

Small boat capsizes; one man rescued, one missing

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

One man was rescued and another is missing and believed drowned after their 15-foot Starcraft open boat capsized in rough water about one-quarter mile east of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club late Saturday night, Nov. 14.

Paul Dunn, 29, of East Detroit, was plucked from the water shortly after midnight Nov. 15 by U.S. Coast Guard rescuers. Monday morning Dunn was listed in fair condition at St. Joseph West Hospital in Mount Clemens.

Lawrence Zatkoff, 24, of St. Clair Shores, was not found. Police and Coast Guard officials believe that he drowned. Coast Guard divers searched for Zatkoff's body Sunday, but the search was called off around noon. Divers resumed their search Monday, but were unsuccessful.

Cpl. Archie Grieve, who spoke with Dunn Monday morning, said that the men were fishing when the accident occurred. Zatkoff was standing at the side of the boat and was tossed into the water as two- to three-foot waves buffeted the boat. Dunn told Grieve that Zatkoff went under three times before he was able to pull him halfway back into the boat. He attempted to restore breathing by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation when another boat passed, causing a wake. Both men were at the stern and the wake and waves apparently swamped and capsized the boat, according to Dunn, Grieve said. Dunn was unable to hold onto his friend.

Dunn, who was holding onto the capsized boat cried out for help. Those cries were apparently heard by another fisherman who entered the yacht club for help. A call was placed to the Grosse Pointe Shores Public Safety Department, who in turn called the U.S. Coast Guard, which made a dramatic rescue about one-quarter mile south of the yacht club.

The first vessel to arrive at the scene was a 21-foot boat from the U.S. Coast Guard Station at St. Clair Shores near 10 Mile Road at Miller's Marina. The boat arrived at the scene at about 11:40 p.m., 13 minutes after the Coast Guard received its first call at 11:27 p.m., according to Chief Robert L. Bradford of the St. Clair Shores station.

Boatswain Mate Melissa Stalker jumped into the 43-degree water wearing a rescue suit and was able to get Dunn to the side of the vessel. She and Fireman Robert Smith were unable to get him aboard. Smith then jumped into the frigid water and held Dunn against the boat as Stalker got back on board, Bradford said.

At about the same time a rescue helicopter from the U.S. Coast Guard Air Station Detroit at Selfridge Air National Guard Base arrived on the scene.

At that time Smith secured a line to Dunn and Lt. Commander Florian "Pug" Rundio leapt into the water from the helicopter. He secured a line to Dunn who was dragged through the water to the helicopter that had landed on the water. Dunn was rolled onto the helicopter's platform, and then transported to the hospital.

Two 41-foot Coast Guard vessels arrived at the scene, one from St. Clair Shores and one from Belle Isle. The Starcraft was towed to the yacht club by the 21-foot vessel.

Bradford said because of the extremely cold water and the 15 knot winds, Smith and Stalker were nearing hypothermia themselves. A relief crew was sent back out on the 21-foot boat along with Leon Sehoyan, Craig Oshnock and David Sehoyan of the Grosse Pointe Marine Rescue Unit, a volunteer group.

All three ships searched for Zatkoff's body, but the search was called off around 2 a.m.

Grieve said his department stood by on shore and helped the best it could with lighting during the rescue, and also tied up the boat when it was brought into the yacht club harbor by the Coast Guard vessel.

Leon Sehoyan, who has been a diver for the various Grosse Pointe police departments for more than 20 years, said he felt helpless after arriving on the scene.

"We arrived in time where we could hear the man screaming for help, but we didn't have a boat so we could get out to him," Sehoyan said. "We couldn't see him from shore. It is really ironic that we have all these marinas and yacht clubs here along the lake, but no rescue boat. It is a sad commentary that the Grosse Pointes don't have a boat you can put into the water for a rescue. If it happens just once in 10 years, that's too much."

The helicopter arrived with Dunn at the hospital at 12:18 a.m., 45 minutes from the time the Coast Guard received its first call. Bradford said he was pleased with the results of the rescue efforts and the response time by the various crews. Bradford added that under normal conditions, response time from the St. Clair Shores office to the yacht club is about five minutes.

Pointer of Interest Douglas E. Busbey

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

It's amazing what one can accomplish if only one can get started. Douglas E. Busbey has started — and accomplished — a lot.

A lifelong Grosse Pointer, he is a partner in a Southfield law firm, a graduate of the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce Leadership Detroit program, and he was instrumental in developing an alumni association for that organization as well. His outside interests combined with work keep him busy 60 to 70 hours a week.

His legal focus is commercial litigation. He started off as a law clerk with the Schluskel, Lifton, Simon, Rands, Galvin & Jackier law firm and received his juris doctor from Wayne State University in 1974. He became an associate with the firm in 1974, and a partner in 1979.

Now at 39, he is on the firm's management committee and chairs the litigation department.

A Grosse Pointe High School graduate and father of two, Busbey is steeped in the cultural and civic affairs of the metropolitan Detroit community.

"I work like hell during the week from probably 8 a.m. to 9 or 10 p.m.," he said. "But I relax on the weekends."

He generally takes his 36-foot mainship, Mollymawk, to Club Island or Muscramoot Bay. He had just finished winterizing his powerboat and his hands and knuckles showed the wear and tear from an oil filter that refused to budge.

Probably the civic affiliation of which he is most proud is the Leadership Detroit program, started in 1979. Its main purpose is to identify current and future leadership candidates within the community. Those selected for the program undergo a nine-month training program and are introduced to all aspects (cultural, business and political) of the Detroit community. The young leaders are taught group management techniques, corporate board skills and how to effectively work with community leaders and organizations.

He and other graduates of the program created the Leadership Detroit Alumni Association, a charitable organization separate from the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, in 1984.

Nationwide there are some 270 cities with Leadership organizations, and the National Association of Community Leadership Organizations was formed. Busbey was appointed a board member to the organization in 1985, then vice president in 1986. He was elected president of the organization this year.

Inside: Heavily invested in bonds

Cities avoid losses in stock market plunge

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

When the stock market crashed Oct. 19, it left many heavily invested stockholders with a portfolio one-third lighter. In most of the Grosse Pointes' municipal pension funds, paper losses were less than that, thanks to prudence and a state law limiting the percentage of stocks in a municipal pension fund. Fund administrators say they will continue to steer the same course.

"Obviously, we took a little hosing," said City Manager Thomas Kressbach of Grosse Pointe. The city's common stock portfolio lost $1 million — but the bonds were up by $283,000, cushioning the blow.

State law limited municipal portfolios to 25 percent common stock at one time, according to Treasurer Dennis Foran. The amount has since been increased to 60 percent, but the city is well below that at 40 percent.

"Overall, we're in pretty good shape," Foran said. "Our investments are pretty conservative."

The city's $9.3 million pension fund is supervised by a private financial adviser (Wilson Kemp & Assoc.), who is empowered to make ongoing investment decisions, which are approved quarterly by a committee. Half of the fund is invested in bonds, 40 percent in stocks and 10 percent is cash in a money market fund. So while the stocks lost a quarter of their value, the bond increase offset it somewhat, for a total decline of 7.9 percent for the month, according to Foran.

"We'll review our strategy, but I think we're on safe ground," he said. "We've got pretty much blue chip stocks, and I think they'll rebound."

In the Farms, Comptroller Carol Lock and advisers (National Bank of Detroit and a citizens' committee) demonstrate a similar commitment to bonds.

"It's a conservative approach," Lock said. "With stocks, you either make a bundle or lose a bundle — even your blue chips are all over the map. Bonds are less flamboyant."

The Farms has two funds, one for police and fire and the other for all other employees. They totaled $14.8 million at the end of September and $13.6 million a month later. During the month of October, some money market funds were moved into bonds, bringing the bond investment up from 47 percent to 57 percent in both funds. At the same time, the value of stocks in the two funds fell from about 40 percent to 34 percent, as a result of a loss in market value.

Lock said the contents of the portfolio don't change very often. "We don't churn the portfolio," he said. "Periodically, we sell some items that haven't performed as well as they should and don't look like they will."

He said the advisory committee would not hold a meeting sooner than the regular quarterly one to assess the effects of the crash.

"We have some meetings with no investment change at all," he said. "It's not the style of NBD — or frankly, our style (to churn or speculate). We're not doing puts and calls. We're real underdogs, just plugging along."

A loss in value of a pension fund does not mean smaller benefits for retirees, according to Lock, because government retirement plans are guaranteed. If there is a decrease, "ultimately the government has to make it up," he said. "It's up to the city to provide whatever money it takes."

The Shores lost $350,000 on a $4.7 million pension fund in October. "We took a beating just like everyone else, but we have confidence in the market," said village Supt. Michael Kenyon. "It'll come back."

Kenyon and an advisory committee meet quarterly with advisers Manley Bennett McDonald and Comerica Bank to administer the investment of

Shores officials proudly display new fire truck

It's taken a little longer than expected, but the brand new, shiny red Shores pumper is in the firehouse awaiting its first run, which should come sometime after Dec. 15. Shores Public Safety Director Daniel Healy said the $103,000 vehicle is completely outfitted and his officers are in the process of training with the vehicle. The 1987 FMC 1,000-per-minute pumper was bought from West Shore Services Inc. in Allendale, Mich. It features hydraulically operated ladder racks, four pre-connected one and three-fourth inch hoses, a 4,500-watt portable gasoline generator and extendable halogen spotlights. "This truck was designed by this department with the specific needs of the Village in mind," Healy said. "Thought was also given to our mutual aid needs of the other Pointes and Harper Woods." There was some delay in the arrival of the truck, but Healy said the time spent was worth it. Custom-made cabinets were constructed into the standard chassis which required additional time. Healy said that as is traditional with fire departments, the fire bell from the previous truck was placed on the new one. "The bell was originally off a 1924 Seagrave pumper owned by a village," he said. "It was then placed on a 1956 Fire-master, which is still in full service until this truck comes on line. "I think the truck will fit our needs very well and give us the option of taking an offensive posture at any fire we incur," he concluded.

Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church sorts out today's moral issues

This is the sixth in an occasional series about Grosse Pointe churches.

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

The congregation of the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church is small and diverse — 230 members — and perhaps 70 to 80 more people who attend services fairly regularly.

No matter. They make waves. Historically, the Unitarian church has been on the leading edge of social change. Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church also likes being the first to jump boldly — with both feet — onto hot, contemporary issues.

The issues change with the times: In the '60s, the church was actively involved with civil rights, open housing, racial discrimination and the Vietnam War; in the '70s, the issues were ecology, conservation and nuclear energy; in the '80s, debate has turned to prison reform, abortion, the rights of the critically ill, AIDS, homosexuality, the Sanctuary movement.

"You name it. If it's been a moral issue, we've talked about it," said the Rev. John Corrado. "We're a humanistic church. We have human concerns, not just concerns about another world. We're concerned about deeds — about doing something about our beliefs in daily life."

One of the church's most significant and lasting contributions to the Grosse Pointe community was pieced together after the shattering reality of Detroit's 1967 riots — the establishment of the Grosse Pointe Interfaith Center for Racial Justice.

Corrado emphasized the diverse nature of his congregation, which includes a Hindu family, a few Jews, some people with no religious backgrounds, and some liberal Christians. "There's diversity in our unity," he said.

In the '60s, the Unitarian Church was instrumental in addressing the social issues of that tumultuous time — open housing, civil rights and questions of war and peace. The Rev. Dr. Harry Meserve, during his tenure as minister of the Unitarian Church from 1965 until 1974, was also president of the Human Relations Council, forerunner of the Interfaith Center.

Meserve actively sought and sponsored a visit by civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. to Grosse Pointe in March 1968. Opposition to the invitation was spirited. Grosse Pointers engaged in animated debates about the wisdom of such a visit and those who favored the move received threatening phone calls — as well as some solid support.

King spoke to a capacity audience at South's gymnasium on March 14, 1968, just a few months before his assassination. More than 2,700 people packed themselves tightly into the room to hear King's speech on "The Future of Integration." King was greeted by a standing ovation and his speech was punctuated by several more standing ovations as well as some carefully orchestrated heckling and picketing by a group called Break-through, led by Donald Lobsinger.

The '80s are a less tumultuous time, said Corrado. He characterized the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church in 1987 as "a home. We're trying to be here solidly for people who feel disenfranchized. We're a church that is open to all."

The beginnings of the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church go back to 1937 when a group of about 60 eastsiders from the First Church in Detroit decided to organize a church near their homes. At first they met in the parlor of the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, later at the Alger House (now the Grosse Pointe War Memorial) and at a local elementary school. By 1939, they had signed a charter and installed a minister. In 1943, members bought a house on the corner of Jefferson Avenue and Rivard, the Carter House, and redesigned it for use as a church.

Grosse Pointers Russell and Carrie Peebles have been members of the Unitarian church since 1951. They remember that the Carter House began getting cramped in the mid-'50s when the congregation began to grow larger. "We were going to use the old building and expand to a metaphor for many things: a flower — a circus tent — the ribs of a whale. Russell Peebles said he liked to think of the upswept roof as a symbol of man's continuing need to reach beyond himself.

Peebles recalled that the architect was killed in a horseback riding accident in 1964, just a few weeks before the church building was dedicated. "He had done many residential designs, but this was his only church," he said.

Inside the chapel, the circular room seats 300 people on moveable chairs, which can be arranged in different ways, for different purposes. "When you walk in the chapel," Corrado said, "you know it's a religious space, but it's not necessarily of the church's responses to contemporary community problems. "We were deeply involved in ecology during the '70s. We had a glass recycling bin in the parking lot, near the annex. People brought used glass and youngsters worked separating and breaking the glass. The neighbors complained about the noise."

Peebles also remembered a particular Sunday service during the era of conservation-consciousness. One of the church members brought in some examples of the results of pollution. He had a small tree on the stage, she said, and he hung items on the tree, like Christmas decorations, as he made certain points during his speech. "One of the items was a dead fish. A

The Rev. John Corrado, minister of the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church, is an accomplished jazz musician who often plays the piano during church services. He also writes hymns. He emphasized his church's sensitivity to gender in hymns, readings and discussions. "Our hymns are gender inclusive. Women are not always weak," he said. Instead of "the brotherhood of mankind," for instance, the phrase is changed to "human kinship" or "humankind."

The Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church, 17150 Maumee, is the only church in the city of Grosse Pointe. It's located directly across from the city's municipal building on property formerly owned by the city. The church's design involves two circles, one with a copper-topped spire. The Grosse Pointe Interfaith Center for Racial Justice has its headquarters at the rear of the church, in a renovated former city garage.

the property next door. We got the OK from the city and bought the property," said Russell Peebles. "Shortly thereafter, the city reversed itself because of intense pressure from neighbors. In an out-of-court settlement, the city and the church traded property," he said. And that's how the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church came to build its new building on Maumee, directly across from the Grosse Pointe municipal building, on property that once belonged to the city.

The new church building was designed by architect Charles Backus using the circle as a symbol of unity and friendship. The brick and glass structure of the church is actually two connecting circles. The chapel roof is formed from curved cypress beams which sweep upward toward a skylight. The spire is topped by a copper roof. Corrado said the design has been used as Jewish or Christian. The open circle holds no corners, no mysterious places. We look out onto the garden and the world. Light comes in. A lot of church designs, like the great cathedrals, cut out light and hold a lot of mysterious dark corners. Our architecture and philosophy combine here."

The chapel opens out onto a memorial garden, where members may request that their ashes be scattered. The garden is also often used for weddings and christenings.

The religious education building of the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church is an adjacent circle connected to the circular chapel by a foyer. At the rear of the church, in a building that was once a garage used by the city of Grosse Pointe, is the annex that is now home for the Interfaith Center.

Carrie Peebles recalled some very smelly dead fish.

"In the '60s," she said, "we founded a service league at old Detroit Receiving Hospital." The group was successful and is still working after 27 years.

The church is also involved in a number of community and service endeavors such as Crossroads, a resale shop located in the annex, newspaper recycling, the CROP walk, blood drives, food baskets for the poor, and other projects.

Corrado is also an accomplished jazz musician, and often plays the piano for church services. He writes hymns and has performed recently at a four-day jazz festival held at a westside church.

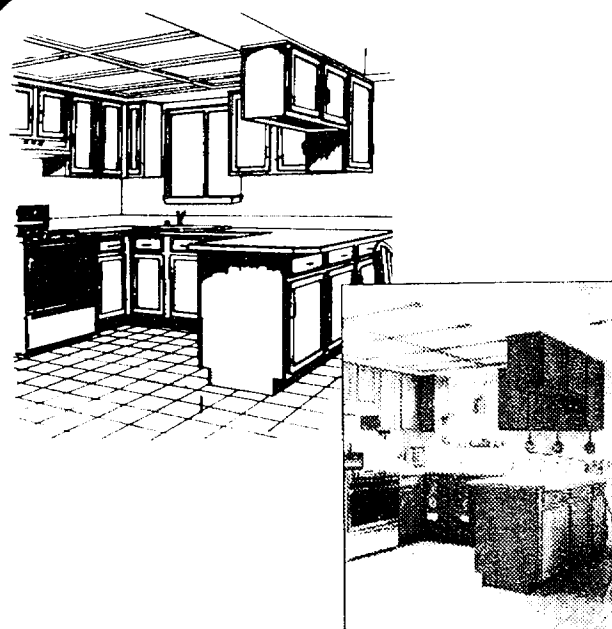

"I'm called upon to do a lot of weddings — a lot of mixed marriages," said Corrado. "Quite often for non-members."

Corrado said Sunday services at the Unitarian church often explore complex moral issues that are current. The church also holds a number of forums — "places where people's viewpoints on ethical issues can be heard."

Some topics from recent Sunday services and forums: abortion; gay men, lesbian women and the dignity of all people; AIDS; the use of nuclear energy; the Sanctuary movement.

Corrado said the programs are perhaps not as glamorous or as visible as they were in the '60s. "It's like peace," he said. "When there's war, everybody knows all about it. Peace is a positive thing. But it doesn't draw as much attention."

A cold thief?

Two Farms residences were burglarized last week, and both incidents had something in common — coats were taken.

A Kerby Road home was entered sometime between 11:30 p.m. and 8 a.m. Nov. 9 - 10. The thief entered the house by forcing a rear door open. Several jackets were taken, and someone had tried to take a car from the garage, but the key was broken off in the ignition.

A home was broken into on Meadow Lane overnight Nov. 10-11. The thief gained entry to the house by forcing open a door to a rear sun porch.

Some jewelry and other miscellaneous items were missing. Several coats, including a $200 down jacket, and $200 London Fog coat were also taken.

Last spring, a suggestion was made to Nancy Pilorget, chairperson of the Grosse Pointe Park Beautification Commission, that the city designate an official flower and work with scout troops to plant these flowers around the city as part of their yearly service project.

Brownie Troop 972 from Trombly School went to work recently, cultivating the soil and planting the daffodil bulbs donated by the beautification commission across from city hall on Pemberton and Jefferson. Assisting them were troop co-leaders Marilyn Potenga, Linda Slone, Maureen Trybus and Joann Zuchowski.

Suburbs must play role in Detroit revival

For the past week, the Detroit newspapers have been packed with information about the Detroit Strategic Planning Project, a new overall plan to revive Detroit, which is to be officially announced in detail today.

The project, which called on the services of an estimated 200 community leaders, including many from Grosse Pointe, was undertaken in order to attack the problems of the Detroit metropolitan area under five headings: race relations, education, development, crime and image.

Reaction to date is mixed, with some people deferring comment until the official release of the project plan, some businessmen expressing strong support and some political leaders, including Mayor Coleman Young, saying they liked some aspects of the report but disliked others. Young said that at best the blueprint is only a set of suggestions, adding, "If they are good suggestions, I will adopt them. And if they are not, I will not."

Young's reservations no doubt stem, in part, from the major divisions in Detroit. The black community, now counted as almost 70 percent of the population, controls the political processes in the city while white businessmen still dominate the private economic enterprises in the area. The new plan seeks to close the gap between the two groups by emphasizing the progress that could be made by closer cooperation.

Further, the recommendations ought not to be set in stone until the public has the opportunity to learn exactly what they are, how they are to be financed and what effect the implementation of such recommendations will have on the entire metropolitan area. No doubt changes can be made in the recommendations if the public input and discussion call for them.

Grosse Pointe and other suburban areas can play an important role in any dialogue. Some Pointers already have headed up task forces and otherwise contributed to the findings. And surely by now most suburban residents know that their fate is tied to that of Detroit and that if Detroit improves and prospers, their own future prospects can be materially benefited.

To their credit, the people who drafted the reports did not minimize Detroit's problems even though the image report says, "The task force feels strongly that the media have not done an adequate job in presenting a balanced perspective of Detroit."

