previous experience in public office could win the top place on the GOP ticket. But is he the best qualified candidate the Republicans can nominate? We doubt it. In fact, we doubt he would be the choice of a majority of Michigan Republicans if they had a voice in this state's selection of its favorite candidate.

What we cover in the News reader writes to complain that the Grosse Pointe News in its editorials and editorial cartoons ought to stick to its beat in Grosse Pointe and not get concerned about people and problems in

It is clear that we do not agree with the anonymous reader who offered the advice. But we'll respond to the query by offering our rationale for the coverage provided by the Grosse Pointe News in its editorials and cartoons as well as its news.

Our view is that we write, offer cartoons and cover news that we believe is of interest to or affects Grosse Pointers. The reader complained especially about coverage of Mayor Coleman Young, the Detroit teachers' strike and the joint operating agreement sought by the Detroit News and the Detroit Free Press. So what is our reason for providing that coverage?

Our contention is that Young's and policies often affect or are of interest to Grosse Pointers. And while our anonymous critic wrote, "We get more than enough (of) Coleman and the JOA in the two city rags," we think the Grosse Pointe News offers a little different perspective on Mayor Young and his policies than readers get from the two Detroit dailies.

For example, we think the proposal to legalize casino gambling in Detroit, and especially on Belle Isle, would have a detrimental effect on the Pointes and other suburbs as well as on Detroit. And so we offer editorial opinions to that effect even though our anonymous reader apparently believes coverage of Detroit activities should be out of bounds for the Grosse Pointe News.

As for the complaint about coverage of the Detroit teachers' strike, a teachers' strike was also threatened in Grosse Pointe and coverage of the strike in Detroit was a natural consequence. In fact, some Grosse Pointers teach or are otherby any tax increase required to finance the pay hikes won by the Detroit teachers during their strike.

the area of interest of Grosse Pointers also fails to meet our test. We think many Grosse Pointers who read either the Detroit News or the Free Press, or both, are interested in the views of other media people about what may happen in the future to one or both of these papers, if and when

In our view, Grosse Pointers form a sophisticated audience and have interests far beyond those encompassed by the boundaries of the Pointes. Within the limitations of the news and editorial staffs of this newspaper, we try to cover the news and express opinions that relate to those interests, even when that policy brings our coverage into our neighboring city of Detroit and beyond.

ited view of the anonymous reader who thinks the newspaper's beat should be only Grosse Pointe. We took the space in our editorial column to explain our rationale because there may be other readers who, whether they agree with our anonymous critic not, might wonder why we cover some news and views outside of the Pointes. If some readers have other questions about our policies with respect to news and editorial coverage, we would be happy to try to answer them, too.

The intent of the founders

he original intent of the Founding Fathers who wrote the Constitution is in dispute again during the hearings on the nomination of Judge Robert Bork to the Supreme Court. This dispute has been going on since the nation's early days, and especially during the earlier celebrations of the anniversary of the Constitution.

For example, President Martin Van Buren, in his inaugural address on March 4, 1837, referred to the approaching 50th anniversary of the Constitution, and defended his support for no change in the status of slavery. He repeated a pledge he had made during the 1836 election campaign:

"I must go into the presidential chair the inflexible and uncompromising opponent of every attempt on the part of Congress to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia against the wishes of the slaveholding states, and also with a determination equally decided to resist the slightest interference with it in the states where it ex-

Van Buren added that the election results convinced him his views had been approved by a majority of the people. Then he went on to say that "no bill conflicting with these views can ever receive my constitutional sanction." It was at this point that Van Buren sought to read the original intent of the framers of the Constitution:

"These opinions have been adopted in the firm belief that they are in accordance with the spirit that actuated the venerated fathers of the republic, and that succeeding experience has proved them to be humane, patriotic, expedient, honorable and just."

Van Buren added that the principle that would govern him would be "a strict adherence to the letter and spirit of the Constitution as it was designed by those who framed it," and that he would "endeavor to preserve, protect and defend it by anxiously referring to its provisions for direction in every action."

Less than 30 years later, President Lincoln on Jan. 1, 1863, issued the Emancipation Proclamation that freed the slaves and the 13th Amendment abolishing slavery was finally ratified Dec. 6, 1865.

Van Buren, in his interpretation of the founding fathers' intent about slavery, ignored the amendment process that made abolition possible by giving Congress and the state legislatures power to propose amendments.

Protecting property

To the Editor:

While the majority of readers of this newspaper live in the affluent Grosse Pointe community, I am deeply concerned with the high rate of theft or destruction of one's personal property.

Not as fortunate as the kids today and being brought up in the one-car era, when the mode of transportation to school was our feet, bike or public buses, I welcomed the newest fad . . .

The latest way to travel for our young adults is the Moped — one was bought for our high school student for interim wheels basically for transportation to school, and to lessen the demands on us, the parents, but our demands are no less as the kids cannot ride their Mopeds anywhere they must leave it out of sight as it is liable to get ripped off or ripped off in part.

What can be done or will be done so these young adults can use their interim wheels (the Moped) with assured confidence that they will be there intact when they leave our high schools at 3 p.m.?

To the Editor:

I wish to thank the Grosse Pointe library, particularly Mrs. Helen Leonard, for their wonderful service to us, handicapped people, for their wonderful kindness by delivering books and picking up those that have been read.

AAUW says yes to ULS

To the Editor:

The Grosse Pointe Branch of the American Association of University Women applauds University Liggett School for sponsoring a newspaper-recycling drop-off station, scheduled for a grand opening on Oct. 17. We also commend the city of Grosse Pointe Woods for its help in establishing this community project.

The Cook Road location is a convenient spot for Pointe residents to drop off bundled newspapers, and we encourage everyone to become a recycler.

Decisions about incinerators, landfills and groundwater pollution are of critical concern today to all communities. AAUW strongly supports recycling as a viable, low-cost way to reduce the quantity of trash destined for this community's incinerator, which is rapidly nearing capacity.

We hope this station will encourage other municipalities to join the growing ranks of progressive communities which have recycling programs.

Super Saturday at the

I put on a lot of miles at the Silverdome Saturday - three pounds worth - going up and down stairs and walking around the various levels. I was tracking down some of the more than 1,200 Grosse Pointers who went to see the pope. And when it was over, some nine hours later, I media guides and without one, a was so high, I didn't want to let go of the experience.

Feature Editor Peggy O'-Connor traveled by bus with the rest rooms and numerous TV parishioners of St. Ambrose, sets scattered all over the press spent the day with them and focused on their stories. I looked for members of St. Clare of Montefalco, St. Paul on the Lake and Our Lady Star of the Sea with the idea of photographing a sample representation of each group.

In distributing the tickets, the Archdiocese of Detroit gave each Silverdome church a number of upper, and dle and lower level and floor seats, so that no one church had the best seats and no one church had the worst. That meant I became real familiar with the floor plan, but my feet just wouldn't take me to the upper levels.

> It was a most unusual experience in that news people had to have a chaperone to leave the press room. They were called reporter couldn't get past the two guards at the door. There were phones, typewriters, food, room, so you had to have another reason to walk around the stadium. It wasn't unpleasant; actually, it was helpful to have scmeone who knew the layout and shortcuts. The two guides I had (I wore one out) were most accommodating, but I still felt somewhat shackled. I had a long list of seats to check out and when I told my guide midway through the hunt that I was going to try to find my mother and her friend, he just smiled.

Maybe it was a sigh.

I learned some interesting things from the guides. That the priest in the black slacks, black shirt and white tennis shoes flying around was in charge of security. That the man walking a dog around the perimeter of the floor was making a final check for explosives. The guide said about 40 dogs were brought in in the morning to go through the entire stadium, row by row.

The execution of the plan to cally just like everyone else.

distribute communion to some 90,000 people in a short time was a wonder to behold. About 700 eucharistic ministers made their way to certain points, taking elevators to the various levels, and from there they were met by drivers in golf carts who dropped them off one by one until everyone was in place.

During the mass, no one in the media was allowed to leave the press room, so one of the eucharistic ministers came in. He stood in front of the bar and passed out communion. There's a delicious irony there.

I experienced something else in the press box that was a first. The quarters were tight, it was crowded and there wasn't much room to maneuver, yet about a third of the journalists there participated in the mass, standing when it was time to stand and singing and responding. And they applauded the pope periodi-

I'm not accustomed to such displays, because journalists generally try to maintain at least a facade of objectivity by strictly observing and not participating.

Then there was this really good-looking man who stood with his back against the wall who seemed to be staring at me. I soon discovered that he was staring at me and everyone else there - he was with the Secret Service.

But all of this was only the backdrop for the visit of a religious leader who, according to most accounts, diffused criticism of his stands and disarmed his critics by touching his way across the country. The emotion he commands is considerable. It doesn't matter that I disagree with many of his stands, because I recognize that there are two Catholic churches - the ideal and the real. All I know is that I, too, was touched. And I never got within 100 yards of the man.

In Grosse Pointe, more than 100 Village Club members took part in laying the cornerstone for the senior citizens addition to the Neighborhood Club. The building was about half completed and the club members hoped to move in by February.

A tentative agreement with the teachers' union following an eight-hour bargaining session on Sunday was reached, hours before Grosse Pointe's 553 teachers and librarians were scheduled to walk off their jobs in the first local strike since 1969. The pact called for nine percent pay increases for two years and procedural changes.

