Its name was Olivia... and she was a guest, not an entree.

The three-week-old piglet came home with Carol Calcaterra, a 1977 graduate of Grosse Pointe South. "She was one of 13 babies born to a sow on the farm I work on. She was the runt," Carol said. Sows can only nurse 12 babies at once. "The owner said she was going to die, because he didn't have time to feed her with a bottle. I asked if I could take her home.'

Carol lives on a one-acre farm in Newby, Ky. She's a junior, ics at Eastern Kentucky University in nearby Richmond. She and some fish. Charlotte Calcaterra, Carol's mother, said Carol has a long-standing reputation for adopting homeless or sick animals and taking care of them. "She's unable to pass up anything that's about to die. She was going to name the piglet Oliver until she discovered it was Olivia."

Olivia's future is decidedly brighter since she met Carol. "I plan to raise her, breed her, raise the babies and sell them," Carol said. "I'm also going to train her to do dog tricks - like walk on a leash, sit and lie down." She said pigs are as intelligent as dogs and can be housebroken and trained.

Olivia needs a few more lessons on housebreaking procedures, however. The Calcaterras are smiling bravely and practic-

Champion pouted and sulked most of the weekend. Elsa, a German Shephard/ Huskie mix, thinks she's Olivia's mother. Elsa and Olivia sleep snuggled together, and Elsa bathes Olivia with canine maternal fervor.

Olivia's diet is still restricted to milk and bits of cheese. Nobody knows if she likes turkey. She will eventually weigh about 600 pounds, according to Carol.

The question is...will Olivia be invited back next Thanksgiv-

Farms judge, council patch up differences

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

The squeaky wheel in the Farms got the grease last week when the council voted to hire a full-time court administrator and to increase the salary for Municipal Judge Peter O'Rourke. O'-Rourke had been complaining since he was elected two years ago that the court was understaffed and overworked.

The court has been operating with a part-time staff. The fulltime administrator position could be filled from among those clerks or from the outside. The salary has not yet been set.

O'Rourke's salary was increased from $7,000 to $9,000, retroactive to July 1. With the cash value of medical insurance, the judge's compensation comes to about $13,000, according to a council memo. That was not the amount he had requested, O'-Rourke said, but he added that he expects to discuss the issue again when the next budget is adopted.

O'Rourke had charged that the city was practicing "Bandaid" funding for the court in its failure to hire more staff and find additional office space. He said he had run for the judgeship in the first place in order to improve the functioning of the

Farms passes resolution to consolidate police, fire

The Farms council came right out and said last week what it's been thinking for a decade: It wants to consolidate the police and fire departments.

The decision to move toward a consolidated public safety department was made by resolution that empowers the city administration to negotiate an arrangement with the two unions. So far, no details of the plan are certain.

"We'll be talking with the unions soon to see where we want to go with this," said City Clerk Richard Solak. He said he expected to make contact with union officials in December or early January. Solak declined to say whether Police Chief Robert Ferber would be named director of the new department or whether the position would be opened to applica-

The resolution states that public safety departments have been successful in surrounding communities and that current personnel will be given first priority in filling the new positions.

"At the end of this year, we won't negotiate any more separate contracts," Mayor Joseph Fromm told the council. Contracts for both departments expire at the end of December. The police settled their contract in November; the firefighters are in arbitration over theirs.

The resolution does not address questions of when officers will be cross-trained or what will happen to people who cannot pass the training. Solak said the city and unions will discuss the possibility of creating a temporary specialist class for personnel who do not pass the training for

Yacht club seeks to expand

By Peter A. Salinas Stafff Writer

Several residents along Lakeshore near Vernier have raised opposition to a proposal from the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club to expand its harbor by some 84 wells south of the existing facility.

The Shores council tabled discussion on the proposal pending review by village attorney William Killebrew, according to Village Manager Michael Kenyon.

Fred G. Schriever, vice commodore and and resident harbor engineer for the yacht club, said the plan would call for extending the existing harbor some 300 feet to the south along the U.S. harbor line, 950 feet west toward shore and 300 feet to the north.

"The proposal would bring the new facilities within 650 feet from the breakwall, Schriever said. "There is a very critical need for wells in the state of Michigan. This plan would give us an additional 84 wells."

He pointed out that in the recent negotiated settlement between the yacht club and the Shores, the yacht club, while gaining permanent use rights to a number of well spaces, lost its lease on 22 wells.

Schriever stressed that the proposal submitted to the village council was not final, and the entire plan is only in the study

"We made an application to the Department of Natural Resources and they were very receptive," Schriever said. "We are applying for a lease from the state, but we would need approval from the village.'

Kenyon said that the council had several questions on the matter and took the proposal under advisement. Part of the problem, Kenyon noted, is that a number of Lakeshore residents hold the riparian rights to the lake. Those rights are taxed in the Shores. Kenyon noted that in one case, the property, which stretches from the shore to the harbor line, generates about $150 in taxes, and most of that goes to the school district.

Kenyon said the council will ask Killebrew to determine if the riparian rights that govern access to the lake conflict with the yacht club's proposed project. Under the Submerged Lands

Part of the problem is that a number of Lakeshore residents hold riparian rights . . .

Act of 1956, according to Schriever, the submerged bottomland belongs to state. Schriever added that the state would lease use of that bottomland to the yacht club for a fee determined from the amount of revenue the club generates from the new wells.

"It would not affect the residents," Schriever contended. "It would be a nice thing to be able to do.

Several residents at the meeting disagreed with that.

James Babcock of Lakeshore said that some, though not he, own the riparian rights, and should that land ever become free of water, the land would revert to the holder of those rights. He said people pay taxes for those rights and should be entitled to a free and unobstructed view of the lake at the very least

"This is the only six-mile stretch along the lake where you can view it from the road, and the yacht club wants to make a dock out of it," Babcock said. Noting that the proposed extension of the dock would block off his and other residents' view, he said there might be an environmental concern as well

The proposed extension of the dock would, in Babcock's view, create a large cove in the corner of the yacht club's south wall and the new dock.

'When we get a northeastern wind, a lot of debris from the boats and other stuff comes on shore," he said. "I think the addition of the harbor would cause the water to swirl around in that corner even more; and cause sensitive environmental problems."

While Jack Monahan explained that he has been a member of the yacht club for 20 years, and has a great deal of respect for the club, he disagrees with the proposed expansion.

Monahan, a member of the Village's planning commission, lives on Lakeshore across from where the new docks would be located.

"This would diminish my view of the lake," he said. "I have lived here for 16 years and I think it would be detrimental to my enjoyment of my home."

Monahan said that were there to be a public hearing held by the planning commission, he would have to abstain from voting on the matter because of his affiliation with the club. "Another point," Monahan said, "is that about one-quarter of the boats in the yacht club belong to non-Grosse Pointers. Now that may not sound like a good argument, but I don't think it is appropriate that the value and enjoyment of my property should be decreased by someone who

Park council goes around again on chamber redecoration issue

By Margie Reins Smith

Staff Writer The Grosse Pointe Park City Council jogged another lap around the council chambers redecoration issue at the Nov. 20 meeting.

After approximately a halfhour discussion, council members voted unanimously to pay McGovern & Urso Interiors for work that has already been completed and to ask the same firm to submit a plan for the completion of the redecorating job.

McGovern & Urso began the redecoration, but progress had stalled because councilman Vern Ausherman accused City Manager John Crawford of circumventing the city charter on aspects of the project.

Monday evening's discussion began because of an outstanding balance due to McGovern & Urso for $3,734.77 for chairs and the installation of council room carpeting. The carpeting is in storage and has not been installed because other aspects of the room's renovation must be accomplished first.

The discussion boiled down to: 1. Has McGovern & Urso been hired to plan, coordinate and implement the refurbishing of the entire room? or 2. Should the council consider each portion of the project (wallcovering, carpeting, curtains, benches, cushions, etc.), discuss pros, cons and possibilities, solicit bids, and then make a decision?

City Manager Crawford said, "Normally, this project would not come before the council piecemeal. We decided to coordinate, so (the project) would look like it was professionally done.'

Mayor Palmer Heenan said he was concerned because the redecorating project was budgeted at $25,000, but was now up to $35,000 — without getting bids for the extra $10,000. "You're trying to make this council look silly," Heenan said. "It's a whole job and you've got to tell us what you're doing.'

The city charter requires council approval for all expenditures over $5,000. During Monday's discussion, reference was made to councilman Ausherman's accusation last June that the city manager had tried to circumvent reunion is scheduled for the council approval for redecorating expenditures by dividing purchase orders so that none exceeded $5,000.

City attorney Herold McC. Deason, at the request of the council, investigated and reported that Crawford had not circumvented the charter. The council voted 4-3 July 13 to accept the city attorney's report concerning the matter. Councilwoman Carroll Evola Interiors said, "We accepted the city attorney's decision. Are we going to change direction now? Let's get on with it.'

Councilman Dan Clark, who was not on the council when the city attorney's decision was given, said he refused to accept the report. "There appeared to be a subdivision of orders to circumvent the charter," he said.

Councilman David Gaskin pointed out that - whether the council agreed with the decision or not — they voted to accept it.

The council then voted unanimously to pay the balance of $3,734.77 to McGovern & Urso

Councilman Mark Valente said, "We don't need any help from the city manager in looking silly here. We're doing it all by ourselves. Let's make a decision, Mr. Mayor, and let the manager do his job. We've gone through this over and over. Let's move Valente made a motion to ask McGovern & Urso for a presentation of their plans for completing the council redecorating project - if they're still interested. The motion passed unanimously.

Teen tackles a big job

Home for aged boasts new underground sprinkler system

By Pat Paholsky News Editor

When Charlie Schulz was looking for a community project to do to fulfill the requirement for the rank of Eagle Scout, he said he didn't want it to be anything small. "I wanted something that would have an actual impact," he said.

He wasn't kidding.

He and his friends and family members installed an underground sprinkler system in a yard the size of a football field -350 feet by 210 feet. And when the workers at St. Joseph Home for the Aged on Cadieux near Warren test the new system in the spring, Schulz will be there to fix any leaks and to set the angle of the sprinkler heads.

The 18-year-old senior at Grosse Pointe South, who has been in scouting for seven years, needed a project that would take at least 40 hours. He estimated this would take about 80 hours, but when it was over, he had spent 149 hours after school and on weekends.

"I knew it was going to be a big job, but I didn't know how big," he said.

The material for the sprinkler system, paid for by St. Joseph Home, was $2,500. By providing the labor, Schulz saved the home at least $3,000 or more.

"I couldn't have done it without Dan," he said, referring to Dan Rowady, also 18 and a senior at South High. "He was always there, except when he got his wisdom teeth out."

Rowady spent 120 hours on the project and Christina Johnson, a friend from Detroit, gave 75 hours of her time, also after school and on weekends.

By Margie Reins Smith

Schulz began looking for a project in August. He mother's friend, who works with various service agencies, gave him a list of things some of the organizations wanted done. Schulz said the St. Joseph project appealed to him, because he had never done anything like it before.

He talked with the administrator, Sister Mary Magdalene, who put the boys under the guidance and supervision of the home's two maintenance supervisors. Rowady did a scale drawing of the property and the two took the drawing to Century Rain Aid in Warren. That marked the beginning of the major project.

On Oct. 12, they began digging trenches to lay the main lines and tubing. The entire main line was dug by hand. They used a trench digger for the tubing, some 3,500 feet.

Schulz said Don Kavanaugh, a substitute teacher for the Grosse Pointe public schools, spent eight hours lifting three sections of sidewalk with a pole. The digging process took eight days or 45 hours.

For the next four days, the boys assembled the valves and heads. After that, they spent eight days blowing out the lines with an air compressor. This was the most tedious part of the project, Schulz said, and necessary since any water in the lines could freeze and burst the tub-

Then using rakes, shovels and "anything to push the dirt in," they covered up the 10-inch by 4inch-deep trenches. Schulz's mother Suzette and 14-year-old sister, Beth, helped cover up the trenches. When the system leaked, his father Larry Schulz fixed the leaks. Schulz said Ron Penkszik and J.J. Hile also helped as well as five volunteers from St. Joan of Arc Church.

The entire project took 33

Rowady said he wanted to help his friend because it would give him a chance to do some volunteer work on a large scale and he was intrigued by the

Schulz said, "It's a good feeling to know you made an impact project, Sister wrote: "... we someplace in life.'

Fewer than one percent of Boy Scouts nationwide achieve the rank of Eagle. Schulz will be honored in June.

And the people at St. Joseph Home for the Aged are elated. Sister Mary Magdalen said it was something they wanted to have done, but couldn't afford. The entire backyard is fenced in and it's a peaceful retreat for the residents - there are 104 - and Daisy and Muffin, two former stray dogs who have found a home at St. Joseph. will always be grateful and consider ourselves blessed for having known and been served by them... This is one grand community service that will be hard to outdo."

The experience has given the. two friends an idea: "We're thinking of starting a business this summer or working with a company," Schulz said, adding that both have jobs as lifeguards.

After graduation in June, Schulz plans to study advertising at Michigan State University and Rowady wants to major in biology at Indiana University.

The Nov. 9 decision followed a lengthy discussion of First Amendment rights and discrimination against renters. The purpose of the ordinance, according to City Manager John Crawford, is to permit systematic inspection of the interiors of city rental units - with the health, safety and welfare of rental unit residents in mind.

The ordinance also applies to owner-occupied rental property when there is a change of occupancy. Residents who have been living in an owner-occupied rental unit prior to August 1972 will not be required to have

State to test G. P. incinerator ash

Within a week, the state expects to start testing ash from the Grosse Pointes-Clinton incinerator to see if it should be disposed of in a hazardous waste landfill.

Ben Okwumabua, Department of Natural Resources district supervisor of waste management, confirmed that his office will start tests as soon as the testing parameters are devised, "We will look at heavy metals and perhaps dioxins," he said.