The contention is that the media, nationally as well as locally, have not adequately reported the constructive accomplishments of the Detroit area and thus have overemphasized its negative aspects. Further, it is true, as the image report indicated, media and upper-level corporate jobs in Detroit are "extraordinarily transient," which means that many people occupying those positions do not become familiar with Detroit's problems during their brief stay in the area.

In its report, the race relations task force contends that the Detroit area is "the most racially polarized region in America" and that, as a consequence, racism is the No. 1 issue in the area. "Detroit and its suburbs can no longer survive as separate societies practicing a peculiarly American brand of apartheid," the report adds.

To tackle that problem, the report recommends a series of actions including a comprehensive study of discriminatory housing practices in the Detroit area, establishment of a council on race relations and development of principles for racial justice "that go beyond the law." Few suburbanites would quarrel with those recommendations.

Other specific recommendations include allowing parents to choose the Detroit public school they want their children to attend in order to arouse competition and improve school quality; a multi-million dollar plan to create a giant urban village in the city's blighted Woodward Corridor, and organization of a mobile anti-drug police team to attack narcotics-related crime.

Financing these and the many other proposals obviously will be difficult but surely suburban residents who work, own businesses and property, and pay taxes in Detroit must become part of any solution to the area's problems. That means, of course, many Pointers should get involved in the public dialogue about the plan and support those elements that can be beneficial to the residents of the suburbs as well as those living in Detroit.

Worthy cause in the Farms

Through the use of private, non-profit foundations, the Pointes have discovered a useful means of financing needed community improvements that enhance the quality of life in the Pointes without digging into the pockets of the taxpayers.

The latest of these civic ventures is the investment of from $75,000 to $100,000 by the Grosse Pointe Farms Foundation in major improvements to the Grosse Pointe Farms Pier Park. The Farms Foundation earlier had contributed substantial sums for construction of the recreation building and the park gatehouse and the revamping of the entrance to the park.

Under the plans approved by the Farms council last week, the foundation will install an ornamental iron fence along the west boundary of the park on Lakeshore Road, as well as an ornamental iron gate at the main exit-entrance facing Moross Road and two additional ornamental gates at other entrance points. The plans call for attractive plantings of shrubs and trees along the new fence and the beautification of an existing island with a three-foot brick wall and plantings to screen a portion of the parking area.

At the east end of the wall, the foundation will install a plaque as a tribute to the late Mayor James Dingeman, a founder of the foundation who long worked for park improvements. In addition, a new sign designating the Grosse Pointe Farms Pier Park will be erected at the entrance to the park on Lakeshore.

In making the plans public, the foundation also announced that it will immediately start a campaign for voluntary contributions to help finance its latest improvement project.

A number of Farms officials and other people deserve much of the credit for the successful development of the park improvement plans. The foundation worked closely with Mayor Joseph Fromm and a committee from the Farms council made up of MaryAnne Ghesquiere, John Crowley and Emil Berg. The overall plan was designed by John Grissim, landscape architect, under the direction of Ralph T. McElvenny, president, and Paul Marco, former president of the foundation.

Residents of the Farms owe a debt of gratitude to the foundation and the Farms council for the additional improvements that will enhance the appearance of the park and increase the public appreciation of its beauty. One way they can express their appreciation, of course, is by contributing to the fund the foundation is raising to finance the project.

Waste of time

To the Editor:

I agree with basic point of your Nov. 5 editorial about "More traffic deaths ahead." The whole issue of the speed limit is and was a waste of time. When there was a 55 mph. speed limit, people mostly went 65 or more anyway. There is no logical reason to change the speed because a posted speed limit road sign has no effect on most drivers.

Seven months could have been spent on other more important issues such as: finances, prison expansion, and education. The citizens of Michigan do not vote in these legislators to waste time on such a trivial issue. They have deprived this state of the major issues that should have been discussed.

There is nothing to do about the speed issue now. The deed has been done by raising the speed limit to 65 mph. Let's get on with the important issues facing the legislators.

Westchester residents clarify project

To the Editor:

As Westchester residents, we would like to clarify some facts concerning the Ruffner project. When the project was first introduced to the residents we were told the property would be for offices only and would be zoned office services. Not until the residents were enthused about this project did things start to change.

Mr. Ruffner no longer wanted an OS1 (office services) zoning, but he wanted a B1 which would include everything except a liquor license. His office was now going to include a bookstore, an art gallery, a computer software business and a greeting card company. On the Nottingham side, Mr. Ruffner wanted the zoning to stay B2, which could include a liquor license. If this was not bad enough, his offer to purchase (pg. 6, no. 12, Development by Purchaser) stated that in five years, Mr. Ruffner could sell the B2 property, developed or undeveloped, to whoever. This took the control of the property out of the city's hands and gave Mr. Ruffner carte blanche to do whatever he wanted with the property.

If people were familiar with the zoning ordinance, they would know that a 50 foot setback is only guaranteed with a residential zoning. Therefore, we wanted the Westchester property to stay residential with an OS1 variance. If the property was zoned OS1 and the new owner decided he did not have enough parking spaces, he could go into court and have the 50 foot setback removed.

Mayor Heenan and his henchmen were in such a hurry to sell this land that they did not take the time to think this out. Some council people changed their position because Mr. Ruffner changed his. It is nice to know that there are some council people who will take the time to listen to the residents and see their side instead of letting the mayor dictate to them on how to vote. Mr. Auserman and Mr. Robson have never expressed any opinions of their own. Their opinions are continually that of the mayor's. Mr. Auserman has never voted against anything that Mayor Heenan has proposed, which leads people to believe that he can not think for himself.

As for vacant buildings standing, whose fault is it? Not the residents', not the council members', but the city's. The city owns the land and could demolish the buildings at any time, but they are more valuable to them to be used as a place for their public safety officers to practice putting out fires.

Grim reminder: Speed kills

The recent death of a Roseville policeman involved in a high-speed chase is another grim reminder that too often speed kills on the highways and streets of metropolitan Detroit.

The death of Officer Albert O. DeSmet was the sixth fatality recorded this year in the area as a result of high-speed police chases. Those who had lost their lives earlier included two speeders, one person riding in a suspect's car and two innocent people who died in crashes caused by suspects fleeing from the police.

It was ironical that DeSmet had joined the suburban Roseville police department rather than Detroit's because, a friend said, he thought the work in the latter department would be too dangerous. However, that view didn't stop him and his partner from pulling into the middle lane of Gratiot in an attempt to slow down the fleeing vehicle, not block it. Instead, the speeder deliberately swerved his vehicle into the Roseville police car, another officer said.

The Pointes, of course, have not been devoid of speeding even on residential streets but, fortunately, in recent years have escaped the deaths and serious injuries resulting from police chases elsewhere in the metropolitan area.

After DeSmet's death, Lt. Al Slaughter of the Michigan State Police traffic services division in Lansing told the Detroit

News that police officers in Michigan are governed by state codes and municipal guidelines in determining whether to pursue a suspect at high speed.

However, Slaughter added that in the end the decision about high speed pursuit must be left to the individual officer to make on the basis of several factors: whether the suspect's crime was of sufficient importance to justify the chase, the presence of pedestrians and population density, road and weather conditions, an officer's familiarity with the area and the patrol car's speed and safety capabilities.

The state police officer said that it is wise for patrolmen to pull back from a chance anytime a life is in serious jeopardy, whether it be that of an officer, a suspect or an innocent bystander. When an officer finds such a situation, he concludes the threat of the loss of life is just not worth the continued chase.

Unfortunately, civilian speeders seldom take those conditions into consideration even when not being pursued by policemen. Instead, they too often continue to race over the highways until an accident ends their trip and sometimes their lives.

DeSmet's death should serve as a warning to Michigan motorists in general that highway speed seldom pays and often costs lives. With the 65 mph limit going into effect Nov. 29 on Michigan's rural freeways, that's a reminder that could save lives.

The silver lining

The Grosse Pointe News went to press last week without saying a word about Veterans Day. We in the newsroom didn't even notice it until the day after we printed.

I don't know why I didn't think of it. Bob's a veteran. A disabled veteran, in fact. He and every other gunner's mate on the USS Idaho had the hearing shot out of their right ears when someone mistakenly ordered the five-inch guns to swivel too far around. The blood ran down the side of their faces from under their earmuffs, and if the rest of those guys are anything like Bob, they don't hear much to this day.

With Thanksgiving coming up next week, maybe this is a good time to get ahead of the game and be thankful for a few things.

I'm glad it wasn't the 14-inch guns, though Bob says No. 1, he would never have been standing there, because those things would knock you on your knees, and No. 2, he wouldn't be here to miss hearing me tell about it.

I'm glad we're spending Thanksgiving with friends this year. Last year, Bob had bronchitis, so we spent the day at home alone.

We had been wallpapering the butler's pantry (an awful job, because the walls don't even pretend to be square), and the dining room table was covered with curtains and rods, a shelf, a doorbell, pitcher and bowl, a few fat binders from the local planning commission, bric-a-brac and wallpaper scraps and tools. But it would have been too bad to ignore the occasion, so I shoved everything to one end, got out the good china and crystal and roasted a Cornish hen.

We dined in splendor among the debris and Bob's hacking, but it was kinda quiet. This year will be better.

I Say

Nancy Parmenter

I'm glad about the African violets. Back when we were still in the old Grosse Pointe News building, someone sent me a violet. I was instantly depressed, as plants tend not to thrive under my care. Sure enough, I got sick that winter and missed some work, stranding my violet on my windowsill. While I was out, the heat in the building went out; when I returned, there was one leaf left.

I took my freeze-dried violet home, watered it a little and bragged to it a lot, and now there are two lush African violets on the shelf in that same gorgeously wallpapered butler's pantry.

I'm glad and proud that all three of our kids are living what existentialists call an "authentic" life. They've all had their ups and downs, but they are grappling head-on with life and trying hard to make themselves the people they want to be.

Speaking of our kids, I'm glad for adoption. Without it, we'd only have one. There are three adoptions in two generations in our family and we think it's a Good Thing.

I'm glad I'm not running for president. But just in case, I'll point out that Winnie the Pooh said "Good Thing" before I did. I'll also confess to having allowed my driver's license to expire, not once, but two times. Okay, I'll spill my guts. One time, it was for a whole year.

I'll be really glad when we get all the leaves raked at church. We've been at it for so long that we're beginning to talk about forming a professional landscaping crew.

And I'm glad that I found the photos I'd spent fifty bucks to have enlarged and then threw away in a frenzy of housekeeping.

I'm glad I'm done being the mother of the bride. I'm not very good at it. Our desk drawer still contains the blank guest registration book Renie bought at the last minute because I hadn't thought of it. Of course, I didn't think to take it to the reception.

But I'm still congratulating myself that I managed to distract her from noticing that the cat threw up a hairball on her gown.

Joining club pays off

Most people pay their dues after joining a community service organization, but not school board Treasurer Jon Gandelot who got an unexpected surprise when he joined the Rotary Club last Monday.

After being sworn in and given his pin, Gandelot settled down in his chair only to jump right out again when the club held its regular drawing.

He bought two $50 tickets several weeks ago, his name was picked and he was the recipient of a quick $1,000!

"It's a great club," Gandelot told the audience at the Nov. 9 school board meeting at the urging of fellow Rotarian and school board President Fred Adams. "My son wants to join now."

Pam "Cha-Cha" Baker

The Farms clerk's office secretary, Pam Baker, has taken a page out of drag racer Shirley Muldowney's book over the last several weeks.

"Crash" Baker, as she is affectionately referred to by Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm, has been rear-ended twice recently on Lakeshore while driving to work.

The Farms council last Monday night gave her a map, "so she could find another way to work," and several bumper stickers. The bumper stickers read, "Hit me, I need the money," and "Watch my rear end."

Some sandwich

There is a thief somewhere who has a powerful appetite. A Koeplinger's bread truck parked outside of the Park's Fairfax Market around 11:15 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 7, was relieved of about 40 loaves of bread while the driver was making a delivery.

It's probably time for storekeepers to keep an eye out for unsavory characters who are hanging around the deli meats and the mustard.

A job well done

We at the Grosse Pointe News want to offer our congratulations to the Grosse Pointe South Blue Devils for a terrific season.

South lost its regional championship game Saturday against Birmingham Brother Rice, 27-13.

First-year coach Jon Rice did a fantastic job, leading the team to its first Eastern Michigan League Championship since 1984.

The Blue Devils ended the season with an impressive 9-2 overall record and a 7-1 standing in the EML.

Good job, guys!

Yesterday's Headlines

Sept. 19, 1968 —

The New York Times reported that the commission appointed by President Johnson to explore the causes of violence held its first hearings and received sharply divergent views from the president's two top law enforcement officers. Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark told the panel that police action "in excess of authority" is the most dangerous type of violence because "who will protect the public when the police violate the law?" J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI, said that the police in Chicago during the National Democratic Convention the month before had been goaded into using force by demonstrators who wished to foment violence.

About 150 militant students halted registration at Columbia University by blocking a doorway in a demonstration that flared briefly into violence. The students, led by Mark Rudd and other leaders of the Students for a Democratic Society, jammed into an outdoor approach of a campus gym and demanded that a groups of suspended students be allowed to register.

Paul A. Freund, Harvard law professor considered to be the nation's leading expert of constitutional law, suggested that "a jury should be allowed to acquit people who act in a measured way for reasons of conscience." The professor was referring to those people who opposed the Vietnam War.

A Soviet weekly newspaper reported that the Chinese Red

Guards had ruled that "Jane Eyre" contradicted the thoughts of Chairman Mao Tse-tung. Charlotte Bronte's novel was thus condemned to the bonfire. Other anti-Mao books ranging from Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper" to Tolstoy's "War and Peace" were also being burned.

Some 75 members of an army reserve unit in Minnesota hired a lawyer to try to stop the unit from going to Vietnam. The protesting servicemen wanted to test in court the validity of a presidential call-up. In another case, 13 army reservists at Fort Lee, Va. asked a U.S. District Court to return them to civilian status because they were illegally called to active duty.

A safe, stolen from the Original Pancake House on Mack, was recovered from a ditch in Harrison Township by Macomb County sheriff's deputies. The safe had been opened and about $1,800 in cash and $200 in checks were missing.

The professional staff of the Grosse Pointe Public School System numbered 714, according to the assistant superintendent for personnel.

A three-bedroom colonial in the 200 block of McMillan near the Hill shopping area was advertised for sale for under $40,000. Another three-bedroom colonial in the 800 block of University in the City was also selling for under $40,000. A six-bedroom Georgian colonial on Neff in the City with 3-1/2 baths listed for $44,900.

In Grosse Pointe, voters approved a 4-1/2 mill operational levy at a special school election, but turned a 1-mill levy for building improvement and site acquisition. About 25 percent of the voters turned out.

The Grosse Pointe schools were cut off from federal aid through the subsidized milk program because vending machines had been installed at North High School. Officials had been informed of the fact, but since the aid amounted to about $4,000, they determined the school system would suffer no financial loss since it would be receiving profits from the vending machines.

No respect

To the Editor:

As a Grosse Pointe North band member, I've read and heard just about every statement made in reference to the lack of a marching band at both North and South high schools. Although these statements may have some basis in fact, I believe that an important aspect of this issue has been ignored.

Why the lack of a marching band? The answer is simple — the musicians are not wanted. Although parents and administrators rant about the lack of a marching band, the student body doesn't care. In theory, a marching band exists to bolster school spirit and provide listening pleasure to the students. At North, in past years, the "spirit" the marching band has given the students is an outlet for their aggressions which they express by throwing various objects at the band. As far as some students are concerned, the only disappointment about the lack of a marching band at school football games is the loss of the half-time sport of 'degrade the band member.' The rest of the student body apparently doesn't care enough about the marching band to stop or even speak out against this action. Since the students don't seem to mind the loss of the marching band this year, and in fact make jokes about the loss, it is obvious that the marching band is not wanted.

Why this disrespect for the marching bands in Grosse Pointe? The answer may lie in the examples set by parents and national television. When a network broadcasts a college football game, not a minute of the game itself is missed, but at half-time when the marching band performs, commercials and interviews take up most, if not all of the broadcast time while the band performs unseen. In addition, spectators use this time to grab a snack and pay little attention to the performance on the field. These actions help to foster the disrespect for the marching band that is so prevalent in Grosse Pointe teens.

Since it is the parents and administrators who seem to be upset at the loss of a marching band program at both schools, maybe they should look to their own actions to explain this. Although numerous letters have been written about the disappointment of a high school without a marching band, it seems that the parents have failed to instill their respect for marching bands into their children.

Currently there is, for obvious reasons, a lack of interest in a marching band program at both North and South. A renewed interest by the student body in a marching band would undoubtedly bring back a marching band program. Such interest and respect must be fostered in the students by their parents.

This letter was sent to President Ronald Reagan and is reprinted at the writer's request.

Don't sign treaty

To the Editor:

We are most alarmed by the proposed removal of short or medium range strategic nuclear weapons from Europe. This may well be the most tragic blunder in human history. Warning flags should be flying all over the place when the Russians press so hard for something.

Ideally, the Russians would love to see all nuclear weapons destroyed all over the world. They would then have at least a 10 to one superiority in conventional forces and could overrun central Europe in 30 days. There would be little to stand in their way.

Face reality — we have no real army any more. Just a bunch of button-pushing clerks who can't or won't fight — like the tough Russian soldier.

We are also famous for equipment that often malfunctions — like over-sophisticated tanks, faulty guidance systems on MX missiles, planes full of bugs, etc.

Mr. Reagan, we hope you haven't been misled to believe that the majority of Americans believe or want such an agreement. We haven't talked with anyone who isn't deeply concerned that such an action would ultimately lead to WW III.

We think the Russians are well aware or at least convinced that in the event of an attack we would not use long range missiles for fear of like reprisal. However, they are likewise sure that we would use battlefield short range strategic weapons which would outweigh their tremendous conventional advantage.

Mr. President, we fear you have already gone too far and have put the entire western world at risk. We have no suggestion as to how you can graciously or honorably back away from your position, but there are many Americans who are praying that you can find a way.

Gives praise

To the Editor:

It's great to see young, hard-working people recognized. Our family owes more than recognition to Marti VanEenaam.

Last year, when our daughter was 14 years old, knee cap problems arose. Three orthopedic surgeons with titles of 'sports medicine' would not even consider trying anything. They only recommended major surgery, moving bones around, casts, pain, therapy and possibly not returning to sports.

Marti, being Kathleen's trainer (and supporter) at South, recommended Dr. Huelett, who in turn prescribed six weeks, three times a week therapy. We chose Cottage Hospital, and Marti was her therapist. What a Godsend!

Our daughter returned to sports, earned her letter in track in grade 9 and is now playing basketball.

We do not want to march

To the Editor:

Regarding "The inmates have taken over the asylum," letter printed Oct. 22:

Mr. and Mrs. Marsden in a recent letter to your paper, spoke of the marching band as a highly valued part of the curriculum. We, the members of the Grosse Pointe Symphonic Band, ask, "What high value?" We, as members of the marching band are to get up at 6 a.m. every weekday, go to school to practice extremely easy and basically boring pieces of band music (for example, "The Sunshine of Your Smile," a.k.a. our teams' fight song) so that we may play these dumb tunes on Saturday mornings to the crowds of children, who, in appreciation of our effort, throw coins, paper, etc. at us.

We also play for our football team, who, both coaches and players, (not including band members) by their lack of attendance at our "real" concerts have shown us they care little also. Granted, we don't have to play easy music, but if we take the time to pick challenging music to play, it cuts into our preparation for other concerts such as the Pops and Winter concerts for the people who really do care, with their pocketbooks, about the serious music our band plays.

In their letter, Mr. and Mrs. Marsden said students will not even be considered for marching at a college level. This statement is false. Kimberle Metz (1986-87) is currently in the Miami of Ohio marching band, and is, according to the director, making progress faster than those who marched in high school bands and picked up bad habits.

Finally, you say the Grosse Pointe school system has sent a "clear message: We do not want cultural enrichment in our schools." With the advanced language students in Spanish being offered a trip to Spain every summer and a girls' tennis team offered a program that has led them to 11 straight state championships, and a school newspaper ranked in the top 10 nationally, we'll assume you were referring only to the band when you commented on the message being sent by the school system, even though that isn't what you said. (We also wonder what kind of experience you think we're being given in the Symphonic Band?)

In band we perform very difficult and challenging music that, for those who want it, is an excellent preparation for college band. Every year band alumni write Mr. Miller, our director, thanking him for his help in preparing them for college music. Every year the band plays its spring concert along with the orchestra and choir at Orchestra Hall, thought by some to be the finest acoustical music hall in the world. In defense of the school system, not inclusive of the outstanding academic education the school system provides, in the music program alone, the Grosse Pointe Schools provide a culturally enriching program that few high schools, if any, in the country can match.

