

Fifth-graders meet their senior citizen pen pals

For Maire fifth-graders, a lesson in letter-writing turned into a more important lesson in sharing with senior citizens.

As part of the fifth-grade curriculum in the Grosse Pointe public schools, students learn how to write a variety of letters, including business and friendly letters. Teacher Christa Goldsmith suggested that her students practice letter-writing by corresponding with the nearby residents of St. Joseph's Home for the Aged in Detroit.

In September students began writing to their senior pen pals, sharing news of their families, hobbies and after-school activities. They asked the residents about their favorite TV shows, what foods they liked to eat, and whether they like to read.

"But we didn't ask them their ages," Jake Howlett said. "That wasn't important."

Goldsmith acted as mail carrier for the pen pals, dropping off the students' letters after school and picking up the residents' replies. Not all the students received answers to their letters. Jake's pen pal had arthritis and was unable to write. One of Shaughan Orzechowski's pen pals was in the hospital. But that was not important either.

The students who did get letters shared them with their classmates, and when it was time to meet their pen pals in person, everyone was excited — and a little apprehensive.

"We were nervous and worried that maybe they didn't want to be our pen pals," Dan Gutmann said.

When they arrived at St. Joseph's, the students were impressed by the home's spacious backyard, its beauty parlor and gift shop, and the giant fish in the aquarium. They all agreed that the residents' rooms were much smaller than the bedrooms they had at home.

Meeting their pen pals was the highlight of the trip. Laurie Ness described hers as "peppy and friendly," and Dan Gutmann's turned out to be short instead of tall and Belgian instead of French. Some had difficulty hearing, but those difficulties were

Smoke alarm alerts family

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

A fire in the 700 block of Lakewood in Grosse Pointe Park was brought under control after four hours early Sunday morning. A smoke alarm on the second floor of the home was credited with alerting the family and saving their lives.

When the first alarm came in at 5 a.m., the house had already filled with smoke, and fire had spread within the walls from the basement to the upper levels, according to Capt. William Furtaw.

The second alarm was called five minutes later and the third alarm at 5:15. Grosse Pointe and Grosse Pointe Farms also responded and additional personnel were later requested from the Woods and Harper Woods. According to Furtaw, the fire was under control by 9 a.m., but firefighters were still extinguishing reigniting fires throughout the rest of the morning. Damage is estimated at $200,000.

The cause of the fire is believed to be related to a basement party that was held earlier in the evening.

Students take the lead in substance abuse prevention

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

It's easy to ask young people to "just say no," but saying no all the time is hard.

"It seems like every weekend you are faced with alcohol and drugs," said Missy Carson, a North-High School sophomore. "It seems like everyone thinks that if alcohol isn't there, then it's not going to be fun."

Carson, along with dozens of students from schools around the metropolitan Detroit area, including South High and University Liggett School, took part in the Teen Leadership Conference held at South last month.

A substance abuse prevention program, the conference is a weekend of educational training in an alcohol and drug-free environment. Students were asked to volunteer an entire weekend within the confines of the school. They learned about the dangers of alcohol and drug abuse, examined the problems facing young people living in a chemically dependent family, and finally developed school substance abuse prevention action plans.

"Yes, there is a definite need for this type of program in our schools," said Kathleen Kaiafas, a junior. "If you are going to be successful, you can't do it by drinking or taking drugs."

That along with the message that young people aren't alone with the peer pressure and temptations presented by substance abuse were two of the key messages presented to the students.

"The conference is a start," said Woods Detective Dan Koerber, who is assigned to North High School. Koerber, who took part in the conference, said it provided insight to the students on the dangers of substance abuse, and also enabled them to look at the problem from different perspectives.

"Hopefully, we will be able to develop student clubs or an organization which will be designed to support students in not using," said North substance abuse counselor Doug Merkle.

Koerber said attending the conference was a positive experience for him.

"It was good for me to see kids admitting to recognizing problems with drugs and alcohol," Koerber said. "We are constantly telling them that alcohol and drugs are bad, but we never know if the message is getting across. They are the ones who will change their ways; we can't do it for them."

Koerber said there is a feeling within the community that there is a "terrible alcohol problem." He said when students are found with alcohol, they are issued a minor in possession ticket. It is a civil infraction and they will have to pay a fine.

Because the schools and the police departments work closely, if parents request it, there can be a referral made to a school counselor. At both North and South, there is a Student Assistance Program designed for helping students who have run afoul of the law, or who are seeking information about substance abuse.

"If there is a referral, the student is assessed and a determination made whether the student needs services either within the school system or outside," Merkle said.

The overall goal for the conference was to leave the participants with hope and some skills necessary to carry through with some programs to provide alcohol and drug-free activities.

So far since the student group is in its infancy at North, there has been little planning, but the students have ideas.

Andrea Lovasco, a 10th-grader, said that a winter Snow Bash has been discussed, complete with an organized snowball fight, snow sculpture contest and other winter fun.

"We also discussed holding parties, dances and sports activities," she said. "All without alcohol."

Eva Klein

By Pat Paholsky
News Editor

Her name is familiar to many Grosse Pointers.

She taught copper and silver jewelry-making for the Department of Community Education for 40 years and she taught Grosse Pointe schoolchildren the art for seven years. For the Red Cross, she taught an arts and skills class for servicemen during and after World War II.

She's a charter member of the Silversmith Guild and she has exhibited at the Detroit Institute of Arts and the Toledo Museum of Arts, among others. Her creations are on the altars of churches, and the American Craftsmen Council asked her for sides of her work to send to schools.

All of these activities have made her name familiar to many people in the area, but the same people may not know that Eva Klein was one of the first woman fencers in Detroit.

"I had my first lesson at the Bonstelle Playhouse with Jessie Bonstelle," she said, explaining that her husband belonged to a fencing club and encouraged her to join.

He also encouraged her in metalwork. As an engineer, "he thoroughly enjoyed buying tools for me," she said. John F. Klein died about 11 years ago and the tea set she was working on at the time remains unfinished.

Her career in metal began when her three daughters were attending St. Paul's School. The school started a Girl Scout troop and she was asked to help. After a class at Marygrove, she taught the girls how to paint on coffee cans.

A shop teacher at Denby was teaching a metals class at the Neighborhood Club and Klein learned to make tie clips there.

That was the beginning. The Red Cross asked to teach a class at the Marine Hospital. "Every Friday I had a class and, of course, I was learning all the time by teaching."

From there, she studied under various teachers and "that's when I really started having classes of my own."

Eva Klein

Klein developed four exercises to give her students a feeling for metal and the method was so successful, she used it for 40 years. With the method, students learned how to saw metal, how to file it, how to anneal (soften) and how to cut solder, all the while making pieces of jewelry. Each of the exercises contained a

Have a key made; help the Capuchins

For the fifth year, Village Lock at 18554 Mack will make keys for 50 cents each, with all the money going directly to the Capuchin Soup Kitchen.

The event will run for 10 days this year, from Monday, Dec. 14, through Thursday, Dec. 24. The store is open Monday to Friday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

The event, which garnered about $200 the first year, raised almost $700 last year, according to co-owner Bob Mowbray. He said he is hoping to raise $1,000 this year.

The store has an easily identifiable landmark — an ever-changing mannequin. Mowbray said she'll be dressed as Santa during the 10-day event.

Grosse Pointe North Choir

North choir headed for New York

Grosse Pointe North's 103-voice Concert Choir has been selected from more than 700 entries from throughout the United States to sing in Avery Fisher Hall at Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts in New York April 17.

The Concert Choir, under the direction of Ben Walker and assisted by Margaret Steele, is the largest of four choirs chosen to sing in the concert titled, "A Salute to Broadway."

This performance, which honors Broadway composers and musicals, will also feature Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians. The concert is under the direction of E. Jon de Revere and James Herbert and is produced by World Stage Productions.

The North choir will leave for New York April 14 to begin intensive rehearsals for the performance. There are educational excursions and Broadway experiences planned as part of the trip as well. The choir will be rehearsing for five to eight hours each day on the three days preceding the performance.

"I'm very proud of this group," Walker said upon learning of the choir's selection. "They deserve it. They have a wonderful attitude and the willingness to work very hard. The community as a whole deserves it. We will be representing all of Grosse Pointe when we perform in the music capital of the world in one of the finest concert halls in the world."

Some of the expenses for the Lincoln Center concert and performers are being underwritten by groups such as Reader's Digest. It will be necessary, however, for choir members to raise about $70,000 in the next three months to ensure that every member will be able to go to New York.

Since all of the choir members participated in winning this award, all of them should have the opportunity to perform in this very special concert, North's Choir Parent Support Group has gone record as saying. "They are all working hard to pay for a portion of the money needed for the trip. We sincerely hope that the whole community will get behind their efforts and will help them as they bring Grosse Pointe's name to Lincoln Center."

The choirs of North have a rich heritage. Since the school opened in 1968, there have been only two choral directors. From the beginning until his death in 1981, Herman Clein developed vocal music into a strong, well-received program. Walker, a friend of Clein, took over the program following Clein's death. Since then the choirs have continued to grow in numbers and strength.

The choirs and ensembles have sung for patients at Harper Rehabilitation Center in Detroit, at the General Motors Building and were invited to sing for the worldwide Christmas telecast to General Motors employees. They also provided the entertainment to kick off Metropolitan Detroit's 1987 "Toys for Tots" program.

The Concert Choir will perform a special concert March 25 and 26 featuring the music they will perform in New York in April.

The public will have the opportunity to hear all of the North choirs perform next week at their annual Christmas concerts on Wednesday, Dec. 16, and Thursday, Dec. 17, at 8 p.m. at First English Lutheran Church, 800 Vernier Road. Tickets are $3 each and may be purchased at This and That For People on Mack Avenue, two blocks south of Vernier, from Dec. 10 through Dec. 15. Senior citizens with Gold Cards may pick up their complimentary tickets across from the main office at North on Dec. 15 between 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Auction to feature Great Lakes items

Nearly 20 years ago, elegantly-appointed cruise ships sailed the Great Lakes. Aboard such a ship, the S.S. South American, the late Harry J. Wolf took and sold photographs that captured a leisure pursuit that is no longer available.

Items from his estate, including photographs as well as other marine memorabilia, will be auctioned Saturday, Dec. 12, at 10 a.m. at Dossin Great Lakes Museum, 100 Strand, Belle Isle.

As an added attraction, items recently salvaged from the freighter Regina, lost in Lake Huron during the Great Storm of 1913, will also be shown and sold at the auction. The whereabouts of the Regina had long been a mystery until it was found recently near Port Sanilac. Special viewing hours for the auction items are Thursday, Dec. 10, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Friday, Dec. 11, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and Saturday, Dec. 12, one hour prior to the auction.

Proceeds from the auction will go to help maintain the collection of marine memorabilia willed to the Dossin Museum by Wolf.

Local residents get MADD

By Pat Paholsky
News Editor

Barbro Lynton, who was born in Sweden and now lives in the Farms, wants to talk to your group. So do Joseph and Irene Walker of the Woods.

The Grosse Pointers have just completed a four-week speakers bureau training course with the Wayne County Chapter of MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Driving) and they believe they can give an informative and interesting talk that goes beyond statistics, which Lynton said bore people.

Barbro Lynton

"We talk about how people's attitudes have changed from 1978 to 1988," Lynton said. "The laws are changing and Michigan has been in the forefront of that."

Drunk driving fatalities, which were down until 1983, are up again, she said. "I think that the perception is that we are always getting better and we don't have to worry as much. It is a pervasive problem because it's accepted."

Lynton said it's depressing to hear about young people who want to go to parties, but don't want to drink. They know such behavior is unacceptable by their peers. As a result, some have offered to be designated drivers, which allows them to go to the party and gives them an excuse for not drinking.

Lynton said she believes the designated driver concept, in which one person — the driver — does not drink in order to get his or her friends home safely, condones drinking.

"We feel education is a great part of coming to grips with this problem," she said. "I feel it's important that the more we can speak to the community, we can enforce with parents how they can be role models."

Lynton said speakers gear their talk to the group, whether it's Kiwanis, church or professional organizations or schoolchildren. To arrange for a speaker, call the Wayne County Chapter at 422-6233.

Lynton said MADD is also looking for victims of drunk driving accidents, since MADD has a victim assistance program. "We help them through the court system which is very important," she said. "There are laws in Michigan now in which the victim does have rights."

Victims who belong to MADD are exempt from paying dues

Thieves grab, run

The Grosse Pointe Radio and Television Center on Mack is minus one video camera after a grab-and-run Friday afternoon.

An employee was showing a $1,300 camera to a customer when his attention was diverted. The man, along with a friend, ran out of the store with the camera.

The thieves are described as white males in their early 20s. One is about 6 feet tall with a stocky build, blond short hair and a fair complexion. There is no description of the other man.

which are $20 a year. Lynton said, "We love to have new members, not just for the numbers, but for the newsletters and publications. We like to see people involved with other aspects of MADD."

There will be classes for court monitoring in February. The program is a way to support the victim's family as well as keeping an eye on how the courts treat drunk driving cases, she said.

MADD is the original sponsor of Project Graduation, now a year-long program run by a coalition of substance abuse programs, schools, volunteers and businesses in the Detroit area. Some SADD (Students Against Drunk Driving) chapters and Safe Rides programs are the result of Project Graduation, Lynton added.

Membership in MADD is open to everyone, not just mothers or victims. Lynton first became involved with the group in Los Angeles where she was living, when she worked in the MADD office. She is not a victim and says, "I'm not against drinking per se. A lot of people think we're abolitionists." She adds that she enjoys a glass of wine and that her husband is in the beer business.

Lynton believes the higher speed limit will lead to more deaths on the road. Michigan, she said, has bad drivers, and that's coming from someone who moved here from Los Angeles, she adds. The freeway conditions there are generally ideal, she explained, whereas the snow and ice here make our roads dangerous.

The public is invited to an annual event held throughout the nation — a candlelight vigil for victims. The vigil will be held Monday, Dec. 14, at Mariners Church, near the Renaissance Center, at 7 p.m. The names of all the local victims of drunk driving will be read by local officials while participants hold lighted candles.

And on New Year's Eve, MADD and radio station WOMC will sponsor a Life Ride program, where callers who need a ride home can call for a cab through the radio station. There is no charge to the rider and the cost is picked up by an underwriter.

Better watch out, drinking drivers warned

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

It's easy to fall into the trap. It's the holidays and you feel like relaxing and enjoying yourself. Invitations to parties mount up faster than snow on the driveway, and once there, there'll be plenty of holiday cheer to go around. You've imbibed, perhaps too much, and now it's time to go home.

In Grosse Pointe Farms and throughout the area, police will be on the lookout for drivers who have been drinking. The Farms will add two additional patrols from 8 p.m. to 4 a.m. between Dec. 11 and Jan. 3.

"They are being added for two reasons," Farms Police Chief Robert Ferber said. "They'll be looking for the drunk drivers and anything suspicious to protect the community from the increase in burglaries that accompany the holidays."

Farms Prosecutor Matthew Rumora said that traditionally the court caseload increases significantly with drunken driving arrests during the holidays.

"We are going to take a closer look at these cases as far as plea bargaining goes," Rumora said. "People have had enough exposure to this to know better than to drink and drive. What we are looking at is no reduction in charges by plea bargaining for those whose blood alcohol level is over .15."

The state limit for drunk driving is .10. Below .10 usually results in the lesser charge of impaired driving. For most first-time offenders whose blood alcohol level is over .10, plea bargain agreements usually result in a reduction of charges from operating a vehicle under the influence of liquor (OUIL) to impaired driving.

"The warning we want out there is that you don't want to be caught drinking and driving in the Farms," Ferber added. "This is the time of year when the occasional drinker will drink too much. We don't want to arrest people, but if they don't take precautions..."

"If you know you are going to drink, walk if the party is close enough," Ferber said. "Take a limo, call a cab, do anything but drive."

Woods Public Safety Director Jack Patterson said his department already has a full-time alcohol enforcement patrol car on the road every night.

"We'll continue with that and also beef up the patrols some," Patterson said. "The traffic volume on Mack will remain heavy until after New Year's. We will also beef up our patrols during shopping hours."

Minors, who drink illegally, have a safe haven if they contact one of several Safe Rides programs in the Grosse Pointe area. South, North, University Liggett and Our Lady Star of the Sea each have a Safe Rides program in which students can call for a ride home.

"We look for any kind of out-of-the-norm driving," Ferber said. "people driving too fast or too slow or with the windows rolled down when it's cold out."

"Even the kinds of erratic driving that aren't necessarily a violation of law gives an officer grounds for making a traffic stop," Rumora said. "Field sobriety tests can then be administered, and finally the portable breathalyzer test can be administered."

Farms Traffic Officer Jack Patterson said anybody who registers .08 or even below is going to take a ride in a police car.

"It's either bring them in or scrape them off a tree later," Patterson said. "And no one wants that. We are trying to get the word out that you just don't drink and drive in this city, and if you do, we are going to be tough."

"What does it cost for a cab?" he asked. "A dollar a mile? An OUIL charge will cost you $1,500 plus attorney fees, and an accident can cost you your life or the life of an innocent victim."

Barbro Lynton, a board member of the Wayne County Chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, said MADD, in conjunction with the Michigan State Police, will announce a Red Ribbon Campaign later this month.

The Farms resident said the campaign, in which red ribbons will be tied to the door handles of police and private cars, will serve as a reminder to everyone "to not drink and drive."

Freeze new sales of handguns in Detroit, Mahaffey says

By Jenny King
Special Writer

Municipal ordinances freezing future sales of handguns are only part of what needs to be done to make our homes and communities safer, according to Detroit Councilwoman Maryann Mahaffey.

Addressing a Middle Hour Education class at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church Nov. 22, the pro-restrictions councilwoman cited ways Detroiters and suburbanites are redirecting the frustrations of individuals away from the anger and violence that have come to characterize our society.

"Mediation," Mahaffey said, "is gaining acceptance in schools and neighborhoods. It is an (impartial) alternative to violence, which is often the only way people know to resolve their problems."

Mahaffey said students, teachers or adults from the community have been trained to intervene and quickly defuse potentially explosive situations in schools. Volunteers do similar mediating on behalf of block clubs when neighbors are squabbling. The object is to help both parties in a conflict become an active part of its solution before they come to blows.

The problems that beset the city are not exclusive to Detroit, she reminded her audience. On a smaller, less-publicized scale, the same types of violence occur in suburban areas as well as other large metropolitan centers.

New York City, Washington, D.C. and Chicago, she said, have taken effective measures to control the further proliferation of handguns among private citizens. Mahaffey proposes a freeze on new sales of handguns in Detroit, a compromise approach to a total ban, which is on the books in some communities.

She also advocates mandatory training in the use and storage of weapons for currently licensed owners, plus periodic re-registration of these firearms.

"It is incredible how many lost or stolen weapons are never reported," she said. "Often the gun has been taken by a family member. A high percentage of kids' guns come from their homes or the homes of neighbors or relatives."

Mahaffey believes individuals should be denied the right to replace lost or stolen guns. If they cannot get another, it might serve to make people more responsible, she said.

The Wayne State University professor of social work offered some startling statistics about guns and personal safety. A homeowner is six times more likely to be shot if he and an intruder are both armed, she said. Only about one percent of all shootings are in self-defense, she said. Fifty percent of the guns involved in crimes are stolen weapons.

National handgun legislation isn't on the horizon, she said. Congress now is dealing with the legality of plastic bullets and plastic guns with so few metal parts they can pass unnoticed through conventional detectors.

"We're the only country I know of to shoot each other the way we do," she said.

"We have to be prepared to embark on a number of routes to reach a safer society," Mahaffey said. "They may be uncomfortable and expensive, but they are necessary."

These would include developing new ways of handling criminals and their incarceration. It will mean dealing with feelings of insecurity in a gun-restricted society. It involves constantly scrutinizing existing and proposed legislation and responding to it.

Mahaffey encouraged her listeners to oppose the passage of legislation in Lansing that would prohibit local governing bodies from effecting gun controls. She asked them to think about adopting city ordinances that will freeze gun purchases and place mandatory jail sentences on any individual convicted of committing a crime while possessing a handgun.

She said the state currently allows property owners to register their real estate under names other than their own (including temporary corporations), with Post Office boxes as addresses. Unreachable, irresponsible absentee landlords and homeowners have left Detroit blighted with empty, rundown buildings which, if their taxes go unpaid, don't revert to the city for at least four years. They are a menace to any neighborhood, she said, often serving as drug houses at worst or unsafe playgrounds for children at best.

It took about five years for Chicago to get gun legislation on the books, she said. "If there are enough people who insist and persist, we will win," she said. Opposition in Detroit argues there are already enough laws on the books, she said.

Judge to decide day care issue in Woods

A preliminary injunction has been continued, preventing Grosse Pointe Woods from interfering with the day care operation of Sheila Temkow, a Shoreham resident, until after Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Lucile Watts renders a final decision in the matter. Judge Watts began an evidentiary hearing Friday afternoon to hear testimony, but had to postpone it before closing arguments could be made. The attorney for residents who brought suit against Temkow, David Belanger, said no new hearing date has been chosen. He said the possibility exists for attorneys to submit written closing arguments, eliminating the need for additional hearing time.

After numerous complaints from local residents, building inspector Earl Wakely sent Temkow official notice on June 2 to stop her day care operation, citing Section 5-4-1 of the zoning ordinance. This section of the ordinance prohibits business, commercial or industrial use of the land that would substantially interfere with the development or maintenance of single-family dwellings in the district.

More recently, more than 100 people attended a public hearing of the planning commission to review a proposed amendment to the zoning ordinance that would set up conditions under which day care would be allowed in a residential area. At the hearing, it was clear that the majority of people in attendance favored the idea, however, the commission voted 8-1 not to recommend any changes. The issue is expected to come up again at the city council level.

Can divided government really work?

In Lansing and in Washington, people are asking these days whether divided government really works. The answer to the question is that there is substantial evidence that it doesn't work well on either the state or federal level.

It is not a new problem, of course. As David K. Shieler points out in the New York Times, there is a 200-year-old contest between the president and the Congress that was set in motion by the Constitution's recognition that tension between competing centers of power is an effective brake on the abuse of power.