State Sen. John Kelly said he would postpone introduction of his controversial Grosse Pointe district court bill until after two public hearings in the community. Kelly had proposed creating two districts - one covering the Farms, Woods and Shores, and the other covering the City and See YESTERDAY, page 9A

The coverage was basically identical during the morning, but on WDIV, national coverage of the Detroit Tiger and Milwaukee Brewer game started shortly after 1 p.m. The pope arrived at the Silverdome around the seventh inning. All the stations except Channel 4 covered the pope's arrival in toto.

Channel 4 broke into the game coverage with a newsbreak as the pope came through the tunnel. Then it had to return to the game.

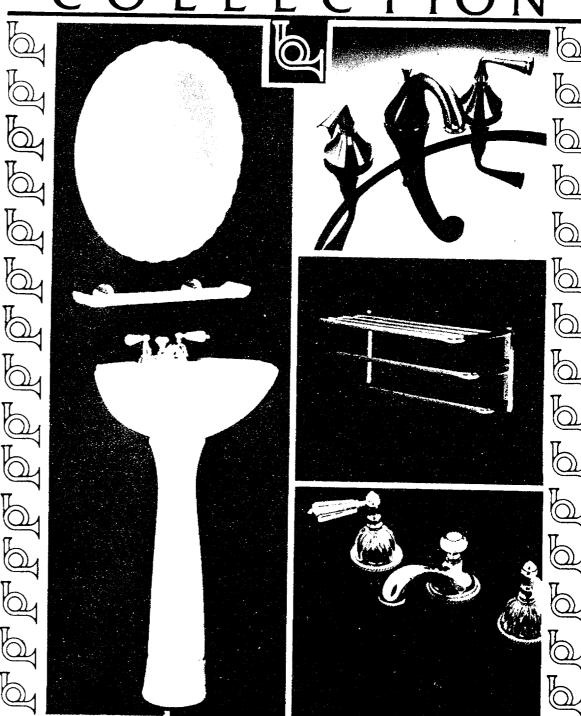

We figure that the infamous Heidi incident in the late-1960s had something to do with it, because the extensive coverage Channel 4 had given the pope's visit would lead one to believe WDIV would have covered the pope's mass in its entirety if it could have.

As the pope's incursion into the Silverdome was being covered by everyone except Channel 4, it had to do something. At one point, WDIV broke to coverage inside the Silverdome and had an inset of the Tiger game at the bottom right-hand corner of the

It sure was a sight to see John Paul II making the sign of the cross with his right hand just above the game inset. Gave a whole new meaning to the "Bless you boys" slogan.

As soon as the game had finished, Channel 4 switched to the mass and all was equal again. The Tigers did win the game.

Curbs along the lakeshore will be 12 inches high. David Cavanaugh, Wayne County commissioner, said the project was stalled and it was due to his efforts that the project was brought back on line for this year. Most school officials get 6% raise

Most of the Grosse Pointe public school administrators got salary hikes of about 6.14 percent, but each official had to undergo an extensive evaluation before-

The process, developed by Deputy Superintendent Joseph Spagnoli, included a detailed look at the administrator's skills in such areas as administration and organization, finance and business administration, personnel management and curriculum and instruction.

The salary increases for the 34 administrators, which includes school principals, assistant principals and department directors, will cost the school district about $116,000.

"We first meet with them in the fall," Spagnoli said. "We determine their task responsibilities for the year, and then we have another meeting mid-year."

Following the meetings, the administrators are asked to prepare a report on their achieve-is the same for each administrator. Based on the written evaluation, observations and meetings, points are awarded. Depending on the category, points range from one to five and one to 20. Scores are determined by Spagnoli and Superintendent John Whritner.

Spagnoli said that once the scores in each category are determined and added, a rating factor is applied and the wage hike is determined.

For the past several years the Grosse Pointe schools have been using the administrative salary ments in the spring. The process average of 13 school districts around the country. This year's average salary increase of 6.14 percent came from averaging the wage hikes of those districts.

> In the process, however, the scores could result in a negative factor being applied, and that administrator's salary increase would be less than the average 6.14 percent. The opposite is true as well, and salary hikes could be greater, if the score and rating factor warrants it.

"The majority of the administrators got the average increase of 6.14 percent," Spagnoli said.

G.P.N. 9/24/87 & 10/1/87

Carol B. Marr Secretary, Board of Education Recently there have been a number of misleading stories indicating that Michigan Lottery ticket sales are dropping. The following sets the record straight.

Q: Is the Lottery experiencing a drop in ticket sales?

A: No. ticket sales are increasing. However, after doubling over the past five years, the rate of increase in sales has slowed down.

Q: What are these budget projections and revenue shortfalls I've heard about?

A: These concern sales projections made more than two years ago when Lotto was a brand new game and sales were shattering all previous records for Michigan and other states. It became apparent early this year that a $1.2 billion projection for the 1988 fiscal year (next year) made at that time was not attainable, so it was revised downward.

However, this does not mean that total ticket sales will be down from the 1986 record $999.4 million! We expect to finish the 1987 fiscal year with a new record of over $1 billion in sales.

Q: But, aren't Lottery ticket sales increasing across the country?

A: Yes, primarily because of the number of lotteries getting started throughout the U.S. Ticket sales in other mature Lottery states are also beginning to level off.

Q: How do Michigan's sales compare to other states?

A: During 1985, Michigan ranked fourth among 23 lotteries in terms of net revenue for each $1,000 of personal income in the state.

Q: Has Michigan reached the saturation point in terms of Lottery ticket sales?

A: Only the players can determine the answer to that question

Q: If Lotto was the catalyst for Michigan's growth, is there another game that could have the same effect on sales?

A: All latteries are in search of just such a game. But, to date no one has found a game that can create the excitement that Latto.

Q: How much does the Lottery contribute to the state school aid fund?

A: In the 1985 fiscal year, Lottery contributions to the state School Aid Fund topped $415 million the equivalent of about $130 per Michigan household For submitting a question which led to to summing a question which led to this column, Rose M. Hadad of St. Clair Shores will receive 50 free tickets for the Lottery's new instant game, "Greenlacks" If you have a question not vet covered in these monthly columns, send at to: "Winners Circle," Michigan Lottery, P.O., Box 38077, Lansing, MI 48909.

Eastern High dinner-dance

The Detroit Eastern High Golden Years reunion Committee will hold their 18th annual dinner-dance Friday, Oct. 9, at the Polish Century Club on East Outer Drive.

The Golden Years annual reunion has been held since 1970. Organized as an athletic "bust" by the late Judge Edward Piggens and the late George Jaglowicz, the affair proved to be so popular that it was expanded to a class reunion, and thereafter held every year to especially honor that year's 50th anniversary class along with other classes.

This annual event has been continued through the efforts of Billie (Hedwig Reichardt) Jacoby, Don Lindow, Gus (Zielke) Howard, Herb Fach, Virginia (Larkins) Morganthaler, Judge David Vokes, Don Strnad, Bill Williams, Sam D'Angelo and Wilfred Steiner, whom many of the alumni will be happy to see

The first 5 meetings were held at the Bayview Yacht Club, the meetings 1975 through 1979 at the Lochmoor Club, and since at the Polish Century Club.

Music by Art Quatro band enlivened the Golden Agers since 1979 and will again this year.

In the past the hall has been crowded with between 300 and 400 persons. All classes through 1940 and their guests are invited.

For more information and reservations, call Billie Jacoby at 881-9185.

Do men and women speak the countries. rial Tuesday, Oct. 6, at 8 p.m. as dividuals as Indira Ghandi, she looks at the vast communications differences that exist between the sexes and why neither quite knows what the other means.

Burnett, a lecturer, feminist, portrait artist and sculptress. will describe some of the misconnections in conversations and friendships between men and women, using slides of cartoons by some of the more savagely perceptive cartoonists. China beginning to awaken; Michigan is offering breakfast

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Michigan has about two crops of tart cherries frozen and awaiting a buyer, and if state legislators remain persistent, those cherries may find their way into Chinese mouths.

State Sen. John Kelly spent 11 days in China this month with a delegation of Michigan legislators and appointed officials who were invited to see the progress achieved as a result of its fiveyear plan.

Kelly, who has visited China three times as a representative from Michigan and member of the Governor's Commission on China, said progress there has been astounding since he last visited in 1984.

The Chinese province of Sichuan, located in the heartland of the huge country in the southwest near northern Vietnam, is Michigan's sister state. The two were set up as sister states in 1979, when relations between the two superpowers were normalized.

Kelly said that Sichuan, one of China's richest agricultural areas, is highly industrialized by Chinese standards, although it is still below the industrial level of this country in the late-1800s.

Despite poor infrastructure, there are few developed roads, modern hotels, airports or other Western amenities, interest in tourism in China, particularly Sichuan is great, Kelly said.

China wants to industrialize. Currently it is a country where 85 percent of its people are subsistence farmers, but with more than a billion people, millions live in cities and have huge appetities for western goods.

Kelly said the problem for China is to raise the foreign money necessary to buy machines and tools to industrialize.

change is to capitalize on the dio advertising or other way to great interest tourists have to show off your product," Kelly visit the country.

