North quiz bowl team hopes for second perfect season

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Three countries border Mont Blanc. Name them. If you cut the top off a cone, you are left with a smaller cone and what other geometric figure? What was the prehistoric link between the dinosaur and the earliest bird? Tegucigalpa is the capital of what country?

A group of 10 Grosse Pointe North students from all grades gather at school at 7 a.m. two days a week to answer these and dozens of questions like them.

The Grosse Pointe North Academic Quiz Bowl team, coordinated by librarian Scott Roberts, will have held its first meet by the time this is in print, and the team will likely be on its way to a second consecutive undefeated season in the Macomb Area Conference Quiz Bowl competition.

This year's team consists of eight boys and two girls. They represent all four classes at North and some of the best minds.

Steve Greening, 14, a freshman, said he likes to concentrate on literature and mythology. He doesn't do a lot of extra studying for the team, but he does do a lot of reading.

"I learn something at each meeting," Greening said. "I like the competition and I like to see what I know about different issues."

Roberts, a first-year coach, said he has basically the same interest that Greening

"After they completed the season last year, the team wanted to meet the faculty," Roberts said. "I was lucky enough to be asked to participate and I enjoyed it. I like to be certain of what I know, and I like to learn new things."

There's no specific way the students

train for the competitions. A company produces questions for the meets, and North buys lists of questions from them. There is no guarantee, however, that the questions will be asked in competitions. Roberts says he tries to get the students used to competitive situations they will face at meets, to practice answering the way they will be required and to pay attention to the news and current events.

"I just told them this morning to listen to National Public Radio news broadcasts in the morning and afternoon," Roberts said.

Erick Trickey, 14, a sophomore, can answer a question on just about any topic with amazing speed. He loves to compete in quiz bowl.

'I like to prove to myself what I know," he said.

Greening answered the Tegucigalpa question (Honduras) without hesitation. "I had a friend who lived in Honduras. Capitals are my specialty."

Roberts said the questions aren't of the Trivial Pursuit variety, which he said are more general, rather they are more academically oriented.

"There are a lot of tough questions," Roberts said. "I learn a lot from the an-

This year's team includes Jeff Stocki, senior; Alex Mourtos, Sarah Morrow, Mike Rancilio, Nadia Pappas, Jeff Boesiger, all juniors; Trickey, sophomore; Frank Fontana, Jim Moore and Greening, freshmen.

The team will meet again Wednesday, Nov. 18, at L'Anse Creuse at 3:30 p.m. There are three other meets scheduled for February and a final tournament on Feb.

Answers to the questions are: Italy, France and Switzerland; frustrum; archeopteryx; and Honduras.

Challenger unseats four-term councilman in City election

By Margle Reins Smith Staff Writer

Arthur Fetters, a four-term veteran of the Grosse Pointe City Council, lost his seat in the Nov. 3 election. Voters elected incumbent John Youngblood, appointee Susan Wheeler and challenger Myrna Smith to three available city council positions.

In the race for municipal judge, Stan C. Kazul was returned to his position by defeating challenger George Coticchio Mayor Lorenzo Browning gathered 1,150 votes. He ran unopposed.

Youngblood was the top votegetter for the council, with 996 votes. Wheeler ran second, with 991 votes. Smith was third, with 850. Fetters gathered 785 votes.

Thirty-three percent of the City's registered voters went to the polls.

Youngblood said he was delighted with the voters for placing confidence in him for another four-year term. "This was the highest off-year turnout in the last 12 to 14 years," he said.

"I am surprised that approximately 820 council votes were not cast. Many people voted for less than three candidates," he said. "It may reflect the fact that people didn't know enough about (candidates) to make a choice."

Wheeler said it was gratifying to see that so many people came out to vote. "I was disappointed about Art Fetters. He's been on the council for 16 years and contributed in so many ways. He helped me and I'll miss him."

On the defeat of the library issue, she said that people want to look at it again. The details were cloudy. "People want to see it all spelled out."

Ousted councilman Fetters said, "My successor campaigned hard and did a good job. I'm proud of what I accomplished during my 16 years and I wish everyone involved the best."

Daniel Clark, challenger for one of Grosse Pointe Park's council seats, ousted two-term councilman and former mayoral candidate John Prost in the Nov. 3 election. In addition, voters returned incumbents Vern Ausherman and David Gaskin to their council positions.

Clark was the top vote-getter, with 2,061 votes. Second was Ausherman; with 1,999. Gaskin ran third, with 1,698. Prost's votes totaled 1,532. The other two candidates, Barbara Cherghezan and Richard Case, received 491 and 376 votes, respectively.

In the race for municipal judge, Kirsten Frank eeked out a 16-vote victory over J. Thomas McGovern, 1,599 to 1,583.

Mayor Palmer Heenan, who ran unopposed, gathered 2,137

The people have given us a new team," said Heenan. "I'm looking forward to working with Dan Clark and David Gaskin and Vern Ausherman. I'm sure these people will be most cooperative. I'm excited because of the projects we can look forward to. The improvement of Jefferson Avenue is the main thing on the agenda."

He said the people in Grosse Pointe Park are a particularly well-informed electorate because

"we constantly put issues before them. Issues are more important than people. The (Park) electorate is very sophisticated. I'd trust them in any election on any issue.'

Heenan praised the Park council because they're competitive, aggressive and outspoken. "We don't hide our competitiveness in the back room. We wear our hearts on our sleeves."

Clark said that the community has begun to recognize the urgent problems - namely the pressure of crime and blight. "Voters have indicated that the Park should no longer cast a blind eye to the problems facing us. We, as a community, need to arrive at a consensus about how we're going to respond to these concerns, then roll up our sleeves and begin to work.

Concerning Jefferson Avenue development, he said, "We need to carefully control development, but it is in this redevelopment that the solution lies.

Clark also said that now is a good time to reflect on the contributions of John Prost, the defeated council incumbent. Prost has put a lot of personal energy and good counsel into the community for many years, he said. "Unfortunately, in politics, there must be winners and los-traditional Grosse Pointe houses: large center hall, dining room on one side, living room on the other, central staircase rising to the second floor. But the handthrown pots, the big canvasses, the very furniture speak the idiom of the owners, who designed and built them all. James and Linda Kristich are industrial designers by profession and handson make-it-yourselfers for fun.

Jim built the pots on the shelves in the front hall. He painted the artworks that dominate the living and dining rooms. He built the dining room table - that matches the highbacked chairs she designed and built. Linda rolled up her sleeves and made the low-slung chairs in the living room, then stitched up cushions to fit.

The house on Pemberton, come to think of it, is nothing like other traditional old houses in Grosse Pointe.

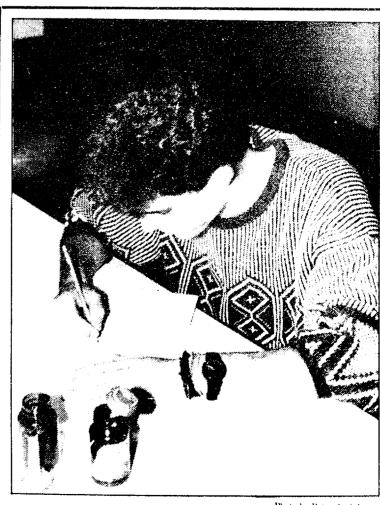

Jim Kristich is a man for whom fun and work - both art, in his case - seem to run together with no boundaries separating them. He has worked as an industrial designer (he's in the automotive field) in the United States and Europe, but never stopped making pottery and painting, no matter where he was. He has just completed a one-man show of his recent work at Grosse Pointe Park's Gallerie

Once upon a time, Kristich had a studio in the Cass Corridor. He had one in Greektown, too, before the yuppies discovered it and the rents went up. He had three floors above a Greek coffeehouse - one for paintings, one for pots, one to

A Message to the Residents of Grosse Pointe Woods:

I would like to express my sincere thanks and gratitude to the residents and many friends who have given me continued support during my years as Mayor of the City of Grosse Pointe Woods. You have again honored me with your trust, a beacon which will guide me as I begin my next two-year term.

To fulfil that trust, I pledge to faithfully represent you and strive to improve and maintain a high quality of life while preserving our community's heritage.

It is my desire that Grosse Pointe Woods continue to be a city which is alive with action and alert with vision as we approach the 21st century. Optomistic views coupled with flexible and innovative ideas will lead the City's progression in a positive direction.

As tomorrow's dreams dance in my head, I see our City as a master of its own destiny. Driven by a sense of determination and a strong belief in the future, we will meet the challenges of this decade and the next. I thank you - for your trust, support, and irreplaceable friendship.

Teachers' union calls attention to North asbestos problems

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Efforts to correct nagging ventilation problems at North High School are nearly completed, but that work has drawn attention to another serious problem asbestos.

Grosse Pointe Education Association President Doris Cook pointed out to the school board last week that the work on new air mixing boxes in the false ceiling on the first floor at North could have disturbed sprayed-on asbestos containing material used as a fire retardant when the school was constructed in the School officials are aware of the asbestos problems, not only at North, but throughout the district. Both federal and state mandates require the district to perform testing and, in some cases, removal of asbestos, and recently the federal Environmental Protection Agency strengthened the rules governing asbestos monitoring and removal.

The material at North is a sprayed-on substance called chrysotile, which is about 20 to 30 percent asbestos. Asbestos has been shown to cause respiratory problems, including lung cancer. It is considered most dangerous when microscopic particles are

New rules issued by the EPA will require all public and private schools to identify all asbestos-containing materials and develop a plan for removal of asbestos that poses a health risk to students and school personnel.

The new rules also decrease the amount of allowable asbestos fibers in a building's air by 100 percent, require school workers who would remove or work around asbestos to undergo training, and will fine school districts that don't comply with the

Last week Dave King, director of support services for district, received the results of air monitoring performed at North on Oct. 12 and 14. Overall, the amount of total fibers collected in filters by an accredited air sampling company, was below the amount of asbestos fibers allowed by the new rules.

King said the fiber concentrations should not pose a health hazard to any occupants in the building. Microscopic analysis will be performed on the fibers to determine what percentage of the total amount of fibers collected are actually asbestos.

Cook, who has written several long items in the education association's newsletter on the subject, said the work being done on the ventilation system could cause the chrysotile to loosen and spread through the system by the very ventilation systemthe district is repairing.

"We would like the seriousness of the problem at North determined, given the new guidelines of the new asbestos law," she said.

Cook said the association realizes the monumental task facing the school district in light of the new rules. She added that the district will have difficulty meeting the financial burden placed

A TV critic looks at the medium

Marc Gunther, Detroit Free Press TV critic, will present "The random thoughts of a TV watcher: What to watch, what to turn off and what to do to improve the quality of television," Wednesday, Nov. 18, 8 p.m. at the War Memorial.

Among the topics Gunther will touch upon are the recent changes in the TV business, children's programming, local TV news and cable TV. Gunther, a graduate of Yale University, has been the TV critic for the News since 1985. Prior to coming to Detroit, he was with the Hartford Courant.

He is a resident of Grosse Pointe Park and author of a book about baseball, "Basepaths: For the Minors to the Big Leagues and Beyond." His latest book, which tells the inside story of ABC's Monday Night Football, will be published next year.

The program is presented by the War Memorial Council of Sponsors. Tickets are $5 per person. For futher information, call 881-7511.

on it if asbestos has to be re-

"The school district has done everything that has been required by law," Cook said. "The new law will require more."

King said the district has known about the chrysotile since 1983 when the federal government first required identification of asbestos-containing material.

While the district has been following the federal and state rules governing asbestos identification and monitoring, it had to come to a decision on on whether to join national or statewide efforts to sue asbestos manufacturers. King said he investigated both class action suits and made a recommendation to the Board of Education to join the class action suit within the state.

The board voted unanimously Monday night to join the state suit. King told the board that he investigated both suits and determined the district would have a better chance with the state suit for several reasons. The state suit will be heard in Wayne County Circuit Court before a judge who is knowlegeable about asbestos. Wayne County juries are notorious for granting large settlements. King also felt that the judge's expertise on asbestos would speed the process along, thus providing for a settlement before the national class action suit which might not begin until 1989, King told the

School Superintendent John Whritner said that making a decision one way or another is a gamble. There are no guarantees that the state class action suit will be more beneficial to the district, but that with the information the district has now both he and King agreed the state suit was the way to go. Once the district has made a choice it cannot change its mind and vote to enter the national suit.

Correcting asbestos problems is a costly chore, and most school districts will need either federal or state funding or money from a class action suit to defray the costs. King pointed out that when a serious problem with sprayed-on asbestos-containing material was corrected several years ago at the Brownell Middle School pool, it cost the district about $100,000.

King said the news about the air monitoring at North is good, but it is important to remember that the district must continue to look closely at the asbestos in the building at North High School and study the various options such as encasing the material to prevent it from getting into the air, removal or continued monitoring.

Cook agrees.

"Doing the minimum required is not always what is best," she said. "We must push on as a matter of concern for everyone in the school system."

In goes the good air...

Grosse Pointe North ventilation problems might be solved, as workers put the finishing touches on about $100,000 worth of work on the 20-year-old system this past

Director of Support Services David King said that about 90 new air mixing boxes, which take outdoor air and mix it. with indoor air, have been in-"The old boxes were not operating properly," King said. "They were clogged and out-

Findings by the air ventilation company hired by the district showed that North was not getting all the outdoor air necessary for the building according to the original specifications.

Even heating throughout the building should improve as a result of the work done, King said. There will be more thermostats and the heating and cooling units have been upgraded.

Doors will be placed in the ceiling to provide easy access to the new mixing boxes.

"These corrections should go a long way toward solving the ventilation problems at North," King concluded.

November 12, Grosse Pointe Library expansion defeat leaves supporters stunned

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

There was a lot of nervous energy in the board room at the Central Administration building election night. School officials and volunteers gathered, confident voters would approve an $8.625 million bond issue for the expansion and renovation of Central Library and the two branches. As the returns trickled in, faces grew long and heads began to shake side to side.

Voters turned down the bond issue request by a 53 to 47 percent margin, 6,700 to 5,991. They also turned down a onemill increase for operations by nearly the same margin, 52 to 48 percent. The numbers were 6,632 to 6,106.

The two proposals were defeated in every city except the Park. Voters there approved the bond issue request 1,797 to 1,365. The millage hike was approved 1,716 to 1,467.

Officials were at a loss to explain the final totals or the Park's passage. Most expressed sadness over the outcome, an interest in determining where to go from here and offered some ideas as to why voters turned down the ballot items.

In a prepared statement from school board President Fred Adams issued the night of the election, Adams said there was disappointment among members of the board.

"As you well know, demands for library services have been steadily increasing, while the libraries' physical plants have remained virtually unchanged since the early 1950s. Unfortunately, the community failed to realize the severity of the problems presently facing our li-

Sweeny added that he felt the no votes may have been a reaction by people who were concerned about growth on the Hill.

He said his biggest shock came when voters turned down the one-mill request for operations. Four-tenths of that mill was to be used to fund the library at current levels of operation, while the remaining fraction was to be used to fund the additional expenses due to the proposed expansion. One mill generates about $1.2 million from the school district.

"I really don't think that people felt the project was too darn much money," he said. "I think it was a general negative vote

"It is not really critical that we determine what happened,' Whritner said. "It is more important to determine where do we go. The need has not disappeared with the election.'

He said he is not sure if there was one issue that resulted in the defeat of the proposals. The expansion at Central Library onto the playfield at South and the cost may have been reasons for defeat, in Whritner's view.

Before considering cuts in the library program, the board should consider whether to bring the issue to the taxpayers again, in a scaled-down version or perhaps a similar proposal, Whritner said.

Those opposed to the expansion, for the most part, were not opposed to expansion of the li-

> Director of Business Affairs Christian Fenton said the library budget for the 1987-88 school year is fine. The defeat of the one-mill increase may put the 1988-89 budget in jeopardy, if something is not done.

"I guess there would have to be cutbacks, but I'm not sure just what the monetary need is," Fenton said. "The library budget is already committed to about $75,000 in architect fees and election costs.

The $75,000 will be paid to the architect for the preliminary plans the firm had drawn up as well as the many hours it spent in developing those plans. Fenton noted that an election costs the school district between $10,000 to $12,000.

"We will put together estimates for the board as to what the library's needs will be, and try to determine the amount of money necessary to do that," he

The library is currently authorized to levy 1.42 mills. The district recently authorized a reduction of that by one-tenth of a mill, which could be reinstated without a vote of the electorate. That would generate about $140,000 for the library.

"We would need that back plus some in order to maintain the same quality of services we have now," Fenton said.

Board member Vincent Lo-Cicero, who was supportive of the library expansion, said he was extremely disappointed at the outcome.

"I think the biggest loser is the community," he said. "We had the opportunity to upgrade our facilities for all Grosse Pointers and future Grosse Pointers and it was rejected."

He said there were likely many reasons for the proposals' failure.

"I've heard so many things," he said. "I think it was more than the stock market. The South field played a role, and too much money.

LoCicero said he felt the board would have the finance department look at the projections for the library budget and determine if there will be a future budget shortfall.

"We will have to make a decision, but I don't know what that might be," he said.

He added he appreciated the efforts by all the committees that supported the proposals.

some people just thought it was Grosse Pointe. I think it is a sad day for libraries in general. We have worked very hard on this for 16 months. We had been using all our energy on this, and now we are diverting that energy to containment and reduction.'

He said he had no idea why the expansion proposals failed.

"We were confident going in and sort of shaken coming out," he said. "That is the way it is. I have my own feelings and recommendations, but there are probably 150 to 200 people out there who have their own feelings and ideas as well."

Palmer's Park goes his way in '87 election

Tt was quite an election for Mayor Palmer Heenan of Grosse Pointe Park and his friends. The mayor was re-elected without opposition, he apparently won control of the city council and his choice was elected municipal judge. No wonder the mayor said it was the happiest day of his

Unfortunately, it also was a sad day for the losers who included not only council incumbents in the Park and the City, but also the school board which lost its proposed $8.6 million bond issue and one-mill increase in the property tax levy to finance expanded facilities and services at the three Grosse Pointe libraries.

