

South High to host state leadership conference

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

High school students from the suburban metropolitan area will be locked in at South High School next month taking part in the state's second Teen Leadership Conference.

Teams of five students from each school will participate in an intensive two-day program designed to provide students with leadership skills and resources necessary to develop education and substance abuse prevention programs with their peers within their schools' communities.

The program will begin 4:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 13, and run through 12:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 15. Students will not be able to leave the school over the weekend and they will participate in a variety of programs designed to enhance leadership skills.

Dee Szmrecsanyi, a member of the planning committee, said the program is offered by Knopf Inc.

and South Eastern Michigan Substance Abuse Service. Its emphasis is on teen drinking and substance abuse prevention through the development of student leadership skills which would enable them to start education and awareness programs in their respective schools.

Knopf is a consulting firm whose purpose is substance abuse prevention for young people.

"We anticipate there will be about 150 kids who will be spending the weekend here," Szmrecsanyi said. "There will also be volunteer advisers, chaperones and group facilitators who will be at the school over the weekend."

She said that the planning committee is seeking volunteers to be chaperones and group leaders. Since this program is not funded by the school district, except for the donation of the school facilities, the planning committee is also seeking donations of funds or food.

"We are looking for donations of healthy snacks," Szmrecsanyi said. "Also we need about 60 chaperones who will work two-hour shifts from 4:30 p.m. to midnight Friday, 7 a.m. to midnight Saturday, and 7 a.m. to noon on Sunday."

Gail Erickson, assistant principal at Brownell and a former counselor, said students will develop a substance abuse prevention plan for their schools in the months that follow the conference. She said she felt the program will eventually involve the entire student body.

Volunteers are also needed to be group leaders. Facilitators should be professionals with successful experience with small group work, preferably with a college degree in counseling or education. Other qualifications are desired.

For more information on donating food or volunteering, call South Assistant Principal Bernie LeMieux at 343-2130 or Julie Fairley at Knopf at 455-4343.

Renters, landlords pack Park meeting

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park's Monday night council meeting brought out more than 100 residents — a mixture of landlords and renters — for a public hearing about a proposed ordinance for biennial, or every two years, inspection of rental units in the Park.

All seats were taken. People lined the sides of the council chambers; others stood three and four deep in the back of the room.

The purpose of the hearing, according to Councilman Mark Valente, was to get input from residents, both tenants and property owners. The council did not intend to act on the ordinance, he said. The ordinance review committee met Tuesday morning.

With city elections only three weeks away, however, the occasion also presented ideal conditions for a bit of campaigning. Council members, Mayor Palmer Heenan and candidates for the upcoming election found the situation too tempting to resist. Campaign positions were stated, restated, clarified and justified.

Concerning the rental property inspection, after an hour-and-a-half of comments from a cross-section of property owners and renters, the consensus seemed to be that:

- regular inspection of rental property should be required
- city inspections are often unfair

- inspections every two years is too often; every four years is more reasonable

- interior inspections should stress safety; exterior inspections should concern safety and aesthetics.

Councilman John Prost said, at one point during the discussion, that perhaps the wrong crowd was in attendance. "You are the people who keep up your homes. Our perception is that (your concern) is for nearby property that is not being kept up."

A few residents had individual complaints about landlords who wouldn't repair furnaces, or landlords who allowed debris and pools of oil to remain in unfenced rear yards, or landlords who contributed to blight conditions and allowed so-called "dumps" to exist.

Some had suggestions for the proposed ordinance. One woman, who said she maintains her property meticulously, thought an inspection every two years was too often. Another resident said, "The city inspector can tell which ones to inspect simply by driving down the street."

A resident suggested requiring inspections only if there are complaints about a particular property. Another man suggested a tax credit for owners whose inspections showed nothing wrong.

Councilman James Robson got a loud round of applause when he said he recently drove up and down several streets and wrote down the addresses of all the property that could safely be called dumps. He said he found that several of these properties belonged to the same owner. "I see a decline in the quality of renters," he said. "I see riff-raff, alcoholics, dope."

School considers legal action over pool

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

School officials hope to plug a few leaks with possible legal action against the company that installed the North High School pool almost 20 years ago.

The board of education Monday night unanimously approved the hiring of a law firm that successfully reached a settlement with the company for the Crestwood school district in Dearborn, which had similar problems with its pool.

Thomas Gauerke, North athletic director, said there have been problems with the pool since it was installed.

The pool is constructed almost entirely of aluminum, and because it sits on limestone, an electrolysis process occurs, causing the metal to pit from the underside. This causes hundreds of leaks every year.

"The leaks pop up constantly," Gauerke said. "They range in size from pin holes to one-quarter inch."

Every summer maintenance staff drains the pool and grinds off the paint. A contracted welder comes in and welds the holes closed.

"About five years ago we had a study done which gave various recommendations, all of which were costly," Gauerke said. "So we continue to patch and repair, but it's still an expensive way to go."

Dave King, director of support services, said the district spent $4,100 last summer and about $2,000 for the last several years. "There was a time about four or five years ago where we had to spend a lot more (than last summer)," King said.

King said the district hired the Keller, Thoma, Schwarze, Schwarze, Dubay & Katz firm, because they represented Crestwood in the successful legal battle.

The family gathers

Along with hundreds of friends, dignitaries, those who simply wanted to pay their respects and the curious, the family of Henry Ford II commemorated his life and death Thursday at a public memorial service at the Episcopal Cathedral Church of St. Paul in Detroit. Here his two daughters, son, daughter-in-law and grandson greet guests after the service. Young Henry Ford III embraces his aunt, Charlotte Downe. In the back is her sister Anne Scarborough, brother Edsel, with his back to the camera, and his wife Cynthia. More photos on page 13A.

Last Thursday morning on WCZY-FM radio: "Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen, and welcome to Grosse Pointe's homecoming — featuring the high-stepping, feet-flashing, feet-thumpin' De-TROIT Sym-pho-ny OR-ches-tra!" (Cheers in the background.)

"The orchestra is going to start off with a 'Salute to Brunch.'" (An off-key rendition of '2001: Space Odyssey' begins.)

"The band is under the baton of four-time state champion baton twirler Buffy Van Van Dorsen." (More cheers.)

"The band is now forming a giant quiche." (Here, the performers of this spoof of Grosse Pointe begin their giggles)... "while the woodwind section forms a lovely croissant." (They start to break up.)

"The violas are in the shape of a Waterford crystal glass full of a lovely, but unpretentious Chablis." (By now the studio is breaking up with laughter.)

Mark Andrews, sports director of WCZY-FM, narrated this spoof of Grosse Pointe's band-less homecoming Thursday morning on the Dick Purtan Show. And almost broke up doing it. Guffaws and giggles were plentiful.

Andrews said he had been following the story of Grosse Pointe's defunct marching bands. "I read the story in the Grosse Pointe News (Oct. 1 issue) about the bands. It also came across the Michigan wire. Dick Purtan asked me to do a spoof for the show," he said.

The invitation read that the private party would require a $4 cover charge, would be by invitation only and would include a keg and jungle juice. And oh yes, guests should park a block away.

Woods Detective Dan Koerber, assigned to North High School several days a week, had a copy of the invitation dropped off anonymously on his desk. He contacted the young woman who was having the party and quizzed her about the upcoming event. The girl told Koerber her mother knew about the bash, and she only sent out invitations to 55 of her closest friends.

By the way, jungle juice, as we understand it, is a fortified punch drink, not to be confused with the Hawaiian version.

Koerber contacted the girl's mother who said her husband was going to be out of town and she too was planning to be gone the night of the party.

Koerber then showed a copy of the invitation to the woman, who said she didn't know the bash would be so eventful. She immediately cancelled her plans to be gone that night — and the party.

Krissie demonstrates her skill at an obedience trial.

Local dog wins AKC first

An Old English sheepdog belonging to Carolyn House of Grosse Pointe Farms recently became the first dog of its breed to win both breed champion and obedience trial champion. Winoby's A Star Is Born, familiarly known as Krissie, earned the points that put her over the top at the Southern Michigan Obedience Training Club's annual trials at North High School Sept. 27.

The American Kennel Club requires 100 points for the obedience championship. Krissie earned 104 points by placing first or second in the two highest obedience classes.

"It took 18 shows in 11 months — and a whole lot of traveling," House said.

House bred Krissie explicitly for showing in both the breed ring and the obedience trials. She achieved the AKC breed championship when she was 11 months old and then began training for her obedience titles.

Krissie is the second Old English sheepdog in AKC history to earn the Obedience Trial Championship, according to House. She is the first to earn both titles.

Watercolor class

Watercolor for Everyone, an ideal class for novice painters, will meet Tuesdays, Oct. 27 to Dec. 15 from 7-9 p.m. at the War Memorial.

With the emphasis on color, brush, technique and style, instructor Carol Lachiusa will help students acquire the expertise to produce their own watercolors in eight weeks.

Class fee is $64. A supply list is available at time of registration. Call 881-7511.

Republicans honor Getz

Arthur H. Getz of Grosse Pointe Park was honored for his outstanding services to the 13th Congressional District Republican Party last month.

Selected for the honor by members of the Michigan Republican State Committee which is the governing body of the Michigan Republican Party, he was awarded the Certificate of Appreciation at the "Salute to Detroit Republicans" sponsored by the Michigan Republican Party.

In addition, he was inducted to the Number One Michigan Republican Club at the 1987 Michigan Republican Leadership Conference at Mackinaw Island. The Certificate of Membership was presented by party Chairman E. Spencer Abraham, who commended Getz for his "outstanding personal contributions to the Michigan Republican Party."

A long-time resident of Grosse Pointe Park, Getz has been a lifelong participant in the Michigan Republican Party serving as a delegate for Grosse Pointe Park Precinct No. 4, vice chairman of the 13th District Republican Committee and a volunteer for numerous Republican candidates.

Cultural exchange broadens understanding

Intercambio Internacional de Estudiantes, A.C., a cultural exchange program, is offering local families the opportunity to share their home with a young boy or girl from Central America. Children will arrive during November, December, or January for a eight to nine week stay.

Founded in 1959, the Intercambio Program has successfully arranged for well over 50,000 children and families to meet and experience one another's cultures. Intercambio is designed for younger children, ages 13 to 17, who are looking for a home which has a youngster of the same age, sex and of similar interests.

These children are sponsored by their own parents, are covered by insurance for health and accident, and will bring their own spending money. Besides the goal of personal formation for the child, Intercambio is taking a big step toward establishing international friendships.

Families interested in providing room, board, and sharing their activities can learn more about Intercambio by calling toll free 1-800-437-4170, or writing Intercambio, 3122 Broadway, Fargo, ND 58102.

Learn to make an herb wreath

Carol Czechowski will conduct an Herb Wreath Workshop at the War Memorial Wednesday, Oct. 21, for 10 a.m. to noon.

An herb grower, lecturer and member of the Herb Society of America, Czechowski is also a regular exhibitor at the annual Holly Mart and a frequent War Memorial instructor.

She will lecture on the history and uses of herbs, then help participants create a decorative wreath on a 10-inch base, to use as a wall hanging or centerpiece.

Workshop fee is $15 plus $15 for materials payable to instructor on the day of class. Students are asked to bring clippers. For registration information, call 881-7511.

Discipline of learning disabled children to be discussed

Michigan Association for Children and Adults With Learning Disabilities, Inc. will present a program on "Discipline and The L.D. Child" by C. Suzanne Klein, principal of Pierce Middle School, on Tuesday, Oct. 20, at 7:30 in the Grosse Pointe Central Library.

Discipline is a subject of much concern to those involved with learning disabled youngsters. Many children with learning disabilities are impulsive or lack the social perception necessary to accurately assess a situation and respond appropriately. Klein will offer suggestions to parents on how to set reasonable goals for their child's behavior, and how to react if those goals are not met. Immediately following will be a discussion period, during which parents may ask questions or share problems and concerns.

Klein has a background in both child management and Special Education. Before assuming the position of principal at Pierce, she was assistant principal at Parcels and at Pierce. She has been a special education teacher, and was one of the first people in Grosse Pointe to be involved in "Kids on the Block," a program which teaches understanding and acceptance of peo-

Woods to look at upgrading Mack Avenue — again

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

Mack Avenue in the Woods is the envy of the Pointes, but the Woods city council isn't planning to rest on its laurels. After six months of consideration, the council last month voted a $10,000 contract to urban planner Gerald Luedtke to conduct an analysis of the street to see how to make it even better.

"We're sometimes criticized for being too study-oriented," said Councilman Robert Novitke. "But we don't want to be in the position of just reacting. We are planning-oriented. It's currently typical of the Woods to look ahead."

City Administrator Chester Petersen first met with Luedtke in February. The meeting was prompted by city awareness of plans to construct major shopping and office developments in St. Clair Shores and in Detroit next to St. John Hospital.

"Within the next five years, the competitive position of all commercial areas on the east side of Detroit will change radically," Luedtke wrote to Petersen after the meeting. "The restructuring of the market will not only affect the Mack Avenue commercial frontage in Grosse Pointe Woods, but will also have a major effect on Eastland Shopping Center in Harper Woods."

Blight buster

The 1980 blight prevention study was by most accounts a roaring success.

"A whole renaissance occurred along Mack," said urban planner Gerald Luedtke, who conducted the study.

The study precipitated a rash of facade improvements, beautification projects, sign replacements and new construction — not only in the five Grosse Pointes, but across the street in Detroit as well.

"(Merchants and officials) were concerned," Luedtke said. "They didn't want Mack to go the way of Grand River. The theory behind the study was that if you established anchors along Mack, they would have a ripple effect and Luedtke wrote that the city should look at ways, such as rezoning, in which it could benefit from the development. "In our opinion, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure in such a situation," he wrote. "The city could substantial renovation all along the street.

"Mack today is probably one of the healthiest business strips in the city."

Luedtke sees a great future for a shopping strip like Mack. "Throughout the metropolitan area, there is a big return to neighborhood shopping," he said. "The mystique of large malls is waning.

"And Mack has fine offerings. You can get a picture framed or a heart operation. In 1980 the merchants held a contest: If anybody could think of a service that wasn't offered on Mack, they'd win a prize.

"The person who won named taxidermy."

of Grosse Pointe Woods should be aware of the economic competition it faces, and should enact policies in advance which will protect the interests of its main commercial artery."

The study will build on the previous Mack Avenue blight study that was funded by all five Grosse Pointes and looked at the entire length of Mack from the Woods to the Park. This study will only examine the Woods section, however.

"If you don't keep up your business area, your other areas will depreciate," said Mayor George Freeman. "If we keep Mack nice, it will keep the community desirable."

City officials and planner Luedtke say the plan won't result in a completely different Mack. No one should expect a bit of New York in Grosse Pointe Woods.

"Other than the problem we have with parking, I'd like to see everything stay as it is," said Novitke. "But that's not always something we can control — this is a free-enterprise society. But if we have to change, it's better for us to put the contours on the change."

Luedtke said that at the beginning of a study, he works with a series of questions: How high should buildings be? What is the impact on the tax base? How can more parking be provided — and how much is enough? Are townhouses a good idea? Could more commercial development spin off around the Pointe Plaza? What about housing for senior citizens?

"This is an updated strategy that will carry us through the next eight years," he said. "The 1980 study identified things that contribute to blight — lack of parking, too much traffic, lack of screening between businesses and houses, gaudy signs. This study will look at possible causes of blight again and consider the aesthetics of Mack — landscaping, facade designs, signs."

Luedtke said it might be possible to intensify development a little with three-story office buildings and some cluster housing, but that he is not looking for high rises.

"Mack has its own ambience," he said. "We want to make sure that the scale of development that we find quaint and attractive is continued."

School non-union salary increases approved

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Raises for non-instructional supervisors and non-bargaining secretaries were approved Monday night by the school board on recommendations from a company hired to perform a compensation study.

Board members Carl Anderson and Carol Marr both raised questions about the study, which called for a compensation adjustment of $7,000 for the cafeteria supervisor and $4,000 for the data processing director, at the board's Oct. 5 meeting.

Both Anderson and Marr said they did not want to discuss the salary hikes at a public meeting, and special informational meetings of three or fewer board members were set up for Oct. 9.

Business Director Christian Fenton said many of the concerns voiced by board members were alleviated after they met with him and a representative of Plante & Moran, the company that performed the study.

Anderson said he felt the meeting was worthwhile and answered many of the questions he had. Superintendent John Whritner said in the future the district would have a representative of a consultant firm on hand to explain a study at the conference meeting, so questions could be asked and answered on the spot.

The total wage package will cost the district about $34,000, Fenton said. The cost of the study — a budgeted item — was about $8,000. Whritner said the $34,000 represented about $6,000 more than what the district had budgeted for the wage increases.

Plante & Moran representatives met with each employee and supervisor to determine job responsibilities. Salary surveys in both the public and private sectors of comparable positions were made to determine the current market value of the positions.

Several supervisors were given substantial salary adjustments. All positions were granted a general wage increase of 6.2 percent, falling in line with the 6 percent wage hikes for teachers and administrators. All of the wage increases and salary adjustments are retroactive to July 1, 1987.

The board also approved a six percent wage hike for non-union hourly employees Monday night. They include lunchroom personnel, substitute aides, custodians and community education employees, who were not included in the study. The wage adjustments for this group is retroactive to Sept. 8, 1987.

"It is important to remember that these groups (supervisors and secretaries) have not been looked at in 10 to 15 years," Fenton said. "These positions are now brought up to date."

Grand opening

State Sen. John Kelly will preside over the opening festivities of the Community Newspaper Recycling Center Saturday, Oct. 17, at 10 a.m. Residents are invited to share in the refreshments and prizes — and to bring their bundled newspapers.

The ceremony will be held in the University Liggett School parking lot on Cook Road and Chalfonte between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. A number of local political candidates are expected to attend.

The project is sponsored by ULS, the American Association of University Women, the League of Women Voters, the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church, the Council of Grosse Pointe Garden Clubs and the Department of Community Education. The recycling center hours will be 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturdays.

Newspapers must be bundled with string or in paper bags. Plastic does not recycle in this process.

Trees fall at Windemere; neighbor objects

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

Trees are starting to come down in the second phase of development at Windemere II and at least one resident doesn't like it.

Kenneth George says more trees are being cut than expected. Not only is the developer not living up to his agreement, he says, but the place is a mess. George said he once entered an unofficial weed-growing contest with Windemere, where the weeds are still head-high.

Grosse Pointe Farms Clerk Richard Solak said the city had sent a letter to the property owner about the weeds. Ownership of the property — the old Weber estate on Lakeshore — is currently being transferred from the estate of Henry Ford II to Russell Homes, the developer and builder.

"It's probably a moot point now," Solak said. The growing season is over and "bulldozers are moving in. But Mr. Ford's attorney did promise me he'd take care of it. I recognize he's had other concerns in recent weeks."

George's weeds were high, too. Earlier this year he vowed not to cut his weeds until Windemere's came down.

"I said, fine, I'm not going to cut mine until they cut theirs," George said. "I finally broke down on Memorial Day. It looked terrible — I admit it."

The weeds at Windemere haven't been cut in three years, according to George. He said he asked the city to mow the grass and bill the owner, as they often do, but they sent a notice instead.

Furthermore, George says he was to be allowed to review plans before any trees were cut. Nobody asked him, but suddenly Friday morning, Oct. 2, the chainsaws moved in and the trees began to fall.

"I don't think the city promised him that," Solak said. "There is something in the resolution about the neighbors being contacted about landscape screening during construction, but nothing about tree cutting."

The city ordinance calls for leaving existing trees "to the extent possible," according to Farms building department supervisor John Defoe. "Most developers today leave as many as possible," he said. But, he pointed out, the developer has to cut down trees that are in the way of houses or roads.

"(Richard) Russell said he was just cutting down the trees where the roads and utilities go," Solak said. "He wants to keep as many trees as possible. It minimizes the landscaping he has to do and it enhances the area. . . We would obviously like Russell to keep as many trees as possible, and he indicated to me that that was his interest also."

Asked if George could have misunderstood the promise to consult him on tree removal, Solak said, "It's hard to say whether he misunderstood. There was a lot of conversation that took place. The council wanted to make sure things were worked out with everybody, but they didn't want to mandate anything."

Solak said the only way to know for sure if there was any discussion of consultation, would be to listen to the tape of the December meeting when the site plan was approved. He said it is not the responsibility of the city to determine that, as the consultation was never put in the form of a motion.

"If Mr. George wants to listen to the tape, he may," Solak said.

Couple assaulted

A couple, walking down Mack around 12:30 a.m. Oct. 8, were assaulted by two men, but avoided any serious confrontation.

Two black men crossed Mack from the north side and approached the couple. The couple reported one man was carrying a blue steel revolver and the other, a baseball bat.

The couple entered a nearby restaurant to elude the subjects.

Cleveland is tour destination

There's more to Cleveland than the Browns and the Indians. The city, population 550,000, is rapidly becoming the gem of Lake Erie and is the destination of a two-day trip planned by the War Memorial, Oct. 20-22.

Tours include a city tour of Cleveland, the NASA Research Center and Bonnie Belle Cosmetics. Visits to the Garden Center, the Cleveland Art Institute and the Natural History Museum, as well as a theater performance, are planned.

Meals included are a buffet lunch at the 100th Bomb Group, dinner at the Sweetwater Cafe, a family-style dinner at the German American Culture Center and lunch at the Sawmill Creek Resort. On the return trip, there will be a stop at the Catawba Peninsula to learn about the Marblehead Lighthouse.

Transportation is by deluxe motorcoach. The trip is $290 per person; $65, single supplement.

Call 881-7511, Monday-Saturday, 9 a.m.-9 p.m. for further information on this and other War Memorial sponsored offerings, including a Nov. 10-14 trip to California, and a Nov. 20-23 cultural weekend in Chicago to see the special touring exhibit of impressionist art.

Just ducky

If you took this photo, you are in luck. Your camera has been found. We don't know who the boys here are, but we figure it was probably Mom or Pop who took the photo. The camera was found recently in Grosse Pointe. Officers had the film in the camera developed in hopes of finding the owner, and finally turned to the Grosse Pointe News. The only other photo that developed was a pair of hands setting up an egg to stand on its end, something we understand that can only be done on the day of the spring equinox. If you know the owner of this camera, contact Lt. Skip Fincham at 886-3200.

Older adults want to go on changing, learning and growing, far into life's later years. That's the conclusion drawn by researchers at Bon Secours Hospital who surveyed older citizens in eastern Detroit and nearby suburbs.

Bon Secours has packaged this information into a series of programs titled "Successful Aging." Free of charge and open to the public, the series continues through May 1988. All sessions take place from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Bon Secours Nursing Care Center, 26001 Jefferson Ave., St. Clair Shores. For more information, call 779-7009.

While the series' focus is on aging, all the topics will be of interest to families and other persons involved in the care of older persons.

Topics, dates and speakers are:
• Straight Talk on Legal Issues II - Oct. 14, Wills, estate planning - Robert Pytell, attorney at law.

• Dementia in Aging - Nov. 11, memory loss, confusion and Alzheimer's disease - Donald Bignotti, M.D.

• Promoting Independence - Jan. 13, Diet, exercise and lifestyle adjustment - Dwight Gaal, exercise physiologist.

• Creating a Safe Environment - Feb. 10, Home and personal safety - Sal Catanese, director of safety and security.

• Use - Not Abuse - of Your Medication - March 9, How drugs interact - Panel discussion.

Pointe school enrollment on roller coaster

Public school enrollment in Michigan shows no dramatic change this year, according to a Detroit News survey, but state officials are now predicting a new upswing by 1990.

The same conclusions could be drawn about the enrollment in the Grosse Pointe public schools based on the preliminary count on the fourth Friday of September. The Pointes showed a decline in enrollment of 69 students as contrasted with a gain of 60 in the same count last year and an increase of 37 in 1985. That means Grosse Pointe enrollment has been on a roller coaster in recent years and that the total gain of 97 students in 1985 and 1986 has more than offset the loss of 69 this year.

More significant than the overall totals is the fact that enrollment in the elementary grades continued to go up this year to 3,088, an increase of 156, while high school enrollment continued to decline, dropping another 213 to 2,711. The middle schools stayed at about the same level with a decline of only 12 students as compared with 1986.

Those figures indicate the recent baby boom is now working its way through the grades and could account for increases in the middle schools and perhaps even in the high schools in the not too distant future, assuming current demographic forecasts prove to be accurate.

