Grounds crew works all year maintaining estate

News Editor Imagine, if you will, the mountain of leaves you would collect from 62 acres of landscaped grounds peppered with a couple of hundred trees. Then you'd have to figure out what to do with all of those

That's just one of the landscaping details handled by Pat Victor, grounds superintendent of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford estate on Lakeshore. The 62 acres translate to nearly three million square feet of grounds that translate to a heap of leaves that can't be bagged and left at the curb.

The leaves are, in fact, composted and the grounds crew is now working a rich, black eight-year-old mixture in next year's flower beds.

The maintenance is year 'round and it keeps seven people employed full time, plus an extra two to six people in the summer. Most of the full-timers worked for Mrs. Ford.

"There's never a time when you can say you're caught up," Victor said.

And Victor, who has a degree in forestry, doesn't drive away from the job at the end of the day. He lives in the west wing of the gatehouse with his wife and

The grounds, planned by naturalist Jens Jensen in late 1920, are now being studied carefully by a team of landscape architects from University of Michigan and Michigan State University. Ford House trustees decided in March to turn to the original plans and attempt to remain as faithful as possible to Jensen's

The team is now documenting all of the woody plant material on the grounds. It's not known, for instance, how many trees are on the estate. The high-tech method consists of laser beamed from a tripod that surveys an area and feeds the data to a computer. The study is expected to be completed in June.

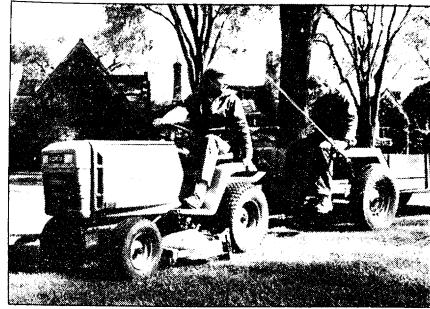

The result will be a blueprint that can be compared to the original drawings and from this will come a management plan.

"After they document everything, they will explain the different aspects of the grounds and give our docents the information," Victor said. "The group is also going to figure how to move people through the grounds and preserve it at the same time.

Victor said the original color scheme of blue, yellow and white will be developed over the next few years. The colors, he said, have been a major theme for the Fords in general. That means all of the flowers not within the theme will be replaced.

While it's obvious that there is a lot of work during the spring, summer and fall, there's also plenty to do in the winter. Besides snow removal, employees prune trees on nice days, "and on nasty days, we work on the equipment, Victor said. The crew repairs and maintains all of the equipment with the exception of major breakdowns. It's also a time for ordering materials, planning for the coming season and working on the budget.

Dorman said new rules from the Department of Social Services required that the children have more space, prompting some of the schools to hold the programs in gymnasiums.

Farms gives preliminary OK to proposed sub

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

Developer Hugo Higbie got city approval Monday night to go ahead with plans for subdividing his family's estate on the corner of Lakeshore and Moran. Higbie told the Grosse Pointe Farms council that he intends to divide the estate into 1.6 lots ranging from 17,902 square feet to 41,860 square feet. The size of the lots puts them in conformance with the Farms' new larger lot requirement.

The good news from the historical preservation standpoint is that Higbie said he is not bent on tearing down the house though he made no promises to keep it either. The Farms council is currently considering a preservation ordinance that would make it legally more difficult to demolish certain older houses. Higbie would not be bound by such an ordinance, however, because it has not yet been adopted.

"If in fact a buyer comes along - we're not insisting in any way that we'll demolish the house, Higbie said. "It's available to anyone who wants it. We recently repainted it... But we have to be realistic. It sits on a very valuable piece of property.'

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society leaped at Higbie's quasioffer to save the house. "The historical society would be interested in working with Mr. Higbie on a feasibility study for the reuse of the house," said society Vice President Patricia Colett. "A house in Evanston, Ill., was studied while it was in the hands of a developer and it was ultimately saved and developed into condominiums. We're delighted to find out there is still a possibility of keeping it.'

Councilman John Crowley put

himself on record as favoring a

Two large lots (128 feet by 264 feet and 144 feet by 288 feet) would face Lakeshore; smaller lots (ranging around 19,000 square feet) would surround the three cul-de-sacs and two lots would face Grosse Pointe Boule-

"We did a real careful study of the placement of the trees on the property," Higbie told the council. "In our judgment it would make a perfectly wonderful development.'

Mayor Joseph Fromm asked Higbie if he had considered cluster housing as was done at the Ford estate. "Our feeling at the moment is that the marketplace is in the mood for single family housing," Higbie answered. "I know the historical society is interested in converting (the house into condominiums). I frankly don't think the house is big enough, but the door is open."

Higbie said he hopes to keep the wall along Moran, but may cut it lower at the new street openings for increased visibility. He hedged on the wall, on sidewalks, on lighting and on whether to dedicate the streets, say-

The coordinators have organized a newsletter for parents, prepared a brochure and pamphlet on Latchkey and the caregiver's responsibilities, purchased new toys for the various programs and answered numerous questions at their homes.

Dorman said when they first took over the program, the salaries were scheduled to be for five four-hour days. Once they got started, the job took eight hours a day and more.

"We were told to take as much time as we need," Dorman said. "It took all the time we could give it.'

The kids seem to enjoy it. One of the students who overheard Dorman commenting on the program said, "We love it. We get to be with our friends."

Dorman noted that several of the toys recommended by the state have now been purchased. Most of the programs now have blocks, Legos, Construx, Play-Doh and many craft materials. At Poupard there is a small carpeted area with pillows in the rear of a classroom that is used by the Latchkey students.

Farms police accept retroactive contract

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

The police and the city of Grosse Pointe Farms have put the seal on a retroactive agreement on salary and fringe benefits that will carry the union through the end of December. Union and administration agree that the settlement clears the decks for completing negotiations on a combined public safety department.

The agreement, retroactive to January 1986, offered more to the police than the city had planned, according to City Clerk Richard Solak, but the council approved it Oct. 5. Union negotiator Cpl. Otto Glanert characterized the agreement as "just what was needed." He said the police would probably not have accepted less.

The main thing now holding up public safety discussion is the lack of an agreement with the firefighters. Both police and firefighters went through a mediation process on their contracts, but the firefighters refused to accept their package. They are now in arbitration, with everyone hoping to finish by the end of the year.

"We're all looking forward to resuming talks (on public safety)," Glanert said. "That's why we wanted to get the contracts current." He said the talks are on hold while the firefighters are in arbitration.

Firefighters' union negotiator Lt. Art Turner said they will stay on hold. "I won't discuss public safety while we're in arbitration," he said. "We have an agreement with the police that one side won't meet (about public safety) without the other side."

Turner said the contract was rejected because of provisions for the nine emergency medical technicians. EMTs in the other Grosse Pointes receive a lump sum payment on top of their salary, he said; EMTs in Grosse Pointe Farms do not. During mediation the city offered a 1 percent matching contribution to the firefighters' retirement accounts - amounting to about $300. But then the administration refused to make it retroactive, Turner said.

"I said then, 'if you had a chance going in, you just killed it," he said. "They said, 'okay, take us to arbitration.

"The city wants to play hardball. They all said 'if you want to get anything, you'll have to get it through arbitration."

Turner said the city has never been in any hurry to settle with the firefighters. "They just cancelled two more (arbitration meeting) days on us," he said. "It's been a stall tactic for 2-1/2

"I would take the contract, but I'm only one vote. The younger guys outvoted the older guys because of the EMTs.'

The public safety talks, which have dragged on for at least two years - and many years longer than that in concept form have been "a long and tedious process," Solak said.

Until summer, administration and unions were trying to carry on both sets of negotiations at once. In September, both departments went to a state mediator, who worked out a mutually satisfactory package. The majority of police union members accepted their package. The firefighters said no - even though their package was about 1 percent better than the police package, according to Solak.

Police received a boost in base pay for officers from the current $29,223 to $30,000 in the first

The major improvement was in pensions, according to Solak.

Police officers also asked for and received a 1 percent matching city contribution to their deferred compensation accounts - a match that command officers received a few years ago. There were also improvements in hospitalization benefits for re-

Sleeper issue seen possible in City voting

Plection campaigns tend to be quiet in the city of Grosse Pointe and this year's contests appear to be no exception. Mayor Lorenzo Browning is running unopposed for re-election, but while there is competition for the council, no major issues seem to have emerged for the Nov. 3 election.

However, there may be a sleeper, an unstated issue resulting from the City's practice of filling council vacancies with appointees who then run and are elected at the next municipal election. One result is that only one of the seven members of the present council, Arthur S. Fetters Jr., was originally elected to his post and the other six were appointees who ran and were elected.

The practice, whether simply a result of the coincidence of vacancies and elections or of intent at council self-perpetuation, comes into question this year with the filing of Myrna M. Smith as a challenger to the three incumbents, Fetters, John F. Youngblood and Susan Wheeler. Mrs. Smith was an unsuccessful candidate for appointment to a council vacancy three months ago when the job went to Mrs. Wheeler. Mrs. Smith says she still has a friendly feeling toward the mayor and council and wants to keep it that way. But the election will test whether the voters agree with her or with the council about her candidacy.

The incumbents say they are running as independents, and not as a slate, but endorse each other. Mrs. Smith says she is also running as an independent but is not supporting other candidates. However, she is not raising major issues either, and told the News she is all for keeping the City's quality of life, its outstanding services and its unique small-town atmosphere. She gets no argument from incumbents on those points.

Fetters, an independent manufacturers' representative who was first elected in 1971, is running for his fifth term. He sees no major issues in the campaign but says maintenance of municipal facilities, including the aging sewer system, has been a council concern, along with maintenance of the quality of city services and commercial areas. Youngblood, a lawyer appointed in August 1983, and elected that fall, echoes that view and adds that maintenance of the quality of the commercial environment not only attracts business but expands the tax base.

Mrs. Wheeler, a former teacher who has been active in community organizations and the schools, is cautious about policy commitments, perhaps because of her brief council experience. But she feels the city should make sure the City's housing, now 55 years old on the average, ages gracefully. She praises the City's Tree Commission for its tree improvement work.

Mrs. Smith, a Realtor and former teacher, feels her real estate background would be an asset to the council, especially on zoning problems, efforts to tighten certificate of occupancy requirements to assure proper maintenance and reassessing property where current valuations are out of kilter.

All four candidates want to preserve the quality of life in the City and the quality of its commercial establishments. When it comes to historic preservation, however, they support the idea but several raised questions about the maintenance of such properties and the payment of taxes on them. They also are unenthusiastic about the need for a district court in the Pointes because of the loss of local control. All feel taxes should be maintained at least at current levels unless the quality and level of services are threatened.

On the basis of its interviews with the candidates and a review of their qualifications and experience, the Grosse Pointe News believes City voters have a choice of four well-qualified candidates. We endorse the re-election of Fetters and Youngblood, but feel that Mrs. Wheeler's limited period of service on the council entitles her to no more than equal consideration with Mrs. Smith, in view of the latter's background and experience in business in the commun-ith three incumbents and two challengers in the field, the city of Grosse Pointe Farms is experiencing another competitive campaign for the four council seats to be filled Nov. 3.

Challenges in the Farms

The two challengers, Gregg Berendt and Paul D'Angelo, both executives with machine tool companies that supply the auto industry, make similar criticisms of the current council and city administration for failing to respond to the needs of Farms residents.

Berendt approves the council's actions on finances and taxes, but says the city is delinquent in handling people problems. He thinks the Farms needs sprucing up and that some facilities at Pier Park are making it an eyesore. He is concerned that recent commercial developments on the Hill may force more traffic into residential areas.

D'Angelo says the city needs better planning and he thinks residents could help establish priorities through the council's use of referendums and surveys to obtain public opinion on specific issues. He also calls for a better traffic plan, an ordinance to define strict minimum building maintenance requirements and tougher enforcement of certificate of occupancy regula-

The incumbents, Harry T. Echlin, Bruce M. Rockwell and Emil D. Berg, naturally take a more upbeat view of the Farms' administration than do the challengers. In general, they believe the Farms has planned well to improve the harbor at Pier Park, to attract new businesses to the Hill, to accommodate the traffic that will result from the Hill developments and the library expansion, and to meet other problems.

