

We create a mountain of trash every day

It isn't exactly news that Americans throw a lot away. But it's still surprising that the residents in the Grosse Pointes-Clinton incinerator authority area have increased the amount they toss out by 75 percent in 14 years.

In 1974, the first full year the incinerator was in operation, its members — man, woman and child — threw away about two pounds of trash every day. Today, each person generates 3.5 pounds, according to refuse authority chairman Robert Nugent.

"These numbers really show you the kind of disposable economy we're in," Nugent said.

The annual tonnage at the incinerator has increased from 80,000 in 1974 to 135,000 in 1987, while the population remained fairly stable in all the member communities except Clinton Township.

"Considering that most people have garbage disposals, it's really a lot," Nugent said. In the 1960s and before, all household garbage went to landfills. Now, all the Pointes have ordinances requiring new houses to be equipped with disposals — which takes all that garbage out of the waste stream.

Five months ago, the incinerator began burning refuse seven days a week. The old five-day burn pattern meant that in peak periods, too much garbage piled up. With limited storage space, the authority compacted the trash and had it hauled away to a landfill. Now the cost of such transfers has soared.

"We often get more than we can handle in a short period," Nugent said. "We'll still have to (transfer) at peak times. . . but the fewer times you have to start up, the better off you are."

Moving to a seven-day burn will even out the load and result in less maintenance, Nugent said.

The incinerator handles mostly residential trash, a little commercial trash and nothing from industry, he said.

Farms postpones Hill traffic fight

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

The battle over Hill traffic problems was postponed for two weeks because of the overflow crowd in the Farms council chambers Monday night. Discussion will resume Feb. 8.

Traffic committee spokesman Richard Hurford had barely launched into his explanation of the group's intent and goals when an audience member called out that the people crowded in the hall outside were unable to hear. Council seized the occasion, with two councilmen immediately moving to postpone.

Hurford's introductory remarks were clearly designed to defuse the explosion that had been gathering since the traffic committee issued its recommendations Jan. 18. Businesspeople and residents alike had spent the intervening week on the phone and on the street with petitions.

"I want to start by clearing up misunderstandings," Hurford said. "The recommendations have been the subject of confusion, rumor and innuendo." He went on to say that the committee is not currently recommending a parking ban on Kercheval and that all recommendations are temporary in nature, pending evaluation.

"These are short-term measures to evaluate the impact," he said. "This committee will never recommend any proposal that would destroy a neighborhood or a business. Fuller development of business on the Hill and along Mack is vital for the long-term health of the community."

Traffic committee chair Gail Kaess had been saying that all along, but business people don't believe it. They charged last week that the Farms had encouraged business with one hand and were trying to kill it with the other.

"We're all in agreement about abating traffic, but the residents of those streets want to eradicate traffic," said Hill Association president Dutch Hendricks last week. "The only winner is McMillan."

The disagreement was at first seen as dividing residents against business, but not all residents agree. McKinley resident Samuel Behringer circulated a letter opposing the committee recommendations, which he said was successful in drawing a number of his neighbors to the meeting. Behringer could also represent the Hill Association against the council if the merchants decide to carry their protest that far. Hendricks said legal steps were a possibility.

The traffic committee has been meeting sporadically for two years in an attempt to resolve problems with traffic congestion and parking on and around the Hill business district. It was formed after protests by the Moran/McMillan Advisory Committee and has representatives from the busiest residential streets and the Hill and Mack business communities.

Charges were made during the November council election that the traffic committee was dragging its feet. In early January, after not meeting since summer, Kaess issued a letter with a series of 9 recommendations that she wanted the committee to act

Woods vows to keep fighting flights

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

Helicopter flights over Woods houses into the St. John Hospital parking lot haven't stopped, but the Woods council is still determined to find a way to force them out.

A letter from the Detroit Flight Standards District of the Federal Aviation Administration declining to get involved in a nuisance case only strengthened council resolve.

"I suggest we find a routine for notifying the FAA every time there is a flight," said Councilwoman Jean Rice. "There has to be some way to get through to them. We have to build a case."

The city went to court seeking a temporary injunction in November. A ruling was expected in early December, but has not yet been handed down.

Since that time, flights have continued. Residents say four helicopters have landed since the court date, not all of them carrying patients; hospital administrators say there have been two flights, both "medically oriented."

Responding to charges that the flights have been ferrying hospital executives, St. John spokesman Michael Kairis said, "Certainly not."

Residents have complained for more than a year that the flights

Three complete Detroit academy

Three Grosse Pointe Park officers graduated from the Metropolitan Detroit Police Academy, finishing second, third and fourth in their class.

The officers — Ann Hoffman, William Malik and Lori Thompson (who finished in that order) — began regular duties Monday, Jan. 25. Malik was the best marksman in the class on the shooting range.

Council approves several parking changes

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Three of four parking proposals from the Tax Increment Finance Authority were approved on a 90-day trial basis by the Grosse Pointe Park City Council Monday night — a move that could create more parking in the residential and commercial areas in the northwest corner of the city.

TIFA Chairman James Odell gave a lengthy report on the specific proposals and how they would affect parking in the area.

The council approved allowing parking on St. Paul between Wayburn and Maryland on the south side of the street; changing the time on parking meters from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m.; and removing parking meters on the southwest corners of Beaconsfield, Lakepointe, Wayburn and Kercheval and on the northwest corner of Lakepointe and Kercheval.

One proposal not approved was closing Goethe at the alley between Wayburn and Alter. The move is designed to create additional parking and reduce traffic through the area, but was denied for further study.

City Manager John Crawford and several councilmen felt that the planning commission should study the street closing. Crawford also felt that the residents in the area should be polled and that the Detroit engineering department be consulted since the street flows into the city.

"Can I ask why we would have to consult the city of Detroit?" asked councilwoman Carol Evola.

"We just can't cut a street off at a boundary," Crawford said. "It could create problems for Detroit residents."

Odell suggested that as a matter of courtesy, Detroit officials should be made aware of the suggestion.

Public Safety Director Richard Caretti told the council that he had examined all of Odell's recommendations, and that from a public safety standpoint, none would adversely affect traffic flow or cause a hazardous situation.

Odell suggested that as a matter of courtesy, Detroit officials should be made aware of the suggestion.

Odell said that by allowing parking on St. Paul between Wayburn and Maryland on the south side of the street, residents in the area would be allowed several more spaces to park in an area where parking spaces are at a premium.

The removal of the meters at the corners adjacent to Kercheval would allow business employees to park there, thus opening up the metered spaces for business patrons.

Changing the time on the parking meters from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. would allow residents to park at metered spaces without fear of being ticketed in the morning, thus providing more spaces for overnight parking by residents.

Caretti noted that a part-time meter enforcement employee has been hired by the department, at the insistence of business owners along Kercheval and throughout the city. Caretti said that the full-time enforcement employee left the shift at 4 p.m., and residents who knew this took advantage of the situation and parked without paying. Now with the added person, late-day enforcement will be just as stringent as it is during the morning and early afternoon.

In a related move, the council approved sending letters to residents on Wayburn, Maryland and Lakepointe affected by the city's decision last fall to require residents to move cars to the opposite side of the street every other day.

Mayor Palmer Heenan suggested the residents be polled. The move was designed to make it easier for city public works employees to clean street, plow snow and collect refuse. Residents, however, complained bitterly about having to move their vehicles because of the inconvenience it caused and about the $15 tickets they received for not moving the vehicles.

Heenan suggested that the poll would let city officials know for certain whether it was more important to have the streets cleaned and plowed properly or to avoid the inconvenience of moving the vehicles.