Republican Senate majority leader, Norman Shinkle, R. Lambertville, and Mitch Irwin, D-Saulte Ste. Marie, visited China along with Leonard Woodcock, former U.S. Ambassador to China and member of Michigan's Governor's Commission on China, and Jack Vignone, AAA president and head of the commission's sub-committee on tourism. All went to China as representatives of Michigan.

Kelly, who studied China both as an undergraduate and graduate student, is familiar with Chinese history and its current situation. He said the secret to developing good business ties with the largest market on earth is patience and persistence.

"Chinese history goes back 3,000 years," Kelly said. "For them to take a few years to make a business decision is very common.'

Michigan agricultural products, such as the tart cherry crop, appeal to the Chinese, Kelly said. Michigan is in a good position to provide its agricultural products to the largest consuming country on earth. Efforts are under way now to negotiate the sale of the cherry crop and other crops to the Chinese.

Much effort is necessary for a U.S. business to make a deal with the Chinese. For instance. If a company wanted to sell shoes in Cheng-Tu, the Sichuan capital, it would have to hire a consultant firm which would make the initial contacts, and deal with such problems as governmental red tape, language barriers and getting samples to the market.

"Remember, in China there One way to bring in foreign ex- are no catalogs, television or ra-said. "You have to provide a State legislators John Engler, huge number of samples, which will go to various governmental agencies and eventually to the people to see if they like them."

Kelly said the whole process could take two or three years, and there are no guarantees. Kelly said U.S. Attorney Gen. Edwin Meese was recently in China to instill upon the Chinese the need for guaranteed contracts.

Kelly said that the Chinese have a history of changing their minds, and even though they have signed a contract with a company, they will simply end the deal.

"In the meantime you have a company which has shipped its product halfway around the world, and the company says, 'Hey, you signed a contract.' The Chinese say, 'So what,' and there is no recourse, nothing the business can do."

Kelly said the Chinese are coming around to the Western way of doing business with contracts, but that the process is

John Kelly

"If you take the time and patience to work with them," Kelly said, "the benefits are enormous. The amount the Chinese can consume is staggering."

So far there have been few Michigan businesses selling durable goods or manufacturing products to the Chinese, although there are numerous deals in the works. Kelly said the Kelly says that the Chinese are main successes by Michigan firms have been with foodstuffs and other agricutural products.

A Michigan manufacturer of machine presses had a deal in the works to sell his machines to the Chinese. The company was selling only about 10 of its $500,000 machines a year in the saturated U.S. market. The Chinese wanted perhaps 20 or 30 of those machines.

"You have to realize that when you increase the number of units to that kind of level, there is an economy of scale involved," Kelly said. "The unit price of the machines drops dramatically, and the profitability skyrockets.'

He noted that the manufacturer had to back out of the deal, because he didn't feel he could gear up fast enough to provide the number of machines the Chinese wanted.

"If he could have," Kelly noted, "he would have been a very wealthy man."

It is the creation of Michigan jobs through trade with China that excites legislators the most.

in need of many of the kinds of durable goods that Michigan can provide - lathes, dyes and other types of machine tools. To make these kinds of purchases, the Chinese need the foreign dollars. Michigan is doing what it can to help the Chinese learn to attract tourist dollars, for the hundreds of thousands worldwide who want to visit

China. Kelly said that five years ago when he visited Shanghai, there was only one hotel, and there was not one cab available in the city with more than one million people.

"There are now five hotels there, Sheraton, Hilton and Holiday Inn," he said. There were cabs everywhere. The pace at which they negotiate is slow, and they transact business slow, but their ability to implement growth is fantastic."

Kelly said that Michigan's Sander's Inc. is working diligently right now to establish a Chinese market. He noted that the Chinese people have a tremendous sweet tooth, and the prospects for Sanders are very good - given time.

$25 fee to learn about marketing China

Since 1984 the Chinese have redirected their capital toward tourism. Hotels, convention centers and transportation improvements have been popping up all over the Chinese urban landscape. With the tremendous amount tourism-related development, Michigan has the opportunity to help in many areas.

In Michigan tourism is a billion-dollar-a-year industry and the state has the knowledge and technical expertise to help the Chinese develop its tourism. Kelly said Michigan State University has been increasingly drawn to expanding and enhancing its relationships with Sichuan University in developing a hotel and restaurant management program in China. MSU's College of Business was invited to send a representative to Sichuan University several years ago, because of its affiliation to the hotel and restaurant management program here.

Kelly said the economic benefits for Michigan and the United States are enormous. Change is occurring at a rapid pace, although every five years the Chinese develop a new five-year plan, and priorities may change. That, in itself, makes it somewhat risky to start up business with the Chinese, but Kelly insists the long-term benefits are worth it.

"You have to realize that the Chinese are tremendously loyal," Kelly said. "Once they have done business with you, learned to trust you, they will stay with you. Remember that there are many countries extremely interested in doing business with the Chinese, and we can't be left behind."

Papal visit lives up to expectations of the faithful from different worlds

By Peggy O'Connor Feature Editor

Church in Grosse Pointe Park discovered last weekend that what had been written and talked about for months was true: Pope John Paul II's visit to experience.

It was a mixed bag of parishio-Forty members of St. Ambrose ners that boarded a rather battered charter bus last Saturday morning to head for the Pontiac Silverdome and the first-ever papal mass in Michigan; a fitting tribute to a man known as Detroit was a once-in-a-lifetime history's first polyglot pope.

One of the St. Ambrose faithful pauses for a moment of reflection during the papal mass.

Pointe Park was there, her thick Irish brogue still evident despite her many years in America. And Kate Corrigan was there, too, having traveled from her home in Alexandria, Va., to attend the mass with her daughter and sonin-law. "I know I've got an Irish name, but I'm Polish ... I just married an Irishman.

"And you should also know that I'm an Army wife and a Navy mother," Corrigan told the others as introductions made their way around the bus.

Miami was well-represented by the contingent of Floridians led by the Park's Gladys Posada. They wore Pope John Paul II buttons, laughed and chattered in Spanish during the brief ride to the Silverdome and munched on ham sandwiches as they waited in line for security checks at the stadium gates.

Almost as evident as the richly diverse ethnic backgrounds of those who traveled to see the pope were the different ways those 40 parishioners viewed the historic event.

Here's a look at the papal visit to Detroit from the eyes of some of those parishioners:

For Mary Green of Detroit, her chance to see Pope John Paul II was a dream come true. She was baptized a Catholic more than 70 years ago in Louisiana and had always hoped to be able to travel to the Holy Land or to Rome to see the pope. But she never really believed that it would happen.

"Times got bad and then it wasn't safe to travel over there, you know. So I just told myself to be happy with watching him on TV," Green said. Her children had other ideas.

Orelia Brown, one of Green's 13 children, came along on the trip to see the pope, as did three of Green's 52 grandchildren.

Eileen O'Brien of Grosse "I'm so glad for her. She always just two weeks after their 54th has been a good Catholic, a per-wedding anniversary. She takes son who dealt with people in a care of three of her grandchil-Christian way. I can remember when we were growing up, she'd have 'holy medal day' every year and kids would come from all over Detroit to get one of her Notre Dame High School freshholy medals," Brown said.

"Even with all of us kids to take care of, and with everyone else she's always taken care of there isn't a person she wouldn't help by feeding or giving clothes to - she really deserved to be here today.

make sure she got to see the pope," said Brown.

dren, Omar Green, 14, Crystal Green, 11, and Orelia Green, 8. Crystal and Orelia attend St. Ambrose School; Omar is a man.

It isn't as easy for Green to get around as it used to be - she stopped attending daily mass as she'd done for 30 years - but said that nothing would stand in the way of her seeing the pope.

"I'm happy and thankful to be "All us kids said we had to here on this grand and glorious occasion," Green said. "This pope we have brings a message Green was widowed last year to us. Others have sat on their when her husband Joseph died throne to do that, but this wonderful man goes out and seeks souls. The Bible says to go out on the highways and byways and bring the message of God. "We are truly blessed to have a pope who does that."

Margaret Ryan's family was one of St. Ambrose's oldest parish families. Her elder brothers attended school in the old church; her younger sister was baptized shortly after the present church was built. But last Saturday was the first time she'd been back to St. Ambrose in almost 15 years.

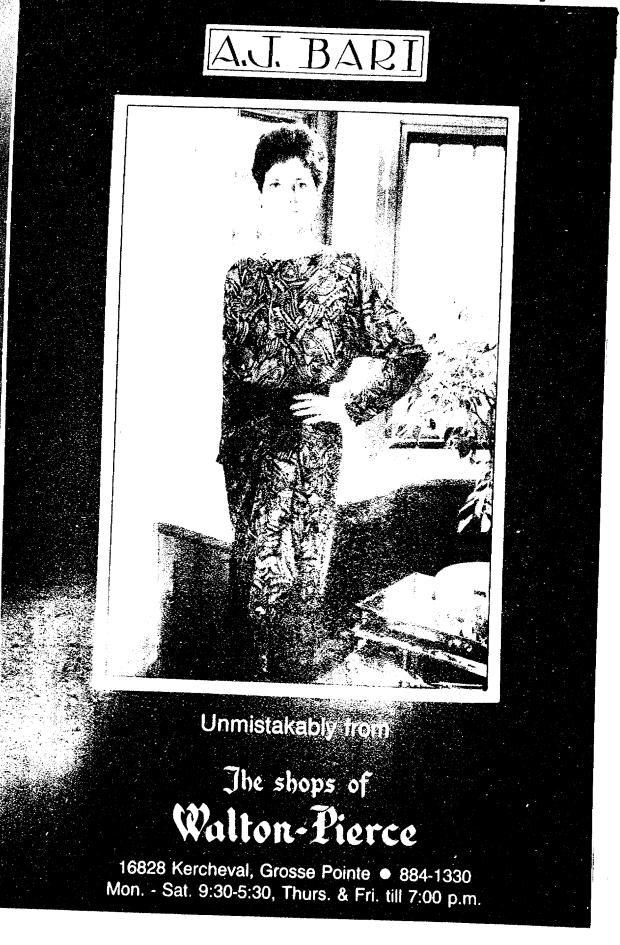

Ryan, an active, vital woman, is one of many people who felt a growing unhappiness with the

Early School Centennial

Academy celebrates with old-fashioned French fair

Sept. 27 is the Grosse Pointe Academy. From 1 to 5 p.m., you can visit a "little corner of France" on the grounds of the Academy, Lakeshore Road at Moran. The occasion is the "French Country Fair," a day of fun and food and a chance to celebrate the centennial jubilee of the Academy's Early School.