We agree with the challengers that the city administration has not always been responsive to the needs of Farm residents, but overall we think the Farms is still a well-run city. Furthermore, we believe the three incumbents seeking re-election have contributed much to that record. They also have impressive credentials.

Echlin, who is seeking his third foryear term, is a regional governmental affairs officer for Ford Motor Co. Rockwell, first elected to a two-year term four gars ago and re-elected in 1985, is a senior vice president of the First of Michigan Corp., an investment brokerage firm. And Emil Berg, appointed earlier this year to succeed the late James Dingeman on the council, is an attorney in private practice whose experience on the mayor's advisory committee goes back to 1974.

The Grosse Pointe News believes that all five contenders are well-qualified, but that the three incumbents deserve re-election on the basis of their background, experience and records in office. The News also endorses the election of Berendt to the vacancy created by the retirement of Mary-Anne Ghesquiere.

The choices in the Woods

xperience appears to be the key word in the competition for three council seats to be filled in the City of Grosse Pointe Woods on Nov. 3.

Three incumbents are running along with a veteran former council member who is trying to make a comeback. In addition, Mayor George Freeman, who has served 18 years as mayor and council member, is running unopposed for his fifth two-year term as mayor.

The regulation of day care homes and home occupations is perhaps the hottest issue among community residents, but has not come to the point of decision by the council. It is expected to act after the Planning Commission makes its recommenda-

In the meantime, the candidates appear to be more concerned about such perennial problems as traffic and parking, restoring the aging infrastructure, maintaining the community's excellent quality of life and preventing further erosion of local control by county, state and federal agencies.

In terms of service, challenger John Sabol is the senior candidate. He had served 12 years before his defeat in 1985 and now says he is ready to return with renewed vigor and more time for council business, because he will retire Jan. 1 from Chrysler's cost planning staff.

Among the incumbents, the veteran is Robert Novitke who has served 10 years and is running for a fourth term. An attorney, he seeks re-election to help continue present policies. He is proud of the Woods for its investment in improvement of its infrastructure. But he foresees major changes from the commercial development in St. Clair Shores and the expansion of St. John Hospital facilities on Mack Ave-

Rounding out the field of candidates are two men who are completing their first terms, Ted Bidigare, a division manager for SEMTA, and Paul Beaupre, secretarytreasurer of the Plum Brook Land Co. and general manager of its primary subsidiary. Plum Brook Golf Course.

Bidigare rates completion of park development, blight prevention, traffic control and regulation of day care homes as among the major problems. Beaupre, who took the lead in writing the minimum standard maintenance ordinance, wants to maintain the integrity, peace and tranquility of the community, but is concerned about loss of local control to other units of government and the lack of development of senior housing in the Pointes.

Without notable differences among the candidates, the News tends to support $_{\mbox{\scriptsize re-}}$ election of incumbents Novitke, Bidigare and Beaupre. However, Woods residents also will have to weigh carefully the experience and credentials of Sabol, who served on the council longer than any of the incumbents in the race until his 1985 defeat.

Eyesore

To the Editor:

Is the abandoned Pointe Plaza on Moross and Mack actually still there, or is it just a very realistic optical illusion?

Demolition was to be completed by the end of summer, 1987, yet, here it is October and every brick is still intact. It is, in an empty nutshell, ugly; the new building will be such a welcome improvement. This may sound demanding to you contractors who have done nothing on your job, but let us Grosse Pointe residents remind you: It is your job, but our eyesore.

Being deprived

To the Editor:

The current DSO situation is intolerable! We want our concerts again!

But the saddest thing DSO management has done is to shut down the Civic Symphony, for no known reason except to punish the lockedout DS0 players. The Detroit Civic Symphony Orchestra. funded by EXXON, is so that Detroit area young people thigh school and colleges will get the experience of playing in an excellent orchestra with superb leadership. It is especially for minority youngsters. The DSO supplies the director of the Civic, and when necessary, DSO members work with small groups of the musicians.

While all of us are deprived of the DSO currently. the youngsters of the Civic could be rehearsing and giving their fine concerts. Not only are they being deprived, we are depriving ourselves of future musicians-in-themaking.

Where is the discipline?

To the Editor: What a shame!

As former members of the Grosse Pointe Band and Orchestra Parents Club, we are appalled at the loss of bands in both high schools.

More letters on page 13A

Where is the discipline? And where is the protection that could have curbed the mischief preventing performance by some dedicated young musicians? And where were the schools that should have kept band work in the curriculum? A night for little devils

In just over a week, the ghosts and goblins will be prowling on the streets throughout the country in celebration of Halloween.

The sticky candy, the wads of bubble gum and the pillowcases to collect the loot bring back fond memories of it all, but other memories lie within a night that could spoil it all: Devil's Night.

Knowing I could not leave the house on the day before Halloween gave me even more incentive to crawl out the back door. My parents were supportive of most of the things I did, but the one night they always seemed to stay home was Devil's Night. I don't know if it was to keep me from "going over Steve's" or not, but either way, my time spent waxing windows, throwing streamers of toilet paper and soaping cars was quite limited.

It wasn't in accordance with some of the reins my parents strapped me with at the time, but looking back I can say I am truly thankful for the times they reprimanded me because of some ignorant decisions I made.

In junior high, some of my friends would have toilet paper. They always told me their parents gave it to them, but I knew better because they had it hidden under their coats. Anyway, at age 10 I had my first devilish experience and it is something I don't recommend doing.

I watched my parents pull out of the driveway on their way to dinner. Not wanting to be held prisoner by my brothers, I escaped out the back door and headed for the neighbor's newly built addition on the back of their house. As I leaped the fence and jerked my head from side to side looking for someone to catch me, I swiftly moved to the door wall on their addition. From under my jacket I pulled out a catsup bottle and squirted the window with what made Hunt's famous, scrambled back to my house and plopped on the couch.

I was laughing inside knowing full well I got away with my first escapade and boy, was I going to tell my buddies about it. Wrong. I didn't get away with it. The next morning, my neighbors got the last laugh as they watched me scrub the hardened catsup off the window. Later I learned that they watched me do it, but didn't want to interrupt my masterful display of a Picasso painted with catsup.

I didn't want to be a part of Devil's Night any longer. I had learned my lesson, so I thought, but the devil in me overruled the angel and I headed out one year later only to get caught soaping a car window. Needless to say, my nights on the town were even more limited and I do thank mom and dad for the time we spent at home. I didn't like getting caught so I decided to pack in my little red suit and pitchfork.

This year I hope I don't have to defend my house like others had to do to ward me off. Devil's Night is an evening for waxing, soaping or squirting catsup. It is doing something illegal and damaging to someone's property. I think I'm the first person who was called out on two strikes instead of three and I don't even want to think about the third strike.

I used to think my friends were cool for being able to get away with the majority of things they did, but I was fooled by them too. They would rave about how sneaky they have become and how they "painted Mrs. Jones house," and the sad part about it was that I used to envy some of them for the antics they pulled. But my parents made me see the light. I then decided that . throwing toilet paper into a tree or tossing a tomato at a window was the thing I didn't want to do. I didn't have to follow my friends just to be cool, so I didn't. I enjoyed Devil's Night with my parents and I hope they enjoyed it with me - their little devil.

I hope your pillow cases are filled with lots of goodies and plenty of gum this Halloween, but if you look into your sack and discover a catsup bottle, please don't give it to me.

Happy trick-or-treating!

Lost and found

Last week we ran a photo of two young boys and a small duck in our first section. The photo was developed by the Grosse Pointe Police Department after they found the camera, but didn't know who it belonged to.

Within hours after the photo appeared in the paper, the Sudney family of the Farms received a call from a neighbor, saying that their two boys were in the paper.

Tony Sudney, the owner of the camera, stopped in the police department to claim "his favorite camera."

The two boys in the photo were Sudney's sons, Roman and Dicky, with their pet duck, Donald. As it turns out, Donald is actually a Donna.

Sudney said he lost the camera a couple of months ago. He last remembers seeing the camera on his desk in the house, and had no idea how it got on the streets of the City.

Sudney's father-in-law, Richard Debo, stopped by our office to fill us in.

Well done shish kebabs

There was a fire at the Shish Kebab House in the Park around 7 p.m. Monday, Oct. 12.

There was only minor damage to the grill and the roof, and Park officials thought enough of the efforts by the men to give them a "well done" in reports.

Capt. William Furtaw said a grease fire started on the grill and quickly spread. Firefighters extinguished the blaze in a "textbook manner" within 15 minutes, according to the report.

AIDS forum

Family Life Education Council (FLEC) will continue its role as a leader in community service by addressing concerns about Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS). The FLEC Board of Directors is considering proposals to determine the most appropriate and effective manner in which the organization can become involved in AIDS prevention.

FLEC employees Shelley Dabick Sollars, AIDS education coordinator, and Marilyn Becker, Center Point program director, have received training offered by Michigan Department of Public Health - Special Office on AIDS Prevention. The first step of the FLEC program includes training volunteer phone counselors to assist callers by providing basic AIDS related information, as well as referrals to specialized services and organizations if indicated.

In addition, FLEC and the Grosse Pointe Ministerial Association are co-sponsoring a community forum - "Understanding AIDS," Monday, Oct. 26, 7:30 to 9 p.m. Guest speakers will be Dr. Lawrence Crane of Harper Grace Hospitals and Dr. Chandra Sekar of Detroit Receiving Hospital.

Held at Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church, the forum is open to the community. For more information, call 885-5222 or 885-3510.

Explaining the court

The Food and Friendship Club is part of the Services for Older Citizens, a non-profit umbrella organization which assists older citizens in Harper Woods and the five Grosse Pointes. More than 200 residents enjoy weekday luncheon programs that include special speakers, exercise instruction, movies and games.

In September, at the State Bar Association convention in Grand Rapids, Lungershausen's colleagues honored him as a Golden Legal Eagle, a title earned by 40 years as a member of the bar. He was one of 99 reaching the plateau in 1987.

At its winter commencement last January, the Detroit College of Law (of which Lungershausen himself is a graduate) took the unusual action of bestowing honorary doctorates on Lungershausen and fellow faculty member and Grosse Pointer Ralph Mc-

Attorney Gen. Edwin Meese also received an honorary degree at that commencement and the unflappable Lungershausen traded jokes with the nation's top legal officer as pickets marched outside the Rackham building, taking issue with the Reagan Administration on a wide range of topics.

Lungershausen's sense of humor has put him in the thick of good and bad joke-swapping, as Meese discovered. He's delighted to add to his repertoire and has been responsible for dinners getting cold on the table while he augmented over drinks.

Born in Mount Clemens in 1907, Lungershausen ("be sure to put the 's' in the middle," said Hugh Muntz of the Detroit Legal News; "Arnold's a bit ticklish about that") has been a special- versity of Michigan introduced ist in tax law and estate plan-

In many ways, he is a lawyer more by destiny than will. The son of a Mount Clemens physician, Lungershausen had intended to study medicine. But his father died when Lungershausen was in his teens and in the depths of the Depression, after undergraduate work at the University of Michigan, there was not enough money for medical school. He studied law nights at Detroit College of Law while working, and graduated with distinction near the top of his class.

After World War II began, Lungershausen decided the Navy was for him, but he was in his mid-30s by then, his eyesight was a problem and the government figured he was more important doing what he was doing, collecting taxes at the Internal Revenue Service.

He once did double-duty, serving a stint as manager of a golf course for a couple years as part of his duties in administering an estate. Golf course management was interesting, he said, but he was glad to get back to the fulltime practice of law. Friends say although he gets his clubs out at the most once a year, he's a formidable opponent on the links.

A fraternity brother from his undergraduate days at the UniLungershausen to a beautiful Ann Arbor librarian and harpsichordist, with whom he became quite smitten.

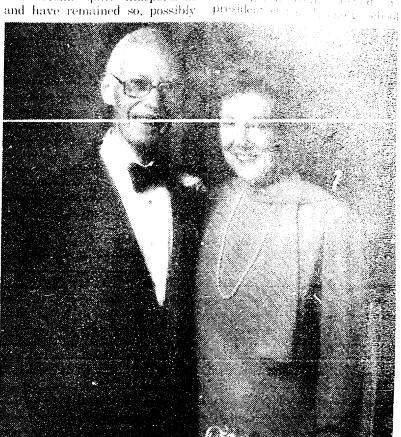

The young lawyer did not have a car which was up to this Detroit - Ann Arbor commuting courtship, but she did. He and Alice Manderbach were married in 1941

Since both were in their mid-30s by the time they wed, they had become quite independent one reason they have gotten PTA when his children were along so well.