During the campaign, the mayor had endorsed both incumbent Vern Ausherman and challenger Daniel Clark and made no secret of his hope to defeat John Prost, the veteran councilman who had challenged Heenan for the mayor's post in 1985. Heenan claimed he needed the support of Ausherman and Clark to get his proposals through the council.

The mayor not only got the men he wanted on the council but Kirsten Frank, who had received his endorsement, was elected municipal judge by a margin of 16 votes over J. Thomas McGovern. No wonder observers were calling the community "Palmer's Park" after the election, even though Dave Gaskin, an independent council member, also was re-elected.

Several reasons were advanced for defeat of the library proposals. In his statement, Fred Adams, president of the Grosse Pointe Board of Education, expressed the board's disappointment and said "the community failed to realize the severity of the problems facing our libraries."

We suspect, however, it was more than that. In our view, the vote was the victim of unfortunate timing. The stock market crash may not have had great effect on Grosse Pointers directly, but it certainly affected them indirectly by alerting them to the possibility of an economic turndown. In addition, even in the relatively wellto-do Pointes, the proposed increase in the library levy from 1.3 mills to 3 mills no doubt had its impact even for those who escaped major stock market losses. That increase would have cost owners of valuation of $50,000, an estimated $85 more per year.

$100,000 homes, with a state equalized

Another factor was the organization of opposition by some South High School students and their parents because the proposed Central Library addition would have encroached on South's playing fields. In the days just prior to the election, the opposition distributed a flyer expressing its opposition. This action, too, might have had some effect on the outcome.

The library proposal lost in five of the six communities in the district with only Grosse Pointe Park expressing its approval of both the bond issue and the millage increase. City voters also approved the millage increase by 52 votes, but defeated the bond issue by 46 votes. By varying margins, voters in the other Pointes as well as in Harper Woods defeated both proposals.

In his statement, Adams pledged the school board would "continue to explore solutions to the libraries' problems in ways that are fiscally responsible and community-oriented." He pointed out demands for library services have been steadily increasing while the physical plants have remained virtually unchanged since the early 1950s.

If the needs are as pressing as they appear to be, another election on a more modest expansion program at some future date might win greater community support. But that is just one of options the board might consider as it seeks to solve the libraries' problems.

In the other municipal contests, the major upset occurred in the City where veteran councilman Arthur S. Fetters was defeated, apparently the victim of the hard campaigning by Susan H. Wheeler, just appointed three months earlier, and challenger Myrna M. Smith. Both women were elected, along with incumbent councilman John F. Youngblood and Mayor Lorenzo Browning, who ran unopposed. Other municipal election results were about as expected.

A light vote in Pointes

ven though there were contests in each of the four Pointes, fewer than one-third of the registered voters went to the polls in the municipal elections

That proportion is about par for municipal elections in the Pointes, but the total of 11,437 is only a bit higher than a third of the more than 30,000 votes cast in the 1984 presidential election.

The Park showed the highest proportion of registered voters with 35 percent to 33 for the City, 30 for the Farms and 28 for the Woods. In total votes, the Woods led with 3,917 and was followed by the Park with 3,433, the Farms with 2,606 and the City with 1,481.

Why the great difference in voter turnouts between municipal and national elections?

Nobody knows for certain, but it is true that national and state issues attract more voter attention here and elsewhere than do the municipal elections, even when there are hot contests, as there were this year in several of the Pointe communities.

One explanation for the lesser interest in the municipal voting is that the Pointes serve as a bedroom community for Detroit and the rest of the metropolitan area. That means that many people who live in the Pointes work elsewhere, either in Detroit or in other suburbs of Detroit. If their major interest is in the area in which they work, they are likely to spend less time

Another possibility that we have raised before in these columns is that Pointers, by and large, are well satisfied with their local officials and the candidates for office. So they tend to feel that their municipal administrations and services will be in

s the 1988 presidential campaign enters a more intensive phase, the Lapublic is learning more and more about the candidates, which is all to the

More and more of them are engaging in political debates, are appearing in TV news broadcasts, are being profiled in newspapers and news magazines and are otherwise offering their opinions to the American public. As a result, the people are getting a more complete view of each candidate than they have previously had.

Some candidates complain that the news media are invading their privacy and improperly poking into their private lives. Yet it is difficult to separate the private man from the public man. And how a man acts in private often offers important clues as to his possible behavior in public life.

That was certainly true of the disclosures about former Sen. Gary Hart and Sen. Joseph Biden that forced them out of the campaign for the Democratic nomination for president. It is also true of the recent disclosures that the Rev. Pat Robertson, a candidate for the GOP presidential nomination, lied about his wedding date to spare his family embarrassment caused by the fact his first son was born 10 weeks after his marriage.

True, that was 33 years ago and before Robertson had joined the ministry. While some observers as well as Robertson supporters claim the revelations are no big deal today, they may properly be weighed when the people make their judgments about Robertson's claim to moral leadership in politics and the presidential campaign.

Michigan voters have a special interest in Robertson because his forces control the Michigan Republican Party leadership and are using the prestige he gained in this state to spur his campaign nationally.

Thus his recent assertion that, according to his statistics, one out of every four workers on U.S. auto assembly lines uses drugs, deserves some attention. Yet he produces no proof except some old figures that came from the Christian Broadcasting Network, which he founded. If he can't do better than that, he ought to apologize to the auto workers.

Under the closer observation now being given to the candidates, Robertson's general philosophy has become somewhat clearer. He would, for example, quarantine AIDS victims. Among his other views, he insists abortion is murder and always wrong except when the life of the mother is involved; favors an educational voucher plan that would, in the view of many critics, weaken public education; and says we can cut $100 billions out of government spending without hurting any current pro-

On occasion he also has embellished his record in education, business and other matters. Questions have been raised as to whether his Christian Broadcasting Network did not help finance his exploratory presidential campaign, including his early efforts in Michigan; about his claim to have served on the board of directors of a bank in Norfolk., Va., about his studies at the University of London, and about some of his other claims to fame.

But Robertson is just one of the candidates on whom the public spotlight is now shining with the next presidential election only a year away. It is up to the people to keep their eyes, ears and minds open so they can help influence the decisions of both parties when they choose their 1988 standard bearers next summer.

Bands are alive

and well

To the Editor:

I can't believe it! I can't believe just how uninformed some of the Grosse Pointe community is! It surprises me that people think without a marching band there isn't a band at all.

Contrary to that belief, there are bands at both North and South that rehearse every day and give performances. If you are one of the many who miss hearing the bands, I recommend you attend one of the 20 or more annual performances. You might find you enjoy what is played. After all, there is more to a band than the ability to pound the pavement.

Closed or open campus?

To the Editor:

Cafeteria food, ugh! Grosse Pointe North is trying to close campus, because a few kids have abused the open lunch privilege. Why don't they just keep the people who cause trouble in? Why punish all of us by making us eat cafeteria food?

If they do close campus, there will be more fights, not to mention food fights, and it will be very crowded. The administration pretends to worry about the well-being of the students, but they're more interested in the reputation of Grosse Pointe North.

I believe they should put future thought into it. Pretty soon we won't be able to breathe without them telling us how to do it. Cheryl Bridges

Too hasty To the Editor:

Thank you voters! During the last school board election, I suggested the board and library were not ready to bring their plans to the general citizenry. The plans appeared too hastily conceived, were vague in what they were actually doing for the library and showed no regard for South's playing field. But it was full steam ahead to get this before the voters in November, trading athletic fields for asphalt parking lots with impunity.

In an educated community such as Grosse Pointe, we are passionately attached to the intellectual wealth of a superior library. In a powerful community such as Grosse Pointe, we are familiar with the "win-win" concept in business compromise. In this hastily conceived plan, too many people had too much to lose. Therefore, I feel the board had an obligation to conceive a plan with maximum advantage for all citizens and to explain in detail why eight million-plus dollars was a necessary obligation to maintain our libraries.

Perhaps after this defeat, the board will understand that polite questioning regarding an issue should be seriously considered, rather than dismissed with cliched explanations.

Lansing ournal

Every year the Michigan Press Association and the governor's office sponsor a government day for the media in Lansing. It's a day filled with speakers from various state departments talking about new developments and such.

I always try to go if I can, because it's good to touch base with Lansing and to wander around the capitol building and see the offices with those familiar legislators' names displayed. I like the sense of history in that building and most of all, I'm struck by the number of talented people in government, especially the younger ones.

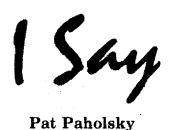

The whole day is sort of a continuing education course in civics, and besides some good background, I come away with a number of observations and facts that are either useless or interesting or both.

For instance, Richard Austin, who talked about traffic safety, was introduced as the longestserving secretary of state in the nation. The extremely courteous and gentlemanly Austin later said he would not lay claim to that, but he did take credit for longevity in Michigan. This is his 17th year.

And on the subject of traffic safety, most people who travel the freeways every day know there is a growing problem with drivers who either don't know the rules of the road or who blatantly disregard them.

Most of the problem is due to inadequate driver's training that puts kids on the road with only a couple of hours of actual driving experience. Did you know new drivers today can get a license without taking a driving

Add to that more big trucks than ever before and more small cars and a driving population that's aging and it's obvious that it's getting more dangerous to get behind the wheel.

And then they go and raise the speed limit, which doesn't even apply to any of the interstates in this area. Do you know what confusion is? Studying a map of the areas affected by the new speed limit.

In the area of jobs and the future, Gary Bachula, who is with the Governor's Cabinet Council on Human Investment, said people are going to have to be prepared to do six or eight different jobs in their lifetime and it could well be that it will be with the same company, because jobs will constantly change with new technology.

Think about that and the changes it will mean to our society. I know that the days of getting a job with one company and the loyalty that worked both ways are just about over, but it seems to me that was one of the · backbones of our country.

In another area, Lynne Schaefer of the Department of Treasury, Michigan Education Trust, talked about the program in which a parent or someone else can guarantee a college education for a child. Michigan was the first in the nation to pass guaranteed education and five other states are basing their programs on the Michigan model. There are also 35 other states looking into it, she said. And it's not only for a newborn or young child. Schaefer said she hopes a housewife or any adult will use it to plan to continue an education sometime in the future, when responsibilities decrease or the person retires.

Gary Hawks, the interim superintendant of the state board of education, said teachers are getting older, they'll be retiring, and young people are not entering the profession. He asked the group if anyone could guess how many black males under 26 currently teach in Michigan. Nobody came close to the answer -

Col. Ritchie Davis, director of the state police, talked about a number of new projects, but the one I found interesting was that they are using robots for bomb disposal. I know there are many good uses for robots, but this is one of the best I've heard of so far. The next logical step is to send robots off to war, and the side with the best technology wins. Well, it's a thought.

Some other useless/interesting facts - Gov. Blanchard still wears his wedding ring on his left hand. And almost every single male speaker wore a dark blue suit with a light blue shirt and red tie. Only Doug Ross, director of the Department of Commerce, who speaks one-third with his mouth, one-third with his hands and one-third with his body, deviated slightly. His tie was more of a magenta, in keeping with his forceful, some might say flamboyant, style.

After the last speaker spoke and the newspaper people were gathering their things to go over to the governor's house for a reception, two human raisins strolled in, carrying one of those monster radios that are big enough to put wheels on and drive. They moved through the room, keeping time to the sounds of "I Heard it Through the Grapevine."

As I said, I think it's good to touch base with Lansing once in awhile.

Gun control

To the Editor:

Guns are weapons meant for death and they need to be controlled. Although the Second Amendment states that people have the right to bear arms, perhaps it shouldn't be. Maybe the right to bear arms should be a privilege. Too many of the wrong people are getting hold of guns and they are treating them as if they are toys and not lethal weapons.

I believe that if there is adequate reason for needing a gun, then one should be provided for the person to purchase. Otherwise, guns shouldn't be around for just anyone to have. Although some people may say that if we did this, we'd punish the innocent by not allowing them to have guns, they are being misled. By limiting who has guns it would protect, perhaps save the life, of an innocent person.

The real importance

To the Editor:

I am writing to you as both a Grosse Pointe Woods citizen and a licensed daycare operator. I have spent many years in the dealings of children and their acquired needs.

Running in-home day care has recently become a major issue in this city, creating many favorable and opposing views. I have, until now, been following the newspapers to see what exactly has been said, and what is being done.

I care for a small group of children of 5 and under, their ages ranging from 1 to 2 1/2 years. I stress the importance of this in an inhome child care situation, providing a small group to interact on an equal level.

These children are experiencing a warm, supervised and loving environment in a family home. They are still very young to encounter the surroundings of a building facility with many children. These kids, because of my provided service, have meaningful and quality time with each other, myself, and on occasion, with my immediate

We also practice organization and are structured, with menus and general information being posted for parents daily. There are files kept with medical and important material pertaining to each child, then presented to the state. Each home is thoroughly inspected to ensure safety and other pertinent requirements. Each parent is required to sign a policy sheet, provided by me, to register. We are sure to have clean and roomy areas in which to play, eat and sleep. These are essential factors I feel should be considered in deciding on proper care. It is equally as important to take into high regard the consideration of this city and our neighbors, in order to keep a quiet and peaceful neighborhood.

In such an emotional issue where some residents are for and yet others so against this service, it is indeed time to come to a compromise, allowing us to operate with enforced restrictions monitored through the city of Grosse Pointe Woods. Through research, we have learned of many other communities who have established such a law with successful results.

We are very much in demand. If we are in fact labeled a business, you should then highly consider the fact that we are an individual service, caring for young lives of children. Parents deserve the right to choose where they leave their children while they are at work, and, most important, these little people deserve the right to be cared for in such an environment. This could be a real attribute to our community.

Please take the time to realize the real importance of this matter.

These are my feelings and those of the undersigned. Mary L. Roose

Let parents decide

To the Editor:

Schooling is a very important part of a child's life. Therefore, I believe that parents should be able to send their child to the Grosse Pointe School of their choice, no matter what Grosse Pointe district that they live in. Some parents don't like the school in their district or it's too far away.

For instance, when I was transferring from Monteith Elementary School to middle school, I had to attend Brownell instead of Parcells, which was closer to me. I. didn't fight the school board because it wasn't necessary. If a parent were to fight the board, they would have to write letters with an explanation saying why they would like to transfer middle schools, or maybe even go to the board meeting to continue the fighting. To reduce the harassment from parents, why doesn't the school board let the parents make the decision of where they want their children to attend school?

Michigan income taxpayers do not know what tax will determine their 1987 Michigan liability, because the governor is unwilling to have a bill passed to determine that.

Park officers, patrolling Windmill Pointe Drive, spotted a pig taking a stroll. After chasing it through bushes and shrubs, they finally coralled it and took it to a veterinarian. A Farms woman claimed it later, saying she bought it for a friend for his birthday and it had apparently gotten loose. Asked why she bought a pig as a gift, she responded: "What do you give someone who has everything?"

The Grosse Pointe Real Estate Exchange released figures that showed home sales were down the previous month by 31 percent. The average sales price for February 1981 was $98,733, down 14 percent from the February 1980 figure of $114,218.

linked together by the governor and House Democrats with insistence that the budget and income tax issues must await resolution of the insurance tax question.

Republicans have agreed to enact bills to assure tax revenue from insurance companies will equal what that revenue has been and what is relied on in the 1987-99 state budget. The sole issue is the Democrats' attempt backs of domestic insurance companies to the extent of $80 million

Republicans have tried to compromise to get the ball rolling on all three issues. Linking them was not our idea or doing. Democrats, thus far, insist Michigan insurers end up paying the 2 percent tax now paid by foreign companies.

Compromise is legitimate. Blackmail is not.

Outrage! To the Editor:

This is an outrage!!

The issue of closed campus is not one to be toyed with. It is perfectly understandable to want to keep order in the parking lot during lunch, but to close the campus would be a highly drastic measure.

As it is, the school lunchroom is very crowded during lunch time even without most of the upperclassmen being present. If there was closed campus, the school lunchroom would end up in chaos!

If change is really necessary, a suitable solution might be to only let upperclassmen have the open campus privilege. This way, you cut down on some of the traffic in the parking lot, while letting the upperclassmen go out to lunch and have some freedom.

The intention behind the idea of closed campus was good, but obviously someone in charge wasn't thinking of the consequences of their actions. The upperclassmen open campus privilege is a good compromise to the issue of closed campus that suits all involved parties.

We need home child care

To the Editor:

As a concerned citizen of Grosse Pointe, I felt a strong necessity to write in reference to the home child care issue going on in the Woods.

I am a mom who found it necessary to return to work when my son was 2 years old. I enrolled him in a day care center full time, not realizing he was too young for such a structured environment. I feel a day care center for young children under 4 years of age has too many things going on around them, young children need the home atmosphere, the loving, personal attention and the freedom that a "home" child care can offer. They are involved with a smaller group - or family of other children in a relaxing home setting instead of a community of other children in a building where so many things are done like a production line. My son didn't have the mother image he needed for security at his age. After six months of problems, I switched him to a home atmosphere where he did fine and loved it.

I'm not saying day care centers are bad, I think on a part-time basis, they're good for pre-schoolers, but there are different things for different needs. It could be that some smaller children are more ready for a school setting than others, but for the children's welfare, the parents should have the right to choose what would be best for their child in the community they live in. And what about the babies? Are we going to force newborns and young toddlers to fare in a day care center?

I feel it is a good idea to have necessary restrictions and monitor home day care situations, as in any situation, it helps protect our children.

Aside from other home businesses, this is one we cannot afford to lose. We need to keep home child care in our community to keep our next generation healthy, strong and happy.

Give a toot

To the Editor:

In recent weeks, a great deal of criticism has been directed at the Grosse Pointe public schools' music program, in particular at the lack of marching bands at both our high schools. Some clarifications regarding the music curriculum might help to clear the air.