Admission to the French Country Fair is free. Events include craft exhibitions, French food, clowns, entertainment, games, farm animals, carriage rides, a hot air balloon, old time photos and performances by the First Michigan Colonial Fife and Drum Corps.

Charity Suczek will be on hand making her famous crepes. There will also be French pastries, cotton candy, baked goods, French bread, cheese and ice cream to sample. Tours of the Early School, with an exhibit of the Academy's history, will be given throughout the day.

Dating back to the religious order of the Sacred Heart, the Academy was founded as an exclusive girls school in 1885 and was known as the Academy of the Sacred Heart. The Lakeshore Building was the first structure completed in 1885 and was a convent. The Early School debuted in 1886 and was orginally established as a free school for the children of neighboring St. Paul's parish. In 1929, the Academy Main School was completed, rounding out the school as it is seen today.

An addition to the 100-yearold Early School Building - the 4,260 square foot wing known as the Laura Elizabeth Timmis Early School Building wing welcomed Academy children this fall. The project was made possible through a gift from the Miory of their daughter, Laura, an Academy graduate.

The first French Country Fair was held in July 1944 to raise funds for Sacred Heart Convents damaged in Europe during World War II. Then known as the Lake Shore Country Fair, it was co-chaired by Mrs. Henry Ford II and Mrs. James Remick. It was the forerunner of two major events sponsored for the pub-changes in their parishes back in the 1970s. "It's important to understand that I wasn't dissatisfied with the Catholic church," she explained. "I was dissatisfied with what was happening at my church. So I stayed away.

Ryan attended other local churches, but always wondered what was happening back at the church of her childhood. She went back last Saturday when a friend offered her an extra ticket to the papal mass and a seat on the bus.

She renewed old acquaintances, made new friends and summed up the day by drawing and forth with one another and a correlation to the changing church and perhaps a softening of her attitude about some of those changes

"I think that this pope is one of the best popes the church has had because he is more accessible to the people. He is actually following the ways of Our Lord, because he is touching and allowing himself to be touched, as Christ did. Pope Pius XII wouldn't let anyone touch him,' Ryan said.

"I think that takes away some of the mysticism. Maybe that's why some people don't like it because the mysticism is gone when you can see and touch the pope like this. But I don't think that should stop them. I can't see any reason why a Catholic cause he is a wonderful man, a

come here.'

Members of St. Ambrose since 1949 and 1938, respectively, Eileen O'Brien and Harriet Mc-Donald have seen many changes in the church and in the men at its helm. They, like so many of the 90,000 in the Silverdome last Saturday, put their names in the running for papal mass tickets because they didn't want to miss the chance of a lifetime.

Neither had ever seen the Silverdome and marveled at its size. They walked around the stadium, had lunch, talked back with other members of the contingent about this traveling pope, this man of God and of the 20th century.

"I think it's tremendous how one man can bring this about,' said McDonald, gesturing at the crowds around her. I admire him for accepting all religions and I think that it's inspiring for young people to see what good he does throughout the world.

"I've been in Rome and in seven countries in Europe and never in my experience have a seen a man with the gifts that Pope John Paul has."

A gregarious woman with a fine sense of humor and a thick Irish accent, O'Brien would only say that she "loved the pope be-

They accepted communion along with thousands of others and smiled and clapped as the pope thanked the assembled crowd for the hospitality shown during his visit to the city. And as Pope John Paul II walked from the Silverdome, smiling and waving goodbye, they waved too, wiping tears from their eyes at the same time.

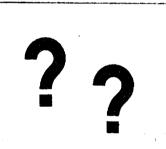

"It's been a beautiful experience," O'Brien said.

"This is what it's all about," said Harriet McDonald, pointing to the name of the recessional hymn printed in her papal mass program. The hymn, written by Grosse Pointe's James Hartway, was titled "One in Faith."

Bonnier to perform

Bonnier to perform at First English

Detroit-born Bess Bonnier, one of the area's most important jazz musicians, will perform in the chancel at First English Lutheran Church in Grosse Pointe Woods on Sunday, Oct. 4, at 7

Bonnier has found success in her hometown, with a wide array of musical activities that has made her name synonymous with fine jazz piano. She has been the regular soloist on Sunday afternoons in the Detroit Institute of Arts' Crystal Gallery. She is currently appearing nightly at Detroit's Pontchartrain Hotel Lounge.

After graduating from Northern High School, Bonnier studied music and English at Wayne State University before striking out on her own as a pianist. She first gained a measure of national attention in the late 1950s, when Argo Records released her album, "Theme for the Tall One."

From 1977 to 1980, she was artistic coordinator for the Detroit Institute of Arts' popular Jazz at the Institute Series which featured both local Detroiters and internationally known jazz musicians. Her own performances have been broadcast over National Public Radio jazz stations. In addition to a non-stop schedule of private engagements and teaching workshops, Bonnier has performed in several Montreux Detroit Jazz Festivals, played in the 1982 Kool Jazz Festival in New York and was one of the featured pianists in the New York City program, "Detroit Piano Summit."

Tickets for the concert at First English Lutheran, 800 Vernier and Wedgewood, are $5 at the door, $4 for students and senior citizens.

If possible, you might have your youngster accompany you on a prenatal visit, particularly later in pregnancy when he or she can hear the heart beat and feel the baby moving. You might find it helpful to show your child the hospital where you will deliver the baby and the maternity floor, if that is permitted.

Show your youngster his or her own baby photos, particularly those when you were caring for the baby. If you have a friend with a newborn, ask if your youngster can talk to or hold the baby.

Used Book Sale

AAUW celebrates 25 years of books, friendship and fun the American Association of University Women will celebrate the 25th anniversary of its annual Used Book Sale, Sept. 29-Oct. 4, at the Salem Memorial Lutheran Church, 21230 Moross Road, between Mack and I-94.

For the last 24 summers, one could find Grosse Pointe AAUW members hanging around dusty garages, knee-deep in books of every description . . . and loving

The Grosse Pointe Branch of it! It was no different this year, as members working on the project found it a great way to get involved and to make friends. Book sale proceeds have helped support the AAUW Fellowships - one of the oldest, largest and prestigious programs for women scholars.

AAUW Fellows include such women as the late astronaut Judith Resnik, Marina Von Neuman Whitman, chief economist and vice president of General Salem Memorial. Motors, and Dr. Anne Zimmer, Wayne State University.

In 1962, the Gas Company Hospitality Center in the Village was the location of the AAUW's first used book sale. Other locations included the Grosse Pointe War Memorial (1966), the Unitarian Church Annex (1967-71), Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian (1972-76) and since 1977,

There have been a few who taught American history at changes over the years. There is now a search committee which works to locate special books requested by the public. There are now barrels to collect books and more categories of books from which to choose. The average price has increased from 25 cents to 50 cents. And - as those who toiled in the dusty garages this summer can attest — many more books: approximately 40,000 to price and sort.

Pricing and sorting into special categories continues from spring until the time books are transferred to the salesroom. During the interim, book barrels are constantly emptied and taken to marking stations. There are also many hours spent working at the book pick-up service.

In the early years of the book sale, the books could be set up for sale on the day of the sale. It now takes two days to deliver them and set them up in various categories. Also, it now takes as many as 200 AAUW members to sell the books after the sale begins.

This year's Used Book Sale promises to be just as exciting as in past years, organizers say. The sale includes paperbacks, hardcovers, biographies, cookbooks, children's books, sheet music and magazines. Among the collectible and silent auction items are an 1844 Gazetteer, Americana items dating from the 1820s, books with leather bindings, mid-19th century Graham periodicals with fashion plates and signed limited editions. These items, of course, are found in the better book category and may be purchased for a higher price than the 50-centper-book average.