They have three children: Gail Lungershausen, a refinisher and restorer of antique and special furniture in Traverse City; Jenny King, a free lance automo tive writer in Grosse Pointe, and Arnold Jr. (better known by the nickname "Sandy"), a specialist in microphotography and holography with Eastman Kodak in Rochester, N.Y.

"What a relief," she laughed. "We thought it was, well, maybe a grave marker!"

For most of his career, Lungershausen has specialized in taxes and estate planning, although it is said he files for an extension for his own forms every year. A significant part of his practice now is helping widows of old friends cope with their financial affairs, an obligation he takes very seriously. He is always available in time of need, always courtly and graceful, always the ultimate gentleman.

City election has no controversial issues this year

Staff Writer

Two incumbents, an appointee and a challenger will square off Tuesday, Nov. 3, for three seats on the Grosse Pointe City Council. Mayor Lorenzo "Red" Browning will be running unopposed for his second term as the city's highest elected official.

Finding ways to prevent serious eroding of an aging infrastructure is probably the biggest challenge facing the council. Most candidates agree that things are running smoothly in the city, which is slightly larger than one square mile, but add quickly that officials must maintain vigilance if the quality of services is to remain high in the face of escalating costs.

Arthur S. Fetters

Arthur S. Fetters

With 16 years service as a city of Grosse Pointe councilman, Arthur S. Fetters isn't the most senior elected official on the council.

Fetters, 56, is an independent manufacturer's representative for several furniture manufacturing firms, and is currently seeking a fifth term on the city council. His years of service are exceeded by both Mayor Lorenzo Browning and Councilman Robert Nugent.

"I'm running because I really enjoy the challenge," he said. "The city has a variety of needs and services it is obligated to provide. We only have so much income and I enjoy trying to make the two meet.'

Fetters, as do most of the candidates for the three open board seats, does not feel there are any major issues before the city at this time. He noted that two of the city's biggest concerns are uphill battle getting elected to maintain the character of the ture and continuing to provide quality city services without increasing taxes.

"Our sewers in many places are over 50 years," he said. "It's getting tired. We have a lot of mature trees which are much they were 50 years ago.'

The city has hired a firm to pany. inspect the sewers by television to determine the extent of the problems.

"We are trying to do this on a preventive maintenance basis, he said. "Let's head the Indians off at the pass."

He said it has been determined that there could be as much as $600,000 worth of repairs and maintenance done to the system, and that, says Fetters, is a big chunk out of a $5 million budget.

"Of course, not all of that has to be taken care of in one year, but again, those are only the problems we can see. There are things we can't see and problems we can't predict."

Continuing to provide the level of services the city now provides will be a real test in the years to come, says Fetters. The city is one of the few left that still provides backyard rubbish pickup, while other cities have gone to curbside pickup. Fetters said he feels that somewhere down the road, residents may be asked to pay higher taxes for this level of service.

He says he can sympathize with those who desire the concept of instituting an historic preservation ordinance throughout the Pointes, but doesn't feel it would be practical.

"Being against historic preservation would be like being against motherhood and apple pie," he said. "But, in many cases, the practicality of it just isn't there. The economics just don't make sense. It is unfortunate that the Ranger estate in our city could not survive the wrecker's ball. I hated to see the estate go, but there just was no practical way to save it."

Fetters said he has something to offer the community in which he has resided for 27 years.

"I do it because I enjoy it," he said. "I have given 16 years of service and I hope to continue in Going door-to-door, coupled with some newspaper advertising has been the extent of Smith's campaign so far. She said she has canvassed about one-third of the city, and plans on canvassing the rest before the election.

She said she would like to see the city tighten certificate of occupancy requirements. 'We must keep our inventory of houses in its best possible condition," she said. "When someone vacates a house, that's the time the city needs to come in and see those houses are brought up to code. I have had to call the city when I see this and tell them.'

Smith feels the elm tree prob-lem in the city should be monitored closely. She noted that in going door-to-door, people are concerned about losing the attle to Dutch Elm disease. She rould like to see a comprehense program instituted in the city

"I think the city is going a good job in maintaining the quality of its shopping districts," she said. "Jacobson's is a wonshopping area."

She said that in a city of one the city has right now. square mile, it is difficult to come up with major issues. She does feel that assessments have been "out of kilter" for many vears, and is glad the city is reassessing this year.

"I think we have outstanding city services," she said. "City employees are always friendly and easy to work with.'

Smith has no previous political experience, but she has worked on several campaigns, eluding her father's, Ralph Moreley, who was police chief, to commissioner and mayor in Blemingham.

Smith said she asked to get appointed to the city council after the death of Jeanette Duffield, but was not chosen. She niso made an unsuccessful bid for Republican precinct delegate.

"Things are friendly in the city, and I would like to see them stay that way," she said. "I want to maintain an accountability to the residents and preserve the small town atmosphere."

If elected, she said she would like to organize a meeting of the condominium and homeowner associations from throughout the city. She said there wouldn't have to be a specific agenda, but they could discuss a variety of concerns with city officials, which would be beneficial for both the homeowners and the

Wheeler was appointed to the council earlier this year after the death of Councilwoman Jeanette

Duffield. One of the biggest issues facing the council, Wheeler said, is the age of the city. Many of the home are 55 years and older, my first meeting of the council," she said. "I would want to be on the tree commission."

Providing quality services is important, Wheeler said, but she would adamantly oppose any tax increase to do so.

"There are things we can do to save money," she said. She pointed out the city saved money by converting the public safety dispatcher's job to a civilian position.'

Wheeler was not sure whether she would support a district court.

"I understand why some people want a district court," she said. "You would have to look at it in terms of all the Pointes. My mayor (Lorenzo Browning) is opposed to a district court, but it is something we will have to look

She feels the city administration has done a good job in providing whatever information it could to new businesses that wanted to locate in the city.

Wheeler has lived in the city for 12 years. She said she feels she will become a valuable asset to the community in time.

She doesn't feel crime is a major issue in the city. She said that more and more people are taking advantage of alarm systems, and become more cognizant of locking doors and protecting their property.

That has changed in the last 12 years," she said. "Crime is more on the minds of people than it was. I feel our public safety department is doing a good job in terms of keeping crime where it is."

Wheeler said she wants to serve her neighbors.

"I feel that this job is a lot like any job," she said. "I have a lot to learn. I have only been on the council for three months, and I have educated myself as best I can. I have tried to learn. I have both the interest and the time to devote to the city.

John F. Youngblood

Seeking his second full term as a Grosse Pointe councilman, John F. Youngblood said he's been blessed with both the ability and the time to give something back to his community.

G.P.N. 10/22/87 & 10/29/87

Youngblood, 46, was first appointed to the council to fill a vacancy in August 1983. He was then elected in November 1983.

An attorney, Youngblood said he first became acquainted with the local government when he was with a law firm that helped the city when it consolidated police and fire departments in the early 1970s.

"I get a lot of fulfillment from serving on the city council," Youngblood said. "It is not an all-consuming thing, and though I get a few calls at home from time to time, there are very few problems.'

A resident of the Grosse Pointes for the last 25 years, Youngblood moved to the city in Maintaining a good relationship with the merchants is important if the city is to remain financially sound, Youngblood said. He said he is pleased with the national chain stores that have moved into the Village recently, and is happy that Arbor Drugs will soon be open.

John F. Youngblood

"I like to see them here," he said. "I think it indicates the strength of our retail area."

One of the main issues facing the city, said Youngblood, is maintaining the quality of living. He points to the city's aging infrastructure, saying preventive maintenance is very important if the city is going to stay on top of such things as a 50-year-old sewer system.

"Maintaining our basic services is also very important," he said. "Our snow removal, rubbish and security - fire and po-I am never in favor of raising taxes, but to maintain the level of services it might be necessary one day."

Youngblood stressed there are other ways to cut costs. He noted the city made the dispatcher's job in the public safety department a civilian position rather than a police duty, which saved tax dollars.

"We do not plan on giving up a thing in the way of services," Youngblood said. "I wouldn't be surprised if we are able to maintain the quality of services we have now for a long time at current tax levels.'

Youngblood said he was opposed to a district court coming into the Pointes.

"As a citizen I like the municipal court," he said. "If someone shoplifts here, Stan Kazul is going to scare the hell out of them. It sends out the message that you just don't do that in Grosse Pointe.'

He added that as the smallest community in the Grosse Pointes, City residents would have little say in electing a judge.

"I like the Judge Roy Bean costs before they occur. approach. If you get in trouble, get in trouble somewhere else."

In summing up, Youngblood said he felt the people in the community think he's done a good job.

Where do you find am qualified to sit for four years police protection and services and to serve for another four, like you do in Grosse Pointe?" and I hope others see it that

Make a little boy happy

To the Editor:

I was hoping you could print the story in your newspaper. It would make a little boy very happy.

I am an amateur radio operator in Grosse Pointe Woods. One of my interests in the hobby is passing messages from one destination to another for my own enjoyment. It is known as traffic handling.

I'm an instructor (one of many) on the Maryland Stow Traffic Net, and we teach other radio operators the correct procedure in sending messages. In our monthly newsletter was the following story. I hope it could be printed.

A child in Scotland wants to break the Guiness Book of Records for receiving post-cards. He is 8 years old and terminally ill. He is registered with the Children's Wish Foundation. The record now stands at 35,000. Air mail postage to Scotland is 33 cents. His address is: Little Buddy, P.O. Box 76, Paisley Renfrewhire, Scotland, U.K.

Consider a park To the Editor:

(The writer requested that the following letter, written to Hugo Higbee, be published.)

Very honestly, I'm terribly disappointed to hear that your land is to be subdivided. It would be marvelous if Grosse Pointe Farms could afford to purchase your land for a park. We really have no park except for the waterfront area and boatwells.

I've walked through your property so many times. I've seen pheasants, innumerable birds, rabbits, raccoons and squirrels. It will be a shame to disturb these things. Incidentally thank you for the pleasure of those walks.

I think you should seriously pursue and consider the idea of a park. Of course, I do not mean to diminish the financial rewards due to you from your property. I have heard of communities that buy vacant land to preserve beautiful areas such as

Maryanne Harvey Grosse Pointe Farms

Vote yes

To the Editor:

The Board of Directors of the League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe has passed a resolution to support the two public library propositions which will be on the Nov. 3 ballot. As outlined in the program for expansion for the libraries, these propositions would:

1. Permit the Grosse Pointe School System to borrow a sum not exceeding $8,625,000 by issuing bonds; the proceeds of the bond issue would be used to erect, remodel, refurnish and reequip the three libraries operated by the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

2. Permit an increase of $1 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation in the operating millage on all taxable property in the school district for a period of four years; the revenues from this proposal would be used to meet operating expenses for the libraries.

The Grosse Pointe League of Women Voters' position on education supports "the concept of community educaiton." The board believes that providing adequate public library facilities and services falls within this position.

In arriving at the decision to support the two ballot proposals, the board considered the following data included in the Facilities Assessment report and building Program Statement prepared for the Grosse Pointe Board of Education by Osler/Milling Architects, Inc. of Ann Arbor and the Grosse Pointe Public Library Needs Assessment prepared by King Research Inc. of Rockville, Maryland:

1. There has been no expansion of the library facilities from 1953 to the present time.

2. The number of registered users of the library facilities has increased from 11,657 (25 percent of the population) in 1950-51 to 39,000 (67 percent of the population) in 1985-86.

3. Circulation has increased both in total items used by the community and on a per capita basis; i.e., the number of items used per person.

4. It has been necessary for the library to discard books in order to make room for new acquisitions.

5. The facilities do not conform to the State of Michigan barrier-free design rules; this makes it difficult for our handicapped to use the library.

6. In this technological age, electronic facilities are being integrated into many libraries — computers are available for library users, on-line catalog systems for the library collections are often used, link-ups between libraries are possible. The facilities of the Grosse Pointe libraries are currently inadequate to respond to and integrate these advances in technology.

These factors lead us to urge the citizens of the Grosse Pointe School District to vote yes on these proposals.