The Grosse Pointe public school system offers students a comprehensive music program beginning in grade one and continuing through grade twelve. All three middle schools and both high schools have orchestras and symphonic bands, along with a variety of vocal music groups. Each school has a rich history of musical accomplishments over the years.

I am a long-standing fan of marching bands and have seen the benefits they generate for an entire school system. For a variety of reasons, however, the marching band program, which is offered for credit at both high schools, has not done well of late. Traditionally, our students have shown a preference for symphonic band. They practice not only during class time but at early morning and evening rehearsals preceding concerts. In addition, students carry a full academic course load, while participating in sports programs and other extracurricular activities. Adding another band activity is impractical for these students and could lead to a drain on other well-established programs.

For those of us who have had the pleasure of attending one of the many fine concerts presented by school music groups, there is no doubt that the music program in Grosse Pointe schools is exceptional. And if you'd like to hear a band concert that always brings the house down, may I invite you to attend the Cabaret Pops Concert at South High School this Friday. Nov. 13, at 7:30 p.m. We may not be marching, but we'll certainly be giving a toot!

Thanks, Village

To the Editor:

I would like to express my appreciation to all of the

Because it is such a success, the day brings a crowd that is quite overwhelming. The sidewalks were overcrowded and with the daily traffic, it seemed unsafe for the children. Possibly, the city could block off Kercheval during the trick-ortreating. This would help the congested areas, and make it less dangerous for the crowd.

An injustice To the Editor:

Perhaps the general public should be aware of how helpless it is in the face of injustice.

A few weeks ago we received a phone call from the police station advising us that our son had sworn at a crossing guard on the way home from school - an allegation that was untrue. When asked if he had been driving during the lunch hour that day, I told the truth. What a mistake that turned out to be!

Said crossing guard was not satisfied with a reprimand from the police twice - nor with curtailment of privileges from home. She filed charges, and he had to appear in court.

He has just returned from this ordeal (and that is what it was) and has learned a valuable lesson in the injustice of the law. The crossing guard chose not to appear, but the city attorney pursued this matter with diligenee. When my son pleaded not guilty, he was told that he would have to reappear with counsel at a future date! He was advised to lie in court, pay the fine, and take probation instead.

Since he is only 17, he chose to do this, even though his dad, who was present, told him to pursue the matter further. He has been nervous enough over this, and just wanted it finished Meanwhile, he has been railroaded over a petty issue, and our whole family has learned to cover our tracks and not to admit to anything.

Congratulations, taxpayers, your courts are being used to keep your city safe from obscene language unless you have cable - or go to the Woods Theater or walk through the halls of any of the schools — or . .

To the Editor:

Thank you to Peggy O'-Connor Andrzejczyk and the Grosse Pointe News for the recent article spotlighting Grosse Pointe Theatre on our fortieth anniversary.

Our members are very proud that GPT has been a part of the Grosse Pointes for 40 years. We readily acknowledge that we would never have reached this milestone without the support and loyalty of the community.

Thank you again for the wonderful recognition in the Grosse Pointe News.

DEVELOPING GOOD SPEECH, LANGUAGE AND HEARING

Children can be helped to develop good speech, language and hearing habits. Experts suggest some guidelines parents

- Talk naturally to your child. Don't talk babytalk.
- · Take time to listen and talk to your child, beginning at birth. Don't push the child to learn to talk.
- Accept some speec! mistakes as your child learns. Don't ask him or her to slow down and repeat.
- · Have your child's hearing tested if you find you must often repeat words or talk loudly to get your child's attention.
- · Seek professional help promptly. Never wait to get help for your child if you suspect a hearing problem.

Tremendous support

To the Editor:

As co-chairmen of the Library Expansion and Education Committee, we were greatly disappointed at the Nov. 3 referendum results. The vote against the bond issue and the additional millage, however, in no way lessens the tremendous support and work of many fine and dedicated people. The many voters who believed so sincerely in the current and future importance of the Grosse Pointe libraries to themselves as well as to their community are to be thanked for their enthusiasm, their interest, and their support.

To the many individuals who worked long and hard for the future of our children, our fellow citizens, and our community, we express our gratitude. Their dedicated efforts will not be forgotten as each of us pledge our continuing efforts to help the library as they are today. The ever-expanding needs of our community demand nothing less. As a support group of no small size, The Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library will continue to seek innovative, different and better ways to improve our libraries. We compliment Dr. Charles Hanson, director of libraries, and his dedicated staff for their continued insistence that the citizens of Grosse Pointe provide themselves with the best public library facilities available. For this community to accept anything less is unfortunate.

We would be remiss to also not thank Peter Salinas of the Grosse Pointe News for his balanced, accurate and thorough coverage of our efforts during the last 16 months. He was always present to see that the work of the architects, the labors of the library staff, the concerns of the Friends of the Library board, and the efforts of those directing the campaign were made public. He deserves a large vote of thanks from each of us.

Finally, to each person who believed that Grosse Pointe deserved the improvement of such a vital public aspect of our daily lives, a sincere thank you.

Day care versus babysitting

To the Editor:

It seems when babysitting's name changed to day care, all the trouble began. When day care was babysitting, it was always accepted in every community. Has city council or the planning commission ever had to be involved before? So why not leave day care to the centers that were established for that purpose and leave babysitting in the home?

Children are a fact of life. In fact, probably the most important fact of life. If children stop, then soon life will stop. Our economy is also a fact of life and to be able to live with it, many mothers must work.

It seems to me that babysitting is just going to have to be allowed because the need is greater than ever. I realize that there are people who are against it, but it's just a case of the "big guys" having to give some space to the "little guys." Come on, folks, it's their turn at life! My goodness, we are talking about babies; not crack houses or houses of prostitution! No one wants anything detrimental to the community, but babysitting is not a detriment. It is a service to the community. In fact, WCCC offers a degree in Human Service, Child Care Development for people who want to take care of children - the operative words being Human Services. You know we don't all have to like it, we just have to learn to live with it. It's better than air pollution, and though we don't like that, we have still learned to live with it. So what's a car door slamming if it means good care for a

It seems Sheila Temkow's neighbors opened a Pandora's Box and the city council could get buried in it! The council members seem reluctant to deal with the issue. Possibly because of the responsibility involved? It's possible, gentlemen, that you could end up babysitting the babysitters. Got the time? If you involve yourselves with all this regulation and anything goes wrong, the parents could end up on your doorstep wanting to know why you were not there to enforce your regulations. You see you leave the door open for the parents to blame you. And after all if licensing and regulation is the answer, then how did 13 children get abused in that Grosse Pointe Park home?

Wouldn't it be better to leave this responsibility to the parents? Up to now, that's the way it's always been. Why not let babysitting go on as always? If need be, change the ordinance to allow for it, but let the parents deal with the babysitter as to what is best for their child. You could provide a list of things that parents should look for and expect from a good babysitter and his/her home. Let the parents set the regulations, then if anything goes wrong, the parents have no one to blame but themselves. This would keep the parents from becoming lax and expecting you to do their job.

Maybe then the city council would only have to mediate complaints. If people know, first of all, that babysitting is allowed and they can't change that, then with some give and take, complaints could be ironed out. If, for example, the problem of car doors arises, maybe the sitter could arrange for car pooling so less cars would be involved. The slamming doesn't stop, but it would be modified and less irritating. Or if the children were too noisy while outside, maybe they could go outside twice a week rather than every day. Or they could be taken to one of our parks. Just a little give and take!

Before ending this letter, I must say that even the idea to limit the number of children to a home seems a bit ridiculous. There are people who have more than five children in their families and one mother takes care of them, so why not one sitter? I realize you cannot have 20 children running rampant, but a good sitter knows his/ her limits and responsible parents should know not to leave their children in a home that they feel is already at capacity.

People have fled other countries because they were too regulated by the government and not allowed to choose what they felt was best for their families. They come here because we are supposed to have that freedom. The children spend the day with the sitter and go home at night with the parents (not the state or the city).

Purse snatched

An Aline Road resident in the Woods had her purse stolen around 1:22 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 7, as she returned home.

The resident had parked her car in the street, and was in the process of removing some items from the car, when she was surprised by a thief.

The man grabbed her purse saying, "I'll take that." The strap of the purse was broken in the incident.

The purse contained $1 in change, credit cards and miscellaneous items. The beige and green vehicle the man escaped in was seen headed westbound on Roslyn toward Harper.

Time for a new plan

To the Editor:

The defeat of the Grosse Pointe library expansion proposal provides the opportunity for the Board of Education to meet with various interest groups, whether they are senior citizens or advocates of the Field Allocation Committee, to provide an alternative proposal for library expansion. This may require a significant reduction in proposed expansion costs; the search for private contributions and alternate site. The lack of clear and convincing community support should suggest to the Board of Education a return to the drawing board.

Many of us who voted against the proposal are not against library expansion, but object to the high cost of the plan and/or annexation of our play fields or both. The proposal was voted down without the benefit of organized, public community opposition. Imagine what it would be if full battle lines were drawn.

Any attempt by the Board of Education, especially in a potentially recessive economy, to market the same product but in a different package, without the benefit or inclusion of opposition group(s), will result in allegations, a divided community and a doomed expansion

Negotiations are in order. Library expansion deserves serious reconsideration. Let us witness the birth of a new plan this spring!

Thank you

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the residents of Grosse Pointe Farms who voted for me and all the people who worked so hard on the campaign to have me elected as councilman.

I feel that the campaign achieved good results, although I was not elected. In receiving so many votes, the residents have sent a message. They believed in the issues that were basic to the campaign. A better reception by the city when residents have concerns, better longrange city planning for the residents, and traffic planning (especially when considering commercial expansion) are all important issues to the residents of the Farms.

We need a minimum building maintenance ordinance to prevent neglected and abandoned houses, strict adherence to the certificate of occupancy ordinance, and better park services and strict regulation of park use to exclude non-resident passes to preserve the quality of the Farms.

The streamlining of ordiances and charter issues would permit the city employees to run the city from day to day and would permit the council to plan for the long-range concerns of the Farms. These are the issues as so many of the residents of Grosse Pointe Farms see them. I feel that the campaign produced good results because these issues were brought out in the open.

To all the people who voted for me and for all the people who worked so hard on the campaign, I extend my sincere thank you.

The response to the Senior Achievement quilt is unbelievable. Received requests from as far away as Orange, Calif., Wisconsin, Florida and all the suburban and local requests, too!

Please tell your people that I had to change the date for the drawing from Nov. 18 to Dec. 3 at 3:30 p.m. in North High School cafeteria. I have all the ticket stubs - there's still hope to win the quilt.

Irene Sutton Senior Achievement Chairperson

Following is the text of a letter sent to Woods Councilwoman Jean Rice. It is reprinted at the request of the writer.

Child care important

To the Editor:

Thank you for the opportunity of allowing Mr. Richard Temkow to speak at the Senior Citizens Advisory Board committee meeting on Sept.

The child care issue is an extremely important one to many citizens of the community, and we appreciate every opportunity to explain to residents exactly how we

I am concerned, however, with the comment you made regarding your fear of the issue becoming one of younger residents vs. older residents of the community. Mrs. Rice, I strongly feel that it is not an issue of young vs. old; rather, it is an issue about caring. If women wish to offer an important resource of caring for young children as well as older citizens, the community should allow them. Grosse Pointe Woods is a family community of all ages. As I mentioned to you at the meeting, if my next door neighbors decided to care for aging residents of the community in a home daycare situation as opposed to these residents going into a nursing home, both my husband and myself would strongly support these neighbors. I would encourage my children to get to know these people by visiting them, making special craft projects for them, etc. I would offer support to my neighbors as to how I could help them. If there were any problems associated with traffic, I would approach my neighbors and mutually work toward a solution. That is what neighbors are all about. I would not consider it a business, but, rather, an important resource our community would have to offer.

Another point of mention is the comment you made regarding that your daughter has a sitter come into her home. In 1986, my husband and I placed an ad in the Grosse Pointe News requesting such a sitter. I received over 20 calls from sitters in the area, and only one person was willing to care for my children in my home. The woman, it turned out, was an ADC mother living in Detroit who wanted to bring her 12-year-old son into my home every day. Her credentials were not sufficient to watch my children and her personal hygiene left something to be desired. There are just not enough good sitters willing to sit in the parents' home.

Shortly thereafter, Mrs. Temkow was recommended by another resident of the community. My children, who do not warm up easily to people they do not know, fell in love with Sheila after the first day. There were no tears in the morning, and every afternoon they returned home with stories of all the exciting things they and their playmates did during the day. There are visits to the park and the library, pictures they make, muffins they bake, all in a very loving atmosphere. That, Mrs. Rice, is something that causes the scales to tip when you measure this type of care against the noise made by the closing of a car door. The issue of the car doors is something we would have worked out, only the neighbors who complained never complained to Mrs. Temkow. Instead, they reported her as a business to the city.

As a working mother, the loving care of my children is of utmost importance to me and my husband. Studies prove that family residential day care is the next best alternative to mothers staying at home. This is why we are so supportive of Mrs. Temkow and others like her who provide such a valuable resource to our children.

Fund drive begins for War Memorial

With an initial mailing of more than 7,500 solicitation letters to households in the five Grosse Pointes, the War Memorial begins its annual Family Participation Campaign. A goal of $232,000 has been set for this year's fund-raising drive.

The War Memorial, which is 67 percent self-supporting, receives no tax support. The funds raised during Family Participation are key to its continued suc-

Established in 1949 as a nonprofit civic, cultural and educational association, the War Memorial is dedicated to those Grosse United States Armed Forces. Since that time, the War Memorial has served the community by providing a variety of classes, educational trips, special events and other important services, such as the hospital loan closet.

Located in the former home of the Russell A. Alger Jr. family at 32 Lakeshore Road, the Center is also a popular site for meetings, receptions, dinners and conferences held by other non-profits and various civic associations. In all, close to 200,000 participants are served by the War Memorial each year.

November 12, 1969 Adventure of a lifetime: The Grand Tour via backpack

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

After three months wandering around Europe and the Middle East, it must be hard to settle down to the nitty-gritty of life in the Grosse Pointe lane, but Tom Bartsch is making a good stab at

He kept his nose to the grindstone for 17 years of swimming practice (All-American at South and at Tulane University) and is currently interviewing for marketing jobs, but for the summer in between, Bartsch was footloose and free of worry.

"My mom toured Europe when she graduated, and she said 'you gotta do it now while you're independent, before you get tied down," Bartsch said. And he

A few weeks after graduation last June, Bartsch was on his way to England, the first stop on a self-guided tour of 13 countries. With a backpack — a little one.

For those who think you can't go to Europe without four suitcases, Bartsch took two pairs of long pants, four short-sleeved shirts, three pairs of shorts and one pair of shoes. After a few countries, the shoes fell apart.

"I wore espadrilles for a week, then bought some sandals in happy to have them - everything gets dirty, and you can just wash them off."

He traveled on the cheap, spending many a night sitting on the floor of a crowded railway car or sleeping on the roof of a pension. ("The roof is heated from the sun — it's like a little electric blanket underneath you.") A few luxuries leavened the trip: occasional professional laundry service, a few air-conditioned hotel rooms.

Bartsch followed the path of thousands of students from the United States, Australia, South Africa and Western Europe, guided by the pages of "Let's Go: Europe," a thick volume whose pages he tore out to lighten his load as he completed each sec-

He tried to see everything he had always heard about: museums, palaces, churches, monuments. More than that, he wandered from dawn to dusk, poking into shops and alleys, strolling along side streets, just looking.

Bartsch said he spoke passable French before he left and picked up a few phrases in the language of every country he passed through. He only ran into language dead-ends a couple times.

"Once I missed a train in Spain because somebody gave me the wrong time," he said. "I was stuck in this little town. It was only afternoon, but it was the last train of the day.

"I tried to tell the guy in the station about it and I thought he told me he'd take me to a train. I wasn't sure if I should just get in this person's car, but I jumped in his jeep.

"We drove for about two hours, and I'm thinking 'where am I going?' when he finally dropped me off at a covered place beside the tracks - even worse than the first place. I wasn't sure if a train was coming or not."

It did. Europe in the summer is a great place to meet people - ofen travelers from a country far from the one you're visiting. Bartsch said he came home with lists of addresses. "I'm so outgoing, I talked to everybody," he said. "I hung around with two people for three weeks - we kept parting ways and bumping into each other again."

Some special highlights of the

Egypt. "I'm so happy I went," he said. "It's so different from any place I've ever been."

Fascinated by the contrasts between fabulously wealthy and ground-down poor, Bartsch said he loved the noise and dirt and confusion and heat. He traveled on "jam-packed" buses: "On one, the window was smashed out, the curtains were blowing in the wind. There were 30 people standing in the aisle, chickens, people spitting on the floors. The woman behind me kept being sick and missing the window."

Bartsch stayed several days in a rented stick hut in a Bedouin village by the shores of the Red Sea. He scuba-dived and trekked through the desert on a camel

Prime Time for Senior Citizens fear of reaching out

It happened in a busy shopping mall.

He was sitting on a bench, looking a little tired and discouraged. He was obviously of retirement age, but you could see that he had not retired from life. There was a snap to his dress. bench. There was a discreet distance between them. She, too, had an air of dignity, but there was a certain air of vulnerability about her. It showed in her gentle face that now betrayed a frustrated helplessness. It was a pretty face that had once been beautiful. Still attractive, her clothing, her hair, her subdued make-up had all been chosen to present a pleasing picture. One sensed that she felt the loss of her youth and worked at holding on to it. Her manner was mature and womanly in style and grace.

A group entered laden with camping gear. Evidently the mall had been chosen for a picking-up place for the van that would take them on their outing.

The two people on the bench look up. Their eyes met. He spoke first.

"I don't think I'd enjoy that and contentment she knew as a sort of outing," he said. "My wife and I always looked for a little luxury and pampering when we went on vacation."