With the presidency in the hands of the Republicans and Congress now controlled by Democrats, the tension between the two competing power bases increases. It now is being blamed for Washington's failure to act or its slowness to move on such important issues as reducing the federal deficit, cutting the trade imbalance and reaching agreement on U.S. foreign policy in Central America.

In Lansing, with the governorship and the state House of Representatives in the hands of the Democrats and the Republicans controlling the state Senate, the tension between the houses and the parties is blamed for the state's inability to approve the state's budget, to adopt Wayne County's aid package, to decide whether to tax domestic insurance companies and to make decisions on other important state issues.

William Schneider, a political analyst at the American Enterprise Institute, told the Times that the last year of the Reagan presidency is going to be a coalition government. And then he added: "Anything that is accomplished is going to be accomplished with the cooperation of the Democrats."

The president may be learning that lesson himself, albeit rather belatedly.

Despite his one-side triumph in 1984, he learned that the Democratic victory in 1986 made it impossible for him to win confirmation from the U.S. Senate of two recent conservative nominees to the U.S. Supreme Court. And now he is learning that he will have to rely heavily on the Democrats for approval of the nuclear arms control agreement he is about to sign with the Soviet Union.

Another example of the problems caused by divided government is offered by Lloyd Cutler, who served as counsel to President Jimmy Carter. He contends that Washington's difficulty in delivering on its two-year $76 billion deficit reduction plan is compounded by the fact that one party holds the White House and the other holds Congress.

He says that a federal deficit in the range of 2 percent of the gross national product is generally regarded as sustainable while a deficit above 3 percent is not. His point is that since World War II the deficit has climbed above the 3 percent level nine times, and every single time has been during a period of divided government.

Cutler points out that divided government emerged from national elections only four times in the 19th century, but has occurred in four out of the last five elections.

Cutler blames this development on the rise of presidential primaries, the increasing use of television and the subsequent decline of political parties and party labels. So, says Cutler, a third of the voters no longer regard themselves as members of a political party and even party members have no qualms about splitting their tickets.

The result: more and more frequently elections result in divided governments, especially at the federal level.

So what can we do about it? Cutler's solution is an unlikely one: "The persistence of divided government will not be reversed until the voting public is ready to recognize its high costs."

But how and when will that desirable situation arise? Cutler doesn't say. And since we see little probability that the Republicans will recapture the House of Representatives in 1988, even though they might regain Senate control, the only possibility for an end to divided government next year appears to be the election of a Democratic president.

However, in view of the weaknesses of the party's 1988 presidential candidates, that doesn't seem likely either. Instead, we apparently will have to muddle along with divided government, bad as it often is, and hope that future presidents and future congressional leaders, as well as future governors and legislative leaders in Michigan, will be able to work out better methods of cooperation.

Public safety inches ahead

Now that the Farms council has adopted a resolution to negotiate a consolidation of the police and fire departments, the Pointes have moved one step nearer the day when all five municipalities will be served by public safety departments.

True, the completion of negotiations in the Farms may take some time because the firefighters are still in arbitration over their contract for the current year. However, the council took the position the Farms no longer will negotiate separate contracts with the police and firefighters after Dec. 31, 1987.

So unless some new obstacle arises or the negotiations become stalemated, it is reasonable to assume that the Farms in the not too distant future will follow the path taken earlier by the Shores, City, Woods and Park in consolidating their police and fire departments.

In interviewing Mayor Palmer Heenan and candidates for the Park city council prior to the recent election, we found that everyone was enthusiastic about the adoption of the public service department in the Park. The Park council had studied the proposal carefully, appointed a special City Commission on Public Safety to investigate the plan and make recommendations, and then adopted it by a unanimous council action.

In the Park, the plan has made it possible to put more uniformed public service personnel on the streets and thus give the residents a feeling of greater police protection. At the same time, there has been no loss in the response time or the fire protection afforded to residents by the unified department.

With the Farms inching toward adoption of a similar public safety department, there ought to be even better cooperation and coordination among the unified departments in the future. There has even been speculation that the five Pointes might organize a single department to serve all five municipalities or a least set up a body representing all the Pointes to coordinate the public safety activities.

In its resolution of approval, the Farms council said that current personnel in the police and fire departments would be given first priority in filling the new combined positions. It did not cover the questions of when officers will be cross-trained, what will happen to people who cannot pass the training and who will become director of the new department.

However, those are details that no doubt will be ironed out during the negotiations. The important point is that the Farms has taken an official move to keep in step with the rest of the Pointes by organizing a unified public safety department.

After the summit

To the Editor:

There is reason to hope that President Reagan and Secretary General Gorbachev will sign the disarmament treaty at the summit meeting. If so, it will establish a significant precedent in relations between our countries and earn the gratitude of multitudes around the world.

The treaty, however, will remove only about four percent of the super-power stockpiles, which amount to approximately 25,000 warheads on each side. So what happens after the summit meeting is very important.

The Physicians for Social Responsibility, an organization dedicated to the prevention of nuclear war, has stated its views about this. Victor Sidel, its president, said it is crucial that both countries consider successful summit talks as the first step in a deliberate plan to reduce nuclear weapons.

Among other actions it believes important are to join with Russia in refraining from nuclear weapons testing and in the orderly reduction of troop strengths in Europe. Also, it states we should stop working on Star Wars, which it considers the principal obstacle to meaningful nuclear disarmament.

Help available

To the Editor:

An article in the Grosse Pointe News is credited with informing about two dozen residents that help is available to deal with the "common cold" of mental illnesses — depression. The Nov. 5 story dealt with Joanne, a 35-year-old Pointe resident who has formed the first eastside support group for individuals suffering from manic-depression and depressive illness.

There were three people from the community at the October meeting, and after the article appeared, 27 people attended the November session. About two dozen more people who did not attend the meeting called for information, referrals to local physicians and recommendations for books and other information on the subject.

Although some people continue to function with the illness, many are incapacitated by feelings of helplessness, hopelessness and even suicide, according to mental health experts. The informal rap group discussions are conducted by Joanne under the guidance of the Manic-Depressive and Depressive Association (MDDA) and concentrate on finding professional resources to help those suffering from the illness.

Based on the November turnout, Joanne has tentatively planned to create a second group, which will meet on the second Tuesday of each month.

The next meeting is Thursday, Dec. 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the new conference rooms at Cottage Hospital. For more information, call Joanne at 882-4366 or the MDDA hotline at 559-2070. The Dec. 17 session will provide information about MDDA as well as discuss the multi-faceted aspects of the illness and inform people about literature, research and medical professionals available to help people overcome their depression.

Significant strides have been made in the treatment of these diseases, but too many people still suffer in silence. The purpose of our support group is to provide them with the resources to obtain the best treatment possible.

County pressures the state

By imposing severe budget cuts that would sharply reduce services, Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara last week indirectly put the heat on the Legislature and Gov. James Blanchard to help bail out the county.

What McNamara is trying to do is to make life so unpleasant for Lansing as well as officials and residents of Detroit and Wayne County by proposing $27.5 million in budget cuts that state lawmakers finally will act on the $26 million self-help tax package he seeks to balance the county budget.

Early reaction indicates McNamara may get some results. He immediately drew the wrath of Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit over the proposals to close one floor of the county jail and lay off a batch of prosecutors. The mayor called the proposals "insane" because they would blunt Young's plan to wage an intensive war on crack cocaine that would add to, not subtract from, the county jail population.

Young also was unhappy with McNamara's plan to cut $15.5 million from indigent health care. The mayor said McNamara is seeking to balance his budget "on the backs of the poor people of Detroit." Hospitals threatened to start lawsuits and warned that if they are not successful, they may have to deny care to poor patients.

Sheriff Robert Ficano weighed in with his own warning that further releases from the county jail would be "getting into the edge of the hard-core felons." And the county executive's proposal to close all the county parks and cut $2 million from mental health programs aroused criticism from backers of such activities.

So if McNamara's intention was to catch the attention of special interests affected, he obviously succeeded. The question now is whether the pressure brought by the special interests on the governor and legislators will bear fruit or simply arouse Lansing's anger.

Most of the opposition to McNamara's legislative package apparently centers on the proposed boost in the cigarette tax. McNamara seeks a four-cent increase to pay for criminal justice programs in Wayne County and throughout the state. Lawmakers have added another two cents to support statewide AIDS education, testing and treatment and to combat smoking-related diseases.

But a coalition of business groups has organized to fight the proposed increase. A spokesman for the Coalition Against Regressive Taxes contended such an increase would be unfair because excise taxes fall most heavily on low-income people "who just can't afford to pay any more taxes."

The increase would hike Michigan's cigarette tax to 27 cents, but even at that level Michigan's rate would be the same as, or lower than, rates in eight other states. And surely such a tax would not be as heavy a burden on poor people and other consumers as restoring the sales tax on food and drugs that was repealed a decade or more ago or passing some other tax on consumption.

What? Another bowl game?

They've done it again. They've invented a "bowl" so two mediocre football teams can play one more game, even though the season is over.

I ask you — has anyone ever heard of the Hall of Fame Bowl before?

Before last year, had anyone hid ears on the Fiesta Bowl? Two years ago, did Bluebonnet Iowl ring a bell with anyone?

I've heard of the Rose, the Cotton, the Sugar and the Orange bowls. The Super Bowl, of course. But, come on... the Lula Bowl? The Gator Bowl? The Liberty Bowl?

Can we look forward to a Yuppie Bowl? Jazz Bowl? Agatha Christie Mystery Bowl? Bimbo Bowl? Rutabaga Bowl? Gazpacho Bowl? Total Eclipse of the Moon Bowl? Artichoke Bowl? Lizzie Borden Bowl? The Pansy Bowl?

I am not fond of football. I don't get a kick out of watching 22 250-pound 6-foot grown men thrash around, trying to intimidate each other by pounding and tripping and slashing and pummeling and blocking and pushing and jumping on top of their opponents; grabbing and twisting each other's face masks; punching and clipping and undercutting and smashing into each other; knocking each other down and grinding each other's faces into the grass/mud/snow/plastic.

While this spectacle is in progress, other men run around on the sidelines wearing earphones; photographers take pictures of the mess; other men in striped shirts throw handkerchiefs and wave their arms in a relentless attempt to create order out of the violence and confusion that is taking place before a hundred thousand people.

Not only are these 22 grown men misbehaving miserably, but each one is wearing 15 pounds of restrictive clothing that is designed to protect the most vulnerable parts of his body while simultaneously doing the utmost damage to the bodies of the men on the opposite team. Each incredible hulk is decked out in a five-pound helmet, seven-pound shoulder pads, a mouthguard and a face mask. He has padding on his tailbone, thighs, knees, hips, arms and elbows. His hands, wrists and ankles are taped. He's wearing a flak jacket, a girdle, spikes on his shoes, and a roll bar on his jersey.

These guys, obviously, are up to no good.

Also — as far as I'm concerned, any sport that requires an ambulance waiting on the sidelines — is suspect.

My husband and I are graduates of the University of Michigan. I have 23 years experience as a season ticket holder for the annual slash/grab/stomp/run/scream/ at the U of M stadium in Ann Arbor. Yawn.

The day isn't a total waste. I look forward to the Michigan

Marching Band: the gut-thump of the drums, the way the marchers sweep onto the field in double-time high-stepping precision. I never get tired of the familiar vamp that crescendoes into 101,000 enthusiastic fans singing "Hail to the Victors."

I get goosebumps when 101,000-plus people stand up, respectfully, just because a scrap of red, white and blue cloth is run up a flagpole. I anticipate being a waver in The Wave. I like singing the Alma Mater — and I'm especially impressed by that dramatic gasp of silence, mid-song, right after "har-ar-vest plain. Hail!..."

I love crisp fall afternoons, the friends with whom we share our two-hour tailgate pre- and post-game picnics. I like to check out the crazy maize and blue get-ups that Michigan football fans never tire of inventing. If it isn't raining or snowing — or too cold or too hot — a football Saturday in Ann Arbor is neat.

Once a year. And if I didn't have to sit through that doggone game, the whole day would be perfect.

I'm convinced that bowl games are marketing devices — pure and simple — designed to earn big bucks for school athletic departments. Bowl games are excuses to stage yet another violent football extravaganza on the playing field, while promoters hype and sell high-priced tickets and unload scads of chintzy logo-encrusted merchandise such as flimsy pennants, plastic football-shaped key chains that break if you hang a key on them, sleazy souvenir shirts that shrink and wrinkle in the wash, flimsy plastic cups that crack if you squeeze them and mass-produced stuffed animals of indeterminate species.

Meanwhile, back in the city, one of my favorite local businesses is tottering. Sanders, the 112-year-old Detroit manufacturer of candy, chocolate syrup, ice cream and assorted wonderful confections, is in danger of going splat because they haven't enough money for a huge advertising campaign or for reorganizing their production and marketing procedures.

I propose that Sanders sponsor a bowl game. Call it the Frosting Bowl or the Bon Bon Bowl. Match up two sadsack teams like, say, the Detroit Lions vs. Columbia University. Rent the Silverdome. Rename it the Confection-dome or the Chocodome, temporarily.

Sell some bumper stickers and hats and banners and puppets and mittens with team logos on them. Sell beer. Hot dogs. Ice cream cones. Candy. Hot fudge sundaes. Chocolate football-shaped lollipops. Milkshakes and sodas.

Dress up some young chickies in short shorts, teach them how to wave a pompon, and call them the Cupcakes or the Petit Fours or something. Leak to the press that one of them posed nude for Playboy.

Call a press conference and let players make fools of themselves by answering predictable questions with cliché answers. "Duh. Yeah. We're really gonna go out there and give it our best. Yeah. The team's really up for this. Duh. In spite of our injuries, we're, uh, gonna go out there and uh, do it for the fans."

Sit back Sanders, and watch the big bucks roll in.

lyi Pardon me

There was one incident at the Grosse Pointe Santa Claus Parade that wasn't planned but looked like it might have been.

As the parade approached the Village, it was led by a fire truck and a Grosse Pointe Farms patrol unit. The patrol car, which happened to be a 1986 Ford Crown Victoria, died as it approached the new Arbor Drugs.

Officer Mike McCarthy was in the vehicle, and the car was pushed out of the way by a City patrol unit, which just happened to be a Chevy.

The parade wasn't slowed down a bit, nor is there much to all the information we've just given you, until you know that when McCarthy looked through his windshield into the crowd, he spotted someone who was probably a bit embarrassed by the Ford's performance.

Edsel Ford II was standing right in front of where the patrol car came to rest.

Caroling

Grosse Pointe South's Choir has come up with a rather innovative fundraiser.

For the minimum donation of $5, a small group of the choir will go to the house of the donor's choice and sing several Christmas carols.

Members of the choir, under the direction of Ellen Bowen, will also drop off a card to the house where they visit, which says who sent the gift.

The effort is a fundraiser for the choir, and will take place on Wednesday, Dec. 16.

Those interested in sending the choir to a friend's house should call Ann Matish at 331-2136.

Checks should be made payable to: Grosse Pointe South Choir, and be sent to Ann Matish, 712 Berkshire, Grosse Pointe Park 48230. The person sending the gift should indicate his or her name, the name of the house where the carolers are to go and a time when the recipient might be home.

The choir hopes to make this an annual tradition, and this year's success will do a lot toward making this a reality.

Dec. 11, 1947 —

The New York Times reported that Secretary of State Marshall, at a Foreign Ministers Conference in London, accused the Soviet Union of taking assets from its occupation zone in Germany at the rate of more than $500 million annually. Marshall asked the Foreign Ministers Council to agree not to take anything out of Germany after Jan.

1 except reparations deliveries in capital goods, not current production. The United States, he said, was spending $700 million in West Germany just to keep Germans alive. Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov said Marshall's charges were unfounded.

The day before, 18 people were killed in Palestine. Nine Jews, eight Arabs and one British soldier died, in spite of reports from Tel Aviv of an Arab-Jewish truce. Both Arab and Jewish leaders disclaimed responsibility for any truce move and each said that only the other side could make the move for peace.

President Truman asked Congress to be cautious before prohibiting shipments of oil abroad for the purpose of conserving petroleum reserves at home.

Truman also announced plans to remain in Washington during the Christmas holidays instead of returning to his home town of Independence, Mo.

The House tentatively authorized $590 million of emergency relief for France, Italy, Austria and China. The amount was $67 million below the amount recommended by the administration as a minimum for effective resistance to Communism in those countries.

Two pilots, George W. Truman and Clifford V. Evans, landed their Piper Cub airplanes in New Jersey after a 25,162-mile trip around the world which took them 123 days to complete. Their planes, equipped with 100-horsepower Lycoming engines and modified to take extra gasoline tanks and additional navigational instruments, were the smallest ever to fly around the world.

RCA Victor TV sets with 10-inch picture tubes were selling for $325. Included in the TV ad was a listing of programs you could be eye witness to: hockey, boxing, basketball, wrestling and football games, news, a children's program called "Small Fry Club" and cooking demonstrations.

A yearly subscription to the New York Times, daily and Sunday editions, was $17. One-stop service to Seattle from New York was advertised as taking only 14 hours and 45 minutes on Northwest Orient Airlines. Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians were playing at the Roosevelt Grill, a Hilton hotel on Madison Avenue in New York.

In Grosse Pointe, the village of Grosse Pointe Woods received word from the Michigan Supreme Court that it had the right to own and operate a public park in St. Clair Shores. The 44-acre plot of land in the Shores had been purchased from Mrs. Edsel Ford on a land contract a few months earlier. St. Clair Shores authorities had withdrawn their request to have the future park used by residents of St. Clair Shores as well.

The Pointe's second Men's Night was to be held in the Village on Dec. 15 from 7 until 10 p.m. No women shoppers were allowed.

Pets need protection

The Humane Society offers the following advice for protecting your pet during the harsh winter months ahead:

- Antifreeze can be deadly. Its sweet taste attracts animals, but even a small puddle of antifreeze can kill or seriously injure a cat or dog. Check your car's heater and radiator hoses for cracks, and the radiator seepage. When adding antifreeze, use a funnel and clean up any spillage, since it evaporates slowly. Store containers out of reach.

- Salt and some caustic chemicals used to melt snow and ice can irritate and burn the pads of your pet's feet and underside. Do not allow your pet to lick its feet — the chemicals will burn the mouth and can cause serious problems if ingested.

- A warm engine in a parked car often attracts cats who are left outside on cold nights. On cold mornings, be sure to bang on the hood before starting the engine to scare off unsuspecting felines. The best protection for your cat is to keep it indoors year 'round.

- While dogs should not be left outdoors when the temperature drops sharply, dogs that often stay outside require a draft-free, watertight shelter. A doghouse should be no more than 12 inches longer or three inches higher than the dog, since the animal's body heat cannot warm a doghouse that is too large. The floor should be raised a few inches off the ground and covered with cedar shavings, which will control parasites and help retain the dog's skin oil. Dry, shredded newspaper is also acceptable, but must be changed often. The doghouse should face away from the prevailing wind direction. Dogs need fresh, clean water available even during the winter. Check the outdoor water supply frequently to make sure it hasn't frozen over and secure the dish or bucket so it won't spill. Avoid using metal containers in freezing temperatures.

- Pets may need more food in the winter, since keeping warm depletes energy. The warm dry atmosphere of the house may dry out an animal's skin and coat. Wright recommends the addition of a small amount of vegetable oil to the pet's food — one teaspoon for every 30 pounds of body weight.

- Some dog's coats are long and thick enough to keep them warm and dry, but it's a good idea to towel off your pet after a walk. Small, short-haired or older dogs may need the added protection of a sweater.

- This is a good time to de-flea your pets. Your dog should be bathed thoroughly and dipped following the first hard frost, when the outdoor fleas die. Canine flea powder is poisonous to cats, so be sure to use a product specifically designed for cats when treating your felines.

Choosing a low-level radioactive waste site

By William R. Bryant Jr.
Special Writer

Legislation creating a Low-Level Radioactive Waste Authority, which is responsible for choosing a disposal site in Michigan, is awaiting final passage in the Legislature.

At issue is whether the Legislature should take the responsibility for the final selection of the site chosen by the Authority. I believe we should. The key bill of the three-bill package, Senate Bill 297, has gone to conference committee to resolve this issue. As the bill now stands, the governor would appoint the members of the Authority which would then make the final decision. The remaining two bills are awaiting the governor's signature.

Yesterday

A Grosse Pointe resident was shot by his wife in his home, while they and two friends were engaged in target practice with a .22 Marlin finger action rifle. The man was taken to Bon Secours Hospital and was reported in serious condition with a bullet in his abdomen. The couple had rigged up a 35-foot shooting range extending the length of the living room, across the dining room, and into a rear bedroom, where a target was fastened to a heavy block of wood on the wall. The husband had forgotten to call out a warning as he approached the block of wood to put up a new target.

Jewelry stolen

More than $4,000 in jewelry and personal items were stolen from a McKinley Street resident, who has been out of town since June.

He reported that four rings, two watches, two gold bracelets, two gold watches, British pounds and silver items were missing. Police have no suspects.

Michigan was selected, by a seven-state compact, to be the site for the storage of low-level radioactive waste because we generate one-third of the approximately 210,000 cubic feet of waste per year of the states in the compact. The states included in the compact are Michigan, Iowa, Indiana, Missouri, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin.

The Authority must choose three possible sites by June 1, 1988. The final selection must be made by Sept. 1, 1989. The legislation also stipulates that a site would have to be at least 10 miles from any of the Great Lakes, unless it is located at or adjacent to one of Michigan's existing five nuclear plants.

The seven states will share the expenses incurred as a result of locating the disposal site in Michigan. It also allows the Department of Public Health to issue an order to permanently or temporarily close a site upon finding a potential hazard. In addition, the bill establishes an institute to be started by Oct. 1, 1988.

These bills are in response to the federal regulations which state that each state or region must have a site ready to accept the low-level radioactive wastes by 1993, at which time federal law says that Washington, South Carolina and Nevada, current waste sites for the rest of the country, may refuse wastes from other states.

No one likes the idea of having radioactive waste stored in Michigan. However, these bills will provide strict regulations and safety precautions that are among the strongest in the country.

series of steps, and Klein said, "I started them off very logically. They learned how to treat metal and what it will do for you — its limitations and possibilities and the proper name for tools."

much for so little investment." Some of the other things students learned were how to pierce metal and how to set stones. During the 1940s, Detroit was a hotbed for silversmiths with a number of noted teachers and artists, and the Silversmith Guild was formed. "We would have a meeting and a demonstration Friday nights, usually at the art institute, because they sponsored the guild at first," she said. "And on Saturdays I would get down in my shop and go through everything they demonstrated."