The state has not told incinerator General Manager Edwin Whedon about the testing program, however. "All I know is what I read in the paper," he said. "This isn't the first time that I've heard about something

Flare causes fire

A distress flare was fired through a large picture window of a home on Lakeview in the Farms Monday, Nov. 23, causing the drapes to be set on fire and the floor to be scorched. There was no further damage, how-

According to Farms police, the flare went through a large 10 foot by 10 foot window, then through a smaller window pane before setting the curtains ablaze.

The homeowner had the fire out before an officer arrived. The flare was completely spent.

The resident had no idea who might be responsible, and police have no suspects at this time.

Purse snatched

A 41-year-old Farms woman had her purse stolen as she was putting groceries in her vehicle behind Kroger's in the municipal parking lot on Nov. 17.

The thief was described as a black male, about 20 to 25 years of age, 5-feet-8 and 170 pounds.

The man reached into the vehicle and took the woman's purse which contained about $80 in cash.

from the news media first."

Whedon said that waste from a municipal incinerator has been by law exempt from testing requirements and he doesn't know what has happened to change that. Okwumabua characterized it as a "loophole" which is now being closed.

One certainty is that if the ash is classified as a hazardous waste, it will greatly increase the cost of disposing of it.

Evidence of the hazardous material in incinerator ash comes from a recently released Environmental Protection Agency study of four municipal incinerators. The study showed high levels of dioxin, cadmium and lead in the fly ash and lesser amounts in the bottom ash, according to a report in the Detroit Free Press.

The four unnamed incinerators had seven times as much lead and four times as much cadmium in their ash as EPA standards allow, according to the report. The EPA has no standards for dioxin.

Is city-county cooperation or merger out?

Tow that we have had the opportunity to digest news accounts of the Detroit Strategic Project, we think it is significant that the report does not mention any possibility of a future merger of city and county government or even any great increase in the cooperation between them.

We suppose that reluctance to even mention the one way to reduce government costs and improve efficiency that has been adopted in a number of areas of the country was caused in part by the the desire of the drafters of the report to avoid a subject that is anathema to Mayor Coleman Young.

The mayor's attitude became apparent a number of years ago when he did little to seek support for the Wayne County charter that enabled county government to modernize and permitted county citizens to elect a county executive to mind the store. It was generally agreed that Young sat on the sidelines through the campaigns to approve the charter and to elect the first executive, who turned out to be William Lucas, the Wayne County sheriff.

Perhaps the mayor's positions were understandable. He naturally would not approve of actions that might improve the county's political standing in southeastern Michigan at the city's expense and reduce his own importance in the Michigan Democratic Party and in the state generally.

As for the new Detroit plan, much was made of the finding that racism is still a major problem that must be attacked to enable blacks and other minorities to enjoy full participation in the economic fabric of the city. Yet no attention was given, so far as we know, to the possibility that some form of metropolitan government might yield dividends in the battle against racism as well as against the economic problems that plague Detroit.

Perhaps it is true that Detroit's black community, having become the largest single segment of the population, would not willingly cooperate in any metro plan that would reduce its political potency. And perhaps it is true that Detroit's suburban areas, most of them containing a majority of whites, would not be willing to accept Detroit as a partner in any kind of a metro government, even if the opportunity were offered, because of the city's crime, race and economic problems.

Yet in Indianapolis, Miami, Nashville and other cities, forms of metropolitan government have yielded good economic and social results. And while it is true that those communities face problems that are different from those in Detroit, it is disappointing that so far as we know the possibility of a form of metro government, or just of greater cooperation between the city and county, was not even discussed in the Detroit Strategic Planning Report.

True, there are many more objections to any such cooperation than those we have mentioned. But surely metro cooperation at least could iron out the differences between the city and county with respect to the pay of their top officials.

Such differences became noticeable last week when the Detroit Elected Officials Compensation Commission recommended a 9 percent pay increase over two years for the mayor and other elected officials of Detroit at the same time that County Executive Edward McNamara was ordering a 4 percent cut in the paychecks of his top 44 appointees and members of the county board followed suit. Perhaps McNamara's action was only symbolic, as some have said, but it was the kind of action voters understand at a time when the county is hard-pressed to meet its obligations. And even though the budget of the city of Detroit is not in as critical condition as is that of the county, Detroit could use a symbolic gesture of savings, too. For the reasons we've stated, it is probably unrealistic to even consider metropolitan government or closer cooperation between the city and county at this time. Yet as Detroit continues to lose population, and the county begins to regain its recent losses, it is proposed here as an idea whose time eventually may come.

Good news for motorists

ust before Thanksgiving, there was good news for Grosse Pointe and other area motorists from state transportation officials.

They announced plans to erect protective fencing on at least 44 more metro Detroit freeway overpasses in the next two years in an attempt to prevent vandals from throwing things at passing vehicles.

Since 1970, at least three people have been killed by objects thrown from overpasses onto metropolitan area freeways. Several others have been injured and a number of vehicles have been damaged. The missiles have included chunks of concrete, bricks, rocks, an angle iron and, reportedly, even bowling balls.

We agree with James P. Pitz, director of the Michigan Department of Transportation, who told a meeting of the State Transportation Commission that "throwing objects from bridges is nothing short of murder." In addition, it is difficult to arrest the culprits because of the nature of the crime.

Columnist Jim Fitzgerald of the Detroit Free Press reported an example of what happens in such incidents. A woman was driving on I-94 near West Grand Boulevard one morning when a crowbar smashed through the windshield of her car. Fortunately, the missile in this case remained embedded in the windshield and the motorist escaped injury.

from the Detroit police when she reported the incident to the 1st Precinct. According to Fitzgerald's account, the officer to whom the motorist complained asked her why she was bothering to report the accident, didn't ask to see the crowbar and didn't indicate any further investigation would be True, the Detroit police have more important crime to deal with and probably feel that the perpetrators of such incidents cannot be located anyway without specific evidence. Yet that kind of an incident offers additional evidence in support of screening more overpasses on area free-

The state indicated that 98 freeway overpasses now have high protective fencing but that there still are 537 unfenced overpasses that remain as potential danger spots in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties. Because it would cost $17.1 million to fence all these overpasses, the state plans to fence only 20 in 1988 and 24 more in 1989. The location of the overpasses to be fenced will be selected by the state with the advice of local officials.

While the many unfenced overpasses remain as threats to passing motorists, it is good news that the state recognizes the danger and is starting to do something to mitigate it.

The motorist didn't get much satisfaction

Perhaps I am not so noble as many. The defeat of the library's bond and millage proposals has left me feeling angry, hurt and betraved. I hate losing and it is fortunate it does not happen of Primarily this experience has left me feeling sorry. I feel sorry for those who worked so hard and expended so many, many hours on the plans and campaign. I am sorry for our community whose image of itself and the wants of its libraries must seem second-rate.

And I feel very sorry for our country when one of its affluent communities seems not to understand the importance of libraries to the fu-

The fact of the library's needs has not changed. We do not have the luxury to abandon the project. Our boards and committees must reaffirm goals and without compromise of an adequate system provide a plan that is palatable to the voters. We must also support the staff attention. These needs and our responses are a fact of life. Vigilance is a symbol of democracy and knowlege is our strength. Once more we are called upon for the communal effort to maintain our world leadership. For a firstrate Grosse Pointe, we must have first-rate libraries and the money to run them well.

Coverage excellent

To the Editor:

The Grosse Pointe News coverage of the recent local elections was excellent. I want to thank you particularly for making the residents of the City aware of the council's history of appointing new members, who subsequently have been almost automatically elected. The electorate then apparently decided to take a closer look at the candidates and not automatically return the incumbents to office. This is not to disparage the fine record of Mr. Arthur Fetters, the only current council member not previously appointed. He has a fine record of 16 years of service to our City and I'm sure that our residents, myself included, are grateful to him.

What are library options?

he Grosse Pointe Board of Education and the community at large are now considering the possible options for improvement of the public libraries following the defeat of the proposed $8.625 million bond issue and millage in the Nov. 3

At its Nov. 17 meeting, the board heard Supt. John Whritner reiterate his belief that the need for the library has not gone away despite the defeat of the bond issue and millage requests. Indeed, the district's financial needs are more pressing than ever because about four-tenths of the additional mill sought for operating expenses would have been used to fund library costs at current levels.

Just what are the options facing the board?

First, of course, it could do nothing except to cut services to fit the revenue that will be available next year.

Or it could ask the public in a second election to approve the same program that lost last month.

Or it could revamp the plan in order to reduce the amount of money involved in the proposed expansion program.

Or it could consider a smaller expansion of the Central Library that would eliminate the use of any of the South High School playing fields that had aroused some of the opposition expressed in the Nov. 3 vote.

Or it could even consider some new alternative to the expansion of the Central Library at a different site.

There may be, of course, other alternatives. But it would be wise to consider them in the light of the opposition expessed at the polls. We think at least four factors contributed to the Nov. 3 defeat.

They were the unfortunate timing of the vote less than two weeks after the Oct. 19 stock market crash; the proposed use of the South playing fields that aroused the concern of athletes as well as their parents; the concern about future parking around an expanded Central Library, and the size of the bond issue that some critics felt was not justified in these times.

Fortunately, the board has some time to review its options and determine which one should be adopted. The first practical time for another vote would be the June school election date with possible later dates being the primary election in August and the presidential election in November. The November election would have one advantage over the other two: If tradition is followed, it will attract the heaviest

Because the superintendent and the board do not face easy choices, it was wise for them to consider the community's reaction and meet several times before making their decision. If a new vote appears to be justified, the board ought to make sure that everyone understands the facts involved, and especially the millage and tax increases that would affect every taxpayer.

The tree in the corner says it all

Christmas, my favorite time of the year, is right around the holly corner. Lights, bulbs, candles, Santas, snow, snowmen, snowballs, wreaths, trees, tinsel and so on.

We could go on for years with all the decorations of Christmas, but my favorite part of Jesus Christ's birthday is the tree.

For years we would display a large, real tree in the corner of our living room. The lights would wrap around the tree like a bow on a present and once they were lit, the feeling of Christmas would send a chill up my spine. I think a good tree makes the season.

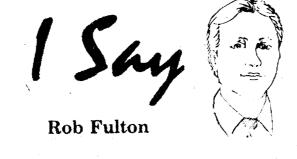

For the past five years or so, we have eliminated the hassle of mas is family. With two mem-falling needles and dried out trunks by putting a fake tree in the corner. But this hasn't given a feeling of Christmas, because my father generally stops at the corner lot where the live trees are sold and picks up some branches. And then, against better judgment, ignites a few needles at a time in the ashtray. The aroma of pine needles fills the entire house and it beats waking up on Sunday mornings to the smell of fresh-cooked ba-

Tree lights during the cold winter days and nights lift my spirits. I don't know why, but it is a tough time of the year for my father, but as usual he shows us the bright side of things.

It gives me a warm feeling to walk into a house and discover a tree, well- decorated and lit for the season. Around the holidays, the words, "You have a beautiful tree" seem to precede "hello." That's OK, just don't say hello to me before you compliment my tree, because then I may slip a piece of coal into your socks while you're wearing them.

Another true feeling of Christ-bers living outside Michigan, it's difficult to gather together, but with the emotional support of my mother we always seem to come together. I have to recall a song, "Home for the Holidays."

It's an uplifting song that touches me each year. The first year I heard it, I was on my way home from college. As I listened to it, I really came to understand what my mother meant all these years when she said, "Having my family home for the holidays is gift enough."

My family always makes a concerted effort to fulfill my mother's only wish of the year. To please her, we attend midnight mass with her. This is a small token that goes a long way. Midnight mass, with the family, is my mother's Christ-

Ever since I have been old enough to understand the meaning of family, the holidays have reminded me of the pleasures and love this time of the year brings. It is a joyous occasion to celebrate with loved ones. It is the season to be jolly and wait anxiously for that chubby man to slip down the chimney. It's the time of year to share precious moments with one another and sip spiked eggnog as the firewood burns to ashes.

Being the youngest of six children, I never had the opportunity to watch a younger brother or sister grow up. But my sister blessed our family with her son, Jason.

Jason is "my man." He gives me a warm feeling and was clearly a welcome addition to the Fulton clan. I remember the first time I watched him tear open a Christmas gift. He was so taken by the whole thing as he unleashed his tiny hands to grandma's neat wrapping. He got to the gift, smiled and went to the couch to thank grandma.

Since then I have watched him grow into a young man with courage and independence. Each Christmas his packages are wrapped with love and pleasure, and each year his smile grows bigger on that special day. I enjoy seeing my nephew mature, but the one thing I enjoy the most is the fact that he loves Christmas as much as I do. He realizes the importance of family and for a 9-year-old child, that is quite impressive. He and I share a great deal and I thank God we were blessed with him.

A Fulton tradition has been to always open our arms to people. Over the years boyfriends and girlfriends have come and gone, but one young woman I am pleased to say is still around is my fiancee, Sandy Gierada.

Five years ago Sandy and I introduced one another to our respective families. We split our Christmas between both homes so I guess you could say we get the best of both worlds. Sandy and I will share our fifth Christmas together this year and each one gets better. My family has accepted her from day one as her family did to me. Having Sandy with me during Christmas brings joy and laughter, love and hope. Hope that someday we'll be coming home for the holidays to visit our families and see that large tree in mom's corner.

Sandy and I will spend our last Christmas together as single people. Next year we will dress our own tree, hang our own lights and sip our special eggnog. If we have a fireplace, then we'll sing songs and ponder that someday we have a family just like the ones we grew up in.

Happy Holidays!

It was the day before Thanksgiving and all through the town, all the people were stirring but Grandpa was gone.