It is doubtful, however, that the district will ever achieve the peak enrollment set back in 1970-71 when the Grosse Pointe schools accommodated 13,287 students. In an era in which the majority of wives work at jobs outside the home, such a major increase seems unlikely.

On the other hand, when the schools and the community engaged in their great debate several years ago over closing some elementary schools, there were forecasts that the Pointe school population might dip to as low as 6,000. Dropping to that level now seems as unlikely as once again reaching the record enrollment of the past.

The question now is whether we are approaching a new stability in enrollment or are poised for a new increase. While the latter trend now seems likely, despite what happened this year, the schools will have to be ready to change with the times to meet the new enrollment challenges. But with a first-rate board and administration in place, residents of the Grosse Pointes should have no more concern about the district's ability to successfully meet this problem than they have about the maintenance of the system's overall record of excellence.

Grosse Pointe News

Vol. 48, No. 40, October 15, 1987, Page 6A

Endorsements in the Park

Once again Grosse Pointe Park is arousing wide public interest in its Nov. 3 election with three challengers running against three incumbents for city council seats.

As is usually the case in the Park, the candidates appear to differ on a number of issues. Among them are the controversy over the renovation of the council and municipal court chambers, the future development of property on Jefferson Avenue between Westchester and Nottingham, the privatization of the rubbish removal system, and the proposed elimination of the flood plain designation from part of the Park as well as the allocation of costs between Detroit and the Park and between those inside and outside of the flood plain.

The long-standing division on the council on many issues complicates the governance of the Park and the election. The groups do not confront each other on every issue and, in fact, many important matters, such as the new public safety department adopted last year, were approved by a unanimous 7 to 0 vote.

Mayor Palmer Heenan, who is running unopposed, says it would be unfair to say that he is heading any slate in the election. But he says it is true he would like the support of another council member, and has endorsed Vern Ausherman, an incumbent, as well as Daniel Clark, one of the challengers.

Ausherman, who is seeking a second term and has been a strong ally of the mayor, says in his campaign literature that the mayor "deserves councilpersons who will work with him instead of obstructing his appointments and positive programs." He says he is working with Clark and could also work well with Richard Case, another challenger. Clark and Case both told the News they support Ausherman.

Clark adds that while he is happy with the mayor's endorsement, there are points of disagreement between them and he is not owned by anyone. Case says that he is running on his own and that while he finds Clark charming, he is not running with him.

Barbara A. Cherghezan, the third challenger, says she is in nobody's camp. And the other two incumbents, John Prost, the senior member of the council who lost to the mayor by 41 votes two years ago, and David Gaskin, seeking his second term, both claim to be running as independents. Gaskin is widely regarded as a "swing man" on the council.

So if there are no slates in the campaign, there certainly are differences among the candidates, as indicated by what they say about each other, how they campaign and how they view the issues.

An example of the differences involves the propriety of the agreement between the city and the firm of McGovern and Urso Interiors for the renovation of the council chambers. This controversy has even led to two opposing legal opinions on the issue.

City Attorney Herold McC. Deason said he was "unable to conclude there was a clear violation" of the city charter. He conceded the five purchase orders to M&U in total exceeded the $5,000 limit for purchases without council approval or competitive bidding but added that the "transactions involved could be characterized as separate in light of the different items involved."

The other opinion, obtained by Mayor Heenan at his own expense from the private law firm of Barris, Scott, Denn and Driker, said the M&U contract "was in violation" of the charter because it exceeded $5,000 and thus required both council approval and competitive bidding.

Strongly supporting the mayor, Ausherman distributed copies of both opinions during his campaign because, he said, the city administration had not handled the matter properly. He sees the incident as evidence that the fiscal responsibility of the city administration needs to be tightened, a view supported by Clark who views the incident as symptomatic of poor city administration.

Prost, one of the council majority that voted to give City Manager John Crawford a vote of confidence, said the city attorney's opinion ought to have ended the matter. But it didn't and it hasn't.

Instead, the issue broadened into another difference of opinion on the council's attempt to appoint a successor to Municipal Judge Beverly Groebbel. One of the candidates was Tom McGovern whose wife is the McGovern involved in the M&U agreement. He was nominated by the voters for the judicial term to be filled in the election, but was unable to win council approval for the short term appointment. After considering other candidates, the council deadlocked and did not appoint anyone to fill the vacancy.

On the contract dispute, Mrs. Cherghezan, Case and Gaskin tend to accept the city attorney's view. Mrs. Cherghezan says she stands behind the city manager, Case contends more evidence of wrongdoing would be required to boot Crawford out, and Gaskin and Prost indicated their position by voting for the motion to accept the city attorney's opinion that in effect cleared Crawford of wrongdoing.

Differences also arose over the breakdown in negotiations for the proposed Ruffner commercial development on Jefferson Avenue between Westchester and Nottingham. After the deal fell through, the mayor and Ausherman criticized Prost and two holdover council members not up for election because they had voted against the project.

Prost's response was that the city had goofed by not having the proper zoning in place but said he was sensitive to community residents who opposed further commercial development at that location. Yet he said he remained open to suggestions by residents, the plan commission and the city administration for other uses of the property.

Challengers Cherghezan, Case and Clark all expressed sympathy for the residents concerned about the commercial development but Clark said he thought the project would have stimulated additional development that could have halted the intrusion of blight from Detroit. Mrs. Cherghezan and Case said the type of businesses and the amount of traffic they would contribute should be taken into consideration on any future commercial development in the area. Gaskin says he voted for the project and thought it was a good one but wanted the opposing residents on Westchester to be protected, too.

Whatever their differences on these and other issues, the News finds that Prost, Ausherman and Gaskin, the incumbents, are the best qualified of the six candidates and deserve reelection.

In most cases the disputes occur because of personality differences, differing interpretations of the charter and differing views about the timing of council actions rather than any fundamental differences among them with respect to serving the needs of the community. And despite their differences, the council does get a lot of things accomplished for the good of the community.

More North news

To the Editor:

If the North sports articles in the Grosse Pointe News were food, we would all be starving. Week after week sports fans go hungry looking for North sports in your newspaper. The junior varsity never gets any publicity at all.

You ask how to solve this problem? Write longer articles with more details, and don't forget the junior varsity teams.

Loss of marching bands

To the Editor:

As an alumna of the Grosse Pointe North Bands and Orchestra, I am both saddened and appalled regarding the loss of the marching bands at North and South.

I am sad for those students who were in the bands who now do not have the opportunity to be involved in such a fun and worthwhile activity.

I am shocked at the spectators who had nothing better to do during half-time than throw rocks, bottles and candy at members of the band. You have taken away a great form of entertainment that many people enjoyed.

I am also upset at the school administrators. The schools should support the bands and if interest was declining, perhaps incentives should have been given to keep the bands strong.

Regarding the throwing of objects at band members, I feel that action could have been taken to stop this. The offenders should have been escorted from the game.

Finally, I wonder if action would have been taken if bottles and rocks were being thrown at one of the sports teams?

I would like my name withheld because I feel that my viewpoint is worth stating, but may hinder my career as a future teacher.

It's 882-LIFE

To the Editor:

I just wanted to thank the editorial staff and especially Nancy Parmenter for the excellent article she wrote on Lifeline Counseling Center. The article was both accurate and supportive of this ministry.

However, I would like to bring to the attention of your readers our correct phone number. It was shown in the article as 822-LIFE. The correct number is 882-LIFE.

Thanks again for the wonderful exposure the News has given to this crisis telephone ministry.

Thanks to Safe Rides

To the Editor:

Several weeks ago, while I was at a party, one of my friends became intoxicated and wanted to drive his moped. I told him just to leave his moped at the party.

I went inside to call Safe Rides to get my friend a ride home. They arrived, were very cordial, and asked my friend into the car. They asked no questions, but insisted my friend put on his seatbelt.

Safe Rides is a very good program; I'm glad they were there when we needed them most. I compliment those people who spend their time helping other people with problems. I would like to extend my greatest thanks to them. The phone number is 884-9494 and they are open from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m., Friday and Saturday.

Wake up, parents

To the Editor:

Grosse Pointe has ignored the fact long enough. Students do not have a safe and fun environment to go to. It's time for the parents of Grosse Pointe to wake up and do something for both their children, and their community.

Both facts and statistics show, on a Saturday night, one out of every 10 drivers are either under the influence of alcohol or have encountered some drug. Sometimes, three of those drivers are under the age of 21.

I think, as a Grosse Pointe student, that the parents of Grosse Pointe should begin thinking of suggestions of places that their children can go to and have fun, safely.

Church closing opens closet full of memories

In the beginning, I only felt guilty. But by the time I left St. John Berchmans Church in Detroit last Sunday, it was with a mixed-bag of feelings... all of them good.

It all started two weeks ago when my sister Claire called to tell us that our old parish, St. John Berchmans, was closing. Actually, the parish was being combined with another local Catholic parish, but the building was being closed down. For good. And Claire wondered if we — the five O'Connor brothers and sisters and their various spouses, kids and significant others — could attend the church's last mass together.

Other than Claire, who regularly returned to St. John's for special events, none of the rest of us had been back there for at least 10 years. Which is probably why we felt guilty. After all, coming back for the closing of the church is a pretty crummy thing to do, since a lack of regular, contributing parishioners is one reason why St. John's was shutting down.

But as we turned down the once-familiar street to the church, now dotted with vacant lots where homes used to stand, we saw that we had a lot of company. The church parking lot was packed with cars. And inside, there wasn't a seat in the house. We made our way up to the balcony of the church and waited for mass to begin.

The fact that St. John's had not only a balcony which seated about 150 people, but a lower church in addition to the main floor sanctuary, should give an indication of how it once thrived. The neighborhood around the 60-plus-year-old church, had boasted a large concentration of Belgian immigrants and second-generation Belgian families. There was a time when St. John's had six masses per Sunday. It was now down to one.

I'm still not quite sure how a family of Irishmen wound up in that neighborhood, but we did. And we grew up in St. John Berchmans.

Four of us were baptized in the church, all of us made our First Communion and were confirmed there. Two of us were married there. And our parents were buried from the church.

Attached to the church were two schools: St. John Berchman's Grade School and Servite High School. Except for my oldest brother Sean and my youngest sister Pat, we went all the way through both schools.

I Say

Peggy O'Connor

And Sunday, we were back. Back from the suburban parishes we now attend, feeling a little guilty and a little sad. But guilt and sadness — contrary to what some myths about the Catholic church might say — aren't what the pastor and the parishioners of St. John's had in mind.

It was a celebration. There was singing and laughing and a few tears. Favorite priests from years past returned with the rest of us to say goodbye to the old building. The oldest member of the parish, a 97-year-old Belgian by the name of Van Hevel was there; as was the youngest, a baby boy baptized in the church the day before.

The mass lasted for more than two hours because it was frequently punctuated by pauses for people to greet one another and talk, reminisce and to join hands for the singing of the Lord's Prayer. It was a joyous occasion, more like a party than a church service.

My old friend Ellen was there, asking me what I've been doing for the past 17 years, and whispering and giggling during the sermon just like she used to.

The five of us — Sean, Claire, Kevin, Pat and I — loved it. I'm not so sure about our spouses. But they put up with us as we pointed out old friends and classmates in the crowd. They didn't laugh when we wandered through the halls of the school and took each others' photos outside of our old classrooms. And they tried not to look bored as we reeled off story after story of our old times at St. John's.

Nine-year-old Sarah loved it. She posed for photos in front of the statue of the Virgin Mary; the same one we'd each been pictured with at several special occasions. Sarah wrote her name on the chalk board in Room 104 — where Sister Mary Winifred had given each of us our introduction to first grade and my brother Sean his introduction to a long career of having his knuckles slapped by ruler-wielding nuns.

And Sarah laughed at the story of the boy who managed to delay his entry into first grade by hanging onto the doorknob of 104, kicking and screaming until Sister told his mother to bring him back next year.

I think Sarah understood because she realizes how fleeting those times are and how lasting the memories, even for fourth-graders like her. She understands because they closed her school this fall. And while they haven't closed her church yet, there's always that possibility in these days of failing parishes.

It's a possibility that we around Grosse Pointe, at St. Paul and St. Clare and Our Lady Star of the Sea and St. Ambrose, haven't really had to consider.

But if we ever do, I think we'll know how to handle it. As St. John's pastor, the Rev. Ron Williams, said at the close of Sunday's mass: "This parish will never die. It'll live on in the minds and hearts and memories of all of us."

June 15, 1961 —

The New York Times reported that President John F. Kennedy, recuperating from an ailing back, visited with a South Vietnamese official who brought a message from President Ngo Dinh Diem. Diem urged direct training of Vietnamese troops by the United States instead of the practice of merely training the trainers.

The Peace Corps selected its first 27 volunteers to start training for a world-wide assault on poverty, illiteracy and disease. By the end of the year, the corps expected to have as many as 1,000 volunteers in or on their way to 12 under-developed countries.

Premier Fidel Castro agreed to accept agricultural tractors in exchange for prisoners captured in the April invasion, provided the number of vehicles would correspond to the value, estimated at $28 million, of 500 heavy bulldozers he originally requested. The Tractors for Freedom Committee refused to provide the bulldozers for fear they would be used for military construction, and offered the tractors instead.

Prince Souvanna Phouma committed Laos to neutrality and abstention from military pacts. He told the conference in Geneva on the future of Laos that the powers should agree to remove his country from the protection of SEATO, the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

An unexpected but apparently basic "right-handedness" was reported found in growing plants. The findings appeared to add a new dimension to the well-known concept of polarity, by which a plant somehow knows which end ought to be up as it sends out new shoots. In contrast to longitudinal polarity, the new type is circumferential. To study the phenomena, a researcher split cut stalks lengthwise and to his surprise, found substantially more new buds appeared on the right-hand edge of the split surface than the left-hand edge.

A power blackout in New York two days before paralyzed mid-Manhattan, stopping subways and elevators during a record heat.

Freedom Riders received a cool but orderly reception in Charleston, S.C. as 32 black and white riders tested segregated facilities at interstate bus stations on their way to Florida. Uniformed and plainclothes policemen were on hand as the Greyhound bus rolled in. See YESTERDAY,

Leader dog to hang up harness

Years of loyal service ought to be rewarded, and Margaret Smith plans to do just that.

Smith is blind. She has had her nine-and-one-half-year-old German shepherd leader dog for seven years, and hopes that she might find someone who will care for Joshua after his upcoming retirement.

She plans on getting a new leader dog by Nov. 1, a decision she has made with a great deal of sadness.

"He's a little slow," Smith said of Joshua. "I think he's just tired, just like people who have worked all their lives."

Smith hopes she can find a retired couple or someone who would take Joshua now that he's going to have days off.

"I wish for someone who would be with him during the day," she said. "Very small kids would probably not be a good idea since Joshua has not been around children very much. He is quiet, well-behaved and affectionate. Of course, he is a fully trained leader dog."

Smith said she hopes she can find a true dog lover, because "this dog deserves a few years of rest and relaxation."

Computerese

Diana Hages, Grosse Pointe News production manager, and employee Sharon Smith had a situation occur similar to the movie, "The Fly."

Advertising copy for a real estate ad and an "I Say" column were sent to the computer simultaneously and both were somehow melded together. Those who work with computers will appreciate the following paragraph from the glitch:

"You have infected dozens of people by that time, you — Quality built three bedrooms, two-and-one-half bath Coloni have spent probably $20 on over-the-counter drugs and has den, enclosed porch, central air and lots of EX are now willing to do anything the man in the white-CITING POTENTIAL — all on nice Farms lot! lab coat will tell you to do." Honest, that's just the way it came out.

Who stole the kiskka? It was probably Congressman Dennis Hertel who wagered five pounds of Hamtramck's best with Congressman Martin Sabo of Minneapolis on the outcome of the Detroit-Minnesota American League championship playoff.

Hertel said he was so sure the Tigers would be victorious, he decided to put his kielbasa where his mouth was. Sabo put up five pounds of fresh Minnesota walleye, which as we all know, can remain swimming safely in a cold fresh water lake.

Hertel's congressional aide, Chris Bricker, said Tuesday that an office staffer would be heading out to Kowalski's in Hamtramck to pick up Sabo's spoils.

This isn't the first time Hertel linked up with a fellow congressman on a sports bet. Hertel got stuffed along with his pick, the Pistons, when they got put through the grinder by the Boston Celtics in the 1986-87 basketball playoff series. Hertel lost 10 pounds of kielbasa.

In Grosse Pointe, a record voter turnout in a school election swept Robert Weber and Edward Pongracz into office. Weber had already served two terms, including three years as board president and two as treasurer. Pongracz had served a term, but failed to win re-election the previous time he ran.

Grosse Pointe High School graduated a record class of 720. The class also boasted the highest percentage of students planning to attend college.

The village of Grosse Pointe Shores dumped hundreds of tons of earth into the edge of Lake St. Clair as the state Conservation Department gave them permission to expand the village park. The landfilling more than doubled the size of the park.

The expansion was made possible by a series of gifts from Eleanor Ford, some of which had already been spent to provide a ski hill behind the old Vernier School and a baseball diamond along Lakeshore. The majority of Ford's gift was tied up in court for several years as neighbors of the park disputed the amount of money the village offered for the purchase of their property. Deciding the value of the property was complicated by disputed lake rights and whether the property was enhanced by having been built around a pioneer log cabin.

Judging in the rose garden competition had to be postponed because of the late spring. Most rose gardens were not yet in bloom.

The Pointes faced property reassessment under orders from Wayne County. Each municipality set aside $1,500-$2,500 to hire people to assist the county locally. Lone dissenter in the plan was Farms Councilman William Kirby, who said he expected taxes to go up as a result of the reassessment. Kirby said he was opposed to any tax increase that meant less money in the pockets of the taxpayers.

A small advertisement in the Grosse Pointe News reminded readers that a Park ordinance eliminating garbage pickup would take effect in two weeks. The ad also informed readers that they had time to buy a home gas incinerator to deal with all that garbage.

The "beautiful, ultra-modern, three-quarters of a million dollar" motel at Detroit's City Airport opened to provide "plush accommodations" to passengers and pilots at the nation's busiest private-plane airport. The motel was expected to lure hundreds of conventioners and offer "luxurious accommodations" for wedding parties and other fancy events.

Jane Pratt was the first debutante of the season. Her parents hosted a party at their Grosse Pointe Park home, receiving guests in the living room. "Last year the deb and her parents traveled around the world, and gowns Jane and her mother wore for the debut were made from her designs on the Hong Kong stop," reported the Grosse Pointe News.

Park DPW Director Richard Robb, 60, retired Sept. 30 after 34 years of service. Robb said he was hired in July 1953 as a labor worker at $1.32 an hour. Over the years, he was promoted to assistant foreman, crew chief and finally director. He and his wife Joan have two sons, one of whom died. Robb said he plans to do some work around the house, and when that's done, some traveling.

Red Cross has need for volunteers

The American Red Cross, Southeastern Michigan Chapter, has a wide range of opportunities available for volunteer service. Areas of special need include transportation, hospital and blood services.

Hospital volunteers provide the kind of personal service employees are sometimes too busy to give in nursing homes, veterans' and community hospitals.

Transportation volunteers use Red Cross vehicles to drive patients to hospitals, clinics or doctors' offices and pick up blood team volunteers and drive them to bloodmobiles.

Blood team volunteers register donors, label blood collection bags and serve refreshments. Blood drives are held at businesses, industries and churches.

There is no age limit and both men and women are equally welcome to volunteer to help meet these special needs.

For information, call the American Red Cross at 494-2860 or your nearest Red Cross regional office.

Flu shots recommended

It's annual flu shot time again.

The shots are recommended for anyone more than 65 years of age, those with chronic lung disease, such as asthma, bronchitis and emphysema, or anyone with chronic illnesses, such as diabetes, heart or kidney disease, according to Christopher Goldsby, MD, chief of the Department of Family Practice at St. John Hospital.

The flu can damage the cellular lining of the respiratory tract, leaving the door open for severe complications — especially pneumonia, which can attack and possibly kill a person already weakened from the flu, Goldsby said.

Persons allergic to eggs should not receive the immunization.

Flu shots will be available Wednesday, Oct. 21, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the St. John Hospital Family Medical Center in the St. Clair Professional Building, Suite 334, 22151 Moross (next to St. John Hospital).

There is no charge for the shots.

No appointment is necessary. For more information call 343-3040.

TRAVEL TIPS

by Winnie Manley

Antiqua, one of the most beautiful islands in the Caribbean, now has several all-inclusive resorts which are becoming increasingly popular.

If you've traveled in the Caribbean and rented sailboats or snorkeling equipment, paid for tennis by the hour or didn't book a meal package, you know how expensive these items can be. In contrast, the all-inclusive packages enable you to enjoy yourself fully without worrying about exceeding your budget.

Jolly Beach was the first of its kind in Antiqua and continues to enjoy great popularity. Although not a luxury hotel in the strict sense of the word, Jolly Beach is located on a sweeping stretch of beach and provides just about everything one could desire on vacation. Popular with groups, couples, singles and families, this hotel is a great place for just relaxing or partaking of all they have to offer.

The most recent addition to all-inclusive resorts is the Pineapple Beach Club, the former Antiqua Horizons which has become one of those "not a penny more" places including all meals, snacks, liquor, wine, sports, entertainment, transfers for shopping and the Casino, tennis and all taxes and gratuities.

Even more luxurious is Curtain Bluff which includes breakfast and dinner daily, gratuities, tennis and golf as well as the use of sunfish, wind surfing, speedboats, skin diving, aqualungs and day trips by boat. This fine resort is a Caribbean Culinary Award Winner.

We'll book you on a package which will give you the lowest air fare in connection with your hotel stay. Of course, if the all-inclusive resorts aren't your cup of tea, we'll book you at another hotel of your choice. Call us soon for reservations.

titious Grosse Pointe high school half-time show, using some of the stereotypical images of Grosse Pointers. And Andrews, tongue-in-cheek, narrated it.

"It was a half-time show put on by the striking members of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, without their conductor — that's why they were off-key," he said.

"We got a good response," said Andrews. "On Friday we did another one." On Friday, in his best echoing-half-time-announcer-voice, Andrews introduced "Guest scab conductor Gene Upshaw." This time the marchers formed "something near and dear to all Grosse Pointers — a certificate of deposit."

The third spoof, on Monday, was supposed to be what actually took place at the homecoming show. The marching band formed the shape of a large family being evicted by a Grosse Pointe slumlord to the tune of "There's No Place Like Home for the Holidays." At the end, Andrews said, the majorettes pulled out green, purple, pink and aqua scarves representing the ugly pants Grosse Pointe men wear on weekends.

He said the skits are usually taped about 15 minutes before the program. The Monday morning skit was live.

"Because radio is a theater of the mind, you can just picture the symphony members in formal suits walking around forming a lovely croissant. The imagination is what makes it funny," he said.

Andrews has been sports director since January 1984. He does hourly sports reports during WCZY's morning program, which means his workday begins at 5:30 a.m. and ends about about 11 a.m. He writes his own material — national and local sports tidbits with a humorous twist — from the teletype, after going to games and doing interviews.

"I do about three minutes each hour," he said. "They're usually weird, offbeat stories. It has a comedy aspect. For instance, we adopted the New Orleans Saints because the Lions were so bad."

Andrews said he always wanted to be a radio broadcaster. He grew up in Fraser and attended Fraser High School. When he was 17, he was advised to get started in radio by beginning in a small city. He pulled up roots and moved from Fraser to Ironwood, in the Upper Peninsula. "I earned $1.60 an hour playing polka records. I wanted to get into radio so badly. I also went to college there, Gogebic College, for a year."

Then he transferred to Wayne State University, worked at the student radio station and earned a bachelor of arts in communications. "Then I began bouncing around the radio dial," he said.

Now, at 35, with a wife who is an opera singer and an 11-month-old baby boy, he said he'd like to try network TV. "I'd like to do local TV first."

"I've been in Detroit radio for 14 years, so I have a following. If I went to a new town, I'd be a newcomer. Detroiters believe Detroiters, at least in the electronic sense," he said. "I'm one of them and I love this city."

Asked what his dream job would be, Andrews said Charles Kuralt's "On the Road" would suit him fine. Or — "I'd like to be commissioner of the National Basketball Association. I'm a basketball junkie. I love pro basketball. Pro basketball is coming to the pinnacle of its popularity right now and it would be nice to be part of that history."

jury award, but the parties subsequently entered into a settlement agreement requiring that Chester, the pool company, pay $215,000 and assign its excess insurance policy to Crestwood.

Superintendent John Whritner told the board that the cost of hiring the law firm could not be determined prior to contracting its services. He said the district would be billed on an hourly basis.