The sale begins on Tuesday, Sept. 29, at 9:30 a.m. with a 50 percent mark-up (a 50 cent book will cost 75 cents on the first day only). Wednesday through Friday, Sept. 30-Oct. 2, all books will be sold at the regular price as marked. There will also be some surprise specials. On Oct. 3, all books are half price. There will be a bag sale on Oct. 4, with books going for $3 per bag. Hours are 9:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday; 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and

Women artists' retrospective

The Scarab Club of Detroit will host a retrospective of women artists who have exhibited under the club's auspices from 1914 to 1987. Organized by Scarab Club archivist Thomas W. Brunk, "Women Artists at the Scarab Club 1914-1987" will include works by such artists as Mary Jane Bigler, Patricia Hill Burnett, Emily Butterfield, Mairam Candler, Bernice Carmi-

Loud, Katherine McEwen, Easter McGraw, Iris Andrews Miller, Julia Peck, Mary Chase Stratton, Ellen Tallant, Jean Teague, Alice and Ruth Thurber, Mildred E. Williams and Anne

chael, Della Garretson, Marion Farnsworth, on Friday, Sept. 25, and runs through Oct. 18. The Scarab Club is open to the public from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

> Originally an all-male organization, the Scarab Club had its beginnings in the Robert Hopkin Club, founded at the Detroit Museum of Art in November 1907. In 1914, women artists began to compete for the Scarab Club Gold Medal in annual exhibitions of Michigan artists sponsored by the Scarab Club and the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Seven women have been awarded this medal, including Grosse Pointe Woods' resident Barbara Hoag, in 1983. Others are Eloise Milligan (1921), Iris Andrews Miller (1929), Miriam S. Aston (1964), Sadie Haymes (1965), Anne Westby (1981) and Ellen Tallant (1984).

In 1962, the Scarab Club board of directors unanimously voted to admit women to membership in the organization. Twenty-five years later, the club's roster boasts many prominent women artists, among them, Joan Brace, Burnett, Carmichael, Caroline Foster, Tallant, Irene Toth, Frances Quint, Carol Wald, Westby and Hoag.

An invitational preview to the retrospective will be held tonight, Sept. 24, from 6 to 10 p.m. Tickets are $25 per person; all proceeds go to the Scarab Club Building Restoration Fund.

What sport is this?

Years ago you could find girls on the playground dressed in skirts swinging on the monkey bars or playing tag. Something like this didn't seem to last long because the girls were always chased away by the voice of mom or dad. "Don't play in your skirt," used to be the infamous words shouted from the parents.

It's a similar concept at University Liggett School. This time the girls are dressed in attractive kilts, but are being yelled at with words of support from their parents and are running around a field chasing a ball.

Field hockey is a sport new to many, including me. I was astounded by the efforts demonstrated and the stamina involved in hunting down a ball, swatting at it with a stick and then unleashing the ball toward a goaltender. Not to mention the fact that they've got to stop their skirts from being soiled. It's just the opposite of the playground image. These girls are hard workers and their sport is often overlooked by a football season or for that matter, just neglected.

At my first field hockey match, I was green around the collar about the rules. strategies and positions. All I knew was the objective; the team to collect more goals wins. However, several knowledgeable people were more than happy to show me the ropes.

It is a combination of ice hockey and soccer, but played by young girls who wear shin guards and who swing sticks. Unlike hockey, only one side of the stick, which looks like an over-sized, flat candy cane with a half-eaten handle, can be used to advance the ball. If the ball, which resembles a pregnant billiard ball, is found being pushed up the field with the illegal side of the stick, it is turned over to the opponent. Similar to soccer, if the ball happens to hit a girl, from the swing of her own player, it is considered an advance and the ball is turned over once again.

A mixed-up game, so it seemed, field hockey has 11 players on each side, including the goalie. It looks fun, enjoyable, yet displays a great amount of competition and rivalry. It's got everything lootball has, right? Wrong, it doesn't have shoulder pads and helmets, but they could probably use them.

Another trick thrown into the bag of essentials is the ability to control the ball on bumpy terrain, which culminates into a difficult task. Unlike hockey, it's not a flat surface that allows the ball to glide on the turf. However, similar to soccer, it takes more than a table-top surface to advance the ball. Wherever you turn, rocky roads are ahead.

Their own playground

It's a strenuous game that can dot an eye of a player, shatter a bone, or even watch a stick be cranked (if it slips out of the clutches of a player) across the field. So why do girls play this sport? Could it be that they are trying to ruin the reputation of playground antics, or is it because "we can do anything men can do?"

The answer is neither. They play this because it is challenging, rewarding, exciting, but most of all it brings the girls together on a field they can call their own. No boys to swing from any monkey bars. No bullies to try and trip the girls or command the swing set. It is their turf which is invaded by invited guests only. And once the guests step onto the field-hockey surface, the battle begins for these young women who will try to beat you (in scoring) with a stick, run past you and drill a ball through you or around you, in essence, whatever it takes.

I was fascinated by the ability of these girls to pool their talents and apply them to a sport that blends a high quality of coordination with the challenge of concen-

Field hockey, though often shadowed by other sports, should be released from your closets. It is an "edge of your seat" experience that won't give you the chance to let your guard down. You can't, because if you do, you'll get hit with the ball and you'll have to give way to your opponent.

Enjoy the challenge of watching, and if you get the urge to attempt this sport, then I suggest you "stick it to 'em."

Schorer, Lucas trying to be "big foot"

Put canned tomatoes into a pressure cooker too long and they are apt to pop. Submerge Doug Lucas and Scott Schorer into pressure and they are bound to come out sealed tightly.

For Lucas, of South, and Schorer, of North, kicking a football has become second nature. The Grosse Pointe tandem, for years, has grown into directing an oblong object through posts that resemble two pipes that have been sprung from the ground.

Since booting field goals between two trees in his backyard, Schorer has grown into a soccerstyle kicker who can loft a football 40 yards between goal posts. As for Lucas, who made the South football field his home from morning to night, kicking was something handed down from his father.

"I became a kicker because my dad was one," said Lucas. "When he was in high school he was a kicker and ever since I can remember, he has stressed the kicking game."

"I really never thought about kicking all that much," admitted Schorer. "When I was a kid, we used to play pick up games in the backyard and I always seemed to kick the ball to start the games. After that I just started trying to kick the ball between two trees. We would pretend the trees were the posts."

At age five, Schorer put his leg to work on a soccer field. At an early age, one of Lucas' first gifts was a kicking shoe.

"I picked up some good kicking habits playing soccer," said Schorer. "Kicking soccer-style allows me to direct the ball better, but when I kick off I do it straight on because I get more power."

"My dad came home one day with a shoe for me," said Lucas. "Since that time I have al-

The amount of pressure these kids feel on the prep gridiron would make the backyard seem as relaxing as counting sheep at bedtime. However, in the day and age that a kicker can become a very lonely companion after missing a kick, the stressful situations of having their foots determine the outcome is something they dream about.

"I love pressure all together," said Schorer. "It helps me dig deeper and I seem to let loose

"If it's not important, I don't think I'd perform as well," said Lucas. "I'd like to be put in a do-or-die situation because I know I can do it. I work and react better under pressure.'

If the going gets rough and a kick goes astray, kickers may be out looking for someone to understand their gut feelings. Although most people may not understand and don't "want to be seen with a kicker," the biggest fans and largest support systems are always there for

"My dad is always supporting me," said Schorer. "No matter what sport it is, he is always there for me. He is very interested in me athletically.'

"My mom and dad are always supporting me," said Lucas. "Sure they would be happy for me if I were to win a game with a field goal or extra point, but I also think they would be thinking (if I missed it and lost the game) 'why didn't you make it, you could have been a hero," he said laughing.

Kicking is a game of chance determined by the foot, but another major component in a successful outcome is the mind. Both athletes share the views that concentration is the key, but rituals are not a common process.

"The day before a game I usually eat pizza or spaghetti," said the 6-foot-1 Lucas. "In the morning I'll generally have an instant breakfast drink."

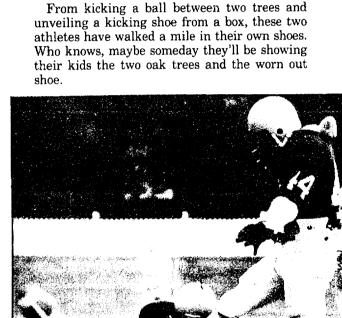

While Lucas is preparing his pre-game meal in order to follow a synchronized schedule, Schorer doesn't bother with any "psychic things.'

"I don't think about it much," he said. "I guess I've ever really thought about it. My only ritual is setting the kicking tee in the right place."

Childhoods are filled with dreams, but so are high school careers.

"I dream about winning a game with a long kick," said Lucas. "I would much rather have a 40-yard field goal sail through the air and split the uprights just as time runs out."

"I guess I just like to help my team out by getting them into good field position," said Schorer. "I also would like to kick a game-winning field goal, but I really just like to help the team out anyway I can.'

Doug Lucas (44) has been a big boot for the Blue Devils' football team. Lucas, a senior at South, cranks his kicks out of the hold of Mike Calcaterra, who gets some of the credit for Lucas' extra points and field goals. Lucas is also the kickoff expert for the Blue Devils.

Schorer, a junior at North, is a soccer-style place-kicker that relies on the hands of Ted Stephens (20) in order to get off his kicks. Schorer is also the punter and kickoff man for the Norsemen.

The more I am involved in boating, the more I learn about the sport. The more I learn about the sport, the more I realize how much more there is to learn. The more I realize how much more there is to learn, the more humble I become when I venture off shore.

I have found, over the years, that the best way for me to grow and gain knowledge about boating is through continual practice. When I learn something new I practice it. I may have to learn more about it. I may have to take a course or two to gain insight and information. I know I will have to practice, make adjustments and practice some more before I can consider the new skill mastered.