Councilman James Robson called the parking regulations a "noble experiment," but said the time had come to take the numerous complaints from residents into consideration.

"We'll see just how much residents care," Heenan said. "If we get only a 10 percent response, I'm not inclined to change anything."

Break-ins reported in the Park

Park police reported two break-ins last week, which resulted in the loss of jewelry and electronic equipment.

Entry to a home on the 800 block of Nottingham was gained through a rear door, between 9 a.m. and 12:20 p.m. Friday, Jan. 15.

The thief conducted only a limited search of the dwelling and took a few pieces of jewelry, police said.

The side door of a house on the 1300 block of Wayburn was kicked in between 6 and 8 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 16.

Search of the home was confined to the living room and kitchen area. A telephone and four bottles of pop were taken.

come in low over their houses, endangering their lives and property, raising dust and causing a noise nuisance. The FAA letter stated that the agency had inspected the St. John operation and found it was "not hazardous to endanger the life or property of another." The FAA said it had encouraged the hospital to complete its proposed helipad expansion and that the pad would be inspected upon completion.

"The FAA does not have regulations concerning aspects of such flights which may be construed by some individuals as a nuisance," the letter concluded.

Councilman Ted Bidigare, a former helicopter pilot, called the letter a "generic response that doesn't address our concerns."

"They indicate that the size of the helipad will solve everything. I'm not concerned about the size of the pad — I'm concerned about the location. We're looking for an accident to happen — we've got the place for it."

Make better decisions

Sherwin T. Wine, director of the Center for New Thinking, will tackle the topic of decision-making in a three-part lecture series, "Making Better Decisions," Wednesdays, Feb. 3-17, from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the War Memorial.

Wine's focus on Feb. 3 will be "Overcoming Decision Anxiety — Resisting Paralysis." During this session he will explore the reasons why so many people suffer from the inability to commit themselves to any long-run course of action because they are afraid to make decisions.

"Deciding for Oneself — Saving Time and Energy" will be the topic Feb. 10. He will discuss how taking control of one's life facilitates appropriate decision making and allows one to devote himself to living not worrying about how to live.

His final lecture Feb. 17 will deal with "Deciding For Others — Reasons and Responsibilities." During this session, the audience will learn how to separate ego and vested interest from the real need of the people they guide.

Tickets are $19 for series of three lectures; $7.50 for single lecture. Advance registration is advised. For further information, call 881-7511.

Summer tax collection could save school district money

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Summer tax collection has long been a political issue, but since state laws governing the collection of a summer tax were enacted four years ago, Grosse Pointe remains one of the few larger school districts in Michigan that collects all of its taxes in the winter.

Doris Cook, president of the teachers' union, recently suggested that a summer tax collection be considered to help offset some $500,000 in reductions to the district's budget.

Director of Business Affairs Christian Fenton said the district has been looking into the matter, but without some compli-ated computations, the amount the district would save is not fully known.

Fenton said that during the Jimmy Carter presidency when earnings on interest were 19 to 20 percent and the district could borrow money at 6 to 7 percent, more money could be generated through investments than could be gained through a summer tax.

Currently the district borrows about $16 million each summer, which pays the district's bills until tax revenues start flowing in heavily in December, January and February. At 4 to 4.25 percent borrowing interest, the district incurs about $480,000 in costs. Short-term investments bring in about 6.25 percent interest and generate about $240,000 in revenue for the district.

"From a purely business standpoint, it would be better to have 100 percent collections in a summer tax," Fenton said, "but this is not realistic. The next best thing would be to have a 50-50 collection in the winter and summer."

Having the 50-50 split on taxes would even out the cash flow over the course of the year. Computing the additional revenue from the investment during the course of the year is complicated, Fenton said.

"We had a study done several years ago to determine how much of a savings the district would see from a summer tax," Fenton said, "but I don't have those figures for the current interest rates."

Fenton noted that it is too late to consider implementing a summer tax for next school year, which means the district must still find a way to cut $500,000 from its budget to improve its fund equity.

Though the district might save money, which would mean taxpayers would save, some taxpayers might be adversely affected by a summer tax. Taxpayers who pay into an escrow account for taxes and insurances would see little or no difference in their monthly payments. However, people paying taxes themselves each year would not be able to collect interest on the money they have invested for the entire year.

"I would rather see summer tax collection (on the 50-50 summer-winter basis)," Fenton said. "There would be a more predictable cash flow."

Superintendent John Whritner said the district will have to look at the issue of a summer tax in the near future.

"This is both a dollars-and-cents issue and a political issue," Whritner said. "We have to look at all the ramifications before we go too far."

Fenton said even if the interest situation changed where the district would generate more in earnings than it would pay out in borrowed interest, it would be better to have the summer tax collection to even out the cash flow.

"There wasn't that incentive years ago with the gap between the two (interest on earnings and borrowing), but there is more incentive now."

Because of the district's monetary situation, the money it pays for borrowing on tax notes and bonds is the lowest it can be, Fenton said to maintain that favorable bond rating, the district must increase its fund equity by $500,000.

"Grosse Pointe's bonds are still an attractive buy."

Woods police report decrease in burglaries

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Burglaries reached their lowest ebb in 10 years in Grosse Pointe Woods, thanks to aggressive police patrols and neighborhood and business crime watches.

Break-ins, often considered the most abhorrent crime to citizens because their privacy and personal surroundings have been invaded, numbered 51 in 1987, down from 65 in 1986.

Public Safety Director Jack Patterson said the figure is far below the city's high of 134 burglaries which occurred in 1980, and well below the 10-year average.

The most serious crimes, such as robbery, burglary and larceny, decreased for 1987. There was an increase in the number of stolen automobiles. The increase of seven stolen vehicles, or 18 percent, was not alarming but will require extra effort in 1988, Patterson said.

"Our major problem with stolen vehicles is at our parking lots, notably behind the Woods Theatre adjacent to Detroit," Patterson said. "We have also noted a slight increase in the number of thefts of vehicles from driveways in that immediate area."

Patterson said the department will address the problem with more attentive patrols and educational crime prevention programs for the residents. If residents would remember to lock their vehicles and install alarms or kill switches, the number of auto thefts would decrease dramatically, according to Patterson.

The most predominant crime throughout the Pointes is larceny, and the Woods is no exception. Larcenies dropped last year to 322 reported instances, compared to 356 in 1986. Over the past 10 years, there has been a downward trend in the number of thefts, although larcenies have held fairly steady since 1983 between 320 and 350 incidents per year.

Community education programs presented to various groups by the department's crime prevention officer make the citizenry aware of what it can do to prevent thefts, Patterson said.

Both the number of fire runs and actual fires increased slightly this past year, but were far below the 10-year average. Fire runs numbered 95, while actual fires numbered 25 in the city, compared to 83 runs and 20 fires in 1986.

The long-term decline in the number of fires is due to an aggressive fire inspection program.

The Woods has continuing rotation of fire inspections by platoon commanders. Each year inspections are made of every mercantile building in the city. The officials familiarize themselves with each building and take down pertinent information, such as building contents and interior structure, for future reference. The information is then placed in the department's computer system for immediate reference should a fire or other dangerous situation arise.

1987 annual police report

The first full year of the Woods-sponsored youth officer program has been completed.

"Dan Koerber, who has an office at Grosse Pointe North, has developed an outstanding rapport with the school staff and students," Patterson said. "He gives lectures and various programs on topics that I feel have had a great deal of positive effect. We are very happy with the program."

Officials are so pleased with the program they intend to implement a similar program in the middle and elementary schools within the community.

"This year it is our desire to start a program with Dan Koerber and Sally Beghin, our crime prevention officer, in the lower and middle schools," Patterson said.