That was the fate for a small family from Kentucky who had made their way to Detroit last week. A 32-year-old woman and her three children, aged 12, 11 and 3, along with the woman's 17-year-old cousin, had come up on a surprise visit to the woman's father, but he was headed to Chicago for the holiday.

As if that weren't bad enough, there were no other relatives in the city and her car broke down. When she went to a service station on Mack in the Woods, her purse, with all her money and credit cards, was reported stolen.

On top of everything, the 17vear-old boy was sick. He was soaked to the bone from the rain and had a bad case of the chills. A Woods officer contacted the Grosse Pointe Crisis Club.

Anthony Alfonsi and Richand his 1987 Spartan team, and ard Deisler, members of the offer thanks to the State of Michclub, arranged for the family to receive lodging at the Parkcrest alumnus of Western Michigan signs throughout the state Motel, and paid for the repairs on the car.

Park council rezones Jefferson Avenue site

By Margle Reins Smith

A parcel of land on East Jefferson between Westchester and Nottingham in Grosse Pointe Park has been rezoned OS-1 and B-1. The Park council voted 6-1 in favor of the zoning amendment at the regular Monday evening meeting Nov. 23. Councilwoman Carroll Evola registered the only no vote.

Approximately 50 spectators heard recommendations from city planner Brandon M. Rogers. The spectators applauded after the amendment was approved.

Included in the amendment was a provision for the setback on the OS-1 portion of the site to be no deeper than the average front yard of the existing buildings on the block, but not greater than 50 feet.

The land was previously zoned B-2 on the Nottingham side, which is a broad retail zoning that allows restaurants — including those that serve liquor, hardware stores, print shops, or shops for plumbing, painting, dry cleaning and laundry. On the Westchester side it was zoned RA, or one-family residential. A boarded-up gas station and a vacant restaurant are currently located on the property, and the believe the best land use transi-estimates on the cost of demolishing the two structures.

Earlier this year, Pointe resident Fred Ruffner had proposed an office complex development for the site, which consisted of an L-shaped building facing Jefferson and Westchester and a second building near Nottingham. A 37-car parking lot was included in Ruffner's plan. When neighborhood residents signed a petition opposing the rezoning of the residential portion of the site, the Park council did not approve the zoning changes necessary for Ruffner's project. Ruffner withdrew his proposal on Sept. 19.

At Monday's meeting, Rogers praised the city for upgrading many of its areas. "How Grosse Pointe Park goes - so goes the Pointes," he said, emphasizing the Park's role as a major entry point from Detroit to all of the Grosse Pointes. He said development along East Jefferson is critically important to residents as well as the business community.

"While I appreciate the concern of residents on Westchester Road to protect their neighborhood's edges from further commercialization and traffic problems," he said in his report, "I city has requested preliminary tion here would be a low-profile office building with sufficient screened parking and no curb and access to Westchester.'

His recommendation was for OS-1 zoning for lots 625, 626, 627 and lot J (nearest Westchester) and B-1 zoning for lots 17-21 (nearest Nottingham.)

In his report, Rogers said that office zoning along Westchester is preferable to retail business, because it would permit office uses which would be quieter, with shorter hours and no evening or Sunday hours; would have no excessive trash or garbage problems; and would need less outdoor commercial advertising. "Also," he said in the report, "I believe there is a demand for white collar, business service space and professional and medical offices in the Grosse Pointes.'

OS-1 zoning allows all types of professional offices, such as attorneys, physicians, banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, municipal buildings and accountants.

B-1 zoning is a light retail designation, such as card shops, gift shops, drugstores, party stores, delicatessons, shoe repair shops, children's clothing stores, as well as all OS-1 uses.

Rogers also told the council he wanted to prevent East Jefferson from becoming a sterile strip of offices. "You need neighborhood services for your people," he

Park City Manager John Crawford said that four or five developers have expressed interest in the Jefferson Avenue site. Three had submitted formal plans at the time of the Ruffner proposal. One proposal was from Royal Oak-based George Stucky Associates for a two-story office building. Another was from Jon G. Velick Properties Inc., based in Farmington Hills. Crawford said that John Hilberry is still interested in the site and that two more developers have expressed interest, but have not submitted formal proposals.

"We're not just selling the property," said Crawford, "we're accepting proposals for development and will select the best plan. We will be marketing it around the first of the year.'

Councilman Vernon Ausherman and Mayor Palmer Heenan expressed their desire to find a developer as soon as possible. "I see an immediate need for a business here," said Ausherman, "so that people do not perceive Grosse Pointe Park as on the downgrade.

From The Capitol Easing fear of medical costs for elderly

By William R. Bryant Jr. State Representative

A House Republican Task Force has introduced legislation to provide for the separation of assets and income of married couples when one or the other seeks application for long-term care services. Only the assets of the individual seeking long-term care would be considered when determining eligibility for Medicaid assistance.

The bill provides that if assets (excluding house, car and furnishings) are less than $25,000, home will be allowed to keep all of them without loss of medicaid eligibility of the spouse. If the assets are between $25,000 and $50,000, the remaining spouse would be allowed to keep $25,000 worth. If the assets are more than $50,000, the spouse at home would be allowed to keep

The remaining spouse would also be allowed to keep up to $15,000 in yearly income. Anything more would be used to pay for long-term care.

DELIVERY IN TIME FOR CHRISTMAS ON IN-STOCK MERCHAINDISE.

By removing the fear of possible poverty when one spouse enters a nursing home, these bills should encourage couples not to divest their assets. And, in most cases, couples will be able to pay for private care for a longer period of time before turning to Medicaid for assistance.

Also, nursing homes or facilities would be required to provide a written statement to individuals 50 years or older explaining their right to divide resources and income with spouses for the purpose of qualifying for long term care Medicaid assistance.

Michigan should be a leader in the development of long-term care alternatives for its citizens. The House Republican Task Force has made a large number of recommendations to deal with the most serious issues affecting seniors - those of finances, poor health and the ability to keep up their homes. They are a first step, and a much-needed beginning, in meeting the needs of those individuals who have long cared for others and who now need care themselves.

Thanks

To the Editor:

I'd like to thank the PTOs of Brownell, Pierce and Parcells middle schools, the Foundation for Academic Achievement and the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library for sponsoring the writing workshop by Newbury Honor Book author Paul Fleischman earlier this

Association says thanks

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Grosse Pointe Village Association, I wish to thank all the people who made our Santa Claus Parade possible.

A special thanks goes to the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club. In addition to volunteering as parade marshals, they made a substantial donation to the parade fund. The list of special contributors has grown this year. Grosse Pointe AMC, Edward P. Frolich, Michigan Truck Spring, National Bank of Detroit, Kercheval Company, Crain Communications and Comerica Bank were most generous.

Meade Leasing once again generously provided us with the use of four new Dodge Dakotas to pull the floats. Hood Sails Great Lakes kindly allowed us to invade their sail loft to prepare and store the floats. Thanks, too, to Pointe Electronics for the sound systems in Santa's sleigh and at the podium in front of Jacobson's.

The combined efforts of the City, Farms and Park police departments were terrific and kept both watchers and marchers safe....

A big thank you is due the Grosse Pointe Theatre. The "Bug," Surprise Box, Disney heads and much more, all added to the success of the parade. The theater group also blew up more than 1,000 balloons which were given out on the parade. route. Mae Gallagher and Rick Selke deserve special thanks for their contributions. Mae organized all the scout groups and the Grosse Pointe Theatre, while Rick again acted as art director, creating all the wonderful floats. Perhaps the biggest thank-you belongs to Jane Nutter, who coordinated the entire parade. Her efforts were visibly outstanding.

Finally, I wish to thank all the community marchers, old and young alike, because it's their continued support that makes our parade special. This year we had more than 800 community people not counting the musical and specialty groups in our evergrowing lineup.

The Grosse Pointe Village Association wishes all of you the happiest of holiday sea-

Grateful

To the Editor:

There are times when gratitude seems a difficult emotion to adequately express. Having so many of you to thank leaves us unable to name names. But, if you are one of the giving people who participated in making the Lake St. Clair Symphony Orchestra's Autumn Auction such a tremendous success, please consider this sincere message of appreciation yours.

Perhaps you are among those merchants, business owners, community members or friends who donated all of the wonderful items for auction. Maybe you volunteered your time to help with organization, or your music to provide us entertainment. And, of course, the auction results could never have been so favorable without those of you who made such generous bids.

You made the auction possible. You made it a great success. You made the day memorable and fun. But, most deserving of our thanks is your overwhelming support in recognition of a truly worthy cause. You have given us a new opportunity and we invite you to celebrate with us. Come and experience the reward of your investment when we perform the Nutcracker Suite on Dec. 5. Let us say Happy Holidays in the way that we know best.

Is babysitting illegal?

To the Editor:

Babysitting is illegal in Grosse Pointe Woods. Babysitting is illegal in Grosse Pointe Woods. It doesn't sound right and I still do not believe it, but babysitting IS illegal in Grosse Pointe Woods!

Of course the city planning commissioners will tell you, "we never said that. We do not want an ordinance changed that would allow 'family day care homes' to operate in our city.'

City ordinances prohibit businesses from being run out of the home, and since the babysitter gets paid, this activity does not qualify for the home occupation exemption the ordinance provides.

So what are all the babysitters to do? "Go underground." That's right. That is what my wife has been told to do. Forget the license you have from the State of Michigan. Do it carefully, quietly, secretly...But the neighbors, what about the neighbors? What if they turn you in? Can you go to jail?

What has happened here? A vision of a little girl named Anne Frank comes to mind. A neighbor reports to the authorities that a neighbor is breaking the law. Why not offer a bounty? Offer $50 to anyone reporting a babysitter that leads to their arrest and conviction. That should really clean this blight out of our community!

Please excuse the cynical tone, but if the ladies who go through the trouble of getting licensed by the state are illegally caring for children in their own home, then surely the unlicensed homes, those "under-ground" homes are just as illegal. Oh, they're there. Just take a look at the classified section of this paper. How many do you suppose there are: 20, 30, 50?

So what has happened here? What has happened is a few, self-centered, envious people, with nothing better to do but look for trouble, have complained to the authorities about my wife babysitting in our home. The ultra-conservative appointed city planning commissioners have agreed with the city authorities and taken the easy way out: Do nothing. "We recommend that there be no change to our city ordinance...

"But you cause all this extra traffic and extra noise.

I challenge the notion you can even hear a car door close across the street. Can you hear your neighbor close his car door? Sure you can if you are watching him, but if you are doing any kind of activity in your home, like cooking, talking, watching TV... you would need superhuman hearing. If you have the time, sit and watch for all the cars coming and leaving your neighbor's drive. I agree, you will hear every door close. Besides, ever since the cease and desist order. my wife has been picking up and dropping off the kids to cut down the traffic to a minimum. This complaint about noise is very petty.

"But it's a business. Your wife gets paid." Sure she gets paid. The money she gets helps pay for the food the kids eat, the laundering of the bedding, and a portion of the utilities, taxes, insurance etc. Would it make any difference if she cared for the kids for free?

Look up the definition of business in the dictionary: an activity entered into to make a profit. The element of profit has nothing to do with the daily care provided for the kids. This complaint that we are getting something at expense of our neighbors is borne out of envy.

It was obvious at the city planning commission's public hearing on Nov. 17, that the majority of the citizens were for an allowance to be made for babysitting. A minority of the citizens and unfortunately, eight out of nine city commissioners. want babysitting to remain illegal.

I am alarmed, and very disappointed...babysitting is illegal in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Racism is suburban problem, too

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

Institutional racism is still with us, years after it was outlawed. It has gone underground, according to the Race Relations Task Force of the Detroit Strategic Planning Project. One of the objectives of the task force report, issued officially Nov. 20, is to determine the extent of racism as practiced by banks, insurance companies and real estate brokers, and root it out.

"I personally, honestly, don't know what the facts are," said Grosse Pointer Alfred Glancy III, who co-chaired the project with Arthur Johnson of Wayne State University. "But a number of Detroiters clearly believe that redlining, discriminatory insurance practices and real estate steering still exist. The institutions deny it."

So the task force has recommended that an independent, neutral body examine the record to determine the facts. "It's designed to remove the influences or clearly show that they're not there," Glancy said.

Racism can be extremely subtle. Take the example of a Detroit corporation hiring an executive from another city. He or she may ask advice of co-workers on where to look for a house.

If the executive is white, "I'll bet you that a lot of people are going to say don't live in Detroit," Glancy said. Conversely, "Do they suggest that a black live in Grosse Pointe? I don't

"This is a different kind of steering," he said. "It isn't done by Realtors, but it perpetuates housing patterns. You can figure it out mathematically - the Detroit area is the most racially polarized in the nation."

The report quotes 1985 U.S. Census Bureau estimates as saying that eight out of nine Detroit metropolitan area blacks live in the central city, while eight out of nine whites live in the sub-contributed to white flight and economic disinvestment in Detroit," the report says.

In the process, the money has left the city.

"A whole lot of business decisions were made by a whole bunch of people that were maybe well-intentioned, but the effect is what you see," Glancy said. It may be possible for someone from the far reaches of the seven-county area to ignore the central city or even let it sink, but Glancy said he believes the closer-in suburbs are inextricably linked to Detroit.

"I don't diminish the crime problem in any way," he said, but I believe the suburbs can't prosper if the city goes under. It's damn naive of Grosse Pointers to think the city can go under and we can live happily ever after.'

What is at issue here is "a subtle attitudinal kind of thing." Some suburbanites have a view of themselves as metropolitan, some as residents only of their own town. The view determines whether they go downtown for events, whether they contribute their time or money to cultural or charitable groups, whether they work downtown and, most especially, whether they see themselves as part of a con-is complete. So whites always attribute situations to structural changes because these are not supposed to be intentional changes. . . . So all of the whites here today, I know you don't intend to be racist, and I want to exonerate you of intent. On the other hand, I want to say to most of the whites today, what you do has created disadvantaged circumstances for blacks, Hispanics, other racial minorities and for women, and that's

One example of such a structural change was expressed that same day by Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, Glancy said. "I've heard the mayor speak a lot of times about a lot of subjects, and sometimes I get mad," Glancy said, "but this address came from the heart."