Inmates have taken over asylum

To the Editor:

The article in the Grosse Pointe News Oct. 1 on the elimination of the marching band program at the local high schools was received with shock and dismay by many of this community's households, particularly parents and supporters of former, present and (we hoped) future members of this highly valued part of the curriculum.

The tone of the article indicated that the culprit in this decision was the familiar cop-out of many administrators, faculty and parents—peer pressure.

Sorry, but that just doesn't wash. This attitude does not start with the kids; it is fostered from the top down—the administration, the Athletic Department in particular, the faculty and supporters of athletic programs. We have heard the music program referred to in derogatory terms by various faculty members, as if it were way down on the list of priorities. When the schools gauge the quality of school spirit by that salute to jockdom a.k.a. the pep rally, that tells it all.

What happens now to the music student who wants to play in the marching band at the college level? With no experience, he or she won't even be considered. What is wrong with having marching band as a requirement? Who claims it to be a hardship to do the extra work? It sounds like the inmates have taken over the asylum.

With this decision, the Grosse Pointe School System has sent a clear message to the community: We do not want cultural enrichment in our high schools.

Thomas and Jean Marsden Grosse Pointe Woods

Motivate better ideas

To the Editor:

Let us all help make our public libraries as good as possible!

Public libraries that are constantly improving in expressing truth and harmony may be the most significant means of correcting the religious-ethics, sociological-health, economic-productive work, and political-governmental problems that are rapidly expanding in seriousness today.

The extreme disarray in justice (i.e. the seeking of truth to fairly correct mistakenness or evil since evil intent and evil actions taken are merely displays of serious mistakenness) has been rapidly rising to disastrous levels and will continue to get good justice for oneself or society that each individual and society collectively must do good justice to all!

Now, I am specifically requesting that Grosse Pointe main library provide its electric time-clock and date stamper for such as patentable ideas can be more easily time-dated for the idea-generator's protection in case of a question of the true or first originator on this planet.

Why do I ask this? Because, on Saturday, Oct. 10, I was denied use of the main library's time-date stamping device and on Monday, Oct. 12, Dr. Charles D. Hanson confirmed his staff's attitude and action of denial.

Why isn't Dr. Hanson more concerned with helping motivate more better ideas in society? Is Dr. Hanson's present attitude of avoiding library materials and services that encourage and assist individuals or groups in the patent-copyrighttrademark process (the protection of good or better ideas) an attitude that generates a progressive-forward society, willing and able to compete or strive to be as good as one can be?

Please, think carefully! Thank you.

To the Editor:

To the Editor.

To the two "Grosse Pointe Woods Macho Men" in wet suits operating their red and blue jet ski crafts on the Milk River in the Grosse Pointe Woods Lakeshore Park on Monday evening on Oct. 5:

Your wake and reckless manner in which you were handling your craft could have and maybe did create damage to boats on both sides of Milk River.

Having the privilege of a park pass as a resident should not be taken for granted. The $1 you paid for use of the ramp while launching your craft from a dark blue Ford Bronco is a token cost and not a ticket to cause personal and public property damage or worst injury to innocent parties.

No wonder boat insurance liability rates keep going up. Name withheld by request

Grosse Pointe News News Five vie for four seats on Farms council

By Nancy Parmenter

Grosse Pointe Farms this year one, which goes to the lowest winning vote total, for two years. Three incumbents and two newcomers will try their luck. One current councilperson, Mary Anne Ghesquiere, has decided not to run again.

Most of the candidates expressed satisfaction with the way the city is run; one newcomer has charged that the city listens more to certain vested interests than to its own residents All said they would like to see further improvements in the park and all but one are concerned about traffic on the Hill once the current development projects are completed.

Following are profiles of the candidates who will appear on the ballot Nov. 3. Endorsements are on page 6A.

Berendt says he believes that people should get out of the wings and work in their community. "The Farms is a unique tlecy," Berg says. "It's my oblicommunity," he said. "The city is in good hands, but some of the people-oriented things disturb

He said he would like to see the area retain its neighborhood atmosphere and is opposed to the idea of a parking structure at Richard Place, for example.

"The Hill is beautiful," he said. "I'd like to keep it that way and make sure the people around it aren't adversely affected.'

Berendt said he favors the efforts of the newly formed beautification commission and would like to see Grosse Pointe Farms erect signs at the entrances to the city. He said he is also concerned about the car theft problem at the Moross and Mack shopping area, but sees few solutions because it is private prop-

"The city council's job is one of vision," he said. "What's going to be done tomorrow or in six months - heck, that's already been handled. We need to look down the road."

All of the Grosse Pointes should work together on the appearance of Mack, he said. "We don't have many streets in common. We could (for example) have a common ordinance on building styles."

But Berendt sees the Hill as the focal point right now because of the pending occupancy of the Standard Federal and Punch and Judy buildings and construction of the library. Berendt has been conducting a door-to-door campaign that he hopes will cover all of the Farms by the time of the election. He said residents have commented on traffic, speeding, teenagers hanging out at Friendly's on Mack, and about the Seven-

Traffic is a major issue in the Farms, one that is not likely to be resolved to everyone's satisfaction, Berg said. "The problem is mercurial. The remedies for one street negatively affect another street.'

Because residents are upset at the lack of action on traffic congestion, Berg said he would favor publishing a "white paper" on the subject and asking the Mayor's Advisory Committee to come up with a recommendation within 90 days.

The recommendation should take the form of choosing between immediate action without the intervention of the county road commission or waiting until the Hill projects are completed, Berg said. "There is an inability to predict driving patterns when the (Cottage Hospital) parking deck is completed," he said. "Does the common good dictate adopting temporary procedures?"

Other important issues are "preserving the brick and mortar" of the community and continuing to review the library construction. Berg said he was opposed to the variance that will allow the library to be built within a few feet of the Fisher Road sidewalk, but that he favors the project.

"The library and the Pier Park are the two public pearls of this community that we've got to enhance," he said.

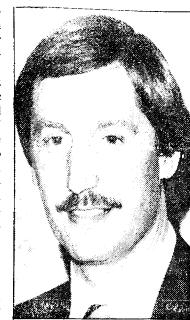

Berg said there are not major problems with the Farms municipal court. Concerns about staffing, backlog of cases and compensation for the judge have all been addressed by the judicial committee of which he is a member, he said. The council is expected to consider committee rec-

Berg said the city administration is willing to lend staff to the court until the new computer system is in place.

As to whether the Grosse Pointes should consider a district court system. Berg said he would need expert opinion. "I believe it would cost the city more, so why should we pay for it?

But Berg said it is impossible to know for sure whether a district court would cost the Farms more or less because of the accounting system, which, until three months ago did not separate revenue derived with and without court intervention. "Nobody knows whether the court operates in the black," he said. "Departments (within the city) are vying to get credit for the

Paul D'Angelo is running for the Grosse Pointe Farms council for the first time because he thinks the council should be more receptive to the residents. He said his experiences fighting for traffic abatement on Mac-Millan and McKinley showed him the problem.

the council from using mayor's committees, which he called a means of serving special interest groups rather than the residents.

D'Angelo said he would like to see the city spend more time planning, something he believes he is good at. "Everything I've ever brought to the council has been well-planned, well-thoughtout and well-illustrated," he

D'Angelo criticized the council for its inaction on traffic problems. He is a member of the citizens' traffic advisory committee and says it rarely meets. "We haven't been able to decide even to put in temporary measures," he said. "The Woods, which has similar problems, has at least tried some things. I wouldn't be against closing some streets if the neighbors wanted it.'

He said Mack needs attention too. "The street needs a better plan," D'Angelo said. "The city

Asked about a district court plan, D'Angelo said it could provide economies of scale. "We could also look at consolidating other public services or open it up to bidding," he said. "We shouldn't necessarily do it, but we should look at it -- that's the type of creativity we're not getting out of the current administration and council. We should be launching this kind of creative investigation, not just filling a pothole when somebody complains.

Maintaining old buildings should also be a concern, D'-Angelo said. "Legislating home anaintenance would at least give the city a tool against flagrant violators." He said he would favor an ordinance similar to the one in the Woods that allows the city to ticket homeowners with peeling paint or loose gutters.

The Pier Park needs improvement as well, D'Angelo said. He favors allowing boaters to sleep on their boats to make the park more accessible to residents.

In regard to the historic preservation ordinance under discussion in the Farms, D'Angelo said he is concerned about the freedom of property owners to do what they want to their homes.

D'Angelo is employed as sales manager for Newcor/Bay City Division. He is automotive sales manager for the Midwest.

"I like the way the city's being run and I don't want it to change," Echlin said.

Echlin said he wants the city to make some major improvements in the harbor at the Pier Park. He is a member of a committee that is working on a plan boat wells in the old harbor.

"Last year the old harbor was underutilized," Echlin said. "The problem is marketable wells."

Harry Echlin

Wells in the old harbor are generally too small for boats popular today. The committee proposes to change the configuration of the wells to increase the size.

"There are probably 150 people (on the waiting list) ready to move in right away," Echlin

The city also has on the drawing board plans to redo the park pool gutters and filtration system. Echlin said that project is likely to be financed by a bond

"We want to get the place spiffed up," he said. "The park is one of our biggest assets.'

Echlin said he is not worried about traffic on the Hill. "I expect the end result to be some-

He said he believes the problems on the Farms court will regional government affairs work themselves out. "The court needs extra space, but the new building addition should straighten that out," he said. "The court can function if the person involved is willing to work to make it function.'

Continuing issues in the Farms include maintaining city services without increasing city taxes and proceeding with the formation of a public safety department, Echlin said. "I think we can do it," he said, referring to public safety. "Any new officers being hired are crosstrained. It's still in negotiations that are somewhat delicate. Eventually it will be much more efficient."

Echlin said the proposed ordinance on historic preservation "has a lot of merit, but you can't dictate what people can or can't do. You can review and discuss to see if you can reach an accommodation." He said he would not favor an ordinance that actually prevented an owner from having his say on his property.

Mack Avenue needs attention, according to Echlin, but "I can't see the city taking an active role in developing (the corner).

Bruce Rockwell

Bruce Rockwell has completed two two-year terms on the Grosse Pointe Farms city council. He is a senior vice president at the investment banking firm of First of Michigan.

"I'm running because I love it," he said. "I've never missed a meeting. There's always frustration in anything you do, but when you bring something to fruition, it's very rewarding.

The issues as Rockwell sees them are the expansion of the Hill, improvement of the Mack and Moross area and the aging of the infrastructure.

"The sidewalks and streets are being done in an orderly fashhe said. "But there are ion," some hidden things - I'm always cognizant of the potential for another Kerby Road-type col-

Rockwell said the city has been building up a contingency fund for sewer replacement that now amounts to about $800,000.

"Mack-Moross is on everybody's mind," he said. "I'd like to see something developed there. I don't know if it's large enough for senior citizens' housing - that would be good."

Rockwell said housing for senior citizens is a need everywhere in the Pointes. "It's a problem of limited land," he said. "The only thing that comes close is Windemere, and that's far out of the reach of most people's pocketbooks. We should be looking for buildings to adapt.'

Traffic is not the problem it was a year ago, he said. City action in hiring two additional police officers was a big help. "It has lessened the concern of the residents," he said, "but when the library and the Punch and the Bologna buildings are occupied, new patterns may develop."

Rockwell said the Farms municipal court backlog has been reduced with the help of a visiting judge. Meeting two days a month is sufficient, he said. "It's easier to expand the hours than the number of days," he said.

He said there has been no new interest in a district court in the Farms. "We feel it's in our best interests to maintain a munici-.pal court.'

THE CUP OF LEARNING IS RUNNING DRY.

The Cup of Learning is Running Dry at your Grosse Pointe Public Libraries.

There has been no substantive physical change in your Central Library since it was donated to the community in 1952. The Woods and Park Libraries also have seen no improvements.

Originally designed to acommodate 60,000 volumes, the Central Library has been filled to capacity for over 10 years. This not only means that storage of books has been restricted but that for many years the library has had to operate essentially as a "no growth" collection. New technology must be accommodated but there is no room.

Our library has become inadequate to provide the services that Grosse Pointers deserve. We don't like that fact, but two studies conducted in 1986, King Research's Needs Assessment Report and Osler/Milling's Facilities Assessment Report, concluded that the present facilities are inadequate and that library needs will continue to grow and more space will be required to meet future needs.