The programs given to the younger students will involve such things as personal safety, substance abuse and being a street-smart child. Patterson said that meeting and getting to know students at an earlier age will make it easier to reach the students when they get to high school.

"We feel funding for these two positions has had a positive effect on the community," Patterson said. "The younger the children are when they get to know that police officers are there to help them, the better off we all are."

"We have gained a lot of friends in the schools through the youth service program."

The Woods received several commendations in regard to traffic and safety in 1987. In June the department placed second in the state for traffic safety efforts from the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police. The city was also awarded the Grand National Award for Pedestrian Safety from the Automobile Club of America.

Shores police credit residents for low crime

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

"It's like having 3,000 auxiliaries out there."

That's what Daniel Healy, Grosse Pointe Shores public safety director, said of the village's residents in discussing his department's 1987 public safety report.

There were no reported break-ins in the village last year and only 10 larcenies from automobiles. Reported vandalism decreased by 50 percent.

"We have formed a unique partnership in the village," said Healy, who has been on the job a little over a year. "We had a very good relationship with the village council and city administration, a sterling performance from our officers and the village residents really do a fine job. There is a terrific community spirit here. They really watch out for one another."

Larcenies in all categories are down 43 percent in the tiny village. The 41 thefts were down from the 73 reported in 1986. These do not include stolen cars, which were also down significantly in the village. There was only one stolen car this year (later found) compared with five in 1986.

1987 annual police report

"Even though these statistics will be hard to duplicate, I would rather try to duplicate excellence rather than improve on mediocrity," Healy said.

There was a slight increase in the number of fire runs in the village in 1987 - 59 compared to 48 in 1986. Healy said most of the runs were for minor problems and there were no major fires in the Shores last year.

The village did have one close call, however, when two large transformers at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club overheated to a point of near explosion.

"We are going to give three officers unit citations for their quick thinking and response to the situation," Healy said. "Cpl. John Frasad and public safety officers James Demeulenaere and David Sheuer got down there, recognized the seriousness of the problem, shut down power and made provisions for an explosion and possible release of hazardous chemicals."

A new 1987 FMC 1,000-gallon pumper was purchased by the village last year. The truck, now completely outfitted and in service, was delivered in December. The vehicle cost $103,000.

"The truck has now been outfitted as a back-up ambulance as well," Healy said. "It is capable of providing all EMS services except, of course, for transport. This will enable us to treat any firefighter who becomes injured at the scene, if the ambulance has already taken away someone."

Last year Shores officers checked 14,382 homes for vacationing residents and logged 188,469 miles on patrol cars.

Traffic safety group violates its own goals

Opinion

On Feb. 16, 1987, the Mayor's Advisory Traffic Safety Committee in Grosse Pointe Farms outlined its purpose in these words:

"To formulate a recommendation that alters traffic patterns so as to enhance the residential character of the community by the equitable distribution of traffic that does not negatively impact access to areas of business development."

Those words seem clear enough, although they do illustrate the differences that occur between some of the Farms residents and some of the businesses that operate in the Farms. The statement does support a traffic recommendation that would enhance the community's residential character, but it also promises "the equitable distribution of traffic that does not negatively impact access to areas of business development."

Yet the majority of the businesses on the Hill strenuously objected to many of the recommendations that the advisory traffic safety committee put before the council Monday night. Their objections emphasized that some of the proposals at least would

"negatively impact" access to the business district on the Hill. In short, the committee appeared to violate its own statement of purpose or goals.

True, a committee spokesman told the Monday night meeting, before the council postponed the hearing to Feb. 8 to accommodate the overflow crowd, that it had deferred action on its proposal to ban parking on the north side of Kercheval between Muir and Fisher and that it was recommending short-term rather than permanent changes in traffic patterns on a number of residential streets. In a further effort to mollify business objections, he said the committee never would recommend any proposal that would destroy any business on either the Hill or on Mack Avenue.

While the Farms obviously is predominantly a residential community, the business districts serve it well in several respects. The Hill and Mack Avenue provide shopping opportunities as well as professional services within easy reach of all residents of the Pointes, not just people in the Farms. They provide employment opportunities for Farms residents. And, equally important, their contributions to the Farms tax base keeps taxes on residential property lower than they would be if there were no commercial developments.

The concern of some Farms residents about traffic and parking problems is understandable. But it is difficult to understand why the committee feels it is necessary to move for action at a time when the future pattern of traffic in the Farms is not predictable.

The new Bologna building at 131 Kercheval is not yet completely occupied. Construction of the proposed parking structure just off Kercheval to serve the Bologna building, Cottage Hospital and businessmen and residents has not even begun. Nor has the rebuilt Punch and Judy Building been fully occupied.

True, several recommendations by the advisory traffic committee have been under study for years and the committee has been organized since 1985. But when it was organized it was asked to review a traffic volume-pattern survey made by the traffic engineering firm, Goodell-Grivas, Inc., and recommend which of the alternatives in the firm's report was "in the best interest of all Grosse Pointe Farms residents."

Surely the word, "residents," in this context must refer to the businessmen who live and work in the Pointes as well as residents who in many cases work elsewhere.

In their criticisms of the committee's traffic recommendations, businessmen have pointed out that several of the proposals would make access to the Hill business district so difficult that some residents would be forced to drive into the City to reach the Hill. Yet officials in the City informed the Grosse Pointe News they had not been advised of the traffic recommendations that would, to use the committee's words, "negatively affect," meaning increase, traffic in that municipality's residential district.

These examples of criticism by the businessmen demonstrate why we think the advisory traffic committee ought to defer its requests for approximately $7,000 for a new traffic study and erection of temporary barricades on several residential streets until it achieves a closer working relationship with the business community. As things now stand, carrying out the committee's recommendations would appear to cause more problems than such actions would solve.

More Fords in our future

In this era of corporate takeovers and the deaths of family companies, it is encouraging to learn that there will be more Fords in our future well into the 21st century.

We are referring to the family named Ford as well as the products of the Ford automobile manufacturing company, but we are citing in particular the election of two young members of the Ford clan to the board of directors of the Ford Motor Co.

By naming Edsel B. Ford II, 39, and William Clay Ford Jr., 30, to the board, the directors chose two great-grandsons of the founder, Henry Ford, as the first representatives of the family's fourth generation to play significant roles in the auto manufacturing company.

In a joint interview in the Detroit Free Press last week, the young men said they wanted to see the fifth generation follow them into the company. Edsel said he hopes his son, Henry III, now only 8, someday will be able to prove he's worthy to work for the family business, too.

It does not follow that either of the younger Fords will automatically rise to the top rung of the company, but their new appointments do mean both will have a chance to do just that. Edsel confirmed in the Free Press interview that both of the young men have higher job aspirations and then said:

"I wouldn't want to sit here and tell you I didn't aspire to greater things at the Ford Motor Co. But I want to earn the jobs. And the one thing that concerns me the most is the possible attitude that Edsel got somewhere in the Ford Motor Co. because of who he is."

It is clear from their impressive records with the company as well as from their comments to the news media that both of the new Ford directors are fine young men. They have their feet on the ground and the talent, capacity and intelligence to serve the family company well and perhaps someday even as chairman of the Ford Motor Co.

Last hurrah for the Freeep?

Now that the directors of Knight-Ridder have spoken, there should be little doubt that the Detroit Free Press will close and Detroit will become a one-newspaper city unless the joint operating agreement (JOA) with The Detroit News is approved.

Up to this point, many people had believed the Freeep might be sold or might continue in its costly competition with the Detroit News for the foreseeable future if the application for a JOA were turned down. Now it appears the community is left with only two options: a JOA or no Free Press.