Board member Jon Gandelot said he was not comfortable with approving such a move without knowing how much it would cost, but in this case, he knows the firm. He said several members are Grosse Pointe residents, and he felt the firm would be fair in its charges to the district.

"We hired the law firm to see if we have some kind of a case," King said. "After the last lawsuit Chester might not (be actionable). Has the well run dry? What is the status of Chester Pools?"

The firm will examine those questions, and determine if litigation with the company is warranted.

Whritner said for the time being, the district will continue to repair the pool on a regular basis, but that in the near future, major repairs will have to be made.

Cottage begins answer service

Where is testing available for dyslexia? What is post-polio syndrome? Does fish oil really reduce the risk of heart attack? Answers to these and other health related questions now are available by calling the Cottage Answer Line, 884-8622. A new community service offered in cooperation with the public libraries.

Carol Attar, director of the medical library at Cottage Hospital, says that many people want or need health information and there has been no central community source where the average person could find answers. The service is free of charge.

Brochures describing the answer line are available at the public libraries. They include an information request form to refer to when making a call. The hospital library staff researches all questions and responds promptly, by mail, with the requested information. Calls are taken by the Cottage library staff Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. At other times, a recorder takes messages and the call is returned during regular business hours.

Winner

This photo, taken by Michael Dobrzecowski of University Liggett School won the runner-up award in the Advanced Photographers section of the Michigan Interscholastic Press Association/Michigan State University Summer Journalism Workshop held at MSU July 5-10. Dobrzecowski, the photography editor of the student newspaper, the Knightly News, was one of 27 students honored for outstanding work during the week-long session.

Inklings awarded certificate

The 1986-87 edition of Inklings, the Pierce Middle School Literary Journal, has been awarded the Medalist certificate by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association.

The 46th Edition has received recognition from Columbia University for the seventh straight year in the form of the First Place Certificate and/or the Medalist award.

The publication of Inklings is under the direction of Rae Kuhn, magazine advisor. Students work on the magazine for an entire year, after school, developing, creating and designing the magazine for publication and distribution in the late spring. In addition to the contributions of the Inklings staff, students from all English classes may have their writings submitted for publication.

Honstain wins award

Wendy Honstain of Grosse Pointe Farms was awarded a $1,000 scholarship this summer at the National Candy Wholesalers Association convention in Chicago.

A South graduate, Honstain attends Eastern Michigan University. She hopes to be a teacher, specializing in theater for the young, after she graduates in 1988.

Overall student count down; elementary numbers up

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Fourth Friday counts in the Grosse Pointe school system show an overall decrease in student population, but slight increases in elementary enrollment has prompted the administration to take action to reduce some class sizes.

Parents of Richard Elementary School students presented the board with a petition Monday night to reduce first-grade class sizes by creating a third first-grade class or by supplying an aide to the teachers.

Though the administration did not follow the suggestion, the board and school officials stressed that they are carefully watching the class size situation at Richard and all the elementary schools.

"Talk about Murphy's Law," said Richard Principal Jack McMahon. "We have 32 new students at Richard and 21 are in the first grade."

Deputy Superintendent Joseph Spagnoli said the administration has made staffing adjustments at five of the district's elementary schools. One full aide has been added at Defer and Ferry and Richard, and a half-time aide has been added at Maire. Mason School was recently granted a full-time aide who shares her time between two sections.

Richard parents are concerned that there are two first-grade classes with a total of 61 students. There are two classes with 26 students in each, and an additional classroom called Flexi-grade, with nine first-graders and 12 second-graders. Overall enrollment at Richard is up nine students, and the school was granted an additional teacher.

That teacher has been assigned to the fourth grade, to alleviate a high enrollment in that grade over the past two years. A full-time aide was assigned to Richard, who will share time between the two first-grade classes.

McMahon and Spagnoli said with the addition of the Richard aide, the shared first and second Flexi-grade class and keeping a close eye on the situation, no further changes are planned at this time.

Overall the school system saw a decrease in the number of students. Fourth Friday counts show levels at 7,337 students, down from 7,406 in 1986-87. Increases at the elementary level total 56 students. There are now 3,088 students in the nine elementary schools, compared with 2,932 the previous year. Middle school enrollment decreased to 1,538, from 1,550 in 1986-87. High school enrollments decreased the most. Upper school students now total 2,711, down from 2,924 last school year.

"Basically the numbers are heading up in the elementary and middle schools," Superintendent John Whritner said. "We are down in the high schools and would expect those numbers to bottom out in two years and then to start back up again."

The current figures are a big turnaround from predictions of several years ago, when the district estimated they would have about 1,000 fewer students than it does now.

"It did not happen for several reasons," Whritner said. "There has been a turnaround in the birth rate. New, younger families are moving in. I think that is because they can find reasonable adaptable housing. We are also picking up some enrollment from the private and parochial schools."

Over the years, Whritner said, the school board has made a conscious effort to reduce class sizes. Since the benchmark years of the late-1960s and early-1970s, class size has dropped from an average of 25 students in a classroom to averages between 22 and 23.

In the 1970-71 school year, for instance, the total number of students was 13,287, and in 1980-81, students totaled some 8,753.

Whritner said the district could have reduced the number of teachers in the same ratio as the decline in the number of students, but the district has kept enough teachers and added aides to reduce class sizes.

"As we look at it also, the decision to close Barnes at the time from a demographic standpoint was a good decision," Whritner said. "As we look at future needs, we must hold onto Barnes in case enrollments begin to increase."

Because of state guidelines, the district could not use some of the options it had in the 1970s in which to hold class. Then the district could use the third floor of South High School and gymnasiums, options no longer available.

"Let's put it this way. I would not want to be the superintendent or a school board member who sold Barnes or began using it for another purpose, and then have to tell voters we had to build another school." He added that cost of new construction is simply too costly and there is very little land available in the Grosse Pointes.

Gazebo

The new gazebo at Ghesquire Park in the Woods was up in a matter of a few days. The addition to the park is part of an overall revamping of the city's two major parks, which voters approved last fall. Work at Ghesquire has been progressing steadily. The gazebo sits in the middle of the Magic Square which will be used for everything from volleyball to ice skating.

Woods honored for its Compute-A-Care program

The city of Grosse Pointe Woods was honored last month by the Michigan Municipal League for its year-old program for checking on the welfare of senior citizens. The League gave the city an honorable mention for the program in the fourth annual Municipal Achievement Awards competition.

The awards were given in recognition of the efforts of Michigan cities to make their communities better places to live in. The entries were judged on creativity, innovativeness and citizen participation in program development or in the solving of a community problem.

Compute-A-Care was developed in response to a survey of senior citizens, who said they would be interested in an emergency response system that could call for help. The telephone dialing systems investigated by the city turned out to be too expensive, but Public Safety Director Jack Patterson discovered computer software designed as a crime watch aid that could be adapted for the city's use.

The computerized, automatic-dialing system is offered to senior citizens at no charge; currently 15 people subscribe to the service. If no one responds after the computer calls three times, a police car is sent to the home to check on the welfare of the resident. The council allocated $5,000 for hardware, software and 4,000 informational brochures. The desk clerk in the public safety department activates the system by turning it on in the morning, so there is no appreciable operating cost.

Energy savings at schools over $600,000

Energy saving actions taken by the Grosse Pointe Board of Education during the 1986-87 school year are resulting in significant savings to the school system taxpayers.

The Board of Education reported energy savings of $286,000 in 1986-87 and expect to save at least $290,000 in 1987-88 with more savings each year thereafter. Further implementation of energy savings proposals took place this summer.

Mother Nature also assisted the school system with a mild winter this past year. Chris Fenton, director of business affairs, estimates that this resulted in $75,000 less dollars spent for heating the various buildings.

In another cost saving action, in August of 1986 the board approved purchasing natural gas directly from the supplier. According to David King, director of support services, this resulted in savings of approximately $200,000 for the ten month period from September through June. The school system will continue to purchase natural gas from suppliers this year and expects to see comparable savings. This plan was developed with the assistance of Douglas West, school board attorney.

Further savings were realized because the Board hired a consulting firm, National Management Services, Inc. of Racine, to perform a study of custodial maintenance services. The consultant, working closely with central administration and building staff, recommended a series of changes which will result in an estimated savings of $90,000 in 1987-88 and over $140,000 every year thereafter.

Superintendent of Schools, John Whritner, stated, "These savings will allow the buildings to be well maintained and in many cases improved while freeing up important dollars for programs which directly impact on students."

Whritner indicated that the school system is presently implementing energy management recommendations at all school sites which will lead to further savings in coming years. These have been developed with the aid of architects specializing in energy savings.

Candidates for Park council, mayor present views

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Voters in Grosse Pointe Park will elect three new council members, a mayor and two judges on Tuesday, Nov. 3.

Six candidates are running for the council positions. Three are incumbents: Vern Ausherman, David Gaskin and John Prost. Three are challengers: Richard Case, Barbara Cherghezan and Daniel Clark.

Mayor Palmer Heenan is running unopposed.

The six candidates and the mayor were interviewed by the Grosse Pointe News. All were asked the same questions, and all were given an opportunity to speak about their plans and priorities for Grosse Pointe Park. Endorsements are on page 6A.

Vern Ausherman

Vern Ausherman is seeking a second term on the Park council. "I'm running on my record in supporting the mayor," he said. "I'm working with Dan Clark. I could work with Dick Case."

Vern Ausherman

Ausherman is in favor of private redevelopment. Referring to the Nottingham/Jefferson Avenue development proposal, he said, "It's a tragedy that one got away from us. Residential areas can't exist adjacent to blighted business areas. This was a tasteful and substantial addition.

"I would like to see an office (on that property). It should be zoned for low traffic office. There is no better insurance against blight than new private investment, and the most important issue (for the Park) is to protect ourselves from the surrounding urban blight — commercial and residential."

On the council chambers issue, Ausherman said the city attorney's opinion was middle-of-the-road. "The mayor got a second opinion, but we agreed to abide by the city attorney's opinion. I feel this matter was improperly handled."

The Park should be removed from the flood plain, according to Ausherman, but the matter may have to go before the people.

He is in favor of a district court — "a concept whose time has come." But he is disappointed because politics prevented the selection of an interim judge. He said that politics has played too large a role in other council decisions — namely the redecoration of the council chambers and the Jefferson Avenue development proposal.

Private rubbish pickup is working, so far. DPW employees are now doing other things, such as sewer repairs. Citizens, so far, have not complained, he said.

Ausherman favors maintaining an continuing program for street repairs and tightening fiscal responsibility of the city administration. "Too many government officials try to tell people what is good for them instead of trying to do what the people want."

Ausherman has a degree from Wayne State University Law School, an MBA from Harvard, and a bachelor's degree in economics, magna cum laude, from Drury College.

He is retired from General Motors, where he was with the legal economics section. He is married and has four children.

Richard Case

Richard Case is running for city council for the first time. He said he supports Vern Ausherman, but is running on his own. "The most important issue in the Park," he said, "is to continue to reduce crime. The lighting program is a very effective crime deterrent," he said, referring to initial installation of pedestrian lighting on residential streets. Case would like to see this program continued throughout the city — possibly throughout all of the Grosse Pointes.

"I'd like to see more street closings to reroute traffic toward main arteries. The radar enforcement on side streets also pleases me. It's better use of equipment to catch one speeder per hour on side streets than to catch five speeders per hour on Mack Avenue. Children are playing on side streets."

Case suggested the possibility of encouraging local investors to purchase adjacent property in Detroit as income property. "This would attract substantial tenants," he said.

Case would like to see a local service-oriented business on the Nottingham/Jefferson Avenue property. Even better, he said, would be to make use of the buildings that are already there.

Richard Case

A gas station would be a possibility. "The zoning change was the biggest problem. It presented a problem for the citizens there. Grosse Pointe is essentially a bedroom community."

The only feasible way to address the flood plain issue, he said, is in conjunction with the city of Detroit. "We probably will have high water again. The problem needs to be addressed, but the 'Great Wall of Grosse Pointe' won't work."

A district court would be an advantage because it could handle a broader spectrum of cases, he said. "My biggest fear is that we'd ruin the character of what we have here.

"We need guarantees," he said, "that a district court would not be the first step in a total consolidation of all Grosse Pointe services." He favors keeping the five communities separate — especially the public safety departments.

Case is a nuclear security officer for Detroit Edison. He has a bachelor of arts in criminal justice from the Detroit Institute of Technology and an associate of arts in law enforcement administration from Wayne County Community College. A lifelong Grosse Pointer, he is married and has two daughters.

Barbara Cherghezan

Barbara Cherghezan

Barbara Cherghezan said she's running independently for the Park city council. "I'm my own person," she said. "If there are seven people on the council, there should be seven strong points. More independent thought is needed."

She said she's pleased with the citizens who were able to stop the Nottingham/Jefferson Avenue development. "They don't want residential property infringed on."

One of the biggest issues that will be coming up in the Park, she said, is the question of a district court. "If we have a district court, it could possibly be on that Jefferson Avenue property." Cherghezan said she stood behind City Manager John Crawford on the redecoration issue.

sue these issues: maintaining property values; eliminating the parking situation; strengthening law enforcement."

Cherghezan has been a Grosse Pointe Park resident for 28 years. She owns a bar on Kercheval and Alter and several properties in the Park. She's married, has five children and is a grandmother.

Daniel E. Clark

Daniel E. Clark

Daniel E. Clark, in his first bid for election to the council, said the most important issue facing the Park is the growing encroachment of crime and blight — especially on Jefferson Avenue. "There's very little distinction between our business district and Detroit's. The ophthalmology development was a good project. The (Nottingham/Jefferson Avenue) development was an extension of this and would have stimulated more. A very vocal minority opposed the project. I think the majority supported it. That project was the very best this city could have hoped for. Westchester residents will rue the day they turned down that project."

Kercheval is a good example of what can be done, he said. Mack Avenue has an acute parking shortage. "Cul de sacs on some streets would create additional parking on Mack Avenue near Wayburn and would provide restrictive access to our community."

Concerning the redecoration of the council chambers, Clark said there is no question that it was a violation of the charter. "This may be symptomatic of city management problems."

Clark said he supports Park Mayor Palmer Heenan, but said, "We're not lock-step. The mayor has done a Herculean job of attracting business development to Jefferson. He has endorsed me. I'm happy to receive all the support I can get, but I'm not owned by anyone."

On the flood plain issue, Clark said there's a need for protection from the crumbling infrastructure along Fox Creek. "The question is: What's an acceptable method of payment? It will probably come before the electorate. The community needs more information."

"As a councilman, I would work hard to prevent community and residential blight in the western end of our city. I would work with the mayor in his efforts to reduce crime, insure that city services are provided in a cost-effective manner, and I'd demand excellence in the day-to-day administration of Grosse Pointe Park.

"I pledge to look at the interests of the community, regardless of politics."

Clark is operations supervisor with the Social Security Administration. He has a master's degree in public administration from the University of Virginia, a master's in philosophy from Michigan State University and degrees in political science and philosophy from Western Michigan University. A nine-year Park resident, he's married and has four children.

David Gaskin

David Gaskin

David Gaskin is seeking a second four-year term on the Park council. He's running independently. "I've tried to speak my own mind. I've supported the mayor on many issues, but when I thought he was wrong, I told him so."

Gaskin said the Park's emphasis in the next few years should be on the redevelopment of commercial areas. Concerning the Nottingham/Jefferson Avenue property, he said, "I'd like to see the Westchester residents protected by a properly designed commercial development. There's no way to develop (that property) as residential. The basic design of the Ruffner proposal was good and I voted for it," he said.

The flood control project must be faced, according to Gaskin. "We can't sit still just because lake levels are currently down." He favors an implementation of the flood plan committee's recommendations. He said that the engineering wrinkles need to be worked out. Next, permission must be obtained from the people who live along the lake. The Park must come to an agreement with Detroit about how to share the Fox Creek improvements. Finally, decisions must be made concerning a fair sharing of improvement costs among Park residents.

The redecoration of the council chambers should not have been an issue with public accusations, according to Gaskin. "It was not well-handled by the mayor or by Councilman Ausherman," he said. "There is a personnel committee and this matter should have been referred to that committee. It was blown out of proportion." He added that he believes the charter was not violated, either intentionally or unintentionally.

Gaskin said the private rubbish pick-up is working well and he pointed out that city savings are at least $70,000 a year — with no decrease in service.

"My commitment to the Park, which I made four years ago — is to provide leadership; to be financially responsible with taxpayer's money; to implement a strong zoning ordinance; and to work toward revitalization. I've fulfilled these commitments. They're still ongoing community needs and I'll continue to commit myself to these goals."

"I've taken unpopular positions sometimes, but I think I was right. I tried to be as out in the open as I can. What you see is what you get."

Gaskin is an attorney. He has a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Michigan and a juris doctor from Wayne State University. He's married and has two children.

John Prost

John Prost

Incumbent John Prost is running independently for his third term on the Grosse Pointe Park council. The most important issue facing the new council, he said, is the continued upgrading of old homes and commercial districts to make the Park a magnificent entryway to the Grosse Pointes. "The Park has done a terrific job so far," he said. "The question now is how are we going to do in the future?"

Concerning the recent Jefferson/Nottingham development proposal, Prost said he'd like to see the zoning changed to OS-1, so that the proper zoning is in place and ready for a suitable development when a proposal comes along. "There is sensitivity about that property," he said, "because of the residents who have been very vocal. They say this is a residential community. I can't blame them."

"Most likely," he said, "the DDA, John Crawford and the city would like a nice office building there." Prost wants to remain open to suggestions from the Planning Commission and the residents."

He said the council chambers issue has been laid to rest by the decision of the city attorney. "There was no overt violation of the law."

Concerning rubbish collection by a private firm, Prost said, "so far, it's been fast, thorough, with no complaints and with a significant savings. We did not have to get rid of city employees. Instead, this plan frees them up for other projects — sewer repair — work at marinas — city problems. It saves money by reducing overtime pay."

Nothing has been accomplished so far concerning the flood plain issue, he said. "The issues are: should we take the city out of the flood plain? Is the water truly a danger? And — if something is going to be done — how should we pay for it? We need more input from the community before we do anything."

"I've enjoyed serving the community. Voters should look at the background and experience a candidate has. I hope people will vote for me — even if they don't always agree with me. They should know my integrity and honesty. I will listen to people's concerns."

Prost has a degree in social science from Michigan State University. He's regional sales manager for Manufacturers Life Insurance Co. and a trustee of National Life Underwriters. A resident of Grosse Pointe Park for nearly 20 years, Prost is married and has two daughters.

Palmer Heenan

Palmer Heenan

Palmer Heenan is seeking his third term as mayor of Grosse Pointe Park. He is unopposed.

"I've never enjoyed a job so much as this one," he said. "There's so much to be done." Heenan said he's not afraid to take chances if he thinks they'll improve the community. "We have to be progressive and innovative," he said.

He said he is proud of the Park's recent accomplishments, and takes credit for the consolidation of police and firefighters into a public safety department. "We went to public safety to improve the police department. But fire protection has improved too. In practice, the plan worked far better than anticipated. Another benefit," he said, "is the city saved $60,000 in overtime wages this year."

Another project Heenan cites as one of his accomplishments is the privatization of rubbish collection. "We'll save $100,000 there. And — if we're not satisfied with the change, we have an option to buy back our equipment. Other cities are looking at our improvements."

Heenan is also proud of the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation and the TIFA district.

He said he was deeply disappointed.

The Woods and the Farms were presented American Automobile Association awards for being two of the nation's safest cities for pedestrians. Woods Mayor George Freeman, center, and Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm, right, accepted the awards from AAA Michigan Safety and Traffic Manager Robert V. Cullen. Grosse Pointe Woods won AAA's Grand Award for being named the nation's safest city in the under-50,000 population class. The community has had no pedestrian deaths for 29 consecutive years. Grosse Pointe Farms received the first-place Award for Excellence, also in recognition of its outstanding pedestrian death and injury records.

Hertel to host hearing on Great Lakes

Congressman Dennis Hertel will host a public hearing of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee at the Dossin Great Lakes Museum on Belle Isle at 2:30 p.m., Friday, Oct. 16.

The hearing on Great Lakes coastal issues is being organized to solicit testimony on three pieces of legislation currently pending in Congress. The committee is looking for insight into the possible effects of:

- HR 2807: A bill to amend the Coastal Zone Management Act of 1972 to provide grants to coastal states for programs to control or prevent damage from erosion and flooding;
- HR 2809: A bill to authorize the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to map the Great Lakes shoreline;
- HR 2810: A bill to study the expansion of the Coastal Barrier Resource System to include unprotected areas along the Great lakes shoreline.

A range of representatives from local government, marine and environmental organizations

Looting amendment passed

The U.S. House of Representatives approved an amendment offered by Congressman Dennis Hertel designed to increase the penalty for persons arrested for stealing debris from an aircraft after an accident.

The amendment is the result of problems stemming from the crash of Northwest Flight 255 at Detroit's Metropolitan Airport Aug. 16.

and the public at large have been invited to present testimony relating to the three bills. The hearing is open to the public. For further information, call Hertel's district office at 526-5900.

Under current law, stealing airplane debris is considered a misdemeanor. The Hertel amendment makes this crime a felony. Currently, the penalty for stealing pieces of the wreckage would be a maximum of one year in prison or up to $5,000 in fines. Under Hertel's amendment, penalties would increase to a maximum of ten years imprisonment or $250,000 fine, or both.

pointed by the failure of the council to allow the Ruffner development project to be built on the the Nottingham/Jefferson Avenue property.

He said Jefferson Avenue businessmen are demoralized because of the failure of the Ruffner proposal. He said that another opportunity probably will come along — "but not one as good. This area needs attention now."

"I always have a project going," Heenan said. "I want to focus on the redevelopment of Jefferson if I get a cooperative council."

Heenan said he endorses Vern Ausherman and Daniel Clark. "A change on the council is necessary to move ahead on areas of urgent concern — Jefferson Avenue."

He said the council chamber redecoration issue is not finished, and wants to assert responsible control of the city manager's purchasing procedures. "The city manager made a mistake. I will protect the city from favoritism, cronyism and extravagance by following the charter."

The flood plain issue, he said, is the city's hardest problem. "Eighty percent of the people want the Park out of the flood plain. And 80 percent do not agree that 75 percent of the cost (of improvements) should fall on those in the flood plain and 25 percent on those out of the flood plain. The alternative is to put it on the ballot, but I feel it'll have a difficult time."

Heenan, 65, has been a Park resident for 50 years. He graduated from Princeton University, from the University of Michigan law school, and from the Woodrow Wilson School of Public Affairs. He's a lawyer and serves as chairman of the board of DMR Financial Services. He has been mayor of Grosse Pointe Park for two terms and was a delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1968 and 1980. He's married and has three children.

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial Council of Sponsors presents "The French and the Sesquicentennial: The Grosse Pointe Land Grab" with Dr. Harold Frederic Powell on Wednesday, Oct. 21, 7:30 p.m. at the War Memorial.

Powell, editor of "Genealogy of the French Families of the Detroit River Region, 1701-1936," will touch upon the congressional, church and financial disputes of the 1830's to 1890's by tracking the genealogy of some of the area's noted early citizens. He will also offer suggestions for those interested in tracing their own family histories.

Powell earned his Ph.D. in psychology and education from the University of Michigan. His interest in genealogy, the study of the descent of a person or family, began in 1973.

He is also newsletter editor and deputy governor of the Society of Mayflower Descendants in Michigan and is genealogist for a number of heritage societies.

The event is chaired by Jean Stewart of the Council of Sponsors. Tickets are $5 per person; $2.50, students with I.D. Call 881-7511 for further information.

Agency changes to reflect the times

By Pat Paholsky
News Editor

In business now for more than 20 years, FLEC, the Family Life Education Council, is like a chameleon. It keeps changing in response to the environment and so becomes a mirror of society.

As a result, it has its detractors who would rather kill the messenger than face the problem.

"We don't create the problems, we just try to deal with them," said Patricia Moran Forster, executive director. "People get angry with agencies such as ours and all we're trying to do is deal with the cards dealt us."

Founded in 1966 by local professionals to address the local drug problem, FLEC has developed new programs over the years wherever there was a need, and now includes a medical clinic, legal services, a youth program aimed at preventing delinquency, crisis intervention, counseling and referral services. FLEC, along with the Grosse Pointe Ministerial Association, will offer an AIDS forum at the end of the month.

"It's a real value for our community to have such an agency as ours," Forster said.