That's why we believe a library building program is critical to the continuing enhancement of the value and quality of our community.

All of us who have signed our names here want to keep the cup of learning brimming with books, ideas, and knowledge.

heritage for the enjoyment of future generations will be the focus of a forum sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Historical Society Wednesday, Oct. 28. "Why Preservation and How" will look at the reasons for saving the surroundings of yesterday and today.

Speakers will examine the need to preserve our heritage and show slides of some of Grosse Pointe's treasures, looking at how they fit in a statewide context. Preservation improves our quality of life and can provide economic benefits as well, according to Patricia Colett of the historical society.

The forum will also look at preservation legislation. "There are alternatives to choose from," Colett said. "Legislation can be at South High School.

Preserving the community's tailored to the specific needs of a community." More than 50 Michigan communities already have some form of preservation legislation, she said.

Possible economic benefits of preservation include a 20 percent tax credit for the rehabilitation of an income-producing certified historical structure. The permanent creation of a preservation easement for a building or view can result in a charitable deduction for the owner.

It is important to educate the community to gather support for preservation, according to Colett. "It builds community pride," she said. "Apathy is the greatest enemy of preservation.'

The forum will be held at 7:30 p.m., Oct. 28, in the auditorium

Woods fields four candidates for three council seats

Four candidates will compete for three seats on the Grosse Pointe Woods council Nov. 3. Three are incumbents, the fourth has 12 years of council experience, ending two years ago. Mayor George Freeman is running unopposed for his fifth term.

Common threads run through the thoughts of all the candidates. All believe that traffic congestion and insufficient parking are chronic problems, difficult - but not impossible - to solve. All are concerned about maintaining the quality of the commercial strip on Mack Ave-

All recognize that home day care is currently a sensitive issue, but none see it as the most over-riding.

Following are profiles of the candidates. Endorsements of the contenders for the council seats are on page 6A.

Paul Beaupre

Paul Beaupre

Paul Beaupre is running for his second term on the Grosse Pointe Woods city council. He is secretary-treasurer of the Plum said. He said he favors retaining Brook Land Co. and general the local control of a municipal iary, Plum Brook Golf Course.

The Woods is well run and actually faces few issues, according to Beaupre. "The hottest topic on everybody's mind now is the daycare homes," he said. "We seem to be the test city for the Pointes."

There probably will be an amendment to the ordinance, Beaupre said. He wants to make sure there are appropriate restrictions and controls on number of children and hours of operation built into the ordinance. He also said he would favor treating day care on a case-bycase basis rather than via ordinance, to provide even better control

Maintaining the "integrity, peace and tranquility" of the community and preventing further erosion of local control are primary issues for Beaupre. He expressed concern over a recent federal district court decision holding the Woods soliciting ordinance invalid because it prohibits soliciting after dark. "We have residents who don't like to answer their door after dark," he said. "It's in the best interest of our citizens not to change that ordinance."

Beaupre was the catalyst for the Woods minimum standard maintenance ordinance two years ago. So far, four people have been warned, Beaupre said, and three of them have cleaned up their homes.

"It was a struggle getting it accepted," he said. "People were concerned about the rights of property owners, but this is for the general good of the commun-

In response to a question about a possible district court, Beaupre said he had heard talk of it, which led him to conclude that some people now feel it is inevitable. "The fact that there are so many people running for judge in the Pointes seems to show they expect it to come," he

Two perennial problems in the Woods are traffic and parking. The city has taken a variety of steps to help with business parking: looking for property to buy, rezoning, the development of offstreet parking, changing times on meters, working with traffic patterns. "We're doing everything we can," Beaupre said.

Traffic will not necessarily be a major problem with coming development at Moross and Mack, he said. "Anything you can do to Seven and Mack will be an improvement. We don't know for sure it will cause traffic problems. (Pointe Plaza) should be a real shot in the arm for surrounding communities."

As for future development along Mack, Beaupre said he would like to see it remain in the private sector. "The less the city as a governmental unit is involved, the better," he said. He supports the city involvement in the current Mack Avenue study because other development at Nine and Seven Mile roads could have an impact on Woods ordinances governing items like cluster housing and height of build-

Beaupre also said he would favor the development of some housing for senior citizens. "People who want to stay in the community have no alternatives," he said. "It's time for the Grosse Pointes collectively to start looking at senior housing - but not housing subsidized by city dol-

"I think I've done a good job many, he said." and learned a lot about how the Traffic is probably overall the city works," he said. "But there biggest and longest-term prob-

Among the items still to work on are completion of the park development and Woods traffic problems. Day care and home occupations are currently pressing issues as well.

"Day care is a sensitive issue, but not necessarily the most critical one," Bidigare said. He said he would rank development and its problems at Seven Mile and

Ted Bidigare

Mack as more important in the long run.

Bidigare said the daycare decision should be made by the council, which he predicted will also review the whole spectrum of home occupations.

"I'm real sympathetic to the problem," he said. "Kids are the most important resource we have.'

Home occupations will have to be controlled through licensing or other restrictions, Bidigare said. "I certainly think they'll continue, but they'll have to be vices licensing, is probably too lem facing the Woods, according to Bidigare. Rebuilding the Eight Mile Road bridge did not solve the situation there, and there continues to be too large a volume on several other streets as well.

The city will have to monitor development at the corner of Moross and Mack. The Pointe Plaza, while providing an attractive anchor for that end of town, will also increase already-congested traffic, Bidigare said. It is also important for the city to stay alert for signs of blight, especially along Mack.

"Blight prevention is one of our major accomplishments," he said. "But we need to keep looking - and to be aware of what the competition has to offer." He said the Woods must be prepared for the Seven and Nine Mile developments, not necessarily to compete in kind, but to avoid being left in the dust. Bidigare said he is not running as part of a slate. "I have good rapport with the other council members," he said. "We may not always agree, but we know where everybody stands."

Asked about a conversion to a Pointes-wide district court, a question that has come up with some candidates, Bidigare said it has not been talked about in the Woods. "I'm not familiar with that discussion," he said. "I would have questions about a district court. It would generate traffic - I wouldn't want it located in the Woods."

Robert Novitke

Robert Novitke

Robert Novitke has served 10 years on the Grosse Pointe Woods council and is seeking a fourth term. He is an attorney with offices in Macomb County.

Novitke says he is running because he wants to see current policies continued. The Woods faces many of the same problems seen in the rest of the Pointes: aging infrastructure, creeping blight, and problems that come from the outside and need a joint approach to deal with - especially traffic.

He is proud of the way the Woods has stepped up to the infrastructure concern. The city floated a 10-year, $13 million bond to repair sewers and streets; the schedule was later speeded up to three years. "We have a better infrastructure than any of the Pointes except the Shores — and that's a newer community," he said.

The Pointes, especially the Woods, stand on the brink of major change, Novitke predicted. The Woods stretch of Mack will be anchored at one end of the planned Pointe Plaza, the office and retail projec to be constructed by St. John Hospital. At the other end will be the mammoth marina, park, office and retail project in St. Clair Shores.

"It will have a tremendous impact on Grosse Pointe Woods," Novitke said. "The Pointe Plaza will be a barrier to blight, but it will also cause more traffic problems. I envision Mack as a really different place.

The Woods also has inadequate off-street parking, he said. years and I'm ready to serve court, Sabol said it would be too The council has worked on the problem, but has had difficulties said. in bringing anything to fruit.

fied some sites and is trying to ning at Chrysler Corp. and exacquire them, he said, without identifying them.

"I'm opposed to condemnation, except as a last resort," he said. "It's too expensive and not practical, and it raises concerns about loss of property value...I think most of the parking should go on Mack. It costs more, but it doesn't infringe on residents and it puts the parking where it should be."

Asked about the possibility of forming a district court in place of the current system of municipal courts. Novitke said it would have pros and cons. The Woods court operates in the black, he said, but in spite of the successful local court and the prospect of loss of local control, the district court system is inevitable.

"The municipal courts will die," he predicted. "The only question is when - and where the building will be located." He said the ideal location would be at Seven and Mack where Sears and A.L. Price now stand.

As for the home occupations issue now facing the Woods, Novitke said the council should look at the entire range of occupations. "But we shouldn't modify the ordinance to allow for any of them; they should be handled on a case-by-case basis. And each one should be decided only after a public hearing so we can hear from the neighbors."

John Sabol

Iohn Sabol

John Sabol served 12 years on the Grosse Pointe Woods council businesses. "The (Woods) council before his defeat two years ago. should check into how they're "I've been watching from the doing it," he said. other side of the fence for two again with increased vigor," he

Sabol serves as supervisor of Currently, the council has identicost estimating and cost plan-pects to take an early retirement this year, which will give him more time to devote to the city.

The issues haven't changed very much since he was on the council, Sabol said. Traffic and parking still loom. He approves of recent council attempts to restrict St. John Hospital helicopter ambulances from flying over the houses of nearby residents.

Sabol said the Woods will have to take a look at all home occupations in connection with the discussion of home day care. "As lifestyles change, there's a need to review and change zoning ordinances to satisfy the majority of the community," he said. "But exceptional traffic could be a detriment to the quality of life for the neighbors.'

Sabol would not go so far as to say he supports home day care, but indicated he would favor consideration of ordinances to regulate and control it. One thing such an ordinance should include, he said, is a provision allowing the city to keep track of whether operators have a current state license. He said he objects to the fact that the state doesn't seem to police home day care very well, but would not want the city to get involved in that aspect.

But the city does need to address the continuing traffic problem. "We went through one-way streets and barricades and culde-sacs and traffic diverters," Sabol said. "None of them worked. The majority of citizens aren't satisfied with the traffic, but they aren't satisfied with the remedies either.

"I think the council should get involved in serious discussions with the surrounding communities to see what can be worked

A traffic problem that could be more difficult to solve is the growing one at Mack and Moross, where the Pointe Plaza development will be located. Sabol said the city of Detroit is not as responsive as the surrounding suburbs.

The city has also worked on parking problems. Many efforts to buy property along Mack have run into subdivision restrictions, according to Sabol.

"The cost per parking space was also exorbitant," he said. But, he added, the city of St. Clair Shores has been developing parking behind Mack Avenue

Asked if he favors a district expensive and would result in loss of local control. "The communities haven't had any difficulty operating their courts — have expressed concern that the Pointe Plaza development - favored by the Woods as an upgrade of the area - will nevertheless bring increased traffic to the Mack-Moross area, traffic that could spill down the residential side streets.

Freeman declined to take a stand on day care and other home occupations currently under examination in the city.

"The council has the responsibility of making a decision," he said. "I've received a ton of mail on both sides.'

He said he could see both sides of the question. "We must re-

He and other council members member that we are a residential community - but times are changing and we have to recognize that. I don't vote with my heart; I vote with my head and I will do what is best for Grosse Pointe Woods.'

Freeman said that in the interest of fairness, the council should look at the whole range of home occupations.

One of the things that makes the Woods work is the practice of using commissions to study problems, Freeman said. "I've always pushed having commissions. They have been a great asset. The council doesn't have time to delve into everything.

Today the island serves as a wild complement to the more closely manicured portions of the estate.

Gardening — on a grand scale

The sign designating the house as a historic site says: Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Company for many years, and his wife, Eleanor Clay, completed this 87-acre estate in 1927. Architect Albert Kahn derived the design from precedents in Cotswold, England, and many of the building materials, including the staircase, paneling, and fireplaces, were brought from old English homes. Noted landscape architect Jens Jensen developed the grounds. The Fords were collectors of art and antiques, and benefactors of local and national institutions. Edsel was instrumental in the creation of the Ford Foundation in 1936. He died here on May 26, 1943. His wife, who lived here until her death on Oct. 19, 1976, endowed the property and directed it be maintained for public use.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat Magnet' Diet Pill Guarantees Fast Weight Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)-An amazing new weight loss pill called 'fat-magnet' has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

No Dieting—Eat Normally

There has never been anything like it before. It is a totally new major medical breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patent pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body

Then, all that trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body because it cannot be digested

Within 2 days you will notice a change in the color of your stool as the fat particles are being eliminated.

"Pills Do All the Work" According to the doctors, the fat

Grosse Pointe in cooperation with the Easter Seal Society, presented a scoliosis workshop at Parcells Middle School Oct. 7. The purpose of the workshop is to instruct and train health council delegates and volunteers to screen middle school students during the coming year.