I remember learning to sail. I got a book from the library. I read about sailing. I learned the vernacular. I could use the expressions, but I didn't know a thing about it. I had no idea at all about what sailing really was. That is, not until I got into a little sailboat and actually tried it.

I stuffed myself into a bulky orange lifejacket and put up the jib at the dock because the foredeck, as small as it was, scared me. I thought I would be very clever and set that foresail ahead of time. The book didn't say not to. I got the mainsail ready to be hoisted once I was out of the harbor. Now I was ready!

I put the oars into the oarlocks and began to row out of the harbor. A breeze caught hold of the jib, but the sail just flopped about. I concentrated on my rowing and was not paying much attention to where I was heading, I knew I was going "out to sea" for my first sailing adventure alone!

The next thing I knew, my little boat was scraping along a concrete breakwall. My jib was full of air. I was in a predicament! What to do? I quickly checked the book, but there was no chapter to deal with my situation.

A kind gentleman rowed up along side. He had been watching for some time, he told me, and wondered if I had put the centerboard down. I hadn't - yet. Then he told me that if I would hold the tiller just so, and trim in the jib, I would scoot out of the har-

Well I held the tiller just so, trimmed the jib as instructed and went nowhere. My mentor sat in his dingy offering instructions, but I did not move. He finally could see my frustration and went to get his big boat, a 26-foot sailboat with an outboard. He towed me to the dock and delivered me into the hands of the dockmaster who stood, hands akimbo, shaking his head.

After that, things became easier. I learned what to do and how to do it. I quickly became aware that I had a lot to learn and it became a lifetime endeavor.

Now I take courses. I read and study. I have learned so much and come so far from that very first trial. I practice each newly acquired skill, and refresh myself on previously mastered skills. I do it because I enjoy it. I also do it because it is important for my safety and the safety of everyone sailing with me.

It is vital for all of us who set sail for far horizons to be informed, educated and open to new learning and experience. We will never know it all.

Last week, ULS recorded a win, loss and tie.

The 2-1 loss came on Sept. 15 at Lutheran North. The Knights began the game strongly, but a bad bounce on a Lutheran North

After the game coach David Backhurst stated his team didn't have the spark and needed more tenacity to win.

The Knights did that as they came out of the Zion Christian at ULS. game with a tenacious 14-0 victory; the widest margin of victory recorded by a ULS team and the most goals scored since

The Knights were led by Jonathon Davis (3 goals, 1 assist), Doug Wood (1 goal, 2 assists), Frank Karabetsos (1 goal, 2 assists), Jonah Smith (2 goals, 1 assist) and Bill Lucken (2 goals). Single goals were scored by Anthony Abiragi, Anthony Ayuyu and Bob Scoville. Schmidt and Kamran Jafri teamed up for the second ULS shutout of the year.

One day later, the Knights battled Class A rival, Grosse Pointe South to a 2-2 tie.

In the first half, the Knights got goals from Davis, who eluded two defensemen on his way, and Abiragi chipped a 20-yard shot to put ULS up 2-0. South couldn't beat a tough ULS defense until the 26-minute mark to narrow the margin to 2-1.

Kim Owens, a co-captain of this year's team, scored both goals in a 4-2 loss to Ottawa Hills in ULS' season opener.

A two-game stint in Cleveland on Sept. 19-20 saw the Lady Knights score a 2-1 win over Laurel School as Meghan Brady and Cathy Petzold provided the goals. In the Eastern Michigan League, where only three teams remain undefeated, Grosse Pointe South is definitely a team to be reckoned with.

South, now 2-0 in the league along with Port Huron and L'-Anse Creuse North, crushed 1986 E.M.L. champion Port Huron Northern, 23-0 in their home opener.

The Blue Devils got two, oneyard touchdown runs from Roger Hunwick and Brent Hanson added a one-yard plunge late in the game to seal the win for first-year Head Coach, Jon Rice. Hunwick rushed for 37 yards on 16 carries, Ted Mills ran up 84 yards on 15 tries and Matt Aldrich chewed up 65 yards.

Doug Lucas added a 28-yard field goal for the Blue Devils.

"For us it means another E.M.L. victory," said Rice. "That is our goal right now; to win the league. It also means that we are undefeated in the league and a team who was favored to give the league championship a shot has a loss."

According to Rice, the Blue

Devils simply got the job done. "It was one of those games where we said we had to do some things to win and we just went out and did them." he said. The shutout, which is always a Blue Devil goal, was credited perable Huskie offense.

"There is no doubt our defense played a good ball game, but what also helps is the fact that they (Northern) only had 11 first-half plays," said Rice. "Thatmakes it a little easier.'

Mike Paull compiled 53 yards in five pass receptions from Bryan Jones, who completed seven of nine tosses for 73 yards.

Northern, a team who racked up 10 wins and one loss in a playoff year last season, was stymied by the Blue Devils' defense, but one even bigger problem was defensive back, Marcus Wysocki.

Wysocki set a single-season school record by picking off three Huskie passes.

'We had an absolute totalteam effort," Rice said. "We are going to need it again to beat L'Anse Creuse North."

South travels to L'Anse Creuse for a 7:30 p.m. game this Friday. North, 2-1 overall, has a big football team who will battle the trenches.

"They like to go head-tohead," Rice said. "They'll line up and try to take it right at you. We like that kind of football too, so it should be a great game. We are looking forward to it.'

Fromm also proved to be unstoppable on the boards as she yanked down 17 caroms. Megan Keller and Cris Shulte had seven rebounds apiece.

In the match with University Liggett School, the Blue Devils fell behind early, but got goals from Cal Attie and Mike Disser to knot the score. Assisting on the goals were Dino Marcus and Stan Steinhebel.

In a closer match, Disser provided two goals and Rudy Cruz booted one to lift the Blue Devils over East Detroit, 3-2. Assists came from Brink Crawley, Cruz and Steve McCann.

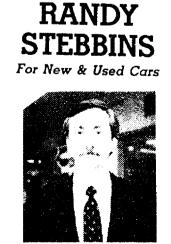

At home against Fitzgerald, Cruz and George Sparrow slashed two goals apiece and Disser and Crawley kicked one each to lead South to a 6-1 drubbing. Cal Attie dished out two assists

Invitational draws top talent

By Josh Abbott Special Writer

Athletes from several metroarea schools invaded Grosse Pointe North Saturday to partake in the annual Girls' Fall Sports Invitational. The eight participating schools sported some of the strongest athletic programs in Michigan.

The girls competed in cross country, swimming and tennis. The overall winners, tied with 13 points, were Birmingham Seaholm and Grosse Pointe South. Grosse Pointe North tallied 12 points for third place, Dearborn was fourth (10) while Farmington Mercy placed fifth (9) and Birmingham Groves was sixth (8).

In the cross-country race, South took four of the top 10 spots en route to a rather easy race. Janet Reinowski (Dearborn) was the top finisher by a margin of 1:24; helping her squad to second place. For the Lady Norsemen, Nikki Van Oppens was seventh, Liz Bolden was 13th and Anne Finlan was 15th. Boys' Cross North took fourth overall.

In the pool, Groves, a power in Country swimming, edged out the Lady Norsemen 90-88 to take the two firsts in the 100-freestyle relay and the 200-freestyle relay. They also took a pair of seconds.

On the tennis courts, Seaholm served themselves a 38-24 win over South to take the court championship. North took third place as the number three doubles team of Alicia Lynch and Amy Austin won the finals over South.

Swimming

Fresh off a top-10 finish in the state championship in 1986, the girls' swim team kicked off the 1987 campaign in fine style, 100-71 over Dearborn. Wendy Mader led the way with a pair of school-record wins in the 200 and 500 freestyle events. Karen Dundon also set a school record in winning the 200 individual medley. The Lady Norsemen qualified for the state championships in seven events.

Up next for the swim team is Warren Woods Tower at home on Oct. 1.

The Norsemen ran away with a tri-meet win over Romeo (20-

Steve Clarke came in first overall with a time of 18:12 while Frank Markey (18:36) and John Shefferly (18:38) finished third and fourth, respectively.

On Saturday, Sept. 26, the Norsemen travel to the Shrine Invitational.

Basketball

After opening the season with a win over South, the Lady Norsemen have battled to a win and loss in two attempts.

Against Utica Eisenhower, North was thrashed 50-22. On the next adventure, the Lady Norsemen bounced back to slice previously unbeaten Sterling Heights, 38-34. Heather Mergos led North with 13 points and eight rebounds.

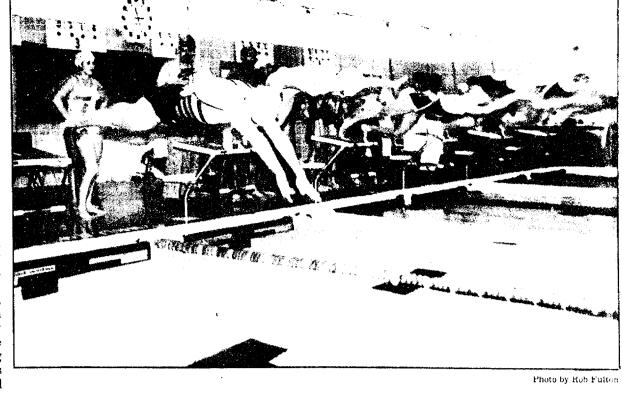

North takes on Brablec at home Sept. 29.