She smiled and answered, "It's not my idea of a good time either.'

He paused and then went on, "My wife died last year. I get lonesome in the apartment. I come over here to watch the world go by."

She nodded. "I know how you feel. I lost my husband last seem bound together by the unspoken losses they have sustained as their lives were diminished by the passing years; children, once the center of their lives, grown and gone; work that filled each day with meaning and purpose, halted by retirement before the mind and body was ready; the death of the one closest and dearest who shared their life.

Neither one speaks of the pain of sitting at an empty table and remembering when eager voices recounting the events of their day mingled with laughter of a recalled joke; or the gray, sinking feeling that comes unexpectedly at a time when things seem brighter, until one realizes this is all there is. It will never be the same.

Their losses are too recent for either of them to reach out and try to find a new life. It would take more than they are ready to give to try to find new friends to replace the old who have gradually closed their paired ranks. For them it would be an admission of weakness to admit a lack of self-sufficiency. Besides, they have had a good life. Why risk what is left of it with commitments that might not work

Each one questions the possiblity of adjusting old habits and ways to those of another.

The tow truck arrives. She stands. Will she offer him to help find his car after her car is started?

He rises. Will he make the first move? Their eyes meet. She holds out her hand. He takes it. She says, "It was nice talking with you." And she walks away. He nods and smiles.

And so they part. No one knows what might have been had they reached out to each other, least of all themselves.

November 12, 1987 Grosse Pointe News News Artist and her work reunited after 20 years

By Pat Paholsky News Editor

An incredible thing happened to Gretchen Kaleel as she and her husband Ed were taking a nighttime stroll down Mack Avenue this past May. Some people might describe it as serendipity, others might say it was pure coincidence, but Kaleel calls it a "God job."

There in the window of an art gallery was a drawing she had done almost 20 years ago. She had won a prize for it in the International Freedom Festival in 1968 and then sold it to defray the cost of art supplies she needed to continue her work on her master's degree in fine arts.

In the years since, Kaleel has undergone several life changes, including a mid-life career change from teaching humanities to becoming a specialist in aging. The discovery of the drawing, titled "Neo: Abundant Life," was "the most serendipitous thing that ever happened to Kaleel said. "It was as though life was validated for me. It's where you are able to feel you have made a contribution."

Kaleel says the pencil drawing, which took her about 50 hours to do, is "very Flemish, very tightly drawn." Based on the biblical quotation, "... that you might have life, and that you might have it more abundantly." Kaleel describes the drawing's many symbols as life renewing itself.

"The grapevine is the symbol of new life and I tied it to the fetus. The chambered nautilus (a mollusk) symbolizes the growth of man's consciousness. Every time it gets too big for itself, it grows a new room. The whole thing is a rebirth cycle, the eternal flowering of the environment."

After Kaleel completed her degree, she taught drawing, painting and the humanities in East Detroit's continuing education program. She was an arts and crafts director in Fraser for many years. In the meantime, Kaleel earned a degree in social

It is ironic that he and Kaleel lived near each other, yet had never met.

After seeing the drawing in the window at Gallery in the Woods, Kaleel went there the next day and introduced herself as the artist. The gallery, which Kaleel said was supportive and sensitive, allowed her to take photos of the work which she gave to the administrator of the Father Murray Nursing Home, The drawing, which has come C. Kaleel and the nursing home bought the drawing and donated it to the hospital where it is now on display in the lobby. It has been dedicated to Kaleel's uncle, Raymond H. Dietrich, an internationally known classic car designer and builder.

Dietrich designed cars for people like Harry Truman, Al Jolson and Rudolph Valentino. He was honored many times for his accomplishments. In 1927, he won the Concours d'Elegance in Paris and in 1964, he was recognized by the Classic Car Club of America. Kristich started out in the '60s studying fine art at the Society for Arts and Crafts (now the Center for Creative Studies). But, "it's difficult to get moving in fine arts," so he picked up the study of industrial design.

"But I never stopped painting, except for one period," he said. Upset by a crisis in his personal life, he wrecked his work. "I destroyed everything and started over," he said, adding with a wry smile in a reference to Van Gogh, "but I've still got my ear."

Although he went to Europe as an industrial designer, he liked what he found as an artist. "Europe is a comfortable environment, especially for avant-

Arbitrators sought for BBB

The Detroit Better Business Bureau is currently seeking volunteers interested in becoming arbitrators. Arbitrators play an important role in the bureau.

They conduct informal hearings and render final decisions in disputes concerning products or services. Arbitration is used only when all efforts to resolve complaints through normal mediation efforts fail.

As part of its program to offer informal arbitration to settle consumer-business disputes, the bureau conducts more than 100 hearings per month.

The only qualifications needed are an interest in the program and a willingness to listen to both sides objectively before rendering a decision. Volunteers can work as many or as few hours as desired.

For additional information call the BBB at 962-7825 or 962 0550; or write 150 Michigan Ayenne, Detroit, Mich. 48226.

garde artists," he said. "The general populace is more engaged in art. It's like New York, where a cab driver will come into a show and voice an opinion. They're more likely to buy, too."

One of Kristich's hobbies while in Europe — and during more recent visits there as well — was photography, especially of landscapes. He uses the pictures as records and is involved now in interpreting scenes of Lucerne.

"I really like to draw," he said. "I draw the subject realistically, maybe several times, doing the underpainting in one color. Even as this is going on, I start to develop the subject. I get away from realism and by the time I start laying on color, it's fairly abstract."

Kristich likes to draw figures—even in landscapes, he often ends up drawing figures. "I'm doing a scene with a bridge in a town, but I find I want to draw people," he said.

He doesn't paint on commissome philosophical point.

sion.

"I detest commissions," he admitted. "Maybe I'm too anxious for perfection. Would people refuse a Rembrandt because it didn't match their carpet?"

He stopped to consider what he had said, apologized for comparing himself to Rembrandt, frowned, admitted the frustration of all artists who like most to paint for their own inner muse: "I'm reluctant to alter my palette."

Grosse Pointers tend to be traditional in their approach to art, but Kristich isn't put off by that. "The charming part for me is that it's so small-town, yet near to the big city," he said. "But it takes people a long time to get to know you."

Opening night at Kristich's show hosted art patrons and art lovers from all over the metropolitan area. "I felt good about this show," he said. "It was the first time no one argued with me. Usually they want to make some philosophical point."

Woods voters give officials pat on the back on Nov. 3

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

Voters in Grosse Pointe Woods spoke in chorus for the status quo last week. They re-elected all three incumbent councilmen, the incumbent judge and Mayor George Freeman — who was unopposed. Voters also rejected the two money requests for library construction and operation.

Municipal Judge Patricia Schneider was opposed for the first time, forcing her into a full-fledged campaign for re-election. This year, Schneider said, she did more telephoning, more walking and more advertising, and even had a campaign manager. The efforts apparently paid off: Schneider received more than 1,600 votes more than her rearest, competitor, Robert, Ihrie (3,041-1,387).

"The main, factor was having so many people who were willing to work on the campaign," said a delighted Schneider Thursday.

She said the judicial races throughout the Pointes are not usually so hotly contested as they were this year. "I don't know why," she said. "I can only think that some people believe it will become a district court. It's been 15 years since that law was passed, and I've heard no talk of it, but I can only guess that was why."

Paul Beaupre was the big vote-getter in the council race, coming up with more than 700 votes more than second-place Robert Novitke. Beaupre, who came in first in his only other council race as well, said, "You never get used to it. I quite frankly was overwhelmed by the response."

Twenty eight percent, or 3,917, voters, came to the polls this year.

Organ donation, transplants discussed

Cottage Hospital will host a special community program on Organ donation and transplants Monday, Nov. 16.

Phyllis Simpson, R.N., from the Organ Procurement Agency of Michigan, and Sue Buse, R.N., transplant coordinator for the Lifeshare program at Henry Ford Hospital, will explore the frequently overlooked possibility of organ donation. They will discuss how their agencies work and how the referral system for organ and tissue transplantation is coordinated.

The program will be held from 7 to 9 p.m., in the lower level boardrooms. Cottage Hospital is located at 159 Kercheval, between Moross and Cadieux, in Grosse Pointe Farms.

COMERICA HAS A 401(k) PLAN THAT WON'T TAX YOUR EMPLOYEES.

OR YOU.

Most 401(k) plans can be very taxing on your time and energy. That's why we suggest a full service 401(k) program from Comerica Bank. First we'll help you design the plan. Then educate your employees about its benefits. Track the contributions, generate the records, and manage the investments.

And you'll find that the 401(k) program from Comerica still gives your employees all the great tax benefits they want from a 401(k).

So call Robert J. Kay at (313) 222-5056, and establish your 401(k) at Comerica.

Then the only work you'll have to do, is make the call.

U of D prof works for wider use of infection control techniques

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

If your dentist works on your mouth without wearing disposable gloves, don't leave him. But do encourage him or her to adopt some protective practices - for the sake of both of you.

"(Leaving) is a little drastic," said John Molinari, a Grosse Pointe Park resident who chairs the University of Detroit dental school's department of microbiology and biochemistry. Molinari has a national reputation as an expert in infectious diseases and serves as a consultant to the American Dental Association in that area.

"(As a patient), I would strongly encourage him to use barrier techniques - gloves, mask, protective eyewear," he said. "We're talking about standard of care.'

Curiously enough, while it is AIDS that has locked on to the public consciousness, hepatitis B (the variety that can be transmitted on used intravenous needles) is a far more serious threat, according to Molinari.

"AIDS has stirred the imagination, but hepatitis B is actually the major occupational hazard," he said. "If you prevent that, AIDS takes care of itself."

As a specialist in infectious diseases, Molinari has been involved for more than a decade in convincing dentists and hygienists to wear protective gear. The profession was making slow, steady progress when AIDS came along and shocked the reluctant members into action.

Molinari also chairs a federal task force for the U.S. Public Health Service on AIDS and Dental Education. In that role, he is asking the government to apply national guidelines on infection control to all of the health professions. That means bringing all health professions essentially up to the standards of the hospital operating room.

"All health professions should be doing the same things," he said. "They should be speaking with one voice - EMTs, nurses, dentists, everybody."

Dental profession guidelines are already in place; adoption by the federal government would simply formalize them, he said. The guidelines protect the patient by protecting the health professional.

"The health professional is at the greatest risk of infection,' said Molinari. "Most blood and saliva go from the patient to the practitioner. This would protect both at the same time."

The list of diseases to be guarded against is by no means limited to AIDS and hepatitis B. Herpes simplex, staph infections and even tuberculosis can be transmitted from patient to doc-

Good job, Farms voters tell city officials

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

Nearly a third of the voters in Grosse Pointe Farms turned out Nov. 3 to say they like things the way they are. They turned thumbs down on the money proposals for the library and voted all three incumbent councilmen back into office.

But nestled within the framework of fulfilled expectations were some surprises. Voters gave their greatest approval to Emil Berg (1,636 votes) - who was appointed to the council less than a year ago and has never before run for office — and to newcomer Gregg Berendt (1,527 votes). And less than 330 votes separated winner Berg from candidate Paul D'Angelo (1,310 votes), who lost his outsider campaign. The defeat of the library bond issue and operating millage came as something of a surprise to observers, who said Farms voters are usually supportive of school requests. The operating millage almost squeaked by, los-

The return of incumbents Harry Echlin, Bruce Rockwell and Berg and the choice of Berendt, who had expressed agreement with the way the city is run, seems to signal voter satisfaction with the status quo. Echlin, who is mayor pro tem, won his third term with 1,464 votes, coming in third in the balloting. Rockwell, as the fourth-place finisher (1,444 votes), won his third two-year term.

But D'Angelo's loss, running as an outsider challenging the status quo, was seen as a strong finish by some of his backers who also voted for Councilman John Crowley in the last election. "I feel quite comfortable. about it," said McKinley resident John Wayne, who workedwith D'Angelo on his campaign.

"For the first time out of the chute, it wasn't bad," said a disappointed D'Angelo, "given that I didn't have any council encouragement or backing from the Grosse Pointe News." At least one official campaigned door-todoor against him, supporters

D'Angelo's run reflects the continuing feeling of some of the residents in the precincts between Mack and Kercheval that they are being ignored by the city, Wayne said. "We're in the low-rent district. We feel like second-class citizens," he said. "We want the council to pay some attention to this area."

Issues of concern to the residents include tree trimming, road maintenance and traffic. Wayne said they would also like to see the city adopt a minimum home maintenance ordinance similar to the one in the Woods.

Winner Berg said he couldn't account for his big success which surprised everyone, some observers said privately. He had never before organized a political campaign - and this one was disrupted when some family members were forced out of their house when it was struck by lightning.

"It's a heartwarming experience," Berg said as the count

TVs, stereo stolen

Two color televisions and a stereo were taken from a Lakepointe residence Saturday, Oct. 31, in the Park.

Entry was gained by prying open a wooden storm window at the rear of the house, after a deadbolt stopped the thief when he tried prying open a rear door.

A limited search was made of the first and second floors. Residents were home at the time of the break-in, around 10 p.m., but thought the noises they heard were made by another family member.

information from the infectious disease experts. Younger dentists may be responding faster.

"The younger dentists don't have as many years of barehanded techniques behind them," Molinari said. "Now students are trained from the first day, from their earliest pre-clinical courses (to wear gloves). They never learn any other way. We don't want them going into a patient's mouth 'stark naked.'

Molinari is working on behavior modification with older professionals who have never been accustomed to gloves and masks. "I have seen many professionals turn around," he said. "I know some dentists who have practiced for 40 years who have started wearing them. That makes me feel good."

Dentists are not the only people who are more aware of the potential spread of disease. Now their patients are equally aware, Molinari said.

"A couple of years ago the very idea of (a dentist) wearing gloves was novel - now patients notice if the dentist doesn't change his gloves every time he comes back in the room."

Dentists who don't protect themselves in any way are far more likely to contract diseases. As many as one-fourth of unprotected dentists will show blood markers for hepatitis B after several years, Molinari said. But protective barriers have reduced the incidence of the disease, he

Employers must verify hires

By Alan C. Nelson Special Writer

The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 calls for emplovers to make sure that anyone they hire is either a U.S. citizen or an alien authorized to work in this country.

This applies to every employer. Yet we get questions like: "I do not employ illegal aliens. Therefore, do I have to verify whether my hires are authorized to work here?"

Yes, employers' responsibilities under the law involve the one-page Form I-9, the employment eligibility verification form. The Handbook for Employers (that every employer with an IRS employer number has received) details, in words and pictures, what kinds of documents employers must examine.

• "I have misplaced my employer handbook explaining how to fill out the I-9. Where can I get another?"

At any INS office. It could be a regional or a district office. I-9 forms and the employer handbooks (M-274) are also sold by local government printing retail stores. The handbooks can also be consulted at your public li-

• "Am I obliged to give my workers statements that they worked for me between 1982 and now?"

This is a question that has come up in employer seminars held by the INS. A related question, frequently asked at legalization offices where aliens have been invited to spend the evening hours getting their questions answered, is:

· "What can I do if my exemployer refuses to verify that I worked for him?"

Unfortunately the answer is nothing . . . in the way of forcing the employer. The law counts very much on voluntary cooperating, but most are making every effort to give them workers the information. Farm Bureau of California, for example, has created a special form to make it easy for employers to help their workers become legalized. We at the INS are urging employers to help illegals rectify their situations.

Also remember that there are other ways to prove continuous residency in the United States.

The folklore of Friday the 13th

If you analyze it, even Friday the 13th contains some positive aspects. The Computerized Folklore Archive at the University of Detroit makes this claim after retrieving the lore of Friday and 13 by themselves, then of the two together. So before you ruin the day with worry, read on.

As any devotee of TGIF festivities will tell you, Fridays were never all that bad. Friday's child, says the nursery rhyme, is loving and giving; it's Wednesday's child that's full of woe. Arabs consider Friday the best day of the week for weddings, and Jewish tradition maintains not only that man was created on Friday, but also that when the Hebrew pilgrims were strugging in the wilderness, God gave them a double portion of manna on Friday. Of course, Christians regard Friday as the day of their redemption.

Thirteen has its positive side too, the Computerized Folklore Archive discovered. It helps to count to 13 when going back for something you've forgotten. Some individuals consider it a lucky number for themselves. Even more important, it's a lucky number in parts of Latin America and in Italy (where 17 is thought to be unlucky). On June 13th Mexican girls collect 13 guintos from 13 boys. With this money they then buy candles for St. Anthony and expect to marry before the next June

Indeed, St. Anthony seems to be the reason why 13 brings luck in certain areas, for example, around Padua, Italy. No wonder, St. Anthony died on June 13, 1231. For that reason Italians wear chains around their neck which bear a medal inscribed with the number 13. And for still more luck they may thumb a kind of rosary called St. Anthony's chaplet. It has 13 clusters of beads, on on each of which the dovotee should say a praver.

The Egyptians also considered 13 a lucky number, as did our own country's fathers. After all, the United States originally had 13 colonies, its flag had 13 Rodgers, Department of Humani-stribes and 13 stars, and even the country's slogan - e pluribus unum - has 13 letters. Carrying the theme to its outermost limits is the country's dollar bill, which has more 13s in it than one would ever suspect; not just 13 steps on the pyramid, but 13 stripes on the eagle's chest,

13 leaves, 13 berries, and 13 ar- has been displayed by the Chirows in his talons, not to men- cago Anti-Superstition Society tion the 13 stars hovering over

Friday the 13th may not weigh as much on the positive side as its components, but the Computerized Folklore Archive found that it's not completely negative. To some people a baby born on that day will be a good one. To others it's an occasion for social events. Certain veterans' groups have traditionally used the day for meetings at their local American Legion Post, and they don't recall being visited with any calamities for doing so. A more aggressive attitude and by the Friday the Thirteenth clubs of Los Angeles and Philadelphia. They meet either at 13 minutes before noon or 13 minutes after, they handle two dollar bills, break mirrors, and walk under ladders, and do anything else they can to show their defiance of the superstitions surrounding the day.