In conclusion, we, the members of the symphonic band, do not want to march — we would rather spend our time on what we consider more important musical matters.

Signed by 68 Symphonic
South Band members

"This program (Leadership Detroit) has been immensely successful here," Busbey said. "The quality of the people who become involved is outstanding. There is a very good mix both racially and with gender. It is a super opportunity to meet people and to challenge yourself."

A trustee of the Detroit Institute of Arts Founders Society for the last five years, Busbey has been a board member, treasurer and now president of the Founders Junior Council, which sponsors the annual Fash Bash fundraiser.

"We raise about $100,000 a year with that event, and the money goes toward educational activities, art tours, trips, to buy art and sponsor exhibits."

He was selected president of the Junior Council twice, something that hasn't happened in the last 20 years.

Busbey said corporate development for the DIA is high on the agenda of future activities. He said there is a strong, active base of corporate supporters, but the Junior Council is working on expanding that base and reaching out to smaller supporters. "Our job is to come up with a responsible plan for corporate involvement."

He is involved with a number of other organizations, including the American Chamber of Commerce Executives, Detroit City Theatre Association, United Foundation, the Clinton River Boat Club and the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

"You ought to be doing things you enjoy doing," he said. "If you don't enjoy it, it is a hell of a way to spend your life, and you are not likely to excel."

His father, Grosse Pointer Charles Busbey died two years ago, but left him with a philosophy: "The hardest thing about doing anything is getting started," he recalled his father saying, "You will be amazed at what you can do once you get started."

Busbey sees many positive aspects about Detroit and says there is great potential growth in and around the city.

"Detroit is at a point right now where we can continue to move ahead or we can stall," he said. "We have done a lot even during bad times with the automobile industry, at a lot slower pace obviously, but we were still making progress."

He says that in 10 years, he hopes to be actively involved with groups involved with the revitalization of Detroit.

mostly bond and mixed funds and treasury notes. Kenyon said the fund is strong; it is 102 percent funded and the investment strategy is not likely to change.

"We have some of the best financial minds around on this commission," he said.

In the Woods, the discussion revolves more around whether to hire a professional financial adviser than around investment strategy. Currently the $14 million pension fund is administered by Comptroller Mark Christiansen and a pension board.

About $3 million of the fund is invested in stock and mutual funds, $7 million in corporate bonds and $2 million in treasuries, Christiansen said. It is 112 percent funded.

The Woods does not generate a monthly report on the value of its portfolio. "We record values on the basis of cost, not market value," Christiansen said. "The portfolio is so large that it's literally an impossible task to keep track of the market value at any given point. Many of the investments aren't even listed in the Wall Street Journal — you'd have to call a broker."

Christiansen said he doesn't believe the fund was hurt badly.

The pension board has been meeting more frequently than its quarterly requirement in order to discuss hiring an adviser, a decision that is nearly made. Christiansen serves as city treasurer and assessor as well as investment advisor, and the job is just too big for one person, he said.

"It's a highly diversified fund, maybe too diversified," he said. "The diversification would probably be reduced by a professional adviser. The financial market is so complex, there are so many roads to travel, that it really should be handled by an adviser — or someone with more time."

The Park doesn't have to worry about an adviser. It participates in the state fund, the Michigan Municipal Employees Retirement System. Park Comptroller Dale Krajniak said the city has been a member of the fund since the 1940s.

The Park's share of the fund is currently $7.6 million, an amount equalling employee and employer contributions, plus investment earnings over the years. Employee contributions are fixed by contract; employer contributions float according to the current value of the fund.

But Krajniak doesn't know how much the state fund lost during October. The state issues a report annually — for the previous year. He said he called the state for an estimate and was told that the crash would have little effect on earnings because the investments are long term, with long-term earnings as a goal.

He said one advantage to the state fund is that it is handled by a number of contract administrators, with the result that one person is not making all of the decisions.

Purse thief arrested

A 51-year-old Park woman had her purse stolen by a man who exited a car while she was walking Saturday, Nov. 7, at Vernor and Yorkshire in the Park at about 8:26 p.m.

The man grabbed the victim's purse and struck her when she resisted, and fled along with two others in the vehicle.

A radio broadcast alerted patrol officers in the Park and in Detroit to the description of the vehicle and the assailant. A Detroit patrol car spotted the vehicle and pulled it over at Outer Drive near Cornwall in Detroit.

The victim's credit cards along with property from another purse-snatching that had occurred just prior to the Park incident was found in the vehicle.

A line-up for both the Detroit and Park victims was held. The Park victim could not identify the thief, but the Detroit victim did.

One suspect was held on unarmed robbery charges.

"This was a good job," said Park Capt. William Furtaw. "Without the efforts of the Detroit police, even if we found the car, our victim would not have been able to identify the suspect."

THE SMALLER AIDS

Q. What are the positive features of the in-the-ear and intra-canal hearing aids?

A. Their size, for one thing. Because they are smaller and/or less noticeable than a traditional hearing aid design, they are more desirable cosmetically. Both types enable users to better localize sound sources, possibly because of preamplification of high frequencies in the outer ear. Because the microphone is more ideally placed in the in-the-ear and intra-canal aids, they improve speech discrimination in noisy environments. And with the ear-canal location, it takes less amplification or "gain" to produce a hearing improvement.

These two hearing-aid styles are not appropriate for all types of hearing impairments. That's why individual testing and fitting by a hearing aid professional is so important.

Local schools keep a-head of lice by screening students, classmates

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe public schools have hired a part-time nurse to check elementary school children for pediculosis, or head lice. Julie Bourke, B.S.N., said, "This is a real heavy season."

Bourke checked afternoon kindergarten at Richard Elementary School on Monday, but found no new cases of head lice. She said she had found several cases last week in kindergarten and first-grade classes at Richard.

Cindy Stauder, the mother of a second-grader at Richard, said 80 percent of the members of the school's Brownie troop — and 80 percent of their mothers — were infected. "The girls and the mothers were together at a mother-daughter sleepover last Friday," Stauder said. "One of the mothers at the sleepover said that she had gotten a call from the school saying her daughter had head lice. Another mother, who is a nurse, began checking everyone at the sleepover and found evidence of lice in 16 to 18 Brownies and 16 to 18 mothers." Stauder said her daughter's case was confirmed by a pediatrician.

Lorna Vroom, R.N., school nurse for the Grosse Pointe schools, said that head lice are found all over the world. "It has nothing to do with who you are, where you live, or how clean you are. You get head lice through personal contact with someone else who has them," she said. Lice are tiny grayish-black bugs, about the size of a red ant. They live on the human head by feeding on the scalp. They lay eggs, called nits, at the base of the hairs. Lice are not usually visible, but the nits can often be seen around the nape of the neck and behind the ears. They're about the size of a grain of sand. The brownish-red eggs take six to eight days to hatch, according to Vroom. After they have hatched, the egg sac is white, and it sticks so firmly to the hair that it cannot be pulled off — even with a comb. The newly hatched louse matures within a week, then begins laying eggs and the cycle repeats again.

Judy Navarre, R.N., school nurse, said that Grosse Pointe has no more cases of head lice than in other years. "This is not an epidemic," she said. "Parents get upset, especially if their child is in kindergarten and if it's their first child."

This year, she said, there are probably the same number of cases, but they seem to be spread out among all the elementary schools.

"We appreciate the fact that parents call and let us know their child has been infected," said Navarre. If a child has lice, Grosse Pointe's policy is to send a nurse to check the child's classmates and close friends. "Most school districts just send a note home and don't check further. Grosse Pointe keeps it under control by checking classmates."

Lice can be picked up from close contact with an infected person, Vroom said, but the lice do not fly or jump. They only crawl.

According to a Wayne County Department of Health publication, lice are spread by close contact with the head or hair of someone who has them — by sharing combs, brushes, hats, wigs, pillows, bedding and clothing — by lying on carpets or upholstered furniture where there are lice or loose hairs from an infected person.

Dave King, director of support services for the Grosse Pointe schools, said that the school had found a couple cases — "about the same as usual." He said the part-time nurse had already been to Defer, Ferry, Kerby, Mair, Mason, Monteith, Poupard and Richard schools. There have been no cases at Trombly.

Bourke emphasized that head lice can spread very quickly, "especially among little girls. You know how little girls are always fooling around with each other's hair — using each other's combs — trading Brownie hats.

Mary Thorn, head of University Liggett Lower School, said that they had found four cases of head lice in the lower school. "This is unusual for us," she said. She added that Liggett usually has a few isolated cases each year. She has sent a letter home to all parents of children in the lower school, with instructions about how to check their children's hair and what to do if they find evidence of head lice. "Periodically, a nurse comes in. This year she checked the class where the first case was found."

Karen McGuire, principal of Our Lady Star of the Sea's elementary school, said six cases of head lice have been found. "Considering our enrollment of 400," she said, "this is a low number." McGuire said that volunteer mothers help screen children after a case has been found.

Getting rid of lice

If you find nits or lice in your child's hair, the Wayne County Department of Health has issued some guidelines for getting rid of the pests:

1. Shampoo the child's hair with a medicated shampoo designed to kill lice. There are several over-the-counter shampoos as well as one that is available with a doctor's prescription. Follow directions exactly and note that the procedure needs to be repeated after eight to 10 days.

2. Notify your child's school. A school nurse will examine the child's classmates and friends. This will help prevent the spread of lice at school. Your child should not go to school until he/she has been treated with a medicated shampoo.

3. Using hot water, wash

all clothing, towels and bedding that the child has used.

4. Dry clean clothing and hats that cannot be washed. Or store clothing in airtight plastic bags for at least a month. Without a human body, lice and nits will die within a month.

5. Vacuum upholstered furniture, floors and carpets, especially where the child plays. There is also an insecticide spray designed to kill lice that can be used on surfaces, but not on children.

6. Wash combs and brushes in medicated shampoo or soak in a 2 percent Lysol solution for an hour, or place in a pan of water heated to 150 degrees for five to 10 minutes.

7. Tell children not to share combs, brushes, hats, coats, scarves or other clothing with other children.

Missing Ford statue found at U of D fraternity house

A statue, stolen from in front of the late Henry Ford II's Grosse Pointe Farms house on Provencal sometime Nov. 6 was recovered Saturday afternoon, Nov. 14, in the basement fruit cellar of a University of Detroit fraternity house.

Apparently, the theft of the Three Graces, a bronze statue of three women dancing, was the result of a pledge prank of the Phi Kappa Theta fraternity, according to Farms Detective Daniel Jensen.

Because the statue was an antique valued at $10,000, and may have crossed state lines, the Federal Bureau of Investigation was called into the case. FBI officials ordered that the theft not be reported to the media until Friday, Nov. 13.

It was a report in the Detroit Free Press Friday which led to the recovery of the 42 1/2-inch tall, 200-pound antique, cast in 1958 by German artist Gerhard Marcks.

Jensen said the department received an anonymous tip from someone who attended a party at the frat house Nov. 7, and saw the statue.

Jensen, along with Detroit police, an FBI investigator and a Ford Motor Co. security official, went to the house to question the residents.

The president of the fraternity admitted to having knowledge of the incident, and said the statue was in the house.

"He told us he was going to return it when he saw how much it was worth in the paper," Jensen said.

Apparently, pledges to the fraternity unbolted the statue from a cement pedestal located in front of the house in a large courtyard.

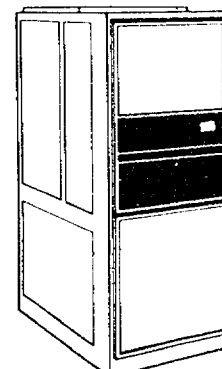

The statue was removed from the frat house by several of its members and turned over to authorities. The statue is now in the hands of Ford Motor Co. security officials.

Good storytelling not only involves relating a tale, but also an expressive face and hand gestures. Storyteller Susan Danoff, a master of all three, performed at University Liggett School last week. She is one of about 1,000 professional storytellers in the country.

Storyteller brings tales to life through ancient art

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

It is an art form that many practice, but few excel at — a tradition as old as mankind.

Students at University Liggett School were treated last week to several performances by professional storyteller Susan Danoff. From the moment she began to tell her tales, she captivated the audience with her quiet, soft and gentle manner.

Dressed in several layers of soft purple and black freeflowing caftan-like garb, she moved lyrically in rhythm with her tales. Occasionally she would move her long honey-colored hair from her face, and her large metallic necklace would softly chime.

Upper school students were told five stories, each with an international flavor.

Considered a master storyteller, Danoff earned her bachelor of arts degree in East Asian Studies from Princeton University, and her master of arts in English from Rutgers University. She then earned her English teaching credentials from the University of California, Berkeley, and from 1983-87 she taught in the English Department at Princeton University.

"I have always loved stories," she said. "As a child I was always repeating things, as most storytellers have a tendency to do."

Describing what she does is difficult. She does not relate a story the way a journalist would write about an automobile accident. She relives events, much the way a person would tell another about an accident he just witnessed.

The gestures are fresh and alive. If she puts her hand above her eyes as if looking off in the distance, you get the feeling she is actually seeing the person she is describing.

"At Princeton I had a radio show where I would read stories over the air," she said. "At that time I heard a storyteller by the name of Diane Wolkstein. I was so taken with this. I didn't know that people did this."

Storytelling combined the ingredients at which Danoff excelled and loved.

"Storytelling is part literature, which I love, part people, and I love to teach and it is intercultural, which is one of my main interests. 'It contains all the things that I had done before. I didn't know there was one thing that would bring them all together.'"

Following her 45-minute performance, several faculty members and students praised her stories. One said he liked the short Arabian Nights tale of "The Donkey Driver and the Thief." Another said she liked the Chinese tale of "The Wise Judge and Xian Fu Yen." Still another said her favorite was an Irish folk tale titled "The Man Who Had No Story." The Irish tale was told with an Irish brogue, as the characters within the tale spoke.

"The response you get from the audience is critical," Danoff said. "You know if you have them if they are silent. You simply can't tell a story if there is a disruption."

She practices her storytelling all the time. If she isn't reading and researching to find new stories, she is practicing her craft by recording herself.

"I probably read about 100 stories to find one I want to tell," she said. "If you are going to spend the kind of time necessary to tell a story, then you have got to love what you are doing. I read the story aloud, tape it, and I usually listen to it in the car, because I do a lot of driving."

She does not practice her movements or choreograph her performance. She learns the story as though she really experienced what happened.

"I'm not memorizing the story, I am living it," she said. "Sometimes the words change. I may notice it while I'm doing it, and in the back of my mind make a note, but each performance is new and alive. I do not think about it as I am doing it. You have to learn the story well enough to let go of it."

Danoff's style is somewhat subdued. She doesn't shout or make wild gestures. Her approach is gentle and low-key.

"Storytellers have a tremendous range of what they do with their bodies," she said. "They move within a range that they are comfortable with."

As with anything, sometimes a story gets old, says Danoff. She may have to put it away for several years, then pull it back out and see if it's still stale or if she can take it out and breathe life into it again.

Danoff has been touring the country for about two years. She said she doesn't know if she can make a living doing it full time, but last year she performed about 120 days.

She gives performances, offers classroom discussions, workshops, lectures and gives demonstrations.

Danoff is sponsored by World Awareness, Inc., a non-profit organization founded in 1984 to promote awareness of the world through activities, products and financial assistance.

Farms must control blight, neighbors say

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

Pressure to require a minimum amount of maintenance on the exterior of houses is building in the neighborhoods between Mack and Kercheval in the Farms. Residents have begun badgering the city about cracked driveways, crumbling porches, peeling paint and sagging garages.

"People come and go in this price range," said McKinley resident John Wayne. "These are the beginning signs of blight."

Last week Wayne took a reporter on a neighborhood tour that he has also given to several city officials. He pointed out examples of poor maintenance as well as quite a few renovation success stories.

He and others want the Farms council to enact a minimum maintenance ordinance that would give officials the power to ticket owners of homes that don't meet the standards. Grosse Pointe Woods enacted a similar ordinance about two years ago.

Mayor Joseph Fromm is aware of their concern. He is not convinced, however. "I'm not sure if the city wants or needs a chipping paint ordinance," he said Thursday. No model has yet been proposed or discussed.

The Farms needs the ordinance because its certificate of occupancy procedure doesn't succeed in keeping properties attractive, Wayne contends. As long as something is functional, it passes the certificate of occupancy inspection — and some residents think that's too easy. Further, the complaint process is circular:

"When we complain about something, we don't get any action, because the building department says they'll catch it on the certificate of occupancy," he said.

Residents of that area have been saying for about a year that the council doesn't pay any attention to their complaints. That has turned around in the last few weeks, as Councilman Emil Berg has taken a public interest in the area's traffic problems and Mayor Fromm has seemed to make a point of consulting residents.

Fromm doesn't like the suggestion that he has just started to pay attention.

"The city has always paid attention to that area," he said. Ticking off a list of accomplishments, he said the city has appointed several people from that neighborhood to the traffic study committee and is studying an ordinance to control the trash from dumpsters — in response to complaints about Seven/Mack. He says the characterization of a divided city is unfair.

"We're not divided into precincts," he said. "No area gets special treatment."

Wayne said the residents are pleased with the city's response right now. "We'll wait and see if it lasts," he said.

The yard of the empty house on McMillan is overgrown and the garage door is standing open.

Repairs promised on abandoned house

The owner of an abandoned house on McMillan has promised the Farms that she will bring the house up to code by Dec. 1. The city has been trying for several years to get the work done.

Neighbors of the house don't think the city has tried hard enough, and were reluctant to believe the latest promise. "We're somewhat encouraged that something is being done," resident Paul D'Angelo told the council last week, "but we're cautious because the owner lapses back when the pressure is off." He said the neighbors have recently discussed taking some action themselves.

The house has been standing empty for seven years, according to resident Anthony Skomski. "The plaster's falling down, a window's broken and squirrels get in," he said angrily. "The city won't do anything."

Actually, the city has only received one formal complaint, about two years ago, according to City Clerk Richard Solak. A violation and a warrant were issued, but the owner never appeared in court until the end of last month.

"Nobody wants to embarrass the lady," Solak said. "We're trying to get her to do something, but she doesn't seem to comprehend the seriousness of the situation. We want to keep pressure on her, but throwing her in jail doesn't make any sense."

The city became involved in the issue because weeds were growing high in the front yard. The front yard is now maintained, but the rear of the house is neglected and the interior reportedly needs thousands of dollars of repairs. Solak said the owner called him Nov. 12 and promised to deal with the problems within the next few weeks.

"It's not been an easy situation," he said. "I hope things can be resolved so the neighbors can be satisfied and she can get her life back together."

Jogger robbed

A Grosse Pointe Park woman was threatened and robbed last week by a 25-year-old Detroit woman who approached her as she was jogging along Jefferson near Harvard in the Park.

The jogger told the attacker she didn't have any money and refused to give up her portable tape player, though the woman had her hand in her pocket as though she had a gun, according to City police.

The two wrestled for a short time, and when the thief grabbed the radio, she fled. She was apprehended at Neff and Jefferson by City police, and later turned over to Park authorities since that is where the incident occurred.

Three local artists exhibit in Detroit gallery

Three Grosse Pointe artists are among 48 whose works are now on exhibit at the Swords into Plowshares Peace Center & Gallery in Detroit.

"Transformations," by Sylvia Mitchell of Grosse Pointe Farms, is a terra cotta and porcelain sculpture that images a series of transformations from the beginning of man and the earth's resources, to the hope that lies in the use of the human mind.

"Instruments," by Jim Pallas of Grosse Pointe Park, is a motorized piece of bone, laurel, money, mud and teeth.

"Cat and Mouse Game," by Marion Spitzley, also of Grosse Pointe Park, is a color Xerox collage portraying the technological escalation of the arms race.

The Detroit gallery specializes in the work of artists who create expressions of concern for peace. The current exhibit, "Transforming Visions," is the result of a juried competition which attracted 91 Michigan artists. It is an official Sesquicentennial event.

The exhibit runs through Jan. 16. The gallery is located at 45 E. Adams, on Grand Circus Park in downtown Detroit. Hours are Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Call 965-5422.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat Magnet' Diet Pill Guarantees Fast Weight Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

No Dieting—Eat Normally

Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You will start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

There has never been anything like it before. It is a totally new major medical breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patent pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in fat particles. Then, all that trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body because it cannot be digested.

Within 2 days you will notice a change in the color of your stool as the fat particles are being eliminated.

"Pills Do All the Work"

According to the doctors, the fat-magnet pills do all the work while you quickly lose fat with no starvation diet menus to follow, no calorie counting, no exercising, and no hunger pangs. It is 100% safe. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

The fat-magnet pills have just been offered to the American public and are already sweeping the country with record sales and reports of dramatic weight loss. It's the "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W24, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) For fastest service for credit card orders ONLY call anytime 24 hours, toll free 1(800)527-9700, ext. W24.