At home against Chippewa Valley, North jumped out early with goals from Caldwell and Ben Black, but three straight Valley goals nipped the Norsemen, 4-3. In the next match, the kickers were blistered, 4-0 by Fraser.

North is now 5-2.

North's Laura Verona, in the "N" cap, gets off the blocks in the medley relay at the North Invitational last Saturday. Verona helped her team and school to a third-place finish in the overall competition.

Sooner or later, luck must flip back over and fill the cup of Coach Frank Sumbera.

After a 20-7 loss to Cousino, their second of the season and second straight, the Norsemen looked back at some possible turning points.

A couple of balls that could have been caught within striking distance of paydirt, a clean exchange between center and quarterback and an ability to have changed the complexion of the game.

Statistics, as Sumbera so often stated before, are not always indicative of a game. However, it is interesting to note that even before their first touchdown, the Patriots still didn't make it on the plus side in total offense. In addition, the Norsemen racked up more first downs than Cous-

Attention Marathoners!

October 18 is fast approach-

Perhaps it's your first marathon, or your 10th. No matter. Each marathon run is unique. To finish, just finish, is personal success and the taste of that success is sweet. If your training has been adequate, you'll finish with little injury. If your training has been sporadic and vou know you haven't put the required miles in, you should consider not running. Don't risk injury for personal glory. If you haven't put the miles in by now, it's too late. If you have followed a schedule and are well trained, go for it!

Your limitations during the run will be based on the following factors: 1) the oxygen supply to the muscles during the run, 2) the oxygen debt incurred by performance, 3) fuel available for supplying energy to the tissues.

Energy is derived mainly from the oxidation or burning of muscle glycogen (carbohydrates) during the race. The factor that tends to limit performance is the supply of oxygen for turning this oxygen into energy.

The heart pumps oxygen rich blood through the circulatory system. When the runner isn't trained properly or when his pace becomes too fast, the heart simply has difficulty pumping enough blood through the body. The muscles are then forced to work without adequate oxygen supply and then they begin to take more energy from a direct breakdown of the glycogen into lactic acid. An accumulation of lactic acid in the muscle tissue then decreases the ability of the muscles to contract and loss of coordination results. The sensation of "tying up" or "hitting the wall" is caused by large quantities of lactic acid present in the muscles. The runner has then gone into debt for oxygen.

Putting in long, continuous distance running builds a broad base. This marathon training will stretch the heart; which will increase the beat or stroke volume and will aid general endurance conditioning. Even more important, it will greatly aid your supplementary circulation by doubling your capillary stroke volume and tripling the connections between the capillaries. This allows a greater and better blood flow to the muscles and supplies more oxygen to the muscles; insuring a better marathon for you.

Our bodies are wonderful machines and if you've trained yours properly, it will work for you during the 26 miles. I've run two marathons, one in Detroit and the other in Hawaii. The thrill and confidence derived from these accomplishments are cherished. I "hit the wall" in Hawaii at 20 miles and it was the first time I was totally aware of physical limitations. A good lesson. The humidity was in the 90s and the temperature was also. Next month you won't have that problem.

I wish you low humidity, comfortable temperatures and good luck. Remember, don't buy a new pair of running shoes now. Use the old ones, Blisters during a race are more than uncomfortable. Enjoy. The thrill of success is

Although female sports avenues have road blocks in them and are seemingly overshadowed by male athletics, more women have arrived on the sports/fitness scene and are surely making a niche for themselves.

However, comments such as "women are weak", or are more "injury prone," is something that was stereotypically designed, but still lingers on.

Sometimes it appears that female athletes suffer more injuries than males, because they are tagged as being fragile, but according to Robert Burks, M.D. of Grosse Pointe Farms, that is not the case.

"Most sports injuries are sports specific and not gender oriented," said Burks. "If you have females taking part in running, swimming or any other sport, you'll see that they develop injuries related to their sport just as males do. When a woman suffers from a sprained ankle, it doesn't mean she is more prone to the injury, but it is caused by the type of sport."

competition began in junior high should concentrate on being the don't do the exercise they developed earlier. Therefore, the neglect is something that comes into play later in life.

"Many women played in teenage years on up and then lost touch with it," said Burks. They then learn about certain teams forming and want to get on them. They may suffer some aches and pains and appear frail, but it's not true. It's only a matter of lack of doing it before, or getting into a sport too rigorous for them at that age. Many of them should gear into it slowly."

For years, women have always tried to compete with male athletics, and according to Burks, a majority of them still can't compete.

"It's a question of level," Burks said. "If a woman goes out and plays football with a man, she's more apt to lose. However, if she goes on to play another woman, then I think she can handle the bumps and bruises. Some women like to think they can compete with the guys, and in many cases they For many females, their sports can, but in certain areas they of them go on to college and trying to strive to be better than may be cramps or other proba male athlete. I don't think it's healthy."

> Burks feels many women are naturally better athletes than males, but the lack of power separates some of their abilities.

"Women show more flexibility than men because of hormonal makeup," he said. "However, they are unable to gain muscle build up. A women may have nicely defined muscles, but her makeup is such that it's hard for her to build large muscle mass."

Assuming a woman performs poorly in an event, there is a tendency to believe she did not uphold her usual performance because she was suffering from her period.

"That's baloney," said Burks. "There has been a lot of gold won in the olympics in the middle of a period."

In years past, women were told to relax and take it easy when going through the monthly cycle, but Burks feels that's not needed.

"They used to tell women to back off and not do anything,' he said. "Women may be uncomfortable, but there is no reason for them not to perform. There lems, but studies have shown that exercising during the period may help alleviate some of the discomfort."

Women taking part in intense training, and want to become pregnant at one time or another, are cautioned as to some of the side effects that may develop.

"In women who are serious competitors it is shown that they begin to stop having periods," said Burks. "There are a lot of reasons for that, but the likelihood of becoming pregnant diminishes.

In order to combat the chances of not bearing a child, Burks suggest cutting back. "If a woman is competing, intensely, and wants to become pregnant, then she should decrease the activity at that level," he said. "It's just a matter of changing to a different level.'

At the same token, pregnant women are advised to continue exercising for the good of the child as well as herself.

"Women who are pregnant can continue to exercise, but they must do what's comfortable," Burks said. "There are a lot of tapes and programs available now that they can use to guide them. The exercise should be basically aerobic in style."

When do pregnant women stop exercising?

"Whe it stops being comfortable they should bail out a little bit," said Burks. "It all depends on how they feel."

Burks ecourages women to continue in their athletic endeavors, but he cautions their goals. He claims that women can compete with men, to some extent, but advises they concentrate on being the best female athlete in their sport as well as bettering themselves.

"Female athletes should concentrate on being the best in their sport; not in a male sport," he said. "Right now I don't think it's realistic for women to try to compete with males in some aspects. The woman has to keep in mind the level and the sport she is competing in and try to be physically fit to be the best female athlete she can be.'

After months of thought and procrastination you are finally all set to begin your diet. The children are back in school, the autumn months bring with them a form and schedule that may have been lacking during the summer months. You feel you have planned your program with all the necessary ingredients that will result in success; eating the right foods, never skipping meals, and drinking plenty of water. You have even incorporated an exercise program to help you achieve your goal. But one important factor is missing from your plan. Unless you also plan to change your "mental blue-print" the weight-loss process may well end up as another failure. Just what is this "mental blueprint" and why is it so important in your plans for success?

At the Diet Center convention, guest speaker, Dr. Wayne Dyer spoke a great truth: "You'll see it when you believe it." This, of course, is a clever turn of an old phrase, "I'll believe it when I see it."

fore you believe it, chances are quite high that you will never see your goal come true. But, as Dr. Dyer pointed out, belief must precede the ability to see. This is true in all areas of life, but especially true with allowing yourself to be slim. The image of slimness must be present in your mind's eye in order to achieve a slim body.

How do people change their entrenched, almost sacred beliefs about themselves? The need to change their mental blueprint that has been consistently marked with the "I'm fat" picture to an "I'm slim and isn't it great" picture. People's behaviors are always consistent with their beliefs. When you believe you can be slim, appropriate behavior will follow more easily.

The process by which we reach our present mental image of ourselves, and then reprogram that image, is called relaxation and visualization. This process is also known as meditation, imaging and selfhypnosis. Each of these techniques may vary in their application, but they all have a basic thrust to reach the unconscious mind and use its strengths to heal. These techniques have been part of the Eastern cultures for thousands of years and are just beginning to be accepted and integrated into Western thought.

For many of us, these techniques seemed ridiculous and in many instances, downright scary. During the late sixties and into the seventies, many of us put these practices into a category of hocus-pocus; merely fads that would fade away like many others we witnessed. But today, as more. and more professionals in the fields of medicine and mental health discover the gifts these techniques bring to the overall picture of wellness, the practice has become much more -acceptable-- and - understood.

In order to reach your subconscious mind, you must first learn to relax, prior to visualizing. The purpose of the relaxation process is to slow down the brain wave cycles to reach the alpha state of consciousness. It is at the alpha level that re-programming can and does occur.

Human beings function in four levels of activity of the mind. The level we most often function in during our waking hours is the beta level. The beta level or conscious mind is the level at which you do your surface thinking. Here you receive information from your environment through your five senses.