There are currently about 50 people who have undergone 40 hours of training so they can volunteer their time helping local youth. Another training program will begin shortly, Forster said, and people who are interested can call Pam Oswald of the Youth Assistance Program or Marilyn Becker of Center Point at FLEC for more information. The number is 885-3510.

Along with its 28- to 30-member board of directors and law enforcement officers and others, there are nearly 100 people who volunteer their time to the agency.

"That's a lot of commitment," Forster said. "As a grassroots agency, we're always struggling. We charge no fees for any of our services."

FLEC does not receive any federal, state, local or Torch Drive funds. The board of directors solicits donations from individuals ("They're a real working board," Forster said) and the agency is preparing to embark on a fund-raising campaign this month.

One of its newest programs, the Youth Assistance Program, was established last year as a neighborhood-based delinquency prevention effort that involves the police, juvenile court, families and schools.

"If a kid gets in trouble, the police refer him to us rather than putting him through the Wayne County court system," Forster said, adding that the youngster must be a first-time offender and the crime must be one deemed by the police to be unsuitable for Wayne County.

The youngsters, between 12 and 16, remain in the program for six to 12 weeks, working with a counselor on a one-to-one basis. The counselors, Forster said, are three Wayne State University students — two in graduate studies and one in a doctoral program — supervised by WSU's Guy Doyle, professor of psychology. Last year 30 youngsters participated in the program.

The medical clinic offers testing for sexually transmitted diseases and pregnancy as well as counseling on Tuesdays from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. The clinic is staffed by a doctor and nurse on a contractual basis and is open to walk-ins.

"The problem," Forster said, "is we are so confidential, a lot of people don't know about us."

Legal Services, another FLEC offering, is staffed by lawyers from Grosse Pointe who volunteer their time on Wednesdays from 7 to 9 p.m. "It's open to anyone, but it really appeals to senior citizens on a fixed income," Forster said. Appointments are requested, she said.

One of the invaluable services, however, is referral. Anyone who needs information about medical care, mental health, substance abuse, temporary housing, transportation, clothing, education or other concerns can call FLEC to find out where to get help.

Forster, who earned a bachelor's degree from Wayne State University in April and began working for FLEC June 1, said she would like to see more prevention and support work done. "Take divorce. Many times, kids struggle without help and we would like to set up programs where they would come together with their peers and talk and understand they're not alone."

Along that line, 109 high school students underwent extensive training regarding the pharmacology, physiology and psychology of alcohol use, information about other drugs, drinking and driving, media and peer group pressure and leadership and presentation techniques. In turn they presented the information to fifth-, sixth- and seventh-graders.

For information on any of the programs or services, call the agency at 885-3510.

Support group for depressives forming

A new support group for manic-depressives and depressives will be held on the third Thursday of every month at Cottage Hospital in the nurses' residence. The meeting this month is tonight, Oct. 15, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The next meeting will be Nov. 19.

For information, call Joanne at 882-4366. The hotline for the Manic-Depressive and Depressive Association is 559-2070.

Learn CPR at Silverdome

Learn how to save a life with CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) on Thursday, Oct. 22, when the American Red Cross South-eastern Michigan Chapter and five other community and business organizations sponsor the 9th annual Project Life: CPR Day at the Pontiac Silverdome. New training sessions will be offered every 15 minutes from 12 p.m. to 7 p.m. It's all free, including the parking.

Designed to train people in adult CPR, the training session is about three hours long. Techniques for removing foreign obstruction — the Heimlich Maneuver — will also be taught. Certificates will be awarded to those who successfully complete the course by both the American Red Cross and the American Heart Association of Michigan.

Ferry Harvest Fest

The Ferry School PTO will sponsor its seventh annual Harvest Festival Friday, Oct. 23, from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. Proceeds go toward the school's Nature Center.

The highlight of this year's festival is a spooky trip through a haunted house, which will be set up in the Nature Center. It will be moved indoors in the event of inclement weather.

There will be apples, donuts and cider, coney dogs with chips and a wide selection of pumpkins. Also Ferry School T-shirts and new red Ferry sweatshirts will be available with the proceeds earmarked for improvement of the playground.

CUSTOM HOMES IN GROSSE POINTE'S FINEST NEW DEVELOPMENT

12 DODGE PLACE

This unusual New England family colonial will soon be built at Dodge Place. We have incorporated traditional craftsmanship throughout the entire home. French Doors lead off the Foyer to a very private rear Terrace. The Living Room is flooded with natural light as windows adorn three sides. The Family Room has a vaulted ceiling and the custom Kitchen a walk in pantry. The house boasts a Powder Room and rear Lavatory plus first floor Laundry facilities. Upstairs are four large Bedrooms and three Baths. The Master Bedroom is designed with a sitting area for those quiet moments and a truly elegant Bath. Many closets and storage so everything has a place of its' own. $485,000.

14 DODGE PLACE

Late winter occupancy for this custom designed colonial. Beautiful home for you to enjoy the warmth and versatility of family living. The spacious Living Room has a box bay window and the Library has oak trim and built in bookcases. This home also has a Family Room with a natural fireplace and vaulted ceiling. The Kitchen is where the family usually lives so we have made this one very special with a large eating area and French Doors leading to the rear yard.

The four Bedrooms and three Baths are upstairs. This house is for the family who appreciates quality and traditional architecture at its finest. $465,000.

15 DODGE PLACE

An exceptional home, a truly elegant traditional colonial now under construction, with superb quality and attention to every detail. Fieldstone and cedar shake with top of the line Anderson thermal windows determine the look. There are twelve foot beamed ceilings in the Living Room and a superbly crafted natural fireplace. A second fireplace awaits your inspection in the oak paneled library with built in bookcases and a french door leading to the back yard. You are greeted immediately upon entering by a two story foyer, that sets the tone for the remainder of the home. The Kitchen is by Custom Craft with all built in appliances. On the second floor is the large Master Bedroom with a walk in closet and whirlpool tub in the Master Bath. Two additional Bedrooms each with their own private bath complete the house. Meet with Chris Blake and discuss cabinet finishes and colors while there is still time. $465,000.

16 DODGE PLACE

Historic landmark

This building, on Lakeshore near Moross, was constructed in the mid-1890s as the Grosse Pointe Water Works, to pump water from Lake St. Clair. In 1905, the plant was taken over by Detroit Edison and electricity was substituted for steam as a power source. When the city of Highland Park stopped buying their water from Detroit in 1914, this station served both communities. In the '30s, Highland Park bought this plant and Grosse Pointe Farms constructed its pumping and filtration facility on Moross Road.

We are the custodians of our heritage. Learn more about preservation of historic sites at a Preservation Forum sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Historical Society on Wednesday, Oct. 28, at 7:30 p.m. at Grosse Pointe South's auditorium.

'Windows' series continues

The next program in the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church's "Windows on the Renaissance City" series will feature Irene Walt, art commissioner at Detroit Receiving Hospital and art adviser of the People Mover. She and a group of volunteers collected more than $500,000 and acquired 500 artworks, including seven sculptures, for the Detroit Receiving complex. Today, it has one of the largest collections of original art of any health care complex in the country. She also led the project that put 15 pieces of art in 13 People Mover stations. She will speak at 10:30 a.m. in the church's Barbour Chapel Sunday, Oct. 18. The public is invited and there is no charge for the program.

Piaf, Brel at the Ford House

The Lyric Chamber Ensemble will present "Piaf, Brel... Et Al" Sunday, Oct. 18, at 3:30 p.m. at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House.

Orchestra concert

The Lake St. Clair Symphony Orchestra will perform the first season concert Saturday, Oct. 17, at 8 p.m. in the Robert Schaublin Auditorium, Lakeview High School.

Jane Rosenson will join the orchestra in a harp concerto by Boieldieu. Charles Greenwell, music director, will lead the orchestra in Beethoven's Sixth Symphony, as the orchestra highlights "The Pastoral."

Tickets will be available at the door for $5 and $6, general seating only. Lakeview High School is located in St. Clair Shores at 21100 Eleven Mile.

Halloween fun

Goblins, witches, and monsters are invited to a Halloween Zooli-lee at the Belle Isle Zoo on Saturday, Oct. 31, from 2 to 4 p.m. There will be free treats for kids up to age 12, prizes for costume winners and entertainment.

Award-winning films screened

The Grosse Pointe Cinema League will meet Monday Oct. 19, at 8 p.m. at the War Memorial to see two award-winning movies, "The Popcorn Man" and "Invisible America" by David Zarembo.

"The Popcorn Man," a 16mm movie, is a short story of a mildly retarded man, lonely and mistreated by the community, who develops friendship with an alcoholic.

David Zarembo was only 20 years old and a student at Wayne State when he made this film. The script was written by his mother, Patricia Zarembo. It was presented in the International Film Festival and won awards in Belgium, Austria, Australia, Spain and Japan. It won David Zarembo a Director's Fellowship at the American Film Institute in Los Angeles.

follow, showing how the film was made with the help of family and friends. The popcorn cart, for example, was built from an old wheelchair.

"Invisible America" is a new short film by David Zarembo. It is a documentary on poverty and its consequences. It was filmed on location in Detroit, Pennsylvania, Washington, D.C., and the southern United States. This was also written by Patricia Zarembo, and it won her the National Cine Eagle award, which will be presented to her in Washington, D.C. in December.

Because David is now attending the American Film Institute in Los Angeles, the films will be shown by his parents.

The public is invited to attend. There is a charge of $2 for non-members plus 50 cents for the social hour that follows. Memberships are available.

Thomas B. Carey

A mass for Thomas B. Carey, 80, will be held Saturday, Oct. 17, 1987 at 10 a.m. at St. Clare of Montefalco Church, followed by a resurrection memorial service at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church. Mr. Carey died Oct. 12 at his Grosse Pointe Park home.

He was born in Detroit and was a Park resident for more than 40 years.

He was self-employed as a manufacturers sales representative. He sold class rings, graduation announcements and diplomas in the southeastern Michigan area for more than 50 years. He retired in 1985 due to illness.

Survivors include four daughters, Anne L., Sister Mary Kathryn, O.P., Marilyn Meyer Di-Loreto and Cherylann Meyer; two sons, Thomas R. and James J.; 13 grandchildren; four great-grandchildren; and two sisters, Kathryn Handloser and Frances Keiswetter.

The body was cremated. Memorial contributions may be made to the Capuchin Monastery or to Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

Genevieve Borowiec Szarek

Services for Grosse Pointe Woods resident Genevieve Borowiec Szarek, 68, were held at A.H. Peters Funeral Home and Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church Saturday, Oct. 10. Mrs. Szarek died Monday, Oct. 5, 1987 at St. John Hospital.

She was born in Michigan and was a homemaker.

Survivors include a daughter, Dawn Dulong; a son, Gary; and a sister, Alfreda Gruner.

Burial was in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Arrangements were handled by A.H. Peters Funeral Home.

Thomas Patrick Flynn

A memorial mass for Grosse Pointe Farms resident Thomas Patrick Flynn, 88, was held at St. Paul's Catholic Church Saturday, Oct. 10, 1987. Mr. Flynn died Sept. 27 at Cottage Hospital.

He was born in Maryland and was employed in maintenance at Zenith Carburetor.

Survivors include two daughters, Mary Joan Bureson and Kathleen Withers; eight grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; a sister, Mary McMillan; and two brothers, Martin and John.

The body was cremated at Forest Lawn Cemetery in Detroit.

Memorial contributions may be made to Meals on Wheels at Bon Secours Hospital.

Arrangements were handled by the Chas. Verheyden Funeral Home.

Sally T. Wadsworth

Services were held Friday, Oct. 9, 1987 at Christ Church for Sally T. Wadsworth, 88, of Grosse Pointe. She died Oct. 4 at her Grosse Pointe home.

Mrs. Wadsworth was born in Michigan and was a homemaker.

She was active in the University Liggett Alumni Association, Tau Beta, the Country Club of Detroit, the Founders Society of the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Detroit Zoo Association and the Junior League of Detroit.

Mrs. Wadsworth is survived by her son, Thomas Abner; and five grandchildren. She was married to the late Harold Lee Wadsworth. Her daughter was the late Lee Brock.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Tau Beta Association, 310 Touraine, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236.

Elizabeth H. Hudson

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday, Oct. 21, 1987 at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church for Elizabeth H. Hudson, 80, of Grosse Pointe Farms. She died suddenly Sept. 23 at home.

Mrs. Hudson was born in Toledo, Ohio, and moved to Grosse Pointe when she was hired to teach Latin at the high school. She had a degree in the classics from Oberlin College and studied for a master's degree at Ohio State University.

She tutored in her home and substitute-taught at the high school while raising a family. She taught at Grosse Pointe University School and Liggett School before their consolidation.

Mrs. Hudson also taught at Wayne State University's English Proficiency Clinic and the Detroit Public Schools' adult education program and coordinated a senior citizen history and travel class at the Neighborhood Club.

She is survived by two sons, Richard and Robert; and two grandchildren.

The body was cremated and buried in her parents' plot at Woodlawn Cemetery in Toledo.

Memorial contributions may be made to the American Heart Association or to the religious or educational charity of one's choice.

Arrangements were handled by Arnold O. Matthews Funeral Home.

Clara Hobbeck Whiteside

Services for Clara Hobbeck Whiteside, 86, of Grosse Pointe Park were held Friday, Oct. 9, 1987 at St. Clare Church. Mrs. Whiteside died Oct. 7 in St. Mary's Nursing Home in St. Clair Shores.

She was born in Detroit and was a school system supervisor of food.

Mrs. Whiteside is survived by her daughters, Enid M. Beiring and Rosemary T. Elias; a son, Stanley N. Whiteside Jr.; a sister, Anna Buckman; grandchildren, Gayle Boutrous and Janet Page; and great-grandchildren, James, Anne Marie and David Boutrous, Kelly and Stacy Page. She was predeceased by her husband, Stanley N.

Burial was in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Arrangements were handled by the Chas. Verheyden Funeral Home.

Viola Brown Fellows

Services were held Wednesday, Oct. 14, 1987 at Mariners Church for Viola M. Brown Fellows, 67, of Grosse Pointe Farms. Mrs. Fellows died Oct. 10 at Cottage Hospital.

She was born in Beaverton, Mich., and worked at AAA of Michigan in Grosse Pointe Woods.

A great reader, Mrs. Fellows was married to the late Howard J. Fellows and is survived by her daughters, Carol Anderson, Jan Ralston, Michelle Dowe and Patricia, a son, Rick; and seven grandchildren.

Memorial contributions may be made to the National Kidney Foundation, 3378 Washtenaw Ave., Ann Arbor, Mich. 48104.

Arrangements were handled by the Summers Funeral Home.

Alison Tekla Semmler

Services were held for Alison Tekla Semmler, 3, on Tuesday, Oct. 13, 1987 at Asbury Methodist Church in Lansing. Alison died Oct. 10 at Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor.

She was born in Lansing.

Survivors include her mother, Carol; her father, Randy, formerly of Grosse Pointe; a sister, Lindsay; grandparents Mr. and Mrs. R.W. Semmler Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Meyers; and several aunts, uncles and cousins.

Interment will be in the columbarium at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

Memorial contributions may be made to Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor or to the American Heart Association.

Feminist, artist Patricia Burnett looks at language of men, women

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Men talk easily to other men. Women confide in other women. But conversation between men and women is fraught with misunderstandings, double entendres, missed clues, repressions — and bewildered silences.

Patricia Hill Burnett is a noted local feminist, founder of the Detroit chapter of the National Organization for Women, a sculptor and a portrait artist. (She's painted portraits of Mayor Coleman Young, former Gov. William Milliken, Betty Friedan, Marlo Thomas, Indira Gandhi, Corazon Aquino, among others.) She recently attended the World Women's Congress in Moscow, at the invitation of the Soviet government. She's also on the executive board of the National Commissions for Women and is chairwoman of the World Feminist Commission.

She spoke to a group of about 65 women and 10 men at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Tuesday evening, Oct. 6. Her topic: Do Men and Women Speak the Same Language?

The answer, obviously, was: No.

Burnett dealt with the serious implications of gender-based miscommunications in a light-hearted manner, using cartoons and humorous anecdotes from her own experience. "I represent the female point of view," she said, "but I've been trying to psych out men all my life."

Men communicate with terms borrowed from their shared experiences in the worlds of sports, the military and sex. Men learn certain attitudes and styles of communication from the sports they play when they're little boys, she said. "They learn to follow rules. They learn they must not talk back to the coach. They learn sportsmanship; how to play a specific team role; that someone must lose the game. These are all learned attitudes," she said. "Women are denied this."

"No wonder men and women can't communicate."

"Women want intimacy," she said. "And companionship — sharing — equality. Men resist these. She says, 'He doesn't talk to me' and he says, 'What does she want me to say?'"

Burnett said men are taught to repress their inner thoughts, fears and feelings. Men don't want to talk about a problem because talking might make it escalate.

"In the military, the clue is... mindless obedience and taking orders," she said. "Striving, assertive women reject mindless obedience to orders."

No wonder men and women can't communicate.

In the singles world, Burnett said, with a giggle, "Men prefer to verbally tap dance around their true thoughts and feelings. Everything has a secret meaning — a double entendre."

"To be fair," she said, "women do this, too."

"For instance, there are several ways to answer the question: 'Do you love me?'

"You're really a good person.' That's a cold answer. 'You can use my toothbrush if you want.' That's a lukewarm answer. 'Do you like diamond stud earrings?' is a hot answer," she said.

Burnett said that women interpret the words used in conversation — as well as the perceived intonations, body language and facial expressions that accompany the words. Men don't do this.

She showed slides of cartoons that illustrate what she called the language gap between men and women. In one cartoon, a man who is obviously in love says, "I'd lay down my life for you." The woman in the cartoon wants to clarify. She wants to pin down his exact meaning. She says, "Ah — but will you change your name, follow me to another town, leave your family, give up all your friends, bring up my children and nurture me the way you expect me to nurture you?"

That wasn't what he meant at all.

"Still," Burnett said, "We've got to live in this awful mess out to one another. Try to get in we've got on our hands. Reach touch."

Researchers look for new cancer-fighting weapons

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

The little lab dishes don't look like much to the untrained eye, even under the microscope. Colonies of cells grow in varying patterns, as technicians test more than 1,500 analogs of a promising compound.

The experiments are different, though. Researchers at Wayne State University medical school and Harper Hospital's cancer research center are using a new way to look for anti-cancer agents against solid tumors.

"It's similar to the test done by your local doctor on a throat culture," said Grosse Pointer Thomas Corbett, who heads one-half of the drug discovery team.

were active didn't work very well. There was no way of predicting which tumor would respond to which drug. They were hit-and-miss in people, too, not just in mice.

"You didn't have to be a genius to see what was coming at you day after day. We were going at it backwards."

So Corbett and others began to look for ways to test drugs on solid tumors.

"The dogma had been that any drug active against solid cancers would act against leukemia," explained Fred Valeriotte, head of the whole research center and the other half of the drug discovery team. "Researchers found that's not necessarily advanced over the last 10 or 20 years, he said, but there is still room for improvement.

The diffusion assay theory is now being tested under a $2 million grant for three years. Corbett's section is studying new agents against colon, pancreatic, lung and breast cancers.

"This isn't anything new with me," Corbett said. "They were interested in testing against solids in the '40s. Solid tumors account for 85 percent of all cancers. But leukemia was a cheap, rapid assay."

During the 1960s and '70s, the federal government poured millions of dollars into cancer research, but most of the testing was on leukemias. Current fund-a few good ones," Corbett said. "Drug discovery in any field is primarily a numbers game. The more drugs you test, the more you will find that will be useful."

"But it's a less-than-perfect system. A lot of things you discover in a culture-based assay are totally worthless when you get to animals." The culture assays eliminate the need for 98 percent of the mouse testing, however. Corbett said the approach using the cultures first is "consistent with what we consider humane animal treatment these days. There's no point in consuming so many mice — but they are an absolute crucial stage in testing."

One of the phases of the research is an investigation into 1,600 analogs of flavones, a new anti-tumor agent. In pre-clinical studies, the researchers found that flavone acetic acid is broadly active against pancreatic, breast, colon and other cancers in mice. The stuff isn't perfect, though; it exhibits an unusual threshold behavior in which only a narrow range of doses were active and splitting the dose decreased the amount of activity.

The research group implants tumors in lab mice, one tumor on each side of the hip, then treats them over a period of weeks with compounds that have looked promising in the cell culture test. Although precise measurements are made for scientific accuracy, it is also obvious to the eye which compounds work. Some mice have large tumors; those treated with an active drug apparently have none at all.

The group is testing drugs for several pharmaceutical companies, primarily Upjohn, as well as, oddly, Eastman Kodak. "They're not a pharmaceutical, but they have a huge chemical inventory," Corbett said. "Kodak has 400,000 compounds that have never been tested."

The WSU cancer researchers screen and evaluate the drugs, look at how they work and at their distribution in the body. They look at the way the organ systems metabolize the drugs and how fast they are eliminated from the body.

POSITIVE PLUMBING & HEATING

Tom Corbett looks at cultures that have been incubating in a heated environment rich in carbon dioxide.

Corbett's team is using a soft-agar colony formation disk diffusion assay to determine the selective toxicity of compounds on different tumor types. Agar, or agar-agar, is seaweed gelatin used as a base for bacterial cultures. A circle of filter paper is impregnated with the compound to be tested; the team looks for a "zone of inhibition" — that is, how close malignant cell clusters will grow to the filter paper.

The idea grew out of years of testing. Most cancer drugs were tested against leukemia cells because it was easy and cheap. But researchers knew the drugs were less dependable when tested on solid tumors.

"Against solid tumors they were very hit-and-miss," Corbett said. "They worked on some and not on others and some that true. Indeed there are some compounds that act against solid tumors but don't act against leukemia."

The two-part drug discovery team funnels compounds first through Corbett's section, looking for drugs effective against solid tumors. When that screen is completed, drugs that looked promising against leukemia are sent to Valeriotte's section for testing against leukemia.

"Drug companies aren't interested in leukemias because some agents are already available and the profit margin is too low," Valeriotte, also a Grosse Pointe resident, said, "but there are some that I'm interested in. We have identified compounds that look promising against certain leukemias." The cure rate of some leukemias, but not all, has ing is "down to a trickle" in comparison, according to Corbett, but the amount seems to be on the increase again.

At least partly because of the reduced financing, research is different these days. The amount of animal testing of previous decades is down, because it was too expensive and because of improved tissue culture techniques. Now tests are run first on cell cultures, which eliminates the need for most of the animal testing.

Between 5,000 and 6,000 drugs are tested every year at Harper Hospital research labs. The promising ones are looked at more intensively through analog searching, the testing of agents with similar chemical structures.

"You have to test a lot to find

Free eye care for seniors

Do you know an older person who needs medical eye care, but cannot afford it?

Call 1-800-222-EYES, the toll-free Helpline operated by the National Eye Care Project. Eligible callers will receive a referral to a nearby eye physician and surgeon (ophthalmologist) who has volunteered to provide care.

Every patient will be given a comprehensive medical eye examination for eye diseases and any needed treatment to protect vision. Services of the volunteer ophthalmologist are provided at no out-of-pocket cost to the patient. For this project, volunteer ophthalmologists are accepting Medicare and/or other health insurance assignment as payment in full for their services. If the patient has no insurance coverage, medical eye care is provided without charge.

- To be eligible, a person must be age 65 or older, a U.S. citizen, and no longer have access to an ophthalmologist he or she has seen in the past.

- This is not an eyeglass program. The National Eye Care Project is designed to provide comprehensive medical eye examinations and treatment to prevent or control eye disease. Eyeglasses are not covered by the program.

- If hospitalization is needed, volunteer ophthalmologists may be able to work with the patient to obtain needed care.

Transportation directory available

Michigan's new 1987-88 Public Transportation Directory is ready for distribution, according to State Transportation Director James P. Pitz.

Published by the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT), the directory shows the routes and locations of all public transportation services throughout Michigan. It complements MDOT's Official Transportation Map, which is used chiefly by highway travelers.

The directory features color photographs of Michigan attractions and is available to the public free of charge.

Maps in the New Public Transportation Directory, an update of the 1985-86 issue, show all commercial air service airports, intercity bus routes, passenger rail lines and county and city public transit services.

The 28-page booklet includes an extensive directory of Michigan communities served by public transportation. The list identifies carriers serving each community and their addresses and telephone numbers where information on schedules and fares can be obtained.

The directory is available free at MDOT's Welcome Centers and nine district offices, as well as at bus, air and rail passenger terminals, local transit stations, many local travel agencies and through the Michigan Travel Bureau.