Scoliosis, a structural spinal curvature, is a growth disorder that presents itself most often during the middle school years. Between 10 and 13, students of ten experience a growth spurt, making a comprehensive screening at this time in their lives extremely important.

Presenting the slide presentation workshop at Parcells was Betty Wright, P.A., coordinator from Henry Ford Hospital. Merilyn Martin, coordinator from the East Seal Society, was also in attendance, Jan Dahl, chairman of the Scoliosis Program for Health Education Council, organized the workshop.

Fresh ingredients keep customers smiling at Francesca's Cucina

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Beginning shortly before noon, customers begin lining up in front of the deli counter of Francesca's Cucina in Giglio's Market. Garlic and basil permeate the area surrounding the en-closed counter. Every time the counter door opens, the customers get a little more antsy. They order everthing from spaghetti with meat sauce to roasted peppers to eggplant parmesan.

Francesca Giglio weighs their orders before ladling on some extra sauce. She'll tell customers what ingredients go into her homemade cooking, knowing full well they'll have a difficult time reproducing her style of cooking. She couldn't give them an exact recipe anyway - she doesn't use

Aldo and Francesca Giglio have been Grosse Pointe Shores residents for seven years. Their store on Gratiot just across from Saratoga Hospital near Eight Mile Road in Detroit has been there for 18 years. Aldo's family has been in the Italian market

We're sorry

In last week's story on Grosse Pointe's resale shops, a business owner was quoted in a reference to some dealers and appraisers. The quote was not intended to indict the profession and the Grosse Pointe News regrets if any such conclusions were reached.

business since 1926 when his father had a store on Mitchell and Illinois in Detroit.

Long a haven for those looking for Italian foods, quality meats and sausages and a variety of pastas in a friendly atmosphere, Giglio's has a strong name and loyal customers. Without any advertising until last month, Francesca Giglio started selling her prepared dishes on June 18.

"It's been word-of-mouth," she said. "It has been very good."

Unless the food tastes good to her or her family, she doesn't sell it. She has four boys, David, 23, Bruno, 17, a quarterback at North, and two little ones, Frank, 9, and Aldo, 8. And they like to eat.

Giglio makes everything by

"When they were babies, I would cook just like I do now, but I would put everything in the blender," she said. "I'd make them veal shanks with carrots and peas, and just put it in the blender. "Little Frank really likes my pasta aglio oilo (spaghetti with oil and butter). They like their pasta every day. They eat pasta first, then their meat, two or three vegetables and a

Her family is her test market. If they don't like or she doesn't like it, it doesn't get put out on

The secret to her cooking, if there is just one, is to use fresh ingredients. She uses fresh parsley, basil, sage and garlic. If she is running low on chicken breasts for her primavera or baked Italian-style breaded chicken breast, she asks the butcher to split some and she bakes more - on the spot.

A customer calls back to the butcher in Italian. The butcher shouts back, again in Italian. and the customer chuckles and walks over to the bowls of olives which are set out. He looks them over carefully, grabs a couple of cracked green ones, cleans the meat and puts the pit in a small container.

'Sure we lose a little on the olives," Francesca Giglio said. "But what are you going to do. People won't like it if we had the olives behind the counter. They like to try the olives."

There are numerous regular customers who come to the store just for Francesca's cooking.

"I get asked to cook for restaurants all the time," she said. "I have had marriage proposals and men ask me if I could teach their wives to cook. One that really made me laugh was a 60year-old woman who came in, tried my cooking and asked if I could give her lessons."

A tall, extremely trim milkman orders a quart of Francesca's lentil soup.

"Oh, no," he says to Aldo who's behind the counter, 'yea have to heat this up.'

That's a quart of soun! "And don't forget the spoon," Francesca Giglio shows a number of homemade Italian dishes she created. She began selling homemade foods from her family's Detroit store in June.

Rick Miriani, the delivery man from St. Clair Shores said. "Lentil soup. Got to have it three, maybe four times a week. Food for the gods. Being on the road all the time, you get tired of coney islands. This is the real stuff."

He said he'll spoon down the entire quart for lunch. He may take a half-pound of risi bisi, a baked rice dish, as well.

"A quart of soup and a halfpound of risi bisi, and that holds you over to 9 o'clock."

Depending on how busy she gets, Francesca Giglio may make some of her dishes three or four times a day. Because there are no additives or preservatives in her meals, they have to keep a close eye on inventory. Shelf life is only one or two days, so she doesn't make large portions unless she has orders.

"So far I haven't been able to pinpoint what is going to sell on a particular day," she said. "This summer I did sell a lot of away that not everyone can eat shrimp, so I began making it with chicken breast. I always serve it hot to my family, but I found people take it cold and serve it as a salad before the main course."

Business has been so good that the Giglios plan on expanding Francesca's kitchen. The preparation room and stove area will be expanded in the rear of the store and the area where the food is displayed will also be en-

She never had a lesson and she doesn't follow a recipe, so where did she learn to cook?

"My mother," she said. "She never really said this is how you do it. I just helped. There were 10 kids in our family, and you just learn how to cook.'

Aldo Giglio is a little worried, but not about the business. He said that they have to keep their prices down. The store is in an area where there are many blue collar workers and prices have to the primavera. I found out right be reasonable. Ravioli with meat or cheese, with sauce, is $2.98, and cooked sausage is $3.98 a pound. He said the mark-up leaves a good profit margin. He's not worried about any of that he's worried about a promise to make the North football team and coaching staff a spaghetti

"Can you imagine making spaghetti for 60 people who are all about six-foot and weigh 200 pounds?" he asked.

"I told them that if they did good this year, I would make them dinner," Francesca said. "Later this year I will."

Lake level

Lake St. Clair's water level at the end of September was about 20 inches below what it was one year ago and about four inches below one month ago. At the end of September, the lake elevation was at 575.02 feet above the mean water level at Father Point, Quebec.

The September monthly mean level was about 18 inches above the long-term average. This level was about 13 inches below the all-time September monthly mean high, which was set in 1986, and about 46 inches above the all-time September monthly mean low, which was set in

For mariners, the end of September level was 40 inches above chart datum.

The six-month forecast of levels for Lake St. Clair shows that the lake is expected to be above its long-term average level during the next six months. The forecast shows that at the end of October, Lake St. Clair will be about five inches below what it was at the end of September.

The lake is expected to continue its seasonal decline into February. At the end of March, 1988, levels are expected to be about 12 inches below what they were at the same time in 1987. The March mean would be above the long-term average level for that month but 23 inches below the all-time high mean for March, which was set in 1986.

'Visiting Family' volunteers make life easier for kids at the Children's Home of Detroit

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk

olunteerism. To some, it means putting in a few hours a week stuffing envelopes or carrying out a similar task and going home with the nice, warm feeling that comes from having helped your fellow man. And that's fine for some.

What Katie Leiser has in mind is a bit more involved than that, however.

Leiser, coordinator of the Foster Care, Independent Living and Visiting Family programs at the Children's Home of Detroit on Cook Road in the Woods, is looking for adults with some practical life experiences who are patient enough to deal with children whose life experiences haven't been as practical ... or pleasant.

"There's a waiting list of kids in the Visiting Family Program. I guess that the problem is that volunteers have to make a minimum commitment of two monthly visits for one year. That's tough for a lot of people to do," Leiser said. "I've seen some potential volunteers lose a lot of their eagerness when they find out what kind of commitment they have to make.

"But that one-year commitment is essential. These kids have experienced many letdowns in life and we want to make sure that that doesn't happen in this program."

The Visiting Family Program is used for those children on the Children's Home campus who have limited family contact. Most of them have families that they will return to, but for whatever reason are separated from those families during their stay at the Home. The kids in the ily or individual, Leiser added. larly with Leiser and the child's program are usually boys between 7 and 14 who come from all types of backgrounds and from all over the metro area.

They've come into the Children's Home system on a voluntary basis, many of them with behavioral, academic and/or truancy problems. Many of them come to the Home by way of a psychiatric hospital, which has often replaced a chaotic home ated with the Big Brothers. The atmosphere with a sense of structure and stability which is carried on when they reach the Children's Home. On average, the children remain in the system for a period of six months to two years.

"This setting is again very routine," Leiser said. "Their days are very structured, they attend school and in general, know what they are going to be doing pretty much every hour of the day."

The Visiting Family Program offers the children a welcome and much-needed - break from that routine ... when they're ready for it. "First of all, the child has to want it. Then, the parent must agree to it. Then we look for characteristics in the kids that will match up pretty well with the volunteers. The kids should be able to do some give and take with the volunteers, to be able to relate somewhat to people.

"But volunteers have to be able to understand that these kids haven't always had the best experiences with adults. The volunteers should be patient and able to wait for some response from the kids," Leiser said.

The children tend to be guarded and are not going to easily trust their volunteer fam-

The typical volunteer is an adult 18 to 25. Leiser said She uses the term "Big Brothers" when advertising for volunteers because it best describes what she needs; the Home is not affili-

Leiser is also quick to add that the volunteer-child relationship is not a disciplinary one. "It's social. It's an opportunity for the kids to break with their structured routine, to get off campus

"The matching of interests is also very important," Leiser said. "You wouldn't place a gregarious volunteer with a quieter child who likes to watch TV all day." The volunteer meets regu-

> "The focus is on just being together. It isn't necessary that the volunteer spends a lot of money . . . it's time that's important," she said.

Overnight visits are possible on rare special occasions. And volunteers should realize that there is a span of time between when they apply and when they begin visiting the child.

If volunteers are willing to make the commitment, they won't find an obvious, immediate reward. It's more of a gradual satisfaction that one is making a difference, however small, in someone else's life, Leiser said.

"First of all, it could be a lot of fun for a volunteer to do the kinds of things that kids enjoy doing. It's also kind of exciting to provide a child with new experiences. And yes, it's nice to be able to see that little spark in a child when you come to pick him

"But we're realistic with the volunteers. Sometimes that doesn't happen or it takes a while. But when and if it does, it's worth it."

"Parents — A Child's First Reading Teachers," was sponsored by Aid Association for Lutherans Branch 3219 and presented by Shirley Danz, a reading specialist and chairman of the church's preschool committee.

ULS grabs 8th title; South's string gets cut

Martin vs. Frazier: What a battle!

Welcome to Wimbledon. Now entering the center court is Dawn Martin of Univercity Liggett School and Amy Frazier from Rochester Adams.

Two of tennis' finest athletes squared off in a regular-season match that could be a preview of the future Wimbledon champi-

Martin, the nation's No. 4 ranked 16and-under tennis player, welcomed Frazier, the 18-and-under national hard-court champion, to the tennis courts and put on a fine display of the net game.

Although the Minnesota Twins took the World Series out of Detroit. Martin, 16, and Frazier, 15, brought back a fall classic for everyone to see. As the crowd quietly filled the stands, Martin and Frazier took warmup shots at one another. Friends since childhood, Frazier and Martin met for the first time on a high school court and entertained me in my first glimpse at Wimbledon - other than from my couch in front of the television.

The tension was higher for the fans than it was for the players. As play got under way and the balls began to get smacked from end to end, the fans acted like they had more at stake than these two fine tennis players. Points were banged out and even between points, the crowd remained still, seldom clapped and for the most part, had their mouths open and eyes wide the entire time

Although Frazier, considered the number one junior player in the country, took the first set 6-1, Martin used several vicious backhands, which would have made Kirk Gibson look even worse against left-handers, to even the match at one set apiece with a 6-0 win.

The first two sets were not close in score, but each player felt the other out like prize fighters in the ring. In the third and final set, the clash of Frazier vs. Martin had finally culminated. This was it. You know, now or never, winner take all. The final round in a battle of the fittest. They had to shove their friendship aside for the next 40 minutes. No more friends at this moment.

Frazier drew first blood as she peppered out to a stunning 2-1 lead. But the deliberation of Martin got her back into the swing of things as she took the next two games to go up 3-2. Each fighter used excellent crossing shots to leave the opponent flatfooted. It was a typical fight to keep the back off the mat as the match rode on each

Pressure cooker

With every serve the muscles tightened and the pressure mounted. But resilience dominated as neither player was about to be second-best. Returning the blistering shots was like trying to catch a superball after throwing it at a brick wall. Martin retained the lead 4-3 in a match that saw two machines, built in different years, trying to force the other to blow a gasket. However, in this showdown of two nationally ranked players, nothing was going to bust.