Durant puts grassroots experience to work for Kemp

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

Clark Durant "came out of (his) mother's womb walking pre-cincts."

The Grosse Pointe lawyer and chairman of the board of the federal Legal Services Corp. has just been appointed national co-chair (with Congressman Vin ience I had growing up in a political family on Detroit's east side was helping people on a one-to-one basis. Trying to find people a job, I remember taking people a turkey at Thanksgiving. I've been involved in politics at the grass roots as long as I can remember."

It's the grass roots that make served as vice chair of the finance committee for the Reagan-Bush campaign in 1984 and was on the Republican platform committee that same year.

That's when he got to know Jack Kemp.

Actually, he met Kemp a few months previous at a Detroit fundraiser. "I sat next to him rare thing to do at a fundraiser."

The two were thrown together the next summer in Dallas — and Durant was convinced. "I told Jack then that I had made up my mind," he said. "I told him I'd come back to Michigan and recruit for him."

As co-chair for the national campaign, Durant will continue to have fundraising responsibilities, but he will also provide political strategy and policy advice. He seems to relish the prospect:

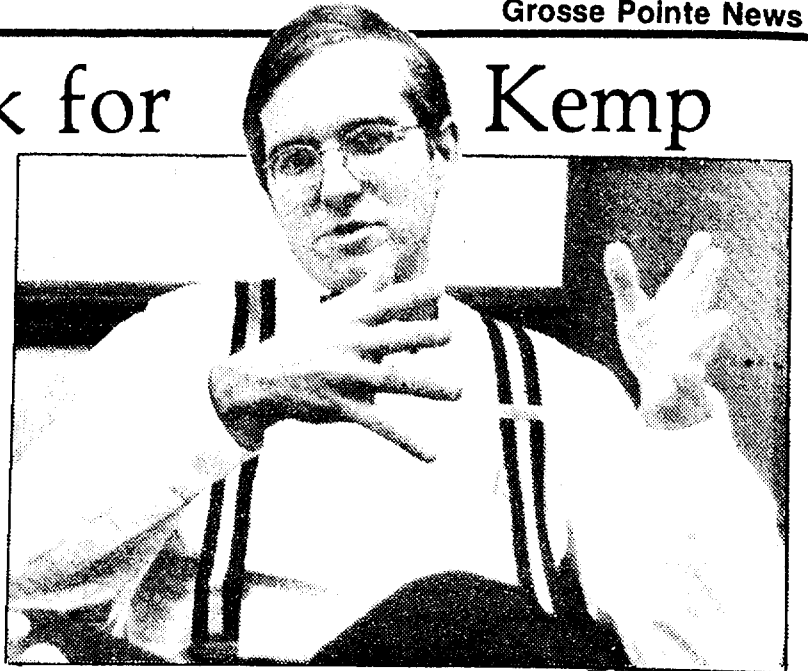

"It's interesting to sit in with congressmen, listening to them try to bang out a platform, and I'm just this little lawyer from Detroit... Ideas have consequences, but they take their form, their substance from individual people... It's important to distinguish between consensus and leadership. Consensus can mean the lowest common denominator. Jack has leadership."

Durant intends to go out on the hustings for Kemp. "I'm a hands-on person. I'll be a surrogate for Kemp. I'll help raise money. It's important to communicate what a candidate stands for — you're not asking people to donate, you're asking them for an investment."

He doesn't expect to have to concentrate heavily on the campaign in Michigan, where he says an organization is already in place. The Kemp campaign started from "ground zero," alone among the major Republicans in not having a pre-existing network in the state. But the campaign has raised more than $7 million, and although much of it has been spent, "he's not gonna run out."

"It's budgeted, he's in this for the long haul."

In spite of all the travel, Durant and his wife, Susan, decided not to move to Washington. "This is my home, a lot of my successes are here," he said.

This is no honorary position. "It's very hands-on," Durant says. It's his style.

This week Durant was campaigning in Arkansas. Over Thanksgiving, he and his three older children will pile into the family car and drive to Iowa for several days of door-to-door campaigning.

"What we want to do is meet people on a personal basis," he said.

That's the way the Durant family has always felt about politics: "The most important experthe difference, he believes. A few people working the long hours will almost always beat the big name coming into the campaign late."

"Elections are won on the margin, by small groups of people committed to giving their time," Durant said. "Unless you're a returning general from the field of battle riding a wave of popularity, it's very difficult."

"Politics goes to those who persevere. There are no final victories and no final defeats."

Durant's father, Richard, ran for Congress when Clark was still a child. His uncle, Park Mayor Palmer Heenan, is active in local politics. Durant himself because I had sold more tickets than anybody else," he said with a grin. Kemp made an impression because he refused to allow Detroit-bashing.

"Somebody had been making jokes at the expense of Detroit," Durant recalled. "Kemp, in a kind way, criticized the emcee. He said the party couldn't be making fun of the city's problems if it was serious about expanding its voter base. That's a

Professor says everyone has at least seven intelligences

By Sanders Chae
Student Writer

Howard Gardner, Ph.D. and a professor at Harvard University, visited University Liggett School to speak of "The Theory of Multiple Intelligences," Oct. 23. This theory states that, as opposed to a general I.Q., each human being has at least seven different intelligences.

Of the multiple intelligences, the first is linguistics intelligence, where people demonstrate high ability in languages, poetry and communication. Logical and mathematical intelligence is ability in areas such as logic and math, aiding those working in science or other related fields.

Musical intelligence is high competence in thinking musically, while spatial intelligence, often found in artists, sculptors and even surgeons, is the ability to create mental images of space and the world. Bodily kinesthetic intelligence is the ability to use the body as well as the mind, and is often demonstrated in the high coordination and muscle control found in athletes.

Interpersonal intelligence is competence in relating to other people. Interpersonally intelligent people often possess an uncanny knowledge of human nature which aids in sales, teaching, religion or politics. Intrapersonal intelligence is the capacity to develop a "vertical view of oneself," or a realistic view of one's own abilities and capacities. Of all the intelligences, Gardner stated that intrapersonal intelligence was very important for succeeding in the world, in that the ability to realistically see one's own capabilities and discover one's niche in life is essential for being effective in a complex society.

interests. Education should therefore be geared toward those differences.

Broad education is in itself valuable, and thus Gardner believes that there ought to be some sort of seven-year period where education would be of great breadth. In the upper grade school, however, students should begin to focus on a certain area for specialization.

Gardner concluded that the result in society was what he described as "the three diseases, the bestest, the testest, and the westest." Society, he states, has become far too set on ascertaining who is the best. In an attempt to cull the wheat from the chaff, society overevaluates the results of certain tests, like the SAT and IQ tests. Finally, because of western culture, certain skills like languages, logic and math are placed on a pedestal, while other intelligences are undervalued.

No one intelligence, stressed Gardner, is more important than any other, and the educational system ought to be modified to reflect the different abilities of its students.

University Liggett School Headmaster Ted Whatley, left, with Harvard University professor Howard Gardner, who spoke on the theory of "multiple intelligences" Oct. 23.

Gardner also explained that studies of people with brain damage negate the idea of an overall intelligence. Those with a stroke in the left hemisphere, for example, often have language impediments, but their logic as well as spatial skills usually remain intact.

Gardner's theory is now being demonstrated in various projects across the country. The best example is Project Spectrum at Tufts University, where 3 and 4 year olds are having their different intelligences assessed.

The importance of the theory lies in the educational implications of multiple intelligences. Gardner stressed that students are different and have different

Breathe easy

Residents and council members alike can relax in the Farms, thanks to a little change in the city's air conditioner condenser ordinance. Tough requirements on placing a unit on the side of a house had brought scores of residents to the council in recent years, seeking a variance. The new rules should make the job easier.

"The old way was too strict," said City Clerk Richard Solak. Neighbors within 200 feet in every direction had to be notified under the old rules.

"Most people 200 feet away don't care," Solak said. "It's only the next door neighbor who cares."

The rules were made to protect residents from having noisy units right next door.

New units tend to be quieter and most cannot be heard two houses away.

"Everybody still needs a permit," Solak reminded, "and the condenser still has to be screened with shrubs or a fence."

But under the new rules, only the immediate neighbor becomes involved in the decision, and people living on corner lots who want to place a condenser on the street side of the house no longer need to get permission of neighbors across the street.

"It will clear up the council agenda," Solak said. "This year was heavier than most because of the hot weather. Off the top of my head, I'd say we had 35 this summer alone."

Smash, grab in Woods

Several thousand dollars worth of electronic equipment was taken from a Mack Avenue electronics shop in Grosse Pointe Woods early Monday morning, Nov. 16. Several VCRs, a camcorder and other equipment was taken when a cinderblock was thrown through the front door. Several alarms sounded, but police found no one at the scene. There are no suspects at this time.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to hereafter occupy or continue to occupy, or for any owner or agent thereof, to permit the occupation or continued occupation of, any dwelling or structure or part thereof, for any purpose, unless a certificate of occupancy has been issued by the building department with respect to such dwelling or structure and such certificate has not expired. Six Skillman scholars at ULS

The Skillman Foundation has awarded six scholarships to University Liggett School students for the 1987-88 school year.

In the spring of 1985, the trustees of the Skillman Foundation established the Skillman Scholars program for minority youth residing in the metropolitan Detroit area to attend designated independent schools. Criteria for the scholarships emphasize outstanding academic performance. The six Skillman Scholars at ULS are Tony Hill, Rae Goolsby, Andrea Graham, Abimbola Afariogun, Karow Gordon and Melanie Robinson.

A junior, Tony Hill enjoys his involvement in forensics, where he has experienced success in the radio event in tournaments. A varsity runner for the cross country and track and field teams, Hill especially enjoys French class. This is the third year Hill has been named a Skillman Scholar.

Rae Goolsby and Andrea Graham return as sophomore Skillman Scholars this year. Goolsby's performance in track and field was a highlight of the 1987 season. She not only helped break a school record in the 4x100 meter relay, but also won the Most Improved Player award. Goolsby enjoys going to her Spanish class and singing with The Variations, an informal ULS vocal ensemble. She also gives tours for the admissions office.

Graham likes geometry class. Like Goolsby, Graham sings with The Variations and gives admissions office tours. A novice discus thrower and shot putter, she contributed a positive attitude to the track and field team last spring.

Afariogun, a ninth grader, comes to ULS from Bates Academy. An adept math student, he is enjoying geometry class. He joined the varsity football team this fall even though he had never played before. Afariogun is an academic games champion.

Also playing football for the first time was Karow Gordon. He comes to ULS from Cleveland Junior High School. His favorite subject is English, as he enjoys writing.

Robinson, also a freshman, spent last summer working in a biology lab. She comes to ULS from Ann Arbor Trail Open Middle School, where she was a good math and science student. Her favorite activities at ULS include French Club, Project Adventure and pep rallies.

The Skillman Foundation was founded in 1960 by Rose Skillman, widow of Robert Skillman, vice president of Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing. The foundation is a private, grant-making foundation with assets totaling $250 million.

Student Spotlight

Jamie Kirk

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The following was written by Jamie Kirk, a second-grader at Maire Elementary School. He is the son of Stephen and Jan Kirk of Grosse Pointe.

Scary is:

The first day of school I was very, very scared. I was new. My family has just moved to Michigan from Maryland, and I didn't know anyone who went to my new school. I looked around on the playground and everyone seemed to know each other. They seemed glad to see their friends after summer vacation, and I didn't see any faces I recognized. My new teacher, Mrs. Steffes, asked another boy in my class to show me around the school. He was very nice to show me how to get to the different classes. My friend Patrick plays with me at recess and eats with me during lunch. He is my best, best friend. My new school isn't scary anymore.

This space is open to any student in the Grosse Pointe public or private school system from grades 1 through 12.

3 make honors choir

University Liggett School students Andrea Graham of Detroit, Brooke Hohmeyer of Grosse Pointe and Sylvia Ristic of St. Clair Shores were accepted into the Regional Honors Choir after a recent audition. Ristic is a junior; Hohmeyer and Graham are both sophomores.

They will compete for positions in the State Honors Choir Dec. 5. The State Choir will perform in Ann Arbor in January for the Midwestern Music Educators Convention.

Pier Park entrance to get facelift, plaque to honor former mayor

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Farms Foundation last week unveiled a $75,000 plan to refurbish the entrance to Pier Park. The upgrade, which includes a black iron fence, a brick wall, plantings and a plaque honoring the late Farms mayor will be privately financed.

The plan represents a compromise in the foundation's desire to honor the late Mayor James Dingeman. Soon after his death, the group began promoting a plan to rename the park in Dingeman's honor. The council resisted.

"While we had a great deal of affection for Mr. Dingeman, we didn't want to dedicate the park to him," said Councilman Emil Berg at the meeting where the plans were discussed. "This is in accord with our sentiments."

The council had taken the position earlier that Dingeman would not have wanted the publicity of having the park named for him.

Foundation President Ralph McElvenny presented the plan with assistance from landscape architect Paul Andriese of John Grissim and Associates. Although McElvenny asked the council for a formal vote of approval, Mayor Joseph Fromm called only for a consensus.

Fromm said later that he wanted to keep the arrangements informal. He said the foundation is not expected to return to the council for site plan approval or with any potential plan revisions.

Plans for the park entrance opened the discussion to problems with signs and traffic control in the parking lot. Several residents complained about the traffic pattern, which has two lanes of cars going in one direction, with a third lane going the other way in between them.

Farms Police Chief Robert Ferber said there isn't much that can be done about it. "You'll always have the problem to some extent as long as the flagpole is there," he said. The island with the flagpole prevents traffic from proceeding straight while entering or leaving the park.

The foundation has been working with a committee of council members on details of the plan, according to McElvenny. The plan calls for removal of the cyclone fence along the Lakeshore frontage and replacing it with an ornamental iron fence and gates. The flagpole island will have a serpentine brick wall running its length. It is here that the bronze plaque to Dingeman will be placed.

Additional plaques to other Farms residents could eventually be placed there as well. "I think it would be nice to give additional recognition to public servants," said McElvenny. "There's very little reward in public service."

Flowering trees and shrubs will be planted around the gatehouse, according to landscape architect Andriese. He said an evergreen hedge will also be planted where it will screen the parking lot from the road.

Who will maintain the project was not addressed. Beautification Commission chair Helen McKnight told the council not to look at her members. "We're tired of weeding," she said. "It's difficult to get funds from the city. What provisions are being made to fund the garden maintenance?"

Fromm said the council would "try to work something out" in next year's budget, or maybe the foundation would pay for it.

Police Chief Ferber told the council that the project would probably result in a safer park, as some of the parking lot pedestrian crossings could be straightened and additional parking spaces would be created. Under the new plan, security people in the gatehouse would have a better view of the bicycle racks.

The Dingeman plaque will be made of bronze and will feature Dingeman's head in bas relief. The plaque will be two feet by a foot-and-a-half.

"It was my idea," McElvenny said. "It will be a simple, dignified, nice plaque for a very nice guy. He wouldn't want something grandiose."

Also discussed, but not resolved, was a suggestion that the flagpole be lit at night as both a tribute to Dingeman and a security measure.

Home broken in

About $2,250 worth of goods were taken from a Roslyn residence in the Woods Thursday, Nov. 12.

Woods officials said the house was locked, but the thief forced open a rear door. A complete search was made of the house, including the master bedroom.

A VCR, gold watch and a small color television were taken.

There are no suspects at this time.

Larceny suspect arrested

A Grosse Pointe Park patrol unit spotted a vehicle at Jefferson and Whitter around 1:30 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 8, and when the patrol car investigated, the car lights were turned off and the vehicle fled at a high rate of speed.

After a brief chase that ended at Warren near University, the suspects were apprehended. A check on their backgrounds revealed that the occupants were wanted in connection with several larcenies in Oakland County and Detroit.

Local educator seeks Pointe students for summer trip to Europe

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Bernard LeMieux, South assistant principal, took 21 students to Europe last summer via Education Travel for Everyone. Students and chaperones toured the continent for nearly three weeks, and though the program is not connected with the school system and students cannot get class credit, there is plenty of education involved.

Students get a chance to learn about the various cultures through language, history and experiencing the country firsthand, LeMieux said. While the 20 days are packed with trips to museums and historical sites, there is plenty of unstructured time built into the experience so that students may go shopping, see a play or experience the country on their own.

Educational Travel for Everyone is a for-profit enterprise started by Jay Hinga of Clarkston, Mich., who has visited Europe numerous times. LeMieux said Hinga has developed an excellent itinerary as well as accommodations.

"I would say that we spent about 60 percent of the time there last year on tours and the rest of the time in smaller groups," LeMieux said. "Students must be accountable at all times and the entire trip is fairly structured."

Nine students from South, three from Our Lady Star of the Sea and nine from Birmingham participated in last year's trip.

While the students do not get credit from the Grosse Pointe school system, there are several schools, including Madonna College, that do give a humanities credit for the trip.

"We try to have about eight or 10 sessions prior to the trip once the group is identified," LeMieux said. "There is a heavy emphasis placed on education. We meet, view slides and videotapes and practice some of the phrases we will use over there."

South students who participated in last year's program recommended it highly to students who are considering going next

"It enabled you to learn a lot about different cultures," said Heidi Martin, a senior. "We are studying world history and humanities now, and I have already experienced it."

Laura Linder, also a senior, said many of the slide shows or discussions about European history or literature that her classmates find boring, thoroughly interest her.

While the price is out of the range of most high school students, the cost is relatively reasonable for the amount of time spent in Europe and the accommodations. Overall cost is $2,300 and includes round-trip air fare, hotel accommodations throughout the stay, motor coach travel, an overnight train ride, fees for some museums and two meals a day.

"Hotel accommodations were excellent," LeMieux said. "We had no problems at all. The kids and I even took a night train from Rome to Paris and we slept in a couchette."

The students seemed to like the idea that they were traveling with someone they knew and respected.

"There were some trying times," said sophomore Jim Mello, "like the time that I had to room with Mr. LeMieux."

Mello smiled and said traveling with one's principal isn't as problematic as one might think.

Other students agreed, saying that having LeMieux along was like having a father figure. Some of the students ended up calling him Dad by the time the trip was over.

"You go over there like an empty sponge and absorb everything," Nancy Gillespie said. "The only objection I had on the whole trip was that sometimes the meals weren't authentic. There was one time in Germany where we had pizza."

The students agreed that the experience has helped them in classes this year, and one student said she did very well on a report she had to do on the coliseum in Rome, a place she had visited on the trip.

They also had suggestions to students who will travel to Europe. They said: Carry as little luggage as necessary, try to prepare by learning about where you will visit, learn some of the language, keep a daily journal and bring a camera.

This year's trip will leave Detroit on June 22 and students will return July 11. For more information, call LeMieux at school at 343-2152 or at home at 977-5924.

As most players know, the Michigan Lottery was established to help with the cost of educating our children. But, a great deal of confusion still exists about how this works, especially when local school districts must seek millage approvals to keep their schools operating.

In the typical Michigan school district, local property taxes are still the major source of income required to finance operation of schools—accounting for approximately two-thirds of that local school district's revenue. State aid in the typical school district amounts to about 29% of the revenues a district receives.

Q: Where does the Lottery money go?

A: Michigan Lottery revenues were originally channeled through the state's General Fund, but action by the Michigan Legislature changed that in May of 1981. Since then, all Lottery net revenues have been specifically earmarked for the State School Aid Fund.

Q: What is the State School Aid Fund?

A: It is a fund to help support elementary and secondary public education in Michigan.

Q: Does the Lottery provide all the money in this fund?

A: No. Lottery revenue accounts for approximately 22 percent of the money in the fund. Other sources include state sales tax receipts, liquor and cigarette taxes, and other miscellaneous tax revenues. (Lottery revenue is not used to support colleges and universities.)

Q: How much money does the Lottery provide for the School Aid Fund?

A: In each of the past two fiscal years, the Lottery's contribution topped $400 million. This is the equivalent of about $130 per Michigan household each year that would have been required to provide the same level of support to schools without Lottery funding. So, if not for Lottery revenue, that money would have to come from some other source—possibly direct taxes or funding to education would be cut.

Q: How are the Lottery funds disbursed?

A: Along with other money in the State School Aid Fund, Lottery revenues are disbursed to individual school districts by the Michigan Department of Education according to the School Aid Formula developed by the Legislature.