Quit for a day

Smokers who want to give up the cigarette habit may find the task easier on Thursday, Nov. 19, the date of the American Cancer Society's 11th annual Great American Smokeout - a day when the nation's 54 million smokers are encouraged to kick the habit for at least 24 hours, just to prove to themselves that quitting is possible.

Non-smokers are encouraged to adopt smokers, lending suprt and inspiration throughout the day in the form of survival kits, snacks and helpful hints.

More than 350,000 Americans die each year of diseases linked to smoking, representing one out of every seven deaths in the United States.

According to a Gallup survey, a record 23.8 million smokers participated in last year's smokeout by quitting or cutting down for the day. This year the American Cancer Society hopes at least one in five smokers will say "yes" to giving up cigarettes on a long-term basis.

For more information on participating in the Great American Smokeout, call the American Cancer Society at 425-6830.

Art scholar

University Liggett School seventh-grader Alexander Childrey, center, is congratulated by Headmaster Ted Whatley and ULS senior Ross Roy for winning the Ross Roy and Sally Memorial Arts Scholarship. The award, presented annually to a student who has a demonstrated interest in pursuing curricular and extracurricular opportunities in creative and performing arts within the framework of a college preparatory program, was given by Celia Christiansen Roy, a graduate of The Liggett School, in memory of her husband, Ross Roy, and her daughter, Sally, a 1970 graduate of the Grosse Pointe University School, a predecessor of ULS.

Student Spotlight Melissa Mabley

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

The following was a class assignment from St. Paul thirdgrade teacher Sharon P. Carolin on what students would do if they discovered America. Melissa Mabley, who wrote the paragraph without any help, is the daughter of John and Anne Mabley of Grosse Pointe.

Columbus

If I discovered America, I would build all sorts of houses, boats and other habitats. I would grow food, plants and hunt turkey. I would not push the Indians aside or forget their customs I would ask them to teach me their customs. And I would build a church and teach them about God and Jesus. I would aim for peace and freedom.

Melissa Mabley

This space is open to any student in the Grosse Pointe public or private school system from grades 1 through 12.

Send your entry along with a picture to Student Spotlight, Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms 48236, or drop it off at the office. If you would like everything returned, enclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope

ULS debaters advance

For three tournaments in a row, the University Liggett School debate team has worked its way into elimination rounds.

On Oct. 10-11, varsity debaters Adam Levinson and Nishu Sood reached the octofinals of the Birmingham Seaholm Tournament.

At the Oct. 23-24 Southfield Invitational, varsity debate duo of Tom Vallone and Prasad Rao advanced to the quarterfinals. The novice team of Nita Kulkarni, Alex Missal, Alex Stine and Manisha Kulkarni advanced to the semifinals in their divi-

Levinson and Sood made it to the quarterfinals of the Oct. 30 Royal Oak Kimball Tournament, notching a 4-1 record in the five preliminary rounds. The pair worked their way past 55 teams, including top-ranked Grosse Pointe South, Muskegon Mona Shores and Birmingham Seaholm, to place in the top eight. Kavita Sood and Robert Zych compiled a commendable 3-2 record at the same tournament.

Helminski receives English award

Joseph J. Helminski, a Grosse Pointe South High School senior, was recently named a winner of the 1987 National Council of Teachers of English Achievement Award in Writing.

Helminski, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Helminski, of Grosse Pointe Farms, is one of only 700 winners selected to represent the high schools in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and the American Schools abroad.

More than 6,000 students were nominated last January by their English teachers for the achievement awards.

Each nominee submitted a sample of his/her writing and an impromptu essay. These compositions were evaluated by state judging teams made up of high school and college teachers.

The council recommends those cited, now seniors, for college scholarships in 1988 should they need assistance.

The National Council of Teachers of English is a professional organization of individual and institutional members at all levels of instruction. Its goal is to increase the effectiveness of the teaching of English language and literature in the nation's schools and colleges.

Thank you, Henry Ford Museum, for the trip down Memory Lane.

The automobile is such an integral part of our lives that we may not notice its effects on our culture. In their new permanent exhibition, The Automobile In American Life, Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn shows us all the vast influences the automobile has had on culture.

Many fascinating themes are explored in the exhibit. In THE AUTOMOTIVE LANDSCAPE, we see how the car has influenced our roadside culture and even architecture. GETTING AWAY FROM IT ALL shows how we've adapted the automobile for camping, with examples like the 1915 Packard Camping Truck and the Volkswagen Westfalia

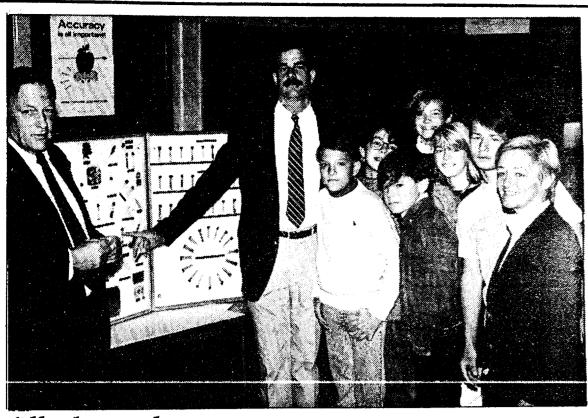

Camper. "You are what you drive" is the theme of THE AUTOMOBILE AS AMERICAN SYMBOL, with examples ranging from a 1926 Rolls-Royce to the 1965 Pontiac GTO. ADVERTISING AND PRO-MOTING THE AUTOMOBILE gives us a behindthe-scenes look into the creation of advertising for such cars as the 1909 Sears Autobuggy and the 1964 Ford Mustang. Other displays of autos and automobilia include DESIGNING THE AUTOMOBILE and THE EVOLUTION OF THE AUTOMOBILE AND ITS HISTORY. No auto buff, engineer or observer of cultural history should miss this monument to the automobile and its effects on our lives.

Du Pont is pleased to be a sponsor of this exhibit. We've been deeply involved with the automotive industry since 1910 when we introduced the coated fabric for the "ragtops" of the era. Since then, we've been developing materials and technologies that have kept us at the cutting edge of the industry, as well as propelling us into the future.

Only an automaker commits more technology to cars than Du Pont.

Bringing life into handmade puppets is one of the many talents George Latshaw shared durat University Liggett School.

One Wednesday, Oct. 22, Latshaw performed with his pupthe middle school and pre-kindergarten. In addition, he held a workshop Oct. 24 to help interested participants bring life into puppets.

Youth caucus kicks off 6th year

High school students living in the 13th Congressional District are eligible to join Congressman George Crockett's Youth Caucus. The group was established in 1982 to encourage leadership development, community involvement and political awareness among high school students.

The district encompasses Grosse Pointe South High School. Students interested in joining may see their social studies teacher or call Wanda Jones at Crockett's district office, 874-signed exercises to help the participants express their thoughts through hand motions. The creation of a marionette is just as viing his stay as artist-in-residence tal as the process of bringing it to life. He also explained that working with puppets is like working with another language pets, The Borrowed Bodies, in in that puppeteers must learn how to communicate through a limited medium.

Paradoxically, this somewhat restrictive art provides flexibility in that the performers are behind the curtains and only the marionettes are in the audience's view. For example, an aged actor cannot play the role of a young man because his appearance does not allow him to do so. In puppetry theater, this actor can assume the role because only the marionettes are shown to the audience.

An author, master puppeteer and educator, Latshaw's unique talent has brought him worldwide recognition. He was invited, along with six other artists, to conduct a conference in the People's Republic of China this summer. The workshop, sponsored by the China Fund for the Handicapped, was designed to enhance the knowledge of Chinese teachers in dance, drama, music and puppetry. Furthermore, it brought more awareness of western art to the Orient.

The Grosse Pointe Cinema League will meet Monday, Nov. 16, at 8 p.m. at the War Memo-

Bill Buchanan, past-president of the Photographic Guild of Detroit, will show 35mm slides of "Photographic New Englnad," "Colorado and the San Juan Mountains" and "From Sea to Shining Sea."

The New England slides are a photographic journey with narration and music through the backroads of Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine. The Colorado slides take a journey through one of the most breathtaking states with ghost towns and the grandeur of the San Juan Mountains. And lastly, there will be a short photographic essay that presents a look at the United States through the eyes of a photographer.

The public is invited. There is a $2 charge for non-members, plus 50 cents for the social hour afterward. Memberships are available for $10.

Sunday concert

The Chamber Music Players of Grosse Pointe will present a Sunday afternoon concert in the War Memorial Crystal Ballroom Nov. 15, at 2:30 p.m.

The program is dedicated to Dr. Aaron A. Farbman (1902-1987), surgeon and violinist, one of the original founders of The Chamber Music Players of Grosse Pointe.

Performing will be Helen Near, flute, and Martin Burwell, piano, in Sonata for Flute and Piano, opus 14, by Robert Muczynski. Songs by Richard Strauss will be presented by Jo Bristah, soprano, and Thomas M. Kuras, piano. The final portion of the concert will consist of a Trio in A Minor for Clarinet, Cello, and Piano, opus 114, by Johannes Brahms. The artists will be Steven Millen, clarinet, Richard Ptippo, cello, and Marting Burwell, piano.

Light refreshments will follow the program. The public is invited. Admission at the door is $3, and members attend free.

City of Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan NOTICE OF HEARING ZONING BOARD OF APPEALS

meet in City Hall, 90 Kerby Road, Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan on:

at 7:30 p.m. to hear the following:

- a. The appeal of Mr. Gary Brown, owner of the vacant lot located at Lot 50 Edgemere Subdivision, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a Building Permit for a new residence at the foregoing location. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that the proposed residence to be located on the foregoing premises would be in violation of the side and rear yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance under an R-IAAA District, a side yard of 6 feet being proposed on one side instead of the required 15 feet and a rear yard of 30 feet being proposed instead of the required 40 feet, thereby requiring variances from the aforementioned provisions of the Zoning Ordinance.
- b. The appeal of Mr. Warren Smale, owner of the premises located at 334 Ridge, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a Building Permit for the addition of a second story and the enclosure of an existing rear porch at the existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that the residence located on the foregoing premises is non-conforming for reason that it is in violation of the front yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a var-
- The appeal of Joanne Koski, owner of the premises located at 108 Mapleton Road, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a Building Permit for an addition to her existing dwelling located at the foregoin address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that:
 - 1. the residence located on the foregoing premises is nonconforming for reason that it is in violation of the side and front and rear yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.
 - 2. the proposed addition would further infringe upon the minimum rear yard requirements of 30 feet, leaving a rear yard of 20 feet thereby requiring a variance from the provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance.
- d. The appeal of Mr. & Mrs. Francis Howard, owners of the premises located at 324 Belanger, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a Building Permit for the construction of a small addition to the front of their existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that the residence located on the foregoing premises is non conforming for reason that it is in violation of the side yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.

The Hearings will be public. Interested property owners or residents of the City are invited to attend.

Ianitorial service cleans up with fast service, loyal employees

By Margle Reins Smith Staff Writer

Listen up, husbands! Grosse Pointer Jim McEntee helps his wife with housework.

He does floors.

During the day at work, he does windows, too; and walls; he dusts, shampoos carpets, paints, cleans furniture. And more.

McEntee is president of The Cleaning Crew, Inc., a commercial janitorial, painting and window cleaning company. Although the company has been in business only about a year, McEntee said it made a profit after six months, and he hopes to have more than $1 million in sales at the end of his second year. "Business is going well," he said, "probably 100 percent better than my estimations."

To be fair, it must be noted that in return, McEntee's wife helps with the business. Gail McEntee has taken a leave of absence from her public relations position at Jade Associates to become vice president and secretary of The Cleaning Crew. "She is vice president of public relations and quality control," he said, "and one of my best assets.'

One of Gail McEntee's most visible contributions to the new

that the most impressive business cards were the ones with graphics," McEntee said. "Gail is an artist. She tried several cartoons. Our son Jamie, 16, came up with the idea of drawing little cleaning machines with faces," he said. "We ended up with a caricature of me with a cleaning crew of animated equipment. The card is a great conversation piece. It's often passed around an office because it's unusual. It's remembered. What more can you ask from a little piece of paper? It has generated many calls for us." McEntee's janitorial firm handles two classifications of cleaning: scheduled janitorial work and one-time jobs. He explained that scheduled work is the routine cleaning of offices - dusting horizontal surfaces, vacuuming, trash removal, cleaning and sanitizing rest rooms. The work is generally done at night; on one or two or up to five nights a week.

One-time jobs, he said, are part of the business' service designed to reduce competition. "For instance," he said, "we'll clean the fluorescent lights - or paint some machinery - or shampoo carpeting and furniture firm is their unique business for a firm that we do scheduled card. "Over the years, I realized work for. We don't want them to get any of our competitors in."

> He said The Cleaning Crew has done a variety of one-time jobs for clients. "We've put up mailboxes, dusted racks during inventories, vacuumed rafters, painted offices, replaced windows with lexan, and replaced vinyl tile in bathrooms."

> The firm does such chores as machine painting, stripping and waxing floors, electrostatic painting, concrete floor cleaning and window cleaning. "We've done everything from vacuuming the wind tunnel at the GM Tech Center to painting basketball courts on gym floors.'

One of the firm's specialties. he said, is putting down game lines on sheet vinyl flooring. It is one of only two companies in Michigan that do such specialized work.

McEntee learned the business while working with his father's commercial janitorial firm for 18 years. He launched his own company after his father's retirement.

Many of the nearly 100 employees of The Cleaning Crew are on-call workers who go out in groups of 10 or 20 with a supervisor. A typical employee, according to McEntee, has a fulltime day job, but comes to his firm for part-time work at night. "He'll start by working about two hours one night a week. He'll want to work more and we'll build up his weekly hours with more jobs in his geographic area. The work is easy. Employees set their own speed. If he can do a two-hour job in one hour, OK. Then he can do more."

McEntee estimated 60 percent of his employees are part-time people. Those who work during the day, on one-time jobs, are often transported to and from work by The Cleaning Crew something unique to McIntee's

"Many of our employees, we discovered, lived in an area near Detroit City Airport. They were originally walk-ins. They were willing to work. Nice men. They had no cars. No way to get to work. They were family men who wanted work," said Mc-Intee.

"Most companies would say, 'Get to work on your own or I don't want to see you.' We pick up these employees at about 6 a.m., take them to work, then return them when the job is done, around 3:30 or 6:30 or whatever." Because of this policy, The Cleaning Crew has built up a loyal crew of workers who See JANITORIAL, page 27A

Iim McEntee, president of The Cleaning Crew, Inc., a commercial janitorial company, said he values a rapport with his employees and takes a genuine interest in the nearly 100 people who work for him. His company even transports employees to and from work.

Michael V. Auty of Grosse Pointe Farms has joined Intergroup Marketing & Promotions Inc. as creative supervisor. In his new position, Auty will be responsible for client contact, proposal development and management of primary business communications programs for Pontiac. He has a degree in English literature from Wayne State University and is studying for a business administration degree from Michigan State University's Advanced Management program.

Susan Hudson of Grosse Pointe has joined Young & Rubicam Detroit as a traffic coordinator assigned to Ford ESP merchandising. Hudson is a graduate of the University of Michigan and is a former Y&R summer intern.

Former Grosse Pointer Lloyd Marks has been named president of Encore International. He is cofounder of the new company, which specializes in the resale and leasing of data processing and telecommunications equipment. Marks was with CMI Corp. for nine years, most recently as senior vice president in charge of U.S., Canadian and European marketing. He is a graduate of Eastern Michigan University with a degree in marketing and management.

Five Grosse Pointers were named to the executive council for the Governor's Conference on Traffic Safety, held last week in Lansing. Appointed were Alfred Glancy, Charles Fisher, Louis Weil, William Vititoe and G. Mennen Williams.

Nancy Velek, Mark Monaghan and George Smale, managers with Schweitzer Real Estate/Better Homes and Gardens, attended a management orientation session of Better Homes and Gardens real estate service. Schweitzer has been a member of the service since 1978. The seminar discussed current market trends and programs developed by the service on home marketing, home buying and home information systems.

Red velvet suit, white whiskers are part of 'dress for success'

Jim McEntee, president of The Cleaning Crew, Inc., will portray Santa Claus for the third year in a row at the annual Brunch with Santa at the War Memorial Saturdays, Dec. 5 and 13. McEntee will climb into the obligatory wellpadded red velvet suit, long white beard, and high black boots to visit with about 200 youngsters at this yearly pre-Christmas community event.

"I like the way this is done at the War Memorial because I walk around and talk to and touch every child. It takes about one-and-a-half hours, while the children are eating brunch," he said.

McEntee remembers waiting in line to see Santa when he was a child. He hated it.

He said he would not enjoy playing a Santa who remains seated on an imposing throne; one who waits for a long line of restless youngsters to take turns sitting on his knee. "I hate to wait in lines myself," he said. "Children hate to wait in lines Santa, sitting on a throne, is an intimidating sight for a small child.

"Each child at the War Memorial brunch is wearing a tag with his name and age, which helps me and really impresses the kids.'

McEntee's individualized approach brings good reactions from many children. "One older kid," he remembers, "about 10 or 11, looked like he was not having fun. He was there with his little brother. He clearly didn't believe. I was trying to be nice to him, to get him to smile. He finally responded to the 'Gimmee five routine.'"

McEntee is often so convincing in his role that young believers have to be distracted, so they don't try to follow him out to his sleigh or ask to pet the reindeer.

McEntee also served as tribal chief and Grosse Pointe Federation Chief for the Indian Princesses while his daughter, Jennifer, 14, and he were involved with the group. "That's where I got to loving kids so much," he said.