The match wore on for some two hours but neither player showed fatigue. Quickness and precision of shots never tapered off as the two champions banged on. Whatever was left in these two players became apparent as the chance of winning or losing, drew closer, Both athletes' arms seemed to be propelled by an unending store of energy. They kept the fans on the edge of their seats as the pounding shots grew in importance. The crowd remained still as Martin and Frazier tried to deliver the knockout punch. Frazier scooted back into a 5.4 lead in the final stanza, but Marim was not done. She was going to prove, not that she had to, to the crowd why she was number four in the nation's 16-andunder slot. She dazzled fans and sports writers alike with her persistence and good humor. She knew that her opponent had dealt her a blow that put her on the ropes. Martin delivered seven serves in the final five numbers before bowing to a girl she attends Red Wing games with, 6-4.

At the end of the masterful display of tennis. Martin and Frazier had given the crowd its money's worth. Nobody went home unhappy, not even Martin. Both athletes had responded to the pressures of tennis only the best can handle. Their professional career may be strides away, but for the two nationally ranked prep stars, they showed character and bolstered the world

Who knows? Maybe the next time they shake hands at the end of a tennis match, they will be professional friends in the middle of Wimbledon.

While one dynasty was pulled out from under Grosse Pointe South's feet, another one is being built at University Liggett

School. The Lady Knights of ULS took six of the seven flights in Class C-D to capture their eighth consecutive state tennis title. Meanwhile, at Midland, the Blue Devils of South High, who had rambled to 11 straight Class A titles, watched their reign fall as they scored 14, fifth-place points.

In his first year as girls' coach, Bob Wood, who has coached boys' tennis for 23 years at ULS, ranked this championship as one of the closest, yet exciting in

"I think the girls would say this one was very exciting," he said. "The score was a lot closer than the final outcome as four of the seven final matches went to three sets

At one point, ULS trailed in every final match except two and the possibility of scoring 27 championship points seemed farfetched.

"If that trailing in the matches) would have held up we would have lost it," said Wood. "But, the girls really played well in order to win.

On the other side of the fence rests South coach Stephanie Prychitko, whose team didn't celebrate a state title for the first time in 11 years.

"When we started the season we really didn't know what we were going to have," she said. "But as the girls improved, winning our 12th straight title became a possibility.'

But, Rochester Adams had other plans as they now wear the tennis crown with 21 points.

teams so I wouldn't say this year the field was any tougher, but more balanced," said Prychitko. "In the past we've been fortunate to have depth and experience, but this year we just didn't have the depth to collect a lot of points. The pressure for both ULS and South to remain in the state's elite grows in conjunction with winning. Both coaches know they mentor successful schools, but always being on top has different effects on the players. "The pressure begins to build and build as we continue to win and every year it gets tougher," said Wood. "This year was no exception, but there is no doubt in my mind that our schedule helped us immensely in preparing for the tough matches.

Trying to win another state title has its pressures, but the

"Every year you get tough girls and I didn't really talk about it," said Prychitko. "The pressure is with everyone who plays in the state matches. We just went there to do the best we could and that's all we did."

ULS finished with an 8-1 record, four invitational wins and their eighth regional win in a row. South was 8-3 overall, won their 14th straight Eastern Michigan League title and 13th consecutive regional champion-

ULS, who also won state titles in 1974 and 1978, has six individual state champions aboard its championship bus. Dawn Martin (No. 1 singles) has tied a state record for winning her third consecutive state title and Elena Hunt (No. 2 singles) netted her third straight title as well to go with her undefeated (26-0) season. Laura Rizzo joined in the banner year with her first title at No. 4 singles, and Lesley MacLeod and Lexie Crain wrapped their title up at No. 1 doubles. Shirley Kim and Lynne Connor (No. 2 doubles) and Ali Frederick and Lynn Sinkel (No. 3 doubles) also joined the title ranks for the first time.

"Our only loss was to Ann Arbor Pioneer (4-3) and we beat Rochester Adams 5-2 and East Grand Rapids (Class B champions) 6-1, so I don't think there is any doubt we are the number one team in the state regardless of class.'

For South, Kathy Wachter (No. 2 singles) and Ellen Mayer (No. 3 singles) advanced to the semifinals as did the doubles teams of Amy Hathaway/ Cindy Herman (No. 2) and Mary Strabel/ Vicky Morreale (No. 3).

"I asked the girls to always give 100 percent and that's it,' said Prychitko. "That's all I can ask. If there are better teams, then we have to accept that."

"This was a remarkable season," said Wood. "This is the best girls team we've ever had here at ULS. These girls should be very proud of their accomplishments.'

As for South, who Prychitko said had a good year, they will try to lay the base in hopes of building yet another dynasty.

"The consecutive wins are over, but we'll just try to start building another one next year.'

South gets beat

The Grosse Pointe South Blue Devils' soccer team was tagged with its only loss of the year, 3-1 by De-LaSalle High the state's No.

3 team. South, who won the E.M.L. and holds a record of 12-1-1, was beaten Oct. 19 in the first round of the state district playoffs.

South's only goal came from Mike Disser. According to coach John Case, the game was "the best the team has ever played."

North wins 3-2

In first-round action in the state districts, the Norsemen soccer team beat East Detroit 3.2 in what Coach Guido Regelbrugge called a war. Goals were scored by Brian Metry, Chris Caldwell and a fluke goal from East Detroit made the difference for North.

Farewell for now!

One of the traditional rites of autumn, if you can spare the time and travel expense, is attendance at the largest in the water boat show in the United States in Annapolis, Maryland; affectionately called The Annapolis Boat Show.

This show has become so large and so well known that it now attracts people from all over the country.

Major manufacturers of both sailboats and related equipment congregate at the City Harbor for five days each fall. The sailing public is shown the newest and latest nautical paraphernalia and gets to rub elbows with sailing notables.

Tristan Jones was autographing books and telling stories and Jim Dixon was there with his boat "Eye Opener." Factory teams of everything from sailboards to self-steering, explained their product and answered questions. This is the one place in the country where you can usually get an answer to a knotty question or a creative solution to a stubborn problem. This year, the United States Sailboat Show, as it is formally referred to, hosted over 350 sailboats from all over the world (in the water) and another 200 onshore. There were display and exhibit tents that overflowed with the accourrements of sailing, as well as related services and publications.

The Annapolis Boat Show is so spectacular that it even draws spectators to watch the boats being moved into and out of the show. The boats are so tightly shoehorned into the City Dock, that untangling the lines and vacating is a show in itself.

The town takes on a festive air and just rolls with the punches as the sailing "gang" decends. The saloons and restaurants fill beyond capacity, but nobody seems to mind. It really is an escape and, for many, the last hurrah of the season because most boaters must return to home and lay their boats up for the winter.

I too must do that. It is now time to wrap up this column for the winter. Writing it has been a pleasure, but harsh winds will soon blow and snow will soon surround us. Our season is over. I bid you farewell for now and look forward to next spring when the ice leaves our lakes and the boats come out from under their protective winter covers. I am going to settle in front of the fireplace and take the winter to read over the mountain of material that I picked up at the boat shows.

See you in the spring!

Against Anchor Bay, South piled up a 35-0 lead at halftime on touchdown runs of 16, seven, four, three and three yards by Rice. Rice ran the ball nine times for 55 yards, and then like the other starters, rested the second half.

"We built up a lead that gave us the chance to play a lot of kids," said Rice. "At halftime everyone in the locker room was excited because they knew we were going to play everyone. The starters were excited as well as the guys who don't play often."

South got their final two points on a muffed snap on a punt that sailed out of the Anchor Bay end zone.

"We had great field position," Rice said. "We didn't have to cover more than 50 yards to score in the first half."

The shoutout was South's third of the year as the defense continues to improve. "We're playing solid defense," said Rice. "We installed some new things this year and the kids have adjusted really well." With three interceptions at Anchor Bay, the Blue Devils tied a school record for 19 interceptions in a season. Marcus Wysocki picked off his sixth of the season, and Mike Calcaterra and John Verlinden grabbed one each.

South will play its final league game Saturday and then hosts crosstown rival Grosse Pointe North on Oct. 31 at 1 p.m.

Norsemen earn share of league crown

By Rob Fulton

Sports Editor For the sixth time in as many years, the Norsemen football team has put a championship trophy into the showcase.

North, 5-2 overall and 3-1 in the White Division of the Macomb Area Conference, used a 34-0 win over Lake Shore to bump themselves into a threeway tie for the division crown with Cousino and Romeo.

"The team is very excited and feels very good about the win," said Coach Frank Sumbera. "Our goal was to win the first league championship of the new division and we did. I am real happy about that.'

Lake Shore, who is still looking for their first win of the year, was not as strong as the Norsemen and that opened the door for Sumbera to unload the bench.

"They weren't the strongest opponent in the world, but they gave us the chance to play a lot of underclassmen," he said. "It gave the kids the opportunity to perform and we all really enjoyed the fact they got to play. They work hard too and it's nice to get them the chance to play."

Jay Tobias, who has accumulated over 700 yards on the season, put North on top early with a 1-yard run after Jim De Yonker recovered a fumble for the Norsemen. On their next possession, Bruno Giglio, who passed for 55 yards, hooked up with Chuck Thomas on a 41-yard touchdown strike. The extra point failed and the Norsemen were up 13-0 early in the second quarter.

Karl Schultz, who led the defensive attack for North with 14 tackles and a fumble recovery, picked off a Lake Shore pass and rambled 41 yards to push the lead to 21.0 after a two-point conversion.

"Karl played a strong game," said Sumbera. "He has done the job all season long." Helping him out on defense were Marc deManigold with 11 tackles, Dave VanDale with nine tackles and Chuck Schultz had eight tackles at linebacker.

The Norsemen held Lake Shore to 159 total yards.

Jerome Guest promptly fell on a Lake Shore fumble for North, which led to a 61- yard scoring drive; capped off by a Tobias run from 28 yards out to close the first half. It was Tobias' ninth touchdown of the season.

In the third quarter and North up 28-0, sophomore Scott Bernhardt tossed his first varsity pass of his career and it landed some 47 yards later in the hands of Marty Pochmara for a North touchdown.

North will host Brablec Saturday, Oct. 24 at 1 p.m. It will be the final home game of the season for the Norsemen as they honor their parents.

According to the results of study by researchers at the Stanford University School of Medicine, runners more than 50 years old had less physical disability than non-runners the same age and were generally more healthy. The runners had better cardiovascular firmess, weighed less and visited physicians less frequently. They missed only an average of 1.5 days of work because of illness each year, compared to non-runners who missed almost three times as many at 4.4 days. This difference was even more striking in women with approximately two missed days for runners and 11 for non-runners. The runners in this study ran an average of 27 miles a week and had been running at that rate for an average of 11 years. While they did visit their physicians less frequently, one-third of the visits made were for running related injuries. This information was reported by Dr. Nancy Lane, a researcher at the Stanford Arthritis Center. The good news reported in a study a year ago on a subgroup is that a clinical instructor found runners had greater bone density than the non-runners and there was no evidence to link running with the development of osteoar-

Which vegetables supply calcium? How much calcium is too much? Which exercise program is best for preventing osteoporosis? When should I start to worry about the cal-

Calcium is a mineral. The recommended dietary allowance is 800 milligrams for males and females. Calcium is obtained from milk, cheese, sardines, salmon, dark-green vegetables, and dried legumes. We need calcium for bone and tooth formation, blood clotting and nerve transmission, and a deficiency will result in stunted growth, rickets, osteoporosis and convulsions. It is the most abundant mineral in the body. However, studies report that about 25 percent of all females in the United States consume less than 300 milligrams of calcium per day and as a result, the body draws upon its calcium reserve in the bone to restore the deficit. If this imbalance is prolonged, osteoporosis eventually sets

Health and exercise gain importance with age

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

Good eating habits and a proper exercise program are essential in providing yourself with a physically fit body, but just because the years start to accumulate doesn't mean change is in order.

According to Davis Sabo, director of cardiac rehabilitation at St. John Hospital, persons over the age of 40 interested in remaining fit should maintain a healthy diet and deliberate exercise program. For those over 40 just starting out, he recommends a visit to the doctor.