About 1950, Frederick Colby, noted Grosse Pointe silversmith, heard a lecture on enameling at Cranbrook. "He's always been very generous with his knowledge and when he came home, he called me and told me about the enamelists. At the time, nobody was enameling," she said, adding that it was too costly to do much experimenting. The substance is ground glass and metals.

The art took off "like wild-fire," Klein said. At the time, artists were reluctant to reveal their techniques and so Klein traveled to Cleveland and convinced one of the artists to teach a class here. "We had to have extra classes for people to enamel."

For 18 years Klein exhibited in a juried show at the Detroit Institute of Arts, which had established an artists' craftsmen show.

She became involved in an ecclesiastical art guild and was commissioned to do a chalice for the Indian River Shrine. She also made an altar cross and pair of candlestick holders for the St. Barnabas Nurses Guild at St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral.

She had a one-woman show at the Toledo Museum of Arts in 1955 in which she exhibited 30 pieces of hollow ware.

Klein studied at the Society of Arts and Crafts (now the Center for Creative Studies) where she learned riveting and casting with the lost wax process. She said she had a lot of fun with other kinds of casting, including charcoal. "You dig a design in a block of charcoal, melt your metal on it and slap another piece of charcoal on top."

Among her fondest memories are the seven years she spent teaching children in the Grosse Pointe schools. "They were more fun, those kids. You can't imagine how much I enjoyed them."

She didn't let them use a torch or a saw, "because they could saw off their fingers," but she did let them pound. "The ceiling was a little low and the noise would get so terrible when they all started pounding."

Over the years, Klein has made many bowls for wedding gifts and bracelets and cufflinks for graduation gifts. And she still spends hours in her basement shop, experimenting with reticulated metal, which resembles a fossil, and Japanese metal, which contains 27 layers of heated metal. She's even making a bracelet using violin keys. "You can use lots of things for textures."

She said, "I always enjoyed doing this, because I could be home when the girls came home." Now Klein has eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Her interest goes beyond creating art works. Active in the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Michigan Mayflower Society, she has researched her family. She just completed the research of another family and wants to get the information recorded for them. Her other interests include growing herbs and playing bridge.

Woods police looking for blue van

A 10-year-old girl was accosted Dec. 2 as she walked home from school, according to Woods police.

The incident occurred near the intersection of Morningside and Roslyn as the girl was walking home from school with her brother and other children. As they passed a full-size dark blue van with a light stripe down the middle, a man shouted an obscenity at the girl to get in.

The children ran to a nearby crossing guard, who alerted authorities.

Police have no description of the driver, but the passenger was described as a white male, 17 to 18 years old with dark hair, wearing a dark shirt, blue jeans and Converse tennis shoes.

Anyone with information should call the Woods police at 343-2410.

How employers can comply with immigration recordkeeping

All employers, whether they have one employee or 100, must comply with new recordkeeping requirements under the Immigration Reform and Control Act.

As an employer, you must complete a new I-9 form for each new person hired after Nov. 6, 1986. This form is designed to verify that the new hire is a U.S. citizen or a legally authorized alien worker.

Within three business days after you new hire begins work, you must inspect documents that verify the person's identity and eligibility to work, and you must complete the I-9 form. (There is one exception: New hires have a 21-day grace period for producing the documents if they give you a receipt, within three days after hire, showing that they have applied for documents but have not yet received them. This 21-day rule does not apply to people seeking work authorization from the INS, however.)

ployers have been asking about the new recordkeeping requirements.

• I didn't receive any I-9 forms, and I don't know where to get them. As long as I record all the required information, is that enough to comply with the new requirements?

No, you must use the I-9 form. Substitute forms and informal recordkeeping are not acceptable.

Some businesses have asked about changing the form to better suit their needs — printing the form with their company logo or with a disclaimer stating that federal law, not company policy, requires the verification. Others have asked about reproducing the form in languages other than English.

But the I-9 is an official government form, and it may be modified only by the INS. You may write to the INS suggesting changes to the form, but you may not change the form yourself.

During the past year, INS has been sending I-9 forms to employers all over the country. If you missed getting them, you can buy them from any local government printing office retail sales store. They cost $13 for 100, but one form will do, because you may photocopy it as needed.

• What do I do with the I-9 forms once I've filled them out? Do I mail them in to the INS?

No, do not mail them in. The law requires that you retain the I-9 forms in your files. Keep them on file and available for inspection by officers of the INS or the Department of Labor. INS officials will give you three days' notice before inspecting the forms. But they are not required to show you a subpoena or warrant.

You must make the forms available for inspection at the place where the officers asked to see them, or, if the forms are kept at another location, you must make them available at the INS office nearest that location.

• How long must I keep the I-9 forms on file?

The I-9 forms must be kept on file for three years after the date of hiring or for one year after the person leaves your employ, whichever is longer. In other words, the form for an employee must be kept for at least three years, even if the employee resigns after three days.

• What happens if I fail to comply with the recordkeeping requirements?

If you fail to complete and maintain I-9 forms, you are violating the law. You may face civil penalties ranging from $100 to $1,000 for each employee on whom forms are not properly maintained.

For more information, call the local INS office or the INS toll-free number at: 1-800-777-7700.

When the visit was over, the students who had been nervous and worried in the beginning admitted they felt happy and satisfied. "I felt rich," said Stuart Mackenzie.

Had they learned anything from the visit? "That letters make people feel better, make them feel happy," said Erin Springstead.

"And that old people are nice; they're just regular people," said Jake.

The visit was such a success that the students plan to return in December to distribute gifts they have made and sing Christmas carols.

One resident said "These children are so nice, maybe things aren't really so bad after all."

Parent-toddler classes are a boon to moms and tots

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

If there's anyone who has need of a support group, it's the parent of a toddler, and thanks to a special interest class sponsored through the Grosse Pointe Department of Community Education, there is one.

Instructors Anita Dupes and Susan Gaidica, both parents of toddlers, organize the weekly two-hour classes.

Parents, generally mothers, bring their child or children to the class, where toys are available and craft projects have been developed and materials provided.

"This is one of the few programs anywhere where both the child and the parent are allowed to participate together," Dupes said. "The parent and child get to interact with one another, and also get their first chance to interact with other children. They learn basic social skills, such as playing together and sharing."

"I have a 5-year-old and one younger than Charlie here," Gaidica said, as she worked on a craft project with her 15-month-old son.

"I just felt Charlie was being left out of a lot of things. This class gives me a one-on-one with him, and it's great for him to be with other kids."

Both Dupes and Gaidica were parents with children in the program before taking on the leadership roles. They have no formal training as instructors, but both have participated in the Systematic Training for Effective Parenting (STEP) program, which they recommend to develop mutual respect between parent and child, cooperation, responsibility and self-reliance.

Dupes plans each week's session. The class usually includes several craft projects, play time for the parent and the toddler, and probably most important, a 20-minute discussion group for the parent.

The group is currently participating in a mini-extension of the fall session, taking place during the holidays. The 30 parents participating in the group are working on Christmas projects with their children, and the parent discussion groups touch on holiday topics.

"I think the networking with other parents is very important," Gaidica said. "It is nice to talk with other mothers of 2-year-olds about toilet training, sleepless nights and other problems. It is good to know you are not the only one going through all of this."

Dupes said fathers have come to the class, and in several cases, grandparents have filled in when mom couldn't make it.

There are two classes, one on Tuesdays and another on Thursdays. Each class has 15 parents and 15 or more children. There is a $40 fee for the eight-week session and an additional $11 for the mini-session. There is an additional fee for parents who bring more than one child.

"We have had very positive feedback from all the parents who've taken the class with their children," Dupes said. "If the demand increases, we might consider a third class. This is the first time we have had two classes."

Lisa Montague of the Park has two children in the program — Stephen, 1, and Jonathan, 2.

"I love it, it is so much fun," Montague said. "It's two hours of concentrated play, and it doesn't mess up my house. There are art projects, treats for the kids, and you get to talk with the other mothers and exchange ideas."

"This has been so good for her," said Martha Miller of her 20-month-old daughter, Meghan. "She gets to be around other kids, and it gives me something to do for two hours in the morning."

In the back of the room, there is a jingling in the air as the children and parents put together a silver bell craft complete with jingle bells. It's a simple craft, but it takes the full attention of the toddlers, who seem to love every minute of the closeness with their mothers.

Santa will visit the group next week. Parents were asked to bring a $3 to $5 present for Santa to give the youngsters.

The spirit of giving was part of the topic for the group discussions. The actual title of the discussion was "Tis the season to be greedy." The group discussed such things as what to get children, how to determine what it is the child really wants for a gift and how to get the child to share with siblings and other children.

Dupes suggested that instead of giving money to the youngsters and having them pick a gift out for their father or vice versa, they might consider helping the parent.

"Whenever she helps me out around the house, we make a star and put it on the tree," Dupes said. "That way they learn that gifts aren't always something you have to buy."

The parents share information about how they feel when the kids are good and when they're bad.

"It is good to know that you are not alone that when they're so bad, you feel like hanging them," Dupes said. "Some parents think they are strange or abnormal when they feel that way, and it's good for them to know we have all felt that at one time or another, and how we coped with it."

Susan Gaidica, left, one of the instructors for the Grosse Pointe Community Education Parent/Toddler program, talks with two of the class participants, Barbara Wagner and son, J.P., 21 months.

Martha Miller gives daughter, Meghan, a ride. Miller said the Parent/Toddler program is an ideal way for her to spend time with her child and meet other parents and share ideas.

The crafts tables are a busy place. Parents can work with their children on a variety of projects each week, enabling the youngsters to learn new skills.

ALA joins in hazardous waste disposal effort

The American Lung Association of Southeast Michigan called on Gov. James Blanchard to form a task force to establish rules concerning the location of municipal and hazardous waste incinerators and processors in Michigan.

The Lung Association proposal reflects the heated controversy surrounding the Detroit Resource Recovery Facility now under construction. Significant siting concerns also affect recent applications for two incinerator permits in Downriver Detroit (including one adjacent to Historic Fort Wayne), as well as existing incinerators in suburban Detroit.

"No one seems to know how many waste handling facilities we need, where they should go or what characteristics and controls they should have," said Rod Burton, president of the association.

In his letter to Blanchard, Burton called on the governor to appoint a task force to set standards based on need, alternatives to reduce waste quantities (such as source separation and recycling), appropriate catchment areas and desired characteristics for potential incinerator and processor sites.

"Our goal is for the state of Michigan to set standards that will allow it to provide an adequate, yet not excessive, number of facilities and to locate those facilities so as to equalize the burden among various regions of the state."

By establishing the task force, the Lung Association hopes the governor will re-establish the method of siting incinerators and processors so that applications for such facilities will be viewed "in broader context than a project-by-project, site-by-site struggle of political wills and legal strategies."

Burton's letter also called on the governor to support the efforts of the new Air Toxics Policy Committee — recently formed by the Michigan Air Pollution Control Commission. The committee will examine and regulate the emissions of toxics into the environment.

South to sponsor Alumni Day

The fourth annual Alumni Day, sponsored jointly by South High School and the South Mothers' Club, will be held Thursday, Dec. 17, in South's gymnasium.

Alumni Day has been designed by South's Counseling and Guidance Department to assist students in making the transition from high school to college as smooth as possible.

Recent South graduates, in cooperation with the admissions officials of their respective colleges, will return to the school to share their new college experiences with juniors and seniors.

A College Fair format, similar to College Night, will be used. Each college represented will be assigned an appropriately identified table in the gymnasium. The college freshmen and sophomores will sit behind tables and field questions about college life on that school's campus.

Seniors will be excused from their classes on a voluntary basis from 8:55 to 9:55 a.m. Juniors will be excused from their classes on a voluntary basis from 10:15 to 10:52 a.m.

The students may choose the three or four colleges in which they are most interested and spend their time visiting the representatives from these schools in the gymnasium. Students, who elect to participate in the Alumni Day Program, must stay in the gymnasium for the full time allotted.

"Because this program complements the official college information already available to South students through College Night and visits with college representatives, we expect a high student interest," said Russell P. Luttinen, assistant principal-student services at South.

"We expect student representatives from 50 to 75 colleges to be on hand to answer questions the students would feel uncomfortable in asking official college representatives."

To assist South students in this process, Teresa Lloyd, South's career counselor, has prepared a list of questions students should be thinking about before leaving home for college.

Lloyd and the Mothers' Club have planned a luncheon for the college visitors, South faculty members and other guests from 11 a.m. to noon in Cleminson Hall. At the informal luncheon, students can discuss their recent college experiences with South faculty members to give them feedback about their preparation for college.

Panda-monium broke out at Ferry School recently after fifth-graders in Sharon Trickey's and Dyanne Apkarian's classes raised more than $780 to adopt a panda for one year.

Pandas, which only number about 1,000, are on the endangered species list. Because their main diet source — bamboo — is dying out in the remote areas of China where they live, the Forestry Department of Sichuan Province, China, and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources have established an "Adopt-a-Panda" program to ensure the pandas' survival and growth as a species.

To raise adoption money,

Ferry fifth-graders sponsored a Family Portrait Fundraiser and collected donations from other students at school. Although only $500 is required to adopt a panda, the fifth-graders donated the extra $283 to provide additional help for their panda.

Children's holiday workshop

The Detroit Historical Museum will sponsor a Holiday Decoration Workshop on Saturday, Dec. 19. Parents are invited to join their children in making simple holiday ornaments and decorations. The workshop will be offered twice — from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

The workshops are free of charge, but registration is limited to 50 children in each session. Reservations will be made on a first-come, first-served basis. Call Walter Weaver at 833-1263.

Brown Bag Forum gives food for thought

Political cartoonist, veterinarian, wardrobe coordinator or movie-TV critic. Depending on their interest, Pierce Middle School students decide each week if the menu for their Brown Bag lunch might include a visit to the forum started this year as part of the lunch activities.

The program began this year when Principal C. Suzanne Klein presented the plan to students, faculty and parents. The process includes suggestions from all groups and the results have been rewarding.

Speakers have included Mike Duffy of the Detroit Free Press, Dr. Lawrence Herzog, a Grosse Pointe veterinarian, actor Michael Evans, and Linda Downs from the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Future speakers will include an expert on the stock market and a major league umpire. Katie Elsil, a Pierce parent, has helped contact potential speakers. Each speaker makes two presentations during the lunch period and in turn, is rewarded with a Pierce lunch.

Student Spotlight

Kristen LeAnderson

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The following was written by Kristen LeAnderson, a second-grader at Ferry School. She is the daughter of Jeremy and Michele LeAnderson of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Finally Morning Came

Once upon a time, there was a little town and they just had Halloween. They all went to bed that night waiting for November, because the children liked to write Thanksgiving poems.

The children were waiting for Monday and it never came. Their alarm clock woke them up and it was dark, so they went back to bed. They slept a little longer, but it was still dark, so they went to their mom and asked when is it going to be morning.

The mom said, "I don't know." By the way, the dad was out of town, so the mom called the father. He said, "It is light here." So the dad said, "Do you have anything over your face?"

She said no. And he said, "Are the blinds up?"

And they said no. So, they put them up and it was light so quickly that they got dressed and they were a little late for school. Then they got to school and had fun.

This space is open to any student in the Grosse Pointe public or private school system from grades 1 through 12.

Send your entry along with a picture to Student Spotlight, Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms 48236 or drop it off at the office. If you would like everything returned, enclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Paul Locrichio poses with Michael, 1 1/2, and Paul, 4, in front of four of the 6-foot soldiers he made out of old oil drums and stovepipes, paint and felt and lumber. He built the first one last year — just for fun. But he's had requests to build a dozen more. He sold eight to a roller skating rink and two to a neighbor.

His toy tin soldiers are larger than life

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Last year, just before the Christmas season, Grosse Pointe Park resident Paul Locrichio wanted to do something special for his oldest son, 4-year-old Paul. "Because I'm Italian, everything has to be bigger than life, right?" he said.

So he built a larger-than-life toy soldier and stood it beside the Christmas tree.

Young Paul loved it. Since Christmas 1986, Locrichio has built a dozen more. "I saw soldiers like this in Jacobson's one day last year," Locrichio said, sweeping his hand toward six red-white-and-blue painted six-foot soldiers standing at attention around the perimeter of his basement workshop. "The soldiers in Jacobson's were made out of cardboard. I thought I could do better."

Locrichio put together an old oil drum, some pieces of stovepipe, a little lumber, some bolts and a few bits of felt, braid and plumes to create the unique holiday decoration.

The Locrichios had a Christmas cocktail party and the six-foot soldier beside the tree was a frequent topic of conversation. One of the guests asked if she could buy eight soldiers to use in a Christmas display at Skateland West, a roller skating rink.

Locrichio agreed. "I have time. I have my days free because I work nights. I'm a collector of junk. I had some old oil drums."

Locrichio works nights as a comic impressionist. He just finished an engagement at Gino's, on 16 Mile Road and Jefferson and he'll soon be off to the Caribbean to work on a cruise ship. "I sing and do impressions," he said, "— about 50 different ones, from Johnny Mathis to Luciano Pavarotti."

He also sings at St. Joan of Arc Catholic Church every Sunday with a contemporary-pop-Christian group. "It's my way of paying back for my good fortune." The group consists of Locrichio, three back-up singers and three or four musicians.

He said the 6-foot soldiers contain about $40 worth of materials: tin; lumber; paint; black felt for the faces; three yards of $1-a-yard gold braid. It takes approximately five days to complete one soldier. They're painted red, white and blue, with black accents. The helmet alone takes three days to do because it's three colors, and each color has to dry before the next color is applied, he said.

Each soldier stands solidly on a painted wood base that has to be sanded, primed and painted. The boots are made out of wood, the legs from stovepipes. A custom-built wooden frame slips into the legs and is built to support the oil-drum body. "They're very sturdy," he said.

Locrichio spent a great deal of time cleaning used oil drums for the first few soldiers. He now buys unused oil drums. He said the first soldier was a rough draft, and he has made improvements on later ones. "I call the first ones the 5,000 series." He pointed to other, later editions. "This is the 6,000 series; this is the 7,000 series."

A neighbor bought two of the soldiers to place on her front porch during the Christmas holidays. Locrichio ran a newspaper ad last week, just to see if there's a market for his creations. "These seem to be something that could be used com-mercially — like for store displays. I could probably make 10 more by Christmas, but I'd have to get some help. There's no way to mass produce these."

Young Paul will be 5 years old in January. He and his younger brother, Michael, 1 1/2, are enchanted with the soldiers and with a life-sized Santa Claus figure that their father also made. He built the frame for Santa's body, slipped some old black boots on it, remade an old red suit into a fur-trimmed Santa suit, and bought a Santa mask. Santa will stand next to a soldier in the Locrichio's foyer this year during the Christmas holidays.

Banking for two!

North's Heather Mergos (14) pops from 12-feet out despite a swat from Cass Tech's Rena Kindred in the Region 3 Basketball Championships at Warren Woods-Tower last week. The Lady Norsemen lost 58-34, but they were the first girls' team at North to win a district title. They did that by defeating Lake Shore two weeks ago. For a complete look at the Lady Norsemen, see page 1C.

Christmas concert tradition continues

For 20 years, Marius Fossenkemper, former principal clarinetist with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, has offered free Christmas concerts to the public.

This holiday tradition will continue when he conducts the Detroit String and Harp Ensemble in the acoustical splendor of the 19th century Old Christ Church, 960 E. Jefferson in downtown Detroit, in the shadow of the Renaissance Center. Concert time is 3 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 13.

Featured artists will be soprano Nina Machus and mezzo-soprano Deanna Relyea, who will sing selections from Handel's "Messiah," as well as other holiday music.

Also performing will be violinist Jeremy Zeitlin, who will play Baroque master Tommaso Vitali's "Chaconne in G Minor." Zeitlin, who studies with Victor Danchenko at the Royal Conservatory in Toronto, is also in the violin master class of concert violinist James Laredo.

The Cranbrook Kingswood Madrigal singers will also raise their voices in holiday music by Virgil Thompson and Felix Mendelssohn. Other performers include pianist and organist Martin Burwell and young violinist Aurora Lopez.

friends at the conference. The most important thing she learned was that students do have a choice when it comes to drugs.

All of the students agreed that the small skill groups set up at the conference were the most memorable and important part of the conference. Students were encouraged to discuss their differences, similarities and what they felt were the problems caused by substance abuse. The students said these group discussions were informative and often very emotional.

"We spent the time trying to figure out ways for prevention and just talking with the other kids," said Natalie Cespedes, a sophomore.

Most of the students admitted the two-day conference was draining. The students slept in sleeping bags on the floors of classrooms. The day officially ended at midnight, but discussions went well into the early morning hours.

Because the emphasis was on being drug-free, organizers prohibited smoking by any adults and served only caffeine-free coffee.

Phil Oliver Diaz provided musical entertainment and brought a message about substance abuse. Peter Alsop played guitar and also brought a message. The students were treated to a dance on Saturday night.

Carson said because there were students from a wide area, many had preconceived stereotypes of what Grosse Pointe students were like and vice versa.

"It didn't take long and those ideas were put to rest," Carson said. "People were serious about what we were there for. There were no problems with anyone sneaking out for a cigarette or anything like that. No one felt the need to."

Merkle said the school administration is planning to bring another group to meet with students from both schools and possibly ULS to help increase and fine tune the leadership skills learned at the conference.

The students plan on meeting several times by themselves, and later with student volunteers to organize drug-free activities. Adults, including Merkle, Susan Pierce, a South substance abuse counselor, Koerber and Michael Smalley from ULS, will help guide the students.

"The thing we want to get across," Koerber said, "is that we will help wherever we can, but this is going to be up to the students. The decisions will be theirs."

Koerber said a number of organizations, by generous donations, made the conference at South possible. He said that the Agley Foundation, a local organization, donated $900, and the local Fraternal Order of Police Lodge and Associates No. 102 donated $1,000.

"The consequences for teenagers using drugs and alcohol are just too great," Koerber said.

The students agreed.