Young blamed the dislocation from expressway construction for the destruction of the black neighborhoods:

"The expressway came next to the east side. I'm sure they had a number of routes they could have taken, but I-75, the Chrysler Expressway, went straight down Hastings Street which was the major black business street in Detroit. At that time, Detroit had more black retail businesses, as well as homeowners, than any other city in the United States...Expressways, more than any other city in the nation, have assaulted the tax base of this city, have truncated and isolated neighborhoods and forced people to move.'

There have been charges that the Strategic Plan is a rehash of old ideas by a group of powerful people who have no real feel for neighborhood problems. Glancy acknowledged the criticism, but isn't about to give up on the plan as a result. He said he expects corporation money to be devoted to its goals - and he doesn't expect city hall to ignore

"I'm confident that the mayor is taking it seriously, and that's what's important," he said.

State Sen. John Kelly said he has introduced a measure now under consideration in the Senate to form a panel to address Strategic Plan issues.

"I'm hopeful that something will come out of (the planning process)," Glancy said, "but real-"It is not the intent. Grosse Pointe students help out around the Casa

Staff Writer

Five years ago, a dynamic woman and a few students from the University Liggett School Spanish Club started volunteering their services to Casa Maria. Today some 70 ULS students and dozens more from Grosse Pointe South and North high schools are participating in two major volunteer efforts for the Detroit organization, to the point where not all the volunteers can participate at once.

Mariella Brown, a ULS Spanish teacher, sought to use some Spanish students to support a worthy project.

After doing a little research, with a Spanish flavor - Casa Maria.

Casa Maria Family Services was established by the League of Catholic Women in 1943 to serve the needs of the diverse popula- been with the program since she Detroit. The center provides a variety of programs including recreational activities, academic tutoring and counseling for children and adults. All programs at Casa Maria are free.

Sponsored by the Michigan Department of Social Services, United Foundation, Office of Juvenile Justice and with grants, the organization is also aided by the contributions and fundraising activities of volunteers.

'Our Spanish Club raises money through donut sales every Friday," Brown said. In of her volunteer spirit and en- the last three years the program ergy by organizing interested at ULS has grown significantly, and has spread to both public high schools in Grosse Pointe.

"You feel like they are doing Brown found an organization something worthwhile," said Elizabeth Birgbauer, student coordinator for services to Casa Maria, "and it is fun to speak Spanish with the children."

Birgbauer, a ULS senior, has

"I call up the other two school coordinators and organize which Saturdays our schools will go to Casa Maria," she said. "Right now we alternate every other week."

The volunteers go to the Casa Maria headquarters on Trumbull almost every Saturday morning. They work with younger children from 3 to 8 years old. The volunteers raise money for Casa Maria and purchase recreational and craft items. The students play basketball, baseball, soccer and just about any sport, depending on the weather and the number of youths who attend.

"The students also do crafts with the children," Brown said. "At Thanksgiving and Christmas, they help the children make cards for their parents."

"Back in 1984 I spent the entire afternoon swinging on a swing with one little girl," Birgbauer said. "It was like she never had that kind of personal one- on-one attention. Ever since then, she comes running up to me with a smile and a hug.'

The volunteers organize two major events during the year. A summer picnic is held in June at ULS, and the volunteers raise money and organize a Christmas party, which is scheduled for Dec. 13.

"The Christmas party is the biggest event for the year," Brown said. "One student plays Santa, we bring in a magician, and volunteers from all three schools help get everything ready.'

This year, due to the number of available volunteers, some students will help with setting things up, but will not be able to attend the actual event, because there simply isn't enough room.

Over the years the Christmas party has grown so large that the number of children who attend had to be limited. This year Casa Maria is accepting sign-up for 150 children.

"Two years ago we had 250 children from 5 to 12 years old," Brown said. "It was just too many. Last year we had 200 and that was just too much too."

Students from University Liggett School have been volunteering their time to benefit Casa Maria in Detroit. These students were on hand last week to pick up turkeys at Village Market in the Farms, Standing, from left, are Susan Stefanski, Paul Fozo, Ryan Strowger, Bill Schervish, Julian Go, Jon Poland, Village Market owner Alex Bell, ULS teacher Mariella Brown and Peter Brown; kneeling, Charles Fauntroy and Laura Rizzo.

Not only do the volunteers raise money for all the food, decorations and the magician, they collect gifts for each child.

The ULS Giving Tree provides many of the gifts. The tree, set up at ULS, has tags on it with the name, age and sex of the child who is to receive a toy. Students pick the tags off the tree and bring in a gift for one of the children at Casa Maria. Last year some 75 gifts were generated from the Giving Tree and the Spanish Club purchased the South, and North students, a number of students will dress as elves and a few others will put on a Christmas skit for the child-

Rosanna Pardo, executive director for Casa Maria, said the students help mainly with the children in the 6 to 12 age group. Recreational activities are provided through sports, arts and crafts.

"We are really very lucky to have these students," Pardo said. "They give one-on-one personal attention to the children. They are always very generous and aware and attentive to the needs of the agency. They devote their time, effort and even money, and are very willing to help us and are very concerned about the children.'

During the summer buses are rented to pick up children from Casa Maria and bring them to the ULS campus. About 50 or 60 children then have a picnic and play outdoor games.

"As teenagers I feel this is the best thing we can do," Birgbauer said. "It feels good to contribute something of ourselves. We are not adults and don't have the money to donate, so we donate our time."

"So many teenagers are involved in this," Brown said. People should be aware. There are always people who say that teenagers are no good, but they should be aware that what they are doing here takes a lot of effort. They make items for bake sales and give up their Saturday mornings. The students who run the donut sale have to get to the bakery by 7 a.m. It takes a lot of people to make this work.'

It was cold and wet, but winter jackets, ski caps and a wool blanket made everything warm and toasty for these children who lined the streets of Grosse Pointe Friday morning. Below, a member of the Lake-shore YMCA Indian Guides and Princesses group waves to the crowd as he walks along Kercheval.

Chef Gregg Garavaglia demonstrated how to make a caramel-topped apple pie for Mrs. Van Almen's first-graders at Poupard Elementary. The children assisted in the preparation and then enjoyed eating their creations. The activity culminated a foods unit and also brought a career in the restaurant business into focus. Garavaglia later was the guest chef on Channel 7's Friday Feast.

Tower awarded top journalistic honors

For the third time in the last four years, Tower, Grosse Pointe South's student newspaper, has won two of the top awards in national scholastic journalism competition, according to the newspaper's adviser, Robert Button.

The paper was named among the 20 best student publications in the United States, and a special section on substance abuse was one of six student projects honored by the Los Angeles Times for Editorial Leadership.

Judges from the Kansas City Star selected the Tower to receive one of 20 regional Pacemaker Awards, one of only four representing the east regional competition.

The honor was given by the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the National Scholastic Press Association at its convention Nov. 22.

The Tower also won regional honors in 1984, and last year advanced from regional status to win one of six national Pacemaker Awards. This is the eighth time since 1967 that the Tower has received the Pacemaker recognition.

The substance abuse project published last year included a survey of student use of alcohol and other drugs, a report on efforts by the schools to deal with

The project was directed by Linda Gaglio, editor of the paper last year and now a freshman at the University of Michigan. The survey was conducted by Sara Wasinger, editor of the Tower this year. Others involved with Winners were selected by editors of the Los Angeles Times and announced at the NSPA convention. South is the only school in the country to have received three Editorial Leadership awards in the four years the prize has been given.

The Tower was also recognized in 1984 for an expose on donations to the Detroit Zoo's Adoptan-Animal program and in 1986 for its coverage of teen suicide.

School at Detroit's Jackson Junior High and Finney High was a different story.

"I was always the tallest kid in the class and when you're growing up, you don't want to be different than other kids. I never had a date until I was 20. I always had to sit in the back of the class and when we'd have square dancing in music class, there was only one guy who was anywhere near as tall as me.

'When I took driver's training, the instructor told me that I'd have to have a car custommade so that I could fit into it,' Appelle recalls."Do you know how that makes a 16-year-old girl feel to hear that?"

Appelle says that despite all that, she managed to survive her teens with both her outgoing personality and her sense of humor intact. As an adult, she's had to put up with shorter dates who'd stuff newspaper in their shoes to appear taller, dress shops and clothing stores which tend to discriminate against tall women and the long, slow double-takes she'd get from potential dance partners as she rose from her chair to walk to the dance

Tip Toppers, which is both a social club and a support group, was instrumental in helping Appelle deal with all of that.

"It (the club) does a lot more for women than men, I think. It really helps improve your selfesteem. I know it gave me my femininity back," Appelle says.

Joining the club and being other people. It's nice to dance with a man taller than I am. And when I'm around people from the club, I don't think a good time," Appelle says.

have something in common with feet-2 for men to be members. A prospective member must attend a business meeting/party and two social functions to be eligible. Dues are $15 yearly and the minimum age requirement is 21. The club's hotline number -278-TALL - details the group's current activities, many of which are open to the general public, Appelle says. We wear T-shirts that have all the answers to all the silly questions people ask tall people, like No, the weather is not fine up here,' and 'No, my nickname isn't Shorty.' We just have a lot of fun," she adds.

Which is exactly what Appelle says she'll continue to do as "Miss Tall Detroit." "I really had a ball doing this. And the funny thing is I hadn't intended on running again. I was first runner-up last year, but I thought that since I was going to the convention this year anyway, I might as well try to win Miss Tall and go as the local club's representative.

Voting was done by the membership in the Detroit pageant with results based on the best answers to questions and overall presentation. The international pageant will be more difficult, Appelle says. There'll be a panel of five judges and the international pageant has no local club affiliations. We will have to do a twominute presentation on ourselves and our city, as well as participate in the evening gown, bathing suit and personal interview part of the competition.

"I'm taking it seriously. I'll be enrolled in a public speaking class this winter and I've already started looking for a choreographer to help me with my routine," Appelle says.

A contingent from the Detroit club will be in Los Angeles with Appelle next summer to help root her on. The international pageant is not a typical "beauty contest," Appelle says. The prize is free travel for a year to club functions across the country. The woman who won last year's event was in her 50s.

"I'd love to win. But if I don't, at least I will have had the fun of trying. And that's the point,

That and learning to feel good about herself, Appelle says.

"I decided a long time ago that you have to take what you've been given and make the best of it. And if I had to give advice to a tall girl?

"I'd tell her to have a heart-toheart talk with herself and realize that she's not going to get any shorter. You've got to take what you have and make it work. Just stand up straight and let other people see that you like yourself," Appelle says.

What you should know before buying almost anything

Smithsonian News Service

When it comes to gift giving, whether for the holidays, birthdays or other special times, deciding what to give family and friends on your shopping list may be far easier than assuring that their presents are the best your money can buy. As prices soar — espcially for art, antiques and crafts - many people are making out another kind of list to help them judge the quality of possible purchases.

In today's auction and sales markets, that task often requires the skills and eye of the connoisseur, a person defined as having expert knowledge and keen discrimination in matters of taste. Whether shopping for an antique quilt or a handcrafted, contemporary chest, buyers should "approach every object with an inquiring mind as well as with an inquiring eye." That's the practical advice offered by one expert. Says another, "Connoisseurship is not just having a wonderful eye, but being able to express the reasons you like or do not like a work."

The stakes in connoisseurship can be unbelievably high. The things made and used by a civilization are a basic expression of its people. "To know man we must study the things he has made," says cultural historian E. McClung Fleming, long associated with Delaware's Winterthur Museum. Inarguably, Michelangelo's Pieta, Rembrandt's portraits and Van Gogh's landscapes are all superlative treas-

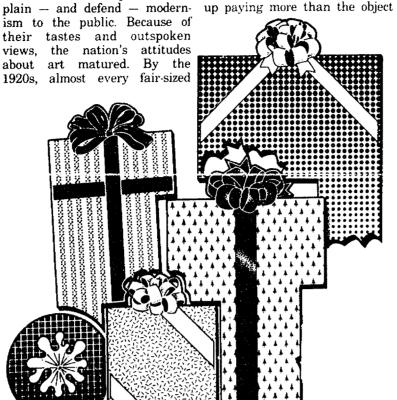

One nation's borrowing from another is in itself a form of connoisseurship, one making a judgment about the other. At Syon, the Duke of Northumberland's house just outside London, visitors almost always stop to admire the meditative, dying warrior made of bronze. The figure was copied from a marble version at Rome's Capitoline Museum, and that in turn was based on an ancient Greek bronze.

During the culturally dark centuries of the medieval age. the matter of aesthetic judgment hardly arose at all. In the Renaissance, however, a gentleman was expected to exhibit knowledge and appreciation of the fine arts. By the 18th century, the Italian Giovanni Piranesi's fanciful drawings of ancient structures — art that itself today is highly valued - quickened the appreciation of the past

Without an ancient cultural history on which to draw, American industrial barons of the 19th century - collectors like J. P. Morgan, Henry Frick, Andrew Mellon and John D. Rockefeller - looked to time-tested European art treasures as the perfect shortcut for topping their newly made wealth with status and culture. Luckily for today's great American museums, where many of their purchases now can be found, these men turned to influential connoisseurs to monitor their voracious collecting appetites.

A new breed of art enthusiasts

Undoubtedly, these connoisseurs capitalized on the shaky reputation of modern art to buy first-rate works for a sou. Today, explains Christopher Burge, president of the international auction house Christie's, a 'scarcity" of superb works of older art is driving many prices through the roof. In New York this fall, an 18th-century Philadelphia tea table sold for $1 million - the first piece of American furniture to do so. A 1959 Jasper Johns painting sold in November for an unprecedented $3.63 million.