In its death struggle, the Free Press has amassed a formidable array of legal, political, professional and business talent in support of its application for the JOA. Even its partner in the JOA application, The Detroit News, which presumably would benefit from the death of the Free Press, last week said that it still wants the JOA.

The Free Press news and opinion blitz, while centered on people in Detroit and Michigan, is also being directed at newspapers and opinion leaders in Washington, New York and other big cities around the country. It is apparently aimed at Attorney General Edwin Meese III who will make the final decision on whether the Free Press lives in a JOA or dies without one.

In an election year, it will not be an easy decision for Meese. While he is supposed to decide the issue on its economic merits alone, 1988 is an election year. So politics might influence his decision at least indirectly because the Free Press has been a frequent editorial critic of the Reagan administration, while the News has been a staunch supporter of almost everything the president and his colleagues have done.

Whatever the decision, the Free Press' media blitz has demonstrated once again the power the press can exert and especially the power of a big newspaper backed by its chain owners to make its influence felt in national business and political arenas.

But the support the Freeep's campaign has aroused in the community and the state also reflects the public view that big, powerful newspapers ought to have competition so that their customers have a choice in seeking news, opinion and advertising services.

As this newspaper has said from the outset, we would prefer the preservation of both Detroit daily newspapers. But we also have said that a joint operating agreement, even with its limitations on competition, is preferable to a one-newspaper Detroit. What the Knight-Ridder board has now said emphasizes that only two alternatives are left. We, too, believe that a JOA is preferable to the death of the Free Press.

Letters

When?

To the Editor:

For years this writer has complained about the deplorable condition of Lakeshore Road in Grosse Pointe Farms. Finally, after years of suffering, we had been promised that this resurfacing job would be done in the "summer of 1987." This never happened.

We did get new curbs which are most attractive, but no resurfacing. When is it now scheduled to be done?

Some stretches of Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe are also in a horrible condition and need immediate repair. Why must we Grosse Pointers suffer so when we are among the highest taxpayers in Michigan?

The following letter is written to an unknown person who offered help in a pinch.

He got involved

To the Editor:

I do not know your name. You recently took it upon yourself to step into a situation that all too many people these days take great pains to avoid.

Last Thursday evening my daughter and another young lady, alone in a Mack Avenue store just before closing, found a late-arriving customer just a little different from the usual shopper. This person appeared to be "looking" more than shopping and what he appeared to be looking at were the two young ladies alone in the store late at night and the cash register.

You saw this man enter the store. You saw the car he got out of. You saw this car at the curb with the motor running and a male companion at the wheel. You then abandoned your private pursuits, entered the store and started "looking" yourself. However, your looking was at the suspicious person. He recognized your presence and interest and decided to shop some other place.

I am certain that your activities last Thursday saved my daughter and my family from a bitter experience and possibly much, much more. I would have done the same, but you are a stranger to her and to me. You stood in for me when I could not be there. I will forever keep your unselfish act in my mind as an example of what the obligations of citizenship include.

Please accept my sincere thanks.

Too much money

To the Editor:

Baseball players, like all other athletes are hitting home runs when it comes to salaries. For the job they perform, most athletes receive ridiculously high salaries.

No person, no matter how good he is, is worth a million dollars plus. Athletes should receive salaries equal to the average American. What athletes do for a living is what some think of as a Sunday afternoon activity. After all, a game is a game is a game.

More letters on page 8A

It seems reasonable to say that if each athlete earning over half million dollars would give up half of his salary to a charity or medical research, it would be money well spent. People would be more apt to spend $10 for a ticket to a game, if there was good cause to be served as well as a player's pocketbook.

Correction

In last week's editorial about the decline in the 1987 Michigan Educational Assessment Program test scores in the Grosse Pointe public schools, the Grosse Pointe News should have identified the two tests on which results were discussed as those in math and reading. We apologize for the error.

We should add that while the state has announced results indicating an increase in the state scores on these same 1987 tests, the Grosse Pointe schools still have not received the scores of comparable districts and apparently will not get them until March.

Service is my business

Try calling a major union's medical insurance office. I spent 40 minutes on hold the other day just to find out that without my wife's Social Security number, the date of each claim we had made and the number on the first page of the letter sent to our home, they couldn't tell me anything.

"You have to give me something to work with," a disgruntled voice said.

I apologized for not having the numbers and other information as calmly as I could, bit my lip—hard—and hung up the phone. I found the information the office needed and called again. And again I was put on hold. Twenty minutes later, I gave the voice on the other end every number I had, and proceeded to ask my questions. After being put on hold for another 10 minutes, the voice returned and said she couldn't answer my questions, couldn't tell me why the decisions about my claim were made and said if I wanted to file a protest, she would give me an address where I could write.

Admittedly, I had become a bit testy. After spending more than an hour on the phone to find out I should write to the appeals committee in Los Angeles at a post office box, I started to laugh. Before giving me the zip code, the person at the office slammed down the phone.

Perhaps testy isn't the best word to describe how I felt. Damned mad was how I felt and rude was how I acted. But rudeness begets rudeness, and obviously shoddy procedures make a reasonable man a high blood-pressured idiot.

If the people who answer questions are so backlogged that they will take 40 minutes to answer a call, why not have someone take a number and call you back? If the office personnel cannot answer questions about policy claims or why a decision about the claim was made, why not spell that out in the first few seconds of the call, give you the Los Angeles address and not waste your time?

I Say

It's all common sense and common courtesy, if you ask me. Go ahead, ask me. You asked? I tell you what I think

Everyone has a bad day now and then. Some jobs, which require people to field calls from irate people everyday, could be very stressful. Customers can be a royal pain, and perhaps some deserve to be treated as they treat the office staffer.

Now that I said that, let me say that I always try to be courteous on the phone. People get an impression about the person at the other end of the line very quickly from the tone of the voice, the willingness to take the time to answer a question or take a message.

I so much despise rude behavior on the phone or from a clerk in a store or a secretary in the office that I make every effort to be courteous on the phone or when a customer walks in.

I do not want anyone walking away from me or slamming down the phone cursing me with horrible epithets, ruining the day my DNA was formed or trying to find out which car I drive so they can explain in detail how they feel about my behavior on the paint finish with a key.

My wife Marlene, who works in the front office of a major grocery store, said customers can be real jerks. People walk into the store and demand their money back because the shrimp they left in the refrigerator for 10 days turned brown and began to stink. She got in a real bad mood one day when a man threw a $20 bottle of vitamins at her because the store no longer sold them. He came in and said the expiration date on the vitamins had passed. He had no receipt, no box for the bottle and a downright nasty disposition.

She contacted the manager who told her not to take the bottle back without a receipt. She suggested the man bring the bottle back with him next time he came back to the store. She would talk to the department head, and find out when the store did sell the vitamins. Perhaps an arrangement could be made for him to get a new bottle of vitamins or get his money back. Frustrated and upset, he heaved the bottle over the plastic partition, said he would never shop at the store again and walked out.

There's fault on both sides of the counter, desk or plastic partition. People, so often concerned with only their own little or big problems, forget that the person they are dealing with is human. He or she might be having a bad day, got in a car accident—really can't help you.

I hate to preach, especially when I don't always practice said preachings, but try it just for a day. Be nice to a customer. And you, who make the calls or get the complaints, take a deep breath—and be courteous.

Only at ULS

This could only happen in Grosse Pointe.

Last week when ice carver Bruce Blyth was fielding questions from University Liggett School first graders, he was asked if ice carving was the only thing he did for a living.

Blyth replied that he was a chef at The Whitney, and that he did ice sculpture as a hobby.

From the throngs of children around him came a quiet voice.