"It can be done," Kaiafas said. "It is totally possible for students to have a good time without alcohol or drugs. We need a lot of support though — not just 12 people can do it."

Jennifer Galvin, a sophomore, said that the conference provided her with the knowledge that she was not alone when it came to trying to cope with the substance abuse all around her.

"It is the support you get from other students and from the community that will help a lot," she said.

Have you seen this man?

This is a composite of a white male, about 21 years old, 5 feet, 8 inches, 150 pounds, brown hair and brown eyes, with a pock-marked face who picked up two girls on Harper at California who ran out of gas.

The subject was driving a late model dark blue or black Mustang-sized two-door car. He operated under the pretext that he was going to his home to get a gas can and then return to the car.

He then produced a knife and demanded a sex act. When the girls refused, he began waving the knife and both girls sustained minor cuts. After one of the girls gave in to his demands, they were released.

Christmas evokes memories of long-ago holiday seasons

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

The stores are crowded. The parking lots are impossible and there are warnings to travel in twos when shopping, yet the spirit of Christmas prevails.

Some consider shopping a chore. Others look on it as a challenge. It's an adventure. It's fun.

retreat. Take courage and join the multitudes.

Comfort yourself with the thought that next year it will be different but also be honest. You know it will be the same story. For Christmas has its own season of excitement — something the early shopper misses. When the wreaths and lights and decorations come out in the stores tired feet and weary bodies resulting from that all-too-familiar Christmas rush.

In your eagerness to get just the right gifts for those very special people in your life, don't push yourself too hard. If you find yourself getting tired, sit on a bench in the mall and watch the other shoppers. Think how wonderful it is that so many people — the possible, the impossible.

Like most people everywhere, you would like to live in a safe, peaceful world, free from the threat of nuclear annihilation. You would like to know that people — wherever they live — have enough to eat. You would wish that those searching for work and a decent living find it. You hope that somehow a way is found to curb crime and make our homes and streets safe.

But these are intangibles and in no way an answer to the question of "what do you want?" It means someone wants to experience the satisfaction of showing their love and appreciation by giving you a gift you will treasure.

Often older people are reluctant to name their preference.

What they fail to appreciate is that those who love them want to show that love by giving them something. Everyone has day-to-day needs. Tell those needs. You will enjoy them more if they carry a tag of love rather than a price tag.

Along with the possible, if sometimes not probable, gifts are those that exist only in memory. For those who had the blessings of many Christmases, the season always brings into focus those which are treasured and those, if it were possible, we would like to live again.

Every year the ghosts of Christmas past rises up like mists on a foggy morning demanding to live in memory. And every year we welcome them back to their rightful place in our lives at this special time.

There is a similarity in how both young people and older people recall Christmases they have known. They are not all remembered, just those which for one reason or another were marked by some special gift or event. Otherwise they merge into a collage of traditional celebrations.

Ask an older person about any Christmas he or she knew when the children were young and the memories return — the joy of celebrating with a first-born, the delight and fun of getting up on Christmas morning and watching children unwrap their gifts, the year the dog tipped over the tree, the hours spent assembling a toy and then watching the child play with the box it came in instead.

Precious memories. Endless memories. These are the days we would live again if such a gift were possible. These are the dreams that steal quietly into our lives to make Christmas a little more than giving and receiving.

Free health classes offered

Persons with cardiac disease can learn to live healthier with free classes that cover the dietary, physical fitness and medication concerns of cardiac patients.

The classes will be offered at the Bon Secours Nursing Care Center in St. Clair Shores on the following dates: Jan. 20, Feb. 17, March 16 (all Wednesdays). Class hours are 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. A lunch based on the principles discussed during instruction is included.

The Nursing Care Center is located at 26001 E. Jefferson. Reservations are required. Call 779-7126 or 779-7000.

Whatever, it's too late now to wish you had taken advantage of an unseasonably warm November and early shopper sales. Too late now to back away from the crowds and compete for those hard-to-find gifts. Too late now to envy those conscientious shoppers who have completed their list, wrapped their gifts and are free to enjoy the pre-Christmas activities, concerts, parties and walks through homes decorated for the season. Time is no longer fleeting. It's flying. There's no and streets and windows, it inspires us to open our hearts and pocketbooks and spend.

As we wander through a veritable fairyland of merchandise, we are glad we waited. Such a fine array of merchandise was not here in September. Another thought — would the gift we wanted at an earlier date still be on a preferred list now? The whims and choices of September may not be those of December. This may be rationalizing but it provides solace to those with ple are trying so hard to please those they love.

Commercial it may be, but the spirit of buying and giving is a very human expression of the love of one person for another.

Back to shopping and then time out for lunch. Have something special. Treat yourself. Enjoy the day.

It's over. You have something for everyone. You are tired but happy.

But wait a minute. What do you want for Christmas? Think Kerby School students Jenny Curry and Brian Lorey play RAMROD, a mathematics pentathlon game. Kerby's Pace (Program for Academic and Creative Education) adviser Juanita Arndt oversees the students.

Foundation continues to enrich students

The Grosse Pointe Foundation for Academic Enrichment, in its 16th year of sponsoring enrichment programs for public school students, is selling a board game to increase the endowment.

The sale of Grosse Pointopoly is a fundraiser produced for the purpose of increasing the endowment, and is now available for purchase in its final edition. The board game is for sale at Barnes School, North High's Rainbow Bridge and South High's bookstore. It is also available at the War Memorial, Neighborhood Club, This & That for People, Two's Company, Young Clothes and Village Shoes for $15 plus tax.

The foundation was established in 1971. It was the brainchild of a number of local citizens who conceived the idea in memory of JoAnn Bokram, a dedicated school volunteer.

The game features local businesses that purchased space as property owners representing a geographical and retail cross-section of the five Grosse Pointes. Kathleen Judge, a 1986 graduate of South, did the artwork on the game board.

The foundation has supported numerous programs over the years, including workshops for teachers and librarians, grants of money to all nine elementary schools for the purchase of classroom materials, and poetry-writing workshops.

Foundation officers for the 1987-88 school year are: Kathleen Herschmann, president; Eugene Matecun, vice president; Sharon Masek, recording secretary; Peggy Davis, corresponding secretary; and Ann Nicholson, treasurer.

Other trustees include Anne Berry, Cathie Brierly, Lisa Caramagno, Alfreda Frost and John Hammel. Edward Kane, Richard Kay, Eva Koch and Florence Miller serve on the board. Gordon Morlan, Marge Nixon, Ginny Peattie and Claire Perry are also trustees. Linda Schneider, Robert Welch, Catherine Weyhing, Joy Williams and Ruth Zinn complete the board.

Student journalists invited to compete

High school journalists from throughout the state are invited to participate in the 1987-88 High School Journalism Contest sponsored by the Michigan Press Women.

The contest is open to any Michigan student who has had his or her work printed in a newspaper, school papers, yearbook or other publication between Jan. 16, 1987 through Jan. 15, 1988.

This year's competition includes five categories: news stories, sports stories, feature articles, editorials and feature photography. First, second and third place certificates will be awarded in each category and Michigan's first place winners will be advanced to national competition, sponsored by the National Federation of Press Women.

A copy of the 1987-88 rules and entry blank is being mailed to high schools throughout the state. Michigan contest entries must include a complete entry blank and must be postmarked by Jan. 16, 1988.

For additional information, contact Naida A. Ayadi, director, MPW High School Journalism Contest, 1105 East Field Drive, Lansing, Mich. 48917. Phone is 517-323-3111.

New tax law changes medical deductions

Requirements for deducting medical expenses not covered by insurance have been changed under the new federal income tax law.

Under the old law, those out-of-pocket medical expenses that exceeded 5 percent of an individual's adjusted gross income were tax deductible. Beginning in January 1987, the new law increased the minimum proportional amount to 7.5 percent.

For example, if an individual's adjusted gross income is $25,000, then under the old law he/she could deduct all out-of-pocket medical expenses that exceeded $1,250 (5 percent of $25,000). Under the new law, that same individual will be allowed to deduct those uninsured medical expenses that exceed $1,875. The individual will have to spend $625 more on medical expenses before his expenses are deductible.

In order to take full advantage of medical expense deductions, it is helpful to keep accurate records of all out-of-pocket medical expenses. Such expenses include doctor, dentist, and hospital bills which are not covered by insurance policies. Out-of-pocket medical expenses also include the cost of health insurance premiums, prescription medicines, transportation to and from the doctor's office, eyeglasses, dentures and hearing aids.

Some less obvious expenses for special services also qualify for deduction. Some examples of deductible special medical services include psychological analysis, treatment for alcohol or drug addiction and chiropractic services.

Medical expenses paid on behalf of dependents are also eligi-

SIGNS OF LOSS

Many persons with degenerative hearing loss are not aware of it until the condition becomes so pronounced that others notice the handicap. Some of the early signs of hearing loss are:

- Straining to hear, finding yourself leaning forward or sitting on the edge of a chair.
- Often asking to have something repeated.
- Seeming to others to be not concentrating or paying attention.
- A tendency to turn radios or television louder.
- No longer hearing your watch ticking, falling rain, wind, a telephone ringing.

If you have any of these warning signs, see a hearing professional promptly to determine whether you are suffering a hearing loss.

FOR NEARLY THE PRICE OF AN AVERAGE CAR, YOU CAN GET A CAR THAT'S NOWHERE NEAR AVERAGE.

According to the National Automobile Dealers Association, the average price of a car today is about $12,800. The Saab 900 costs a couple of thousand more.

The average car, however, is presumably built to average standards. Whereas the Saab 900 is effectively built to the same standards as the Saab 900 Turbo, a car that costs over $20,000.

The average car offers average handling. The Saab 900 handles like a European sports sedan.

And the average car comes with an average assortment of equipment. While the Saab 900 comes with that plus a few somewhat unordinary features such as Halogen sealed beam headlights, central locking, and a 20-watt, anti-theft Clarion AM-FM Cassette four-speaker stereo.

All of which would seem to indicate that for the car buyer with above-average standards the course is clear. Straight in for a test drive in the Saab 900.

Msgr. Hickey: A man of charm and accomplishments turns 94

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

A delightful, witty and scholarly gentleman will celebrate his 94th birthday Sunday, Dec. 13. He is Msgr. Edward J. Hickey.

There is not much that can be said about him that hasn't been said before. The former Grosse Pointe has worked tirelessly for the Catholic church and for Detroit, but he has also managed to cultivate other interests. He is a renowned art collector, a world traveler, a historian, a car buff and an award-winning sailor. He is what any senior citizen would wish to be, retired but sustained by the interests cultivated over a lifetime, glowing with health than anyone 40 years his junior might envy. He meets each day with enthusiasm and plans for enough projects to take him through many more years.

The present and the future are important to the monsignor, but he has good memories of a past well spent.

Many of his accomplishments were recalled for him on an anniversary of his ordination. He has been a priest for 68 years. It was written of him: "His multifaceted genius which has earned him the sobriquet 'Universal Man,' has never ceased to serve as a model for others in his profession.

And again: "He is the oldest priest in Michigan. There is no illusion that these words could begin to reveal the noble life of Monsignor Hickey, a man of comprehensive thought and universal philosophy. Simply to know him is a fond journey into life beyond its meaning."

His life, like so many others his age, runs concurrently with the history of progress. In his lifetime he has seen dirt roads become sweeping freeways; the horse and buggy replaced by the automobile, the Wright Brothers' bold venture develop into jet planes, farm lands become cities, annexation of state and exploration into space. He has kept pace with it all and perhaps a little ahead of it.

He likes to tell the story of the handsome horsedrawn buggy with "Hudson's Big Store" imprinted on the side that would occasionally pick him and his father up at their home. It was an impressive experience for a young boy to ride in such an elegant vehicle.

Other fond memories are the times he spent at Higgins Lake as a boy where he learned to swim, hike, play tennis and sail, interests that occupied him for 50 years.

He is also a scholar. After graduating from the University of Detroit in 1914, he received a master's degree in business administration at Harvard University. From St. Paul's Seminary in Minnesota, he went on to earn a doctor of philosophy at the Catholic University of America. He has also been awarded honorary doctorates in laws and letters from the University of Detroit and Wayne State University.

A world traveler and an art collector, Hickey has been to Europe 22 times. In the spring he will conduct a seven-day tour of Europe. One trip he particularly remembers is a trip to Cairo where he met Teddy Roosevelt.

His most memorable trip, however, is one he made as a boy to the Mediterranean in 1910. He toured the great art museums and a lifetime interest in art was born. It was later strengthened by two years spent at the Sorbonne in Paris.

He began collecting. The result was the Cloister Gallery on Gratiot and East Grand Boulevard where he once had on display some 3,000 art objects. Proceeds from the sales benefited numerous charities as well as St. Mary's of Redford where he serves as pastor emeritus and says the daily 6 a.m. mass.

Hickey is also interested in history. In 1967 he was named official historiographer of the city of Detroit, a title he still retains. A brilliant historian on Detroit and Michigan, he is regarded as the foremost authority on the life of the Detroit pioneer, Father Gabriel Richard.

In addition, he is also an astute businessman. When the late Cardinal Mooney persuaded him to accept the position of chancellor of the Archdiocese of Detroit and pastor of St. Aloysious Church, he lifted the archdiocese out of the red during the Depression when it was on the edge of bankruptcy.

Asked what he considered his best contributions to Detroit, Hickey said his service to the Detention Home of the Wayne County Juvenile Court and the Ford Republic School for Boys where he taught, while he was also teaching at Sacred Heart Seminary.

Tree farms offer selection

Michiganians pining for the perfect tree to spruce up their homes for the Christmas holidays can select and cut their own by visiting a state tree farm, reports AAA Michigan.

More than 589,000 evergreens are available for sale at 73 farms listed in AAA Michigan's 1987 Cut-Your-Own Christmas Tree Guide.

Buyers will find tree prices up slightly from last year, with Scotch pines running from $5, $1 more than in 1986. Bigger trees, such as a Douglas fir or blue spruce, may reach up to $50. At farms charging by height, perfect prices vary from $2 to $4.

Those who choose to leave their walking shoes and saws at home will find they can still bring home a forest-fresh tree. Thirty farms offer wagon rides throughout the grounds while 47 have pre-cut trees available. Wreaths and other evergreen items are for sale at 34 tree farms.

Some farms have gift shops, entertainment and visits with Santa Claus.

To help buyers select top quality trees, the Michigan Christmas Tree Association has initiated the first Michigan Snowfresh Christmas Tree Program.

Thirteen Snowfresh farms are listed in AAA Michigan's guide, with more expected to join the program next year. The Snowfresh growers — recognized by a tag tied to trees — guarantee high quality care, including soil management, disease protection and continual trimming and shaping throughout the growing process.

Michigan Snowfresh trees meet or exceed the guidelines for US -1 Grade. They are mechanically cleaned and have reasonably straight trunks.

AAA Michigan offers these tips for persons visiting a cut-your-own farm:

- Bring a hand saw. Most tree farms provide saws, but supplies may be limited during peak cutting times. Axes are not allowed.

- Saw the trunk close to the ground and shake the tree in the field to remove old needles.

- Norway, white and black spruce and balsam fir trees should be cut when temperatures are above 40 degrees to help hold their needles. Colder temperatures could cause those trees to drop their needles more easily than pines or Douglas, Concolor and Fraser firs.

- Bring some twine. Forty-four farms wrap trees, but it is advisable to have some twine for transporting trees home. Secure the tree base to the front of the car to help the tree withstand wind during transport.

- If the tree is not placed in water immediately and is outside for a few days, be sure to cut an inch or two off the base before putting it into a water stand. With a freshly cut stem, the tree will easily absorb needed water. Check the stand's water level daily.

- Place the tree in a cool area, preferably away from open flames and heating ducts. Inspect all electrical wires to be placed on the tree for frayed cords, damaged lights or bare spots. Never overload electrical outlets.

Introducing Scan-AlertSM Service.

Because the gap between security and no security is very small indeed.

You may be thinking about investing in an alarm system to protect your business or residence. Or you may have already invested in one. But what happens if an intruder cuts the line to that system? In most cases, the system shuts down. Unless you have new Scan-Alert* service. Scan-Alert service is an inexpensive addition for most alarm systems that use your phone line to transmit a signal to your alarm company. So not only can emergency calls get through, the system is also automatically triggered if the telephone line is cut or tampered with. Definitely a worthwhile investment for your peace of mind.

PLEASE NOTE: Michigan Bell's responsibility is limited to the transmission link between your business and your independent alarm company's monitoring facility.

*Scan-Alert service is available in certain areas. Restrictions may apply.
Scan-Alert is a service mark of Wisconsin Bell, Inc., used under license to Michigan Bell.

Shores woman makes A Good Place into a great product

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Elaine Lootens had 25 years worth of family photographs stacked — helter-skelter — on a closet shelf. "We had tons of pictures. Shoeboxes full. I kept buying albums. We had stacks of albums," she said. "The plan was that some cold winter night, my husband and I would sit in front of the fireplace and sort and store these photographs."

They never did. Then a friend asked for a picture of a sailboat race.

Within two years, Lootens had solved her storage predicament by creating, developing, financing, manufacturing and marketing a product designed to store photographs.

A Good Place is a plastic self-stacking storage box with 10 indexed slots for categorizing up to 350 photographs and negatives (35mm, 110, 126 or Polaroid prints) by subject or date. The photo file is compact, stackable, with outside labels to provide instant identification.

During the second year of her new-found role as manufacturing executive, Lootens sold between 60,000 and 70,000 of the products. All the bills are paid and she said she's close to paying off her primary investor.

She had no business experience. Before she was married to Richard, a podiatrist, she had graduated from the University of Wisconsin with a bachelor of science degree in social work. She worked for the Chicago Welfare Department as a general case worker before marrying and settling down to raise three children. While the children were growing up, Lootens was busy with family, church and civic activities.

No time for organizing photos in albums.

No time to learn the ins and outs of running a small business. "I didn't know anything about developing a product or starting a business," she said. "I discovered that I would not be able to walk into a bank without any experience to ask for financing for a new business. So my husband agreed to finance it."

She said she and her husband skimmed the yellow pages to find a list of plastics manufacturers. A Mount Clemens firm agreed to make a prototype from her husband's drawings.

"I went to an attorney to protect my idea. I applied for a patent. A Good Place is a trademark for the storage box."

She manufactured an initial batch of only 500 of the boxes.

Speedi Photo, 20237 Mack, in Grosse Pointe Woods, was her first customer when the firm placed an order for 100 of the storage units.

Lootens next began sending inquiries to catalogs. Paragon, a catalog based in Rhode Island, said it was interested. "They've been my best customer so far," she said. She also sold the product to a number of fast photo stores and a friend sold some to Kmart, where they were in stock for about six months. "But Kmart wanted me to agree to advertise the product myself. I couldn't afford to advertise, so it's no longer in Kmart stores."

"It's in a new store in Lansing called 'Made in Michigan Distributing Company' and it's in a catalog of Michigan products," she said. A Good Place is also available at the Mercy College bookstore and in a gift shop in Texas called Creative Storage. Jacobson's carried it last Christmas. She said each retailer sets its own price for the product. Catalog prices are generally higher, running between $10 and $12.50 per box.

Lootens said the whole experience of creating, developing, manufacturing and marketing her product has been an educational experience. "I learned not to take rejection personally," she said.

"It's been primarily a positive experience. I learned that women are very helpful — with networking and such." Lootens said she received help from the Women's Business Bureau, a division of the Michigan Department of Commerce. "Marketing and sales is the most difficult Grosse Pointe Shores resident Elaine Lootens conceived the idea for A Good Place, a protective storage case for photographs. She was originally looking for a way to identify, organize and store her own 25-year accumulation of family photos. She sold between 60,000 and 70,000 of her product in 1987.

Employers invited to collegiate fair

Employers — both large or small — are invited to participate in the first Michigan Collegiate Job Fair, co-sponsored by Wayne State and Eastern Michigan Universities Friday, March 25. The event will be held on the Orchard Ridge Campus of Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills.

John Crusoe, director of Placement Services at WSU, calls the fair "a rare opportunity for employers to pre-screen the resumes of student candidates in advance, and then follow-up with hundreds of selected interviews in one place."

Crusoe also points out that the pooling of resources by the fair organizers offers companies a gold mine of talent from 47 Michigan colleges and universities. He adds: "The whole point of this fair is to make it easier for employers to find competent professional help, not just from one or two universities, but from all four-year institutions in the state, and the beauty is that it's all under one roof."

The one-day fair, including a continental breakfast and lunch is $200 per company. Packets of resumes from participating students (bachelor and graduate degree holders) are available in advance for a modest extra charge. This special service will enable employers to pre-select students they wish to interview on the Fair Day.

Resumes are being categorized into the following areas: Management and Business, Sales and Marketing, Accounting and Finance, Data Processing, Science and Engineering, Communications and Liberal Arts, and new MBAs.

Further information, along with a more detailed brochure on the fair, may be obtained by calling Kay Kozora at WSU at 577-3390; or Ken Meyer at EMU at 487-0400.

aspect of a business for a small person like me," she said. She has hired a mother-daughter publicity consultant team in Dearborn to help get the word out about A Good Place.

In a small business, Lootens said, she gets to do a little of everything. So does her husband. He has been warehouse manager, truck driver and investor. She has done the billing, lugged boxes around, kept the books, written orders and made deliveries.

Lootens said she was naive at first, not realizing how much work her small business would be. She works about 30 hours a week during busy seasons.

"The product seems to have found acceptance. It's primarily a woman's product," she said. "Women far outweigh men as customers. Women do the family's organizing."

"I'd like to call the manufacturer and say, 'Produce to capacity,' but I'm not interested in a hard sell. I'd like to just let people know the product exists and it's available if they decide they need it. Many people find it useful."

Asked if she is an organized person, with neat closets and well-organized storage areas, she said, "No, I don't have neat closets. But I'm not a Fibber McGee either. This product was the answer to my own need to get organized."

Aging workforce to be discussed

Within 12 years, there will be an additional 14 million Americans over 50 and a reduced number of younger workers. These changing demographics in the workforce will be the subject of a national conference March 10 and 11 in Detroit's Westin Hotel.

The conference, jointly sponsored by the U.S. Department of labor and Wayne State University, will be titled "An Aging Workforce: Agenda For Action."

Representatives from labor, industry, government and higher education will discuss such things as retirement policies, job retraining, age discrimination, health care and new directions in labor-management relations.