Grosse Pointe's resale shops offer high quality merchandise

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Resale shops, like garage sales, are alive and thriving in Grosse Pointe.

The secret of resale shop success, according to six local owners, is to know your customers and to be fussy about your merchandise.

Adele Meyer, owner of Lee's Inc., 20331 Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods, said, "The most important thing in this business is being selective in the take-in room. We take high-quality clothing. We keep the store so it looks like a new shop. Items are ticketed; they're hanging on plastic hangers; we use sales slips. Some customers have said our clothing looks like new clothing."

Lee's has been in business nearly 30 years. Meyer took over 18 years ago.

She said they are very fussy and insist on current styles. Clothing must be clean, repaired, pressed and on hangers. Lee's specialties are women's clothing and furs, although they carry shoes, purses, costume jewelry, a few oil paintings, silver, crystal, china and a small selection of household items.

Except for some furs and all children's clothing, merchandise is on consignment and is kept for 90 days, then returned to the consigner or donated to charities. Consigners receive 50 percent of the selling price.

"We're one of the only stores around here that sells furs," Meyer said. "We'll sell a mink stole for $35 and lots of our furs are under $100. Kids buy them to wear with jeans. We also have some mink coats that are only a year old."

Sisters-in-law Margaret and Jere Breitenbecher own Grosse Pointe Reliques, 14932 Kercheval in the Park, a resale furniture shop. They rent the back of the building to Audrey Lowery, owner of Wellington Place, another furniture consignment shop.

Lowery said she can identify, from memory, the owner of every item in Wellington Place. All her furniture is on consignment and she said she has sold $300,000 worth of merchandise in the last five months. "I saw a need for this service," she said. "I give people a fair appraisal. The elderly of Grosse Pointe who are moving to smaller homes are at the mercy of dealers who are stealing their prized possessions."

She said she's about to add discounted imported clothing to her inventory. She'll expand soon to include resale clothing, a sort of shop-within-a-shop, called Repeats.

"I've never returned a piece of furniture yet," she said.

The Breitenbechers of Grosse Pointe Reliques in the same building on Kercheval said they prefer to buy their resale merchandise outright. They deal in good used furniture, which they scout out through estates, friends, former customers and on trips to Savannah, Charleston and Harbor Springs. All items are priced to turn over quickly.

They have 3,000 square feet of used furniture, plus a few new decorator teddy bears and collectors' items. "We're always looking for mahogany furniture, especially Queen Anne," said Jere Breitenbecher. "People often will call us and describe what they're looking for."

Items range from a large knee-hole desk made in Europe with a hand-painted clipper ship on the desktop to a one-of-a-kind hat-rack to a child-sized wrought iron table and chair. Prices range from nearly $2,000 for a dining room set to a small table for $5 or $10.

They will recommend refinishers and reupholsterers and frequently cut out decorating tips and refinishing ideas from magazines and tape them to individual pieces of furniture.

The Breitenbechers and Lowery have a good working relationship, and often refer customers to each other.

Mary Parsigian, owner of Cricket's Corner, 19603 Mack in the Woods, sells children's used clothing up to size 10. "All is on consignment," she said, "and all is almost new, is clean, and has no rips or stains or pills."

She said her most asked-for items are winter outerwear — snowsuits and coats. There is also a demand for dress coats and dress shoes — two items that are usually not worn out before they're outgrown.

Parsigian has computerized her business since she bought the store two years ago. "I keep track of every item on the computer."

She said that consigners get 40 percent of the selling price for their first season's batch of clothing. The second season they get 45 percent. The third season, 50 percent. "Sales have increased 40 percent in the last two years. Now we have some new items too — moderately priced cotton items, unisex clothing and baby gift items. Our consigner sales have not decreased since adding the new clothing. The new clothes just add a new dimension to the store," she said.

Donald Watkins, owner of Mahogany Interiors, 16135 Mack, said people call him Mr. Mahogany. He carries mostly classic mahogany furniture reproductions and a few period pieces, which he buys outright. "I don't sell any junk," he said. He generally buys an estate, then sorts out the junk and sells it to auctions.

"I very seldom have anything more than a week. People tell me what they're looking for," he said.

Dennis Andrus

Douglas Andrus

Brothers J. Dennis Andrus of Grosse Pointe Woods and Douglas E. Andrus of Grosse Pointe Park have bought Grosse Pointe Realty Co. Since the acquisition, they have enlarged the sales force. The Andrus brothers previously managed jointly the three Grosse Pointe offices of Schweitzer Real Estate. J. Dennis Andrus will serve as the company's president. He has 12 years of real estate experience and 10 years of management and training experience, both in Florida and in Michigan. He is active in the Grosse Pointe and Macomb boards of realtors and is a past president of the Michigan Multiple Listing Service. Douglas E. Andrus will serve as vice president of Grosse Pointe Realty. He comes to the company with seven years of real estate management experience. He is the current president-elect of the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors and is a director of the state Association of Realtors.

John C. Emery Jr. of Grosse Pointe Farms has been reappointed to the Michigan Appellate Defender Commission by Gov. James Blanchard. His term will expire in 1991. Emery is president of the Senior Judges' Association of Michigan and a member of the National Committee on Uniform Traffic Laws and Ordinances.

James T. Birchfield of Grosse Pointe is a member of one of Campbell-Ewald's four award-winning media teams. Birchfield is a senior vice president and associate media director for the agency's national advertising program for Chevrolet. His team won one of only 10 Midwestern Creative Media Awards in competition last month.

Birchfield

Ted Mrozowski of Grosse Pointe Woods has been reappointed to the State Tax Tribunal by Gov. James Blanchard. He is a former Wayne County auditor and legislative agent and former assessor for the city of Hamtramck. Mrozowski also served as a state representative.

Ligan

Bobbie Ligan of Grosse Pointe Park has been appointed sales manager for Grosse Pointe Real Estate Co. The position was created when the firm came under new ownership. Ligan will help train and counsel sales associates, direct sales meetings and recruit new sales associates. She has 10 years of experience buying and selling Grosse Pointe real estate and was sales supervisor at Schweitzer Real Estate for three years.

Dan Harris of Grosse Pointe has been appointed account supervisor at Inter-group Marketing & Promotions Inc., one of the companies of D'Arcy Masius Benton & Bowles. In his new position, Harris is responsible for projects on the General Motors Protection Plan, Michigan Consolidated Gas Co., Detroit Diesel Allison and others. He previously served at Ross Roy, J. Walter Thompson and the Dayton-Hudson Co. Harris has a bachelor of arts in journalism from the University of Michigan.

Introducing
Scan-Alert<sup>SM</sup> Service.

Because the gap between security and no security is very small indeed.

You may be thinking about investing in an alarm system to protect your business or residence. Or you may have already invested in one. But what happens if an intruder cuts the line to that system? In most cases, the system shuts down.

Unless you have new Scan-Alert<sup>SM</sup> service. Scan-Alert service is an inexpensive addition for most alarm systems that use your phone line to transmit a signal to your alarm company. So not only can emergency calls get through, the system is also automatically triggered if the telephone line is cut or tampered with. Definitely a worthwhile investment for your peace of mind.

PLEASE NOTE: Michigan Bell's responsibility is limited to the transmission link between your business and your independent alarm company's monitoring facility.

*Scan-Alert service is available in certain areas. Restrictions may apply.

said her shop deals in vintage clothing and specializes in costuming for theater groups, entertainers and artists. "I think we're the only store like this on the east side," she said.

"I know my customers. Most of them are in here biweekly."

The shop is an array of vintage clothing and accessories — hundreds of hats — gloves — costume jewelry — '50s clothing — long gowns — military uniforms — feathers, frills, flounces, furs and fun.

Oyama said 50 percent of her customers are children and she enjoys making costumes. "I just did a Cleopatra this morning. We found a toga drape, some gold sandals, a gold bib necklace. We do a lot of Cindi Laupers, surfers, military uniforms. I just costumed a fairy godmother for less than $18 with a full skirt, a tiara, sheer pale blue gloves. We even made a magic wand."

Oyama said she has put together costumes for local commercials and for an Agatha Christie movie, "The XYZ Murders," which was partially filmed in Detroit.

Gypsy's has a rack of ties of all widths; long gowns of every ilk and decade — chiffon, velvet, silk, brocade, all sorts of glittery stuff — even a white lace wedding gown and several choices of veils.

The best part of owning a resale shop, said Adele Meyer, of Lee's, "Every day is like Christmas Day. I never know for sure what's coming in that door."

According to Lowery, of Wellington Place, "It's the good feeling between people buying and people selling."

The worst part, according to Meyer, is turning down clothes in a diplomatic way.

The worst, according to Mr. Mahogany: "I have allergies. I'm allergic to dust and mold and I deal in dust and mold every day. I take weekly allergy shots."

Hospital official discusses current health care trends

What's going on in health care today?

Glenn A. Wesselmann of Grosse Pointe Farms, president and chief executive officer of St. Clair Health Corp. and St. John Hospital, recently offered answers before 270 members of the Senior Men's Club.

Competition between health care providers is a factor shaping today's medical service community, he said. The increase in paid advertising by most institutions is a sign of this.

Glenn A. Wesselmann

"Business management pressures existing in the growing competitive atmosphere calls for leadership from people other than just those with health care backgrounds. We're seeing more and more individuals in key administrative positions with MBA's," he said.

Another national trend finds hospitals establishing new alliances aimed at cooperative acquisition and use of expensive equipment that is often difficult to obtain individually.

As an example, Wesselmann said that St. John, Bon Secours, a Mount Clemens hospital, and a group of radiologists, are looking into sharing costly Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) equipment — which provides a way of looking inside the body in more detail than standard X-rays.

"Very close to home, the hospital has embarked on a joint venture with Bon Secours of Michigan in the Saint John-Bon Secours Continuing Care Center of extended and residential care

Purse stolen

A 59-year-old Park resident had her purse stolen around 8:30 p.m. Sept. 18.

Witnesses chased the suspect, but when police arrived at the scene, the suspect's family reportedly provided an alibi, and the victim could not identify him.

The purse was not recovered.

— at the former Austin High School site. This arrangement is especially unique since it brings together two health care groups during such a competitive time," he said.

As a member of the Sisters of St. Joseph Health System, the hospital is working with the system's five other hospitals on joint projects.

About three years ago, St. John joined with the William Beaumont hospitals in Royal Oak and Troy, and Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn to form the United Health System — a health maintenance organization (HMO) and preferred provider organization (PPO). It has grown to encompass many other hospitals and now serves about 150,000 subscribers.

Responding to a rapidly shifting health care environment in the mid-1970s, hospitals began to reorganize into diversified health care companies.

In 1979, St. John's parent corporation, the St. Clair Health Corp., started the St. Clair Dialysis Center, The Oxford Institute and St. Clair Ambulatory Care Corporation. Affiliated Health Services, Inc. was founded in 1980 and Harrison Community Hospital in Harrison Township joined in 1984.

Most hospitals forego some services and bolster other specialties to maximize limited health care resources and to concentrate on providing those services the community most needs and the hospitals can best provide.

"St. John, for instance, has developed 'Centers of Excellence,' in areas such as cardiac care, orthopedic and neurosurgery, emergency-trauma, and high risk maternal and newborn care," he said.

"The Neonatal Intensive Care Unit, for example, receives critically ill infants from hospitals all over southeast Michigan. On the other hand, St. John realizes that it is not appropriate for it to handle extensive burn cases or organ transplants."

In order to meet health care needs of a mobile society, many health organizations follow population movement with its services. Noting the growth north and east along the I-94 corridor, Wesselmann said that the St. Clair Medical Center at 13-1/2 Mile Road and I-94 was established and Harrison Community Hospital near Mount Clemens, was acquired.

"Still another pattern seen across the USA is shorter hospital stays by patients due to government and insurance company health coverage restrictions. More and more people need care after they leave the hospital," Wesselmann said.

Locally, two of St. Clair Health Corporation's health care partners have set up programs covering southeastern Michigan. Home care is growing throughout the United States.

'It is not at all unusual to see patients persist in dieting . . . to the point where their lives are threatened.'

Researchers take a new look at anorexia

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejszyk
Feature Editor

A 15-year-old patient admitted to Harper Hospital was so malnourished, her electrolytes so out of balance, that she was precariously close to cardiac arrest. Hospital personnel found her in bed, performing "bicycle" exercises because she feared gaining even one pound from the intravenous fluids being pumped into her body to keep her alive.

"She told us that she would do anything to be as thin as a wire in a screen . . . and that even that wouldn't be thin enough," recalls Dr. Mary Ann Marrazzi of the Woods, associate in psychiatry at Harper Grace Hospitals and associate professor of pharmacology at Wayne State University.

That type of behavior is not unusual in patients suffering from the eating disorder known as anorexia nervosa, Marrazzi says. Such patients become obsessed with dieting, even to the point of starving themselves to death, and rarely seek treatment of their own accord. They are usually forced into it by the effects of malnutrition, which alert family, friends and doctors.

"It is not at all unusual to see patients persist in dieting despite all social and medical contraindications, to the point where their lives are threatened," Marrazzi says.

The disorder, which usually afflicts women between the ages of 15 and 30, has long been conceptualized in strictly psychological terms, Marrazzi says. "It was thought that these women were responding to their fear of sexual identity, to a phobia of womanhood. We're not saying that psychological theories are wrong, but I think we're finding some different things in our research."

Marrazzi began her research three years ago with Dr. Elliot Luby, chief of psychiatry at Harper Grace and professor of psychiatry at WSU. The research looks at anorexia as an addiction to dieting, similar to alcoholism or drug addiction. Her collaboration with Luby, Marrazzi says, "represents a merger of basic science and clinical research," with Marrazzi, who earned a Ph.D. in pharmacology from Washington University in St. Louis, taking the basic science approach.

"Our research focuses around the idea that there are certain naturally occurring compounds in the brain ("endorphins," which possess some of the same chemical effects as heroin and morphine) which may be released during the initial period of dieting. We think that these compounds produce a 'high' similar to that achieved by drug addicts or alcoholics, and that the patient becomes addicted to the diet," Marrazzi explains.

"We're interested that patients and families of patients recognize that anorexic behavior is similar to behavior that is typical of alcoholics and addicts. Both are compulsive, both center their lives around a behavior, which in the case of the anorexic, is diet and exercise.

"And like the alcoholic for whom one drink is too many and 1,000 is not enough, once these patients start dieting, they keep going regardless of the consequences."

Marrazzi is careful to point out that the research does not disregard the disorder's psychological aspects. "We feel that a lot of psychiatry is physical. What we're doing is identifying the biological impact. What is it about the anorexic that when she diets, it predisposes her to that condition? We're looking at the idea that the psychological induces the biological change and that induces the physical change: a diet that has gone out of control."

Marrazzi and Luby have begun treating patients in the case studies with drugs which block the action of those naturally occurring opiates in the brain. They have had some success with the drugs, called naltrexone and a related drug, nalmeferene.

Each patient in the case study is used as one control, Marrazzi says. The doctors compare what happens to the patient when treated with the drug, against what happens with treatment in

Pumpkins, mums burst forth from gardens

By Ellen Probert
Special Writer

October is a lovely month of colorful foliage, cider mills, harvest festivals and Halloween pumpkins. It is an amazing fact that over 90 percent of all fresh pumpkins in the United States are sold during the month of October. The greatest sales occur during the last two weeks of the month, no doubt owing to the influence of Halloween customs, and then drop off abruptly after the first of November.

Pumpkins, or Pompions as the earliest settlers here called them, were a staple food of the Indians, second only to corn and with other squashes, were quickly adopted by the colonists. In Roger Williams' book, "Key into the Language of the Indians of New England," he refers to "Isquontersquashes" (a lovely word!) as the native American name for the English "pompion." Well, a pumpkin by any other name makes just as good a Jack O' Lantern or pie.

If you notice that there seem to be fewer pumpkins for sale this fall than usual, its because of our very hot summer. All the pumpkins got ripe about two weeks earlier than usual, but since no one seems to want to buy pumpkins until late October, the farmers tried to keep them in storage until now and a good many of them didn't make it.

October is the month when confirmed gardeners indoors and out review the past and plan ahead. It's a good time to finish plans for next year and the last chance before cold weather to order indoor plants. It is a time to plant bulbs outdoors and to prepare bulbs for forcing into bloom indoors. And this is a good time to give plants away with a lavish hand.

Peppers are another bountiful harvest in the fall. They come in a greater variety of sizes, shapes and colors than any other vegetable and have an almost legendary amount of vitamin C. They are members of the same family as tomatoes and eggplant and require virtually the same growing conditions.

Peppers are native to tropical America and were grown by Indian tribes in both North and South America over 2,000 years ago. Small hot peppers were discovered by Columbus in the West Indies and introduced into Europe by him where they at once became popular.

If you have been growing peppers in your garden this summer, don't try to use the seeds for next year's crop. Many of the varieties grown are hybrids and the seeds will not produce the same fruits as the mother plant. And if you plant hot and sweet peppers in the same area they will cross pollinate.

The Horticultural Department of Belle Isle is a busy place. In the 20 greenhouses and eight cold frames under its care more than 200,988 plants are propagated during the season for flower shows, and in addition bulbs for spring flowering which are being planted now number more than 22,000. During the winter months water lilies for the lily pond must be carefully tended. Their new bulbs start a new root system at this time and will be well established for next spring.

Pointe War Memorial — a fragrant and tranquil spot to visit on an autumn afternoon. The Vincent DePetris Memorial Fund supports the Trial Gardens, named for the Garden Center founding member and long-names.

In the 12th century, European Crusaders arrived in the Holy Land and there, learned to their amazement that apples, supposedly the Forbidden Fruit of the Garden of Eden, were not native to this area. Obviously, the translators were mistaken and some other fruit was intended and the Crusaders set out to find out what it was.

Many researchers today believe that it was the apricot, but the Crusaders of the 12th century thought it was the big yellow citrus fruit which they called the Pomelo.

This tropical fruit would grow in England but flourished in the islands of the Caribbean. In about 1650, a sea captain named Thomas Shaddock exported the yellow globes from Barbados and they became known as Shaddocks.

By the mid-1770s, Shaddocks were prolific in the West Indies and because of the way they grew in clusters like grapes, were soon called "grapefruit." In 1830, the British botanist MacFayden gave them the Latin name "Citrus Paradisi," as a lasting memorial to the Crusaders' Forbidden Fruit theory.

The Gardener's Shed

The orchid varieties require special temperatures, placement and care, while they are out of public view when not in bloom.

The Floriculture Unit maintains greenhouses, a field of frames and a power plant which are located near the gardens and the Conservatory. The service gardens and grounds are maintained to supply the Island's garden areas as well as to beautify other parks throughout the city and for the flower beds and boxes in the downtown area.

At this point thousands of chrysanthemums are being nurtured toward perfection for the opening of the annual chrysanthemum show in the Anna Scripps Whitcomb Conservatory which will take place in mid-November.

Here in Grosse Pointe the chrysanthemums are beautiful right now in the Grosse Pointe Garden Center's Trial Gardens on the lake side of the Grosse Pointe florist and garden authority who became world-famous for his dramatic and successful hybridizing of chrysanthemums.

The ever-popular grapefruit has a fascinating history. It began in Asia near China's southeastern border and is mentioned among the tributes brought to Chinese emperors more than 4,000 years ago. About the third century B.C., all the prized Asian fruits were brought by trading caravans to the Middle East and there acquired new names in Arabic and Semitic languages.

In the Moorish lands of North Africa, they flourished and the Moors took the seedlings of lemons, limes, oranges and grapefruits to Spain. They were used as trade goods when ships from European countries came to Mediterranean ports. And in England, they acquired Anglicized versions of the Arabic

Adolescent sexuality is conference topic

"Adolescent Sexuality — Control or Expression," a conference for teens and their parents who want to improve their communication about and understanding of adolescent sexuality, is scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 27, at 7:30 p.m. It is sponsored by the Northeast Guidance Center and will be held at the Harper Woods Community Center, 19748 Harper in Harper Woods.

The presentation will include a look at the relationship between sexuality and other aspects of teenage growth and development. Included will be peer influence, impact on the family and self-esteem issues. Specific concerns of adolescents and their parents, such as problem pregnancy, promiscuity, homosexuality and prostitution will be discussed by speaker Joy Johnson, M.A. After her formal presentation, time will be allotted for questions from the audience.

Johnson is a nationally-recognized expert from Chicago who has experience in communication problems of adolescents and their families, including teen sexuality. She is author of "Ten Teenage Troubles," "The Pressures on Teenagers," "Helping Adolescents Find Themselves," "Surviving the Blow of a Breakup," and the "Decisions for Teenagers." Her experience ranges from street work with gangs to service chief of an inpatient adolescent unit. Johnson has a private practice and is also associate professor at Jane Addams School of Social Work at the University of Chicago.

Registration fee is $2 per person, with advance reservations requested. For information, call the Northeast Guidance Center Community Relations Office at 824-8000.

Navy Day Brunch set for Oct. 22

The Detroit Women's Council of the Navy League of the United States will present its annual "Navy Day Brunch and Fashion Show," at the Lochmoor Club. The day begins with a cash bar at 11:30 a.m., followed by brunch at noon and fashions by the Jane Woodbury Shops Inc., at 1:30 p.m.

Donation is $20; members and guests are asked to reserve their spots as soon as possible. Checks should be made out to the Detroit Women's Council of the Navy League and mailed to Eileen Doyle, 20862 Country Club Drive, Harper Woods, 48225. Tickets may be picked up at the Lochmoor Club.

Council president Eileen Doyle will be official hostess. General chairman for the event is Sidonie Dossin Knighton and co-chairman is Marion Qualey, both long time Grosse Pointe residents and Council members.

Fashions will show day, casual, dress and evening wear and will be modeled by Woodbury Shops models. There will be door prizes and raffle prizes. Guests are welcome.

Harvest party

The Cancer Loan Closet Foundation will host a Harvest Cocktail Party from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 25, at the Bloomfield Hills home of Virginia Wilson. Members and guests are invited.

Wilson is chairman of the event. She will be assisted by Patricia Boggs, Lillian Dorsey, June Frishkorn, Ruth Graham, Betty Henderson, Joan Palmer, Betty Reas and Carolyn Stekette.

Reservations may be made by calling 540-4833.

Fine day for Fine Arts:

Romeo's Folly Farm — the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Turner of Grosse Pointe Farms, was the site of the Fine Arts Society of Detroit's annual picnic. Greeting guests in the farmhouse, built in 1860 and sporting a huge fireplace, low ceilings, wood plank floors and country furnishings, were committee chairmen Stephen and Marianne Shrader. Bill Rohloff cooked hamburger and sausage on the grills and committee members Donald and Rae Kuhn, Ben and Sue Gravel, Paul and Joan Koch, Norma Gohle, Martha Murphy, Tom Schulte and Dan Henry planned the picnic.

Fine Arts members are looking forward to their first play of the season, November's "Move Over, Mrs. Markham."

ler (whose maiden name was Heather Stewart-MacDonald), are members of the Macdonalds, whose chief is Clanranald.

Clanranald is part of an unbroken hereditary line that has occupied the chiefdom for 24 generations. Other guests at the dinner were high officials of the Clan Donald-U.S.A., — dressed in kilts of one of the several MacDonald tartans — and their wives.

Get on board: The Coe Railroad in Walled Lake was packed on Saturday, Sept. 26, with fun-seekers and fundraisers. The occasion was the second annual dinner-auction to benefit the Adam Walsh Resource Center, a non-profit organization dedicated to helping protect children and providing prevention and education information on child safety.

Sing a song: What could be better than a free fall concert? That's just what University Liggett School is offering this Friday, Oct. 16, at 7:30 p.m. in the main auditorium. The concert will be presented by the Upper School. For more information, call 884-4444.

Decking the halls: The sights, sounds and smells of the holiday season will burst forth from the Cobo Hall Riverview Ballroom next month and four local folks will have had a hand in bringing it about.

The event is the Festival of Trees, a benefit for Children's Hospital of Michigan, which takes place Wednesday, Nov. 25, through Monday, Nov. 30. And among those talented designers who have donated their creativity and time to decorate a tree with a selected theme are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ramsey, of Grosse Pointe Park; Design Detroit Interiors of Grosse Pointe City; Donna Nelson of Grosse Pointe Woods; and Old Dominion Interiors of Grosse Pointe Farms.

Martha Cruger of Grosse Pointe, with some of her work which was displayed at the Detroit Artists Market this month.