"That's my grandpa's house," said the little voice.

The small voice belonged to Whitney Gage, whose great-great grandfather was David Whitney, noted Detroit industrialist and one of the founders of the Liggett School.

Unflapped by the little girl's comment, Blyth continued to chip away at his ice sculpture, probably wondering if he should take care to get to work on time.

Good idea

It's about time someone came out with something both innovaive and practical.

Purchasers of Chevrolet's 1988 Corsica and Beretta will notice a feature they've never had before.

These models come equipped with a duplicate plastic key, which comes in a credit card-like package and can be safely tucked away in a wallet or purse.

The keys, which bend out of the card and can be reused, will eliminate the problem of losing your keys or locking them in the car.

Made of a new engineering polymer developed by DuPont, the plastic keys should not break and can be used a number of times until replacement metal keys are made.

Now if they can just find a way for us not to lose our wallets and purses.

Unique Valentine

If you're looking for a different way to wish your beau or belle a happy Valentine's Day, look no more.

The East Pointe Sweet Adelines Chorus will again provide a personalized Singing Valentine to the love of your life or to someone whose day you wish to brighten.

For $20, a quartet or octet will deliver to your sweetheart on Feb. 12, 13 or 14 a live singing valentine at the location of your choice within the northeast Detroit and suburban communities. For $10, the group will phone and sing your valentine message anywhere in the continental United States.

When the chorus began this service, the primary objective was to raise funds to support the educational programs of this non-profit organization. Members who have sung in previous years are looking forward to the reactions of the recipients, which can range from tears to laughter to embarrassment.

To arrange for your singing valentine, call 546-6790, 774-7953 or 823-3952.

State Senator
John F. Kelly

America's horrifying trade deficit (approximately $156 billion last year) and its negative effect on the stock market have been the cause of significant and justifiable worry on the part of millions of Americans in recent weeks. While by no means intending to negate the seriousness of that situation, I do think it would be most unfortunate if we overlooked some of the exciting new trade initiatives that hold great promise for Michigan and the rest of the nation.

One of the most promising of the new initiatives would certainly seem to be the Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement (CUSFTA) that was recently negotiated. Although the new trade pact must still be approved by both Congress and the Canadian parliament, proponents of the agreement are already heralding its potential benefits. A quick summary of those benefits points to a substantial increase in jobs, sales and production for both nations.

The new Canada-United States trade pact comes two years after America signed a similar, though less far-reaching, agreement with Israel. That agreement has already produced dividends in the form of increased trade, investments and new ventures. The trade pact with our northern neighbor also helped set the stage for a new pact that was signed early in November with our southern neighbor, Mexico. That agreement establishes a new means for resolving trade disputes with Mexico.

It would be difficult to overemphasize the importance of the new agreement to either Canada or the United States. The two countries are the world's largest trading partners. According to the "Congressional Quarterly," trade between the two countries totaled $125 billion in 1986, "only slightly less than the trade between the United States and all 12 nations of the European Community." Michigan, one of Canada's closest neighbors, does approximately $28 billion in trade with Canada.

Besides the predicted overall increase in jobs, sales and production, all tariffs will be removed over the next 10 years. The agreement ends all energy restrictions on imports and exports and gives Canada access to oil from Alaska's north slope. The pact also preserves the basic elements of the 1965 United States-Canadian auto pact. The Canadian tariff subsidies for car exports and their embargo on used cars are eliminated immediately, with all others within five to 10 years. To be exempt from the tariffs, however, at least 50 percent of the value of the automotive products must originate in North America.

It's still too early to know exactly what the new pact will mean to Michigan. However, some experts in both countries are predicting increased traffic on the Ambassador Bridge and in the Detroit-Windsor Tunnel as shoppers from both countries cross borders to take advantage of new shopping opportunities.

As a consequence of the increased competition among retailers, prices could drop in both countries. The fact that Detroit area businesses are becoming more aware of the economic gains to be realized from increased trade with our northern neighbors was indicated by a recent report in a trade publication that many Detroit restaurants are offering special deals to attract Canadians to their establishments.

As a state senator with a proven interest in trade, I will do everything I can to encourage the Legislature and the Michigan Department of Commerce to maximize this new trading opportunity, as well as many others. I recognized several years ago that many of our economic opportunities lie beyond our state borders. In 1983, I served as the governor's special envoy to Sichuan, China and, as a member of the Governor's Commission on China, I was able to play a critical role in helping to develop new international trade ventures. In August, I had the privilege of returning to China again as a member of a Michigan Senate delegation.

By establishing trade agreements with China, Michigan has increased the market for its products overseas. In return, China has received the advanced technology and expertise it needs to strengthen and expand its agricultural operations.

My interest in developing new trade initiatives with China has been mirrored by my interest in developing the same with Canada. For several years I have played a very active role as a member of the Michigan Senate's Select Committee on Ontario-Michigan Relations. The committee has been involved with developing economic and trade opportunities between the two countries.

I also have introduced Senate Bill 425, which is before the Senate Committee on Government Operations for consideration. This bill would establish a joint Michigan-Ontario Law Revision Commission to review matters of mutual concern and recommend legislation to the Ontario Legislative Assembly and the Michigan Legislature which deals with those shared areas of concern.

In recent years, Michigan and the majority of the other states have increasingly recognized the importance of acting on their own, apart from federal initiatives, to encourage and develop trade opportunities. "State Government News" recently reported that all 50 states have some kind of trade development program and at least 30 states have foreign offices to help promote their international trade activities.

The Michigan Department of Commerce maintains trade offices in Tokyo, Japan and Brussels, Belgium. The Michigan Department of Agriculture recently announced the creation of the World Trade Services Division to help market the state's food products in foreign countries. The division is in charge of all international market development efforts, including the Michigan Department of Agriculture trade offices in Brussels and Hong Kong. The Departments of Commerce and Agriculture also will join in opening a trade office in Lagos, Nigeria.

The departments provide expert assistance to Michigan companies seeking advice on how to break into the export market.

Attack on democracy

To the Editor:

The Supreme Court's recent decision to legalize censorship in student publications is a direct attack on democracy.

The Supreme Court ruled that school administrators do not have to tolerate student speech that is contrary to the educational process. This statement is so undefined that if a censor did not like a certain article, all he or she would have to do is find an obscure connection to the "educational process" to delete it.

I am a journalism student at South and find it hard to believe the Supreme Court considers students exempt from the right to a free press. It is not a democracy when censorship, in any form, is legal; the Supreme Court has shifted the constitutional drive into reverse with its decision.

I am also concerned that a single censor would not represent the will of the majority of the readers.

The Supreme Court is also sending a clear message to the educators: We don't trust you enough to teach students the responsibilities of good journalism, therefore, we must censor the students.

private schools," the number of students coming to Grosse Pointe public schools from private schools is increasing.

It is great that more children are starting to attend the Grosse Pointe public schools. There is really no reason for students not to. Many parents shell out lots of money each year to pay for a private education when all they really have to do is send their children to the Grosse Pointe schools to get a really excellent education.

The Grosse Pointe school system is one of the best public school systems around. There are many people who take advantage of it, but there are still many students who don't. The number of students entering Grosse Pointe public schools is still increasing and it should keep increasing.

Too cold

To the Editor:

The problem of coldly impossible-to-spread butter exists in the finest restaurants and the humblest diners, but we think there is a better way to make one's displeasure known than by taking it out of the tip. Odds are that the temperature of the butter is beyond the control of the table server.

I suggest that too-cold-butter be sent back to the kitchen in exactly the same way you would with coffee too cold, beer too warm, soup too cold or champagne too warm.