John Stepp, acting deputy undersecretary of labor, will deliver the keynote address to open the conference.

Other speakers will include Owen Bieber, president of the United Automobile Workers Union; Arthur S. Flemming, former secretary of Health, Education and Welfare and co-chair of the Save Our Security Coalition; Douglas Fraser, president emeritus of the UAW and professor labor studies at WSU; Karen Nussbaum, executive director of the "9 to 5" National Association of Working Women; and Jerome Rosow, president of the Work in America Institute.

Conference registration will be $100. For more information, call 577-0278.

Park man starts home tax service

Grosse Pointe Park resident Terrance Baulch has started a new business. HomeTax, a home tax preparation service, is available for the current tax season.

Preparation of personal income tax 1040 forms will be completed on a portable computer at the taxpayer's home. Baulch tells clients beforehand what data to assemble.

"That's the beauty of it," he said. "If some piece of information is missing, they just have to go to the basement for it."

Baulch is a licensed, practicing certified public accountant with offices in Grosse Pointe Park and Southfield.

Elaine Lootens found a great deal of information about maintaining and preserving photographs while she was doing research for her product, A Good Place. Here are some things she learned:

1. Photos should not be stored in attics and basements. Store them in areas where you spend time. The living areas of a home are usually kept at a moderate, constant temperature that's better for photographs.

2. Light is the enemy of color photos. Your most important pictures should be removed from walls and desks and stored to maintain their color quality.

3. Examine family albums and check for evidence of deterioration. Pictures stored in magnetic albums with plastic sleeves should be removed and stored before the plastic permanently bonds to the pictures.

4. Stored prints should be placed in boxes made of a high quality polyester or polyethylene plastic to maintain stable temperature and humidity.

5. Never write on your pictures in ink. Felt-tip inks have a tendency to bleed. Ballpoint inks can become diffuse too. It's best to categorize pictures on a tabbed section of a storage container or use a No. 2 pencil.

6. To perpetuate the life of color snapshots, avoid instant developing laboratories. These labs often don't wash the prints adequately and chemicals that can cause deterioration aren't removed.

Surprise!

If Eleanor Pawluk had a quarter for every student she's taught, she'd be a wealthy woman. She has been teaching at Trombly School for 33 years, and last week, Principal Sheila Joyce invited school officials, board President Fred Adams and former students to help celebrate Pawluk's birthday. Each of her first-graders presented her with a carnation. Former students read poems and presented her with gifts.

Shore-dwellers' fears rise as Great Lakes fill to brim

Sheli Lulkin once could see beach behind her Chicago condo. But now it's gone, a victim of Lake Michigan waves that sometimes slap her building's fifth floor. "We are no longer on the shoreline, we are the shoreline," she says.

Other residents along the Great Lakes are paying a heavy price for the delights of lakeside living. Beaches, back yards, roads, seawalls and homes are disappearing.

"Do you know what's down in the lake?" asks Donna Asselin of St. Joseph, Mich. "The roof of my house, sinks, a stove, beds. I'd never go back on the lake. I don't think people belong on the shoreline anymore."

Record water levels

North America's fresh-water seas are filled to the brim. Four of them — Superior, Michigan, Huron and Erie — recently reached their highest record levels in this century. Ontario is close behind.

"All told, the lakes cover almost 95,000 square miles," writes Charles E. Cobb Jr. in the July National Geographic. "Together they hold some six quadrillion gallons of fresh water. That is one-fifth of all the surface fresh water on earth and 95 percent of all the surface fresh water in the United States. Pour that over the contiguous U.S. and we'd all be in water 10 feet deep.

"Today there are waves and surf more akin to oceans than lakes," Cobb writes. "On these huge expanses of water, even after a storm has passed, the waves continue to crash. Erosion occurs everywhere."

Why are lake levels at their highest? For two decades, more rain than usual has fallen, and cooler temperatures have slowed evaporation. "You can't predict climate; it's like the stock market," says Frank Quinn, head of the Lake Hydrology Group of the Great Lakes Environmental Research Laboratory.

One way to think of the lakes, Quinn suggests, is as a series of bathtubs filling with precipitation, ground-water inflow, and surface drainage from surrounding watersheds. Each bathtub, from Superior to Ontario, is lower than the next.

Channels connect the lakes, but they are so narrow that outflow is slow. For instance, a complete exchange of water in Superior would take 200 years. This means that when the lakes are full and little evaporation occurs, the water is not going anywhere anytime soon. "Everybody thinks there's a plug you can pull, but there's not," says Quinn.

Another reason for the changing lakes is something called "isostatic rebound." The earth's crust still is rebounding from the weight of the last ice age's glaciers. Although this upward thrust is only a few inches a century, it has the effect of tilting a pan of water — downward toward the south — as the outlet channels of Michigan, Erie, and Ontario are tilted upward more rapidly than their southern shores.

Diversions change levels

Man-made structures modify lake levels somewhat. For instance, the Long Lac and Ogoki diversions bring water from Canada's James Bay watershed into Lake Superior, while the Chicago diversion removes water from Lake Michigan via the Illinois River.

A 1985 study by the International Joint Commission — a U.S.-Canadian body created by a 1909 treaty — concluded that changes in existing diversions would lower the upper Great Lakes less than a foot. Erie would drop nearly half a foot.

Last November, a preliminary report by the commission said that high water levels pose a threat of a "possible emergency." The report called for improving warning programs and greater coordination of flood-control efforts.

But some along the Great Lakes say they find little comfort in reading commission reports while waiting for the next storm to strike. Two years ago, homeowners, convinced that more could be done and rejecting blame for building near shore, organized a coalition to persuade officials to pull the plugs that let water out and turn off the faucets that let it in.

Coalition co-founder Cliff Sasfy wants officials to turn off the Long Lac and Ogoki diversions, which pour an average of 5,600 cubic feet of water a second into Superior. He also wants outflow through the Chicago diversion increased.

But there are other political considerations besides those of homeowners. Because the Long Lac and Ogoki diversions produce cheap hydroelectric power, few Canadians want them closed. Meanwhile, farmers in downstate Illinois, fearing floods, want no increase flow through the Chicago diversion.

"What we need is a total management program for the Great Lakes," says Sasfy, whose LaSalle, Mich., home is scarred with watermarks that appear after every flood.

Experts question controllability

Total management of the lakes would require massive engineering: new locks, channels, and dredging. In addition to the project's huge cost, its environmental impact could be grave. Quinn's conclusion: "The ability of man to control lake levels is slim."

Curtis Larsen of the U.S. Geological Survey also suggests that the Great Lakes may have the final word. He has challenged the long-held view that lake levels rise and fall within a two-foot range above and below historic averages.

Larsen says that for centuries the lakes have been at a long-term low and are returning to more normal levels, possibly five feet higher. "The trend is upward," he adds. "I'm talking of centuries."

"If Larsen is correct," Cobb writes, "the worst may still lie ahead. Parts of downtown Chicago could be engulfed by Lake Michigan. Sections of other cities would have to be abandoned."

A beacon of Baha'i faith shines in Farms

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
Feature Editor

Jahan Fets smiles as she shows a visitor a photo taken more than 20 years ago at her engagement party in Iran. The faces in the photo mirror her smile and depict the happy occasion it was as a group of young Iranian professionals bid farewell to Fets, then a young nurse about to marry a Belgian and move to America.

Fets' smile fades, though, as she describes the fate of each person in the photo. "This man was a doctor. He was executed and left his wife with a newborn baby. This man is still in Iran, a brilliant man who is not allowed to practice his profession. And this woman barely escaped execution only because she missed a meeting because of a headache," Fets explains.

All had one thing in common: They were Iranians who were members of the Baha'i faith and were persecuted because of it.

Fets is a Baha'i, as were her parents. Her son is also a Baha'i. There are several dozen Baha'is in the Detroit area, over 100,000 in the United States and more than four million worldwide, including 300,000 in Iran. There are fewer than nine Baha'is in Grosse Pointe, which constitutes a "group." Fets is her group's "corresponder," which means that she serves as liaison between the group and the national assembly and receives all the international Baha'i news to pass on to group members.

Recently, Fets wrote a letter to her local newspaper which included the names of 12 Baha'is known to be in imminent danger of death in Iranian prisons, as well as the identities of six other Baha'is arrested in October and now being held in Tehran's Evin prison.

Iran does not recognize the Baha'i faith as a legitimate religion and thousands of Iranian Baha'is have been jailed, many tortured for their beliefs.

By writing such letters and in general, informing the world of what is happening to Baha'is in Iran, Fets says that members of the faith all over the world hope to put pressure on the Iranian government to stop the executions and further persecutions of Baha'is.

The names of the 12 in immediate danger are Ehsanullah Ayadi, Farajullah Saadati, Sohrab Dustdar, Ramezan-Ali Amui, Behnam Pashai, Humammad Dehqani, Ezzatullah Khorram, Mehran Tashakkor, Farid Kziri, Vahid Qodrat, Shahrak Hoveydai and Parvin Fanaian-Edilkhani. The six arrested on Oct. 21 include former National Spiritual Assembly members Hasan Mahboubi and Jamaluddin Khanjani and Changiz Faniyan, Sohrab Hajjiyan, Bahman Samandari and Rozita Samandari.

"We hope that the Ayatollah Khomeini will see that the whole world is finding out about what they are doing to Baha'is," Fets says.

The comfortable Grosse Pointe Farms home Jahan Fets shares with her husband Joseph, son James and her mother is worlds away from the Iran she knew as a young woman. And, while she has been an American citizen since 1976 and has not visited her homeland since the revolution in 1979, Iran occupies much of her thoughts.

"I miss my friends. I miss Iran. In Baha'i, we are taught that whatever country you are in is your country. I am an American and I am proud to be an American. I have many friends, both Baha'i and non-Baha'i. But sometimes, even now, I wake up during the night and think of the situation in Iran. I wonder why these things have to happen to so many innocent people.

"I think that Khomeini is a sick man. No normal person would send small children or pregnant women to their deaths," Fets says.

Baha'is in Iran are accused of heresy because the Baha'i belief in the common foundations of other religions goes against the Moslem belief that Mohammed is the one true God.

Baha'is believe in one God, in the oneness of mankind, in independent investigation of truth, in the essential harmony of science and religion, in the equality of men and women, in elimination of prejudice of all kinds, in universal, compulsory education, a spiritual solution of the economic problem, in a universal auxiliary language and in universal peace upheld by a world government.

Baha'is are not born, Fets says, they choose to accept the faith if they so desire.

Baha'is believe that the Bab, meaning "The Gate," was a messenger of God who came to prepare the people for the coming of Baha'u'llah, who was the "Glory of God." Abdu'l-Baha, meaning "Servant of God" was the oldest son of Baha'u'llah. Abdu'l-Baha's oldest grandson, Shoghi Effendi, is called the "Guardian of Faith." He died in 1957 and currently, the Universal House of Justice in Haifa, Israel, administers the affairs of the Baha'i faith throughout the world.

Because a primary belief of Baha'is is peace and harmony, the current persecution of members of the faith is even more difficult to accept, Fets says. Iran's abuses of human rights, in particular the Baha'i religious minority, have drawn attention all over the world. President Reagan and members of the U.S. Congress have repeatedly spoken out in support of the religious rights of Iranian Baha'is. Proposed legislation sponsored by Sen. Paul Simon (D., Ill.) urges the president to take all necessary steps to focus more international attention on the plight of the Baha'i community.

And in Grosse Pointe, Jahan Fets will continue to help make the fate of Baha'is in Iran known. She will also quietly worry about a cousin who is in an Iranian prison.

"He was an army general under the Shah. He helped his two sons escape from Iran, but he could not escape and is in prison. He is not permitted to write, so his wife writes to let us know what is going on. My mother does not even know about this cousin's persecution," Fets says. At the same time, Fets tries to find something positive about a horrible situation, pointing out those faces in that long-ago engagement party picture who have escaped Iran and made new lives in America and elsewhere.

"Maybe God has a purpose to all this. Maybe the blood of the Baha'i martyrs will feed the Baha'i faith. After all, many of the prophets — Moses, Jesus Christ and Mohammed — were tortured in some way for their faith.

"And maybe, the situation in Iran has made the Baha'i beliefs better known throughout the world."

'Tis the season for a garden of holiday delight

By Ellen Probert
Special Writer

Now that the Thanksgiving turkey is but a memory we are thinking ahead joyously to Christmas. According to historical records it was Henry VIII who introduced the turkey as a feature of Christmas dinner in England in competition with the traditional roast goose. In Isabella Beeton's cookbook classic published in London in 1861, she says that "among themselves turkeys are very furious, but among other fowls they are weak and cowardly. They are difficult to rear but their flesh is much esteemed."

Christmas cactus has long been popular as a flowering holiday plant. The lovely arching branches with their satiny flower lusters in shades of pink, red and white dress up any room. To insure a long floral display be sure to purchase plants with buds just showing color and keep them in a fairly cool environment. The flower should last several weeks.

There are some beautiful Christmas cactus plants, as well as nearly a hundred magnificent poinsettias in gorgeous bloom decorating the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House for the holiday season. The roping and huge wreaths and the immense red velvet bows ornamenting the magnificent oak stairway, and the five glittering Christmas trees adorning the largest room in the house are delighting holiday visitors. A favorite tree is the one in the library adorned with myriad green satin bows and innumerable feathery birds.

From earliest times the mistletoe has been held sacred in Europe. Pliny, writing in the first century A.D., says that the Druids called it the "all-healer." They believed it came from heaven and believed its growth on a host tree was a sign that that tree had been chosen by the gods. For this reason it was always cut with a golden sickle rather than any common tool, and was always gathered on the sixth day after the full moon.

The early Italians gathered mistletoe on the first day after the full moon and in England for many centuries it was gathered on Midsummer Day as well. It was the plant symbolizing fertility until Victorian times when, prudishly, it was given the symbolic meaning of "surmounting difficulties."

Queen Victoria's consort, Prince Albert, is generally credited with introducing the Christmas tree to the world. The decorated tree had long been popular in Germany and he did indeed introduce the idea in England. But there are some other possibilities, too.

Some people credit Martin Luther with the origin of the Christmas tree. They say that he saw a beautiful snow-touched tree outdoors against a background of glittering stars and came home to put candles on a tree in imitation of it. Some folk tales trace the decorated tree back to the pre-Christian druids.

their homes on Dec. 24 in honor of Adam and Eve who, though not accepted as saints in the Latin or western Christian church, are so accepted in the eastern church.

Whatever its origin, the Christmas tree is now almost universal with the celebration of Christmas.

Poinsettias were first introduced into the United States by Joel Robert Poinsett in 1825. He was the first United States Ambassador to Mexico, where the poinsettia blooms naturally around Christmas time. For centuries these plants had been prized there by kings as symbols of purity and wealth. The native Indians had some practical uses for them including the extraction of medicinal latex and a reddish purple dye which they made from the foliage and flower bracts.

Poinsett was an accomplished botanist and brought back some plants to his home in South Carolina where he propagated cuttings and gave them to botanical gardens and to friends including the famous horticulturalist John Bartram of Philadelphia. From that time on the poinsettia has had an increasing popularity and now is virtually the official flower for Christmas.

News about a most fascinating garden has come to our attention. It is the biblical botanical garden located on the property of Rodef Shalom Temple in Pittsburgh. This garden, the largest of the few biblical gardens in the country, attempts to duplicate the varied topography of the Holy Land. There is a cascading waterfall, a desert and a bubbling stream, in addition to over 100 varieties of temperate and tropical plants.

Among the many plants in the garden are the staples of the ancient Israelites' diet such as wheat, barley, millet, cucumbers, leeks and onions as well as the more exotic plants including olives, dates, pomegranites, figs and melons.

Tamarisk trees, associated with manna, the food miraculously provided in the wilderness, are included, and in the meandering stream, a miniature River Jordan, are lotus, waterlilies, papyrus and rushes.

The garden is a popular place for scholars, school tours and other groups and admission is free. A descriptive brochure given to visitors gives plant names in six languages including biblical and modern Hebrew, English, French, German and Italian. A biblical verse accompanies each plant.

The garden was developed by Rabbi Walter Jacob and his wife, Irene, who is a scholar of biblical horticulture, and has attracted much attention nationwide.

If you are interested to learn more about it, write to the Pittsburgh Civic Garden Center, 1059 Shady Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15232.

The Gardener's Shed

Another explanation of the Christmas tree attributes it to the Miracle plays performed in the 11th century in European churches or before the cathedrals.

One of the most popular plays was one called the Paradise Play which dealt with the creation of Adam and Eve and their eventual expulsion from the Garden of Eden, and ended with a preview of the coming of the Messiah. The garden was always indicated by a fir tree hung with apples and it became a custom for people to decorate trees in duced into the United States by Joel Robert Poinsett in 1825. He was the first United States Ambassador to Mexico, where the poinsettia blooms naturally around Christmas time. For centuries these plants had been prized there by kings as symbols of purity and wealth. The native Indians had some practical uses for them including the extraction of medicinal latex and a reddish purple dye which they made from the foliage and flower bracts.

There's always a surprise or two on a tour arranged by Al Bolden & Company Travel of Grosse Pointe Woods.

One time, it was an impromptu meeting Bolden's busload of tourists had with Muhammed Ali outside Ali's home in Chicago. Another time, it was a chance to shake hands with then-president Jimmy Carter in Washington.

Those kinds of surprises are always appreciated by Bolden's clients, he says. But the hallmark of a Bolden tour is that there aren't any unpleasant surprises for people who book a vacation through Bolden, whose company specializes in Christian tours.

"There are many people in this world who have made a commitment to Christ, people who are dedicated to the Christian principle. Now, there are things this world thinks are great and goes for and things that these Christian people don't think are so great. They want to think like God thinks and try to be like God," Bolden says.

"They don't drink or gamble or swear or look at pornography. And they don't condemn people who do, but they want to keep those things out of their lives. And when they travel, they want to go places where those things are not present. That's where we come in."

the basement of his church, Grosse Pointe Baptist, he was asked by those in attendance to plan a trip for them.

"So I planned a trip to Hawaii and sold it out. Which led to three more Hawaii tours. And at that point, I was not a travel agent but I was booking everything just like I was. Finally, the airlines started asking me if I was an agent and when I said no, they said 'Why not become one?'" Bolden remembers.

agent, it was not my intention to sell tickets. I wanted to develop and sell tours. But that's not the way it works in the travel business. So we did the off-the-street travel business and in the meantime, I kept on designing and conducting tours of a Christian nature."

Bolden incorporates his own likes and dislikes into the tours, in order that other Christians might have trips they can enjoy without having to worry about their faith being challenged, he says.

Bolden says.

Bolden tours are characterized by lots of sightseeing and shopping, stops at what Bolden calls "clean, moral" entertainment spots, good hotels, great meals and the presence of either the boss or Blake, his "right hand."

"I never just send a group out. I always look at every hotel and restaurant and make sure it's right for our clientele. We furnish all meals and make sure that we find special entertainment and a 'surprise' on every trip for our people. We want them to have fun.

Mariavites offer wafers

The Mariavite Old Catholic Church, founded in Poland in 1893, plans to preserve a centuries-old tradition by making available the traditional Polish Christmas Eve Wafers, Oplatek. The Oplatek, a symbolic link between Poland and Poles who have settled in various parts of the world, is a thin, unleavened wafer similar to the communion wafer, but larger and more rectangular.

The wafers are embossed with figures of the Christ Child or other Nativity scenes. The use of the Oplatek wafers is no longer restricted to individuals of Polish descent, but has become a part of the holiday customs and traditions of others as well.

The Oplatek wafers, baked in Poland by the Mariavite nuns, are available in envelopes of three each by writing to: The Most Rev. Robert R. Zaborowski, Archbishop of the Mariavite Old Catholic Church, 2803 10th Street, Wyandotte, Mich., 48192-4994. Requests will be honored through Dec. 17.

A minimal voluntary offering of $3.50 is requested for each envelope to assist in defraying costs and mailing.

Bolden opened his travel agency in May 1977. He had been president of a stock investment group made up of a large number of his church-related friends. The group had been together for several years when Bolden suggested that they take a trip. "I figured that since most of us had grown children and had paid for our homes, we might all celebrate 10 years of the investment group by taking a trip. They thought it was a great idea and asked me to plan it."

"So I planned a big trip to Europe, detail by detail, day by day, hour by hour. And when I presented it to them, they were flabbergasted. They had had no idea how extensive a trip I'd been planning. And one year later, we all went to Europe and had a fantastic time," Bolden recalls.

It was so successful that when Bolden showed movies of the trip to an audience of about 300 in

When Bolden applied to become an agent, he discovered that his tour planning experience was more than enough to qualify, but that a lack of ticket writing and tariff experience would keep him from earning his agent's status. But he learned that if he could find someone who had experience in those areas, he could open an agency.

"I had an acquaintance, a young woman I met several years before through Christian fellowship. I knew she worked with American Airlines and after calling all over the country to find her, I located her six blocks away," Bolden laughs. That woman was Ruby Blake, who had taken an early retirement from the airlines and was just sitting around "looking for something, praying for something to do with her time," Bolden says.

Blake joined Bolden, bringing with her her tariff and ticket writing experience as well as a "Christian sense of wanting to help people," Bolden adds. The Air Traffic Conference gave them the go-ahead to open the agency.

"When I first became an

"I've been all over the world. I keep the Christian principle and I know where to go and what to do in these cities in order to follow that principle. What I do when I design these tours is to arrange it so that the people see the greatest things and have the greatest amount of fun without having to worry about bumping into situations which may try their faith," Bolden says.

The result has been tours which sell out in the first mailing, he adds. Bolden has arranged tours to England and Scandinavia, to Hawaii and the Canadian Rockies and throughout the continental United States. He has been asked to conduct tours of the Holy Land, but says that pastors at many local churches arrange such tours to help supplement their retirement funds and that he is reluctant to interfere with that source of income.

"We have all kinds of denominations, all kinds of people on our tours. Catholic nuns and priests, even people with no professed religious preference. We like to provide the kind of tour that is acceptable to everyone,"

Bolden also teaches Bible classes and studies comprehensive Bible classes which focus on the original language of the scriptures in order to have a fuller understanding of the intent behind the verses.