You may be thinking about investing in an alarm system to protect your business or residence. Or you may have already invested in one. But what happens if an intruder cuts the line to that system? In most cases, the system shuts down. Unless you have new Scan-Alert* service. Scan-Alert service is an inexpensive addition for most alarm systems that use your phone line to transmit a signal to your alarm company. So not only can emergency calls get through, the system is also automatically triggered if the telephone line is cut or tampered with. Definitely a worthwhile investment for your

Realtors elect new directors

Three new directors were selected by the membership of the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors at their annual election.

Directors, who will serve for three-year terms, are Nanci Bolton, John Moss and Donald Smith. Installation ceremonies will take place at a reception to be held at the Country Club of Detroit in January.

Members of the Board of Directors whose terms will expire are Hugo S. Higbie and Marilyn A. Stanitzke.

As the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors starts its third year as an independent board, the directors will consist of 10 members. It will have the three newly elected directors together with Kathleen Clawson, opast president; Douglas Andrus; president; Forman S. Johnston, president-elect; Kathryn M. Tower, North Pointe staffs take beats seriously

School officials lopping off paragraphs or killing news stories before the student newspaper is printed may be a problem at some schools, but it doesn't happen in Grosse Pointe, according to the staffers at The Tower and North Pointe.

Students at the two high school newspapers say they are keenly aware of their responsibility to be factual and fair in the reporting of news. Third- and fourth-year student editors have no qualms in telling an underclassmen that there are serious problems with a story and sending the younger colleague back to the typewriter for a rewrite.

On any given Monday at The Tower, students, under adviser Bob Button, are working on three issues. They are given assignments for the issue due in two weeks, they turn in stories assigned the previous week, and they work on layout for the current issue.

Though both The Tower and North Pointe are subsidized by the schools, Tower staffers have chosen to make theirs a paid circulation. Students pay $2 a year for 31

"The students made a decision to charge for the paper, because they felt that people who pay to read the paper would be better readers than those who get it free," Button said.

The Tower has an annual budget of $35,000 a year, which includes revenues from advertising and subscription fees. The paper currently charges $4 per column inch and runs between 12 to 15 percent ad space in the eight-page paper.

The philosophy at North Pointe is different. Its budget hovers around $22,000. Recently, a decision was made to change from a tabloid, similar to The Tower, to a smaller magazine-like format. Because there is somewhat less space on the page, there is a little less room for advertising, something the students don't seem too concerned about.

"The change from the tabloid style is new and exciting," said Lisa Wood, a senior and one of two editors-in-chief for this year's staff. "It's smaller, more upscale and new. We will be able to do a lot more graphically."

North Pointe adviser Dick Amberg, a 20year veteran, said the students made the decision to change the format. He made recommendations and offered alternatives, but the final decision was theirs. Wood said that since the paper is given a budget from the school board, advertising isn't the main concern. Concentration on creativity, the use of graphics and stories is more important for this class.

Students can cover any story they want. The Tower won awards last year for a drug abuse survey and analysis. They have run stories on controversial topics like teen pregnancy, suicide and teen parties. Both newspapers regularly run editorials which may criticize the school or administration, but both allow space for letters to the editor which may disagree with the editorial view.

Tower Editor Sara Wasinger said she feels the First Amendment privileges guaranteed to newspapers applies to school papers.

"The freedom to speak is an important part of this school," Wasinger said, "just as education is part of school."

Staffers at both North and South felt that while there is a case about the First Amendment rights of high school papers before the U.S. Supreme Court, the question of censorship doesn't exist in Grosse Pointe.

North Managing Editor Heather Morrison said the staff at North Pointe censors themselves. Articles that appear in the paper are proofread and edited by the senior members of the staff. Once the copy is edited, it is turned over to Amberg, who advises the students if there are grammatical problems or if there are serious questions, such as omission of facts or libelous statements. He only recommends, however, what or how to change a story. The decision is left up to the students. The stories are then perused by North Principal John Kastran, but here too, he only advises if there is a problem.

"We listen to Mr. Amberg," Wood said. "He has been doing this for 20 years."

Morrison said that last year North Pointe published a feature story on teen pregnancy.

"No one here had any problem with the story," Morrison said. "Some parents were upset. We didn't write the story to sensationalize teenage sex. It was written because there was information that students needed to know."

Steve Greaves, Behind-the-News editor, said that because an issue is controversial, there is no reason not to talk or write about it.

"Putting out a newspaper is just as much part of education in this school as anything else," Greaves said. "You can't please everyone. The taxpayers pay for education, sports, books and this (newspaper) is part of our education."

While they cover controversies, there is always plenty of room for the things that students like to read. School sports, entertainment and school events are given extensive coverage in both papers.

The papers feature movie and concert reviews, fashion, articles on skateboarding or Halloween (depending on the season) and in-depth sports coverage on everything from who carried the ball to cheerleaders fighting apathy.

Tower adviser Bob Button has been with the newspaper for 22 years. He works closely with all of the students, helping to make the publication the award-winning newspaper it is. Sara Wasinger pounds out a story while Button takes a look.

Wasinger said she took the beginning journalism class which helped improve her writing. She said she felt as though she wanted to get more involved in school activities.

"I enjoy layout the most," she said. "In newspapers it's the graphics and visual things which attract me the most."

Megan Abbot, North Pointe opinion editor, said she feels the duty of a high school newspaper is to inform students about things in school and let their interests and opinions be expressed.

"Students have to take an interest in the paper," Abbot said. "It can't be a newsletter."

"It is the voice of the students," said John Guibord, North Pointe sports editor. "It is cliche to say that, but it really is."

DeAnne Molinari, a Tower news editor, said the job of the paper is to keep students aware of what's happening around them. "Students tend to take the paper for granted, that is until we are late or miss an issue. Then everyone comes in here and asks where the paper is."

Greaves said he enjoys the feedback he gets from people who read articles he has written.

"That's probably the biggest part of it," he said. "I get to see the reaction to what I have written. Their reaction sometimes means more to me than an A on a paper. You sense someone took the time to read what you've written, then took the time to say something to me. It's great to use the skills I have learned, even if there is a bad reaction to a story."

With a wealth of experts in many areas in the Grosse Pointes, students are able to draw on that knowledge and use it for stories. Students can contact local police officials to learn about the teenage party problem or a local psychologist to discuss teenage suicide or substance abuse.

While students from both papers say they don't compete with each other, there is the feeling that they enjoy scooping the other.

Button noted that last year during the week of the North-South football match-up, teams from each school visited the other, then wrote stories about the image the students had about the other school, versus the reality of what existed there. Other than that one instance, there is no coordination of stories or combined coverage.

Each paper wrote articles about the study by the administration regarding closed campuses. Each paper accompanied their story with an editorial on the subject.

Button said students are dedicated to their paper. He said they spend the one class hour a day, plus an additional average of three or four hours a week during the evening going over the work.

"It is a major time commitment," Button said. "The people who are most involved will be spending eight to 10 hours a week outside of the class."

Button said that many people consider journalism as a fun course, and while he agreed it may be fun for students, it is probably one of the most informative classes for students.

"It can be one of the most academically fulfilling classes," he said. "We are writing about real subjects for a real and critical audience, and we can have an impact. Peer editing makes students better writers. They learn about style and work with each other to improve. They can learn as much about writing and editing from the writing itself."

Awards

Over the years, both Grosse Pointe North and South high school newspapers, North Pointe and Tower, have received numerous awards. The 1986-87 school year proved to be no exception.

The Tower, celebrating its 60th anniversary this year, scored a rare triple crown in scholastic journalism, winning the highest ratings from three different national evaluation services and advancing in two separate contest that will recognize the top high school newspapers in the country.

The Columbia Scholastic Press Assocociation, based at Columbia University in New York, gave the Tower its Medalist rating. Tower scored 994 of a possible 1,000 points and earned All-Columbian honors in every area.

North Pointe, celebrating its 20th anniversary this year, was awarded a first place award by the Columbia Press Association.

The first place honors are the second highest award given by the association.

K.E.N.N.Y. crusade will continue in Grosse Pointe

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk Feature Editor

'arlene Hudson's first thought when the parent group of K.E.N.N.Y. (Kids Everywhere Now Need You) disbanded last month was of the group's founder, Marie Edenstrom, a women who had championed unceasingly for public awareness of child safety since the kidnap-murder of her son, Kenny Myers, in 1984.

Hudson's second thought was of the group she had led since its inception in 1985, the Grosse Pointe Chapter of K.E.N.N.Y.

"First I called Marie Edenstrom and asked her if the disbanding of the parent group meant that we had to disband. Marie told me that we didn't, that we were our own corporation and could continue if we wished. And she told me that she would be happy for us if we did," said Hudson, of Grosse

K.E.N.N.Y. was a non-profit organization founded in May of 1985 in memory of Myers, a 14year-old murder victim. Led by Edenstrom, the public awareness group worked with the assistance of volunteers concerned with the safety of children. It provided speaker presentations for adult groups, a "Safety With Strangers," slide program for children, support and assistance for families of missing children in Michigan, a missing children poster program and a library of child safety materials.

"Marie Edenstrom is a most amazing woman," Hudson said. "Here was someone who lost a child and six months later wanted to do something for others in his memory. She said that she never wanted another child to go through what Kenny had gone through or another family to experience what she Hudson's involvement with K.E.N.N.Y. began in April 1985. "I'd been talking with some local women about rumors of attempted abductions in the Grosse Pointe area. Then one affront steps watching my little girl play in the yard. Out of the corner of my eye I noticed a strange man walking up to my daughter. Now I live on a dead end street and you notice when somebody walks down the street; the mailman is the day's big event. I got up and started to walk toward the baby and the man saw me, stopped and started to walk away in a hurry.

"I got scared, but I grabbed her and got into the car and followed him. I couldn't find the man, but I called the police. They told me that I should have called them first. They looked for the guy but never did find him," Hudson recalled.

The scare she had from that incident prompted Hudson to ask the police if there was a local group which helped prevent such things from happening, or even one which taught small children what to do in the event they are approached. The police were sympathetic, but couldn't help Hudson beyond providing her with the reading materials on safety they had on hand.

"But I remember them telling me that I should realize - and Pointe is not a place where this can't happen."

Around that time Hudson read Marie Edenstrom and her work. She arranged for Edenstrom to speak at St. Paul School and the response from local parents to that speech prompted the formation of a Grosse Pointe chapter of K.E.N.N.Y. "Marie suggested that we form an east side chapter since the parent group was on the west side. We incorporated in February 1986 and got our tax exempt status in May of this year. And now, the Grosse Pointe Chapter of K.E.N.N.Y. is the only chapter in the state," Hudson explained.

At that time, Hudson said, the group's goal was to reach as many children and as much of the general public as possible to inform them on ways to stay safe ... without frightening children. The motivation, she added, came from Marie Edenstrom.

"I thought, 'My God, here's a woman who has lost a child and I can't imagine how awful that loss must feel. The least we could do is to help her achieve person experience that feeling," Hudson said.

The 15-member Grosse Pointe a Detroit Free Press article on chapter went to work, bringing the program to some 4,000 Grosse Pointe school children in 1985-86 and again in 1986-87. The group spoke to church gatherings, at Optimist Club meetings and in schools. They made an appearance on Grosse Pointe Cable TV, presenting the program in May so that the children could benefit by it most just before warm weather and increased outdoor activity.

For Hudson, the work with the chapter was almost therapeutic. "I felt so discouraged with society, so frightened that this was the sort of world we had, where 14-year-old boys can have things happen to them like this. Then when you start to work in a field where so many people are helping to protect children and you meet so many people who ask what they can do to help, it really makes you feel good," Hudson said.

The advantage to the group's child safety program is that it is presented in a non-threatening way, Hudson explained. "The

They have to be made aware of what's going on in the world and how to deal with certain situations without making them frightened.

"This program is relaxed, and we've found that the kids enjoy it because it gives them a chance to role play and learn something at the same time. And they want to learn, we'd go into the classrooms and the kids were like bottles of pop that you'd shake with the cap on ... just all bubbling up with no place to let go. And after the program, where they'd have a chance to role play and ask questions and make comments, you could see them relax."

Hudson said that she feels it is a shame that the parent group of K.E.N.N.Y. had to come to an end. "Marie worked so hard and against so many obstacles. In a volunteer organization like this people will rally behind the organization when it is fresh and new and then as time goes by they start to step back and all of a sudden, there's just one person

Special Writer

November, in the American Indian calendar, is known as the Month of the Mad Moon. Much folklore exists about the moon in its relation to gardening and superstition Legend involving moonlore has been around for a very long time. If you approach your garden in a horoscope mood you might take heed of some ancient maxims.

Do your planting only at the waning of the moon as this will ensure good root growth. Root crops should be planted during the third quarter of the waning moon and above-ground vegetables two nights before the new moon or in the first quarter of the new moon. Seed can be sown when the moon is going from hair to fun.

Pruning is also influenced by moon signs, legend says. To stimulate growth, pruning should be done in the first and second quarter of the moon and in a fruitful or productive sign, such as Cancer, Scorpio or Pisces. To retard growth, prune in the third or fourth quarter with the moon in a barren sign. This is also the time to spray for weeds and insects.

If the moon has great influence over you, it might be worthwhile to try gardening under the moon signs. Remember these

Do you know why it is better to water your house plants until the water runs out of the bottom of the pot instead of giving them just a little water and doing it more often?

When soil is watered, in a container or in the garden the moisture seeps down in layers. Each prettiest red leaves for winter soil layer must be thoroughly wetted before the water goes to the next layer, or "wetting front." When a small amount of water is supplied anything below the wetting front remains dry. Thus lower roots may not receive any water at all.

Teacher of the year:

The Michigan Music Teachers Association has made official what music students in the state have known for years: Ruth Burczyk, Grosse Pointe concert pianist and teacher, has been named "State Teacher of the Year," by the association. The presentation took place at the group's annual convention in Lansing on Oct. 19.

Well-known for her many solo recitals and Symphony Orchestra performances, Burczyk is a 12-year member of the piano faculty at the National Music Camp at Interlochen. She is also immediate past president of the Detroit Musicians League and is listed on the prestigious roster of Steinway Artists.

A family affair: Labor Day is traditionally the time for family reunions . . . and it wasn't any different at the Grosse Pointe Woods' home of Jim and Marti Miller this past Labor Day. What was different was that it was the seventh family reunion for descendants of Jacob Wismer, who have been able to trace their ancestry back to 1684 Germany.

That fact is documented in a book titled "Wismer Family History," by the Rev. A.J. Fretz, published by the Mennonite Publishing Company in 1893. A copy of the book is in the Burton Historical Collection at the Detroit Public Library.

Jacob Wismer arrived in the North Carolina area in 1709 by way of England from the Palatinate in Germany, where he and his fellow citizens had been religiously and politically persecuted. After spending a few years near the headwaters of the Neuse River near present day New Bern, N.C., Wismer traveled to Bucks County, Pa., in 1720, where he was the first white settler on his tract of land.

From there, some of his descendents migrated to the Markham Township area of Ontario and later generations came to America via Sarnia over the ice in winter . . . with oxen in tow.

Marti Miller is the granddaughter of the late George Thomas Wismer, sixth generation descendent of the original Wismer and of the late Martha Laura Graichen of Delaware Township in Sanilac County. It was mainly the descendents of George Wismer who attended the reunion at the Miller home on Labor Day.

Two of Wismer's three children, Winifred Mae Klaus and Franklin George Wismer and their families were present. Miller is the daughter of George Wismer's second child, the late Effie Irene Kunze. Other Wismer descendents attended from Grosse Pointe Farms, Grosse Pointe Park, Royal Oak, Birmingham, Farmington Hills, Port Huron, Grand Rapids, Big Rapids, Frankenmuth, Petoskey, Sawyer and Chicago, Ill. Also present was Alan Wismer of Warren, who has done considerable research on the Wismer genealogy.

In all, it added up to more than enough Wismers to keep the talk around the picnic table quite lively.

Speaking of history:

Preservation Wavne, Detroit's oldest active historic preservation organization, will join with the Founder's Junior Council to organize a festive evening of theater and art focusing on the renown American artist James McNeill Whistler, on Friday, Nov. 20, at the Hilberry Theatre.

The evening will begin at 7:30 p.m. with a presentation by the Detroit Institute of Arts of one of Whistler's most controversial works: "Nocturne in Black and Gold: The Falling Rocket." Following that, historian Thomas W. Brunk will discuss the East Ferry Avenue home of the late Charles Lang Freer, art patron and friend of Whistler.

Tickets are available from Preservation Wayne, 4735 Cass Avenue, or the Hilberry Theatre on Hancock at Cass, and are $10 for students, $15 for members of Preservation Wayne and the Junior Council, $20 for individual non-members, and $35 for non-member couples.

Why should someone as healthy as you be tested for Breast Cancer or Osteoporosis?

You're still young. You take good care of yourself. You feel just fine. Right now, two serious diseases like breast cancer or osteoporosis (the brittle bone disease) are the farthest things from your mind. And, that's exactly why now is the time to ask your doctor to help you begin an early detection program. Now, when there's time to detect breast cancer early enough. And, time to stop or even prevent osteoporosis.

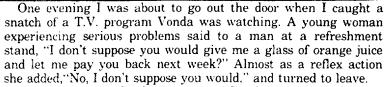

If your doctor recommends a mammogram (a safe, low dose breast X-ray) or a dual photon bone density study (the simple, painless test for osteoporosis), consider Bon Secours Hospital. Our women technologists will care for you with the kind of empathy only another woman can offer. And, our comfortable waiting lounge will make you feel right at home. So see your doctor. And remember Bon Secours. There is a difference in hospitals. And we're it. For a free brochure or information about mammography and osteoporosis testing at Bon Secours Hospital, please call 343-1200 or toll free 1-800-331-0954, weekdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and ask for our Women's Resource Center.

The Pastor's Corner Thank God by doing for others

By The Rev. Don Lichtenfelt Pastor, Reedemer United Methdist

The merchant said, "Just a minute! I've been in business long enough to know who's a moocher and who's down on their luck.