Ensuring that the food served in a restaurant or at home (is the proper temperature) is the responsibility of the kitchen.

Yes, this will annoy them, but they know we are right -- it's probably happened to them, too. Perhaps they will be motivated to solve the problem.

Butter is happy and spreadable at 60-65 degrees and will not spoil for a long time. Surely such a place could be found to store some of it.

Historical society seeks nominations for markers

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society is seeking nominations for its historic marker program. Anyone in the community may nominate a site for consideration by the Plaque Committee.

To nominate a site, call the society headquarters tape anytime at 884-7010 and ask for a nomination form. Callers who leave their name and address will receive a simple form to complete. Nominations should be sent to GPHS, Suite 271, 18530 Mack Ave., Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48230.

Jan Rehmann, chairman of the Plaque Committee, said, "We are looking for a variety of historic sites to consider — not just the large, elegant mansions." Public buildings, farmhouses, gates and other sites will be considered.

The next evaluation of sites will take place in April. All nominations must be received no later than March 19. Plaques will be presented at the annual meeting.

Last April, the society presented three of the specially designed bronze plaques to the owners of the Ralph Harman Booth home in Grosse Pointe, the Cadieux farmhouse in Grosse Pointe and St. Paul's Cemetery in Grosse Pointe Farms.

The selection of the group's first three sites for historic designation was the result of a year-long effort by a society committee which chose the sites after first determining how other communities recognized their historic sites and then deciding what the criteria should be for a similar Grosse Pointe program.

The bronze plaques, designed to be mounted in a visible location, feature an interpretation of the society's logo, the windmill, which gave its name to Windmill Pointe in Grosse Pointe Park.

The windmill was erected sometime before 1750 at the foot of Lakepointe in what is now Grosse Pointe Park. Both French settlers and Indians took their grain to this mill to be ground until about 1800.

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society was founded in 1945, reorganized in 1979 and has nearly 500 members. The society's goal is to preserve Grosse Pointe's rich heritage by increasing awareness of the area's history and educating its residents through lectures, workshops and field trips.

WINNERS CIRCLE
BY LAURIE KIPP

Rolling over Super Lotto Jackpots to increase the top prize for the next drawing has raised some questions from players. The following addresses those inquiries.

Q: How many Jackpot winners were there in 1987 and what were the prize amounts?

A: Of the 70 Jackpot winners, three won prizes of $10 million or more, 12 won $5-$10 million, 12 won $2-$5 million, and 31 won $1-$2 million. The remainder won less than $1 million.

Q: When the Jackpot rolls over, why isn't the prize money awarded to other winners in the game?

A: With distribution to other winners, Jackpots would likely never rise above the minimum, taking away much of the inherent excitement of the game. This would likely cause decreased sales, and consequently a decrease in the Lottery's contribution to education as well as in the amount awarded as prizes.

Q: Why can't the top Jackpot be limited to say $10 million with any extra going to winners of lesser prizes?

A: The rules of the Lotto game state that only players matching all six winning numbers share the Jackpot prize. In many drawings, there is more than one Jackpot winner, so each receives a share of the full prize.

Q: Why were the rules written this way?

A: Michigan's Lotto game was based on the proven experience and success of other states' ongoing Lotto games.

Q: How do large Jackpots affect sales?

A: It is a fact that sales rise as Jackpots grow — a sign that players indeed want large Jackpots. Increased sales mean more dollars for schools and one of the charges of the Lottery is to maximize revenues to aid the state School Aid Fund.

Q: How are Jackpot amounts determined?

A: Jackpots are based on 25 percent of each sales dollar. This sum is invested and when combined with interest earned over the next 19 years forms the total amount paid to winners.

For asking the question leading to this column, Keith Sylvester of Dearborn will receive 50 free tickets for the Lottery's new instant game, "3 Cards Up."

If you have a question not yet covered in these columns, send it to: "Winners Circle," Michigan Lottery, P.O. Box 30077, Lansing, MI 48909.

Organizers plan annual Star auction

The fourth annual Rainbow of the Stars Auction will be held Saturday, March 5, at Assumption Greek Cultural Center beginning at 6 p.m. with a silent auction and at 8 p.m. with the live auction.

The event is held each year for Our Lady Star of the Sea School as a fund-raiser for the school — to buy things like computers, typewriters and sports equipment.

"Over the past several years, the auction has grown to be one of the biggest and most exciting in the area," said auction official Diana Mott.

Officials hope to have many of the items they had last year, including a scavenger hunt by chauffeured limousine, which alone raised about $1,000 for the school.

Tickets are $30 per person and includes hors d'oeuvres, dinner and open bar and entry to both auctions.

"We are a small school and wanted a get-together social evening and fund-raiser rolled into one," Mott said. "Now we have."

To donate gifts or for more information, call the high school at 881-5510.

Faculty and students will be present to answer questions. Available scholarships and financial aid will be discussed. The day will include tours, classroom visits and refreshments. For more information, call 591-5052.

THE SAAB 9000S. A CAR FOR PEOPLE WHOSE SENSE OF LUXURY IS DEFINED BY HIGH STANDARDS. NOT HIGH PRICE.

If all you're looking for is an expensive car to drive around in, you'll find quite a few cars fitting that description. But if you're interested in a car that has concentrated more on high standards than on high price, consider the Saab 9000S.

For much less than you'd imagine a fine European car would cost, you'll receive the kind of standard features you'd rightfully expect in a luxury sedan. And several you might not.

Like Saab's unique anti-lock braking system, for example, which is specially calibrated to work with our front-wheel drive.

And an interior that's roomier than any other import except the Rolls Royce Silver Spur Limousine.

So test-drive the Saab 9000S. You'll see that while many car companies use an "impressive" sticker price to elevate their status, Saab uses something infinitely more convincing. An impressive car.

Kindergarten readiness programs offered

The Grosse Pointe Public School System is offering a series of four school readiness programs to help parents of 1988-89 kindergarteners prepare their children for school. The programs are free and take place in the gymnasium of Richard School, 176 McKinley Road.

The first, "Children and Books," was held Jan. 26. The second session, "School Readiness: What Parents Can Do," will be held Tuesday, Feb. 9, from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. Dr. Jane Healy, author of "Your Child's Growing Mind," will discuss how parents can help their children prepare for kindergarten. Healy, a learning specialist and consultant, advocates a developmental approach to learning and will discuss the issue of early academics.

On Wednesday, Feb. 24, from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., a panel of Grosse Pointe kindergarten teachers will discuss "School Programs and Services." Anne Speicher-Basco, Darlene Cooper, Linda Dixon, Viola Hadgikosti and Joyia Sands will present highlights of the kindergarten curriculum.

"Stress and the Young Child," is scheduled for Tuesday, March 8, from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. Lynn O'Connor, M.S.W., chairperson of the schools' social workers and psychologists, will show parents how to recognize signs of stress in their children and how to use techniques and strategies to help their children cope.

Panel topic: How kids deal with death

The Richard School P.T.O. will sponsor an open house for parents and members of the community at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 4, in the Richard gym. The event is a panel discussion titled "Helping Your Child Deal With Death."

The panel — which includes

Julia Dempz, director of volunteers for the Cottage Hospice, Richard School social worker Noel Hribljon and Margaret Sammons, Christ Church minister and Richard School parent — will discuss how elementary school children view death and how adults can help.

Student Spotlight

Marie Halpin

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The following was written by Marie Halpin, a third-grader at Kerby School. She is the daughter of Tom and Carol Halpin of Grosse Pointe Farms.

The Terrible Time Babysitting

One day our next door neighbor called us.

"Ring-ring."
"Hello," said my mother as she picked up the phone.