Among the event's attractions is a fantasyland of 100 professionally decorated trees; continuous entertainment; a model train display; charming dolls and miniatures; a delightful gingerbread village; the Isle of Wreaths; and a festival gift shop.

Admission is $3 for adults, $1 for children and $2.50 for senior citizens.

The Straight Lace String Band, consisting of Phyllis Brewster, Bill Ouellette, Jose Miquel and Craig White, entertained during the Fine Arts Society picnic.

Now showing: A pair of local artists are exhibiting their work locally. Virginia Durbin Thibodeau, one of the first women members of the Scarab Club, is among those women artists currently exhibiting in the Club's retrospective of women artists. The Grosse Pointe artist, who has a studio in the Grosse Pointe Academy, is also in the forthcoming National Miniature Painters, Sculptors Society in Washington, D.C., which opens Nov. 1 in the Washington Arts Club.

And artist Martha Cruger had her work selected for exhibition in the Detroit Artists Market opening show by Jan van der Marck, curator of 20th century art in the Detroit Institute of Arts. Sixty-six artists from southeastern Michigan exhibited in the show at the Market, which presents the work of emerging and established southeastern Michigan artists.

She's honored: Grosse Pointe gardener Fran Wilson earned a fine tribute from her friends in the Pointe Garden Club when she was awarded an honorary membership recently. Wilson has been a contributing member of the club for years, especially in the flower arranging department.

She was the only woman invited to do an arrangement at the Cobo Hall Builders Home and Flower Show. For this, she was honored with a trip to the famous Chelsea Flower Show, where she was made a fellow of the Royal Horticulture Society.

According to her Pointe Garden Club colleagues, Wilson is also active in her church, the Women's City Club, the DAR, the Archives of American Art, the Founders' Society of the DIA, National Farm and Garden and Federated Garden Clubs.

Meeting of the clan:

Grosse Pointers Mrs. John Denier and Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacD. D. Thurber, recently hosted a small dinner party at the Country Club in honor of Randal Alexander Macdonald of Clanranald and Lady Clanranald, of London, England and Killin, West Perthshire, Scotland.

The Clanranalds had been guests of honor at the annual general meeting of Clan Donald-U.S.A., held this year at the Dearborn Inn. Thurber, general chairman of the event, and Den-

Crafts boutique

The Catholic Kolping Society will sponsor its fourth annual Christmas Arts and Crafts Boutique on Saturday, Nov. 28, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Kolping Center, 24009 Jefferson at 9 1/2 Mile Road.

For table rental or other information call Lynn at 757-1251 or Denise at 776-0995.

Grosse Pointe residents who enjoyed the Adam Walsh Resource Center benefit include, (left to right) Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clemente of Grosse Pointe Farms and Mr. and Mrs. Barbara Lozelle of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Among those enjoying the evening — chaired by Wanda Shelton — were Joseph and Marilyn Clemente of Grosse Pointe Farms, and William and Barbara Lozelle of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Dressing for their part as "train robbers" were Roger Rinke of Grosse Pointe Shores, Roland Rinke of Grosse Pointe Farms, and Harold LeBeau of St. Clair Shores.

Why should someone as healthy as you be tested for Breast Cancer or Osteoporosis?

You're still young. You take good care of yourself. You feel just fine. Right now, two serious diseases like breast cancer or osteoporosis (the brittle bone disease) are the farthest things from your mind. And, that's exactly why now is the time to ask your doctor to help you begin an early detection program. Now, when there's time to detect breast cancer early enough. And, time to stop or even prevent osteoporosis.

If your doctor recommends a mammogram (a safe, low dose breast X-ray) or a dual photon bone density study (the simple, painless test for osteoporosis), consider Bon Secours Hospital. Our women technologists will care for you with the kind of empathy only another woman can offer. And, our comfortable waiting lounge will make you feel right at home. So see your doctor. And remember Bon Secours. There is a difference in hospitals. And we're it. For a free brochure or information about mammography and osteoporosis testing at Bon Secours Hospital, please call 343-1200 or toll free 1-800-331-0954, weekdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and ask for our Women's Resource Center.

Historic Trinity celebrates Reformation

Detroit's Historic Trinity Lutheran Church will celebrate the Reformation with a special worship service at noon Friday, Oct. 30. This year's downtown Lutheran Reformation service will be a combined Reformation celebration for the parishes of the Cathedral Ministry of Historic Trinity: Bethlehem, Holy Trinity, Historic Trinity, Our Saviour, Redemption, Unity and Zion.

The Rev. John L. Heins, president of the Michigan District/LCMS, will deliver the sermon.

He will be assisted by The Rev. David Eberhard, pastor of Historic Trinity, and the other pastors of the Cathedral Ministry. Peter Paselk will be at the organ. The Lutheran High School North band will provide special music.

Beating the enemies of aging is church's topic

The Warren-Centerline Vicariate will sponsor a morning discussion by Louise Churches titled "The Enemies of Aging," at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 18, at St. Edmund Parish Family Center, 14031 12 Mile Road in Warren. Coffee and cake will be served at 9:30 a.m., followed by the discussion.

day. She is currently a contracted services specialist for the Area Agency on Aging.

The presentation will look at the reality that each person can hinder the process of growing older, wiser and more alive and at ways that we can make growing older fascinating and the best part of life.

For more information, contact any of the Catholic parishes in the Warren-Centerline Vicariate or Sr. Janet Schaeffler at 773-9220.

Christ Child Society celebrates

Grosse Pointe's Fran Tracy, long-time Christ Child volunteer and supporter, hosted a tea in her home Oct. 7 to honor Mrs. Frank Wear, national president of the Christ Child Society, and to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the Detroit Branch of the Society.

Among the Society's past presidents on hand to welcome Wear were Grosse Pointe residents Betty Ireland and Norma Taylor.

Christ Child Society members will conclude the Diamond Jubilee Year with a Dec. 12 mass celebrated by Archbishop Edmund Szoka. A luncheon at the Detroit Athletic Club will follow. A Christ Child Woman of the Year will be announced at the luncheon, which is on the actual birthdate of the Society.

Book review

The Rev. Bruce Ingles, interim pastor of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, will review "Water-buffalo Theology," by Kosuke Hoyama, at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 20 in the church lounge. Visitors are welcome to attend. Child care is available.

Koyama is recognized as one of the outstanding Eastern theologians today. Chapter titles of his book include "Toyko and Jerusalem," "The 'Efficiency' of the Crucified One in the World of Technological Efficiency," and "Cool Arahant and Hot God."

Fellowship groups meet

Fellowship groups of the Grosse Pointe Methodist Women will meet on Tuesday, Oct. 20. Three groups will hear a program titled "Crossroads of Southern Asia."

The AM Fellowship will meet at 9:30 a.m. at the Grosse Pointe Shores home of Patti and Nona Anderson. Eleanore Golinske is co-hostess. At 12:30 p.m., the Evelyn Griffith Fellowship will have lunch at the church. Hostesses are Betty Buffa, Ilene Cooper and Evelyn Hawkins. The Doris White Fellowship will meet for dessert at 7:30 p.m. at Mabel Bristol's home in Grosse Pointe Woods. Marge McGiverin is co-hostess.

The Wesleyan Fellowship will discuss "As United Methodists,

What Do We Believe?" after dinner at 6:30 p.m. at the church. Co-hostesses are Margaret Layson, Shirley Lewis and Dolly Smedley.

Rummage sale

Grosse Ile's St. James Episcopal Church Women will hold a rummage sale on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 16 and 17, at the church, 25150 East River Road in Grosse Ile. Antique records are among the many items for sale during show hours, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. to noon Saturday.

Research

other areas. So far, five of eight patients (all of whom had 10-year histories of anorexia) showed an improvement after treatment plans with the drug.

"The most dramatic improvement was by a patient who had anorexia nervosa for 10 years, who had fluctuated between 70 and 90 pounds and was using 20 to 30 laxatives per day. She was put on the drug and immediately stopped her anorexic behavior. She began eating, gained weight to her ideal weight and has stayed there for two years," Marrazzi says.

Another patient administered the drug gained 20 pounds in one month and got to her highest non-pregnant adult weight. But she secretly stopped taking the drug and lost 10 pounds. Dr. Luby suspected what had happened and convinced the woman to begin taking the drug again.

Psychological therapy continues, Marrazzi says, throughout the drug treatment. "We're talking about helping break the addictive cycle with the drug, so that the psychological issues can then be resolved. We don't think of it as a 'miracle drug' that will cure all. It's part of a total treatment package," Marrazzi adds. That is why the program is carried on at Harper Grace, since patients should not be treated in an environment removed from that to which they must return to live their daily lives, she says.

The results of the research have been printed in five medical journals and presented at national and international meetings attended by pharmacologists, psychologists, psychiatrists, clinicians and eating disorder specialists, Marrazzi says.

"It's very exciting to take an idea from conceptualization in a lab into the front," she says. "But it's frustrating not to be able to get research completed because of lack of funding."

While the team's research is promising enough to be exciting, nothing is proven, Marrazzi says.

And it's going slowly because any federal funding for medical research can only come if the innovative research has a "track record," according to Marrazzi. In other words, the preliminary data required to apply for federal funds is itself costly. "It's what we call the 'Catch-22' of research," Marrazzi says with a laugh. "We're trying to raise funds privately to get to the point where we can compete for National Institute of Health monies."

That's where Soroptimist International of Grosse Pointe comes in.

Marrazzi is a member of the group, which has targeted funds for her anorexia nervosa research. The group hopes to raise a substantial sum of money from its Millionaires Party, planned for this Saturday, Oct. 24, at 8 p.m. at the Strohn's River Place, Joseph Campau at Jefferson.

Tickets are $25 per person, which includes champagne, wine, pop and hors d'oeuvres. The party will feature gambling for chips which will be used to bid on such prizes as a vacation condo on Molokai, a color TV, gift certificates, plane tickets and various other items donated by the community. Reservations for the party must be made by Oct. 19.

"We're a service organization, the largest international women's service organization. We do a lot of fundraising, particularly in the areas dealing with the status of women," Marrazzi says.

"This is a woman's disorder, with issues we deal with as professional women, but carried to the extreme. This isn't happening to crazy, mixed-up young ladies. This is a biological disorder and the issue is how it is conceptualized to society at large and how we can correct that perception, she adds.

"This is something the local group can have a major impact on and something I am pleased to be involved with."

St. Columba Church opens its Sunday afternoon recital series Oct. 18

The St. Columba 1987-88 Sunday Afternoon Recital Series will open Sunday, Oct. 18, at 3 p.m. with a performance by tenor Timothy Hamel and soprano Lisa Foerster.

The pair, recent Cleveland Institute of Music graduates who are also married, have established an impressive reputation in Cleveland through numerous opera and musical theatre roles, including major performances with the Lyric Opera Cleveland. Hamel, a native of Detroit, has performed in several Detroit area churches, including Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The couple will perform duets from Henry Purcell, Felix Mendelssohn, Gilbert and Sullivan and Leonard Bernstein. The recital is free and parking at the church, on Jefferson two blocks west of Alter Road in Detroit, is attended.

Central United Methodist hosts Downtown Arts Market

The fourth annual Downtown Arts Market is Friday and Saturday, Oct. 23 and 24, at the Central United Methodist Church, Woodward at Grand Circus Park. Doors open at 10:30 a.m. Admission is $1. VISA and MasterCard are accepted.

Fine arts and crafts are featured from local artists, as well as from Appalachia and from a world-wide network of native artisans and will include pottery, paintings, Hmong stichery, handmade clothing and household items, jewelry, baked goods and plants. Homemade foods will be offered for lunch.

For further information, call Central Church at 965-5422.

Katia Du'n'n Trio will perform at local church

The Katia Du'n'n Trio will perform at Central United Methodist Church at 3 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 25, in conjunction with the Downtown Arts Market. The trio includes jazz pianist Katia Du'n'n, bassist Dedrick Glover and drummer Don Watson.

Tickets are available at the door for $5; $3 for seniors and students. Lighted free parking is available behind the church. For more information, call 965-5422.

Pianists will open Grosse Pointe Chamber Series

The Grosse Pointe Chamber "Music for a While" Series will begin its 13th season on Friday, Oct. 23, at 8 p.m., with a program titled "Two Pianos - Four Pianists." The concert will be held at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House and will be performed by pianists Helen Kerwin, Virginia Shover, Alice Ellison and Laurie Lindemulder.

The program will feature music for one to eight hands, including solos for left hand alone, two hands and varying numbers of performers at one and two pianos. Compositions by Scriabin, DeFalla, Brahms, Schubert and Dahl will be featured.

Program highlights include the Schubert Fantasia in F Minor and Brahms' "Variations on a Theme by Haydn," for two pianos. A work for three performers at one keyboard will be the "Carillon" from "Paraphrases on Chopsticks," and the finale, "Quodlibet on American Folk Tunes," by Ingolf Dahl, will feature two pianos and eight hands.

Southfield's Kerwin is a graduate of the University of Michigan and Wayne State and is prominent in local chamber music circles. Pointers Alice Ellison and Virginia Shover are founders and co-producers of the Music For a While series. All three teach and perform in the area. Lindemulder, a former Grosse Pointe resident, will return for this performance from Houston, where she is affiliated with Loftis Music Studios, Inc. She also was a founder of Music For a While.

Reservations are necessary for the opening performance; seating is limited. Tickets, at $7 each, may be ordered through Music For a While, 481 Hidden Lane, Grosse Pointe Woods, 48236. Checks should be made payable to Virginia Shover and a stamped, self-addressed envelope enclosed.

For more information or reservations, call 884-7815 or 885-8110.

Women's Connection will discuss 'American consumers'

"American Consumers" is the subject of the discussion to be offered to the Women's Connection of Grosse Pointe on Thursday, Oct. 22. Dinner is at 6:30 p.m., the program, 7:30 to 9 p.m.

Speaker will be Margaret Mangold, vice president/associate research director of J. Walter Thompson advertising agency. Mangold earned her MBA from the University of Detroit and did her undergraduate work at the University of Michigan, graduating with honors. She began her career at Gale Research, then joined D'Arcy, MacManus and Masius, where she worked as research analyst on the Whirlpool, Detroit Free Press and Pontiac accounts.

Mangold was promoted to director of strategic planning and research on the Pontiac account, where she developed target market programs for the youth market, women's market and California. She is an expert on subjects of special interest to women.

Women's Connection of Grosse Pointe is a women's support and networking group composed of both professional women and those working toward entering the workforce. Interested persons are welcome to attend. Reservation deadline for the Oct. 22 meeting is Oct. 19.

Holiday Bulb Sale planned

The Advisory Committee of the Parent Aide Program, a program of the Children's Center of Wayne County, is sponsoring a holiday Bulb Sale. The proceeds from the sale of indoor amaryllis and narcissus bulb kids will help support the work of the Parent Aide Program to prevent child abuse and neglect in Wayne County.

Holiday Bulb Sale chair is Debbie Holley Palms. Order forms, available from many merchants on the Hill, Village and Mack Avenue areas, must be mailed to the Children's Center, Parent Aide Program, 4100 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, 48201, by Oct. 28. Bulbs may be picked up on Saturday, Nov. 14, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Amaryllis bulbs ($9.50) are available in red, light pink, pink, reddish orange, white and red and white variegated. Narcissus bulbs ($7.50) are available in white and yellow. Bulbs bloom five to six weeks after planting - in time for the holidays.

The Children's Center is a non-profit, community based provider of mental health and related services for children and families with problems. Families are referred to the program because of problems with parent-child relationships, household management, meal planning and preparation and social isolation. The parent aide works with each family to meet their challenges and to model appropriate ways to deal with stress so the children will not be abused or neglected.

The Macomb Chapter of NAIM (Widows and Widowers) will meet Wednesday, Oct. 28, at 7:30 p.m. at St. Dorothy Social Hall, 12251 Frazho Road. The evening will feature a square dance beginning with cider and doughnuts at 7:30 p.m., followed by a meeting at 8. Admission is $2.

The group will sponsor a Halloween party on Saturday, Oct. 31, at St. Dorothy Social Hall. The evening begins at 8 p.m. and includes refreshments (B.Y.O.B.). Costumes are optional. Admission is $4. For more information, call Vina at 264-5786 or Frances at 526-9356.

Pettipointe Questers

Pettipointe Questers No. 243 took a fall field trip to the Rochester Hills Museum at the Van Hoosen Farm. They then enjoyed a gourmet lunch at the nearby Paint Creek cider mill and restaurant.

Eastside Handweavers

The Eastside Handweavers Guild, an association of persons involved in various fiber arts including weaving, spinning and basketry, will hold its monthly meeting on Monday, Oct. 19, at 7 p.m. in the Grosse Pointe Central Library.

Patti Aiken, a weaver and teacher from Fenton, will present a program on IKAT, a process of weaving in which yarn is tied before weaving in order to synchronize with the desired pattern.

Persons interested in fiber arts are welcome to attend. For further information call Sue Ellison at 881-2906 or Mary Leigh Herdegen at 882-2261.

Josiah Harmar DAR

The General Josiah Harmar Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will meet at the Detroit Boat Club on Belle Isle this Saturday, Oct. 17, at 12:30 p.m. for a luncheon.

The event will commemorate the 49th anniversary of the group's founding and chapter regent Donna Blom has invited regents from 10 local chapters to be special guests. Speaker will be former chapter regent Charlotte Buchanan, who will speak on "Alaska, U.S.A. — United Thus and Thus United Free."

Pear Tree Questers

Pear Tree Questers will meet at 10 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 15, at the Sycamore Street home of Mrs. C.N. Moore. Grosse Pointe Quester chapter member Elfrieda Palmertier will present a program titled "Come to the Fair." Members of the Pettipointe chapter have been invited.

G.P. Secretaries

The Grosse Pointe Association of Educational Office Personnel held its annual fall meeting Sept. 29 at the Grosse Pointe Central Library. More than half of the group's members attended.

Guest speaker Dr. John Whritner, school superintendent, discussed the library expansion program and the importance of the school system's clerical role. The meeting, chaired by president Jan Kolleth, included executive officer reports, Michigan Education Association updates and a reminder about December's Christmas party for members and retirees.

G.P. Woman's Club

The Grosse Pointe Woman's Club will meet at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 21, for tea and a program in the Crystal Ballroom of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. David Lawrence Jr., publisher and chairman of the Detroit Free Press, will speak on "Where We Are Coming From."

Tea pourers will be Lois Tope, Marion Korb, Corky Marowske and Dorothy Craig. Those serving on the tea committee are Marian Schwartz, Mary DeBoer, Roberta Turpin, Jane Agne and Doris Weaver. Guest reservations may be made by calling Marie Lane at 296-2059. Deadline is Oct. 17.

The Single Way

The Single Way, a group of Christian singles of all ages and faiths, has planned a busy October. Following is a list of the month's activities:

On Oct. 10, the group took a day-long color tour of Ontario, followed by lunch at the Benmiller Inn and a hike in the countryside. Singles are invited to participate in an evening of open bowling on Oct. 17 at 6:30 p.m. at Clinton Lanes in Mount Clemens. Bowling is $1.25 per game; the group will dine out afterwards. Kids are welcome.

Pastor Robert Harris will speak on Oct. 23 at 8 p.m. at the Salvation Army Community Center on Nine Mile Road in Warren. A $3 donation is requested at the door. The Single Way will take a day-trip to Lansing to take a free tour of the state Capitol. Lunch at Tiffany's restaurant will follow.

For information on any of the group's activities, call 776-5535.

School of Government

The School of Government, Inc., founded in 1940 by the late Clara Brucker of Grosse Pointe Farms, will hold its second meeting of the 1987-88 season on Wednesday, Oct. 28, at the Detroit Golf Club. The social hour begins at 11:30 a.m., followed by luncheon at 12:30 and meeting at 1:30 p.m. The club's newly-elected president Esther Craley will preside. Program coordinator Eugenia Hunter will introduce Catharine McMullen, past president and chairman of the day, who will present the speaker.

The day's speaker will be Linda Chavez of Washington, D.C., the former Deputy Assistant to President Reagan and Director of the Office of Public Liaison. Her topic will be "English: Our Common Bond."

Chavez is president of U.S. English, the group which lead the successful effort to make English the official language in California and is currently involved in the drive to make English the official language of the United States.

Holiday Mart is this weekend

The 29th annual Holiday Mart is open to the public from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, Oct. 15 and 16, and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 17, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. Admission is $3 at the door.

The Holiday Mart will showcase over 25 distinctive shops from across the nation. A tea-room will serve sandwiches and beverages. Proceeds from the event will be returned to the Detroit metropolitan community through the educational programs of Planned Parenthood.

Trying to go it alone?

Christ Jesus, the man with the most demanding job in all history, didn't try to go it alone. He looked to his Father constantly. In fact, he said, "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do."

Like Jesus, you can rely on God's love and power.

This is what worship services are about at the Christian Science church—each Sunday morning and Wednesday evening.

You're invited to come and explore God's goodness with us.

Artists' personal collections reflect their diversity of taste

By Sidney Lawrence
Smithsonian News Service

"When I'm relaxing at home," says Chicago artist Roger Brown, "I don't necessarily want to surround myself with my own art. I already know what that's about — it's right here in my head. On a day-to-day basis, to live with, it's the other things that interest me."

Those "things" include — in every corner and along every wall of Brown's storefront studio-residence — African masks, New Guinea effigy figures, toys from the 1930s, a plaster bust of Elvis, Hopi Indian kachina dolls, wood farm implements, a guitar made of plastic foam and flowers, Japanese woodblock prints, Persian miniatures, a tin cupola from a 19th century schoolhouse, paintings by his artist friends and scores of other treasures.

"There is an intensity, a specialness to these objects," Browns says, surveying the collection. It has something to do with the maker's need to have made it. I love having them around."

The 45-year-old Brown, whose own paintings and painted constructions are currently in a retrospective at the Smithsonian's Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden in Washington, D.C., follows a centuries-old tradition of artists who collect. Within that tradition are often intriguing mixes of styles, possessions and personalities.

The 17th century Baroque master Peter Paul Rubens, for instance, crafted an environment as opulent and elegant as his paintings by filling his large house in Antwerp with globes, books, antique medals, precious stones, classical sculptures and some 300 paintings by Flemish and Dutch artists.

Rembrandt van Rijn, spurred by a more basic need, scoured fairs and bazaars for exotic costumes, silks and brocades to use as props for his paintings. The middle eastern look and shimmering richness of these acquisitions both suited Rembrandt's style and added credence and mystery to biblical scenes and self-portraits.

In the 19th century, Bertel Thorvaldson, a Scandinavian sculptor working in Rome, amassed an astounding 11,000 items, ranging from Egyptian, Greek and Etruscan artifacts to paintings in the then-fashionable Neoclassical style. Frederick Edwin Church, the well-traveled American landscape painter who lived on the Hudson River, filled his Victorian mansion with Islamic objects and decoration, as did Sir Frederick Leighton, a prominent London academic painter and "Orientalist."

At the dawn of the modern era, the late 1800s, the flatness, refinement and simplicity of Japanese art enriched and even transformed the paintings of several Impressionists and post-Impressionists who collected it. Mary Cassatt, Edgar Degas, Paul Gauguin, Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec, Vincent van Gogh and James Abbott McNeill Whistler — all felt passionately about Japanese prints. Later, the evocative, often brutal forms of African and Oceanic sculpture collected by Pablo Picasso and other young avant-gardists helped spawn at least two key styles of early Modernism, Expressionism and Cubism.

In our own century, Charles Sheeler, the American precisionist of the 1920s, surrounded himself with Shaker furniture; Joseph Cornell lived in a New York house overflowing with ephemera and small, found objects that he used to make his curious box constructions; and Philip Pearlstein, the contemporary painter of sharply volumetric realist nudes, has owned classical Greek and Roman sculptures since the 1960s.

"Artists collect with a precise inspirational purpose," American painter-collector William Copley told an interviewer several years ago, "more fetishistically but with a greater sense of duty than (others), never for status, or to impress others. The urge to collect art is part of the urge to create art."

Brown, who started collecting at flea markets on Chicago's Maxwell Street 20 years ago, concurs. "I like to live with objects that have some connection with what I'm doing in the studio," he says. Native and folk artists attract him "because

jects he has found cheaply, and often unexpectedly, in unlikely locations.

In Brown's house, friends' works are displayed alongside everything else and it is often hard to tell the difference between trained and untrained artist. The "look" is definitely exuberant, handcrafted, often disarmingly straightforward, perhaps reflecting something of the city outside.