"People over 40 tend to be less active than younger individuals," he said. "But, the diet and exercise should remain the same whether 4 or 40 years old. If a starting an exercise routine, they body: the heart.

"A general rule is to shoot for 70-85 percent of the heart rate,' said Sabo. "But, if the person is feeling pain from trying too hard, they should back off and shoot for a lower percentage until they feel comfortable. Then they can shoot for the higher percentage."

In order for the aerobic exercises to work, a person over 40 must use smart eating habits as well. According to Beth Naber, manager of clinical dietetics at St. John Hospital, individuals should follow four guidelines

Sabo recommends, to get the full when trying to remain, or trying to become healthier.

> 1) Eat a variety of foods. Included are the food groups of dairy, fruits and vegetables, protein sources and whole grains.

2) Maintain a desirable weight.

3) Reduce total fat, saturated fat and cholesterol. Should be no more than over 30 percent of the total calorie intake for a day. Cholesterol should be limited to 100 grams per 1,000 calories.

4) Increase fiber in the diet.

The healthy eating habits, along with the proper ability to exercise, should help individuals over 40 remain fit, or become fit. Either way, it is recommended you eat well and exercise 20-30 minutes a day, four times a

Mary Smart The heart: You can't tick without it

In the last 10 years, the words "diet" and "exercise" have become deeply embedded into modern vocabulary. Both diet and exercises are great ways of building your heart into a stronger muscle and keeping blood vessels from narrowing. If the heart is not in good working condition the rest of the body suffers. To better understand this remarkable little pump, try this activity. Make a fist with one hand, flip it open and shut at a rate of 70 times a minute. Be sure you squeeze your fist tightly as your heart must do if no leakage is to occur. After keeping this exercise up for several minutes, you can greatly appreciate your heart and be able to realize how important it is that your heart is in the best possible shape.

The heart is a four-chambered hollow muscle, about the size and shape of a fist, that provides the pressure to pump the blood throughout the body's transport system of arteries and veins. Amazingly, this small organ beats approximately 100,000 times a day, and is capable of pump. ing about 2,100 gallons of oxygen-rich blood throughout over 700,000 miles of blood vessels. Even though the heart holds oxygen-rich blood in its chambers, it cannot draw upon this oxygen for its fuel. The heart must receive its oxygen supply from its own blood vessels. This fuel is in constant demand because the heart utilizes 80 percent of the oxygen supply made available to it. So you can see what a problem it would cause if one of the heart's oxygen-supplying blood vessels were clogged.

Heart-related disease

It is estimated that "twenty-seven million Americans have some form of heart and blood vessel disease." Atherosclerosis, (clogging of the arteries) and arteriosclerosis, (hardening of the arteries) are the major causes of heart

As the arteries start to become clogged, the heart must work harder to pump the same amount of blood through a smaller opening; in the same length of time. The result is usually high blood pressure. The arteries begin to lose their elasticity and become hard, thus the term, "hardening of the arteries." However, arterio and atherosclerosis are diseases that occur over a period of many years. When an artery's diameter is cut down 75 percent or more, the hearts supply of oxygen is somewhat reduced. The fuel shortage can cause a feeling similar to a heart attack, but on a smaller scale. This pain is known as angina and can be an early warning signal of heart disease.

Because everyone does not experience angina, arterioand atherosclerosis can combine without one's knowledge until an artery is completely blocked off. A section of the heart is then totally without its fuel supply and dies from lack of oxygen; thus a heart attack occurs.

Risk factors

Awareness is probably the most important step in preventing a heart attack. By learning the risk factors and putting that knowledge to work, you may save yourself from a heart attack.

If you are over weight, losing those extra pounds will not only help your heart, but can also help eliminate other risk factors. High blood pressure, diabetes and elevated cholesterol levels are frequently associated with obesity, and are often alleviated to some extent by a weight loss. Realize, that for every extra pound you put on your body, you also add an extra 200 to 1,000 miles of blood vessels to feed the new tissue, which places additional strain on your heart.

Other factors that are detrimental to your heart are smoking and lack of exercise. Even though some risk factors cannot be eliminated, such as age, and genetic tendencies that include a family history of cholesterol problems or diabetes, obesity, smoking and lack of exercise are within your power to change. And risk factors such as diabetes, elevated cholesterol levels, and stressful lifestyles can be effectively dealt with; if they can't be totally eliminated.

Dietary influence

It would be easier to prevent heart disease than to deal with its effects. Many things are beginning to point to a proper diet as a possible solution to this problem.

Evidence indicates that both types of sclerosis can be effectively dealt with by returning to a diet free of highly processed and refined food. Substitution for these foods should come in the form of whole grains, fresh fruits and vegetables, lean meats, such as fish, chicken and lean beef that has been trimmed of excess fat. Safflower, corn and cottonseed oils are all good choices for use in cooking.

The U.S. Dietary Goals provide an excellent guide for reducing heart disease and improving all-around good health.

The U.S. Dietary Goals

1) Consume a wide variety

2) Maintain ideal weight. 3) Avoid large amounts of fats, saturated fat and cholesterol. 4) Eat foods that contain adequate complex carbohydrates, fiber and natural-occuring carbohydrates. 5) Avoid excess sugar.

6) Avoid large quantities of sodium.

7) If you drink alcoholic beverages, do so in modera-

October 22, 1987 Entertainment 'Princess Bride': Is fairy tale with twist

By Michael Chapp

Special Writer
"The Princess Bride" is for anyone who loves self-reflective cinema. And for anyone who enioys fairy tales - albeit with a twist - this is more than just another movie. It's a filmic journey into the recesses of both imagination and funny bone.

Much like "The Neverending Story" from a few years back, "Bride" has its footings in the contemporary world. A youngster is sick in bed, and his grandfather (Peter Falk) comes to visit, bearing the gift of literature. The kid agrees to let his grandpa read him the book, as long as the kissing parts of the story are held to a minimum.

Fair enough. From there, the child in the film and the child in all viewers are propelled to a world where fair maidens profess their endless love for simple peasant boys, where brave men prince tries to extend his reign true love," he replies, "only deand where miracles really can

"Bride" is the story of the quintessential princess, Buttercup (Robin Wright), and her undying love for the gallant Wesley (Cary Elwes). Between them is the scheming Prince Humperdink (Chris Sarandon), who wants Buttercup for his bride. The only consolation throughout their difficulties is "true love," which, the story tells us, is strong enough to overcome any problem.

Twice in the story, Wesley dies. When he reappears to Buttercup after his first absence, he asks why she did not wait for "Well, you were...dead," fight for their honor, where a she says. "Death cannot stop lay it."

The film is packed with wonderful dialogue like that. More than once, viewers find themselves buying into the idyllic concepts the movie expounds. A fairy tale is a fairy tale, but it's still nice to dream.

Where "Bride" goes beyond the call of duty, though, is in its satirical mirror. Frequently, just as things are getting interesting in the world of make-believe, we switch back to reality, where the boy is becoming increasingly enamored with the story. His reactions reflect the reactions of viewers, and a wonderful bond is established between character and audience.

Though "Bride" is a thinking man's fairy tale by nature, there is abundant humor to be found here, too. Not slap-you-in-the-face humor, but understated, subtle humor — the kind of stuff that is communicated in one line of dialogue or in a character's reaction to something going on. Indeed, this is the kind of humor that makes for the most satisfying laughs, because viewers feel as if they're privy to an inside joke.

Director Rob Reiner is on a roll. Quickly establishing himself as one of the most reliable directors in Hollywood, he continues to earn the respect of critics and paying moviegoers alike. His previous two films were "The Sure Thing," an honest comedy about teenage relationships and the strain that peer pressure puts on them, and "Stand By Me," which explored growing up through the eyes of four inseparable boys.

"The Princess Bride" again affirms the quality of Reiner's visions. One gets the sense that this director - like few others working today - could take just about any subject and pull out a few laughs and a lesson. His work is paying off. Maybe "Bride" is a personal statement from Reiner.

For him, dreams really can come true.

Diane Keaton shines in 'Baby Boom'

Special Writer In the comedy satire, "Baby

Boom," dynamic J.C. Wiatt (Diane Kenton) learns that dressing for success is one thing. Taping diapers on baby is quite another.

J.C. is a career woman with a capital C. Her goal is a partnership in a high-powered New York management consultant firm. She has what it takes - an MBA, drive, efficiency, toughness and finally the opportu-

An offer she can't resist comes with some warnings: The hours will be long, the work demanding and there will be almost no time for personal interests.

That's fine with J.C. She wants the top spot and never mind that the boys in the boardroom refer to her as the Dragon Lady.

But something happens on the way to the executive office. A distant cousin wills her Baby Elizabeth.

Elizabeth is cute and winsome, but she just doesn't fit into J.C.'s life plan, a fact that is soon made evident.

Tucking Elizabeth under her arm like a briefcase, J.C. hurries off to an important business lunch in a posh hotel. On her way in, she deposits the baby in the cloak room. Elizabeth will have none of that and soon her cries echo through the dining room, effectively bringing the meeting to an end.

J.C.'s next stop is an adoption agency. Parents are found, but when J.C. gets a look at them, she realizes that this is not the answer. She will care for the child herself.

When she confronts her live-in boyfriend with the decision, however, he grabs his briefcase and leaves. When she is transferred from her big account because she can no longer devote all of her time to her job, she quits and moves to a farm in Vermont with her little charge. There she

The Missing LINC

Linking individuals to Needs in the Community is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to coordinate needs with resources. This is accomplished by placing goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of Metropolitan Detroit charitable agencies. Operating since 1971, LINC is proud of the accomplishments it has made and strives to increase its resource base. If you have recyclable items, no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100 with your donation. KEEP IT

Keep Our National Symbol Alive And Free.

The last passenger pigeon died in 1914. The bald eagle mustn't face the same future.

We can keep these magnificent birds alive and free. Learn to identify the eagle. Never approach an eagle's nest. Volunteer to help your state conservation agency protect eagle habitat. And remember, it's against the law to kill eagles and other birds of prey.

The National Wildlife Federation is working to save the bald eagle, too. The Federation conducts and supports research on eagles, identifies prime eagle habitat and offers a $500 reward for information that helps convict anyone who kills an eagle. Help save the bald eagle. Support the National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, NW, Washington, DC 20036-2266.

You are invited to attend one of two free introductory sessions of Weight No More on Monday, Oct 26, or Thursday, Oct. 29 at Cottage Hospital in Grosse Pointe.

The sessions are held in the Conference Center, located on the main level of the hospital, from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

At the introductory sessions, a registered dietician outlines this successful weight loss program. Those who decide to enroll in the seven-week course lose from two

Learn to say "no" to high calo- to three pounds per week - the amount of weight loss that can be expected from a nutritionally sound program. But, more importantly, they keep this weight off and continue to lose additional pounds when following the good nutrition practices learned in the classes.

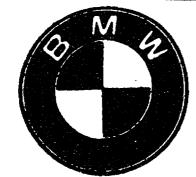

It is possible to lose as much as 20 pounds in the seven weeks of classes; although the instructor stresses the importance of long-term maintenance over rapid weight loss. The success of each individual depends on his or her own particular motivation and level of activity.

To encourage Weight No More graduates to maintain or continue to lose weight after the classes have ended, a free, informal support group now meets the second Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the Conference Room on the fourth floor of the hospital.

Whether you need to lose five or 55 pounds, the program can help you shed weight and inches without starving or gambling with your physical or mental health. For more information, attend one of the free introductory sessions of Weight No More on Oct. 26 or 29

EVOLUTION OF THE SPECIES

The New Breed Jaguar XJ6

The 1988 Jaguar XI6. Like its forebears, its sleek form is taut and well-muscled. Yet it faces the wind with still greater aerodynamic efficiency.

True to Jaguar tradition, its new fuel injected six cylinder engine has double overhead cams. However, the added sophistication of 24 valves further enhances power and response. Inside, the new XJ6 artfully blends the classic splendor of supple leather and fine wood, with the most advanced computer-age engineering. The 1988 Jaguar XJ6. It is totally new, yet it reflects the finest traits of its forebears. It marks the evolution of a legendary species. It's little wonder that upon previewing it in Europe, CAR magazine called it "the best sedan in the world."