The alpha level is the subconscious mind level. This is the creative center, here lies your inspiration, peacefulness and memory. You can only reach this level through relaxation, thus paving the way for new mental images to be imprinted on your mind.

The theta level is one step below alpha and this is the level the great Zen masters operate; a level which involves deeper levels of medita-

The fourth level is delta and is associated with deep sleep or unconsciousness. At each of these levels the brain wave vibrations operate at different cycles per second. The beta level has the most cycles per second, to the delta level, where the cycles per second are much, much slower.

As is pointed out in "Think Slim - Be Slim" by Elsye Birkenshaw..."you can see that in learning the relaxation methods...you are also learning to slow your brain wave patterns from 28 cycles per second to around seven. At the same time you are projecting an image which is helping you to utilize the great creativity to 'float' on the conscious mind."

In general, relaxation procedures include deep breathing from the solar plexus followed by specific instructions from you to relax all body parts, one by one. Beginning with your toes, tighten your muscles, then relax; doing this exercise all the way up your body, breathing easily. Particular attention should be paid to relaxing the jaw and shoulders, since many of us carry a good deal of tension in these two areas.

Once you are completely relaxed, you can then begin the visualization. This process involves "painting a mental picture." This picture should be as vivid and detailed as possible, and one that makes you feel strong and in control of the environment and yourself. Many people, for example, find a beach scene relaxing and peaceful. Now is the time to insert that new mental image of yourself at the beach, slim and comfortable in your bathing suit. At first, this picture may be difficult to imagine, but with continued practice, your mind will begin to accept this new image you are painting of yourself. Beliefs are created through emotions and feelings - not words. That is why the picture you imagine must be yours alone. It must touch your feelings to become reality.

Be patient and kind to yourself when first trying a relaxation and visualization technique. It will become easier the more you practice.

This skill can be learned the same way as any others you possess. It is recommended that you set aside just 15 to 20 minutes on a daily basis to practice. It can contribute to long term success of achieving and maintaining a good goal weight and also in any other area of life that can be improved.

Think Trim' offers food for thought

"When the 'yo yo' syndrome of her knowledge of psychology weight loss keeps you dangling on a string it's time to look beyond mere dieting and learn to think trim," says psychotherapist Lorraine Stefano, A.C.S.W., founder and director of an educational concept "Think Trim."

Stefano will conduct an all day Think Trim seminar at the War Memorial on Saturday, Oct. 10 from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

A petite brunette after shedding fifty pounds using selftaught methods, Stefano conducts "Think Trim" classes and seminars throughout the metropolitan Detroit area. Her "Think Trim" philosophy incorporates with her life-long experiences as a dieter and uses positive visual imagery and mental self-discovery to realize our true relationship with food.

Once we recognize what control food has on our lives (why we often eat in response to our emotions of anger, worry, stress as well as happiness) we can formulate appropriate behaviors next time we feel the need to 'pig out'," said Stefano.

Why do we opt for a candy bar instead of a carrot when we're depressed? Or chips and dip instead of cauliflower and yogurt when we're lonely? Why does a hot fudge sundae comfort us more than an apple when we're blue? And will a stroll around the block or a good book offer the same peace of mind as pizza after a fight with a co-worker?

These are some of the challenges presented in the "Think Trim" classes where participants learn to identify and conquer the mental barriers to permanent weight control. The classes offer techniques for coping with the emotions that often booby-trap our dieting resolution, while it teaches skills to strengthen and promote a trim self image.

'Fatal Attraction' is a sizzler

By Michael Chapp

Special Writer

For those who view casual sex as nothing but a hobby, there's more than just AIDS to think about now. It's called "Fatal Attraction," and if this film isn't enough to squelch a few overactive libidos, nothing is.

A thriller by genre, "Attraction" manages to go beyond mere spine tingles. The story around which the shocks are based is a solid character study. And the multi-layered acting talents of Michael Douglas, Glenn Close and Ann Archer refute any doubts that may be left.

Before Dan Gallagher (Douglas) and Alex Forest (Close) ever hop into the extra-marital sack, Gallagher has been firmly established in viewers' minds as a family man. He's the type of guy who plays card games with his little girl and takes the dog for a walk before kissing his wife (Archer) on the cheek and turning in.

One weekend while his wife is away though, he has a one-night stand with Forest. Innocent enough, he thinks. Until Forest begins to call him around the the-seater. More than a few

In a lesser movie, viewers would be quite certain that Forest is the villain and Gallagher is a good guy suffering the consequences of his thoughtless actions. In "Attraction," things aren't that clear, however. Forest makes a strong case for herself. She's pregnant, certain that Gallagher is the father, and unwilling to honor his requests to be left alone.

Their relationship starts in the passion of romance and ends in the passion of violence. Forest becomes ever more psychotic as the film moves on, and by the climax, it's clear that anything can happen. And, quite frankly, it does.

"A Prayer for the Dying" is a dark and brooding film that explores the terrible price paid in self-contempt and moral debasement when an ideal is pursued with violence.

It begins as Martin Fallon (Mickey Rourke), an Irish American terrorist, and his comrades are setting a bomb on a country road. The army truck for which the bomb is intended pulls aside to let a school bus pass. Just before the bus explodes into a fiery inferno, we see schoolchildren laughing and talking. It is a horrifying sight.

Guilt-ridden, Fallon flees to England, vowing never to kill again. Once there he contacts Jack Meehan (Alan Bates), a ruthless gangster whom he hopes will provide him with a passport to the United States, where he hopes to escape the two IRA agents assigned to either kill him or bring him back.

Based on the best seller by Jack Higgins, "A Prayer for the Dying" should have been an arresting story. However, the question of how much terrorism is too much and what a life of violence can do to the soul is not effectively presented.

It does, however, give rise to questions that beg for answers. and final absolution.

Symbols become important props — the killing fire of the exploding bus, the fire in the crematory that returns bodies to ashes, the raging fire that destroys a church. Finally the cross becomes a symbol of salvation

Triple winner!

David Wilson, a five-year-old Woods resident, recently collected three wins in the Eight-and-Under Swimming Championships at the Detroit Yacht Club. Wilson, a firstgrader at Star of the Sea Elementary, won the 25-meter butterfly (24.6), 25-meter breaststroke (27.5) and the 25-meter freestyle (24.7). He also placed second in the 25-meter backstroke in a time of 32.1.

Hunters to benefit from fall regulations

Michigan firearm hunters will benefit from liberalized regulations this fall as the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) launches programs aimed at providing new opportunities for hunters and solving crop and silvicultural damage problems.

New hunting opportunities in-

1) A limited bonus deer option. 2) More hunters choice licenses available. 3) Expanded areas open for hunters choice. 4) More landowner limited hunting licenses. 5) An extended season in Menominee County (in the upper peninsula). 6) The availability of leftover hunters choice licenses. And again this fall, hunters will be permitted to purchase a second buck license after the Sept. 24 deadline for hunter choice license applications.

In Zone 1, the upper peninsula, a different bonus feature is offered. In Units 215 and 414, hunters with hunters choice licenses must present an antlerless deer to a DNR Field Office in order to obtain an additional kill tag, valid for either a buck or antlerless deer. Unit 215 hunters will report to Stephenson, Unit 414 hunters to Norway. This year, an additional 38,190 hunters choice licenses will be issued statewide which allow hunters to take either a buck or a doe.

Along with the additional hunters choice licenses, expanded areas have been opened to hunters. There are 140 units open for antlerless hunting; an increase of 17 over last year. Those units are listed in the 1987 hunters choice license application guide available at all license dealer locations and DNR

Unit 215, in the upper peninsula, will have an extended Dec. 1-15 firearm deer season for hunters with Unit 215 hunters choice licenses. That means any Unit 215 hunters choice license holders may hunt from Nov. 15 to Dec. 15 in Unit 215.

In units where high crop and silvicultural damage is being experienced, hunters may obtain an unclaimed hunters choice license by appearing at designated DNR offices. Those units and offices are: Unit 215, beginning Nov. 15, at the Stephenson Field Office (906) 753-6317; Units 137, 138 and 156, beginning Nov. 1, at the Plainwell District Office (616) 685-6851; Units 147, 150 and 151, beginning Nov. 1, at the Jackson District Office (517) 784-3188; Unit 36, beginning and landowner limited license Nov. 1, Grand Rapids District holders are: 37, 47, 49, 50, 51, Office (616) 456-5071.

allows hunters, who possess a regular hunters choice or landowner limited license, to take an additional antlerless deer in specified deer harvest units.

hunters choice license holders 52, 112, 139 and 155. Bonus The limited bonus deer option units open to landowner limited license holders are, Units 79, 81, 99 and 102.

> A total of 38,245 bonus antlerless-only tags will be available.

FOR ONCE THE CRITICS AND THE PUBLIC AGREE

It happens once in a great while. A performance so stunning, it galvanizes the critics and public alike.

It happened this year. And it happened to a newcomer named Acura.

Witness the accolades. First from the critics: The Acura Legend Coupe was named the 1987 Motor Trend Import Car of the Year. And from the public: Acura was ranked number one in customer satisfaction as reported by the independent and influential J.D. Power and Associates Customer Satisfaction Index."

Was it the advanced technology? The exhilarating performance? The precision craftsmanship? The bold and ergonomically correct design?

The reviews say it was all of the above. Why read the reviews? When you own an Acura automobile, you can experience the performance.