"We're back to building up the travel business now, though. We hope to have branched out into California, Florida and Texas by the end of 1988.

"We're planning family tours and we will be designing tours for young people, things like ski tours, dude ranch visits and white water rafting tours... all with the idea of Christian principles in mind, but with lots of fun and entertainment, too."

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

A Cultural Cornucopia Appreciation of the arts begins at an early age for Grosse Pointe children. The public library, a division of the Grosse Pointe Public School System, offers, at no cost, a variety of children's reading programs at its three locations.

For adults, the library programs range from travel films to informative presentations on subjects of current interest. These, too, are free to residents of all the Grosse Pointes.

Another great source of local culture is the beautiful War Memorial Center, the former mansion of the Russell A. Alger family. With its subsequently added ballroom and theater overlooking Lake St. Clair, the center is a community attraction that rivals the many private clubs in the area. Here—open to all residents—are offered art classes and exhibits, lectures, concerts, plays, ballet and social dancing instruction, and children's theater, as well as membership in a long list of special-interest clubs whose focus is either cultural, informative or just plain fun.

A more recent addition to public property is the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House. Designed by architect Albert Kahn and supported by a $15 million endowment, this gracious replica of an English manor house is now open for tours and is used for meetings, fund-raising events and several series of "house" concerts.

A Unique Community

Architectural Diversity As the great variety of home sizes and styles suggests, growth has continued slowly over many years. It continues even today. Old estates are subdivided for building contemporary homes, making the mansions that still survive (and many do) all the more treasured by their owners and tradition-minded residents. At the same time, the area includes homes of just about every style and size—from townhouses, two-family units and other small homes to gracious English Tudors, colonials, executive mansions, contemporary ranch styles and a variety of modern designs, including condominiums.

This diversity has helped make Grosse Pointe attractive to all who value well-maintained quality which far exceeds its price.

Healthful sweets can make great Christmas gifts

Researchers tell us we would all be much healthier if we followed a pure diabetic menu. Here are some wholesome recipes — on the sweet side — that we can share with our families and our diabetic friends for healthy and delightful holiday gatherings.

The following recipes come from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

- Krispie Date Bars
- Frozen Chocolate Pie
- Carrot Fruit Cookies
- Apple Peanut Crisp
- Pineapple Bread Pudding

KRISPIE DATE BARS

1 Tbsp. unsalted margarine
32 chopped pitted dates
1-1/2 cups Rice Krispies
8 chopped small walnuts

In small saucepan simmer dates and margarine covered until dates are soft, about 15 minutes, stirring often. Beat until smooth and cool. Stir in Rice Krispies and nuts. Pack into small pan and cut into 16 squares.

One serving = 1 fruit, 1/10 bread and 1/4 fat exchanges.

FROZEN CHOCOLATE PIE

1/2 cup skim milk
1/2 cup dates, finely chopped
1-1/2 tsp. cornstarch

1 medium egg yolk
1/2 cup coconut
1 tsp. vanilla

Tips on buying a fresh Christmas tree

Fir trees, long known for their fragrant, long-lasting qualities have appealed to Christmas tree buyers for many years. Trees such as the Douglas Fir, Fraser Fir or Balsam Fir are the most attractive and traditional-looking Christmas trees, according to John Darin, Jr., chief operating officer of English Gardens and Fairlane Florist.

"Firs are the most luxurious, long-lasting and fragrant evergreens," Darin says. "They look more like an old-fashioned Christmas tree than any others."

To determine if a tree will stay fresh and green during the holiday season, try these tips:

- Bend a needle. If it is resilient, the tree is fresh.

- Check the bottom of the tree stump for sap. If wet, the tree is fresh.

- If few needles fall when the tree base is bumped hard on the ground, the tree is fresh.

The size of tree purchased will depend on ceiling heights and placement in the home. Consider the space before deciding on a tall, slender tree, a large bulkier tree, or a well-rounded and shapely tree.

Once a tree is selected and taken home, proper care is essential to maintaining it. If the tree won't be decorated immediately place the tree outdoors in a non-windy and shady area. Make a fresh cut across the bottom of the tree approximately one inch from the original cut and place the trunk in water.

Never let the water level become lower than the trunk, or the end will require a fresh cut in order for the tree to receive water. Fresh cut trees require two pints to one gallon of water each day, so be sure to check the water level daily.

Once a tree is indoors, never place it near a fireplace, television set, radiator or other heat source. This will cause the tree to dry out quickly. Always unplug the tree lights before leaving the house or retiring for the evening to prevent a fire hazard.

A shooting start

Is this the way the basketball season should begin? Both teams are supposed to be sluggish, lethargic and anything but into their game plan. No team is capable of playing that well at the start of the season. Only at the end of 10 weeks do teams generally look that talented.

In the season's opener, the Blue Devils invaded North and watching from the floor I did not notice any sluggish beginnings. Sure there was your casual stomach pain, or the gasp for air, but for the most part the two teams banged heads in a quite impressive game of round ball.

The rival schools like to open the season against one another because it is not difficult for the players to "get up" for it. North versus South always perpetuates adrenaline flow and it even packs the stands.

North's Steve Szymanski was the high shooter for the Norsemen with 18 points and South's Lance Harding hit for 12 to lead the Devils.

Does it matter that North beat South 48-40? Would it matter if South came out on top? I'm sure it would for some of you, but what you must be concerned with is the league record. Both schools should produce plenty of wins, but let's just wait and see.

At ULS, Harper Woods was the guest, but the welcoming mat was yanked straight forward by the hands of John Yancey and company. Yancey, an all-state hooper and nationally ranked tennis player, turned Harper Woods away with some spinning moves and some long-range bombs that were set off as they slid through the hoop. Yancey led the Knights with 28 points and it won't be the last time you hear from him.

It was a night to remember as ULS needed a couple of free throws from Kevin Crociata in the waning moments to seal the 78-76 win.

It's nice to think that hoops in Grosse Pointe got off to a booming start, but I hope the pace can continue. The speed, agility and finesse of these players is exciting to watch, and it will be interesting to see the progress they make as the season wears on. For many of them, bank shots, three-pointers and rebounds are what it's all about, but let's not forget about the slam dunk. Maybe we can coax a few players to "set the ball down."

Games are not fun this time of year, or are they? It's nice to see nail-biting going on so early in the season, but it seems unrealistic that only after 17 days of practice teams can be so well groomed.

Maybe it's the competition. Maybe it's the new season, or better yet, maybe it's the caliber of players. Either way, it was nice to get the ball rolling and the defensive guards up for what promises to be a banner season.

I still can't get over the fact that University Liggett School has a girls' hockey team.

I used to play against one of the town bullies on the baseball diamond and she (yes it was a girl) could hit a ball farther than anyone. She could even scoop a ground ball and whirl it across the diamond before my glove would have hit the dirt. But hockey? Really! Girls on skates banging into the boards, poke checking, elbowing, slashing and taking slap shots. Did you ever hear of such a thing?

I am ready to see what ice hockey for girls entails. I think there is a place for girls in the world of hockey and I hope many more schools can follow the precedent the Lady Knights set. Who knows, it could be a snowball effect as it is now another facet of sports available, at a prep level, to girls.

Is there satisfaction in weight-loss, spitting, a steady diet of nothing to eat and another steady diet of twists, bends, pins and cross-face cradles? Sure there is. For many wrestlers, this time of year is golden.

Grappling, or a reasonable facsimile thereof, is a tough sport. For weeks, athletes are slammed onto a mat, held at bay by another athlete and virtually tied up by human parts.

Wrestling is a favorite of mine. Many people claim it is boring, but that's only because their attention span is short. The muscular motions that it takes to grapple are a trick in themselves. For six minutes it has got to be strenuous to roll on the mat, grab an arm or a leg now and then, and try to stay off your own back while trying desperately to put an opponent's shoulder blades to the mat.

Winter sports are fantastic. On cold nights half the battle is over if you can muck through the snow, but the war is happening inside the gymnasiums or rinks. It's a great time of year to celebrate the holidays, but please don't forget about the athletes who cruise through winter on skates, mats and basketball courts.

Devils honored

As the football season drew to a close last weekend, many postseason awards were bestowed upon the Grosse Pointe South Blue Devils' football team. Front row, Joe Reynolds, Ian Thompson and Chris Lash. Back row, Doug Lucas, Marcus Wysocki, Mike Paull and Ted Mills. Each player was named to the first-team All-League squad. Wysocki and Lucas also picked up first-team All-Metro and Suburban honors as well as Honorable Mention All-State.

Jon Rice, head coach of the Blue Devils, was honored as the Coach of the Year in Region 3. The Devils finished 9-2 overall and won one of two playoff games.

In a game that meant so much to the Lady Norsemen, a season filled with pleasure and excitement ended with a 58-34 loss to the Lady Technicians of Cass Tech.

Tech, a top-ranked Class A team moved its record to 20-1 heading into the quarterfinals, and North, the White Division champs in the Macomb Area Conference suffered only its fifth defeat against 19 wins.

"They're just an outstanding team," said North coach Gary Bennett. "We knew it going in, but you've got to give it your best shot. They were just too big and too strong."

North, only the second team to win a regional game (56-51 over Fraser in round one) and the first girls' team to win a district title in Norsemen history, had only three points in the first quarter to the Technicians' 18.

"We came out a bit tentative and it cost us," said Bennett. "We knew they were going to put plenty of full-court pressure on us, but I really believe we handled it well."

Monique Van Assche, who along with Mary Lex led the Norsemen with six points, opened the scoring with 2:22 left in the first quarter and it was evident the power, size and talent of the Technicians would be difficult to overcome as North trailed 34-18 at the intermission.

"I really think we played well," said Bennett. "The girls were relaxed and did what they had to do. It just wasn't enough."

North, a generally strong defensive team, held its own on the defensive side, but the inside play of Cass Tech caused havoc amongst the Norsemen. But, it didn't come without wrinkles.

"We caused them some problems with our pressure also," Bennett claimed. "We defended them well and we didn't back down. But it is awfully difficult to win when you get one shot at the basket and they come down and get the ball into the post."

While most people expected the Norsemen to do well this season, many skeptics believed they would not win 19 ball games, let alone get the opportunity to represent Grosse Pointe in a regional championship. The Norsemen defeated South and Lake Shore to win the district title and one week later found themselves among the top 16 teams left in the playoffs.

"For these girls to get to play in a game like that says a lot about this team," said Bennett. "Many people didn't expect us to do all that well, but the girls earned every bit of what they got. We've had more talented teams in the past, but this team fought hard to win because they really felt they could...and they did."

Although North is credited with a district title, a league championship and 19 wins, the 19th victory was the sweetest reward of the season for Bennett.

"We had a great season and I am really happy, as well as proud, for the girls," he said. "The whole season was made for me when we won that regional game. It meant more to the entire team than winning the district title did."

The Lady Norsemen started the season even at 1-1 after two games, they won 10 straight at one point and made believers out of non-believers. They meshed as a squad and Bennett stated the girls should hold their heads high.

"We played well together the entire season," he said. "It is so rewarding to have the girls play together as well as learn together. Going into the game we knew we would have to play an outstanding game to beat them, but nobody should be disappointed. It was a great season to remember."

Fumble... It's not a fumble, but it is a loose ball that South's Andrew Ament (32) and North's Steve Szymanski battle for in the opening basketball game for both schools. North beat the Blue Devils 48-40.

North dumps South in opener

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

In the season opener for both schools, the Norsemen of North were four buckets better than the South Blue Devils, 48-40.

South (0-1) was outmatched only on the boards as the Norsemen (1-0) yanked down 37 caroms to South's 16 as both teams battled impassable defenses most of the way.

"They totally outrebounded us," said South coach George Petrouleas. "They really hurt us on the boards."

North, led by Steve Szymanski's game-high 18 points, took advantage of two 19-foot misses by South to break open a 42-40 game with just over two minutes to play.

"We missed two perimeter shots and they came down and hit two in a row," said Petrouleas, "and trying to catch up was awfully tough for us."

South got bumped on two shots, but they were in the hunt for an approximate five-minute span when North had trouble locating the basket.

"We went through about five minutes without scoring," said Norsemen coach George Olman. "That was a key that could have hurt our team."

But North got some heady play in the paint from Nick Lowry who canned 13 points and pulled down 15 rebounds.

South was led by Lance Harding's 12-point performance and Andrew Ament's 11.

"They're all big," Olman said about getting off on the right foot. "It's always big to beat South. Both teams played real well."

The Norsemen took a 12-10 lead at the end of eight minutes and outscored the Blue Devils 19-16 to take a five-point edge, 31-26, at the half.

"I'm just down a bit because we didn't execute the things we worked on," said Petrouleas. "Basically they executed and scored more easy baskets. The team played with a lot of intensity. They lacked execution, not effort."

North, which lays claim to a tight man-to-man defense, was forced to use the zone at times and Olman feels that made the game closer.

"We did what we thought we could going in, but we played better in our man defense than we did our zone. They got a lot of points off it and showed me we still have some things to work on."

Center Ice in the GPHA

Flyers-Bruins

Joe Ricci's Flyers took a 5-2 win from the Bruins thanks in part to Andrew Ricci's two goals. Jon Paul Delaurier opened the scoring for the Flyers and David Legwand and Charlie Eldridge netted one apiece.

Massu and Amsden tallied for the Bruins.

Steve Owens, Tim French, Jay Lambrecht, Andrew Murphy and Alex Rust played well.

Spartans-Lions

The Spartans were 2-1 victors over the Lions as Eric Oke and Eric Lindsay paced the Spartans. Teddy Hanawalt fired a slapshot to score for the Lions. Scott Wiczorkowski earned the win in net.

Lions-Stags

J.P. Sweda got the 4-0 win in goal for the Lions. Jesse Davis banged a hat trick with assists from Hanawalt, Lindsay, Everham and Dossin. Bo Dossin scored his first goal of the season also. Ross, Wise, McCartney, Robby Cook, Olson and Smith all played well.

Lions-Red Wings

Teddy Hanawalt, Lindsay and Cook all scored to lead the Lions to a 3-1 win over the Wings. Olmstead, from Crain, snapped the shutout for the Wings.

Major Magics (tourney)

Major Magics lost two (8-2 - to the Chiefs and 4-0 to the Blazers) and tied one (4-4 with Top Guns) in a Thanksgiving Tournament.

In game one against the Chiefs, John Staniszewski and Tom Stroble had the only Magics' goals. Playing well were Kate Calandro, Brett France, Adam Doughty and Kurt Faber.

In game two Charlie Braun had a nice day in net, but no offense in front of him. Billy Gmeiner, Aaron Wudyka, Eric Gurnack and Matt Moran skated well against the SCS Blazers.

In the final game, the Magics took on a fellow GPHA team, the Top Guns. Brian Fehling scored first for the Guns and then C.T. Terry and Mark Aronson hit goals. Goals by Staniszewski and Braun closed the gap to 3-2. With less than a minute to play, Fehling, assisted by Lisa Aronson and Allard, put the Guns on top 4-2. But, with goals at the 27 and 1-second marks, Staniszewski capped the 4-4 tie with his hat trick.

Magics-Flames

Behind Aaron Wudyka's first goal and Staniszewski's two goals, the Magics beat the Flames 4-3. Tom Stroble added the fourth goal for the Magics.

Chris Mitchell, J. Donohue and Patrick Pound scored for the Flames.

Magics-Top Guns

Billy Gmeiner scored a hat trick in the third period to lift Major Magics to a 3-1 win over the Top Guns. Kate Calandro, Eric Gernack and Kurt Faber had assists.

Aronson scored for the Top Guns.

The G.P. Leafs won the Squirt Division Turkey Tournament at the G.P.C.R. in four straight games.

The Leafs came out shooting in game one to earn a 6-0 win. Chuck Shervish recorded the shutout in net as Paul Megler (two unassisted), Jay Ricci, Greg Ryan, David Collins and Geoff Kimmel scored goals. Ricci and Collins each had two assists.

In the second game, the Leafs got another six-goal performance to beat the Port Huron Star By-Pas 6-3. Hat tricks by Joey Luciedo and Jay Ricci (captain) accounted for the Leafs' goals.

In game three, the Leafs tallied six goals for the third straight time en route to a 6-4 win over the Birmingham Wolverines.

Ricci scored his second hat trick of the season and Greg Ryan (2) and David Collins provided the other tallies. Lahey, Greg Ryan, Luciedo, Tom Waldron and Kimmel assisted.

The Leafs beat Port Huron Star By-Pas 2-1 in the championship game on goals from Paul Megler and Jay Ricci. The Leafs were coached by Chuck Collins, Joe McCowell, Joe Ricci and Bill Shepard.

Swimmers place third in state

By John Guibord
Special Writer

The girls' swim team placed third in the state competition held at Michigan State University Dec. 4-5.

North compiled 98 points, falling short to the only two teams they lost regular-season meets to; Birmingham Groves (runner-up with 150 points) and Ann Arbor Pioneer (Class A champions - 157).

North had quite a successful season with only two defeats. Heidi Mader, Wendy Mader, Katie Young, Karen Dundon, Christina Martin, Karen Ellis, Nora Brooks and Patty Roussemis were all-conference selections.

In the state competition, Young took fourth in the 100 butterfly, Mader was fifth in the 500 freestyle, Laura Verona was 12th in the 200 individual medley and Dundon was sixth in the 100 freestyle. Roussemis finished ninth in the diving competition.

In the preliminary events, the tankers set several school records as they set low times in nearly every event.

"In some cases we swam quite well, but in others I think we could have done better," said Coach Mike O'Connor.

O'Connor pointed out that Young swam one day after catching the flu and high temperature. Dundon was also plagued with the flu bug and that set the team back.

"Katie and Karen had great performances under the circumstances," said O'Connor. "But if they were healthy we would have had 20-30 more points."

O'Connor, pleased about the performance but a bit disappointed, looks to the future of his squad as the majority of them will be back for another season or two.

"The majority of girls that qualified for the state meet are coming back," he said. "We'll definitely be back to rattle a few cages next year."

Wrestling

The Norsemen opened the season at the Lutheran East Invitational.

John Shefferly and William Lewis were first-place finishers that led North to a fifth-place finish out of 11 teams.

The matmen will travel to Anchor Bay this evening for a 6 p.m. start.

Hockey

The challenge has commenced. The 1987-88 icers are 3-2 after five games as goaltending, tough defense and a newly discovered offense have sparked the Norsemen to a three-game winning streak.

After a stint in a Thanksgiving Tournament at East Kentwood where they went 1-1, the Norsemen returned for their home opener against the Lakeview Huskies. North avenged a 1986-87 loss to Lakeview with a blistering 11-2 win. Tim Young led North with a hat trick and moved the Norsemen into a first-place tie in the Michigan Metro League.

Held at bay for the first period, the Norsemen's line of Black-Schweitzer-Bessert rattled the Bears' cage for four goals as Bessert scored the hat trick in the second period. Six goals in the final period put the game out of reach.

North hosts Catholic Central Dec. 12 at 6:30 p.m.

Blue Devils could be trouble

South shoots to capture Eastern Michigan League

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

In his ninth year, George Petrouleas is going to have to live and die by his own patience. Last year the Blue Devils were 8-14 with a third-place finish in the Eastern Michigan League (E.M.L.) and this year a young, but talented team is going to need plenty of direction.

"Our ability to come together as a team will hopefully happen early on in the season," he said. "But being as young as we are we have to be patient with them."

With an average height of 6-foot 4-inches across the front line, Petrouleas is not lacking in size, but in comparison to other teams they could be.

"We are not ultra big, but we're not small either," he said.

Roger Drabant, Chris Gramling, Andrew Ament and Lance Harding are the only returnees. Joining them will be Joe Caldwell, Tim Clarke, Dave McCormick, Chris Rowan, Andrew Ayrault, Kyle Schomaker, Drew Walker and Fernando Garcia.

"I feel quite strongly that we're going to be competitive," said Petrouleas. "As the season progresses, we will try to build on the plusses and eliminate the negatives."

With the size and talent on the squad, Petrouleas sees a transition game in the making.

"We'll be able to rebound, run with the ball and if we can't then we'll set up and run our offense," he said. "We've got the kids who can do those three things."

Roundball promises excitement

Norsemen look to rule new league

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

It was their first Bi-County basketball championship under Coach George Olman and it was their last as well.

The boys' basketball team at North will be vying for a second straight league title, but this year it will have to come in the White Division of the Macomb Area Conference. The Norsemen, a 17-3 team a year ago, will stack up quite well in a league that represents two top teams in Cousino and Romeo.

"It's going to be a strong league," said Olman, who enters his fifth year at the helm of the Norsemen bench, "but we'll do just fine. I really feel we are a good team, but we'll just have to wait and see."

Olman won't have to wait to see the size his team has. On the front line, which consists of Kirk Lowry, Karl Schultz and Steve Szymanski, North averages 6-foot 5-inches and it doesn't stop there.

"We should be a good rebounding team because of our size," said Olman. "We have good size and we'll bring in some guys off the bench and not lose a thing in height."

Brian Peltz, Steve Langs and Derek Lawson will swing in and out of the guard position. Filling in at the backup center spot will be Todd Dessinger and Scott Klein. Russell Rice and Matt Brady will pop from the forward slot and Chris Allison will see time at guard. Tim Kierman, Chuck Thomas, John Kennedy and Charlie Stumb will also be looked upon to help the Norsemen.

Offensively the Norsemen will look to their transition game and ability to move the ball and when it comes to long-range shooting they have a few dead-eyes, but the three-point play will not be worn out.

"We like the transition game," said Olman. "We like to run the ball. We also have a few guys who can shoot the three-pointer, but we're not going to have a steady diet of it."

Offensively the Norsemen should light up the scoreboard and defensively they are hoping to unscrew a few lights.

"We have a good defense," Olman said. "We stress our man-to-man defense and if you are going to beat us, you're going to have to beat us in our man-to-man defense."

Volleyball

A good defense is sometimes the best offense, and such is the

"The key will be to get five guys who can play as one unit."

Defensively the Devils are tough. They will apply pressure from side to side as well as allow you to challenge their zone defense.

"We are going to do whatever we have to do to stop the strength of the opponent," said Petrouleas. "I feel we can pressure them full court or sit back in a zone to stop them."

It is the first year, at the high school level, that the three-point play is available and the Blue Devils will use it.