"Thanks," she said, "I'll pay you next week." And he said, "Forget it. Just help someone who is down on their luck next time you

It seems to me that pretty well sums up the meaning of Thanksgiving - gratitude in action! As Albert Schweitzer put it, "In gratitude for your own good fortune, you must render in recarn some sacrifice of your life for other life."

Unless we suffer from total ignorance, we all know we could not have made it without the help of many others, on many occasions. It may have been a loan from a relative or friend, a word of encouragement when we were desperately discouraged, an opportunity to work at a time of real need, relief from a life-threatening illness, or restoration of sight or circulation when our eyes or heart were about to give out. All these have happened to me . . . perhaps you, too.

Most of us still live as though our lives did "consist in the abundance of our possessions." But if life has been good to us, then we have a corresponding obligation to others."Everyone to whom much is given, of them will much be required."

Even if we have no thing to give to others, we can still give a word of praise, or thanks, or appreciation, or cheer to keep someone else on their feet. Blessed is the person who speaks such a word. As Kahlil Gibran said, "Though the hands of such as these God speaks, and from behind their eyes He smiles upon the

The debts we owe to God are still payable on the altar of human need. May each day find our gratitude in action!

Operation LINC volunteers are preparing for their two annual holiday programs, which last year alone resulted in the distribution of nearly 18,000 gifts to children and adults in the metropolitan Detroit area.

Operation LINC (Linking Individuals to Needs in the Community) is a non-profit volunteer organization started in 1971. LINC operates throughout the year linking donors of new and used goods or services to metro Detroit charitable agencies. Donations of food, toys, clothing, appliances, office equipment, etc., are distributed free of charge in response to ongoing requests by these communitybased organizations.

The Foster Care Program, now in its 14th year, is chaired this year by Joan Shirilla. Gifts will be collected from children in Grosse Pointe area schools and churches for distribution to foster care children through Wayne County Social Services. At any one time there are between 2,000 and 3,000 children in family foster care and another 1,000 in residential care. All have been either neglected, abandoned Shirilla says that she hopes the program will generate donations of 4,000 gifts this year so that each of these children will enjoy a happy holiday. Her committee has been busy distributing flyers and asking for help to accomplish this goal. Items such as stuffed animals, toys, cars and trucks, books, puzzles, mittens and hats are requested. Each item is holiday wrapped and labeled to identify the contents and age it is best suited for.

Shirilla asks that anyone who knows of a nursery, public or private school or church which may be interested in participating in the Foster Care Program call the LINC office.

Another LINC effort to brighten the lives of those less fortunate is the Holiday Gift and Toy Chest. This program has gan seven years ago in response to numerous gift requests the LINC office receives at Christmas from the agencies it serves.

Chairperson Billie Clinton and Nancy Adams, Christine Burt, Nancy Heaphy and Sue Smitka are looking for donations of toys, candy, clothing (socks, coats, grown tremendously since it be- etc.), bedding and personal care

Clinton says that in addition to gifts, "monetary donations are also gratefully accepted.' If you can help in this rewarding and worthwhile project, call the LINC office, located at 17800 East Warren Avenue, at 882-6100.

left. Marie was that one person and she couldn't do it all.

"You know, I think that Marie never had a chance to grieve. When I talked to her after the parent group disbanded she told me that it had been like 'putting the last nail in Kenny's casket.' I just hope she knows how much she's accomplished and how much we respect her for it," Hudson said.

Having decided to remain active as a chapter, Hudson and her group are concerned that Grosse Pointe parents and educators know that they are around to help.

"The person who killed Kenny and Shawn Moore is not around anymore, but as the police who have been so very helpful to the group - told me, that doesn't mean that there aren't other people around just like that man. This type of thing can happen again. And our children have a right to know how to stay safe," Hudson said.

"There are other young children entering the schools who have not seen the program. We want to be available with the program when we are needed. It would be nice to have it available in the schools as a regular part of the curriculum. The program can be done in one hour once a year. Is that that much for something which we feel can mean so much to children's safety?" Hudson added.

Right now, the group is trying to find a place for itself somewhere in between being a reaction to a tragedy like that suffered by Edenstrom's son and a group hanging on past its useful-

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

A Romantic Past As a Grosse Pointe resident, you'll walk upon grounds that were once the swamp, marsh and meadow haunts of deer, buffalo and beaver. It was this profusion of wildlife-plus fish from the 460-square-mile Lake St. Clair-that attracted the French farmers who first settled the area in 1701.

During the century that they fished, farmed and traded with the local Indians, many legands began. And many infamous locations were indelibly named: Fox Creek, graveyard of the Fox Indian nation; Bloody Run, where a company of British soldiers from Fort Detroit were ambushed and killed. From Pristing to Prosperous After a brief period under British rule, the area began its history as an American settlement. Its beauty and bounty made it an ideal resort area for families from the growing city of Detroit. Between 1875 and 1925, Grosse Pointe became the elegant summer residence—and then permanent home—of families who had amassed fortunes in lumber and automobiles. In the midst of the lavish mansions, farm cottages and resort ambiance, there gradually grew a year-round community of quality homes for families from all walks of life.

Glimpses of Mount Vernon come to mind in this Georgian Colonial. The six-bedroom manor house offers a grand life-style throughout. Pegged oak floors and a wet bar welcome guests in the family room.

Cordon Bleu chef would feel right at home in the professionally equipped kitchen, which features newer Corian counters.

The elegance of Grosse Pointe Farms - and perhaps, Mount Vernon -- is stated in every room of the 4,500 square foot interior. From the formal dining room, with parquet floors, to the cheerful garden room, this home shines.

And there's more, such as the copper-roofed domed pool house which offers a pool and relaxing jacuzzi and an in-law apartment.

Picking the season's winners

I'm not one to jump the bandwagon and I'm not one to stick my neck on the line to pick my winners before the season starts, so I guess you could say I like to ride under the covered wagon to keep my head from being squashed on the tracks.

I'm not going to be the one to tell you I told you so, because I never did tell you anything in the first place. I didn't act as prognosticator for the sports section of the Grosse Pointe News, but now I must come forward with some things that have been on my mind. I don't like to toot my own horn, but what the heck, somebody has to.

When the fall sports teams of Grosse Pointe were gearing for the season, I made rounds to each of the respective training camps and assessed each team before one match, game or meet was performed. I made mental notes and concrete notes, but they were regarded as top secret. It wasn't that I was fearful the opponent would confiscate my playbook, but I was leery of opening a bad can of worms in my first month of work.

I don't like predictions of how teams will fare, and I don't believe in polls that rank teams. Therefore, I am telling you my predictions for the fall season right now, and remember, even though the seasons are over, it's never too late to play the odds and show my keen sense of sports.

• I panned the football field and saw great size, intensity and hope. North, South and ULS have talented football teams on paper, but what really counts is what the record shows. Although the Knights finished 2-7, they have established a great football team for 1988. I knew they would have a learning year and finish 2-7, but I didn't want to tell you that because that would have taken the suspense away.

A showcase year

After losing 13 talented soccer players many skeptics had written off the Knights, but how wrong they were...

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

Proving skeptics wrong could be one lesson that the Knights of University Liggett School taught

After losing 11 seniors to graduation and two foreign exchange students to their homeland, soccer at ULS was being questioned by outsiders. Many had written David Backhurst's team off, but as the season wore on skepticism became opti-

ULS won the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference, beat Inter-City Baptist 3-1 to win the regional title game and went on to down Greenhills, 3-1 in a state semifinal match to advance to the state finals.

With a 14-6-2 record, the Knights took on Detroit Country Day School in the Class C-D soccer finals and lost 4-2. With that loss, many people may think a Cinderella year may have been a fluke, but convincing Backhurst may be a tougher

"All things considered, I think we did very well," he said. "Having the record we did -14.7.

2 - and getting to the state finals for the second consecutive year was a major accomplishment for us."

Snarling at all freethinkers, the Knights dumped eight straight opponents to advance to the finals; a place many thought ULS would not explore for years to come.

"I guess you could say we proved a lot of people wrong by having such a great season," said Backhurst. "We started the season with a lot of missing pieces, but the kids adjusted well and worked hard."

Backhurst put his puzzle together with a young team that had to leap many obstacles in order to finish the season rated number three in the state.

"We had to put a lot of new people into different positions," said Backhurst. "We put some pieces into the puzzle and they just sort of meshed

Doug Wood, who led the team in assists (15) from his attack-stopper back spot, was the only returning starter from a year ago, but the addition of Frank Karabetsos, the Knight's catalyst who scored 20 goals, made for a nice nucleus.

"We had to do a lot of planning in order to be successful," said Backhurst. "The things that were key for us was the return of Doug Wood and a player like Frank. With those two guys to build around it sure made life a little easier.

Jonathon Davis, the leading scorer with 20 goals, and Karabetsos were the first two Knights to record over 20 goals in a season since 1983 and that is no small feat.

"Amazing and tremendous is one way to describe it," said Backhurst, "They really had nice

Throughout the season, roses were definitely popping up, but a valuable lesson was learned early on when ULS suffered back-to-back defeats.

"In the second and third games of the season, we were shelled," said Backhurst. "It was the low point of the season and after that we made some defensive adjustments and found ourselves." ULS found themselves quickly as goaltender Brian Schmidt combined with a strong defensive front, to limit the opponent to an average of two goals a

"Brian saved us on more than one occasion," said Backhurst. "I mean literally as well as figu-

"Defense was our most suspect area of the team because we had five new guys," added Backhurst. "But it's amazing to put five guys in, have them learn their roles and make it to the finals."

What makes this state runner-up team so spe-

"I would have to say it is the closeness of each of them," said Backhurst. "The guys we have are a close group who get along well. I think that was a strong point about this team.'

Next season, ULS could flop roles and be expected to play in the state finals, and Backhurst would like nothing better; well...

"It was nice to get back there again this year, but we want to get there again in 1988," he said. "But when we get there we want to go one step further and bring the championship home.'

for Red Barons

The game was dominated by the fine defensive play of both teams. The Redskins were able to capitalize on a long touchdown run early in the game, but were turned away from that point on. Leading the Red Barons' defense were Dan Shefferly, Morgan Matthews, Tim Miller, Tim Morgan and Tim Northey. Also playing well were Joe Schmitt, John Pietz, Tom Morgan, Robert Gates and Jeff Robinson. On offense the Barons got good games from James Candella, Andy Savikowski, Brian Law, Dimitri Stathis, Vince Thomas and Kris Erikson. Paul Serra, Jimmy Meyers, Doug Rouleau, Pat Worrell and Ben Reynolds also performed well for the Red Barons.

The jayvee team capped a strong season with a 19-0 win.

Midway through the first period, Derek Ottevaere took off on a 55-vard run to score and Aaron Letscher picked up the extra point. Both defenses dominated play for the remainder of the first half, but in the third quarter, Alex Brinker blocked a Redskin punt to set up Tom Paquin's touchdown run to put the Barons up 13-0.

The Red Barons' defense, led by Brinker, Lee Rupert, Chad Cherf, Brett Stebbins, Carl Bommarito, Brian Amigue and John Augliari continually shutdown the Redskins' offense.

The Red Barons' defense repeatedly stopped the Redskins behind strong play from Terry Thompson, Scott Spada, Gene Robinson, Brian Blake, Mike Miller, Jeff Thomas and Adam Korzeniewski.

On offense, Paul Straske had a strong outing as he scored on runs of 25, 37 and eight yards and also added a kick return of 68 yards. Also scoring were Terry Thompson and Drew Woodruff.

Pesky Blue Devils cruise through land of Lincoln

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

In their fourth trip to the state playoffs, South edged one step closer to a possible state Class A football championship with a resounding 20-6 win over the Lincon Abes in a state regional playoff game at Lincoln.

South had visited the playoffs three times previously, but never walked away a winner in round one. However, with a stiff defense and some brilliant running from Ted Mills and Steve Rice, the Blue Devils stay alive in Region 3. They will travel to South Lake on Nov. 14 to take on Birmingham Brother Rice in the Region 3 title game. Rice advanced after beating Ferndale.

"This was a big win," said South coach Jon Rice. "Our goal was to play four more games, but now our goal is to play three more games." If South can win two more games, they would attend the state finals in Pontiac on Nov. 28.

"I know the kids would like to play in the Silverdome, but we aren't looking past Brother Rice," said Rice. "They are a highly talented football team with a lot of weapons."

South didn't look past the undefeated Abes (9-0), either.

"We prepared well for Lincoln and they didn't run anything we weren't prepared for," said Rice. "Sure they ran a few trick plays, but for the most part we were ready.'

Ted Mills, a senior tailback who rushed for 75 yards on 11 carries, was certainly ready from the opening drive as he put the Blue Devils up with a 3-yard run. But, if it wasn't for his 47yard outburst on the third play of the game, the complexion of the game may have been changed.

your first possession," Rice said. "I thought we were going to get rolling then, but Lincoln sucked it up and really played well."

Trailing 7-0, the Abes mounted a second-quarter drive that ended in a Dave Siwicki quarterback sneak to cut the Blue Devils' lead to 7-6 after the failed extra point.

South then battled back deep into Lincoln territory as quarterback Bryan Jones, who hit 7 of 12 passes for 108 yards, orchestrated good play selection late in the quarter. However, South failed to pad the lead as Jones' pass at the Lincoln goal line was picked off.

"I would have liked to go in at the half up 10-6 or 14-6, but it didn't happen," said Rice. "We kind of lost the momentum with the interception, but when things got bad, somebody picked us up.'

That somebody was Steve Rice. Rice kept the Abes honest with 86 yards on 19 carries as he darted around, as well as through, their defense. Rice squirmed in from the four and Doug Lucas added the extra point to put South up, 14-6 early in the fourth quarter.

"I still wanted another score," said Rice. "I didn't think it was enough because of how explosive Lincoln can be.'

But the South defense, which held the Abes to eight first downs (one in the second half) and only 175 total yards, defused any threat Lincoln may have mounted.

'Our defense was a bit frustrated at the half because we gave up that touchdown, but we just told them that they (Lincoln) had some guys going both ways (offense and defense) and we are two-platoon football team," said Rice. "We are able to put 11 different guys on defense and offense so we told the kids to hang in there because as the game wore on, some of their key players are going to get tired."

As Lincoln tired, South got stronger.

"Our defense really played well in the third and fourth quarters," Rice said. "We went in with a defensive scheme and it didn't work at first, but we made some adjustments at halftime and they worked out for us.

"We tried to keep "C.A.L. Ludeman (Lincoln's top rúsher) bottled up," added Rice."We didn't want him to get to the outside and he didn't. We really tied him up."

With interceptions by Richmond McCloud, Marty Saad and Marcus Wysocki (his 10th), the Blue Devils now have 29 interceptions on the year.

"I think it works both ways," said Rice. "Our defensive line puts on some good pressure and causes the quarterbacks to throw the ball early. Plus, our defensive backs read so well and get to the ball to make the plays."

South's offensive effort of 289 total yards ended when Steve Rice put the lid on the Blue Devils' first-round win with a 5-yard touchdown effort with under a minute to play in the game.

"This was a great win for us," said Rice. "Other teams at South have been 8-1, or Eastern Michigan League champions, but this team is the first team to win a playoff game at South. For that they should be very proud.'

But, with three more victories out there waiting to be snatched, could the Blue Devils bring the first state football championship

"The kids really want to do well," said Rice. "We are just going to play our cards and see where they fall."

South and Brother Rice will play at South Lake Nov. 14 at 1:

Cross Country

The South girls' cross country team achieved its goal of finishing in the top half of the field of state qualifiers last weekend at the Class A state championships in Lansing.

South finished 14th overall out of 28 teams and that made Coach Steve Zaranek quite proud.

"The girls really ran the best they could have," he said. "Before the meet we shot for a tophalf finish and that's exactly what we got. These girls have been setting and reaching their goals all year long and that makes coaching a lot of fun."

Micha Song led the way for South as she covered the tough, hilly course in 20:23; good for 32nd place out of 196 runners. She was closely followed by Elizabeth Kraft, Debbie Solterisch, Toni Tedesco and Megen Smucker.

South finished a successful dual meets, grabbed an Eastern Vicki Groustra, Anna Dinverno, Michigan League title and a regional championship.

'What else can you say about a team who accomplishes so 1987 campaign with plenty of much in one year?" asked Zaraawards as they went 15-0 in nek. "Not too much."

Lincoln's C.A.L. Ludeman wasn't very elusive for the sterling Blue Devils' defense last Saturday in South's 20-6 win in the first round of the state playoffs. Here, Jamie Pangborn cradles Ludeman while Lance Harding (34) delivers the knockout blow. Tom Smith (84) scampers to the ball to help the swarming Devils' defense.

Century 21 rolls to win

The Century 21 Sabres, overcoming early season injuries that have sidelined three regulars, rolled to an 8-1 victory over Kand D Construction in Grosse Pointe's 30-and-over league.

Left-winger Chris Walsh led the way with a hat trick and Gary LeFever banged in a pair. Also scoring were Tony Morici. Rob Gilroy and Dan Petty.

The win improved the Sabres' record to 2-3-1. The team, playoff champs in 1986-87, has been battered by injuries to two defensemen and a forward, but the recent addition of Steve Avsharian may help greatly.

Hoop team moves to 14-3 on year

By John Guibord Special Writer

In a relatively easy week, the Lady Norsemen cruised to two wins to lift their record to 14-3.

At home against Clintondale, the cagers totally dominated in a lopsided 67-21 as 11 of 12 players for Coach Gary Bennett put points on the board.

High scorers for North were Kim Reiter (10 points, 10 rebounds) and Robin Wheatley (14 points and three steals). Monique Van Assche dished out seven assists in the win.

Two days later, North defeated Warren-Woods Tower, 40-38. North trailed most of the way, but fired ahead, 39-34, early in the fourth quarter and turned back the Titans' comeback to preserve the win.

North's turnovers and inability to convert the one-and-one free throws gave Tower several opportunities to knot the score.