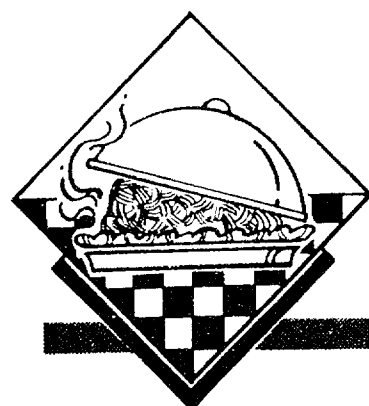

Q: How would I obtain information on the specifics of funding for my school district?

A: You can either contact your local school board office or write to the Michigan State Board of Education, 608 W. Allegan, P.O. Box 30008, Lansing, MI 48909.

For submitting a question which led to this column, Valeria Wosniowski of Marmaduke will receive 50 free tickets for the Lottery's new instant game, "Winner Wonderland."

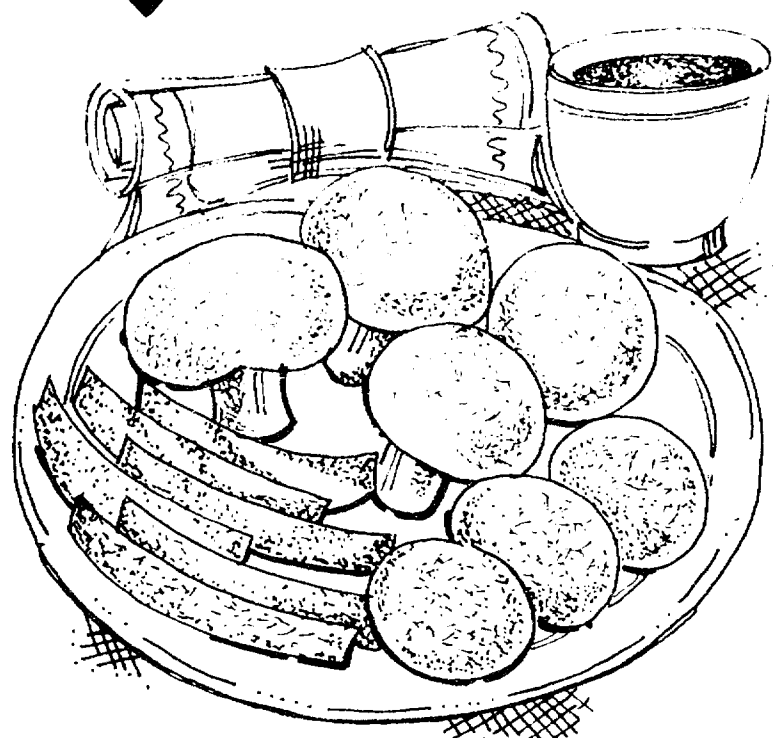

If you have a question not yet covered in these monthly columns, send it to "Winners Circle," Michigan Lottery, P.O. Box 38077, Lansing, MI 48909.

Raspa wins folklore award

Richard Raspa of Grosse Pointe Woods, professor of communication in the Wayne State University College of Lifelong Learning, was awarded the Botkin Folklore Prize at the American Folklore Society Annual Meeting in Albuquerque, N.M., recently.

The Botkin Prize is an international award given to authors of a first book about American folklore. Raspa was recognized for the book which he co-authored, "Italian Folktales in America: The Verbal Art of an Immigrant Woman," published by the Wayne State University Press.

Raspa's book relates to the stories of Clementina Slongo Todesco, an Italian immigrant who came to the United States in 1930 and lived in New York, Detroit and Phoenix.

Raspa last year received the President's Award for Excellence in Teaching at Wayne State. He also won a Fulbright lectureship to teach at the University of Sassari in Italy in 1974-75 and an Ellsworth Visiting Fellowship to the University of Hartford.

A member of the WSU faculty since 1968, Raspa is currently writing a book on corporate culture. The Botkin Folklore Prize carries a cash award of $250.

Thanksgiving travel heavy despite fewer incentives

Despite fewer domestic flight discounts and higher gasoline prices, Thanksgiving holiday travel should be as heavy as last year, reports AAA Michigan.

Many travelers will use the four-day weekend to head for warmer weather, AAA reports. Advance airline ticket sales to popular spots like the Caribbean and Florida are heavy even though fares are slightly higher than a year ago.

People willing to travel on Thanksgiving Day and who can be flexible about a return date will still find plenty of seats to most destinations, however. The heaviest travel period for returning flights is Nov. 29.

Travelers should arrange their schedules to avoid unnecessary delays, including arriving at the airport at least an hour before flight time. To avoid parking problems, they should have someone drive them to and from the airport, or take public transportation.

Travelers may also opt to take a bus or train. Greyhound Lines, which had its busiest summer season in five years, expects a heavy volume during Thanksgiving. Amtrak anticipates more riders than normal and plans to add cars to currently scheduled trains.

Major local holiday events include Detroit's 61st annual Thanksgiving parade, which is expected to attract 650,000 people this year. The parade route will begin at Woodward and Elizabeth and include part of Jefferson to showcase the city's riverfront development. The parade starts at 9:30 a.m.

The Detroit Lions Thanksgiving Day game against the Kansas City Chiefs may draw up to 60,000 fans to the Silverdome. Kickoff is at 12:30 p.m. To avoid delays on I-75, motorists may park for $3 in the Phoenix Center garage on Wide Track Drive and take the free shuttle to the Silverdome.

AAA's survey shows that nearly half of the gas stations along main state travel routes will be open during daylight hours on Thanksgiving Day.

Professor works toward Finnish exchange program

By Pat Paholsky
News Editor

It's not likely that a reader will find the "Handbook of Clinical Methods in Communication Disorders" on any best-seller list, but this scholarly-sounding tome was the springboard for a proposed international exchange of teachers and students between this country and Finland. And author William Leith is committed to seeing it happen before he retires from teaching next year at Wayne State University, where he is a professor of communication disorders and sciences.

It began last year when Leith received a letter from Dr. Eila Alahuhta, a professor of logopedics at the University of Oulu in Finland. She asked for permission to translate part of his book for her students and also to come here and study with him for a few days.

Alahuhta and her husband arrived in late September and spent five days, sitting in on Leith's therapy classes. She also gave a series of lectures at Wayne.

In her talks with college administrators, Alahuhta asked if Leith could help plan their fledgling speech program at the University of Oulu as well as assist in planning a new speech and hearing clinic.

With the support of Wayne State administrators, Leith and his wife flew to Finland in April. And thus began what the two universities hope will be the beginning of a continuing exchange of teachers and students.

"Wayne State is extremely interested in formal and informal relationships with other universities and I have tremendous backing to see this thing through," Leith said.

While he was there, he delivered three formal lectures of two hours each which were videotaped. One was on stuttering, another on voice disorders and the third on the general management of clients in speech pathology.

Leith, who has written three books on communication disorders and is completing his fourth and final professional book on the subject, has an international reputation. He has had inquiries from people in South Africa, Egypt, India, Israel, Kuwait, Russia, Japan, Thailand, Pakistan, the Bahamas, England, Ireland and Scotland. He has some stories, too.

William Leith enjoys a cup of coffee, spiked with a hickory liqueur.

A Kuwaiti once called and asked Leith if he could help his 21-year-old daughter, who was a severe stutterer. The father flew his daughter and about a dozen members of the family and put them all up at the Renaissance Center for two weeks while Leith worked with the young woman.

There is no cure for stuttering, but through behavioral therapy, Leith says it can be controlled. He was successful with the young Arab woman, but once she returned to her country, she regressed. Stuttering is totally mental, Leith said.

In another experience, a priest ministering in Thailand, originally from Detroit, asked Leith for help, because a number of his parishioners were stutterers. "So I trained him and sent some material and books back with him. I heard from him once and one person was doing much better."

His brief Finnish experience had an impact. The University of Oulu, a state-owned facility, is relatively young — established in 1959.

"I was absolutely stunned. They have a monstrous program, bigger than the program at Wayne State."

The first three students in speech therapy graduated this April and next year, there will be 20 graduates. The speech department is extremely selective, Leith said.

"They get 400 applications a year and they select 40 who are finalists. After two weeks of interviews and tests, they accept 20."

As a result, Leith said, the students in the program are "unbelievably bright, bright kids and it's so funny, because they are typical college students. I felt like I was back at Wayne State."

There are no speech therapy programs in Finnish elementary schools as there are here, Leith said, because Finland has socialized medicine. All the therapy is done in health centers. "They're just beginning to think about therapy in the schools."

Setting up an exchange program entails a lot of work plus agreements between the two countries. To date, Leith said Wayne State professors have taped two two-hour lectures for their Finnish counterparts, one on cleft palates and the other on language disorders.

When he leaves teaching, Leith will continue to write. He has three books in the planning stages — one he calls the leftover and junk food cookbook, another will be a novel about a family and the third is a self-help book on speech.

He is also taking singing lessons, something he always wanted to do. He sang his first solo recently at Grosse Pointe Memorial, where he is a member of the choir. "I'm even getting out my flute again," he says with a laugh.

He adds that he is not retiring, only changing professions.

Mahaffey to discuss proposed municipal handgun freeze

Tighter restrictions on the ability of individuals to buy and carry handguns would dramatically decrease homicides, Detroit Councilwoman Maryann Mahaffey contends. In her efforts to make Detroit safer, Mahaffey proposes a municipal ordinance that would freeze future sales of handguns to private citizens.

She will present her views Sunday, Nov. 22, in a Middle Hour program at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church. Mahaffey is the third in a series of Sunday morning speakers addressing issues of conflict and its resolution in our society. The series, "Peacemaking: Mission Possible," is sponsored by the church's Peacemaking Committee.

Ideally, said a Mahaffey spokeswoman, gun control would mean the banning of firearms, as was done in Morton Grove, a suburb of Chicago. The city itself has the "freeze" situation Mahaffey proposes for Detroit, in future sales of handguns that would be prohibited by a strictly enforced ordinance, the spokeswoman said.

"There currently are no laws in Michigan that put restriction on certain classes of guns," she said.

Although the ordinance issue has been brought up for discussion by the city council, it has never reached the stage of being voted on, she said. The public perceives itself as being completely vulnerable to criminals if legal gun possession is banned, she said.

"What we have now are law-abiding citizens killing one another," Mahaffey's spokeswoman said. "Under the talked-about ordinance, provisions might include four hours of mandatory use and safety training for all handgun owners and periodic re-registration of those firearms, perhaps every three years."

She said unregistered guns are reported to be easily available from street dealers for as little as $10-$15.

Mahaffey, elected to the Detroit City Council in 1974, is now serving her third term. The Iowa native is also a full professor in the School of Social Work at Wayne State University. Her professional background includes work for the Girl Scouts, at Detroit's Merrill-Palmer Institute, as a community center program director, as a consultant in malnutrition and hunger and coordinating a social work curriculum. She earned a bachelor's degree from Cornell College in Iowa, followed by a master's in social work from the University of Southern California.

Mahaffey's talk begins at 11 a.m. in Barbour Chapel. The program is open to the public, with parking available behind and to the east of the church building at 16 Lakeshore Rd. in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Santa Claus is coming to town!

The 11th annual Santa Claus Parade, sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Village Association, will be held Friday, Nov. 27, beginning at 10:30 a.m. at Fisher and Grosse Pointe Boulevard and continuing throughout the Village shopping district before ending at Kensington Road in the Park.

Santa and his friends will start the parade, funded in part by the proceeds of the Memorial Day garage sale organized by the association.

After Santa's float has completed the entire parade route, he will return to Jacobson's where he will accept the key to the city and take up residence during the holiday season. Ruth Ellen Mayhall from the Grosse Pointe Theatre will be the mistress of ceremonies on the podium outside Jacobson's.

This year's parade will feature a Disney character theme. Snow White, portrayed by Deborah DeFauw from the Grosse Pointe Children's Theater, will act as this year's grand marshal. Dumbo, Winnie-the-Pooh and the crocodile were the winning homecoming floats for the seniors at South and North high schools. Captain Hook and Dumbo were also part of the homecoming parade at North.

Kercheval Avenue will be closed between Fisher and Cadieux during the parade. The alternate bus route will be from Kensington Road down Maumee (south of Kercheval) to Fisher Road. Check with SEMTA Bus Lines (962-5515) for additional information concerning the alternate bus routes.

"It has been difficult organizing this year's parade," said Jane Nutter, parade director. "Two of the bands which had been with us in past years were asked to participate in the downtown parade and were unable to be with us. We did secure three marching bands, and the Grosse Pointe North Choir, which has been asked to perform in New York this April, will be part of this year's parade." The choir is under the direction of Benjamin Walker.

Almost 500 Girl Scouts,

Brownies, Cub Scouts, Indian Guides and Princesses will join the parade in uniform or theme costumes. These community groups are the true highlight of the parade, Nutter said.

The Grosse Pointe Theater will again join the parade with its big green people-powered "bug," the Disney Heads, toy soldiers and Surprise Box. The members of the theater help make up many of the clowns, young and old, just prior to the parade. The group is also responsible for the blowing up of more than 1,000 balloons that are given away during the parade.

This year's music will include many old favorites. The costumes and music of the Celtic Pipe and Drum Corps be featured as well as marching bands from Harrison and South Lake high schools. The 1st Michigan Colonial Fife and Drum Corps always adds an appropriate historical touch. One new group will be joining this year's lineup, the Lakeland High School Marching Band from Milford. It has more than 100 members.

Have brunch with Santa at War Memorial

The War Memorial's annual Brunch with Santa is Saturday, Dec. 5. There is a limited number of tickets for the second Brunch with Santa, Sunday, Dec. 13.

Brunch begins at 11:30 a.m.

and will feature macaroni and cheese, fruit, donut holes, jello and milk (coffee will be available for adults). After brunch, children can safely watch Santa's arrival by helicopter on the War Memorial lawn.

Santa will visit with each child, distribute gifts and lead the caroling. The Grosse Pointe Children's Theatre will conclude the festivities with a musical treat.

Make reservations early to avoid disappointment. Tickets are $7.50 per person. Please indicate name, age and sex of each child when making reservations. If you are a part of a group, please indicate with whom you wish to be seated when purchasing tickets.

Children may be accompanied by an adult. Bring booster seats if necessary. For further information, call the War Memorial, at 881-7511.

Local tobacconist to sponsor pipe expo in Mount Clemens

More than 10,000 pipes, many of them meerschaum, will be on display during Hill & Hill Tobacconists Pipe Expo '87 at the Mount Clemens Holiday Inn Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 21 and 22.

"This will be a special show — entertainment for pipe collectors and those just learning about this hobby, their families and those who love art in wood and sculpture," said James Simon, president of Hill & Hill. Simon, a Grosse Pointe Shores resident, has a Hill & Hill store in the Woods and three other stores in the metropolitan Detroit area.

This year's expo will feature Elliott Nachwatter and Carol Burn's collections of pipes. Nachwatter, who owns Pipeworks in New York City and who works out of a studio in Shaftsbury, Vt., learned the art from a pipe maker in Copenhagen, Denmark. He has been designing and producing pipes since 1972. Many of the pipes are crafted from briarwood aged at least 150 years.

The 13th annual Hill & Hill Pipe Smoking contest will also be part of the weekend event. A popular contest with pipe smokers from the Detroit area, it begins at 6:30 p.m., Nov. 21. Contestants can register at 6 p.m. at the event.

The secret to his success is enjoying what he does

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Fifteen years ago this Greek immigrant could have been found covered with paint and plaster as he struggled to make a living in a city he found he loved. Now he and his partner are on top of the city, constructing new restaurants and retail and office developments with price tags in the millions.

"There are 40,000 people working within walking distance of here," Ted Gatzaros said with a sweep of his hand around his new Pegasus in the Fisher restaurant. The art deco design gleams with polished marble and brass and the ornamental plaster and oak make for dramatic highlights.

He says the New Center area around one of Detroit's most famous landmarks, the Fisher Building, is underutilized as far as restaurants go.

"Wayne State University, University of Michigan, Henry Ford Hospital and General Motors all have employees within walking distance of here. This area could easily handle another four or five major restaurants."

And the customers line up to get in. Within minutes of the noon hour, the restaurant is nearly filled to capacity. Customers line up as others are seated and huge baskets of Greek bread are brought to the tables.

Gatzaros lives in Grosse Pointe Park with his wife Maria and two children, Nico, 18, and Ellena, 10. The house belonged to the son of John Ford, a steel and chemical manufacturer, who sold it to Gatzaros for $700,000. A million dollars later and some several hundred thousand cubic yards of dirt later, the 10-acre estate and house are nearly completely renovated.

Gatzaros came to America from the Greek city of Ioannina. He said he didn't leave to escape poverty. His father was an army officer and his mother was a teacher. He started at Wayne State University in the early 1960s in the mechanical engineering department.

"Some people are American by accident. I am American by choice," he said.

Gatzaros had several jobs as he put himself through school, including washing dishes at Gus' Coney Island in Detroit. He took Jim Pappas as a partner in 1971, and together they had a construction company with the principal occupation of remodeling downtown office buildings.

That definitely came in handy, as the two today are still partners, renovating downtown offices — their own.

Gatzaros prides himself on knowing the name of nearly every one of his 400 employees. He slipped a bit at Pegasus in the Fisher, when a newly hired waiter arrived at his table. The waiter offered Gatzaros a menu, which he declined.

"I'll go back and look in the kitchen," he told the waiter who was casting a rather quizzical glance at the youthful-looking Gatzaros.

The waiter hedged, and professed the menu again.

"I am the owner here," Gatzaros told the now wide-eyed waiter. "You know, Maria's husband."

Gatzaros laughed later at the exchange, and said he would know the waiter's name next time. His wife Maria plays a big role in the operations of his business. She helped oversee the opening of Pegasus in the Fisher, he said.

She'll help oversee the opening of several more developments Gatzaros and Pappas will have completed soon. The $12 million International Market-place, a retail and office complex, located just west of Trapper's Alley and Gatzaros' favorite restaurant in the city, Pegasus, will likely be completed this spring.

Gatzaros and Pappas were recently notified that their plan to renovate a 180,000-square-foot commercial building in Grosse Pointe into a 176-room hotel complex tied in with the city's newly completed People Mover System will be a recipient of a $4.8 million Urban Development Action Grant from the federal government. The money will partially finance the $21 million project.

Gatzaros is busy man. Calls come in during his lunch at the rate of several every hour, and those are only the important ones. He slips pieces of paper in his pocket and waxes philosophical.

"Everyone has to talk to you right now," he said. "They want you to put everything you are doing down and come right now." He doesn't leave the table.

The man knows almost everyone, and those he doesn't know, he is curious to find out more about. He said he has a good relationship with First Federal Savings Bank and Trust, and that the bank does more commercial deals in Detroit than any of the other banks in the city combined.

He is interested in Grosse Pointe as well. He said he felt the Park's voting district of the proposed Ruffner Project on Jefferson was something the city should not have let slip through its hands.

Knowing first-hand about renovating a historic mansion, Gatzaros said that historic preservation in the Grosse Pointes is not being handled well at all.

"If nothing else, local government should grant a freeze on property taxes for these mansions," he said. "I hated to see the Seabourn Livingstone estate go. These are all cement and brick structures. Nothing is going to happen to cement and brick. You can't tell me that they are beyond salvage. To me, this is our history, our heritage. There is no reason to destroy that. There will always be a person willing to maintain that."

Gatzaros speaks about Detroit as if it were his homeland or at the very least, a place where he was raised as a child and had fond memories of. Why? "When I was in Greece, I knew I wanted to come to America," he said. "I did not come to escape poverty. In my view there is no better system under the sun. No better government or political system. You don't appreciate what you have here, until you see something else."

He sees the Young administration and the feeling in the city as being pro-development. He said Mayor Coleman Young has created a "for-profit" environment in Detroit.

"To start with in Detroit, we have more stability than any other metropolitan area, and economic stability from the major corporations here," he said. "The city has had the same mayor for 16 years."

But what about Detroit problems: unemployment, crime and deteriorating neighborhoods? "You show me a household that is without problems," he said. "Sure Detroit has its problems, but they are solveable. Detroit is one of the very few communities where racial tension does not exist for a major metropolitan area. City government is for development, for additional business. If you are willing to work, to put yourself on the line, you cannot fail in Detroit."

And that attitude is what Gatzaros says has made him the success he is today. Being positive and looking for the positive, instead of dwelling on the negative and what's wrong with something is the philosophy he lives by.

"I love this. Here's to the holidays," he said raising a glass of Molson beer, "all 365 of them. If you look for or dwell on the negative, you are going to find it. The whole thing is a mental attitude. That's my philosophy, even a broken clock is right twice a day...Enthusiasm is the most infectious disease on earth."

Though he doesn't like to dwell on the negative, he does check in on his employees, perhaps several times a week — unannounced.

"I am a human engineer," he said. "And with that you have to have hands-on technology. You have to be a hands-on owner at large. They don't know if I am going to be here or not, or if my partner is going to come. If they know the owner might be here, well, it's a motivation."