Cottage Mart starts the season

Believe it or not, its time to start making lists and planning for holiday gifts and decorations. Fitting right into those plans is the annual Holiday Mart, sponsored by the Cottage Hospital Gift Shop Guild. It's this Saturday, Oct. 17, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Assumption Cultural Center, 21800 Marter Road.

Among the unique items in this year's Mart are wreaths, ornaments, small gifts, lingerie, jewelry, cards and stationery, attic treasures and baked goods. There is no admission charge. Proceeds from the sale of items will be used for the Rehabilitation Unit at Cottage.

A raffle of many gifts donated by local merchants will be held at 4 p.m. Raffle tickets are available at the Cottage Hospital Gift Shop and also will be available at the Mart.

The first Cottage Hospital Holiday Mart was held nearly 30 years ago to showcase the hospital's gift shop merchandise. It has grown over the years to include specialty boutiques and unusual handcrafted items.

GPT 'Pirates' tickets on sale

Tickets are available for the Grosse Pointe Theatre's opening production of "The Pirates of Penzance," running Nov. 3-14 at the Fries Auditorium of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. Tickets are $9 and may be obtained by calling the GPT Ticket Hotline at 881-4004.

GPT is currently preparing for its second production of the season, "A Streetcar Named Desire." Open auditions to cast the show will be held on Saturday, Oct. 31, from 2 to 5 p.m. and Sunday, Nov. 1, from 4 to 8 p.m. at GPT's rehearsal studio, 315 Fisher Road. Performances dates for Streetcar are Jan. 20-30, 1988.

For further information, contact producer John Guadanoli at 886-8901 (days) or 881-0079 (evenings).

Spaulding benefit

The first dinner dance to benefit Spaulding for Children will take place Friday, Oct. 30, at 7 p.m. at the Omni International Hotel in Detroit. A limited number of tax-deductible tickets are available at $150 per person.

The fundraiser is sponsored by the Burger King franchisees of Metro Detroit and will raise monies for the non-profit adoption agency specializing in hard-to-place youngsters.

Crossing the country on foot

When asked what the best way to cross the country is, some people automatically hop aboard a 747 and get away. But for many local athletes, pounding the ground with size-10 sneakers is the way to "cross country."

A demanding and very physical sport, cross country offers a person the chance to compete individually. It is each athlete for himself and he can't look over his shoulder in hopes of gaining help from a teammate.

Dodging tree branches, hopping over puddles and sprinting between bushes has become a part of life for cross country runners. I don't think it's a matter of finishing first, or last for many, as long as they actually complete the 3.1-mile course. Think about it, 3.1 miles of running in a rush hour of humans. For approximately 15-17 minutes, these athletes battle the land and other objects of nature, hoping to scamper through the shuttle at the end of the course. Sounds easy, doesn't it? Wrong.

Watching the stretched facial muscles on runners during the race tells me it takes a great deal of stamina and physical conditioning to do battle on nature's turf. Cross country runners seem like the Rodney Dangerfields of the sporting world. However, they did gain respect from me when I saw the battle between North and South last week.

From start to finish, the athletes are subjected to expanded lungs, dry tongues and a possibility of gasping for air. Sounds like fun, doesn't it? Well, believe it or not, for 99 percent of them it is.

Football has become a lifetime commitment

By Rob Fulton

Sports Editor

For better or for worse, in good times and in bad are words of matrimony that Denyse Rice and Mary Ellen Sumbera have had to play the part of.

When the brides said "yes" to their respective partners (Jon Rice — South's football coach, and Frank Sumbera — North's football coach) they not only married caring men, but the sport of football.

Although there is 32 years of marriage between the women, for two and one-half months, they are considered football widows. While Rice and Sumbera are engrossed in films, statistics and plays, Denyse and Mary Ellen accept their role in football.

"Being a coach's wife is just a part of my life I have learned to accept," said Rice. "I don't really think about being a football widow for the months during football season."

"I can't count the times I've been called a football widow," said Sumbera. "I know I could never change Frank. He loves football and that's a big part of his life."

Neither wife was a big football fanatic before they met their match, but soon after, the questions related to football became answers. Although they are big supporters of their husbands' jobs and continually try to know the game of football, they both admit that it's not top priority. For both, football was something rarely thought about until the couples were joined.

"Jon played football in college (Olivet), but I wasn't even interested in football until I met him," said Rice. "But, I've gone to all the games I've been able to even when the kids were young. Even though I've gone to the games, I still haven't learned much about football."

"I met Frank through a friend and I wasn't a big football fan," said Sumbera. "I am not very football smart, but I always try to understand more."

Both wives try to occupy their time away from their husbands with hobbies and part-time jobs, but mostly they concentrate on their children.

"For two and one-half months I am raising the children alone," said Sumbera. "Frank's time with the children is limited, but when he does spend time with them it is quality time."

The Sumbera's sport a family which includes Frank IV (8), William (6) and Natalie (3). Although the child-rearing years are over for the Rice's, they also devote time to their kids.

"Jon misses a lot of our children's games, but he makes time with them quite special," said Rice. "I like to take up my time watching my children (Russell, 17, and Jane, 15) in sports. I remain very active watching them."

Russell and Jane participate in sports at North.

In both cases, the coaches must bring work home from the office. Frank Sumbera generally heads to the room at the end of the house and Jon Rice spreads his papers on the dining room table. Both wives enjoy their husbands being home and when the "office work" needs to be talked about, they lend a listening ear because they take advantage of every opportunity they get to talk with their husbands.

"It's very lonely during this time of year, but Frank and I talk a little bit at the end of each day," said Sumbera. "I do most of the talking because he's so tired, but that's okay. We talk football, but only when he wants to."

"We talk all the time," said Rice. "He brings home the game film and we watch it together. Sometimes we're up to 2 a.m. reviewing the film."

The intensity on the field is higher than in the stands, but for the coaches' support systems, the level of intensity is comparable to what the coaches feel.

"I get nervous before and during the game because I know Frank is nervous," said Sumbera. Rice, on the other hand, has had 20 years of sitting in the stands and she is somewhat experienced.

"I like all the enthusiasm involved," she said. "I always seem anxious at the games, but that's what I like."

Besides having to find a few moments a day to share time with their husbands, Sumbera and Rice also have to take the lumps of winning and losing. However, both share a common interest in winning.

"It is very satisfying to see the things the team has worked on come out in a winning game," said Rice. "I enjoy watching Jon coach and when he is successful it makes me feel good. If the team loses, I accept that and hope they can turn it around the next time they play."

Sumbera also prefers winning.

"Winning is always nice," she said. "I don't like when they lose because it usually means Frank takes more time analyzing why, but it's all part of the role I have."

Both women believe it isn't all that difficult being a football wife, but if they could change one aspect of being a football widow, there stories differ.

"The only thing I would change is to have him come home right after the game," Sumbera said. "He generally spends a few more hours after the game talking with the coaches, but I'd like him to come home."

"I don't think I'd change a thing," said Rice. "I enjoy football season and if I wasn't involved in it I think there would be an empty part in my life. I really enjoy being a coach's wife."

"I enjoy football season and if I wasn't involved in it I think there would be an empty part in my life. I really enjoy being a coach's wife." — Denyse Rice.

Pointe girls play in tourney

Three Grosse Pointe girls played in the Oakland University Invitational Youth Soccer Tournament with the St. Clair Shores Strikers.

The Strikers finished in second place in the tournament in the girls under-14 Division with a 3-2 record.

Rebecca Damm played mid-field, Sarah Foley was a defenseman and Monica Paul was a center forward/goalie. All girls were transfer players on the Shores team from the Grosse Pointe Mustangs.

Paul led the Strikers in scoring with four goals. She also played outstanding in the goal as she made several key saves.

The Strikers defeated three teams by scores of 2-1, 3-0 and 1-0. Their two defeats were recorded against the Livonia Hawks, 7-0 in the first round, and 1-0 in the championship game.

G.P. Academy hosts annual invitational

The Grosse Pointe Academy, for the fifth straight year, is hosting the Cross Country Invitational on Friday, Oct. 16 at 4 p.m. at Holley Field.

Over 100 athletes will represent 12 independent schools from Ohio and Michigan.

The field is located on Lakeshore at Moran Road.

De LaSalle wins soccer title

De LaSalle Collegiate's varsity soccer team has won the Central Division Championship with a record of 9-0-1 in their Catholic Division.

They are rated 4th in the state as a Class A team with an overall record of 13-1-2 and are a favorite to win the state title.

Just one more time

Before they lay up the boats for the winter and curl up their toes in front of the fireplace, many of the boating diehards still plan to eek out the last bit of fall sailing.

Setting up a boat and crew for colder temperatures is not difficult, but does require some thought.

Obviously, some sort of cabin heater is in order. The bulkhead mounted heaters that burn solid fuel such as charcoal and wood are the easiest to use because the fuel is readily available. The flue must be of a specified length, which varies according to the manufacturer. Some boats do not have the room for a long flue and can't use such a heater. This accounts for the reason that solid fuel heaters are rarely seen on smaller cruising boats. The long stack, some of which would be above deck, could be hazardous. The alternative is a kerosene, propane or alcohol heater. The bulkhead mounted versions do not require a long flue. They can be fitted with a pipe from the heater up through and flush with the deck, topped with a rain cap. Very little is above the deck; making them preferable on small boats.

Besides the bulkhead mounted variety, there are freestanding models available. A look through any of the boating catalogs will provide information about the many types of heaters available. One should not overlook the camping outfitters either. Caution, however, is advised because some camp heaters use a highly refined, unleaded gasoline that one would not want to have aboard the boat.

With a heater, sailors can duck below and warm up. But, they need to be protected when they venture into the cockpit. Dodgers that shield the companionway opening, as well as a portion of the cockpit, are a worthwhile investment.

Weather cloths are a simple and inexpensive addition that keep the waves and spray from reaching the seated crew. These can be made from almost any material by the do-it-yourselfer. When secured to the lifelines and encircling the cockpit, they offer additional protection. When they are no longer needed they can be removed and stored.

Sailors do venture up on deck and they need to keep warm and yet move about freely. Hands and feet always seem to suffer the most. Full-fingered gloves that are tough and rugged, as well as warm, are in order. If working with wet lines in the cold, an over-glove that grips is highly advised. These gloves may be plastic or heavy rubber with nubs moulded into the palm area to insure a secure grip. They are available at most stores that carry work gloves.

Seaboots just don't keep the feet warm enough in the fall, especially with water sloshing across a deck. But, snowmobile boots will. They may seem a bit clumsy and awkward for a boat, but the rubber soles will not mar or slip on the decks. The uppers are waterproofed to keep moisture out and the felt liners insure warm feet within. They offer a perfect solution to the problem of keeping feet warm on a fall cruise.

Clothing designed for skiers offers the fall boater another simple solution to the problem of keeping warm. New polyester and dacron insulation materials are warmer and lighter weight than the old standbys of wool and feather down. Down filled jackets, hats and gloves are not recommended for use aboard boats because down loses its insulating qualities when it gets wet. The synthetic insulators, however, continue to keep the person warm even when saturated.

Hats that cover the ears are a must. Since the days of the square-rigger, seamen have worn the traditional watch-cap. It is a simple knit hat that closely fits the head. It can be rolled up or pulled down. When it is pulled down tight, it offers protection for the ears and back of the head without obstructing the view of the person wearing it. The old fashioned traditional watch-caps were of a coarse, dark wool. Today, they can be found in synthetics in any color of the rainbow and can be stuffed in a pocket when not needed.

Fall cruising can be a very enjoyable experience; especially for those who are not tied to a desk on those crisp, clear and cool days. The marinas and anchorages have been vacated since Labor Day when the youngsters had to return to school and the rest of us said good-bye to summer. The fall color can be spectacular as we travel around the lakes. There is rarely a windless day — usually the opposite. If you can keep warm and dry, autumn can offer some of the best sailing of the year.

Red Barons lose one, tie twice

Leading the Red Baron defense were Kyle McCurtuey, Dan Schefferly, Morgan Matthews, Paul Hueliner, Tim Northey and Eric Van Tiem. The offense was held at bay, but Vince Thomas, Kris Erikson, Andy Swikowski, Ryan Rouls and Brian Law ran well.

The Barracudas took an early 6-0 lead on a 54-yard touchdown run by Mike McAndrews. A few plays later, the Barracudas tacked on a touchdown by Matt Sardo after he picked off a Red Baron pass.

The Barons tightened up their defense as Chad Cherf and Brian Avigne intercepted Barracudas passes to abort drives and Alex Brinker blocked a Mount Clemens punt. Also playing well on defense were Chris Thowe, Brian McCloskey and Matt Packer. On offense the Barons took control in the second half with Derek Ottevaere breaking loose for a 46-yard touchdown and later took it in from 12 yards out and added the extra point to knot the score. Also playing well offensively were Marty Martin, Paul Geville, Aaron Letscher and Tom Paquin.

The Red Baron varsity also played to a tie, 6-6. Clinton Hamilton scored for Mount Clemens on a 7-yard run to put the Barracudas up 6-0 in the second quarter.

The generally potent Red Baron offense just couldn't get untracked until the second half when it moved 52 yards with a scoring pass from Scott VanAlmen to Paul Straske. The extra point was no good and the score remained tied at six.

The Barons moved the ball well in the second half on the running of Mike Haskell, Drew Woodruff and Straske. Leading the way up front were linemen Adam Hogan, Jeff Thomas, Shawn McCann and Tom Kolojeski.

In a last-second effort to stuff the ball into the Barracuda end zone, time ran out on the Red Barons as they pushed the ball to the 1-yard line.

On defense, the Barons hit hard and were led by Adam Korzeniewski, Mike Haskell, Matt Dube, Tony DiLaura, Steve Meathe, Brian Blake and Mike Miller.

A chilly spine

I really got the chill of my life when an athlete crossed the finish line, not even in contention for a top spot, but completely satisfied with his accomplishment. As I walked over to offer my victory message, I watched him shift one shoulder toward his stomach and begin to breathe quite heavily. I did not know what to say to a young Grosse Pointe athlete in a situation like this, so I asked him, "How do you feel?" As the sweat dripped off his forehead, he struggled to say "I feel good." I couldn't help but chuckle because as he said that, his face looked like it was being subjected to a wind machine and his eyes were closed in a desperate clutch. But the sense of accomplishment seemed to override the pain and anguish created by running this up-and-down course.

Easy it's not. For me, I was tired watching and my legs ached. But for some 45 athletes, the aching legs, the tight stomachs or the lack of air didn't seem to even exist. It all seems worthwhile when the finish line is finally behind them.

If an award were to be given out for sportsmanship, I would gladly hand over the trophy to these athletes. It doesn't matter if an opponent hits the finish line first, second or dead last. Everyone of these kids hug each other, use each other as leaning posts and confide in one another. Nobody enjoys finishing last, but it's as if there isn't a last-place finisher. As long as the course is completed, they seem to be satisfied.

Another heartfelt moment occurred when the last runner for South crossed the finish line.

She was the final runner to complete the course, but as the finish line drew closer the cheering got louder. It wasn't an embarassing cheer, but a resounding response of appreciation. After the girl had found out her time, she jumped up and said, "I did it, coach. I got my personal-best time." The coach gave her "five" and said, "Congratulations. You did a great job."

The most enlightening aspect of the afternoon was to watch the accomplishments on which these kids pride themselves. Winning and losing is no comparison. Crossing the finish line at the end of a long road becomes a difficult task only for those watching. It's unbelievable how these kids train for competition that lasts just over 15 minutes, but they wouldn't have it any other way. They love to race on nature's course that offers challenges and incomparable experiences that offer individuality at its best.

Ticket package offers exciting hockey

There is still time to take advantage of the Joe Louis Arena College Hockey Season ticket for two of the country's top-ranked tournaments — the 23rd annual Great Lakes Invitational (GLI) (Dec. 29-30) and the Central Collegiate Hockey Association (CCHA) championship (March 11-12, 1988).

The College Hockey Season Ticket offers great seats at a discount price. The cost for all four exciting games is only $36.

This year's GLI features defending champions Michigan State University, the University of Wisconsin and tournament co-hosts University of Michigan and Michigan Tech.

The best teams in college hockey's hottest league will vie for the CCHA championship in doubleheader playoff games on March 11-12, 1988. Both prestigious tournaments have provided fans with an early look at future NHL and Olympic players. Sold-out crowds and live bands generate high enthusiasm at these popular hockey classics.

The best seats for these tournaments are available, in a College Hockey Season Ticket package, at the Joe Louis Arena Box Office. To order by phone, using Visa or Mastercard, call 567-7500. Reservations for group tickets (20 or more) at a discount rate are also available by calling 567-7474. For general information, call 567-6000.

North sports

Tobias, North ramble over Tower

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Senior running back Jay Tobias chewed up 145 yards in 18 carries to go with two touchdowns to pace the Norsemen to a 35-28 win over Warren Woods-Tower Saturday.

Tobias, who scored on back-to-back runs of 65 and 20 yards, put the Norsemen up 14-0 early in the first quarter. However, Dave Zbozen (Woods-Tower) tried to spoil the homecoming for North as he scored three touchdowns of his own; with some help from the Norsemen defense.

North was up 14-0, but a 77-yard pass play, with Zbozen on the receiving end, put the Titans in the hunt, 14-6. Mark deManigold blocked the extra point for North.

On their next possession, North's Kevin McCarron, who rushed for 66 yards, capped a 49-yard drive with a three yard dash to put North up 21-6. But, Zbozen was not through. He crossed the middle on a short pass pattern, caught the ball and eluded the arms of the Norsemen for a 70-yard touchdown to make the score 21-13 at the intermission.

"They (Woods-Tower) made the plays. I'm not taking that away from them, but we hurt ourselves," said North Coach Frank Sumner. "Zbozen scored twice on the same identical play and we should have stopped it. Our secondary used shoddy tackling throughout the entire afternoon. They weren't beat on those pass plays, they just didn't tackle well."

It wasn't often the Titans got into North's defensive backfield because the front line of Mark deManigold, Karl Schultz and Dave VanDale controlled the trenches. VanDale had 11 solo tackles and Schultz and deManigold had 10 each.

"We had two quarterback sacks and seven tackles behind the line," said Sumner. "That's a pretty good front-line performance."

Jerome Guest recorded seven tackles from his outside linebacker spot.

Late in the third quarter, Zbozen, who caught six passes for 198 yards, struck again. This time he went in from 14 yards out. The two-point conversion was good and the score was knotted at 21.

"Personally I felt the game should have been put away in the first half," said Sumner. "We were moving the ball up and down the field all day, but I really feel the tackling kept them in the ball game."

Woods-Tower has Zbozen, but North countered with Bruno Giglio. Giglio completed seven of 18 passes for 173 yards.

"After they tied the score, it was the Bruno show," said Sumner.

Giglio orchestrated touchdown tosses to Chuck Thomas (28 yards) and Dan Unger (24 yards) to keep the Norsemen in the hunt for the league championship; at least a share of it. Thomas caught four passes for 100 yards. "Our defensive backs have got to tackle," Sumner said. "It's too bad we're six weeks into playing and we're having trouble tackling, but we've got to improve on it."

North travels to Lake Shore Saturday, Oct. 17 for a 1 p.m. game.

Girls' cross country

By Brendan Rohan
Special Writer

Liz Bolden was North's top finisher (second overall), but it wasn't enough as cross-town rival Grosse Pointe South stunned the Lady Norsemen, 19-44. The loss dropped North's record to 7-2.

Kevin McCarron carries the ball for North and picks up six of his 66 yards for the Norsemen in a homecoming-win over Warren Woods Tower. McCarron carried the ball 14 times.

Earlier in the week, North defeated Clintondale and L'Anse Creuse in a tri-meet at L'Anse Creuse. North took the top five spots as Bolden won the race.

Basketball

North improved to 7-1 with a 56-38 win over previously undefeated Warren Woods Tower. North combined a pressure defense with outstanding offensive punch to take over sole possession of the White Division with a 2-0 record.

Kim Reiter led all scorers with 12 points and Monique VanAssche and Heather Mergos scored 10 each. Robin Wheatley scored eight points and dished out four assists to go with seven steals.

Boys' cross country

The boys' cross country team finished off a successful dual-meet season by beating South, 18-37. Bob Straske won the race for the second straight year with a personal-best time of 16:58. Steve Clarke, Frank Markey and John Shefferly finished third through fifth.

Earlier in the week, Straske led all Norsemen runners with a

Blue Devils continue to roll

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

In his first year as coach, Jon Rice has equalled last season's win tally for the South Blue Devils.

Rice, and his coaching staff, steered the Blue Devils to their fifth straight win, against one defeat, over the Mount Clemens Bathers, 24-14. The Blue Devils are now 5-0 in the E.M.L. and 5-1 overall with games against Anchor Bay, East Detroit and Grosse Pointe North left on the agenda. Last season South was 5-4 overall.

Although the score indicates a slightly lopsided victory, the ball game was much too close for Rice's comfort.

"We had over 300 yards in total offense and ran 64 plays," he said. "They only had 147 total yards, but were in the ball game the whole way."

South gave up 103 yards through the air and 44 yards on the ground. But, they also aborted some Bathers' drives with three interceptions and two fumble recoveries. Mike Calcaterra, Marcus Wysocki and Doug Lucas, who also had a fumble recovery, picked off passes. Lance Harding recovered the second Mount Clemens fumble.

"Our defense played really well," said Rice. "We got another team effort from each one of the kids."

South opened the homecoming game scoring on a 9-yard run by Ted Mills, who rushed for 47 yards on eight carries, and Lucas added one of three extra points on the afternoon. Lucas then booted a 27-yard field goal to up the Blue Devils' lead to 10-0, but with one motion of the arm, Mount Clemens got back into (10-7) on a 68-yard bomb get within three points.

"We put pressure on the quarterback, but he just got rid of it," said Rice. "The quarterback did a nice job."

Behind the offensive line of Joe Reynolds, Rob Crane, Jeff Fikany, Jamie Pangborn and Dale Wilson, the Blue Devils marched down the field and went up 17-7 on a 1-yard dive by Mills to end the half.

"At the start of the second half, we wanted to come out and try to play power football, but we lost the kickoff on a fumble (one of six fumbles for South) and that changed our strategy," said Rice. "We had to be a bit more conservative because we wanted to keep Shawn Blanchett off the field."

Blanchett, the workhorse for the Bathers, was held to 46 yards rushing by the Blue Devils; the first time this year he has been held under 100 yards.

Although Blanchett didn't damage the Blue Devils, a blocked punt enabled the Bathers to cut the lead to 17-14 in the third quarter when they pounced on the ball in the South end zone.

"We felt like we were fighting for our lives to stay on top," Rice said. "The kids were upset about the mistakes they made that gave Mount Clemens some of their chances, but they battled back."

Mike Paull, who averages 40 yards a punt, trapped Mount Clemens on the one-yard line with a booming punt. Two plays later, Lucas picked off a pass and ran it back to close out the scoring.

"We have always asked the kids for a total team effort and we continue to get it," said Rice.

South will travel to Anchor Bay for a 2 p.m. ball game Oct. 17.

Girls' cross country

Powerhouse is one way to describe this team. With victories over Grosse Pointe North (19-44) and L'Anse Creuse North the Blue Devils remain undefeated (12-0) in dual meets.

Against North, South took eight of the top 10 spots. Micha Song led the way with a time of 19:56. Song was followed by teammates Elizabeth Kraft and Vicki Groustra. Debbie Solterisch, Wendy Berger, Megan Smucker, Julie Nichols, Jenny McSorley, Elizabeth Lazarowitz and Rebecca Wasinger rounded out the field for South.

In the meet with L'Anse Creuse North, South took 13 of the top 15 positions.

Soccer

The mystery remains the same, as the Blue Devils are still not ranked in the state despite an unblemished 10-0-2 record.

South recorded two shutouts over Clawson (7-0) and Fitzgerald (4-0) and tied Bishop Foley, 1-1. Dino Marcus and Jim Ryzewski scored two goals each against Clawson and Brink Crawley, Mike Disser and George Sparrow booted one each. Sparrow also had two assists and Crawley, Disser, Ryzewski, Dave Birnbyrer and Chris Gramling assisted once each.

Against Fitzgerald, Disser scored a hat trick and Sparrow got the other goal. Cal Attie assisted twice and Sam Steinhebel and Birnbyrer added one assist.

Basketball

An even split last week left South 2-1 in the league and 5-3 overall.

Anchor Bay was two baskets better, 46-42 despite Lisa Fromm's contribution of 14 points and Carmina Amezcua's 10 points, six rebounds, three assists and four steals. Megan Keller had seven rebounds.