"We have about three guys who will have the green light to shoot it," said Petrouleas. "I'm a firm believer that you better work on fundamentals and if you get the three-pointer then that's extra."

South will try to win the league and many teams may be vulnerable to their spell.

"I don't think people are looking for us to do a lot in the league," said Petrouleas. "but we'll be surprising some people down the road, but we've got to come out of the gates early."

Volleyball

Three could be a charm for third-year coach Cindy Sharpe.

South has won two straight league titles (last year 14-0 and 26-7 overall), but this year the string could be snapped because the lineup lacks experience in key spots.

"We are inexperienced in important spots," said Sharpe. "We should do pretty well though, but we have got to come together."

Experienced people on the list of returnees are Patty Pentecost, Chris Schulte and Megan Keller. "Those three will be the big leaders," said Sharpe.

Carrie Donaldson also returns and Jennifer Kalmink should step in to a middle-hitter spot.

"We've got a good nucleus in the four we've got coming back so I think they'll be able to pump the younger kids up," said Sharpe. "It is really possible to repeat as champs, but we'll have to rely on some of last year's jay-vee squad. The young kids will have to be aggressive."

Wrestling

If the grapplers win one meet they will improve from last season.

Coming off an 0-13 record and gaining a host of freshmen is an incentive to do well this year. Larry Carr, in his fourth year as coach, is headed for another challenging season.

"It's always been a challenge," he said. "We've had some poor records, but we've also had some individuals do well."

Jake Rowan and Barry Brookes are co-captains and Travis Perry, a transfer student from Maryland, will carry the weight. Dale Wilson, Lou Preston, Tom Quirk, Tom Murphy, Bert Paul, Frank Voelker, Tom Caulfield and Brion Czaiczynski round out Carr's scorecard.

"I hope it's not a repeat of 0-13," said Carr. "I don't think it will be because we are hungry to win. Eight of our 13 classes are filled with freshmen and all I'm looking for is improvement."

Hockey

With only six players lost to graduation and 14 back from a 13-8-3 year, Tim Zimmerman is hoping this is the year to win the Michigan Metro League.

Last season South finished third in the league, one point behind Southgate Anderson, but this year a crowded senior lineup could prove to be the difference.

ULS sports

Knights slip past Harper Woods

The University Liggett School boys' basketball team opened its season in thrilling style with a 78-76 win over Harper Woods.

After taking a 37-33 lead at the half, ULS stretched its lead to 11 points midway through three quarters, but the Pioneers were not going to fold as they scored six unanswered points.

ULS surrendered its lead, 65-63 early in the final quarter, but ULS took control, 76-70 with little less than a minute to play.

John Yancey, who led all scorers with 28 points for the Knights, and Kandia Milton, 17 points, led the fourth quarter surge with nine and six points, respectively.

ULS' Kevin Crociata hit two foul shots to up the lead to 78-73

"This season I'll have the most seniors I've ever had," said Zimmerman. "But the unique part about it all is the fact that only five of them have played since they were sophomores."

"I'm hoping the seniors have more of a calming aspect," said Zimmerman. "They will have to take control and say 'we have to do what we need to' and not slip into some old habits. They will have to help the inexperienced kids out in several situations."

With many talented players dressed in skates, the team effort is essential for success of the Blue Devils.

"I am satisfied with our lines," Zimmerman said. "The team has to work as a team. We don't have one guy who will stand out and that is important for us. We have to play as one unit in order to be successful."

and the Pioneers added a three-point shot to cut the margin, but time ran out on Harper Woods.

"We're extremely pleased with the win," said ULS assistant coach Domenic Facciolla, "but we know that we have a lot of work to do in order to become a good basketball team."

The Knights host Lutheran Northwest on Dec. 11 at 7:30 p.m. and then travel to Detroit Country Day on Dec. 15.

Hockey

Scoring for the Knights were Charlie Roby (2 goals, 2 assists), Shannon Nowowiecki (1 goal, 3 assists), Jonathon Davis (2 goals, 1 assist), and Doug Wood (1 goal, 2 assists). Two defensemen, Ross Kogel and Jesse Kasom, scored from the high-slot area. Captains Bill Jewett and Gordie Maitland each registered two assists.

Steve Stoyka, a senior goaltender, turned back 34 shots.

"We controlled the first half of the game," said Coach John Fowler. "Stoyka held us up in the last period as Team Michigan began to apply some pressure."

ULS travels to Port Huron Dec. 12 and hosts Little Caesars on Dec. 15. Both games start at 7 p.m.

Marc deManigold and Karl Schultz are two of the state's top football players. DeManigold was chosen to the Detroit News' Dream Team and Schultz was voted to the Class A first team.

case for the girls' volleyball team.

Under the direction of first-year coach Judy Richards, the Lady Norsemen will need to rely on some offensive schemes and the players from last year's jay-vee squad, according to Richards.

"Basically we're pretty well-rounded," said Richards. "The girls had a good junior varsity season a year ago so that will definitely help us out. Their skill and determination will carry us through."

"We also need to develop a more complex offense," Richards added. "We are a very predictable team so one of our goals is to become unpredictable."

Although opponents can speculate on the Norsemen offense, one may be unaware of the good position the Norsemen seem to be in.

"We are young and hopeful," said Richards, "and that is a good position to be in. People aren't expecting much from us and I like that because we should be able to surprise a lot of teams."

North will be competing in the White Division.

Returning from last year's league championship team will be Mary Lex, Monique Van Assche and Shannon Andrews. Joining the three seniors will be Kelly Gianunzio, Kari Andrews, Heidi Cartwright, Amy Grierson, Dawn Redmond, Mary Spiewack, Beth Stevenson, Dory Unger, Kyungsoo Hur and Sandy Gleil.

Wrestling

A pennant from the National Division is just what could be pinned from the rafters of North high if the grapplers perform to their ability.

First-year coach Don Maskill brings an impressive coaching record to North that will blend quite nicely with 11 returning wrestlers, headed by 1987 regional champ, William Lewis. Joining Lewis on the list of returnees are Dave VanDale, John Shefferly, Chris Hayes, Chuck Schultz, Dean Demetropoulos, Joe Ament, John Klostermeyer, Kevin Dale, Dan Korzeniewski and Ade Alli.

Dan Collins, Paul Attar, Bryan Fleming and Bill Dunlop will also be able to fill some spots.

"We should have a solid team," said Maskill. "We'll have few holes and voids, but we'll fill them with some quality people."

"It's an upbeat group that is working hard," added Maskill. "They are reacting well to a new coach, new terminology and a different coaching attitude."

A team with depth, talent and a new coach, the Norsemen are shooting for a title.

"It sure would be nice to win the divisional title," said Maskill. "I really believe we can do it."

Swimming

After graduating seven seniors from last year's 8-5 team, Les Roddis finds himself trying to regroup his troops. Last year the Norsemen won their 18th straight Bi-County championship, but this year it could all change.

"We're down in numbers as well as quality," said Roddis. "We've got some young kids who are promising, but they lack experience."

Four seniors back from a year ago are Greg Cooksey, Jeff Williams, Drew Dungan and Ron Jendretzke.

"These are the four I'm building around," said Roddis. "I also have a talented diver back in Dave Caldwell. We just have to feel our way around the freshmen to see how they will blend in as a team."

Andy Bringard, Matt Van Coppeoll, Jon Schmaltz, Bob Jara, Peter Ellison and Jason Kahm round out the freshmen crew. Juniors John Bania, Ted Loumanis and diver Bob Straske will score many points as well. Steve Swan, Victor Perez, Chris Detloff, Ross MacNeil, Brad Sisk and Keith Rader are the sophomore swimmers.

"We've got a lot of young bodies, but we're going to do just fine," said Roddis. "We are going to have to set individual goals and try to weave them in with the team goals we have."

Hockey

If it's a rebuilding year you want, then it's a rebuilding year you have.

At North, the 1986-87 state runner-up hockey team has eight players back, but the most damage happened when 11 skaters graduated from a 22-6 season.

"There is no doubt that we're in a rebuilding stage," said fifth-year coach Mike Manzella. "We had to put some new lines together after graduation, but now I feel we have the lines that complement one another."

Link Bessert, Brian Schweitzer and Toni Giunetti, return as top offensive players, and Bob Poulos, Dave Grundman, Pete Mourad and Ben Gasikin are returning defensive specialists. Chris Kubilak is the goalie and Matt Kreig backs him up.

"We've got guys who have only skated together for 30 days," said Manzella. "But now (after four games) we are starting to see the positive things come out."

A host of sophomore talent is headed by Bob Beltz, Frank Lucido, Tim Ryan, Jim Bunn, Nick Black, Andy Bond and Ed Barberi. Wayne Houle and Tim Young are juniors who will see ice time also.

"We have the talent, but we've just got to put it together," said Manzella. "My job is to get them to play as a unit and if that happens maybe you'll see us at the state finals again. But first of all we have got to get through our league (Michigan Metro) and then win the districts and regionals."

Holidays bring happy, full stomachs

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Here comes Santa Claus, but here comes the buffet tables and the extra cakes and desserts as well.

This time of the year finds many people perusing the kitchen and dining room tables for a little snack or an entree. Many people are looking to fulfill a hungry stomach, but in several cases, eating is done because the food is "just there."

According to Beth Naber, R.D., manager of Clinical Dietetics at St. John Hospital, the holidays are used, by some, as a license for over-eating.

"People use the holidays for an excuse to fill themselves up," said Naber. "Eating is a social thing and a lot of food is cooked and people tend to overdo it when it comes to eating during the holidays."

While most foods revolve around high caloric intake, it is still possible to avoid any weight gain. Although it wouldn't be easy, Naber has several tips on how to avoid it.

"The key is to eat sensibly," she said. "People feel they have to try something not to offend a host, but that's not true. If you do try many items, it is recommended you eat small portions and recognize when you are full. If you don't do this, then it is highly possible to gain weight during the holidays."

Hovering around a table laced with "goodies" does not necessarily add a few pounds to a person, but changing one's proximity to the table could help over-eating or the urge to nibble.

"Even when they are full, people have a tendency to stick around the table and pick at food," said Naber. "If they position themselves away from the table to avoid going back and eating and eating, they would be less tempted to eat too much."

"When food is in front of people they have a tendency to pick and continue to eat."

One of the most important precautions, according to Naber, is to never skip a meal in order to be able to possibly eat more later. This may lead to some serious overeating.

"Knowing they're going to eat a big meal later in the day, people sometimes skip a meal in order to eat more later," said Naber. "This can lead to overeating because if you starve yourself you think you can eat more. This is not healthy. For one, you shouldn't get out of a normal eating pattern by skipping a meal, and two, you should not skip a meal to stuff yourself."

Many low-cal foods are available to consumers and Naber suggests, if you are hosting the party, that some low-cal foods be placed on the tray for nibbling.

"If you are offering the party, then maybe you could offer a lower-cal food choice," she said. "Possibly some raw vegetables with a low-cal dip. You could also limit the amount of desserts on the table and just cut them into smaller serving pieces."

Naber suggests eating whatever makes you content, but she suggests eating slower, smaller portions and eating until full.

"It's a real simple thing to follow," she said. "The key is to eat sensibly. The holidays seem like a license to overeat, but a possible increase in exercise may balance that...possibly a walk."

Christmas alternatives Part III

We are a few short weeks away from the big day — Christmas! We may have already attended parties and celebrations with family and friends, and still have many to enjoy through the coming weeks. And of course, we must continue to attend to our daily tasks; the job, the household chores, school, meetings, etc. It's no surprise that our eating schedules become no schedule at all. We skip meals or grab something fast in between everything else. A quick candy bar or two seems like a good answer as we rush through the last-minute shopping; maybe you will get something to eat later on, when you have time.

So it is no surprise again, when we finally do eat, that we choose the wrong types of food and eat way too much.

Research has proven that in times of stress our need for food increases according to the level of stress we are experiencing. But this need is not in terms of calorie intake, as it is in the nutrients or quality of the foods chosen. "Junk" foods have been aptly named; our bodies become the dumping grounds and can tolerate only so much before they talk back to us. Excessive weight gain is only one indication that we have approached "overload." Heartburn, constipation, diarrhea and gas pains are just a few of the methods our bodies have of telling us to cut down and change our behavior towards food.

Because of our uniqueness as human beings, we can't separate what goes on in the body and eat way too much.

By Mary Busse

on the mind and on the soul. Too often we let the body dictate what and when we eat — to the detriment of our brains and our spirit. But this does not have to be if we choose to put all of ourselves into the decision-making process. Alternative-thinking is just that — according to Webster's dictionary, an alternative is a choice between two or more things. We choose to take an alternate route and so it can be with what we eat.

Here are some suggestions to help you have a happy but healthful Christmas and New Year:

AT HOME

1) Instead of picking, tasting and sampling when I am baking for the holidays, I choose to munch on fresh veggies, chew gum or suck on a mint as I drink some of those glasses of water that are so healthy for me.

2) Instead of heading straight for the kitchen like one of Pavlov's dogs during a T.V. commercial, I choose to make a detour to my bedroom or bath, take three deep cleansing breaths, and take a good look at myself in the mirror.

3) Instead of eating from the refrigerator and cupboards, propped against the kitchen counter because I am so rushed, I choose to take the time to eat, and eat my meals at the kitchen or dining room table; including a pretty placemat, served on real dishes.

4) Instead of binging on empty foods because some other member of the family is driving me nuts, I choose to take a long, hot shower or soak in a bubble bath until I have calmed myself down.

OUT AND ABOUT

At the office, school or shopping

1) Instead of skipping lunch because I am so busy with my job, shopping, or because everyone else skips lunch at school, I choose to eat a healthy lunch, whether I take time to go out to eat or bring it with me.

2) Instead of grabbing a candy bar or other "empty" food when I am running errands or inching my way through rush-hour traffic, I choose to eat an apple, Mother Nature's perfect "carry-out" food.

4) Instead of fasting throughout the day because I am trying to lose weight, I choose to follow a healthy eating program, that insists that I eat quality foods, eaten at disciplined intervals during the day.

AT HOLIDAY PARTIES

1) Instead of circling the buffet table-like so many vultures around their prey, I choose to fill a small plate with quality selections, then leave the room focusing on all the great people who surround me, and not the food.

2) Instead of answering yes to every food or drink offered, I choose to answer "no thank you, not right now," confident that these magic words will sustain me throughout the evening.

3) Instead of letting my feelings of insecurity at social gatherings get the best of me (which I know from the past leads me to over-eating) I choose to take the first step and introduce myself to someone new. Who knows if they may need this gesture of friendship as much as I need it for myself.

4) Instead of returning home, grumbling to myself about all of the foods and drinks I deprived myself of at the party, I choose to concentrate on how fortunate I am to have been part of the holiday festivities, knowing that tomorrow morning I will wake with a light, but fuller heart.

Baseball clinic to be held

On Dec. 28, 29 and 30, Macomb Community College will be holding a baseball clinic for anyone interested.

In conjunction with several area high school coaches, the clinic will offer participants the opportunity to get top-notch instruction on the fundamentals of the game. Little-leaguers and Babe Ruth players are encouraged to attend, as are high school and college baseball players.

Junior high-age athletes and younger are scheduled to participate from 8 to 11 a.m. on all three days. From noon to 3 p.m., high school and college players will take part in the clinic.

College coaches and professional baseball scouts will be on hand to view the athletes.

The cost of the clinic is $50 and should be made payable to Macomb Community College. For more information, contact South baseball coach Dan Griesbaum at 343-2130, or call MCC at 445-7476.

BE THE BEST, BE A BLIZZARD!

Spielberg comes of age with 'Empire of the Sun'

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

Leave it to Steven Spielberg. In "Empire of the Sun," Spielberg takes a subject with the epic sweep of World War II and whittles it down to the war's impact on a young boy. While the director's macro lens is documenting the ravages of an unstable world, his micro lens is exploring the feelings and responses of an innocent victim. And even though the heady nature of the piece might tend to bog it down at times, there's no denying the artistic and human-

It's not the larger-than-life aspects of this picture that makes it so good, however. At least not entirely. At its core, "Empire" is rooted in the odyssey of childhood. This is the story of 11-year-old Jim Graham (Christian Bale), a child of the elite who gets separated from his parents during a wartime exodus. Jim's father owned a textile mill in pre-war Shanghai, providing his family with a very nice lifestyle in the British section of that city.

When the armed forces of Imperial Japan marched into Shanghai on Dec. 8, 1941 following their bombing of Pearl Harbor, people were scattered in all directions. Families were separated, including Jim's. Thus began a journey for Jim which did not end until he was reunited with his parents at the end of the war.

"Empire's" chief business is following the boy as he tries to make his way in a confusing world. He gets hooked up with an American merchant seaman (John Malkovich), and together they end up in a Japanese prison camp. It is at the camp that Jim learns about basic survival tactics like drinking only boiled water and eating weevils for protein.

It is also there that Jim learns some of the hard facts about the cold world of adulthood. Much sooner than should ever be necessary for a young boy, he learns about betrayal and death. And about emotional survival.

By the time the war ends, the film has shown us a world which restored peace by annihilating two cities. But more powerful than that, it has allowed us to witness one individual's great leap from boyhood to manhood.

Spielberg handles the tenderness and pathos implicit in the story with paternal delicacy. Often we wonder how the boy will cope with his seemingly hopeless situation. But never do we doubt that he will indeed find a way.

Bale is tremendous as Jim. He brings to fruition all of the emotions and feelings one would expect from a child in such a difficult situation. His mastery of such difficult material belies his young age.

The film's metaphysical elements tend to slow it down in more than a few spots. Indeed, two-and-a-half hours is a long running time for a movie which has sparse dialogue to carry it along. Still, anyone who can think and watch movies at the same time should have no problem keeping up with the plotline and the philosophical elements "Empire" presents.

Spielberg has come a long way since his movies about runaway trucks and unidentified flying objects. Between "The Color Purple" and "Empire," there is no doubt that this director has come of age.

The themes of his movies are getting more mature every time.

Film

istic importance of such a serious undertaking. Spielberg, directing his first film since "The Color Purple," spares nothing in this picture, which is based on J.G. Ballard's international best-seller.

At times looking like a Cecil B. DeMille blockbuster, a cast of thousands adds a scope and authenticity to this film that would likely have been lost in the hands of a less-talented director.

'Holiday Cabaret' at Attic

The world premiere of an original Attic Theatre musical creation, "Holiday Cabaret," opens Friday, Dec. 11, and runs through Dec. 31.

It stars two of Detroit's favorite cabaret singers, Sheri Nichols and Michele Braden, and features Rochelle Rosenthal, Augustus Williamson and Jerry Rippe. The sophisticated revue of 22 new songs and sketches has its origins in the memories and expectations of each of the cast members. Playwright is Daniel Yurgaitis, who is also the director, music is by Richard Berent and lyrics are by Doug Braverman.

To add to the festivities, there will be a special mystery guest at each performance, to be announced that day.

Dickens classic at Macomb Center

A touch of Olde English returns to the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts on Saturday, Dec. 19, when a nationally touring theater troupe presents its musical version of "A Christmas Carol," the classic Yuletide story by Charles Dickens.

The 35-member company of professional singers, actors, dancers and musicians will stage two performances — a matinee at 2 p.m. and an evening show at 8 pm. It will be the sixth year that the center has hosted the show.

Italian center plans New Year's party

The $40 per person tickets include hors d'oeuvres, dinner, beer, wine and set-ups, party favors, music and dancing featuring Atlantis, and breakfast. In addition, each ticket buyer will have a chance to win a basket of cheer. All guests will be provided with party favors, hats and confetti to ring in the New Year. The party will conclude with breakfast to be served about 1 a.m. Tables of eight are available.

Steve Martin is hapless traveler in 'Planes, Trains and Automobiles'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Suppose you started out to get to Chicago from New York to be with your family on Thanksgiving. To be on the safe side, you booked your flight a month in advance. All you have to do is go to the airport and get on the plane. No problem. Right? Not if you're Neal Page (Steve Martin).

In "Planes, Trains and Automobiles," director John Hughes explores the possibilities of what might happen to a luckless traveler trying to get from here to there, if everything that could happen does. An expert on stretching an idea to its limits (which he so well proved in "Sixteen Candles" and "The Breakfast Club") he goes all out on conjuring up far-out catastrophes that plague Martin and his co-traveler, Del Griffin (John Candy).

The saga begins when Martin, a marketing executive, tries to get a taxi in New York. He is knocked down in the street, cars run over his briefcase and he is flim-flammed into paying $75 for a cab ride he doesn't get.

The plane is delayed indefinitely. To add to the situation, he sits down beside Candy, a shower ring salesman who insists on making friends with everyone he meets.

Martin tries to discourage conversation, but Candy persists. A true salesman, he is convinced that it is possible to win anyone over, even the standoffish Martin with his superior airs.

When the plane finally arrives, Martin, relieved to be rid of his loquacious would-be friend, settles down in his seat to read. Too bad. His seat partner is Candy.

Bad weather prevents the plane from landing in Chicago. Instead it lands in Kansas where passengers are told to find whatever shelter is available.

Once again, Martin is thrown in with Candy, this time in a second-rate motel where they share a room with one bed. The night becomes a disaster as Candy spills beer on the bed, leaves wet towels all over the bathroom floor and goes through a noisy ritual of clearing his sinuses.

With no prospect of better flying conditions, the two get on a train and disaster follows. The only means of transportation remaining is a rented car and what happens on that excursion is riotous.

The trials and tribulations of the two travelers are funny, not so much of what happens, but because of Martin and Candy.

Martin is the perfect snob who deplores the kind of person he thinks Candy is and shows it.

Candy is everything Martin thinks he is — a buffoon, a compulsive talker and a slob, but basically a good person who tries too hard to please. One of the best touches in the film is Martin's gradual awakening to Candy as a sincere and worthwhile friend.

There are numerous funny scenes in the film. "Planes, Trains and Automobiles" is actually a feature-length gag played to the hilt by two talented comedians.

SANTA DECIDED he'd rather be marching to the beat of a different drummer while decorating the tree, so he tuned in his Panasonic RF-422 FM/AM/FM personal stereo. The unit, which comes in black, white, grey or red fashion-designed cabinets, weighs a mere 4.3 ounces (without batteries). Santa's hands remain free with the help of the lightweight stereo headphones and detachable belt clip.