Gatzaros spends his free time, what little he has, fishing on Lake St. Clair. He said fishing is his favorite pastime and he takes Ellena out on his 32-foot cruiser "Pegasus." He loves to catch fish, but he can't eat them, because he has an allergy to sea food.

His average day lasts from about 6 a.m. to 6 p.m.

"Then I usually come back downtown at 9 or 10 p.m. and spend a little time at either restaurant perhaps to 12 or 1 in the morning."

There are time constraints. He takes some time to go to Harsens Island or go fishing on the river on a morning, but for the most part his life is filled with meetings, decisions and being at his work that he loves.

"You have to love what you're doing," he said walking down the main hall of the Fisher Building. "Look at what is around you. How can you not love this? You have to come to work, and look forward to what you are going to do. Every day." He stops to talk to a friend in the restaurant and laughs and jokes with the man in Greek.

"This is my friend, Dr. Bill Pozlos," he smiled. "In another life I want to be a doctor so I can have Wednesdays off, too."

IRS explains new IRA rules

The Internal Revenue Service has issued a new publication to inform taxpayers about changes in the tax law for Individual Retirement Arrangements (IRAs).

Publication 923, "New Rules for Individual Retirement Arrangements (IRAs)," explains the new rules that may reduce or eliminate IRA deductions for some taxpayers who are covered by a retirement plan at work. Whether and to what extent the deduction is reduced depends on the taxpayer's adjusted gross income (AGI).

The new publication contains an easy-to-follow chart for individuals who are in retirement plans to work to see if their deductions may be phased out. It also has a worksheet that allows taxpayers to figure their partial IRA deduction if they are affected by the phase-out.

Publication 923 is available free by calling IRS at 1-800-424-3676.

IRS seeks volunteers

If you enjoy helping people and working with them to make a difficult task easier, VITA may be for you. VITA is the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program sponsored by the Internal Revenue Service. IRS is now accepting volunteers for training courses to help taxpayers with their tax returns.

VITA assists lower income, elderly, handicapped and non-English speaking individuals who have problems preparing their own returns. Assistance is provided at community locations such as community centers, libraries and churches.

VITA volunteers include college students, members of professional business organizations, retirement, religious, military and civic groups. Volunteers learn to prepare simple tax returns by successfully completing a special training course in basic income tax return preparation.

Instructors and training materials are provided free by the IRS. Training is conducted in December through January at convenient locations. IRS says for the next several weeks they will be signing up volunteers and making arrangements for organizations to sponsor VITA programs.

Last year 1,000 Michigan volunteers helped prepare more than 22,000 tax returns through the VITA program.

You can sign up as a volunteer or arrange a VITA program for your organization by calling the IRS toll-free number, 1-800-424-1040. Ask for the Taxpayer Education Coordinator, ext. 3674.

Help for Michigan's small businesses owners

Where do you go if you are a small business with a problem, tossed about by economic storms and in need of practical help and advice to stay afloat?

In Michigan, many businesses head for the closest branch of the Michigan Small Business Development Center, said Norman J. Schlafmann, state director of the SBDC program.

The center is a network of 36 counseling and service centers with state headquarters at Wayne State University. Formed in 1983 at Wayne State as a partnership of federal, state, academic, private and local organizations, the center now serves the small business community in many ways. It helps cut through the bureaucratic red tape that entangles many beginning businesses. It gives tips on management, marketing and production to existing businesses.

Its primary role is to provide technical and management assistance for Michigan's present and future small business owners. Professional small business counselors provide counseling, training and a broad range of specialized services throughout the 36 regional centers.

Since the start of the center five years ago, the program is credited with nearly 600 new business start-ups, more than 2,000 jobs created and about 3,500 jobs retained in Michigan. These figures proliferate rapidly as the center becomes more widely known and steadily expands its services statewide.

Approximately 8,000 small business clients profited from 35,000 hours of one-to-one counseling while 41,000 participated in 1,500 SBDC training programs. Schlafmann stressed the approach taken of making local organizations equal partners and shaping all SBDC services to reflect local needs and interests.

A fundamental premise in the program is that every person should have an equal opportunity to succeed as a business owner. The center conducts many programs aimed at overcoming obstacles and strengthening opportunities for women, minorities, veterans, handicapped persons and special interest groups to share the experience, adventure and responsibility of business ownership.

Persons who are interested in learning more about the MISBDC program may contact Schlafmann at 577-4848. Those wishing to obtain the services of the Wayne State University sub-center should contact Raymond Genick at 577-4850.

Career seminar for women

Jacobson's and the Metro East Chamber of Commerce, which serves the business communities of St. Clair Shores, Roseville, Harper Woods, Fraser and the Grosse Pointes, will host a career seminar for women Tuesday, Nov. 24, 7 p.m., at Jacobson's Store for the Home, 17141 Kercheval Ave., Grosse Pointe. Tickets are $7 per person.

The evening, hosted by Jacobson's, is a benefit for the Partnerships for Education program between the Metro East Chamber of Commerce, the three school districts of St. Clair Shores, the Fraser Public Schools and the Grosse Pointe Academy. The program, sponsored by the Michigan Department of Education, partners a specific member business of the chamber of commerce with their partner school, or in some cases the entire district. The partnership allows students to learn of the opportunities available to them in the business community and to receive in-service education and training from the business, as well as the business actually going into the school.

The evening will be a cocktail party, where the career women will be shown the latest trends in fashion and how to accessorize. There will be door prizes.

Reservations are necessary and may be made by calling the chamber of commerce office at 777-2741.

Fontbonne Auxiliary turns 40 helping Ob/Gyn look to the future

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
Feature Editor

It is fitting somehow that the 34th annual White Christmas Ball celebrating the 40th anniversary of St. John Hospital's Fontbonne Auxiliary will benefit the hospital's Obstetrics/Gynecology department.

The late Murray Klimchuk, M.D., practiced obstetrics at St. John for nearly a quarter of a century; his wife Pattie Klimchuk is this year's Fontbonne president. And one of Klimchuk's closest associates at the hospital for many years, Minu Kashef, M.D., is now chairman of St. John's Ob/Gyn department.

Dr. Kashef stares out a fifth floor window at St. John Hospital, envisioning the concentrated, centralized perinatal center he hopes the hospital will one day complete. "It would put everything under one roof — education, social work, medical services like genetic testing and ultrasound, and total patient care — in one central area," Kashef says. "I think that this is realistic, the demand is certainly there from the consumer. But we need manpower and funding first... and it has already taken many years to get where we are now."

The current fifth floor Perinatal Center has already undergone a complete transformation from the maternity ward Kashef found upon his arrival at St. John 13 years ago. The hospital's new labor, delivery and birthing rooms are housed on the fifth floor of the new Concentrated Care Building. Kashef leads a tour of the newly renovated fifth floor of the old building, which contain the postpartum and antepartum rooms, isolation rooms, rooms for women with high-risk pregnancies, and a number of newly-decorated private rooms. He smiles at the sound of construction coming from the floor above; a new gynecology unit is currently being built on the sixth floor.

St. John Hospital's Perinatal Center is one of the leading perinatal centers in the state, according to Kashef. As a referral center, it serves 12 hospitals from Port Huron south to Detroit. It features one of the few two-way maternal transport systems in the state. It averages 3,500 deliveries per year; there are some 2,500 gynecological surgeries per year. And the percentage of high risk obstetrics patients sent to St. John increases annually, Kashef says.

"The consumer is getting more and more intelligent. More and more, we see patients who care less about what color wallpaper is in the labor room and more about the technology they are receiving. I think that is why they come to St. John. We're seeing more and more professional people who know that we have the technology, the ultrasound equipment, fetal monitors, PH monitors. We have established the idea in the community that the best of perinatal care is available here."

Consumer awareness can be a double-edged sword, however. Detroit and Wayne County has one of the highest incidents of malpractice lawsuits in the nation. The ever-increasing cost of malpractice insurance is driving more and more physicians are getting out of the baby business, Kashef says. "It is difficult to attract and keep the best and brightest. The consumer — the patient — expects a perfect result in every pregnancy. We know that is not possible. There is not a perfect outcome every time and it is not realistic to expect that there would be.

"I am not speaking out against malpractice lawsuits where they are warranted," Kashef says. "But I think that very often, people fail to look at the positive things we have done in Ob/Gyn. We can do things now that we could never do before because of technology."

Since Kashef graduated from Temple University's medical school in 1967, Ob/Gyn has seen the advent of ultrasound, a major tool in early detection of fetal abnormalities; and the improvement of technology in amniocentesis, fetal surgery, laser surgery, genetics and fertility research.

"I love my job here. It is a challenge, to be sure, but it is a tremendous feeling to have been involved all along in the changes, not only here at the hospital but in the developments in the discipline, as well," Kashef says.

As department chairman, Kashef's duties encompass three major areas: administration, teaching and patient care. He is equally fond of all three tasks. And as he takes visitors on a tour of the hospital, stopping here and there to call out a greeting to nurses, physicians and patients, then dropping in to visit a high-risk OB patient on a long-term admittance, it is apparent that his is one of St. John's best known faces.

"I love to take care of patients. It is a very gratifying feeling. And this is a very happy field. As an Ob/Gyn practitioner, I can do a lot with a patient. We can stay with that person for a long time. We deliver their babies and we remain with them through the other stages of their reproductive lives.

"The relationships one develops with patients in this business are very rewarding, and that's what I tell our young residents," Kashef says.

As a teacher, Kashef guides St. John's four-year residency program in Ob/Gyn, one of the few remaining programs in the country. Two new residents are admitted to the program each year; there is a maximum of eight residents allowed in what is a very demanding residency. "We have a number of physicians who finished their residency, then remained in the department. That is a very gratifying thing, to see them come in so young and remain in the service. But we lose a lot of them, too, to warmer climates," Kashef says with a chuckle.

Replenishing manpower by attracting physicians and nurses is part of the administrative aspect of Kashef's job. "Admittedly, administration was not my first goal. In today's environment we must deal with the scrutiny of the federal government, the joint commission, lawyers. But I do like problem-solving. And I think that this profession, overall, is great. I would do it all over again."

Kashef's father was a lawyer. He credits his father with motivating him to become a physician. "He told me that it was a field in which I could help many people and in turn, would receive great satisfaction as well as respect. He was right."

The satisfaction is great, Kashef says, despite the ever-changing field and the constant need to look toward the future.

That is why he has become very involved in assisting the Fontbonne Auxiliary with its fundraising project this year; Kashef's help will enable the auxiliary to help him and his department.

"St. John Hospital is known as a suburban hospital which dispenses top quality care for both high risk and low risk OB patients. I think that our technological capabilities are also widely known and that's why the work of our auxiliary is so important. The auxiliary's help is essential in order for us to continue to make these services available and to begin to offer them to a greater portion of people," Kashef says.

"But I think that we must not lose sight of the TLC aspect of this discipline. For obstetrics patients, this is a rare time in life. We want it to be a good, happy time."

Proceeds from the Fontbonne Auxiliary's 34th annual White Christmas Ball will benefit Kashef's Ob/Gyn department. The ball, with the theme "Celebrating 40 Years: Fontbonne 1947-1987" will be held Saturday, Dec. 12, at the Country Club of Detroit. Cocktails are at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 8 p.m. Entertainment will be by the Parker Wolkins Big Band. Tickets are $150 per person, $300 per couple. For more information, call 343-3675.

Get dressed up for the parade

If you've ever thought about what it would be like to dress up like a turkey or look like Porky Pig or any one of 1,000 other costumed characters, there's no time like the present, says Michigan Thanksgiving Parade Foundation member Sue Vittoe of Grosse Pointe.

The costumes which are worn in the Michigan Thanksgiving Day Parade each year are available throughout the year as rentals for costume parties... or just to rent for fun. You can call the Michigan Thanksgiving Parade Foundation for further information on costume rental, although the folks there may be busy with next week's parade, which, by the way, will follow a new route.

According to Michigan Thanksgiving Parade Foundation director Carlene Bonner, the parade will form at Woodward Avenue and Elizabeth, proceed down Woodward to Jefferson, turn left on Jefferson and end up at St. Aubin.

Now showing: Grosse Pointe Artist Beverly Ann Zimmermann is currently exhibiting her work in the 54th annual International Exhibition of The Miniature Painters, Sculptors and Gravers Society of Washington, D.C., at the Arts Club of Washington. The juried show continues through the month of November.

Margaret Grinvalsky, Dr. Henry Grinvalsky, Emily Boley, The Rev. Robert Boley, Mary Anne Ghesquiere, Matthew Kubitsky and Janet Toenjes were among local residents present at the Whittier Towers' inaugural celebration of its newly decorated Crystal Ballroom Oct. 29.

Homes for the holidays

The very popular 28th annual Detroit Symphony League Christmas Walk is set for Detroit's Palmer Woods on Sunday, Dec. 6 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Monday, Dec. 7 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Cost is $8 at the door, $7 in advance and $6 for groups of 10 or more. Tickets are available at Village Records and Tapes in Grosse Pointe or by calling chairman Ann Lawson of Grosse Pointe at 885-4078.

The walk will feature seven beautiful homes decorated for the holidays. The Palmer Woods area contains many of the finest examples of residential architecture in Michigan, including the work of Albert Kahn, Richard Marr, Frank Lloyd Wright and Minoru Yamasaki.

Committee members for the event, which benefits the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, include Trudy Rhoades of Grosse Pointe and Lynda Webster of Grosse Pointe Farms.

New look to an old favorite

The Crystal Ballroom at the Whittier Towers holds many fond memories of the wedding receptions, elegant parties and other formal occasions enjoyed by Grosse Pointers over the years. And now, the ballroom at the Whittier Towers Retirement Residence has been refurbished and redecorated and is ready to begin providing a whole new generation with happy memories, staff members say.

The original parquet floor and six imported chandeliers remain from the old ballroom, as guests who attended the inaugural celebration on Oct. 29 discovered. Among those who enjoyed a tour of the residence, music by the "Christa Grix Trio," and a lavish array of hors d'oeuvres prepared and served by the Whittier's food service staff, was former Grosse Pointe Farms councilperson Mary Anne Ghesquiere.

Whittier Towers, formerly owned by the Michigan Baptist Homes, Inc., is now part of Vanguard homes of Michigan, Inc., a subsidiary of Vanguard Ventures, Inc., of New York.

Toyland, toyland!

If you're looking for a perfect way to kick off the holiday season and get your shopping started, too, look no further than the Detroit Artists Market. The Detroit Artists Market will open its doors on Friday, Nov. 20, with a Holiday Toyland, a nostalgic look back to the wonderland holidays of childhood... complete with glitter, lights and gifts for holiday giving.

The exhibition, sponsored by a grant from Hudson's and designed by Robert Lebow, will include original, handmade craft items such as jewelry, hard and soft toys, one-of-a-kind clothing items, glass, pottery and small sculpture. The Detroit Artists Market is located at 1452 Randolph in downtown Detroit's Harmonie Park.

Grosse Pointe native Jolynn Schneider found herself on a court of a different kind last month. Schneider, a senior at the University of Iowa who is a top reserve on the highly-ranked Iowa women's basketball team, finished as one of four runners-up for the Iowa Homecoming Queen award presented at homecoming festivities in October.

Schneider, the daughter of Joseph and Marilyn Schneider of Grosse Pointe Shores, is a member of Iowa's Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, serves as lecturer and Eucharistic minister at the stu-

"I am very excited to have had the opportunity to represent the university, the basketball team and my sorority during the homecoming festivities," Schneider said of her honors.

First Lady Award:

One hundred-fifty Michigan women were honored with the Michigan First Lady Award given by Paula Blanchard on Nov. 9 in Lansing. Among those very special 150 women was Grosse Pointe Farms resident Hedy Trampusch, who may be seen on WDIV-TV when it begins to show its series on the First Lady Award winners.

Trampusch is a very busy lady, spending her time working in the Ferry School library, assisting Ferry kids with school work, being a pen pal to kids around the world and helping out with the War Memorial's Ski Hi Club. Trampusch, who also transcribes Braille, even designed the Ski Hi Club logo and overall, seems to personify one of the traits the First Lady Award outlined in its award presentation: "Giving of one's self."

A taste of L.I.F.E. — Memorial Church youth group style

The request was simple: Grosse Pointe Memorial Church members were asked to open their doors and hearts to the group of middle school students which makes up the L.I.F.E. (Living in Fellowship Evermore) group at the church.

The results were phenomenal: After three hours of collecting, the determined bunch of sixth, seventh and eighth graders had gathered nearly a ton — 1,700 pounds — of canned and packaged food to donate to Fort Street Presbyterian Church to distribute through its Open Door program.

On the last Sunday in September, L.I.F.E. members Scott McGarvey, Jennifer Kurrie, Amy Greenfield and Chris Marston and made the following speech to Memorial Church goers:

"We, the members of L.I.F.E., felt it only fair to warn you, honored members of the congregation, that there will be approximately 30 middle school students out on the streets next Sunday... what, you ask, could these teens be doing running all around the Pointes?"

"How, you ask, can we prepare for this certain impending onslaught of youth... please give us any food that you've got. We'll take Farmer Jack's, Kroger's or Great Scott. Make it Campbell's, tuna, beans or beef stew. Give us cans and maybe a box or two. Let us pick up your pasta, noodles or rice. You'll be helping the hungry and that'll be nice... that's Oct. 4, we repeat. The kids of L.I.F.E. will hit the street."

And they did, teaming up to collect food for those less fortunate. L.I.F.E. group advisor Nancy Schulte said she was pleased, but not necessarily surprised at the success of the food drive.

"We did a similar thing last year for CrossRoads. And this year, the kids pitched in, were there early and stayed late. But the really gratifying thing was that a number of them showed up for the follow-up event, the presentation to Fort Street Presbyterian and the discussion of what the Open Door program does," Schulte said.

"And to have 15-20 kids show up on a school night and with all the other events they participate in is pretty doggone good."

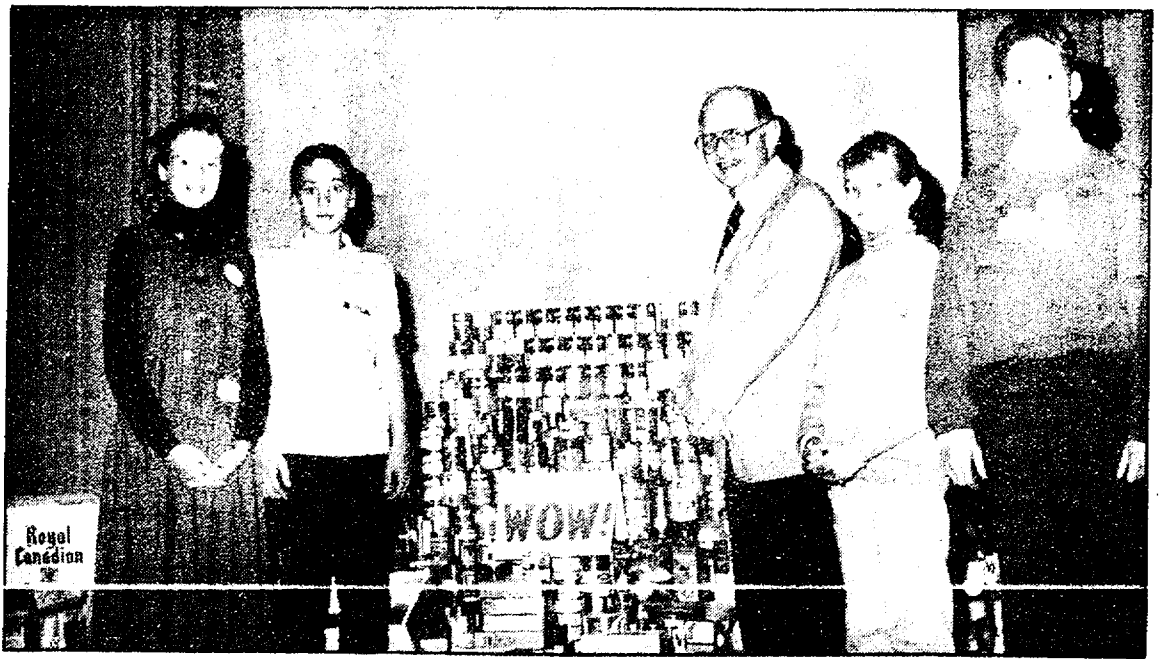

L.I.F.E. was formed at Grosse Pointe Memorial several years ago and the number of participants fluctuates, according to Schulte, who took over as advisor two years ago. She and adult assistants Hank Kuhlman, Jim and Marta Birchfield and Jean Calder work with youth group members.