·Burge attributes these prices to three factors: export controls enacted by some governments on American city that did not have is worth. This inflates the market."

Burge was speaking to members of the Smithsonian Resident Associate Program, which recently conducted a course to advise budding connoisseurs on market strategies and to give tips on taste. As for the prices, one participant, a gallery owner, maintained that "auction fever" has tended to obscure fine quality objects that are available from other sources at far lower

Kendall Taylor, moderator of the course and herself an arts consultant, offered eight factors by which possible purchases can be judged: special aesthetic quality, provenance, rarity, technique, condition, historical significance, authenticity and artist's reputation. But first ask, Do I enjoy this? Does this object ring true?"

"Some objects just have the ability to make a deep and lasting impression on you - they affect you emotionally," Taylor said, listing such characteristics as unity, harmony, order, rhythm, clarity and strength assets that the connoisseur might seek in the coveted item. When there is ornament applied to an object, consider why it is there. Does it accomplish its pur-

And yet "there are things that just can't be explained" by any checklist about what makes a work exceptional - "a Rembrandt self-portrait, for example," noted National Gallery of Art curator Arthur K. Wheelock. "You can't explain the painting's power by brushstrokes, technique, whatever. You almost don't want to say anything."

A small oil sketch by 19thcentury American landscape painter Albert Bierstadt is a work filled with such special qualities. "The artist is looking right at the sun. That shows a certain courage," says Ted Cooper, a Washington, D.C. gallery owner. "And though the work is devoid of figures and action, there is a stillness. This serene quality is the painting's strength."

Furniture collectors Richard and Gloria Manney of New York offered a practical tip related to quality: "What usually loses value is the mediocre object not the style or period of the work. You should buy the best you can afford in your area of interest." Suggests Cooper: 'Look and read and ask. But buying for investment is the wrong thing to do. The only reason to buy art is to enhance your

An object's intrinsic value may be a subjective matter, but there are other factors that are not. Provenance and historical significance, for instance, often influence an object's value, so potential purchasers should try to find out who created the work as well as who has owned it. "The famous artists are the ones who come up with new ideas," Taylor told the aspiring connoisseurs attending the Smithsonian course. "They establish a trend by working in a new way."

The item also might have played a unique role in history. Did the painting cause a scandal? Was it mentioned in someone's memoirs? Was a treaty signed on this table? The answers can affect prices.

Rarity and condition are critical in evaluating art works. It helps to be a chemist these days, Taylor and Wheelock agreed, but many people are stalking art and antiques with inexpensive black lights that show up trou-nique is not exceptional.

blesome repairs and overpainting. "Older paintings may have some restoration," Gloria Manney noted, "but you don't want the high points, the hands, the face, the nose to be restored." However, the rarer the object, the more restoration the connoisseur is prepared to accept, one scholar notes. "Each person must be his own judge and set his own criteria."

The reputation of the artist enters the picture, but it's important to distinguish between an artist whose reputation is based on fine work and one just being marketed effectively, Taylor commented. Moreover, some artists have good ideas, but their tech-

Giving life greater value

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

Immortality, perhaps not the lasting fame accorded gods and heroes, but remembrance by those who have shared lives is an important concept for older people. It is comforting to know that you will live on in the memories of those you have loved and who have loved you.

Young people are not often concerned with such matters. They are out there in the busy world making contact with others every day, meeting new friends, working at jobs they enjoy. At the very least these positions are satisfying if only for the monetary reward which for many is a sign of worth. You don't worry about being remembered. Your daily routine - a "hi there" a bit of conversation, a lunch or dinner date. Hey, these are my friends. What's this about being remembered? You're so busy, you wish sometimes a few people would forget you.

But the years roll by and sooner than you think, a once close-knit family has unraveled as each one goes his own way. Friends move or die. Your job, the anchor of your existence has gone to a newcomer and you are retired. You are old and you are alone. It happens.

You begin to wonder. Is this all there is? Have you lived all those years to only arrive at a point where the only smile or greeting comes from a clerk in a store, your only contacts casual and impersonal?

Will you get up in the morning, go through the day and go back to bed at night without knowing the warming touch of someone who really cares about you as an individual? And finally will you leave this earth without anyone beside you to let you know you will be missed? A party no one attends is a dismal social failure. A funeral no one attends is a sad epitaph to a life. Everyone wants to live on in someone's memory somewhere.

Those with perfect faith find consolation in religious beliefs. "I'm never alone," they tell themselves. "God is with me always. When others forget, He remembers." Such believers are envied.

Others take comfort in the theory of reincarnation. I am here. I was here before. I will live again in a new and different body, perhaps in better times and better circumstances. For them this life is transitory. They will return to do it all over again. But what of those who cherish the years left to them and want to make them as rewarding as possible. What are they to do to improve their lives, to eradicate that sense of worthlessness, to make a mark as a person worth knowing with something of value to offer?

There's no point in bringing up the many contributions already made as head of a family, in the work world or as a concerned citizen. Those thoughts may be reassuring to you, but of little interest to anyone today.

Looking at it from another point of view, a person who has contributed has enjoyed the satisfaction of accomplishment. The rewards were garnered as you went along. Only the memory of active days, boundless energy and fun-filled days spent with relatives and friends pay dividends now. If this is not enough, then it is time for new investments. It is not easy but if you want to become a part of the world again, the effort must be made by you. No one else can do it for you. Your children have their own lives and problems. They are there when you need them, but not on a day-in and day-out basis to fill out empty spaces in your life.

When they were growing up, you were the center of their lives as they were yours. Now they have other allegiances and should be free of presumed obligations or demands. Dutiful relationships are not happy relation-

It is a difficult process to move out into a world that doesn't seem interested in you as a person. Sometimes it seems like there is no room for you in a youth-oriented society. But there are many older people who are lonely and anxious to make new friends. These are the people to seek out. They can be a surrogate family who can fill in, but not take place of the natural family. They, too, want to share the little events, common interests, problems and happy times that bind people together in friendship. It is they who can be with you until the end and it is they who will remember you for what you are today.

These new friends will value you for what you are now. This valued place in the lives of others is worth making an effort to attain. It assures you of a mortality as the person you are as well as that of the person you

It is never too late to make new friends and cultivate new interests. If you are hesitant, remember there are others who are lonely and long for friendship. The common problem of men and women in the upper age bracket is loneliness. Doctors say illness, apparent senility and despair are often caused by a desperate need for communication with others.

There are many ways of reaching out and creating a circle of friends to brighten your days. Volunteering is one. This can be a most rewarding way of creating a niche for yourself in the lives of others. There are groups and people who need you. For most people, the urge to be needed is one that gives meaning to their lives.

In most organizations and church groups, there is a strong social bond between volunteers who give their time. They plan together, work together and enjoy social events together.

Thieves gained entry to Rand Drugs in the Farms overnight Nov. 2021, by cutting a hole in the roof of the building on Mack.

Drugs were taken from drawers and shelves in the store. Large quantities of Ritalin, Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat Magnet' Diet Pill Guarantees Fast Weight Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)-An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two profit inent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly 'guarantees' that you will easily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

No Dieting—Eat Normally Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You will start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire." There has never been anything like it before. It is a totally new major medical breakthrough for weight loss

(worldwide patent pending). Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in fat particles. Then, all that trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body because it cannot be digested.

Within 2 days you will notice a change in the color of your stool as the fat particles are being eliminated. "Pills Do All the Work"

According to the doctors, the fatmagnet pills do all the work while you quickly lose fat with no starvation diet menus to follow, no calorie counting. no exercising, and no hunger pangs. It is 100% safe. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

The fat-magnet pills have just been offered to the American public and are already sweeping the country with record sales and reports of dramatic weight loss. It's the "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fatmagnet pills (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. lessen the risk of fires with annual inspections

Staff Writer

Roasting chestnuts or popcorn over a warming fire is nearly everyone's idea of holiday fun, but don't let that tradition turn your holiday into a nightmare.

Recently, a fire on Renaud in the Woods was caused by a fireplace that had apparently deteriorated and allowed heat and flame to catch the interior walls on fire.

Woods building inspector Earl Wakely said that everyone who uses a fireplace should make regular visual inspections of the interior and exterior of the fireplace and chimney. Such problems as chinks in mortar or small openings in the fire clay can lead to heat being transmitted to the wooden headers holding the brick in place.

"Over a period of time, this can lead to charring and eventually the wood can ignite," Wakely said.

This type of fire can lead to a serious structural blaze that can be difficult to extinguish. The ers, but the situation could have fire, seeking air, winds its way through the walls, and as in the case on Renaud, reaches the attic where there is ventilation and the chance for greater spread of flames.

The Renaud fire was quickly extinguished by Woods firefightbeen much more serious, Wakely noted.

One of the main things to do if using a fireplace is to have both the interior and exterior of the fireplace and chimney inspected by a professional on a regular basis.

Fire Chief Sam Candella said the Farms has had three chimney fires since the beginning of the heating season. Many of the homes in his city are older and often the chimneys are in need of repair.

"You should have a visual inspection made of your fireplace and chimney every year," Candella said. "If you burn two or three cords of wood a year, you should have your chimney cleaned annually.

Inspection of the fireplace and chimney should be done by a professional, Candella added.

"Have it checked by a good, reputable, insured chimney sweep," Candella said. "The stakes are too high."

If a fire does occur in the chimney, the first thing to do is to call the fire department. While chimney fires are often confined the the chimney area, they do cause the brick and mortar to crack and can cause the fire to spread.

Lake level

Lake St. Clair's water level at the end of October was about 22 inches below what it was one year ago and about two inches below one month ago. At the end of October, the lake elevation was at 574.70 feet above the mean water level at Father Pointe, Quebec.

The October monthly mean level was about 15 inches above the long-term average. This level was about 24 inches below the all-time October monthly mean high, which was set in 1986, and about 43 inches above the alltime October monthly mean low, which was set in 1934.

For mariners, the end of October level was 36 inches above chart-datum.

The six-month forecast of levels of Lake St. Clair shows that the lake is expected to be above its long-term average level during the next six months. The forecast shows that at the end of November, Lake St. Clair will be about five inches below what it was at the end of October. The lake is expected to continue its seasonal decline into February.

At the end of April 1988, levels are expected to be about 12 inches below what they were at the same time in 1987. The April mean would be above the long-term average level for that month but 20 inches below the all-time high mean for April, which was set in 1986.

put out a chimney fire," Candella said. "That will definitely cause the brick and mortar to crack. To avoid that we use a special carbon dioxide cartridge, which usually puts the fire out quickly."

Those cartridges are available through fireplace dealers and at hardware stores.

Both Wakely and Candella urged people not to burn such things as dried-out pine boughs or Christmas wrapping paper. Both ignite quickly and can cause flames and sparks to come inside the room.

"If the flue hasn't gotten hot enough, there might not be enough updraft and smoke will fill the room," he said. *********

Candella suggested that keeping a window open just a crack helps prevent sudden downdrafts or at least lessens their severity.

One thing to do before lighting the fireplace for the first time in the fall is to make sure, by visual inspection, that no small animals or birds have made nests in the chimney.

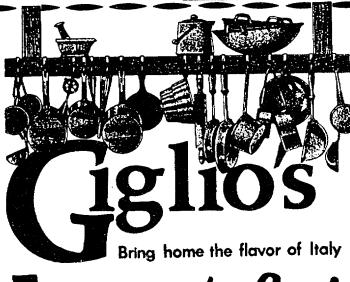

"We've seen that happen a lot, and it always means a lot of smoke in the house," Candella said. "You should keep a screen on top of the chimney to prevent any animals from climbing

"Be cautious," Candella concluded. "It is for your safety and the safety of your family. Never leave a fire unattended."

Local mayors talk about the future

By Nancy Parmenter Staff Writer

It was billed as a view of the future of the Grosse Pointes, but the three speakers at the Senior Men's Club last week concentrated more on the present. Their formula for continued success: More of the same.

Mayors Lorenzo Browning of the City, George Freeman of the Woods and Gerald Schroeder of the Shores were invited to complete a series started earlier with mayors Fromm and Heenan of the Farms and the Park. Their short talks focused on city services and the balancing act necessary to maintain services without increasing taxes.

City Treasurer Dennis Foran, standing in for Browning, who had lost his voice, explained the assessing process. "We try to determine how much it would cost to build your house today, minus depreciation," he said. "That is determined largely by sales prices in the community. So we have a good system, but unfortunately, that's not the system most people use to buy a house. You look at the kitchen or the red carpeting.

Both the City and the Woods are currently reassessing homes right now, Foran said. "The goal is to assess it at 50 percent of market value. If we're successful, the county won't apply a factor. Frequent reassessments keep the rate more accurate, he said.

Freeman told the audience that the Woods is proud of keeping its tax rate down to 12.9 mills. He said the city has a minimum maintenance standards ordinance that has been helpful in preventing blight. "We want to keep our city as nice as it is," he said.

which Freeman promised won't attract so many mayflies.

Shores Trustee Daniel Beck stood in for village President Gerald Schroeder. "The Shores is a tremendous piece of real estate," he said, citing its $128 million state equalized valuation in 1 1/2 square miles. An unusual fact about the village is that it owns its own lighting system, purchased from Detroit Edi-Woods is a changeover to high son some years ago, but still the Shores is "maintaining the community in the manner our residents say they want," Beck

In a question-and-answer session after the talks, someone in the audience asked the officials to intercede with Detroit and get General Motors to spend its money renovating the Fisher Body plant for a prison instead of tearing it down. No one would

Closer to home, an audience member asked Freenian why the Woods voted down the library millage and bond issues.