North stands in first place in the White Division of the Macomb Area Conference with a 5-1 record. Romeo is second (4-2) and Tower is at 3-3.

North travels to Cousino this evening at 7:30 p.m.

Cross country

The boys' and girls' cross country teams recently competed in the state finals in Lansing. Highlighting the girls' 23rd-place showing in the meet, was Liz Bolden's all-state, 10th-place finish in a time of 19:29.

The boys finished 27th overall in the meet as Steve Clarke was North's top runner with a time of 17:46. John Shefferly (18:00), Frank Markey (18:14), Tim Bellew (18:31) and Tom Gauerke (18:31.5) rounded out North's scorecard.

Swimming

In a battle with the state's top-ranked team, Ann Arbor Pioneer, North (rated No. 3) lost 92.80.

Varsity records were shattered in the meet by Wendy Mader (500 freestyle) and Heidi Mader (100 backstroke). First place finishes included, Christina Martin in the 100 breaststroke, Karen weekend at Utica Henry Ford II.

Whalers-Wake Pratt

The Midget Whalers hockey team dominated Royal Oak's Wake-Pratt team; 4-3 in the Little Caesars hockey league opener.

The Whalers opened the scoring in the first period with Rick Darke's goal on assists from Adam Tanelian and Jeff Berger. John Bellamy quickly followed with a second Whalers' goal on passes from Darke and Tanelian.

After giving up one goal, the Whalers struck again on Bellamy's second goal of the day on a pass from Tanelian. At the end of the second period, Ruben Ascencio put the Whalers up by three on assists from Jeff Berger and Jim Pappas. The Royal Oak team hit two goals in the third period, but the Whalers pre-

Exercise and the aging process

Heart and lungs

Many people think of their bodies as machines composed of parts that wear out. Not so.

Our bodies respond to physical stress by adapting and growing stronger. This response is what evolution and survival — is all about. It also holds true for more than just our muscles.

Heart and lungs, for example. They don't get tired as we get older, they get lazy. A team of doctors from the Washington School of Medicine in St. Louis proved this recently by comparing two groups of middle-aged men on an exercise treadmill. They found that a group of runners (average age of 58) had cardiovascular systems twice as capable as a group of sedentaries whose average age was

The heart, we seem to forget, is a muscle and needs to be exercised accordingly.

Bones

Few people think of bones as living tissue, but they are and they respond to environmental stress (exercise) accordingly. As bones get stressed by the muscular contractions and compressional impacts of exercise, they respond by taking on more calcium and phosphorus - getting thicker, denser and stronger as to resultant of the

"A physically active lifestyle above a sedentary level is necessary to induce this calcification," say two doctors reporting in Nutrition Reports International. "Bone growth and density increase in proportion to the compressional load a bone is asked to carry.'

A study of bedridden hospital patients showed that bones can begin to demineralize in just six days when deprived of exercise entirely. Even the modest strain imposed by the simple act of standing was found in one experiment to retard the rate at which hospitalized patients lost bone density.

Skin

Forget the face lift. A better way of ironing out the wrinkles - or preventing them, anyway - could be to get fit. A team of doctors from Finland has found that what makes your face red - oxygen - also makes it rugged.

These doctors took skin samples from the arms of 29 athletic middle-aged men and compared them with similar samples taken from 29 sedentaries.

The difference, they found, was that the skin of the athletes, in this case runners (good for 30 miles a week) and cross-country skiers was thicker, stronger and more elastic than the skin of their less active peers. Why?

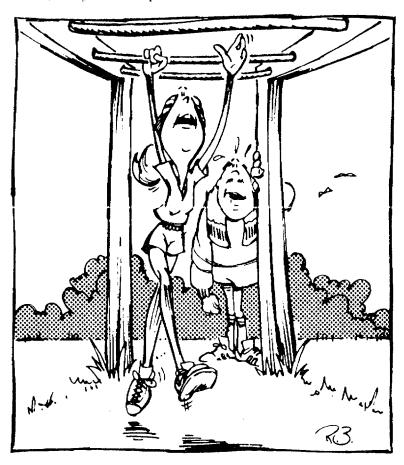

"Our results suggest that skin reflects an adaptation to habitual endurance training by increasing its mass and strengthening its structure,' said the researchers.

Fitness trails...an increasingly popular way to exercise that combines cardiorespiratory exercise with a muscular conditioning workout. Fitness trails can enhance your personal fitness program or provide you with a new type of exercise regimen.

The idea of exercising in a circuit originated in Zurich, Switzerland in the 1960s. The addition of beautiful scenery and fresh air made exercise more appealing and the popularity of fitness trails grew throughout Europe and into this country. In the last seven years, the number of fitness trails produced in the U.S. by one company has more than tripled.

Circuits consist of a series of 10-20 exercise stations separated by a few hundred yards or less. The stations can be spread over a few miles or set up as Fitness Courts, when space is limited.

On the trails, you jog or briskly walk from station to station to keep your heart rate elevated. This helps you train your heart and lungs. At each station you work different muscle groups.

In addition to the Fitness Course, there are Wheelchair

Courses and Walking Courses designed with the needs of specific populations in mind.

To get the most from a fitness trail it is important to follow the basic principles of a workout, such as including a warmup and cooldown period and stretching before and after completing the circuit (in addition to any flexibility stations within the circuit). Properly designed trails should include instructions on how to begin, how to take your pulse so that you are training at the right intensity, and how to endure your workout.

In addition, the following suggestions will guide you through a fitness trail:

(1) Check with your doctor before starting an exercise program if you have been inactive for many years or have a heart or other health condition that might require medical clearance.

2) Don't stop and rest between stations. If you feel fatigue or feel like you are overdoing it, reduce the intensity of your exercises, slow down or do fewer repetitions at each station. The workout should not be so difficult that you have to rest between stations. Of course, a short breather is OK.

3) Build up gradually. The stations are designed to build muscular strength and endurance. You should follow the directions at each station and start slowly especially if you haven't exercised in a while.

4) Wear running shoes. Even though you will stop to do each exercise, you'll need good support to get you from station to station. Shoes designed for fitness walking are a good choice,

5) Know your limitations. Since fitness trails are designed for use by all ages, some stations may be too difficult for beginners or older adults. Avoid "daredevil" maneuvers on unfamiliar equipment.

6) Ask questions. Each station has specific instructions but if you're not sure what you are supposed to do, find someone to take you through the circuit a few times.

You'll feel much better about your workout if you are confident about how to do the exercises and you do them well.

This story was written by George Allen, chairman of The President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

Busse Smart Decisions, decisions If you will, think back to this morning. As the alarm clock roused you from your sleep, you turned it off and either rose to greet the day, or you granted yourself the luxury of a day in bed.

So, your day began with your first decision, one you may have made before you were even fully awake, yet nonetheless, an important decision. That is not the first in a long line of decisions the average person is confronted with during the course of the normal day. Some will be dealt with so easily that the conscious thought of a decision being made isn't even registered.

Some decisions are so fundamental to our daily routine that they have become actions of habit; such as getting out of bed when the alarm rings. Other circumstances benefit from decisions requiring thought, planning, analysis and research. Many of these life situations will always remain in this category, where much thought, research and planning must precede the final decision. How can those new decisions about your life become incorporated into a daily routine?

Eating choices

For many of us, eating never seemed to involve a decision-making process. When food was around, we ate, Oh, we may have known that we preferred the sweets over the salty, or the spicy over the bland, but we were really not conscious of deciding to eat; only of deciding just what it would be. (And in some instances, that was not really simportant either just as long as we were eating!). So, howmido we transform poor eating habits into positive self-made choices?

The science of decision making

Pick up a dozen books dealing with decision making and you will find 12 different approaches to the issue. The following are only a few of the current theories and sugges-

Roman mythology tells us of the god Janus, who was the patron of the beginning and ending of all things. He had two faces, one facing the rising sun and the other looking back at the sunset. January, named after this god, is a time synonymous with decision making.

Two behavioral psychologists from the Center of Diet Research, Hillel J. Einhorn and Robin M. Hogarth, cite the example of the Roman god Janus, as a simple model for decision making. They have introduced the concepts of thinking forward and thinking backward in a combined method which ultimately yields the most correct decisions.

In an article in the Harvard Business Review by Einhorn and Hogarth, the following is stated: "Each decision is the outcome of a complex process that usually involves two different kinds of thinking; looking backward to understand the past and looking forward to predict the future. Thinking backward is largely intuitive and suggestive; it tends to be diagnostic and requires judgement. It involves looking for patterns, making links between seemingly unconnected events, testing possible chains of causation to explain an event and finding a metaphor or theory to help in looking forward.

"Thinking forward is different. Instead of intuition, it depends on a kind of mathematical formulation: The decision maker must assemble and weigh a number of variables and then make a prediction. Using a strategy or a rule, assessing the accuracy of each factor and combining all the pieces of information, the decision maker arrives at a single, integrated forecast."

"Make up Your Mind" author, John D. Arnold states, "the most effective decisions integrate thinking and feeling." His theory for decisionmaking is based on building blocks of questions: (1) Do you have a thorough and realistic understanding of the problem? (2) What is the purpose to be accomplished by the decision, or what really needs to be determined? (3) What is the honest criteria for your decision? (4) What must you do and what would you like to do? (5) How will it be accomplished? (6) Are there other alternatives that would work better? and (7) What are the possible problems or repercussions?

These seven questions are designed to weed out any unrealistic or unnecessary criteria in the decison-making process. Arnold points out that many times people add stipulations which complicate the decision; making it appear more difficult than it really is meant to be. These two methods represent different, though in some aspects, similar ideas for reaching a decision. From the scientific to the motivational, the important result is that you apply a decision-making process to your eating, and how you go about it should be determined by whatever works best for you.

One of the best methods that will act as a support system in making your eating decisions is previewing possible scenarios. For instance, the cocktail and dinner party you will be attending next weekend. Picture yourself eating from the beautiful selection of raw vegetables, choosing to drink a tall glass of seltzer water, choosing a small but lovely portion from the dinner selections. This mental-preview will lead to making the best decisions for you and then lead your decision to actually following through.

Decisions are, and always will be, a part of your life. You are the only one who can and should decide on a course of action. If you are unwilling to make a decision, there are always those individuals who will make them for you.

So, what do you want for yourself? The holidays are just around the corner. Decide what you want to do, now. As Samuel J. Foosaner said in "Reaching Important Decisions," "In all instances, when you are faced with a problem which requires a decision, make it. It may not be the best, but it is better than standing in the middle of the road."

Good advice.

Whoopi Goldberg fans will enjoy 'Fatal Beauty'

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

The language jolts, the violence amounts to carnage, but "Fatal Beauty" delivers a graphic, emphatic and convincing message that drugs can kill and do.

The title has nothing to do with the charms of Whoopi Goldberg, who plays Rita Rizzoli, the toughest cop on the Los Angeles force. It refers to the stamp on the packets of cocaine sold on the streets.

As a cop, Rizzoli has seen how drugs degrade and ruin lives and appoints herself as a one-woman task force to track down and wipe out the dealers.

Although this is not typical Goldberg fare, she manages to inject humor into the various situations. She is funniest when playing straight Whoopi Goldberg - she swings down the street as an undercover cop in outlandish costumes or when she look forward to.

dons a wig and false eyelashes to con a dealer into leading her to the main source. She gets off some pointed and witty wisecracks and there is implicit humor in the tough "Dirty Harry" role she plays. She outmaneuvers, out-punches and out-shoots not only her fellow officers, but the drug pushers and the top guns of the organization.

Determined and fearless, Rizzoli gets herself into some tense situations that add suspense.

"Fatal Beauty" is not an outstanding showcase of Whoopi Goldberg's enormous talents. Nevertheless Goldberg fans will not want to miss it.

There is some conjecture that MGM is planning a film co-starring Eddie Murphy and Goldberg. Now that's something to

Glimpse into the heart of 'The Sicilian'

By Michael Chapp

Special Writer Though "The Sicilian" does not offer the layered detail and historical scope it demands there is still something to be said for Michael Cimino's ambitious new effort. Based on the novel of the same name by Mario Puzo, "The Sicilian" attempts to offer insight into one of Italian history's most venerable names - Salvatore Giuliano. And at the same time, it tries to go beyond the man, and into the realm of leg-

That's a full plate for any director, let alone one who will always be remembered for the "Heaven's Gate" debacle of 1980. That film was called one of the bigest movie disasters of all time. "The Sicilian," happily, comes nowhere near any such proportions.

Lucky for Cimino, since it's obvious that he invested a hefty budget into the project. The in-taking visuals and generally tions demonstrate this. high production values take up the slack where other elements of the picture fall short.

Giuliano became an Italian folk hero in the late 1940s, when he dared to wage war with the government, the Mafia and the church. This real-life Robin Hood would rob from the rich and give to the poor who so desperately needed his help. The thing he wanted most for the people, though, was land. And he did what was necessary to reach his

He was a bandit, yes. But as he so often reminded those with whom he associated, "not just a bandit." Indeed, the film goes to great lengths to demonstrate just how highly Giuliano thought of himself. By the end, he fancied himself a savior — one who was

Film

Such biblical allusions are anything but coincidental. Cimino makes this parallel the centerpiece of his film, and in doing so, he goes beyond the mere historical scope of the story. To complement this, anti-establishment motifs are peppered throughout, unifying the piece as a thematic whole.

Such lofty accomplishments notwithstanding, "The Sicilian" still tends to get bogged down in many parts, confusing viewers with its dangling story elements, its unidentified or under-explained characters and its occasionally bizarre editing. Viewers will work a bit harder than should be necessary in order to figure out what's going on at all times. One gets the impression that "The Sicilian" would be much more suited to two-and-a half or three hours rather than its current length.

Christopher Lambert makes a convincing Giuliano. His deep, penetrating eyes and confident demeanor are perfect for the part, and his measured reactions seem just right for a character of Giuliano's magnitude. The character is ambitiously fleshed out. In a few brief scenes, viewers understand the political and religious sides of Giuliano. The rest of the film merely builds on those elements.

"The Sicilian" leaves more than a few loose ends, and viewers will probably view Giuliano with as much awe when they leave as they might have had when they arrived. Cimino's film does nothing to make the man less of a mystery. If anything, it does just the opposite.

But at the very least, perhaps "The Sicilian" gives a glimpse into the heart of an historical mystery. And offers some justification for Giuliano's picture being on the cover of "Life" magazine.

MOT's 'Man of La Mancha' works special stage magic

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

It is always a joy to welcome the sentimental "Man of La Mancha" back. Although he appeared four times in nine years at the Fisher, he has never lost his power to win the hearts of the audience. In this, his fifth appearance, he works a special magic because the Michigan Opera Theatre company's "Man" is the best ever presented here.

Produced in the spirit of the Broadway original, it creates a wondrous empathy for the Knight of the Woeful Countenance, his quests, miracles and ultimate victory of achieving the transformation of Aldonza.

The story, taken from Miguel de Cervantes' two-volume novel about a foolish knight's adventures, has been distilled into a few key episodes by David Wasserman. He employs a particularly effective touch by putting Cervantes on stage to tell the tale and play the part of Don

The story is lifted to soaring heights by the music of Mitch

Leigh and lyricist Joe Darion's romantic tunes.

What lifts this production above the others are the performances of the two principal actors, Richard Fredericks as Don Quixote, and Chris Callen as Aldonza.

Fredericks is a regular with the New York City Opera. He has a ringing voice that lends full power to the "Impossible Dream" and he has excellent acting ability.

Callen is a Broadway touring regular. She handles the enormous vocal demands that range from her barmaid tirade against Quixote whose advice resulted in her being raped and beaten, to the sweetly sung "Dulcinea" at the show's end.

Samuel Remi plays the peasant Sancho, Don Quixote's squire. His potato-like looks and frisky actions offer a contrast to the indignities suffered by Cer-

A luminous story about illusion, hard truths and final triumph, the message of "Man of La Mancha" is universal. Don Quixote's unshakeable vision that the impossible can be achieved is especially comforting in the modern world where it is difficult sometimes to accept reality.

The final performance of "Man" is Saturday, Nov. 14. See it - it is truly an unforgettable experience.

The Missing LINC

Linking individuals to Needs in the Community is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to coordinate needs with resources. This is accomplished by placing goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of Metropolitan Detroit charitable agencies. Operating since 1971, LINC is proud of the accomplishments it has made and strives to increase its resource base. If you have recyclable items, no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100 with your donation. KEEP IT

HAND TOOLS, ELECTRIC SANDER, wood-working tools of all kinds are desperately needed by the MARINERS INN. Due to a robbery the 85 residents of this residential center for homeless men are out of work. Hammers, screwdrivers, plyers ALL TOOLS are needed.

LIKE TO SEW? HAVE EXTRA FABRIC? YMCA CAMP COVELL needs curtains for 24 cabins made from lightweight wash and wear fabric. The camp also needs sofas, chairs, tables and lamps. CAREGIVERS, a home services organization work ing with the Department of Social Services needs MATERNITY AND BABY CLOTHES, sheets, towels, and cloth diapers. These items are needed by foster families. CRÓSSWORD PUZZLE BOOKS, MURAL TYPE

WORLD MAP, 35 MM camera, bamboo rakes are needed by SHELTERING ARMS, an adult day care center specializing in elderly respite care. Also needed is a 16 MM projector to aid in craft projects and for entertainment.

JEFFERSON HOUSE, a residential center of men recovering from substance abuse is in need of a paper shredder to insure the confidentiality of their residents.

BALL. BATS, TENNIS RACQUETS, fishing equipment, board games for all ages, craft supplies and computer game discs would be put to good use at CHILDRENS HOME. These and more items would be used for recreation in this home for emotionally handicapped children.

BASEBALL BATS, SOFTBALLS, GLOVES, CRO-QUET SETS, WATER TOYS, BOARD GAMES for all ages and CRAFT SUPPLIES desperately sought by CHILDREN'S HOME OF DETROIT CURTAIN for a theatre stage would also be greatly appreciated.