"Oh, my," said Mrs. Sholunburger, "I do feel a flu bug going around. Would your daughter please watch my two kids while I take a nap?"

"Oh, she'd love to. What time?"

"Oh, about 9 o'clock."

"Okay, bye. Oh, honey?"

"Yah, mom," I said, walking downstairs with a water bottle on my head.

"You're going to be watching Mrs. Sholunburger's kids."

"I...am, but mom, it's a Saturday and plus her kids are crazy."

"Well, you're just going to have to put up with it. You'd better get ready. It's almost time to leave."

"Well, okay."

Finally I got there. There were so many things to do. I had to give Shalen a bath. I had to feed Shaun fish liver.

"Yuk," I said to myself. "That's disgusting."

I whispered to Shaun, "Do you really like that stuff?"

Shaun said, "Yah, want some?"

Marie Halpin

"No, thanks. You can eat it all."

Then I went upstairs to give Shalen a bath. She was going to the bathroom in the sink.

"Yuk," I said to myself again. "These kids sure are weird."

Then Shalen hopped down.

"Me done."

Soon Mrs. Sholunburger woke up. I ran out the door and into our door and plopped on the couch. Mom said, "How did it go?"

"It's too hard to explain."

This space is open to any student in the Grosse Pointe public or private school system from grades 1 through 12.

Send your entry along with a picture to Student Spotlight, Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms 48236 or drop it off at the office. If you would like the photo returned, enclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

ULS leads state schools in advanced placement

The Midwestern Regional Office of the College Board announced that University Liggett School has placed sixth out of 1,542 participating schools in the midwest in total Advanced Placement exams taken, relative to size of the senior class.

In 1987, students at ULS took 204 Advanced Placement examinations to qualify for college credit based on art, biology, calculus, chemistry, computer science, English, French, American and European history, Latin, music, physics and Spanish courses taken during high school. Of the total, 96.8 percent of the ULS candidates received a score of 3 or better, qualifying them for college credit.

No eastside schools other than ULS were in the top 50 schools commended by the College Board. Other Michigan schools commended after ULS were: Detroit Country Day School of Birmingham — 12th; Cranbrook Kingswood of Bloomfield Hills — 32nd; Andover High School of Bloomfield Hills — 34th; Roeper School of Bloomfield Hills — 44th; and Greenhills School of Ann Arbor — 47th.

Apply now for kindergarten

Applications for enrollment in full-day kindergarten for the 1988-89 school year are now being accepted by the Grosse Pointe Public School System. The number of classes and their location will be announced when enrollment is complete, but Defer, Ferry and Kerby schools will be probable sites.

Tuition for the program is $1,450 per year. Parents are responsible for transportation to and from school.

The all-day kindergarten program offers an alternative for parents who wish to enhance the experiences provided children in the traditional, half-day program. The additional time allows for supplementary and enrichment experiences; it is not intended as an acceleration of the curriculum.

All-day kindergarten meets Monday through Friday with the same beginning and dismissal times as the rest of the elementary schools. Children may remain at school for lunch or eat at home.

Enrollment forms are available at all Grosse Pointe elementary schools or at the Office of Elementary Curriculum, 389 St. Clair, Grosse Pointe, 48230. Completed forms, accompanied by a $75 deposit, must be returned to the office by March 15.

J students

Student journalists who staff the Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher High School newspaper, The Crosier, attended a statewide conference for high school editors at Michigan State University. Participating were, from left, Thomas Bankstahl of Roseville, Walter Krygowski of Utica, Patricia Distel of Grosse Pointe Farms, Eric Wydra of Detroit, and faculty moderators Cathie McIntyre of Grosse Pointe Woods and Roberta Youngblood of Grosse Pointe Farms.

Be an exchange student

Grosse Pointe sophomores, juniors and seniors may now apply to be a summer exchange student to one of 56 countries. Students live with a host family for eight to 10 weeks, learning about their new country by participating in family activities. Exchanges are sponsored by AFS Intercultural Programs, which has had an active Grosse Pointe chapter for 15 years.

In addition to the regular homestay program, AFS offers a variety of special interest summer programs. Language students may study Spanish, French, Italian or German for college credit, and Japanese without credit.

A challenging Outdoor Skills program in New Zealand requires excellent conditioning.

Sports programs in Latin America offer training in soccer for boys and skiing for all athletes of at least intermediate skill level.

Cultural studies programs in Brazil, Greece, Italy, Portugal, Spain, Switzerland and Turkey focus on the culture of the country and include a special interest activity. Students usually divide the time between a home stay and a dormitory experience.

Deadline for application is March 1; allow at least two weeks to apply. For additional program and application information or information on hosting a foreign exchange student for the 1988-89 school year, call Ann Nicholson, 884-4637, or Betty Buffa, 885-6166.

Get your child a number

More than 160,000 persons in Michigan must apply for Social Security numbers to be claimed as dependents on parents or other taxpayers' federal tax returns, according to IRS.

As a result of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, a taxpayer claiming a dependent who is at least five years old must include that dependent's taxpayer identification number on his or her tax return. This new law is effective for 1987 federal tax returns filed between January and the April 15th deadline.

If the dependent has a Social Security number, but does not know what it is, the taxpayer should contact one of 53 Social Administration offices located throughout Michigan.

To get a Social Security number, a dependent must have evidence of: (1) date of birth, (2) U.S. citizenship or legal alien status, and (3) identity. A birth record from a public authority, hospital, or religious organization is generally sufficient for the first two items. A school record and certain other documents can be used for proof of identity.

For more information, taxpayers may ask at any Social Security Administration office for the free leaflet, "Applying for a Social Security Number," and can also request a Form SS-5, Application for a Social Security Number Card, to apply for an identification number.

Martin Luther King visit subject of essay contest

The eighth annual Martin Luther King Jr. Essay Contest, sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Inter-Faith Center for Racial Justice, will focus this year on his March 1968 visit to Grosse Pointe. King spoke on civil rights at Grosse Pointe South High School. The contest is open to third- through eighth-grade students in Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods public, parochial and independent schools.

On March 14, 1968, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. came at the invitation of the Human Relations Council of Grosse Pointe. Many people from Grosse Pointe, Detroit and other communities came to hear him. The auditorium was full.

Some, however, did not want him here and police security was tight. Less than three weeks later, King was assassinated in Memphis.

All entries must be received by the Inter-Faith Center by 4:30 p.m. Feb. 5. The Inter-Faith Center is located in the annex building behind the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church, 17150 Maumee, corner of St. Clair.

Contest requirements are available at the schools. Cash awards are first place, $25; second place, $20; third place, $15. All participants will receive certificates.

The Martin Luther King Jr. Essay Contest is funded by Dorothy Radulovich as a memorial to her aunt, Catherine Blackhurst, who was an educator of young people.

on at a Jan. 18 meeting. Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm said the two were connected. "During the November campaign, there was a lot of heat generated in some quarters and I guess Gail and the committee decided to make the move," he said.

Kaess said the decision was made in conjunction with Fromm and other council members.

But Fromm denied that the recommendations were intended to hurt business. "Emphatically I can say that that's not the intent," he said in a phone interview last week. "We've been working to revitalize the Hill."

Hill businesspeople say the sudden recommendations caught them by surprise. They charge that the committee failed to adequately notify them of meetings or of the proposals.

"That's just not true," said Kaess. She said the majority of the proposals came from the 1985 traffic study and recommendations done by Goodell-Griivas, which has continued to advise the traffic committee. Two street closings were not part of the 1985 package, but were published in April 1987.