The additions will push the wall of the police department out toward Kerby Road, even with the wall of the city office wing. The administrative wing will push out toward the parking lot. Brown said the changes can be made without changing the building's character.

The two-story atrium in the administrative wing will be closed off to provide a secondfloor conference room and an elevator shaft.

Women working for the police department will have their own locker room for the first time. Currently they either wear their uniforms to work or change their clothes in the women's bathroom. The men's locker room will also be completely remodeled.

The council gave a consensus agreement to Brown's proposals so that he can start preparing a detailed plan and drawings.

have taken a stand against blight. They are fighting against its spread and trying to root it out where it already exists. It's a stand that sometimes seems discouraging, but they haven't given up.

But blight has turned out to be even more insidious than predicted. Seven years ago, a study of Mack Avenue projected that blight would spread at the rate of one block every three years.

When that study was done, the area behind the Detroit business community at Alter and Mack wasn't blighted," said Grosse Pointe dentist Michael Grosse Pointe Business & Profes-hood Watch. "We're making

But there are pockets of hope in that gloomy assessment, Lahey said. Mack Avenue busi-On Mack, business owners nesses band together for a massive summer clean-up of the blocks near the Detroit-Grosse Pointe Park border. This year the project included resodding on the Detroit side of the street. Some businesses have made a point of beautifying their own property, proving that blight is what you let it be.

"Eastside Cab is a shining beacon in there," Lahey said. "(The owner) has done a phenomenal job of cleaning up and towing away junk cars that were stored there for parts."

The business people have been conducting talks with neighborhood groups to start a business Lahey, the new president of the crime watch similar to Neighbor-

The minute the consumer perceives that the area is unsafe, the businesses go to heck."

The business community gets help in all sorts of places. "We have a network of neighborhood associations working together for a common goal," said Karen Warren, treasurer of the business association - and secretarytreasurer of Mack Avenue Renaissance Alliance, a group formed specifically to work with the city of Detroit on funding for facade improvements. MARA was in on the business crime watch discussions and recently came up with $10,000 for a new project on Mack at Alter.

Mack Alter Square is a proposed renovation, demolition and reconstruction project of five blocks of strip shopping from Al-

"That project could anchor the attempts we're making," Lahey said. "The value of homes in Grosse Pointe Park declines if people see businesses in trouble at Alter."

Officials in the Park are hopeful that the project will come to

"There's a need for new stores," said Park City Manager John Crawford. "Some people say the houses are so blighted that the stores aren't needed. That's untrue. The PIFU study determined there's a substantial number of houses that could be renovated.

"The impact (of Mack Alter Square) is that it would offset the negative impact of blight influence, the disinvestment, the absentee landlord syndrome. I'm very optimistic. It's a breath of fresh air. And (project director) Maggie DeSantis is a high-energy self-starter who can really get things going.'

DeSantis, a former schoolteacher and native eastsider who once worked for New Detroit Inc., heads up the for-profit branch of the not-for-profit Warren Conner Development Coalition that is working on the project.

"The bottom line for us is revitalizing through affecting the economy," she told the Mack business association at its annual meeting last month. "Just because a non-profit is doing it doesn't mean you're in it to lose money - we want to use the profits for the community."

The seed of the Mack/Alter project was planted when Grosse Pointer Jim Grant donated his Mueller's Paint and Hardware building to the coalition. Most of the project involves demolition, but the Mueller building, a bait shop, grocery store and beauty shop will all stay. DeSantis is negotiating with the Secretary of State's office to open a branch in a bank building - and lobbying everyone she sees to write supporting letters. "It would go a long way toward ensuring our success," she said.

Like the Virginia Park shopping area on Detroit's near west side, Mack Alter Square will be community-owned. Stock will be sold to neighborhood residents so that local people will have control of the project.

To retain the neighborhood character, the project will remain in strip shopping, while adding some green space and 200 parking spots. New tax rules for dependents explained

The Internal Revenue Service has issued a new publication to inform parents and children about changes in the tax law regarding taxes of children and other dependents, publication 922, "New Tax Rules for Children and Dependents."

As a result of the 1986 Tax Reform Act, many children who have never filed tax returns before may have to do so and may also have to pay tax for the first time beginning in 1987, the IRS says. Under the new rules, any individual who can be claimed as a dependent on another's tax return generally must file an income tax return if he or she has any investment income, such as interest or dividends, and that income, plus any wages, will be more than $500.

Beginning in 1987, no personal exemption is allowed to a taxpayer who can be claimed as a dependent by another taxpayer. Publication 922 explains this rule, as well as new rules that limit the standard deduction and require tax filing for children and dependents. It also discusses a new method of taxing children under the age of 14 who have investment income of more than $1,000. The publication answers questions parents may have and gives examples that illustrate typical tax situa-

Jecember 3, 1987 Grosse Pointe News Faces & places Junior League Detroit wraps a very special Christmas gift

More than 50 volunteers spent Saturday, Nov. 21, wrapping and tving Christmas ribbons on more than 800 gifts and special door prizes which will be distributed at the Goodwill Industries (GI) Christmas party on Dec. 3 and at the Adult Well Being Services (AWS) party planned for Saturday, Dec. 5.

The Nov. 21 wrap party was conducted by the Junior League of Detroit (JLD) at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church in preparation for the 25th anniversary of the two Christmas parties the JLD holds annually to benefit the elderly, mentally ill and disabled.

Many of those expected to attend the parties, (the GI event at the United Food and Commercial Worker's Union Hall in Madison Heights and the AWS party at the Butzel Middle School Cafetorium in Detroit) would otherwise be unable to enjoy a special dinner with all the trimmings, carols and festivity provided. Special raffle prizes, musical entertainment and plenty of affection and enthusiasm will be shared by all.

This year, 700 meals will be served, followed by a visit from Santa Claus and the distribution to each person present of a Christmas sack filled with $5 worth of personal size food items. The items, along with Christmas decorations and party favors, are paid for entirely by JLD through financial contributions from the membership each year.

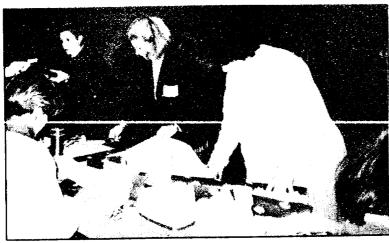

Financial support from the community is welcome. Those who wish to donate to the Christmas parties can send their contributions to: The Junior League of Detroit, 32 Lakeshore Road, Grosse Pointe Farms, 48236, Attention: GI/ AWS Parties for 1987.

MOT in the news: A lavish and spectacular opening night performance of the Tony Award-winning operetta "Kismet," at the Michigan Opera Theatre on Nov. 20 was followed by an even more lavish and spectacular afterglow at Pegasus in the Fisher Building.

For the evening — which, like the production of "Kismet" was sponsored by the Michigan Opera Theatre Guild - the restaurant was transformed into a colorful marketplace and bazaar right out of ancient Baghdad. Baskets of baubles, bangles and beads from Milkins in the Fisher were displayed for Guild guests, all under the direction of decorations chairman Kim Pangborn of Grosse Pointe.

Samira and Troupe Scheherazade welcomed more than 100 guests with exotic belly dancing in glittering period costumes to the tune of Arabic music. Among those who enjoyed the evening - which featured cocktails and a buffet supper of authentic cuisine - were Grosse Pointers Dr. and Mrs. Kim Lie, Mr. and Mrs. George Slezak and Mrs. Charles Endicott.

MOT's planning for this June's "Opera Ball '88" is well under way, with the committees formed at a special luncheon on Nov. 18. Assisting general chairmen Mary Ann and Philip E. Benton Jr., and honorary chairmen Marian and Harold A. Poling are Grosse Pointers Henrietta Fridholm, ball advisor; Dale Austin and Sue Vititoe, co-chairmen of the MOT Board of Directors Special Events Committee.

On the working committees are Pointers Marianne Endicott, Jan Harness, Mary Lamparter and Lucille Wertz, invitation/souvenir program committee; and on the marketing staff, Marybeth Jagger and Anne-Berit Power.

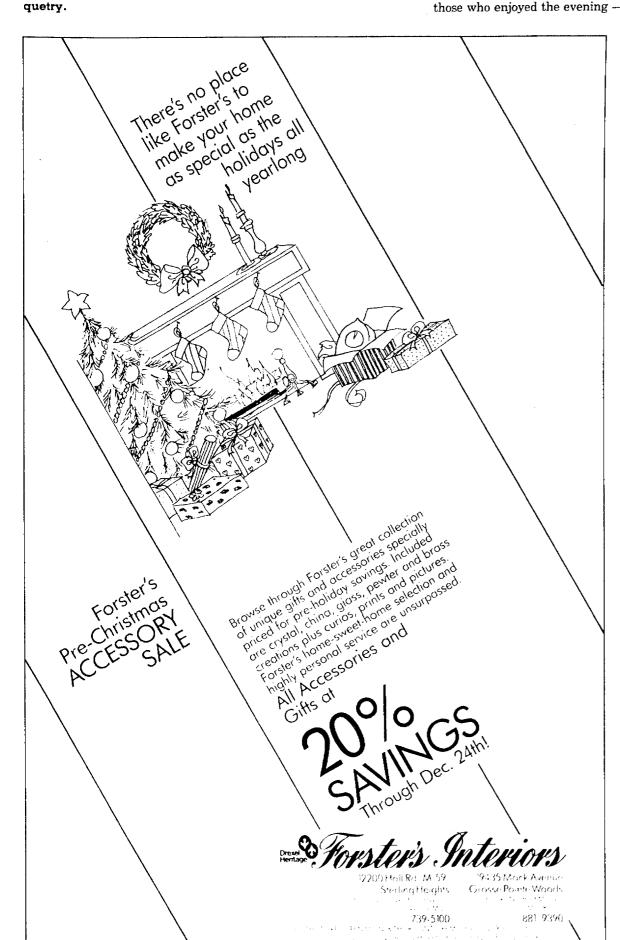

Persons interested in attending the concert by special "Opera Ball '88" guest Luciano Pavarotti and the Opera Ball, should contact Sheila Ingwersen or Nancy Dunn at the MOT's special events office at 874-7850.

will present a holiday program, "Christmas With Corrie ten Boom,"on Tuesday, Dec. 8, at 1 p.m. in the sanctuary. President Joyce Edwards will give the welcoming message followed by Linda Lloyd who will lead the devotions.

Evelyn Brammer, program chairperson for the day, will introduce Olive Lane Horning of Fenton, who will offer the program, "Christmas With Corrie ten Boom." Horning is a wife, mother of two and a teacher of exceptional children - and her alias is "Corrie ten Boom."

In this program Horning assumes the personality of ten Boom with costume, gestures and mannerisms she learned at a retreat with Corrie many years ago.

The late Miss ten Boom wrote many books including the most familiar, "The Hiding Place," which was made into a movie and which tells the part of her life during World War II when her family hid Jews in their Haarlem home during the Nazi takeover of Holland.

The program is followed by a Christmas tea in Fellowship Hall. Child care available. The public is invited to attend.

Self-taught artists assume star roles

By David M. Maxfield

Smithsonian News Service

When it comes to art there are no boundaries, as several dozen self-taught artists - many of them elderly blacks from the deep South - can attest. Virtually unknown outside their home communities not long ago, today they have become big names in prestigious U.S. and European art circles. Some are even media stars.

"The work of these men and women is now very much in demand," said Liza Kirwin, an Archives of American Art staff member who has watched their popularity grow. "You meet someone whose house in rural Georgia has just been hooked up to electricity, and the next thing you know, they're having a show in New York's So-Ho galleries."

Under Kirwin's guidance, the Archives, a division of the Smithsonian, is seeking written records, gathering photos and taping oral history interviews that will tell future researchers a good deal about the work of and influences on these artists, a group that she says "defies easy categorization.'

"Self-taught" is the umbrella term now often used to describe these painters and sculptors who have created substantial bodies of work, often late in life with no formal training. They also have been described as visionaries, outsiders or folk, primitive, vernacular and intuitive artists. By whatever label, many are motivated by religious calling, Kirwin has concluded, and some are driven by an intense personal need to express their visions, dreams or life experiences.

Their art is made from almost anything at hand - chewing gym, rusted tin, animal bones. window shades and spark plugs are just a few materials that Kirwin has observed. Self-taught artists also seem to solve aesthetic problems of design, color and materials with the greatest of ease. The results may be crude or even brutal to some eyes, but the "self-taught are irrepresively inventive and tirelessly engaged in the process of transmitting ideas," she says. Toughness - not sentimentality - binds the work of these artists. Jane Livingston, a Corcoran Gallery of Art curator in Washington, D.C., suggests that "we somehow feel (that they) represent an optimistic aspect of human nature," their art being steeped in "flashing humor, curiosity and supressed wisdom."

In Patterson, La., octogenarian David Butler's whirligigs and metal cut-outs of lizards, flying elephants, monkeys and sea creatures are still the talk of the town. These once filled the yard around his house, which itself was treated as a piece of sculpture sporting painted-tin window screens and holes in walls for showing found objects. In Hazelhurst, Miss., Mary Smith's artwork is displayed in her garden "gallery." Animal and human figures painted on battered pieces of tin, cut with an ax. cover Smith's dog kennel and grace her clipped lawn.

The work of Dilmus Hall of Athens, Ga., takes a more sobering tone. His yard, too, is filled with sculptured figures of wood, cement and scrap tin, but dominating the scene from the street is a painted sculpture of the devil and the drinking man, Hall's moral commentary on the evils of the grape.

Then there is the creativity of the Rev. Howard Finster, widely heralded for his "Paradise Garden" - a glorious assemblage of plants and man-made trinkets surrounding his Summerville, Ga., home. This two-acre spiritual landfill is intended to include all the inventions of mankind. Lately, though, things have grown a bit wild because of collectors' demands for Finster's work, at last count more than 5,000 objects.