The group participates in activities like last week's visit to WDIV-TV, which was followed by a stop at Lafayette Coney Island; the kids and sponsors will visit senior citizens at Presbyterian Village East next week. "We deliver baskets of blessings — food and small gifts — to local families, go caroling, have pizza get-togethers and visit haunted houses, etc. We do a lot in Detroit, because we're trying to build positive ideas about Detroit," Schulte added.

This year's group is a little larger than last year's, she added, which may be because older members of the group each sponsored the younger members, fostering a little better sense of togetherness, Schulte said.

"With the number of things kids have to choose from in this community, it is gratifying to see these kids get interested in our projects. Actually, I've been touched by their response to service projects. They seem to be interested in service as well as fellowship."

Jennifer Kurrie, Jeremy Gajewski, Chris Kurup and Brad Strowger with the 1,700 pounds of food collected by Grosse Pointe Memorial Church's L.I.F.E. group. The food was donated to Dr. Robert Criley, pastor of Fort Street Presbyterian Church, to feed Detroit's hungry and homeless.

The Open Door program which benefitted from the group's efforts last month feed 800-900 of Detroit's homeless and hungry each Friday at the church. They receive a hot, nutritious meal and are provided with shower facilities, a hair cut and clean, used clothing.

It is a world which few, if any, of Memorial's L.I.F.E. members know about. But they're learning, Schulte said.

"Those who came to the dinner after the collection had their eyes opened to a whole world they may not have realized existed. At this age, they are very impressable, very open. And this is a very positive experience for them, I think."

L.I.F.E. is open to all sixth, seventh and eighth graders in the community. For meeting details, call Schulte at the church office, 882-5330.

Christ Church choirs perform

The Choirs of Christ Church, Grosse Pointe with orchestra and soloists will perform a concert on Sunday, Nov. 22 at 7:30 p.m. at Christ Church in Grosse Pointe Farms, 61 Grosse Pointe Blvd.

The concert will feature works of Benjamin Britten's Festival Cantata: "Rejoice in the Lamb," performed by the Choirs of Men, Boys and Girls, and "The Lord Nelson Mass" by Josef Haydn, performed by the Christ Church Chorale and Orchestra, conducted by Frederic DeHaven.

The Britten work is a musical setting of words by Christopher Smart. "Rejoice in the Lamb" was written while Smart was in an asylum and is chaotic in form but contains many flashes of genius. It is among the finest passages that Benjamin Britten has chosen to set to music. The main theme of the Cantata is the worship of God by all created beings and things, each in its own way. The cat aria as well as the mouse aria are examples of Smart's genius in portraying creatures praising God by being simply what the Creator intended them to be. Soloists are Ryan Bailer, treble, Keith Geyer, countertenor, Steven Kronour, tenor, and James Gray, baritone.

Soloists for the Haydn Mass are Grosse Pointe singer Jeanne Ludwig, soprano, Alona Moon, alto, Charles Eversole, tenor, and Erhard Rom, bass.

The original orchestration of the Haydn work will be used displaying a rich accompaniment of trumpets, timpani, strings and organ.

For tickets and information, call Christ Church, Grosse Pointe at 885-4841.

For the holidays — special treats perk up party tables

What can make a more gracious, impressive welcoming than grandmother's elaborate silver punch bowl brimming with a delightfully delicious punch? And surrounding the punch bowl, dishes of sumptuous relishes, snacks and "go-withs" that make holiday dining complete.

The following recipes come from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Famous Early American Punch

Roasted Chestnuts
Toasted Party Pecans
Walnut Snacks
Apple Salad, Orange Chutney Dressing
Cranberry Date Relish

Famous Early American Punch

Among the original 30 members of the Fish House Club founded in 1732 in Philadelphia were George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, the Adamses, John Eager Howard of Maryland and other prominent early Americans. Their favorite libation was "Fish House Punch," and its recipe was not disclosed for 200 years.

2 quarts water
2 fifths dark rum
1 fifth Cognac or brandy
3 cups fresh lemon juice
1 cup superfine sugar
1/2 cup peach brandy

Combine all ingredients; mix thoroughly so all sugar is evenly dissolved. Let stand several hours to mellow, then cool in refrigerator for a few hours or overnight. Pour over block of ice in punch bowl.

Instead of floating orange slices, Elegant Eating suggests draining canned Mandarin orange segments and solidly freezing them. Then slip two or three in each stemmed glass to serve as additional ice. Makes 20-25 servings.

Roasted Chestnuts

1 1/2 pounds chestnuts in the shell

1/4 cup cooking oil

Preheat oven to 400°. With sharp knife, make an x-shaped cut on the flat side of each shell. Arrange nuts in a roasting pan. Sprinkle with oil and toss lightly. Roast uncovered, 10-15 minutes. Cool. Shell and remove inner brown skins. The nuts can be used in recipes or just to eat. Makes 4 servings.

Calories per serving, about 267. Cholesterol, 0.

Elegant Eating

Toasted Party Pecans

2 egg whites
2 Tbsp. sugar
1/4 tsp. salt
1 Tbsp. skim milk
3 cups pecan halves (3/4 pound)

Beat egg whites in large bowl of mixer until foamy. Gradually add sugar and salt and continue to beat until stiff peaks form. Stir in milk and pecans and continue to beat until stiff peaks form. Stir in milk and pecans and toss to mix well. Spread in single layer in greased 15x10x1-inch jelly roll pan. Toast in preheated 250° oven 1 hour, stirring once after 30 minutes, then twice more. Cool. Store in cool, dry place. Makes 3 cups.

Calories, about 14 per tablespoon. Cholesterol, 0.

Walnut Snacks

1 cup walnut halves

1/2 tsp. onion salt or 1/2 tsp. garlic salt

2 tsp. margarine

Spread walnut halves in shallow pan. Dot with margarine. Heat in 300° oven for about 15-

20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from oven and sprinkle with salt (to taste).

Calories... let your conscience be your guide. Cholesterol, 0.

Apple Salad with Orange Chutney Dressing

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin

1 can (6 oz.) frozen concentrated lemonade

1/4 cup sugar

2 cups apple juice

3 1/2 cups chopped unpeeled Red Delicious apples
1/2 cup minced celery
1 cup plain low-fat yogurt
Grated rind of 1 orange
1/2 cup chopped chutney
Juice of 1 orange

To make dressing, combine last four ingredients and chill thoroughly before serving.

In saucepan, mix gelatin and undiluted lemonade. Stir over low heat until gelatin dissolves. Stir in sugar and apple juice. Chill until mixture is syrupy. Fold in apple and celery. Pour into 6-cup mold. Chill until firm. To unmold, dip mold into lukewarm water and tap to loosen.

Serve on a bed of lettuce leaves with Orange Chutney Dressing.

Calories per serving about 135 for the salad; dressing is about 21 per tablespoon. Cholesterol, a trace in the dressing.

Cranberry Date Relish

1 pound fresh cranberries
1 cup sugar
1 cup snipped dates
1/2 cup sultana raisins
2 cups water
1/4 cup vinegar
1/4 tsp. ground cinnamon
1/4 tsp. ground ginger

In medium saucepan, combine cranberries, sugar, dates, raisins, water, vinegar and spices. Bring to boiling and boil rapidly, uncovered for about 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Serve chilled. Makes 4 cups.

MCF 'Angels' gala was heavenly

They came, they dined, they sang and danced. And when it was all over, the more than 170 business, civic and community leaders who attended the third annual Angels Gala at the Whitney Restaurant on Nov. 11 had raised $160,000 for the cancer research and patient programs of the Michigan Cancer Foundation.

Among those who enjoyed a dinner highlighted by tournedoe of beef tenderloin grilled with fresh foie gras, and four vintage wines, were (top) Grosse Pointe residents Frank and Stephanie Germack with Michigan Cancer Foundation president Michael Brennan, M.D.; and (below) Pointers Ron Lamparter, Marlene and John Boll and Mary Lamparter.

The Angels were founded by Paul and Helen Zuckerman two years ago. During the evening's program, Helen Zuckerman spoke about her late husband's philosophy about supporting charitable causes: "Paul always said, 'Don't give until it hurts, give until it feels good'," Zuckerman said.

In addition to the monies raised that evening — which included the cabaret-style entertainment of Buddy Greco and his quartet — contributions totalling $100,000 to a special endowment were announced. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Beznos and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Hartman will contribute $50,000 each to the Paul Zuckerman Support Foundation for Cancer Research — a $1 million endowment to help fund a new program in metastasis research.

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

A Cultural Cornucopia Appreciation of the arts begins at an early age for Grosse Pointe children. The public library, a division of the Grosse Pointe Public School System, offers, at no cost, a variety of children's reading programs at its three locations.

For adults, the library programs range from travel films to informative presentations on subjects of current interest. These, too, are free to residents of all the Grosse Pointes.

Another great source of local culture is the beautiful War Memorial Center, the former mansion of the Russell A. Alger family. With its subsequently added ballroom and theater overlooking Lake St. Clair, the center is a community attraction that rivals the many private clubs in the area. Here — open to all residents — are offered art classes and exhibits, lectures, concerts, plays, ballet and social dancing instruction, and children's theater, as well as membership in a long list of special interest clubs whose focus is either cultural, informative or just plain fun.

A more recent addition to public property is the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House. Designed by architect Albert Kahn and supported by a $15 million endowment, this gracious replica of an English manor house is now open for tours and is used for meetings, fund-raising events and several series of "house" concerts.

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

Architectural Diversity As the great variety of home sizes and styles suggests, growth has continued slowly over many years. It continues even today. Old estates are subdivided for building contemporary homes, making the mansions that still survive (and many do) all the more treasured by their owners and tradition-minded residents. At the same time, the area includes homes of just about every style and size—from townhouses, two-family units and other small homes to gracious English Tudors, colonials, executive mansions, contemporary ranch styles and a variety of modern designs, including condominiums.

This diversity has helped make Grosse Pointe attractive to all who value well-maintained quality which far exceeds its price.

The year of the Blue Devils

Shallow. Empty. Just like a pool that was drained for the winter. Scraping the bottom of a jar to get that last flavor of peanut butter. Savoring the final bite of that T-bone steak and the final fork full of lobster.

When all is said and done, the most memorable meals are the ones which are appetizing, last long and keep you dreaming of more the next time out.

For the Blue Devils of South High, their final finger sandwich of the football season was handed to them by the Brother Rice Warriors, 27-13. But, the seasoning is still on the finger tips and the napkin hasn't been removed from the shirt collar. They are still licking their chops over a very successful 9-2 season, but the one losing aroma which lingers in the kitchen, is the Region 3 title game.

This was as low as a competitive athlete can go. The dreams of playing in and winning a state championship began in little league. But the feeling South has deep inside its stomach is comparable to driving over a hill and feeling your stomach fall. It is the pits. The proverbial skids. Rock bottom. Losers.

Many people will remember the final game of the season in which South lost, but those non-believers should be warned that many schools sat at home watching the games as opposed to playing in them. The Blue Devils gave the entire community of Grosse Pointe the chance to ride to a pennant dream. Cheer for and follow a winner. The community was blessed by a quality football team under the direction of Jon Rice, Hank Lewandowski, Dan Wyers and Bob Schroeder. South was willing to carry the community on its shoulders, through the gateway at the Pontiac Silverdome and then allow them to revel in their championship glory. But why do most people recall the loss? The inability to break the mystique of Brother Rice? Did they choke in the big game?

If you think the noose got tight, you are wrong. Did you think that when South beat Port Huron Northern 23-0 it was a fluke? Wrong again. This is a legitimate team. Winners. Champions of the Eastern Michigan League. Winners of round one in the state playoffs; a first for any South football team. They won nine straight games, including a 14-3 win over rival Grosse Pointe North.

As I walked down the street this week, I was asked if I thought South choked. I responded, "No team chokes when it goes 9-2 and represents a team, a school, and a community in the state playoffs." They are a

South gets bumped out of playoffs, 27-13

By Rob Fulton

In a match that pitted two quality football teams, one dream season was going to continue, while the other team would awaken from it a loser. For the Blue Devils of South High, the latter of the two turned the dream into upside down.

South, which ventured into the state playoffs' second round, was bumped out of the championship race, 27-13 by Birmingham Brother Rice last Saturday at South Lake High School.

South, which had never gotten past round one in the state playoffs in three previous tries, did that two weeks ago as they shelled Lincoln, 20-6.

Facing the Warriors of Brother Rice was yet another mission for the Blue Devils, but two early mistakes gave Rice the opportunity to face Detroit Catholic Central, a 10-7 winner over Sterling Heights, in a Class A semifinal game.

"Losing is a feeling we haven't had to deal with in a long time," said South coach Jon Rice. "You kind of forget what it's like. It's not nearly as much fun." Entering the game, South had been victorious in nine straight games after suffering an 8-6 loss against Utica Eisenhower in the first game of the season. Eleven weeks later, the unfamiliar taste of defeat had come down hard on the Blue Devils.

"The kids and coaches are more upset that the season is over than they are about the loss," said Rice. "We wanted to practice two more Mondays, but now we'll concentrate on other things. The thought of it all being over with is disappointing. It's going to take about two to three weeks to get our feet back on the ground because we've been so atune to the season and now it's over."

On their sixth play of the afternoon, the Blue Devils were stuck in their own territory after Mike Paull's punt attempt was blocked. Three plays later the Warriors' Jason Wolf, who rushed for 155 yards on 35 carries, ramblined in to give Rice an early lead. On the ensuing kickoff, mistake number two occurred as the short kick was recovered by Brother Rice. Several plays later, Wolf scored his second touchdown of four and the Blue Devils faced a tough task.

"Those two mistakes were definitely killers," said Rice. "To play a team of that caliber and give up two scores is tough to come back on. Being down 14-0 and having run only six plays kind of took the starch out of us."

A driving force

Wilson continues to chip away at career

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Like father like son is a household cliché for the Wilson family.

For Brad Wilson and his father, Tom, the relationship is comparable to tightly packed clubs inside a golf bag.

Golf became a way of life for Brad, North High's aspiring golfer, at the tender age of seven. Brad started hitting balls with his dad at area golf courses and later shed his "starter set" of clubs for a better set of drivers that eventually led him to his first national tournament win.

"I got interested in golf when my dad and I just started hitting them," said the younger Wilson. "I had some short clubs to play with when my dad was teaching me the basics and fundamentals of the game."

At age 12, Wilson polished his first trophy in a national win in South Carolina. Since then he has been runner-up in the Detroit Junior Tournament twice, was medalist in the state regionals and the Macomb Area Conference Championships, and led the Norsemen with low-round six times during the season. He also won the Evans Memorial and tied a North record for low round with a 34.

"I am very happy with what I've done, but I hope it's not over," said Wilson. "I am really going to shoot for the professional tour, but I just have to continue to work hard."

Working hard has been Wilson's trademark. Early in his career, his body almost overturned his golf game by hitting a growth spurt. His game became imbalanced as his hands got bigger and his shoulders widened. His swing was out of touch and his timing wasn't comparable to a Timex. However, he did take his lumps and later emerged as one of Grosse Pointe's finer golfers.

"In 1984 I did okay, but I wasn't even a contender, so I thought, in the tournaments and matches I was playing in," said Wilson. "The growth spurt hurt my game and I wasn't as sharp, but I had to overcome that in order to continue to play."

Wilson overcame adversity once, but without the help from his father, who was a top golfer at the University of Michigan, Brad wouldn't have been able to adjust to his new style that came with the spurt.

"My father had, and continues to have, such a great impact on my golf game," Wilson said. "He's not forceful, but he's there to help me. He comes out during the summer and works with me. He has always told me to work hard on my short game and use positive thinking. Those two things I will always remember."

Wilson's poise and charisma are the two facets that make him tick. He loves the game of golf and working hard has its sacrifices, but being around a golf course is just what he wants.

"I believe I'm a well-rounded golfer, but it hasn't come easy," said Wilson. "My dad has always told me that the short game is where the points are scored and that's what I work a lot on. I take a lot of time on the putting green because that's where it all boils down to."

At 17, Wilson's career is just under way. He has accomplished a great deal and wanting to play on a college team would be another feather in his cap. He is striving to collect a scholarship, but if he doesn't receive one he will still try to make the team.

"I'd love to be recruited by a college and granted a scholarship, but if I don't get one then I'll have to walk-on," he said. "It makes no difference. As long as I'm able to play college golf."

Like most success stories, Wilson's star was not placed on the door overnight. He has faced adversity, but instead of buckling under, he has faced the challenges. Although he wouldn't detail all the times he had to turn his back on misfortune, Wilson recalls that because of two years in his life, the memories have painted a clear picture of the future.

"What helped not only my game, but some of my feelings on life, was the time when I was between the ages of 13 and 15," he said. "I dealt with a lot of adversity because I wasn't in my game, but I also learned to deal with a variety of situations. I've experienced too much of it (adversity) too early to not have learned from it. I am glad I had that chance early in life."

Wilson, a member of the American Junior Golf Association, doesn't agree with Mother Nature's ability to drop snow. Although he likes the white stuff, he despises it only because it cuts into time at the course. So, in order to fool Mother Nature, Wilson follows the birds during breaks from school.

"During winter and spring break I go south to play," he said. "I play in tournaments over the summer starting in June and when winter rolls around I get a bit discouraged, but once again, it's just an adverse condition I have to battle."

"When that happens, it is difficult to stick with your game plan," Rice added. "It wasn't panic time, but we had to think of ways to put the ball into the end zone."

Richmond McCloud, a senior defensive back, put some of the stiffness back in the Devils' collars as he picked up a Rice fumble and outran everyone from 10 yards out to close the Warrior gap to 14-7 midway through the second quarter.

"We were back in it right then and things looked good," said Rice. "But then they continued to go to Jason Wolf and that was a bit too much."

Wolf, who is the Warrior power-runner, proved elusive to the Blue Devils. South gave up 296 total yards, but the finesse of Wolf proved fatal.

"Wolf is an elusive runner," said Rice. "Our kids really couldn't get a hit on him. It looked like he was trying to dodge darts."

Bryan Jones, the senior field general for South, was trying to mount an attack to break the Warriors, but as he rolled out on a pass play, a potentially serious injury sidelined the quarterback for the remainder of the game. It was reported that Jones suffered a combination of neck and head injuries on a tackle.

With 26 ticks left in the first half, Wolf squirted in from three yards out to push the Rice advantage to 21-7 and that, combined with the loss of Jones, added up to frustration and concern at the intermission.

"There was no doubt we were all concerned about Bryan, but there was nothing we could do at the time," said Rice. "The kids were upset about what happened and their emotions ran quite high about it, but we kept telling them to go out and play good old-fashioned Blue Devil football. I was really pleased with the way the kids played in the second half. They showed what they are made of."

team that made it to the final eight teams in Class A. They held opponents to under four points a game and scored over 25 a game. Team concept was the main dish for the table Rice set and the guys on the field gave hope to many of us that South would be the first Grosse Pointe team to win a state championship since the playoffs' inception in 1975.

As the final second ticked off the clock, many emotions ran rampant. Fans were disappointed and players hurt. But, no crying towels were used by this poised, mature and powerful football team. Although their stomachs felt kicked in, their knuckles white from clenched fists, and their uniforms tarnished, each one of the young athletes held his head high. I was impressed with their congeniality.

This was a team who only trailed twice in ball games in which they won. They were quicker out of the gates than a thoroughbred and stampeded the opponent until they said uncle. Once the opposition surrendered, South never put salt in the wound by running up the score because Rice, as most coaches do, believes that what goes around comes around.

Chris Stebbins, a junior, stepped in to man the offensive troops in the second half and completed six of 16 passes for 68 yards, including a 37-yard touchdown pass to Paull in the fourth quarter that cut the lead to 27-13.

"Chris did an excellent job," said Rice. "He has worked out at number two quarterback all season long and he has worked hard at it. A lot of people were asking me if I was surprised by his poise and performance, but I wasn't. We know he can play and he has a lot of self-confidence."

"He stepped in and did the job. That comes from our belief in team concept," added Rice. "The injury to Bryan was unfortunate, but that's why we stress 'team.' One guy can't do it all."

Offensively, the Blue Devils compiled 151 total yards. Matt Aldrich, replacing the injured Steve Rice, rushed for 23 yards on four carries and Stebbins added 17 yards on two rushes.

All season long, the goals set at the beginning of the season have been reached. South won the Eastern Michigan League and went on to compete in the playoffs, but the final destiny of practicing two more Mondays was shattered.

"That's life," said Rice. "You've always got to say 'this is what I'm going to do' and if you don't do it you have to set out to accomplish another goal."

"The thing to keep in mind is that the sun will come up tomorrow."

South finished 9-2 overall and won their first round playoff game; something no other Blue Devil football team has done.

"This has been a great year," said Rice. "The kids have done everything we have asked them to do. The kids should be proud and pleased with the season. They came out of the locker room with their heads held high and that's the way it should be. They have no reason to hang their heads."