Non-alcoholic holiday gifts favored by many Americans

Even though people are drinking less, many resort to the time-worn habit of giving alcoholic beverages as holiday gifts. Despite good intentions, they may forget that 33 percent of all adult Americans do not drink alcohol, and that moderation may be important to their friends and associates.

To set an example this holiday season, hundreds of major corporations will publicly announce their plans to give non-alcoholic gifts to employees, vendors and customers.

Called, "Operation Safe Holiday," this campaign has been created by the National Council on Alcoholism for the business community.

Say the organizers, "well-meaning companies sometimes give liquor unwittingly to those who would rather not use it. Instead, we are encouraging companies to give alternative gifts such as sparkling Perrier or flowering plants or specialty books."

Alternative gift-giving works outside the office, too. For the friends on your list, think about giving a magazine subscription or a gift basket tailor-made to their personal interest. Or, bring a case of light and bubbly Perrier to a holiday party as an unexpected and welcome surprise. Attach a big red bow to be festive.

With a little caring, you can create so much pleasure with original, "alternative" gifts.

The following are the most popular 1987-88 angora colors and styles, cited by Janice Gibney, buying vice president at Susie's:

- The most popular colors for angora this season are cream, peach, pink and black.
- Angora sweaters look best when matched with other fabrics such as velvet pants or wool skirts. "You can dress them up or down. Angora is perfect for both day and evening dressing," Gibney reports.

• Costume jewelry and other accessories make angora look extra special. A simple strand of costume pearls and pearl-studded earrings add to the elegance of angora.

• Mock turtle necklines, cable knit designs and crew necklines with buttons down the back are this year's most popular angora styles.

Albums, tapes, compact discs, special orders, gift certificates, blank tape, tickets and accessories.

Boardgame helps football fans' dreams come true

With football fans playing The Big Payoff all over the western states and soon the nation, T.V. viewers everywhere now can be put into the shoes of their favorite quarterback.

The Big Payoff is a football boardgame that allows one to six players to wager chips on the outcome of each televised play.

If your team is on offense you can predict whether they will run or pass, kick a field goal or throw for a touchdown. On defense, will your team grab an interception, recover a fumble or sack the Q.B.?

With excellent reviews from Playboy magazine and C.N.N., The Big Payoff is fast becoming America's number one selling boardgame.

The game is fun for the entire family, and would make an excellent Christmas gift for that young football fan since a beginner's version is included in every game.

If the game is sold out at your favorite retailer, you can order direct from the manufacturer by sending a check for $19.95 postpaid to Payoff Enterprises, Inc.; P.O. Box 69064; Portland, OR 97201; or by calling (503) 245-4647, Visa and MasterCard accepted.

A FOOTBALL BOARDGAME that allows up to six players to wager chips on the outcome of televised play, The Big Payoff puts T.V. viewers in the shoes of their favorite quarterbacks.

MAKE IT SPECIAL

The holidays have a way of bringing on nostalgia . . . Remembering the good old days when the aroma of cookies baking in the oven permeated the house, when carolers paused at the front porch to sing a holiday greeting and when ornaments and gifts were personalized and hand made . . . an expression of the givers affection in the spirit of the holiday.

Today, a gift made by loving hands is a very rare and special gift of love. Very few people take the time in the busy rush a day lifestyle to create that one-of-a-kind present. In reality, isn't too much to ask of ourselves, or for that matter of others to spend a few hours making a wonderful and thoughtful gift for someone we love. After all, isn't that what the season is all about?

Time may not permit the execution of an elaborate gift making project, however, there are many gifts that take only a few hours to create. This holiday season . . . make it special and make it count.

Make a leather belt—not an ordinary one, but a collage of multi colored and textured luxurious leathers in a rainbow of palettes. Make a jewelry case of leather or personalize a sweater, blouse or sweat shirt with leather designs. These are easy and fast gifts as well as inexpensive gifts. An incredible selection of leather priced at $5.00 a bag is available at Designer Fabric Outlet in Harper Woods.

Make a cuddly and warm scarf or challis fringed shawl from famous designer wools from Ellen Tracey.

Let the one you love know just how much by making him an English Viyella robe as used by Calvin Klein in elegant loungewear collection. Make her a charm euse nightgown and robe in fabric used by Christian Dior . . . just like the ones found in retail stores for several hundred dollars, only you can make one for under $50.00. Imagine a sport jacket, trousers or a skirt in Calvin Klein fabric. Perhaps an exciting wool tweed or trendy denim.

DESIGNER FABRIC OUTLET, located at 19324 Kelly Road in Harper Woods, has fashion fabrics by designer names at unbelievably affordable prices . . . as well as many one-of-a-kind sample cuts from familiar retail sources.

If time seems to be running short, write an I.O.U. with fabric, pattern and picture in a gift box . . . to be promised after the holidays are over.

Remember, 'tis the season the give of yourself. Make it special.

HOURS: 9-5:30 OR CALL FOR A SPECIAL APPOINTMENT ANYTIME MON/FRI, 9-3 SAT

THIS HOLIDAY, give the gift every music lover will appreciate—the gift of perfect sound. Today's compact disc players offer full, dynamic audio that captures all the nuances in your favorite music. And, because CDs are played with a laser that eliminates disc wear, your favorite performances are preserved note-perfect for a lifetime of listening enjoyment. Compact disc players also offer a host of conveniences, such as remote control and disc changers. CD players are available for the home, the car, and even in portable models for those on the go. Photo: Technics SL-P720 Compact Disc Player. Courtesy: Matsushita Electric Corp.

If you have a music lover on your holiday list, chances are you'll want to give the gift of perfect sound, through a stereo system, portable stereo or CD player. These are excellent, affordable and well-appreciated gifts. But, for those unfamiliar with audio technology, making a wise purchase can be a challenge.

Compact disc players, in which the music is processed by computer and read by laser, provide the best true-to-life sound. One of the greatest advances in audio technology, CD players offer high-quality sound and versatile options, all at an affordable price.

In fact, some models allow the listener to load several discs at once and selectively play specific tracks. There are also portable models and models for the car.

Portable stereo systems—commonly called "boom boxes"—are also excellent choices for people who want to take high-quality sound along with them. There are many options available, including dual decks and boom boxes with compact disc players.

A set of speakers is another excellent gift. Since speakers shape the sound that listeners hear, they may be the most important part of any stereo system.

Choosing the right speaker can be a challenge. Often it is best to conduct some research—seeking the advice of music-loving friends and consumer audio magazines.

Tips from the Electronic Industries Association (EIA) include:

- Bring a record or tape to the showroom. By listening to familiar music, you can easily discern the differences among speakers. (Note: Make sure that your selection is one in which the music is pure and has not been purposely distorted for effect by the recording artists.)

- When listening to speakers, begin by listening for clarity of different instruments.

- Listen to the speakers at the same volume. Loud speakers can initially sound more dynamic, but be poor performers in a home setting.

- When comparing two speakers, switch sets in the middle of a phrase and try to catch subtle changes in sonic reproduction.

- Make sure the speaker frames are solidly constructed. This will cut down on unwanted vibration.

- Learn to read the specifications sheets so that you can compare specifications. The two most important specs are Signal to Noise Ratio (S/N) and Total Harmonic Distortion rating (THD rating).

In the case of the S/N ratio, the higher the S/N, the better the sound. In Total Harmonic Distortion, the lower the number, the clearer the sound. Other specifications include Dynamic Range and Continuous Average Watts Per Channel.

- Pay close attention to the ranges. A good set of speakers should have a strong, natural sounding bass. A truly desirable bass has more "thud" than a "boom" quality to it. A poor mid-range will sound nasal.

"Invest as much as possible in the speakers. They are a very important part of the sound," says Thomas P. Friel, group vice president of the Electronic Industries Association. "As much as one-third of the system's cost should be in the speakers."

Choosing the right gift for the music lover can be easy if you take a few moments to do research and to listen. It is sure to be a gift that your music lover will value forever.

Whether dad's an outdoorsman or handyman, nothing looks better under the tree than a sleek, new portable generator.

A generator allows dad to plug into electric power anywhere, anytime, making it ideal for use around the home or away.

Campers find that with a portable generator, they can bring along some of the comforts of home, such as a few lights, electric coffee pot, even a small television!

A portable generator is also welcome in the handyman's shop or around the boat dock for running power tools.

But don't forget the most practical uses, such as recharging depleted car batteries and maintaining needed electricity during home power outages or other emergencies.

at Honda Power Equipment offer a few tips about generators:

- Most generators are classified by wattage output -- for example, a 650-watt generator could power six 100-watt light bulbs at once.

- Look for extra-large mufflers for quiet operation and check decibel levels before buying. For example, Honda's super-quiet EX650 generator practically whispers, operating at just 54 decibels.

- If the generator will be used for camping, make sure it has a USDA-qualified spark arrester, required for use in national parks.

- Remember, any generator should be operated outdoors in a well-ventilated area, away from combustible materials.

New jewelry gives many changes to holiday wear

Every woman enjoys adding a new piece of jewelry to her collection and, when that item also serves to give greater versatility to her jewelry wardrobe, it's even more delightful, says Kae McCulloch, fashion consultant to the Jewelry Industry Council.

That's why new jewelry called 'enhancers' or 'add-ons' make excellent holiday gifts, she reports.

"A simple strand of pearls can become a handsome pendant, and two bracelets can join together to create an arresting necklace," she points out.

For day or evening

A case in point: One such set of bracelets features one bracelet in simple gold links, while the other is a single strand of matched diamonds. When they are joined together, the diamond part worn in front, they are perfect for evening wear.

What looks like a simple pin becomes a pendant, to be worn on a strand of pearls or chain. Or you may choose to use it to fasten together a long strand of pearls for a different look. Pin the pearls to one side for a swag effect.

New also are earring settings in gold in different designs that come with a selection of gemstones and pearls. Choose topaz, aquamarine or whatever stone you wish to complement the color scheme of your holiday apparel.

Easy transformation

A 60-inch string of pearls can unfasten to create shorter necklaces and even a bracelet, making this item of jewelry a day-to-evening set.

With a wise selection of basic jewelry, which might consist of several different lengths and sizes of gold chains, plus a couple of single and double strands of pearls, a woman can choose enhancers that will help her create many different jewelry 'looks' that will also go readily with her interchangeable earring collection.

"It's a wonderful and affordable way to expand your jewelry wardrobe," Ms. McCulloch advises.

Reebok, Nike, Avia, Saucony... walking, running, aerobics, tennis... today, there are hundreds of athletic shoe brands, styles and categories to choose from. Thus, shopping for athletic shoes can be quite confusing. To eliminate some confusion, first read How To Choose Athletic Shoes, a new 28-page booklet from Foot Locker/Lady Foot Locker featuring advice on proper fit and foot health.

The booklet describes the unique functions of all types of athletic shoes. For example:

- Running Shoes are made for moving in one direction only—straight ahead. Most have nylon uppers reinforced with suede, leather or pigskin at the stress points and cushioned midsoles and outsoles made of hard, rubber compound.

Soles are grooved or studded for traction.

- Tennis Shoes are heavier and stronger than running shoes. Tennis shoes have strong lateral support because of the game's rapid moves in all directions.

- Walking Shoes are becoming increasingly popular as walking becomes a favorite workout. Walking shoes have leather or nylon-mesh-and-leather uppers, strong heel counters, motion-control devices to restrict lateral movement, good cushioning—especially under the toes—and slightly elevated "step-up" heels.

- Aerobics Shoes are a blend of court and running shoes. Aerobics shoes feature slightly raised heels, firm heel counters, wrapped soft rubber soles and plenty of shock-absorbing midsole cushioning—especially in the heels and metatarsal areas.

Fragrant indulgence: A Christmas of great luxury

A gift of true luxury never fails to give great pleasure, to make a lasting impression. An often unexpected indulgence, it captivates, pampers and seduces the senses.

Throughout the ages, the most sensual, most pleasurable of all gifts of luxury has been that of fragrance. The Queen of Sheba took gifts of fragrance to King Solomon when she visited him in 800 B.C.

Indeed, so highly valued was fragrance, that thieves in King Tut's tomb stole the fragrant oils but left the many objects of gold.

Today the allure and the mystery of fragrance continues in the four classic fragrances from Parfums Lagerfeld. For her: The sublimely romantic floral notes of Chloe, and the smoldering exotic scent of KL. For him: The masculine woody richness of Lagerfeld, and the sensory adventure of KL Homme for the man who lives on the edge.

This Christmas, giving a gift of luxury has never been more effortless, more highly individualized. All the Parfums Lagerfeld fragrances come specially wrapped.

Outwardly, Chloe delights the eye with a motif of unfurling satin ribbons, while KL seduces with an abstract fan design.

Lagerfeld is tucked inside handsomely marbled black and camel paper, and KL Homme captures its excitement in a mist of granite gray and blue with flashes of gold.

Charm her with private pleasures for the bath and the boudoir. Chloe's peach-colored dusting powder luxuriates in a shimmering frosted box with the signature embossed calla lily, and is paired with a sensuous spray of eau de toilette.

Unleash his love of adventure with KL Homme Essentials: A virile splash of eau de toilette, and the invigorating after-shave baume.

The luxury of the ages, the excitement and sensuality of today, is waiting at Parfums Lagerfeld this Christmas. Make it hers, make it his!

French prestige champagne will turn any occasion into a holiday

Traditionally, champagne has been served as an aperitif, with smoked salmon, caviar and oysters, or as a toast on special occasions.

Today, however, the prestige champagnes from France, more complex and fuller-bodied than other champagnes, can be served with a wide variety of foods throughout the meal.

And now, coupled with the increased interest in different cuisines, prestige champagne such as Krug Grande Cuvee is being served with a vast array of exotic foods, making the entire dining experience more interesting, more of an adventure.

Holiday time is the perfect occasion to introduce your guests to some of the newer taste sensations, along with some of the classics.

Sliced, smoked salmon cut and served on toast points is a traditional accompaniment. The richness of the salmon is offset by the crisp dryness of the Krug Grande Cuvee.

One of the newer taste treats to be paired with champagne is Tapenade, a spread for fresh vegetables or a crusty French bread.

Krug Grande Cuvee, a full-bodied champagne, is the perfect complement to the salty, piquant flavor of this Provençal specialty made from olives and anchovies.

In France, food is considered one of the foremost pleasures of life. And premium champagne is the ultimate way to celebrate that pleasure. Whether served with one of the old standards or a new delicacy, champagne adds sparkle to any occasion.

For additional serving suggestions, send a self-addressed, stamped #10 envelope to: Krug Recipe Booklet, Suite 1102, 211 East 43rd Street, New York, NY 10017.

TAPENADE

- ½ cup pitted black olives
- 1 large clove garlic, peeled
- 6 anchovy fillets (2 oz. can)
- 1½ tablespoons capers, drained
- Juice of ½ lemon
- ¼ cup olive oil
- ½ cup fresh parsley, minced
- ½ teaspoon dried thyme
- Fresh ground black pepper
- Additional parsley for garnish

Place olives, garlic, anchovies and capers in blender and puree coarsely.

Place mixture in a large bowl, and stir in lemon juice, olive oil, parsley, thyme and pepper.

Refrigerate for one or two hours to allow flavors to develop. Serve with sliced, raw vegetables or breads.

Makes about ¾ cup.

Make this Christmas last forever with a camcorder

Have you always wanted to capture the expressions of your family on Christmas morning and enjoy the moment again and again in the years to come?

This year you can, with the help of easy-to-use camcorders—the hottest consumer electronics gift idea of the year.

New Compact VHS camcorders—combination color video cameras and portable video cassette recorders—feature fully automatic functions for professional-quality "home movies" on videotape.

"The newest camcorders available this Christmas are so simple to use that even first-time camcorder users will be impressed by the results," said Gerald M. McCarthy, president of Zenith Sales Company.

More than 1.1 million camcorders were sold to dealers in 1986 and as many as 1.5 million of the popular units could be sold by Christmas Eve this year, McCarthy said.

New designs make it possible for some full-featured camcorders to weigh as little as 3.3 pounds (including cassette and battery).

McCarthy suggested that shoppers in the market for top-of-the-line performance should look for such features as autofocus, power zoom lens, high-speed shutter for crisp action shots, and low-light recording sensitivity.

"As an added convenience, some new models include an 'information center' on the camcorder's side that explains all your recording options," McCarthy said.

"And to further assure that you'll get the best possible images, these camcorders have a through-the-viewfinder playback feature that allows you to instantly review what you've just recorded," McCarthy said.

The playback feature also allows you to connect the camcorder directly to your TV or VCR for easy review or dubbing, McCarthy added. "Unlike some other compact systems, there's no need for a separate playback deck," he said.

Some of the most popular new camcorders use Compact VHS cassettes about the size of a deck of cards, which can offer up to 60 minutes of recording and can be played back in any VHS-format VCR with the use of an adaptor.

THE FEELING OF LUXURY that was prevalent for fall continues for the holidays in feminized tuxedo looks that hark back to the days of Hepburn and Tracy. Jewelry also possesses a powerful presence, adding definition and finesse to the body and the clothes. On her: 18K earrings by Pedro Boregaard; 18K dome ring by Chris Correia; 18K with pave accent brooch by Takashi Wada. On him: 18K studs and cufflinks by Pedro Boregaard.

Star quality accents glamorize holiday jewelry and fashions

The feeling of luxury that was so prevalent for fall continues for the Yuletide season in elegant form. To dress up for parties and the like, designers are promoting the classics, especially tuxedo looks that hark back to the days of Katherine Hepburn.

New feminine edge

The widespread popularity of menswear for women has been strong ever since she initiated the trend, but today's tuxedo looks are newly cut to display a whole new feminine edge.

From the soft drapes at the neckline of a silk charmeuse blouse to the all-out luxe of a beaded cardigan, the tuxedo still has plenty of élan.

The forbes movie star look has even greater impact on fashion this season. Notice the return of the snood, as it glamorizes the hair like a piece of jewelry.

Adorned with glistening rhinestones or crocheted with hints of metallic threads and beading, the most stylish snoods keep the hair sleek and neat, in tune with the paired-down clothing shapes.

A touch of finesse

Jewelry also possesses a subtle but powerful presence, adding definition and finesse to the body and the clothes. Real gold jewelry, particularly 18 karat, is the choice many women are making this season as it blends so well with the beautiful, couture-like fashions.

Luxe look

For instance, a handsome cuff bracelet fits snugly around the wrist like a second skin. Dotted with perforations or brushed with an uneven sandy texture, a cuff is all a woman needs to feel and look "rich."

Earrings complete a woman's portrait. Large, sweeping swirls of gold in mixed matte and polished surfaces sensually outline the ears and chin.

Naturalistic elements reflect a Byzantine mood in cracked egg designs that appear as if just unearthed. Bold scarab beetles have an ancient, mystical feel but display modern flair when finished in sandblasted pink and yellow gold.

Festive addition

One of the most enjoyable things about dressing for the holidays is that it provides the reason to be extravagant. Rings in geometric deco styles with jeweled accents fit right into the party mood, especially when worn stacked or decorating each finger.

Star quality pervades fashion this season, bringing year's end to a dramatic close. Whether "borrowed from the boys" or soft and ultra-feminine, there are plenty of opulent options to satisfy the "star" in all of us.

VERSATILE VALUE!

Dressy, yet affordable. Naturalizer's pretty walled toe pump doubles as a dress casual... to go with whatever you wear... wherever you go!

Give limited-edition collectors plates
this holiday season

The holiday season is a time filled with cherished traditions, such as decorating the tree, baking dozens of Santa-shaped cookies, and hanging stockings over the fireplace.

Another time-honored Christmas tradition is giving and receiving limited-edition collector's plates. Today more than six million Americans enjoy the beauty of collector's plates, which feature artwork in a variety of styles from traditional to contemporary.

Plate collecting began with a Christmas plate when the Danish porcelain house of Bing & Grondahl issued the first true limited-edition plate—"Behind the Frozen Window"—in 1895.

Ever since then, collector's plates have proven to be one of the most enduring and popular of Christmas presents.

The newest Christmas issues are available at gift shops and collectibles dealers across the United States for prices generally ranging from $25 to $75.

Among the most highly regarded of the 1987 selections are two plates from the Edwin M. Knowles China Company. "The Annunciation" is the first plate in a new Christmas series debuting this year: The Story of Christmas by Eve Licea.

This beautiful square-shaped plate depicts the angel Gabriel's announcement to Mary that she will be the mother of the Christ Child.

A combination of bas relief, geometric and natural designs, in gold and bold colors, makes "The Annunciation" a stunning example of the distinctive style which has earned artist Eve Licea so many fans.

When the annual six-plate series is completed, it will form a wall mural illustrating the Biblical Christmas story.

This plate features Norman Rockwell artwork originally created for a Western Union Telegram advertisement which appeared in 1935.

It shows a classic Santa with a red cap and a white beard, hanging a golden ornament on some lucky child's Christmas tree.

The 13 previous issues in the Rockwell Christmas series are among more than 6,000 past issues available on the "secondary market," where prices rise and fall depending on supply and demand.

When limited-edition plates are new, they are sold to collectors at issue price on the primary market. Once an edition is closed, no more plates are produced, so these past issues are only available from a collector, a dealer or The Bradford Exchange, the world's largest trading center for collector's plates.

Despite the fact that they are traded regularly, many of these plates are still available at reasonable prices.

For example, the 1977 Rockwell Society Christmas plate, entitled "Toy Shop Window," currently sells for $35. It shows a brother and sister amazed by the wonders on display at the local toy shop.

And last year's Rockwell Christmas plate—"Deer Santy Claus"—can be purchased for about $40. It depicts Santa thoughtfully contemplating a little girl asleep beneath a patchwork quilt, with a letter addressed to "Deer Santy Claus" tied to her bedpost.

Another 1986 secondary market plate which makes a beautiful, yet affordable Christmas gift is "The Gifts of the Magi."

The second plate in a Christmas series featuring work by well known contemporary artist Edna Hibel, it is available for approximately $50.

For an up-to-the-minute quote on prices for these or any other secondary market plate, Christmas shoppers should visit their local Bradford Exchange dealer or call the Bradford Exchange Trading Floor at 1-800-323-8078.

Because all plates traded through the exchange are guaranteed to be in mint condition, buyers are assured that their selection will be Christmas present-perfect upon receipt.