Rising above Finster's garden is his "World's Folk Art Church," which looks like a giant, 16-sided wedding cake. Here Finster keeps the books he has written and the album covers he's designed, including a prize-winning 1985 design for a Talking Heads LP, as well as articles written about him. (Profiled by the Wall Street Journal, among other publications, Finster is probably the most widely known of the self-taught artists.)

'Santa Claus' folklore at AAUW brunch

When do animals talk? Why are turtles confined to their shells? Who makes the best "first foot?" And what makes the grim legend of the pickled children have to do with jolly old St. Nick? Folklorist James T. Callow will be answering these questions when the Grosse Pointe Branch of the American Association of University Women meets for brunch on Thursday, Dec. 10, at 10:30 a.m. at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club.

Following the brunch and to set the stage for Callow's presentation, the AAUW chorus will entertain with a medley of holiday songs. On three other occasions they will also be performing at nursing homes in the Callow's talk is titled "Santa Claus and Other Folklore of the Yuletide Season." With the aid of pictures by such 19th century artists as Robert W. Weir and John G. Chapman, Callow will show how New Yorkers easily secularized the legendary St. Nicholas into the modern Santa Claus but hesitated to divest him of his religious trappings. Therefore, even as late as the 1830s and 40s Santa still had a rosary dangling from his belt or a cross pinned to his cap.

Callow directs the Computerized Folklore Archive at the University of Detroit and helps edit a 10-volume folklore encyclopedia emanating from UCLA. He sees the Yuletide season as a fascinating bundle of tales, beliefs, customs and symbols that embody the traditions of many groups. From one of his students, for example, comes the Italian custom of kindling a fire to dry the Christ Child's diapers; and from other students, the multiethnic belief that Yule candles (sometimes called luminaries) serve to light the way for Christ, the Three Kings or any traveler seeking food and shelter

For more information concerning the Dec. 10 meeting, AAUW members and guests should call Judy Livingston at 885-8646.

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

A Romantic Past As a Grosse Pointe resident, you'll walk upon grounds that were once the swamp, marsh and meadow haunts of deer, buffalo and beaver. It was this profusion of wildlife-plus fish from the 460-square-mile Lake St. Clair-that attracted the French farmers who first settled the area in 1701.

During the century that they fished, farmed and traded with the local Indians, many legands began. And many infamous locations were indelibly named: Fox Creek, graveyard of the Fox Indian nation; Bloody Run, where a company of British soldiers from Fort Detroit were ambushed and killed.

From Pristine to Prosperous After a brief period under British rule, the area began its history as an American settlement. Its beauty and bounty made it an ideal resort area for families from the growing city of Detroit. Between 1875 and 1925, Grosse Pointe became the elegant summer residence—and then permanent home—of families who had amassed fortunes in lumber and automobiles. In the midst of the lavish mansions, farm cottages and resort ambiance, there gradually grew a year-round community of quality homes for families from all walks of life.

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

A Cultural Cornucopia Appreciation of the arts begins at an early age for Grosse Pointe children. The public library, a division of the Grosse Pointe Public School System, offers, at no cost, a variety of children's reading programs at its three locations.

For adults, the library programs range from travel films to informative presentations on subjects of current interest. These, too, are free to residents of all the Grosse Pointes.

Another great source of local culture is the beautiful War Memorial Center, the former mansion of the Russell A. Alger family. With its subsequently added ballroom and theater overlooking Lake St. Clair, the center is a community attraction that rivals the many private clubs in the area. Here-open to all residents-are offered art classes and exhibits, lectures, concerts, plays, ballet and social dancing instruction, and children's theater, as well as membership in a long list of special-interest clubs whose focus is either cultural, informative or just plain fun.

A more recent addition to public property is the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House. Designed by architect Albert Kahn and supported by a $15 million endowment, this gracious replica of an English manor house is now open for tours and is used for meetings, fund-raising events and several series of "house" concerts.

Autumn's colorful pumpkin makes a delicious meal

Pumpkin is a member of the squash-gourd family and is treated as a vegetable in our kitchens. It is available in markets today during the autumn months; however, its thick, hard rind keeps it for months and sometimes upwards to a year. Canned and frozen pumpkin is available throughout the year. Pumpkin appears in a tasteful variety of ways - soups, boiled or pureed as a hot vegetable and in a dish popular during this time of year, the Yankee Pumpkin Pie.

The following recipes come from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Pumpkin Beef Stew Pumpkin Shell Casserole Pumpkin Custard Pumpkin Ring

PUMPKIN BEEF STEW 2 Tblsp. unsalted margarine 1-1/2 Lbs. lean beef chuck, trimmed of all fat, cut into 1-inch cubes

1 medium onion, chopped 2 cloves garlic, minced, 2 cups beef broth

1/2 cup dry red wine 2 large tomatoes, peeled, coarsely chopped

3/4 tsp. salt 2 bay leaves 1 tsp. paprika 1 tsp. oregano 1/2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce 1/8 tsp. pepper

2 medium zucchini, sliced 2 cups pumpkin, peeled, seeded, and cut into 1-inch fresh mushrooms, 1/2 Lb.

3/4 cup brown sugar 2 Tblsp. lemon juice 1/2 tsp. cinnamon 1/2 tsp. nutmeg

Preheat oven to 350°. Wash and dry pumpkin. Slice off top for a lid. Scrape out seeds and loose membranes.

Elegant Eating

In large heavy pot or Dutch oven, saute beef cubes in melted margarine until well browned on all sides. Add onion and garlic; cook until tender. Add beef broth, wine, tomatoes, salt, bay leaves, paprika, oregano, basil, Worcestershire sauce and pepper. Cover and simmer one hour or until meat is fork tender. Add zucchini, pumpkin and mushrooms. Cook 20 to 25 minutes longer or until vegetables are tender. Makes 6 servings. Calories, about 270 per serv-

Thoroughly combine remaining ingredients and fill pumpkin with combined ingredients. Return lid to pumpkin and place on a cookie sheet.

Bake until apples are tender. Begin checking after an hour of baking. Also, use sharp prongs of fork to test doneness of pumpkin. A pumpkin that size will probably take about two hours. The pumpkin may be served either hot or cold. Serve from shell, spooning some pumpkin with each portion. An unsung hero

In today's day and age, unsung heroes are something relied heavily upon to provide luster and hope in sports. As college tailbacks strive for the Heisman Trophy, some prep athletes try to put away a college athletic scholarship. But for one South athlete, the love of football is enough of an award and is sufficient to provide splendor

Bryan Jones, a quarterback who was at the helm of the Blue Devils' offense for two years, is the epitome of a classic quarterback. He guides the team to the end zone, barks signals and audiblizes at the line of scrimmage, but the thrust of his intelligence and poise comes from his experience and genuine love for the game.

As Bryan eyes the signals that are motioned in by his teammates, his balance and tenacity shine. His schoolboy face fills his helmet and his heart fills his jersey.

This was the first season I had the honor of watching B.J. He is only separated from the big, muscular lineman by position. He is not a flashy guy. What he prefers most is to direct the offense, do his job and quietly sit down. He is a blue collar worker who enjoys greasing his palms with success and brilliance. He strives to be the perfectionist, but when that fails, he pulls out his aces and lays them on the table.

When he tosses an interception or fumbles, he is not the type to ponder about it or give a shoddy explanation. He has dignity. His teammates may be the recipients of cheap shots from the opposition, but the field general steps in and controls all animosity. He claps his hands, slaps the derriere of a player and keeps his head up. The captain is responsible for going down with the ship, and I truly believe that Jones, although not a captain of the 1987 Blue Devils, would have honorably taken the plunge from the wheel if that would have been the case. But, it wasn't.

He directed the Devils to a 9-2 record, an Eastern Michigan League championship, and better yet, a berth in the state play-

Not once did I see the composure of this steel-minded individual snap. He prides himself on his own abilities and pushes himself to his limit. He is quite conscious of his own skills and how they will affect the team. He has won 14 games and lost six in his two-year stint. He owns two school records as well, as he has passed for 1,363 yards in his career and has attempted 188 passes. His average comple tions was upped from 47 percent a year ago to 51 percent this fall. He has thrown for nine touchdowns and the longest of his lifework was 51 yards. Within his 5-foot 8-inch frame, Jones packs a ton. He can move his feet with the best of them and side-stepping rushing linemen seems easy. In fact, if he were eligible to do them, commercials on "cool, calm and collected" may become part of his repertoire. Jones is slick, agile and intelligent.

1st district title ever

Lady Norsemen venture on to regional road

Sports Editor

Looking back into all the old records at North High, and one knows how packed that showcase is, there was no girls' basketball district championship trophy up until last week.

For the first time since its inception in 1968, the Lady Norsemen basketball program is the proud owner of North's first district title. Behind Mary Lex's 18 points, North surged past the Highlanders of Lake Shore 41-28 to win the District 9 championship.

"My feelings are that the group won it,"
"Perport "but all said North coach Gary Bennett, "but all the kids who played here before this are a part of it as well. They (the players in years before) established good working habits and made it easier for this group to work harder."

In a 40-31 win over South, which put the Lady Norsemen into the finals against Lake Shore (a 44-41 winner over Finney), defense was key for North. However, this time around a defensive lapse almost eliminated them from the tournament.

"I was disappointed in our defense in the first half," said Bennett. "It didn't help us any either that we weren't hitting our shots on the offensive side of things. It put more pressure on our defense.'

North found themselves trailing at the intermission, 18-17 and that was not a familiar site for a team with an 18-4 record. But, Bennett and assistant coach Ray Ritter pulled their troops together and came out of the corner prepared to go two more rounds.

"The kids realized they hadn't played good defense in the first half, but in the second half the defense made the difference," said Bennett. "At the half we talked about moving the ball quicker offensively. It made a difference and it also helps when you hit some shots. The kids sucked it up and played well."

Playing well for the second straight game was senior Mary Lex. The Norsemen center paced a second-half comeback with 10 points in the final two stanzas. Also, from 15 feet out was the dead eye of Heather Mergos who poured in 10 points with her jump shots and moves to the

Both teams knocked the lead around five times in the third quarter until North took a slim edge, 23-22 at the end of three. Early in the fourth quarter, Lex and Lake Shore's Michele Watson got into a scuffle and both players shot technical foul shots. Watson missed hers, but Lex popped two straight and that seemed to put the Norsemen back into the saddle.

"That helped kick us out," Bennett said about the technical foul shots that Lex canned. "It seemed to get us going."

North pulled away from the pesky Highlanders midway through the fourth quarter as a pressure defense sent Lake Shore

"We put some pressure on and got some turnovers and points from it," said Bennett. "We really played well in the final quarter and that made the difference. I think the girls sensed a win and just pushed harder.'

The last time Ray Ritter and Gary Bennett teamed up was back in 1971 when the boys' basketball team cut the nets after winning a district title. Ritter was the coach and Bennett was a high-scoring senior. This time around, the two coaches teamed up to record Lady Norsemen his-

1987-88 could be year of Knights

ULS packs heavy artillery this winter

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

McCann Arena is friendly confines for the University Liggett School hockey team and thirdyear head coach John Fowler would have it no other way.

The Knights, last year's No. 6 ranked team in Class B-C-D, are looking to improve on a 15-6 mark a year ago, and Fowler believes several factors could play

"We play an incredibly fun schedule," he said. "We play a lot of good, strong teams and that should help us because it's such a variety and it won't be tough for the kids to get up for every game."

"Our schedule could also hurt us." Fowler added, "because the competition is so strong that we could end up with a .500 record." ULS will play Team Michigan, Little Caesars, St. Clair Shores and Detroit Country Day School to name a few.

It is unlikely the youthful, yet talented team will emerge with a .500 record, especially behind the goaltending of Steve Stoyka and the line of Bill Jewett, Gordie Maitland and Charlie Roby.

"Steve is a well-schooled goalie who is very intense," said Fowler. "He has a quick glove to go with quick feet.'

Jewett and Roby scored nine goals apiece a year ago and Maitland was the big shooter with 17 tallies and Fowler looks for better things this winter.

"They are a very productive line," he said. "They are all grinders who love to skate and they all complement one another while playing."

young, but talented. Heading the list of defensemen are Ted Evans, Mike McCracken, Mike Coello, Russ Kogel, Duncan and Jesse Kasom. Although Fowler has not etched his lineup in stone, the combination of defensemen seems to be strong.

Greg Petrilli, Doug Wood, who led the team with 22 goals and 28 assists last year, Shannon Nowowiecki, Jonathon Davis, Bob Scoville, Rob Lubera and Frederick Thelander will round out the forward spots.

"I'm not sure about the combinations, but we'll be strong up front," said Fowler.

Also playing in the net will be Mark Sullivan.

ULS does not play in a league, so a league title is out of the question. However, traveling to the state playoffs is in the mak-

"We want to get the best possible record we can by winning two-thirds of our games," said Fowler. "The guys are confident they can win every game, but we'll just take it one game at a

Basketball

Under third-year coach Chuck Wright, the boys' basketball team should be another tough hurdle for opponents.

The Knights completed a successful 186-87 campaign with an 18-2 record and a Michigan Independent Athletic Conference championship and this year interested parties could see a repeat performance.

"We are going to be better

Joining Karabetsos as the team's spark plug will be John Yancey. An all-state player, Yancey will be popping threepointers for the Knights. Since this is the first year for the three-point line, ULS will develop some offenses that will revolve around the perimeter.

"We'll definitely use it," said Wright. "We have a lot of guys who can shoot well, but we just have to make good decisions on when to shoot from that range.'

The "projected starters" for this year's squad include, Kevin Crociata, Yancey, Karabetsos, Kandia Milton and Bill Lucken. Also being called on will be, Tarik Lester, David Clifton, Tom Vallone, Dike Ajiri, Mike Niccolini and Anthony Abiragi. Clifton and Yancey are co-captains.