It was the year of the Blue Devils. They were not the rulers of hell, but of the football field. They pride themselves on a "goose egg" defense, which simply translated means they don't like to be scored on. They recorded three shutouts on the year as the end zone remained unexplored land for the opposition.

The season that began in August is over. For the seniors the final fling. For the juniors and upcoming athletes, another sweet dream to shoot for. Cloud 9 is waiting to float, with the Blue Devils aboard, to that championship pedestal in the sky.

Did you know...?

There is a golf tournament at the Silverado Country Club in Napa, Calif. each year that celebrity sports figures play in to raise money for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

The Grosse Pointe twist is the fact that it is called the Darrell Evans Celebrity Golf Tournament. Evans, a resident of the Farms and franchise player for the Detroit Tigers, recently held the fifth annual golf outing to aid the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

A large contingency from the world of baseball, football, sports writing and broadcasting attended the gala event in hopes of raising some $30,000 to help lead the fight against the number one genetic killer of children and young adults.

The tournament, which drew big names such as Bobby Grich, Bob Melvin, Tito Fuentes, Art Thomas and Atlee Hammaker, received many generous donated prizes for raffles, including a 1988 Ford Mustang, a $10,000 wine package, a luxury Acapulco Cruise and over 15 different hole contests with valuable prizes.

The celebrities "shot" for $30,000 in contributions and made it although all the checks have not been received yet.

The girls' basketball team ended the regular season the same way they started it; with a win.

This time, a 50-27 win over Warren Cousino gave the Lady Norsemen the championship in the White Division of the Macomb Area Conference. The win also raised North's overall record to 16-3.

Heather Mergos led all scorers with 14 points. Sue Nichols had 10 points and guard Monique Van Assche hit for nine points.

Earlier in the week, the girls held on to narrowly defeat Lake Shore, 40-38. After building a 12-point lead, the Norsemen allowed Lake Shore to storm back, but Lake Shore's final shot, at the buzzer, was off the mark to preserve North's 15th win on the year.

The girls will play their first district game of 1987 at home against Grosse Pointe South starting at 6 p.m.

With a 9-2 dual-meet record under its belt, the Norsemen tankers eased through the Macomb Area Conference Swimming Championships as they racked up 445 points. The closest competitor was Utica Ford (268).

"It was a very lopsided win, but we'll take it," said North coach Mike O'Connor. "We won every event, but we'll really see what we're made of when we go to compete in the state finals." The state finals will take place at Michigan State University on Dec. 4-5. "That will be the real test for our team," added O'Connor.

J.V. Devils earn E.M.L. title

By Patrick L. DeLaere, Jr.
Special Writer

For the first time in South history, the junior varsity football team has won the Eastern Michigan League title.

The Blue Devils were coached by Dan Griesbaum and Tom Steen; they have been coaching together for five seasons. South finished 8-1 overall and 7-0 in the E.M.L. Their only loss came on the first game of the season, 28-7 at Utica Eisenhower.

"Throughout the year we have been really good on defense and have come up with the big play on offense," said Griesbaum. "When game day comes around our players are ready to play. The preparation showed when we had to travel to Port Huron. The team prepared themselves mentally and went out and won the game, 31-6."

One of South's major advantages is the coaching staff. In each game every player had the opportunity to play, unless they were injured. "There were no major problems with attitude. They knew when to get serious and when to have a good time," said Griesbaum.

How about varsity next season?

"As juniors they are going to play against seniors. I think they'll do well. However, they are going to have to work on weights. Some of them will have to take it more seriously," Griesbaum said.

Some of South's standout players are, quarterback, Brian Letscher, Matt Austin, and Mike Montagne. The offensive line was led by Chris and Kurt Graves, Dave Asker and John Bednerchik. The defense was led by Rapo Nazarko, Charlie Beibo and Chris Graves.

"The line was a very big improvement from last year where we got blown off the ball," said Griesbaum.

Jason Weissert was in control of the kicking game. "Jason has done a super job with punts, kickoffs and especially extra points," said Griesbaum.

Feeling By Deanna Hawthorne

Fit

Home exercise

Would you like some exercises that you can do at home? Since the holidays are creeping up, it's a good time to think about doing a little more exercise to help burn those unwanted calories. These exercises are from an "Activetics" workshop and seminar I attended years ago and they can still be effective today.

Dr. Charles Kuntzleman, the author of "Activetics", feels that being too fat is simply being under-exercised. When you do these exercises, keep moving. Don't delay between the exercises and do them in a continuous motion. Time to get moving!

1) Walk — Stand erect, balanced on the balls of your feet. Begin walking; around a room will do nicely. This is a good warm-up activity.

2) Run in place — Lift the feet at least four inches off the floor while running in place. For greater stress, lift the knees up to waist height. This improves circulo-respiratory endurance and strengthens the leg muscles.

3) Punching bag — Simulate punching a punching bag by beginning with the arms extended, then alternately drawing the back in front of the body. A drawing in toward the body and returning to an extended position constitutes one repetition. This will help tone both the tricep and bicep muscles.

4) Modified push-ups — Start in a lying position, hands outside the shoulders, fingers pointed forward and the knees bent. Lift yourself off the floor by straightening your arms and keeping your back straight. Return to the starting position. Doing this will firm the muscles in the back of the arm.

5) Abdominal curls — Lie flat on the back with the lower back touching the floor and keep the knees bent. Curl the head and upper part of the body upward and forward to about a 45 degree angle. At the same time, contract your abdominal muscles. Return slowly to the starting position. The curl up and return is 1 repetition. This tones the abdomen.

6) Curl down 45 degree angle — Start from a sitting position with your knees bent and the hands placed behind the head. Lower the upper body to a 45 degree angle. Hold that position and return. This is done to tone the abdominal muscles.

7) Trunk twister — Stand with your hands clasped behind your neck and elbows drawn back. As you walk in place, raise the knees as high as possible and turn the body to the left, having your left elbow touch your right knee. The touching of the right elbow to your left knee is one repetition. Repeat to the other side. This conditions the waist and improves the hip flexors.

8) Side stretch — Stand erect with your hands on your hips and your feet spread wider than shoulder width. Progress to the right, bend the right leg, keep left leg extended. Repeat on other side. Firms the thighs, hips and buttocks.

Moderation classes become way of life for seniors

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Many people offer discount cards and special benefits to the senior citizens, but at Assumption Cultural Center, the seniors are treated with moderation aerobic classes three days and four nights a week.

Julie Marx, the instructor for the class that draws an average crowd of 75 people each session, has been teaching aerobics for two years now, but it hasn't been comparable to the pleasure she gets out of teaching the seniors.

"It gives me such a feeling of elation," said the 50-year old instructor. "It's a habit I've developed and I can't get rid of it. It's a joy because I get to encourage them and in return, they encourage me."

The average age for the active participants is approximately 60 years old, but don't get the idea that Marx takes it easy on them.

The Moderation Class participants

"We work hard when we come to these sessions," she said. "They enjoy to work hard because it is so gratifying to them to work and get something out of it. It's also such a delight to come to this class because I leave with such a good feeling. They are all young ladies in spirit."

The classes are held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 11:15 a.m. to noon, and during evening hours Monday through Thursday starting at 6 and 7 p.m.

"We get people from all walks of life and various ages and that's what is exciting," said Marx. "It's such a diverse group that shares the basic interest of being physically fit."

Last week several participants described their aerobic adventures as follows. Their name is followed by their age and some ages were withheld by request.

Lorna Karr, 74: "As you get older, you need exercise. I also stress the social part of it because it is nice to talk with the women."

Nancy Bauer: "It's the best exercise program I've ever seen and coming here really makes me feel good about myself. I don't feel anything special, it's just that I like it."

Malvina VanDeputte, 79: "I'm in very good shape and I attribute it to starting this class 10 years ago. It is pleasant and everyone is so congenial."

May Thompson: "Coming here makes you feel good and the women here are fantastic. I became a widow seven years ago and this place was a lifesaver. When I miss a session, I seem to have no energy."

Ottoilia Schuber, 75: "It gives you energy and keeps you limber. It's great physical fitness and a lot of fun."

Esther Chiodini, 67: "I like it because it keeps me in shape and my health up. It keeps me from getting stiff and physically I feel a lot better when I do this type of exercising."

Lillian Toelle, 72: "I like to keep up with my grandchildren. It makes me feel good and it makes me feel young and invigorated."

Thanksgiving — new traditions

Thanksgiving. Just saying the word can conjure up a multitude of memories. It is a time to remember things that have passed, a gathering of friends and family, a time for coming home, a time to be thankful for who we are and what we have.

Family traditions may vary from family to family and how we choose to celebrate this holiday, but the one abiding tradition we all share is the gathering together for FOOD!

Oh, the wonderful food. The smell alone can quicken the pulse of the most sedate family member. As we look forward to this meal above all meals, we may unconsciously be planning out our strategy for just how stuffed we can again become this holiday.

We may already take it for granted the five or 10 pound weight gain that has become part of this traditional celebration, or we remember the last Thanksgiving with revulsion; the terrible feeling of physical discomfort and mental anguish over the loss of will power. We may promise ourselves that this year will be different, but without some honest forethought and planning, our promise can fall apart with the first smell of turkey.

New traditions

At one point, in our family's history, each tradition that now seems to be carved in granite, was new. It may seem that we always follow the exact same routine, but in reality, over the years each family has had to shift patterns, make adjustments and incorporate different routines because the family is changing also. You can choose to establish new traditions for yourself and once they are put into action, they can become a habit that is good for you, not detrimental. They should be patterns of action that leave you satisfied, not stuffed.

The following suggestions may be of some help as you plan for Thanksgiving.

T-day planning

1) Start the day with a good breakfast. It doesn't matter whether you will be eating the dinner at 1 p.m. or 6 p.m., a good beginning to the day will act as the foundation for a good ending to the day. (When we attempt to go without food in order to "save" for the big dinner, we end up overly hungry and eventually that leads to over-eating).

2) Drink those eight glasses of water throughout the day just as you would on any other day. Many people think this practice is only meant to "fill you up," but in reality, water is the basis for a healthy body; enabling your metabolism to function at its best.

3) If the dinner is not going to be eaten until later in the day, an afternoon meal is in order. This does not have to be a large meal, but should consist of some quality protein, vegetables (a salad for instance) and maybe a fruit. How about a wonderful Michigan apple?

4) Snack foods do not have to be a problem if you plan well. Fresh vegetables served with a yogurt or tofu type dip are actually nutritious. Avoid the highly sugared or greasy foods. They do nothing for you other than expand your waistline.

5) Whether we plan to attend the traditional parade, the football game, or hunker down in our favorite chair in front of the television, there is always time for a walk. How about a 15 or 20 minute brisk walk at halftime.

After the big dinner, gather up the family members you can and head outside. You don't have to put in miles. A quick walk around the block will do wonders for your body as well as your mind. Grab the family and get going!

6) Practice Diet Center's magic words, "No thank you, not right now." Repeat them all this week and use them often on the big day.

Remember, we are establishing new traditions. It doesn't make any difference that you have never responded this way at Thanksgiving. This is the new you, with a new vocabulary to go along with your new attitudes and practice makes perfect. Repeat, out loud, 10, 20, 100 times a day, "no thank you, not right now." You will be well prepared, even when faced with your mother's offers of "come on, have some more. I made it just for you."

7) Take ten. That's 10 minutes where you pull yourself away from all that is going on. Find some quiet space and center yourself back down to what you want for yourself this day. Behavior patterns of family members or friends that have previously meant problems for you may still be present, but you can choose to change how you react to their behavior. When the events of the day begin to wear you down, take 10 minutes to settle yourself and re-affirm what you want to happen. This is an excellent time to count your blessings. You are a special person and you are thankful for those that surround you. You can truly make it a happy Thanksgiving.

U of M, Ohio State look for blood — donations

Friends, fans, alumni and students of the University of Michigan will literally be out for blood (donations) against their counterparts at Ohio State University in the annual Blood Donor Battle, now through Nov. 20. Winner of the Blood Drop Trophy will be announced at halftime ceremonies during the annual football game between the rival Big Ten schools on Nov. 21 in Ann Arbor.

In the five years of competition, Michigan has been the victor in 1982, 1983 and 1985. OSU claimed possession of the trophy in 1984 and 1986. To date, more than 68,000 units of blood have been collected during the Blood Battles.

For reservations for the free community program, call 881-1800, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Michigan friends can sign up for the maize and blue when they donate blood at the nearest Red Cross blood donor center, community or workplace blood drive.

All blood donations remain in the region in which they are collected and paper "credits" only are exchanged between the rivals.

For friends of Michigan who have never donated blood but would like to join in the battle, requirements to donate are simple: Donors must be between the ages of 17-70 years old, in good health and weigh a minimum of 110 pounds.

Call Red Cross at 494-2800 for an appointment to donate blood at the nearest donor center.

Shelley Long shines in the poorly written 'Hello Again'

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

Now that Shelley Long's replacement on "Cheers" is fitting in so well, the pressure is really on Ms. Long to prove that she didn't make a mistake by leaving one of the highest-rated shows on television.

"Hello Again" will convince viewers of no such thing. Indeed, this movie is very weak and extremely contrived. Were it not for the presence of the likeable Long and the attractive Corbin Bernsen (of TV's "L.A. Law"), "Hello" would not be worth the effort.

As is, the film is barely watchable. Sure, it's a cute scenario. Have a housewife (Long) die and then be brought back to life one year later by her eccentric sister (Judith Ivey). Imagine the problems this would cause for her husband (Bernsen), who, after a suitable time of mourning, married Long's best friend. Imagine the stir this would cause in the science world.

Imagine all the comic moments you want, but don't expect to see them pulled off with any skill in this film. After spending an inordinate amount of time setting up the story, there is very little comic payoff. For example, Long walks in on her husband and his new wife while they're still in bed. She screams. He screams. Then Long and her husband go for a walk.

Instead of playing up the comic possibilities of a resurrection, the film becomes preachy and turns into a story about the necessity for true love in one's life. All too easily, the characters in "Hello Again" take for granted the fact that someone has come back from the dead.

That's the film's first mistake, and ultimately the one that hurts it the most. But the corny dialogue and extremely one-dimensional characters don't help the cause either. Viewers spend more time scratching their heads and wondering why things weren't done differently than they do laughing.

Despite the problems, it's difficult not to appreciate Long's comic ability. More than any other thing, she bonds the far-fung elements of this picture together with a touch of class. Much like a Lucille Ball or a

Lily Tomlin, Long is a talented and appealing comedienne. Even with the sorry excuse for a script she's been given in "Hello," she manages to pull a few laughs out of her hat. That's a good thing. Because in all other respects, "Hello Again" is a bad joke in the truest sense of the phrase. It's bad.

And it's a joke.

'Hiding Out' has something for everyone

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

We've heard of guns in high school — but machine guns?

That's pretty scary stuff, but it happens in what is otherwise an easygoing comedy, "Hiding Out." Things get tense when a couple of goons armed with machine guns perch themselves in the balcony of a high school auditorium where the student body has gathered to hear the results of an election to name the senior class president.

How they happened to be there and why is the fragile thread on which this story is hung. Actually as characters, we see little of them. They exist only as threats to the life of Andrew Morenski (Jon Cryer).

When the film begins, Cryer is a 27-year-old hotshot stockbroker living the good life in New York. In his eagerness to wheel and deal himself into wealth, Cryer and his equally ambitious colleagues neglect to check some counterfeit bonds. When Cryer's friend ends up dead, Cryer is put into protective custody and when the FBI agent guarding him is shot, Cryer decides it's time to disappear.

He shaves off his beard, dyes and spikes his hair and makes his way to a small Delaware town where his only relative, Aunt Lucy, lives.

While waiting to see his aunt, a nurse in the local high school, Cryer is repeatedly mistaken for one of the students. Not one to miss a bet, Cryer takes advantage of his youthful look and enrolls in the high school.

And so the story shifts from the perils of Wall Street to the trials and tribulations and seemingly unsolvable problems that confront teenagers in high school.

The suspense when the killers pick up his trail and the portrayal of a nice group of high-spirited kids makes "Hiding Out" a grab bag of something for everyone.

Cryer, who was Duckie in "Pretty in Pink," has a pleasing natural manner and he breezes through his dual role as stockbroker and student with ease.

Director Bob Giraldi comes to the film from a career as an award-winning music video director, notably Michael Jackson's "Beat It." True to form, one sequence in the film portrays Cryer in a series of dream-like situations, much like a music video.

Joe Williams to perform

Joe Williams, the Grammy award-winning jazz/blues singer, will perform at the Music Hall Saturday, Nov. 21, with the Detroit Metropolitan Orchestra. The group is a symphonic orchestra composed of minority and female musicians.

The concert will help the orchestra raise funds to train and develop aspiring young adult conductors and instrumentalists in the Detroit area.

The Detroit Metropolitan Orchestra will perform four major concerts in the 1987-88 season. In addition, it will give 15 concerts to Detroit public school children and conduct string, brass and percussion workshops.

For more information, call 342-7786.

Headlining the cast are Marilyn Mays as the irresistible and effervescent Mame, award-winning actress Dinah Lynch as the boozy Vera Charles, Anita Barone as the over-indulgent secretary Agnes Gooch, Tom Vanderweel as Beauregard Jackson Pickett Burnside, and 11-year-old Matt Hess from Windsor, Ontario, as young Patrick Dennis.

Tickets can be reserved by calling the Hilberry box office at 577-2972.

On Stage Productions will hold auditions for the Neil Simon comedy, "The Odd Couple," female version. Needed are five women and two men. Dates of auditions are Monday, Nov. 30, and Tuesday, Dec. 1, at 7 p.m. at Kurz Alt Heidelberg Restaurant, 43785 Gratiot, Mount Clemens.

Show dates are Feb. 19 through April 2. For further information, call Rodger McElveen at 772-2798.

Connie

...Stevens will appear in concert at 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 20, at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts. Tickets at $7 for adults and $15.25 for students and senior citizens may be obtained at the box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222. The center is located on the Center Campus of Macomb Community College at Hall and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

Sweet drama to premiere

The University of Detroit Theatre Company's award-winning actor Arthur J. Beer will take the lead role of Clarence Darrow in the documentary drama he has written to honor the Michigan sesquicentennial, "Malice Aforethought: The Sweet Trials." The play will premiere at 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 20 at the Marygrove Theatre.

Set in 1925, "Malice Aforethought" tells the story of Dr. Ossian Sweet, a black physician, who purchases a home on Detroit's east side in a predominantly white neighborhood.

Led by the Ku Klux Klan, a mob of whites gathers outside the Sweet home where Sweet and friends, armed with guns, have barricaded themselves. As the mob begins to move in, pelting the windows with stones, shots are fired from the house, killing one person and wounding another.

Sweet and comrades are charged with murder and conspiracy. With the help of the NAACP, Sweet engages for their defense the world-renowned orator-attorney, Clarence Darrow, and American Civil Liberties Union attorney Arthur G. Hays. U of D law professor, Thomas Chawke, acts as co-counsel.

Judge Frank Murphy, another U of D law professor, presides over the two trials. (The first resulted in a hung jury.) Later, Murphy is to figure prominently in Michigan history as the mayor of Detroit, governor, U.S. attorney general and a supreme court justice. In a landmark decision that receives national and international publicity, Sweet and comrades are acquitted.

The $10 price for tickets will include a wine and cheese reception at Marygrove's Madame Cadillac Hall following the opening performance. Other performances will be held Nov. 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, Dec. 4, 5 and 6. Friday and Saturday performances begin at 8 p.m., Sunday at 7 p.m. For ticket information, contact the Theatre Company at 927-1130.

Sing in the season

Light up the city and join in the magic at the official welcome to the holiday season in Detroit at the third annual Detroit Aglow Symphony Sing-Along Monday, Nov. 23, in Cobo Arena at 8 p.m.

Conductor Richard Hayman will lead the sing-along. The Grand Rapids Symphony will provide the musical accompaniment and the St. Cecilia Youth Chorale, an 80-voice children's choir from Grand Rapids, will perform songs in honor of Michigan's 150th birthday.

Peter Pan to open at Bonstelle

"Peter Pan," J. M. Barrie's theatrical adventure about a boy who wouldn't grow up, opens Friday, Dec. 4, at Wayne State University's Bonstelle Theatre. Performances of this special holiday production are Fridays and Saturdays, Dec. 4-5 and 11-12, at 8 p.m., with matinees Saturday, Dec. 12, and Sundays, Dec. 6 and 13, at 2 p.m.

For schedule information and tickets, call the box office at 577-2960. Door sale at the Bonstelle Theatre, 3424 Woodward, begins one hour before curtain. For group rates and reservations, call 577-3010.