Amezcua, who is a top E.M.L. player, got the Blue Devils back on the winning track, 44-35 over Anchor Bay. Amezcua scored 14 points, assisted four times and picked Anchor Bay for four steals. Patty Pentecost had 10 points.

Boys' cross country

In a battle with L'Anse Creuse North, South won 15-44 behind Mark Sonnenberg's team-leading finish. Freshman Jeff Kerfoot was second and Chris Sherwood and Dave Nicholson took third and fourth, respectively. Billy Staats was fifth.

Tennis

For the first time in years South beat Marian, 4-3. Kathy Rajt (No. 1 singles), Cathy Wachter, (No. 2 singles), Ellen Mayer (No. 3 singles), Stephanie Vititoe (No. 4 singles) all won.

South, for the 15th straight year, won the Eastern Michigan League. They also recorded their 14th consecutive regional championship. They stand at 8-1.

ULS sports

Stewart chips way to state match

After shooting a medalist-round of 81 in the regional match, Gordie Stewart has landed himself a spot on the State Class C card. As a team, ULS finished tied for fifth among the 16 team field at Oak Lane Golf Course. Other scores at the regionals were Andrew Stewart (90), Chris McCormick (92) and Gene Gargaro (97).

Co-captain Charlie Roby led ULS with a score of 40, over Plymouth Christian, 171-174. Stewart followed with a 42, McCormick had a 44 and Tip Quilter finished with a 45.

At Maple Lanes, Bishop Gallagher nipped the Knights, 181-184. Roby (42) and Stewart (43), again led the Knights' attack. McCormick (49) and Tom Valone (50) rounded out the ULS card.

Soccer

On Oct. 6, the Knights took on Cranbrook and ULS fell behind early, 1-0. At the 21-minute mark, Frank Karabetos tied the score with a free-kick from 25 yards out; his ninth of the season.

Two days later, ULS hosted Bethesda Christian School and beat them 6-0 behind goals from Jonathon Davis (2), Mark Sullivan (2), Doug Wood and Karabetos. Brian Schmidt recorded his third shut out in the net.

Beth Allor is headed for the All-Catholic Team. After hitting for 29 points in a 52-39 win over Pontiac Catholic, Allor blistered the basket for 22 points in a 58-18 romp over East Catholic. Allor also had 14 rebounds against Pontiac Catholic.

Teammate Buffy Stumb grabbed 15 rebounds against Pontiac Catholic and Jenny Sparkman contributed five assists.

Against East Catholic, Beth Abood scored 10 points and Margaret Flanagan had eight. Stumb had 20 rebounds and Allor 19.

The Tunas are 6-3 overall and 3-2 in the Catholic League.

Fit

Questionnaire on alcohol

The American Medical Association asks the following questions for you to answer "yes" or "no" to:

1) When upset or under unusual stress, do you automatically take a stiff drink to "calm your nerves?"

2) Do you crave a drink at a specific time every day — right after work for instance?

3) When holding an empty glass at a party, do you actively look for a refill rather than wait to be offered one?

4) Do you feel physically deprived, nervous or irritable if you can't have at least one drink a day?

5) Do you often have a drink or two when you are alone, either at home or in a bar?

6) Do family quarrels often seem to occur when you have had a drink or two?

7) Does drinking ever cause you to miss work or cancel scheduled meetings or plans?

8) Do you lie when asked about how much you have had to drink?

9) Do you sometimes awaken "the morning after" unable to recall what happened on a previous night of drinking?

You should regard a YES answer to any one of the above questions as a warning sign. Do not increase your consumption of alcohol. Two YES answers suggest that you are becoming dependent on alcohol. Three or more YES answers indicate that you may have a serious drinking problem and should consider professional help.

The festive holiday season will be here much before we're ready for it and with it comes added circumstances to increase alcohol consumption. Think about it now and be prepared for it. Alcohol adds calories without any nutrients as well as possible problems which none of us need.

If you are under stress and reach for that drink when you come home from work, try an exercise break instead. Many have tried it and it has worked. Alcoholism is a disease. Don't let it creep up on you. Feeling fit and fighting it is much better. Try to at least give it some thought.

Beginners should exercise one step at a time

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

If you have convinced yourself that exercising is the thing for you, but you haven't established just what to do, it is recommended you choose something safe and enjoyable.

According to Frank Pollina, M.D. at St. John Hospital, general fitness for the beginner takes more than just deciding to get off the couch.

"A lot of people who want to start exercising are those who wished they would have years ago," said Dr. Pollina. "Most of the people just starting out have not been very active in the past so I recommend they choose something that is safe and something they like to do."

Choosing something safe and enjoyable is the key, but making the move to something new is also a beneficial factor which may help eliminate boredom.

"It is probably best if you start with something new to you," said Pollina. "You must also stick with something new and not try to do too many things at once. Start with one thing and stick with it is the best way to start exercising."

Some individuals have the tendency to jump in with both feet and not take into consideration the time span it will take for the body to adjust. Pollina states that the person becoming involved in exercising must embark on it slowly.

"It is a gradual process for most just starting out," he said. "You never want to be so tired at the end of the activity. That will take the fun out of it and you will also become discouraged."

General interest seems to lie with improving one's health; especially the heart, according to Pollina.

"Most people want to begin exercising for cardiovascular reasons," he added. "Generally walking and jogging are the best for people, but it all depends on what you want to do."

Pollina has watched people progress through fitness programs and although some become fit quicker than others, one thing never changes: devotion.

"It doesn't take a lot of time out of the day for someone to start becoming fit," Pollina said. "For about 20-30 minutes a day, three days a week, a person can see results, but not immediately. It will take about three to six months to start noticing what benefits there are, but being disciplined and devoted to doing the activity is important."

Within the three to six month period, many people will weed themselves out of the fitness scene, but for those who overcome the obstacles they are well on their way.

"The key point is to get a starting spot you are comfortable with and work with it three times a week for a month," said Pollina. "Very few people can maintain a comfortable period when starting out, but the three to six months is crucial."

"If you can make it through the first three months then it becomes a part of life," he said. "Most people are on their way if they can get past the first three months. It doesn't take a lot of time, but it takes persistence. I have to stress that."

Once the beginner reaches the three-month mark, they should then turn to a different target.

"After the three month target has been attained, people should set their goals higher," said Pollina. "They should continue to progress and shoot to get the heart rate up."

The ideal heart-rate target falls between 140-170 beats per minute (when active) and Pollina states it is important for the beginner to shoot for that optimum heart rate.

"The heart rate goal is important," he said. "A long-term exercise program will significantly affect your blood pressure for the better. And all it takes is a few minutes three times a week."

Pollina emphasizes exercise goals and an optimum-heart rate for beginning exercisers, but he also believes the person should establish one, safe and enjoyable program.

"People just starting out think they should do a variety of exercises to get in shape," he said. "That's not so. All they need to do is choose one activity, define their goals, work toward them with 20-30 minutes a day, three times a week and the mental and physical results will follow."

Stamina: The key to reaching your goals

Today's society abounds with many opportunities to design and then experience a whole new, healthy lifestyle. Young and old are stepping out and putting their goals into motion, testifying to the fact that their dream for personal improvement can become a reality.

But, unfortunately, that reality will not be accomplished by all who try. While most begin with the same high enthusiasm, only a few make it through doubts and setbacks and achieve long-term success. Many tend to lose momentum and eventually stop. Their energy is depleted and they are defeated by the double punch of discouragement and loss of self-confidence. What enables some people to move forward in the face of conflict is the ability to resist hardship; bounce back and move forward once again, until the goal is achieved. Any goal you set for yourself involves a complex array of variables, some of which will work for you, while others will work against you. Eliminating all problems is next to impossible. Life just isn't set up that way. So the next best solution is to meet them head on. It is possible to manipulate these challenges so they will work for your benefit, if you maintain your stamina. Following are some suggestions to help you develop and retain that valuable quality.

SELF TRUST

Stamina can't be maintained without the trust in your personal potential. Harold H. Bloomfield, M.D. points out the dangers of self-doubt in his book, "Making Peace With Yourself: Turning Your Weaknesses into Strengths." He says, "self-negating doubt deserves no more attention than you pay to static on the radio. While doubting yourself is at times normal, the challenge lies in not letting those doubts block your inspiration and commitment."

Dr. Bloomfield suggests a possible remedy to self-doubt. "When fear overwhelms you, turn your attention to something more self-affirming." This may take practice and discipline. It's sometimes difficult to pull yourself out of a slump long enough for you to see what you have accomplished. Bloomfield recommends making a list of your successes and placing them in a visible spot for easy reference. Each morning before leaving home, you will have the luxury of beginning the day with a positive reminder that you are a capable person. By seeing yourself as a successful person in past situations, your confidence that you can get back up from this last difficulty and move onward toward your goal will increase.

TAKE TIME TO RELAX

By utilizing the principles of relaxation and visualization, you can increase your stamina. When you have discouraging days, take time to relax, breathe deeply for a few minutes. By practicing a relaxation technique and deep breathing, you not only revitalize your body, but your attitude as well. These techniques help to rid yourself of discouragement and fear and will give you the second wind you need to continue on your personal path for change and improvement.

CELEBRATE SUCCESS

Congratulate yourself for the progress you make. Each day will provide you with new successes. No matter how small they are, they are worthy of your attention. How many days have you not eaten your favorite junk food? How many days have you remained faithful to your exercise regimen? Each success suggests capability, planning and follow-through. Give yourself a pat on the back for each minor achievement.

FAILURE DOES NOT MEAN DEFEAT

There is no one who reached a goal problem-free. You will experience disappointments and will make mistakes. It doesn't mean that you should give up. Charles Garfield illustrates this concept with the following example: "On their flights between earth and the moon, the Apollo ships were off course more than 90 percent of the time. The crew repeatedly had to correct the trajectory. And you know what? Being off course all that time didn't really matter. On course does not mean perfect. It means that even when things don't go perfectly, you are headed in the right direction." You may have to cope with the failure along the way, but if you keep moving ahead you will eventually reach your goal. These stumbling blocks give you the opportunity to analyze what went wrong and make a game plan before the next challenge is upon you.

ENJOY THE ADVENTURE

Eleanor Roosevelt once said, "The purpose of life, after all, is to live it, to taste experience to the utmost, to reach out eagerly and without fear for newer and richer experience." The final step to gaining stamina is nurturing your exuberance toward living. Life is an adventure. Enjoy it — all of it, from risks to rewards, from setbacks to success. If you make a mistake, it's not the end of the world. Making choices and taking risks are prerequisites to reaping awards. Learning to choose will put you in control of your life. Even when your choices have been unwise, they act as teachers if you will let them. As Dr. Bloomfield so aptly stated, "in life you must be willing to risk failure many times before you become accomplished at anything." Learning to believe in yourself and your ability to get back up and keep on trying are critical to maintaining stamina through it all. What you get by reaching your goals is not nearly as important as what you become by reaching them.

recruits officials, coaches

The scene is a common one — a youngster plays alone in the backyard or on the school ground, longing not only for companionship, but some direction in the person to look up to for an example. The commercial usually touts involvement in a Big Brothers-Big Sisters type of program.

The same conditions exist today in senior and junior high school athletics. More and more, the number of proper role models for young students in the persons of coaches and officials has been on the decline, leaving a void in an important part of one's developmental years — not just as an athlete, but as a person.

"Can You Fill These Shoes?" is the rallying slogan the Michigan High School Athletic Association (MHSAA) is using to recruit young coaches and officials into school activities. The program began during the summer with the mailing of the theme poster to schools, college intramural departments and health/fitness clubs throughout Michigan. The announcement of the program is intended to get more individuals involved in helping kids.

"We have seen a decrease in the number of registered officials in the past few years, and we hope this program will reverse that trend," says MHSAA Executive Director John E. "Jack" Roberts. "We're also looking at getting people involved in school athletics as a coach or officials who have had some interest or background, but who haven't been sure about how to sign up.

"This is especially important with females and minorities," Roberts continued. "Often, someone just doesn't know how to look into the opportunities available in his or her own community. We feel that the young athletes need these positive role models to contribute to their development."

In addition to the distribution of the posters, the MHSAA will work with college intramural and health/physical education departments and develop a series of public service announcements for radio and television use.

For more information about the "Can You Fill These Shoes?" program, contact the MHSAA at 1019 Trowbridge Road, East Lansing, MI 48823. Telephone: 517/332-5046.

Program offers nutrition for athletes

What you eat directly affects how your body performs.

This is true for everyone, but particularly to athletes. Making the situation worse, athletes often fall into unhealthy diet traps in an effort to improve performance.

A registered dietician at the Cottage Hospital of Grosse Pointe, Meda Harrison, R.D., will give her diet advice to athletes in a free community program at Cottage Hospital. The program, Eat to Win: Nutrition for Athletes, will be held on Friday, Oct. 23 from 7-9 p.m. in Boardrooms A and B. The Boardrooms are located on the lower level of the hospital.

Ms. Harrison will discuss carbohydrate loading to increase endurance, the pros and cons of protein drinks and supplements, and the benefits of added vitamins. She will also examine the well-balanced meal, the pre-game meal and how to lose, gain or maintain weight safely. Common weight-loss techniques used by gymnasts, wrestlers and possible problems resulting from those diets, will also be discussed.

'Like Father Like Son': Style over substance

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

One of the most used visual devices in "Like Father Like Son" is a montage in which the events of Dudley Moore's life are contrasted with the events of Kirk Cameron's life. Actually, redundant is probably a better word to describe the scenes.

Indeed, what becomes obvious to viewers during the course of the 90-minute film is that there is just too little material here for a full-length feature, and so redundancies and filler material become the norm.

That's not to say that the idea behind the movie is not a cute one. Picture a successful and talented middle-aged heart surgeon (Moore) suddenly finding himself trapped in his son's body. And picture the son (Cameron), normal by most standards, suddenly finding himself inside his father's body.

Sure, it sounds funny. And a few well-played scenes hint at the comic possibilities of such a scenario. Like the scene in which

Film

Cameron tries to entertain a high school beauty queen. Or the scene in which Moore tries to lead his medical interns through rounds, even though he has no idea what he's doing.

Some of this stuff is a real scream, albeit farfetched. The culprit behind their transformation is a brain transference serum. And the possibilities are endless when Moore gets his credit card and has the spending power of an adult with the spending habits of a teenager.

The problem, though, is that the film degenerates into one scene after another of loud rock 'n' roll under music-video-style visual routines. More than once, viewers get the impression they're watching a glorified version of M-TV. And likely, that's what the producers want, since the majority of box office this film will garner will be from adolescents who want to see television's Cameron on the big screen.

That's too bad, because it's actually Moore who pulls the best comic moments out of his hat. For the most part, the laughs belong to him. He still has a wit and sincerity on the screen that few comic actors can match. Cameron is here not because of any real acting ability, but because he will draw viewers.

"Like Father Like Son" has a few of its priorities in the wrong place. Given Moore's incredible ability, this film could have achieved much more than it ultimately does. This is a good example of style and visual impact over substance.

The style and visual impact will earn it a healthy return at the box office. But the lack of substance will hurt it in the eyes of discriminating movie fans.

After accidentally switching minds with each other, Chris Hammond (Kirk Cameron) reprimands his father (Dudley Moore) for staying out all night in his body.

Frankie

... Laine, singing his repertoire of hits like "That's My Desire," "Mule Train," "Jezebel" and other songs, will appear in concert at 7 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 18, at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts. Tickets at $16 for adults and $14.50 for students and senior citizens may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The Center is located on the Center Campus of Macomb Community College at Hall (M-59) and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

Circus, magic comes to town

A 3,000-pound elephant, magicians, trapeze artists, clowns, acrobats, dancing dogs, vanishing acts and ladies sawed in half will take center stage at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 21, when the nationally touring Circus Royale comes to the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts.

Billed as "a blend of two of the world's oldest performing arts forms — circus and magic" — the two-hour family show is headed by David Hibling, Great Britain's leading ringmaster and illusionist.

Hibling, whose credits also include theater, musical comedy, television, ice shows and pantomimes, emcees the production that brings together an assortment of world-class circus stars and internationally known magicians from various points of the compass.

Tickets are $15 for adults and $13.50 for students and senior citizens. They may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222.

Theater organ concert celebrates sesqui

The Detroit Theater Organ Club will present a free "Michigan Musical Memories" concert, a Michigan Sesquicentennial event, at 7 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 24, at the Senate Theater, 6424 Michigan Avenue (near Livernois) in Detroit. The program will feature Scott Smith at the Wurlitzer pipe organ and soprano, Judith Wharton Donakowski.

The program, which is being presented as a community service project by the Detroit Theater Organ Club, is open to the public at no charge. In keeping with the state's Sesquicentennial, the program will feature popular music by Michigan composers and songs about Michigan.

Judith Wharton Donakowski has performed in many Sesquicentennial events. She has also performed several turn-of-the-century popular music concerts with her husband, Conrad Donakowski.

The Wurlitzer pipe organ was formerly installed in the Fisher Theater when it was a movie palace. Scott Smith has performed several programs on it. For eight years Smith was the staff organist at the Michigan Theater in Lansing.

The Detroit Theater Organ Club, a non-profit group, is responsible for removing the Wurlitzer pipe organ from the Fisher Theater when it was converted to a legitimate playhouse in 1961. Club members reinstalled the organ in the Senate Theater, where the Club presents monthly concerts for members and their guests.

'Chorus Line'

... will be presented at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts at 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 23, 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 24. Tickets at $17 for adults and $15.25 for students and senior citizens may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Musical, buffet offered

"The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" opens at the Great Lakes Dinner Playhouse Friday, Oct. 16, and continues through Dec. 5, Tuesday through Sunday.

Enjoy a buffet dinner before the show. Cocktail service starts at 6 p.m. and dinner is served at 6:30 p.m.

Ticket prices are from $16.95 for matinee performances to $25.95 for Saturday nights. Prices include the performance and the buffet dinner. For ticket reservations, call 463-0340. All major credit cards accepted.

The Great Lakes Dinner Playhouse is located at 31 N. Walnut, one block west of the Macomb County Building in downtown Mount Clemens.

Art exhibit at peace center

Swords into Plowshares Peace Center Gallery is hosting the exhibition, "Children of War — Khmer," by Detroit figurative artist Lin Baum.

In November 1986, Baum traveled to the Thai-Kampuchean (Cambodian) border to work on location with displaced Kampuchean people. With permission from the Thai National Security Council, and in cooperation with the United Nations Border Relief Operation, Baum was allowed to enter Site 2 Camp to paint and sketch the children victimized by the border conflict.

She is a graduate of the University of Michigan School of Art, with further graduate work at Wayne State and she has exhibited throughout Michigan.

"Children of War — Khmer" opened Sept. 18 at the gallery, located at 45 E. Adams, at Grand Circus Park. The exhibition will be on display and for sale through Oct. 24. Gallery hours are Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., or by appointment for groups. For further information call 965-5422.

The Missing LINC
Linking individuals to Needs in the Community is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to coordinate needs with resources. This is accomplished by placing goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of Metropolitan Detroit charitable agencies. Operating since 1971, LINC is proud of the accomplishments it has made and strives to increase its resource base. If you have recyclable items, no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100 with your donation. KEEP IT MOVING!

HAND TOOLS, ELECTRIC SANDER, wood-working tools of all kinds are desperately needed by the MARINERS INN. Due to a robbery the 85 residents of this residential center for homeless men are out of work. Hammers, screwdrivers, plyers ALL TOOLS are needed.

LIKE TO SEW? HAVE EXTRA FABRIC? YMCA CAMP COVELL needs curtains for 24 cabins made from lightweight wash and wear fabric. The camp also needs sofas, chairs, tables and lamps.

CAREGIVERS, a home services organization working with the Department of Social Services needs MATERNITY AND BABY CLOTHES, sheets, towels, and cloth diapers. These items are needed by foster families.

CROSSWORD PUZZLE BOOKS, MURAL TYPE WORLD MAP, 35 MM camera, bamboo rakes are needed by SHELTERING ARMS, an adult day care center specializing in elderly respite care. Also needed is a 16 MM projector to aid in craft projects and for entertainment.

JEFFERSON HOUSE, a residential center of men recovering from substance abuse is in need of a paper shredder to insure the confidentiality of their residents.

BALL, BATS, TENNIS RACQUETS, fishing equipment, board games for all ages, craft supplies and computer game discs would be put to good use at CHILDRENS HOME. These and more items would be used for recreation in this home for emotionally handicapped children

BASEBALL BATS, SOFTBALLS, GLOVES, CROQUET SETS WATER TOYS, BOARD GAMES for all ages and CRAFT SUPPLIES desperately sought by CHILDREN'S HOME OF DETROIT. CURTAIN for a theatre stage would also be greatly appreciated

Gretchen Uznis hits the slopes last season in the NASTAR Racing program for young skiers. Uznis is ranked seventh in the state of Michigan in the 10-12 age group after recording a personal-best handicap of 23 at Nubs Nob.

North

Coach Richard Didur wanted a good showing from his golf team in the league finals at Pine Valley and he got one.

The Norsemen won the inaugural MAC championship.

Four days later, the Norsemen carded a second place at the regionals behind medalist Brad Wilson's 73.

Tennis

By Link Bessert

It's another successful year for the netters. The team is unbeaten in league play and has a second-place finish to its credit in the regionals.

Soccer

The kickers have just about wrapped up the division title. With Lakeview and Brablec the only two league foes left, North looks to finish 9-0-1. Overall they are 9-4-2.

Local girl shines in NASTAR competition

Gretchen Uznis, of Grosse Pointe, recently picked up national recognition for her outstanding showing in the Coca-Cola Junior NASTAR racing program for young skiers.

Uznis, who competed in the 10-12 year-old category, placed seventh among Michigan skiers. She earned her season-best 23 handicap while racing at Nubs Nob.

"Gretchen can take great pride in being ranked seventh in Michigan in her age class. It's no small achievement for a young recreational racer," said NASTAR commissioner and former U.S. Ski Team coach Bob Beatlie. "Especially in this Olympic year, it's important to recognize and encourage the efforts of our promising athletes."

The Coca-Cola Junior NASTAR program ranks the top boys and girls in six age categories in 43 states. Racers are ranked according to their single best NASTAR handicap earned last season. Ranked racers in each state receive a certificate of accomplishment, a patch and are listed on the Coca-Cola Junior NASTAR State Rankings Poster.

Coca-Cola Junior NASTAR is America's largest youth recreational ski-racing program and is open to kids of all abilities.

The New Breed
Jaguar XJ6

The 1988 Jaguar XJ6. It is totally new. Yet it reflects the most superb qualities of its legendary forebears.

Its new, fuel injected, double overhead cam six cylinder engine has 24 valves for enhanced power and high-speed response. Patented "pendulum" isolation enhances the renowned ride of Jaguar's surefooted fully independent suspension.

Supple leather and polished burl walnut maintain the Jaguar tradition of handcrafted interior luxury. However, the new XJ6 also reflects the most enlightened engineering. For example: The new XJ6 incorporates seven microprocessors to regulate mechanical and driver information systems—including a trip computer and a Vehicle Condition Monitor, which continually checks 27 vehicle functions.

A most advanced species, the new XJ6 is also the most thoroughly proven sedan ever introduced by Jaguar. It is protected by an extensive 3 year/36,000 mile warranty, and Jaguar's new Service-On-Site<sup>SM</sup> Roadside Assistance Plan. We can provide details on this program and Jaguar's limited warranty. And we invite you to experience the evolution of a legendary species—the new breed Jaguar XJ6.

ENJOY TOMORROW. BUCKLE UP TODAY.

Dear Lochmoor Customer:

By this time you have received or will receive a letter from Lee Iacocca. This letter contains an invitation to your dealer's Private Invitation Sale, along with four cash-back certificates.

These certificates, good only on eligible vehicles, are for $250.00, $500.00, $750.00 & $1000.00, and may be used as a cash allowance toward down payment on the purchase or lease of one of these vehicles.

To make this offer even sweeter, Lochmoor Chrysler-Plymouth is enclosing its own check in the amount of $100.00 to be used in the same way as the factory cash back certificate.

This added incentive applies to any family member living in the same household whether you attend the Private Invitation Sale or not... but you must have the checks and cash-back certificates with you.

We strongly urge you to take advantage of this offer, as the whole thing ends on December 15th, 1987.

Sincerely,
Lee Russo
President

P.S. Lochmoor Chrysler-Plymouth will have all of its new car inventory specially discounted for this event.