"Our nucleus is the same as last year, but this year we are going to try and tire people out," said Wright. "We're going to press more. We are a small team, but what we lack in height, we make up for in speed.

ULS is capable, with the talent and pressing ability they posess, to dominate the MIAC, again.

"Our goal is to play the best we can every game," said Wright. "We'd also like to dominate the league, if that's possible.'

The Knights open the 1987-88 campaign Friday, Dec. 4 at home against Harper Woods. Tipoff is 7:30 p.m.

Volleyball

It's spell breaking time for Coach Shelley Owens and her volleyball team.

Owens, in her fourth year, is hoping the Lady Knights can break the string of three straight runner-up seasons in the MIAC. Last year, ULS was 11-3 in the league, but this year it may be difficult to equal that output.

'We only have three starters back from last year," said Owens. "The leadership will have to come from them. It's a small nucleus, but we'll manage.'

Sylvia Ristic, Shirley Kim and Diann Imbriaco will head the nucleus. Melissa Simon, Sara Khelokian, Brooke Hohmeyer, Tanya Clawson, Amber Brady will be returning from the jayvee squad, but will be trying to make the varsity team.

To me, Jones' biggest moment came in the win over Lincoln in the first round of the state playoffs. Never before had a quarterback at South ventured that far, so that's one more thing to add to the memoire. After the ball game, Jones was hoisted, with his forefinger waving "number one," on the shoulders of Lance Harding. Jones was in his glory. The top of the hill. A number one. He deserved it. He worked long and hard for that moment and when it arrived, he soaked it for all it's worth; just like he did football. One week later, however, Jones' prep career almost ended with disaster. He was knocked out on a tackle and never before did I see anything as frightening. He was as pale as a white sheet and suddenly my thoughts filled with nothing but hope for the sterling athlete. It could have been quite serious, but the head and back injuries are healing quickly. Jones did not walk off the field in his final adventure, but today he should be walking tall and his boyish smile should be glowing from ear to ear. He is a classy athlete who can teach us all a lesson of true athletic sportsmanship.

Bryan is a trooper who continued to push the Devils to the championship year. He showed me plenty on the football field and if his "off field" heroics are anything close to when he is dressed in pads and a helmet, this athlete is going to turn in his football uniform for a threepiece suit and a briefcase.

In two games, the Norsemen skaters went 1-1 with a 6-4 loss to Traverse City and a 9-4 win over East Grand Rapids in a consolation match.

In the opening round against Traverse City, the Norsemen discovered quickly that the officiating on the "other side of the state" was a lot tighter than the team had experienced in some previous games.

In the contest, North took an early 2-1 advantage, but penalty trouble seemingly did them in.

Link Bessert led North with two goals.

Despite outshooting Traverse At the St. Clair Shores Arena, City (48-25), Coach, Mike Manthe Blades and the Shamrocks zella shifted the lines for the consolation game against East Grand Rapids and the result was favorable. BE THE BEST, BE A BLIZZARD!

Feeling By Deanna Hawthorne

Why exercise doesn't have to be hard on you

Metabolically speaking, walking is as good as running

Exercise, quite simply, does not have to be hard in order to be good for you. It has to be hard if you want to be an Olympic champion, but it does not have to be difficult if you just want to be healthy.

Some very interesting studies have been done with heart attack patients recently to bear this out.

When 32 victims of myocardial infarction, for example (aged 35 to 68), were put on a 13-week walking program - which progressed to slow jogging only if the participant felt up to it - researchers observed a marked increase in their HDL. HDL is a blood component that helps protect against heart disease by clearing excess cholesterol out of the bloodstream. Circulating insulin levels in these men also took a turn for the better as they steadily decreased. The amount of exercise responsible for these results was a modest mile and three-quarters of walking/jogging three times a week.

Endocrinologist Dan Streja, M.D., of California, agrees.

"To favorably alter cholesterol, to lower blood sugar, insulin and triglyceride levels and to lose weight, walking will do it," said Streja.

"Metabolically speaking,
walking is as good as run-

If those words - metabolically speaking - sound like a monumental concession, they're not! Unless you are exercising to excel athletically, metabolics are all you really need to worry about. Yes, high-intensity exercise increases HDL more than low-intensity exercies, but not by much. And it is unlikely that this marginal difference is worth the monumental strain; particularly if this strain is going to discourage you from exercising in the first place.

That is the bottom line exercising in the first place. As Charles Kintzleman, Ph. D. and author of The Complete Book of Walking, puts it, "You can't get benefits from any exercise you don't

If you are on a tight schedule, and you find that the quick half-hour jogs suit it, fine. For its sheer convenience and physiologic efficiency, running is probably the best exercise you can do. Swimming, cross-country skiing and cycling also are excellent overall conditioners.

Exercise, in short, need not be an all-or-nothing affair. There are many valuable levels in between. Evolution was 5 million years in putting us together - not as marathoners or weight lifters or swimmers of the English Channel - but rather as walkers. And as workers. Certainly you can find the energy to be the combination of those.

A clan dedicated to martial arts

Three unique Panagos' share more than kicks

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

Philadelphia may be the city of Brotherly Love, but in Grosse Pointe Farms three brothers prove weekly that brotherly love might involve kicking one another or cracking a board over each other's heads.

Gus, Bill and Chris Panagos are the Pointes' answer to Bruce Lee movies. Gus, a product design engineer for Ford Motor Company, Bill, a corporate patent attorney for BASF, and Chris, a dentist at Grosse Pointe Family Dentistry, gather three times a week at Assumption Cultural Center to teach karate techniques and philosophies to and I were interested in sports, people from all walks of life.

For 15 years the Pointe trio has devoted a majority of their lives to the martial art. All three have earned a black belt and believe it or not, they remain living in the same house.

"Isn't that amazing?" said Bill. "It's a lot easier to do that, plus we're still friends.'

They grew up quite close to one another and their relationship was, and still is, regarded as "close." As the years progressed, the competitive edge was instilled in each of them and that may have been the reason for the joining of karate forces.

"When it started off, Chris but had an interest in karate," said Bill. "The interest was there when the Bruce Lee era peaked, but I also knew I was going to be able to do this the rest of my life."

Chris and Bill were highly motivated to get into the art, but Gus needed a kick start.

"Basically Bill and Chris started about a week before I did," said Gus. "I wasn't very interested in it, but then I felt I should be. I guess you could say it was the competitiveness about us. I didn't want to be left out so I asked them to show me a move and after I picked myself up to get involved."

Although the three brothers ventured separate professional brings them together is karate. For these bachelors, karate is the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. Teaching wayward plish. kids, housewives, children, "I grandmothers and anyone else interested in the art of self-defense is why they hold the sessions on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

"Yes, it is a variety of profesate," said Chris. "Doing karate into karate or society." as a family is enjoyable. We also get to work out a lot of family aggression," he said jokingly. "No really. We all get along so well and the thing that helps us think a lot alike. We always easier.'

With one to two years separating each of them (Gus, 32, Bill, 31, Chris, 30) they hold similar values and moral beliefs. But when it comes to the art of disa-, crew. bling kicks and punches, their principles vary. However, their skills are useful tools for one another.

"Chronologically I am the big brother, but we're all fiercely individual," said Gus. "We use one another as a sounding board to learn from each other.'

Chris agreed.

"It's nice to be able to have different concepts about karate." he said. "We each have our own style. I like to be involved in karate because it is a very good workout. I look to the cardiovascular angle of it as well as the art. Bill enjoys the philosophy side of it. He always comes up with a philosophical reason befrom across the room, I decided hind a move. The diversity of teaching abilities enables the members of the roads, the one avenue that class to see what karate has to offer. For the Panagos', karate offers the individual the opportunity to seek, find and accom-toughness breeds ability," said Gus. "We all have a lot of ability we pass on in our classes, but the thing I enjoy seeing is how people learn through discipline. In turn, it shows people what they are actually capable of. Performing karate, I feel, really lets a person find out what makes them tick.

Learning physical and mental discipline is the major component in the art of karate. Gus, Bill and Chris all share the conviction of discipline, for without it, the art form would be difficult to learn.

"In order to be successful in karate, a person has to discipline himself first," said Chris. "Without it, it is difficult to perform the art.

"I used to get in some fights when I was a kid and at times I didn't know how to control my anger," said Gus. "I then learned the art of discipline through karate and suddenly the need to fight diminished. Through the martial arts, you actually learn to subdue anger."

"It's a self-confidence," added Bill. "Karate is a reliance that you can achieve goals. It's a selfconfidence within the realm of positive thinking."

They grew up a competitive trio of athletes who learned from one another's fortunes and misfortunes. They collectively earned black belts in karate and that eventually led them to teach the art of self defense. They have lived together and taught together, so what next for the dentist, attorney and engi-

Christmas alternatives: Part II

As we celebrated Thanksgiving last Thursday, hopefully for many of us it marked the beginning of new traditions in the way we chose to share this American feast with family and friends. With its passing, we could not help but notice all of the reminders that Christmas is less than one month away. Our calendars begin to fill with parties, plans for baking and shopping lists. In other words, so much to do, so little time.

In all of the hustle and bustle, we may have made a few silent promises to ourselves that this Christmas will be different..."I will finish my shopping on time, the Christmas cards will be in the mail on time and I will allow for some quiet time with the children... The lists in our heads look so tidy and neat, surely this Christmas will be different. We may have also promised ourselves that this year we plan to eat much more reasonably, be in control, and not have to face those awful pounds on the first of January; those extra pounds that come wrapped in guilt and recrimination with the New Year's arrival.

These next weeks can be different. With a little forethought, we can choose to make it different. Here are some suggestions that only take a few minutes on your part to aid in having a joyful and merry Christmas. They may help our hunger of the body and the spirit.

Instead of eating those extra calories, I choose to:

1) Send a donation to: Capuchin Food Program, 803 Cottrell, Detroit, 48209. This donation can be in the form of financial aid or through food donations. You might choose to send in a check that totals the pounds you did not gain or the weight you lose between now and Christmas.

2) Operation LINC, 1700 E. Warren, Detroit, 48224. You may choose to add this organization to your shopping list. Instead of the money you usually spend on "filler foods," set aside a few dollars and buy canned goods. They also can use toys and clothing. For more information, call 882-6100.

3) Focus Hope. This organization can always use food donations - any time of the year. Food Centers: 9151 Chalmers, 1300 Oakman Blvd., 6353 W. Vernon, all located in Detroit. Also locations at 34508 Beverly Road, Romulus, 150 Osmun, Pon-

To contact the Food Program for Mother, Preschool Children and Seniors, call 883-1140.

4) CrossRoads Social Service Unit. 14641 E. Jefferson, Detroit, 822-5200. This organization offers help in many areas. They have an emergency food program. Send a donation, or call for information concerning their food program. You may also deliver canned goods and staples from 9 a.m. to noon and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. during the week.

5) FLEC (Family Life Education Council) 158 Ridge Road, Grosse Pointe, 48236. Serving the Grosse Pointee and the east side, this organization offers various counseling services in our community. During one of those difficult times when you find your resolution to eating smart crumble like a cookie, sit down and send a donation. It takes a few minutes and just might help you hold off and conquer that urge to eat.

6) Gleaners Community Food Bank. 2131 Beaufait, Detroit, 923-3535. Our city and surrounding suburbs are fortunate to have some good solid food programs. By getting out our checkbooks we can be of service to those who are out in the community helping people become whole again.

7) Catholic Social Services of Wayne County. 9851 Hamilton Ave., Detroit, 48202. This organization could use toys for Christmas. Instead of that next piece of pie or the slice of cake, make a phone call and find out how you can help give a gift. Call 883-8) A Gift of Reading. This program, sponsored by the Free Press Charities, serves the children of Focus Hope. They will receive a new book for Christmas. The program could use your financial donation, or purchase a book of your choosing and send it to: A Gift of Reading, Free Press Charities, P.O. Box 64701, Detroit, 48224. You may purchase a book and have it wrapped free of charge at all Walden Book Stores. What a great way to satisfy the hunger for books while you satisfy your own hunger.

The preceding eight ideas are just a proverbial "drop in the bucket" of the many ways we can celebrate the holidays in a more productive method. this Christmas. Many of them were chosen because they directly relate to our food habits and the over-abundance in our lives. Some of the organizations were chosen as examples because they speak to man's hunger in their souls.

There are many other worthy organizations throughout the metropolitan area as well. Choose your favorite organization and then make a connection. When we personalize our giving, we are more apt to remain committed to our goal. This can be a Christmas for alternatives and choices that will leave you satisfied and joyful come the New Year and no longer angry and disgusted with failure.

You can choose. Someone will benefit from your goodwill and so will you!

Streisand delivers a powerhouse performance in 'Nuts'

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

Hollywood's star shines a little brighter in the firmament with her performance as Claudia Draper in "Nuts." This is quite a different Barbra Streisand than we are used to seeing, but the energy and force remains. In "Nuts" she appears in prison garb, whitefaced and wrung out, but the spirit still burns and flames as she claws, fights and screams in defense of her rights.

Claudia is a high-priced call girl who has murdered a customer. She is fighting, not for vindication, but to prove that she is sane and capable of standing trial.

She is constantly reprimanded by the judge (James Whitmore) for interrupting the proceedings, because she refuses to let any generalizations go by and insists on exact interpretations.

As the trial progresses, it becomes apparent that there is more at stake than Streisand's right to stand trial.

This rousing courtroom drama, based on a true story and written by Alan Capon who produced the play in 1980, examines the questions of what is insanity, what is normal, who decides and what are the motives.

101 PRAYERS

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in you perpetual glory. Amen

Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer three consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day you wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as you favor has been granted. Thank you for favors received. V.F.