The proposals that have generated the most controversy are the barricading of Hall Place and McMillan and the barricading of the Mack island at Moran. All three measures are intended to prevent through traffic to and from the Hill. Other proposals include one-way alleys behind Kercheval businesses and a series of turns that would be prohibited during certain hours.

Elaine Hartmann of Kerby Road cast one of the two dissenting votes on the proposals. Hendricks cast the other; he has since quit the committee in protest.

Hartmann says the McMillan residents who started the whole thing are not taking the broad view. "They don't care about the residents of the Farms as a whole," she said last week. "Street closures aren't the answer. More traffic will end up on Kerby and Moross, which are already overloaded. It will even affect Lincoln Road in the City. They want to close them all."

"I don't see what answers there are unless you condemn property and make a big, wide street."

Surprise

Street closings would affect more than just businesses and residents. The temporary closing of McMillan would also have a direct impact on Richard School and St. James Lutheran Church. Officials at both places said last week that they were caught off-guard by the proposal.

"We have some concerns about the impact on funerals and weddings," said Thomas Kressbach, who is both the city manager of Grosse Pointe and the president of the congregation at St. James. He said he was not notified of the proposals in either capacity. Kressbach said the cities have a history of informal cooperation on issues that cross city boundaries. Since there is a possibility of the proposals pushing traffic onto City streets, he said he wants more details from the Farms.

Nobody told the schools anything about it, either. "Frankly, this thing has caught us by complete surprise," said school board Treasurer Jon Gandelot. "We're going to have to mobilize our troops."

Farms Mayor Fromm had no answer as to why other parties hadn't been included in the committee's discussion. "I guess nobody talked to them," he said.

Oops!

Our story about the sale of the Provençal-Weir House to the Grosse Pointe Historical Society (Jan. 21) mixed up the names of the home owner and her late husband.

Margaret Trowbridge Robinson (Mrs. Francis) has been living in the house since the 1960s. She and her first husband, Albert Trowbridge, worked to restore the house, preserving elements like the spindle stair railing and the old windows.

"Only one of the windows is new," she told us last week. "Some kids were riding around shooting out windows and they hit that one."

Details about a cement box, were a little hazy, too, she said. The flat piece in the basement floor tantalized the family, who used to joke about it containing the French crown jewels. But Albert Trowbridge crawled under the house to check and found it was only a foundation, possibly for a long-gone still.

"The house has a lot of memories," Robinson said.

Farms break-ins lowest in 30 years

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Overall, major crime incidents reported in the Farms decreased only slightly last year, but there was a 22 percent reduction in the number of burglaries - giving the city its lowest burglary rate in 30 years.

There were 42 burglaries reported in the Farms and eight attempted break-ins, down from 53 in 1986 and 11 attempted.

"No crime affects people more than burglary," said Police Chief Robert Ferber. "People may not be able to control the things that go on outside, but when they come home, they want to feel safe and in charge. When someone violates that, people have every right to be upset."

Ferber said that the increased police presence due to the full implementation of the Traffic Safety Bureau and other prevention techniques is partly responsible for the decrease.

"We had a number of good arrests of working burglars throughout the Grosse Pointes last year," Ferber said. "When you take a burglar off the streets like they did in the Park, you will see a decrease in statistics."

Ferber was making a reference to an arrest made in the Park last fall, which may have cleared as many as 100 burglaries in the Pointes and Detroit in recent years.

Ferber said one of the high lights of 1987 was the traffic bureau.

"Our traffic bureau contacts numerous people everyday," he said. "It has the overall effect of deterring all crime simply by the presence. When thieves see a patrol car with its lights flashing, they are not likely to stay in the area."

The two-office Farms Traffic Bureau issued a total of 3,116 hazardous moving citations and 2,311 hazardous moving warnings. Of these totals, 2,041 were speeding citations and 735, speed warnings.

One area of concern, Ferber said, was that major violent crimes, especially assault, increased by about 20 percent. That figure represents only three incidents, but Ferber said the department will be looking to cut the figures.

There were no criminal homicides in the Farms, but there was one rape, one armed robbery, seven unarmed robberies (including purse snatches), six felonious assaults, 36 simple assaults and three reported arsons.

1987 annual police report

Ferber noted that almost half of the people arrested for major crimes in the Farms were juveniles (under 17 years of age). Most of the adults arrested for major crimes came from outside the city. Only seven percent of those arrested for major crimes lived in the Farms.

One area of improvement for the city was in an almost 20 percent reduction in the number of vehicular accidents. Figures for all accidents decreased from 268 in 1986 to 231 last year. As in 1986 there were no fatal accidents reported last year, but there was a significant increase in the number of personal injury accidents. They were up from 43 in 1986 to 63 in 1987.

Ferber said through enforcement of existing speed laws and other traffic laws, the Farms can look forward to continued improvement in the decrease of total vehicular accidents.

"This is going to be a very interesting and demanding year," Ferber said. "The city is considering implementing public safety (in which the police and fire departments are consolidated) this year and we are planning on remodeling the department."

five-and-a-half season. Before that he played with the Chicago Blackhawks for more than two seasons, and several years with Chicago's farm team. He was Chicago's third draft pick in 1975, and was traded to Boston in December 1980 for Al Secord.

It wasn't until 1988 that O'Connell began wearing a helmet on the ice.

"It was a New Year's resolution," he said. "I just decided to start wearing one, but you know how New Year's resolutions go."

O'Connell has always played defense, and he said point production isn't as important to him as it once was.

He had 31 points last year (the combined total of goals and assists) and he hopes to get as many or more this year.

"I used to be a lot more conscious of the points," he said.

"When you're 22 or 27 years old, you have to worry about that stuff. Now it's just more important to win."

Mike O'Connell scored 31 points with the Detroit Red Wings last season. He said points aren't as important to him as in year's past — winning is.

Teachers sought for awards

For the second year in a row, Newsweek and WDIV-TV4 are joining together to sponsor outstanding teacher awards designed to recognize the best and brightest educators in the Greater Detroit metropolitan area.

Each year, 12 teachers who have achieved the highest standards of excellence in their profession will receive awards of $2,000 each, in addition to honoring teachers and the teaching profession, the "Newsweek-WDIV Outstanding Teacher Awards" are intended to increase community interest in education.

All full-time public school teachers, grades kindergarten through 12, in the city of Detroit, and Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties who have three year's teaching experience are eligible for the awards.

Three award recipients — one kindergarten or elementary school teacher; one middle school or junior high school teacher; and one high school teacher — will be selected from each of these jurisdictions.

Nominations may be submitted by other teachers, students, former students, parents, school administrators and the general public. The deadline for all nominations is early February 1988. Specific deadlines for each school district, as well as information on how and where to submit nominations, can be obtained by calling the local school offices.

Superintendents of the intermediate school districts of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties and the Detroit Public Schools will coordinate and administer the program, including review and screening of nominations and final selection of award recipients.

Glasnost comes to Detroit

Metro Detroiters are invited to hold their own summit meeting Tuesday, Feb. 9, when representatives of the Soviet Peace Committee will drop by the International Institute for "An Afternoon of Dialogue."

Sponsored by the International Institute and the U.S. Peace Council, Michigan Chapter, the 2 p.m. discussion with five Soviet officials will be open to the public, without charge. Three of the five Soviets speak English and will answer audience questions following their presentation.

The high-ranking officials are members of a group of 100 Soviets invited by President Reagan to meet with 100 Americans in a Feb. 1-5 brainstorming session in Washington. Dmitry Mamleev, first deputy chairman, USSR State Committee on Publishing, Printing and Book Trade (Dep-

But it's hard to help the team win sitting on the bench, and O'Connell's eight-game suspension has left him somewhat bitter. In the incident that sidelined him, he had cut his opponent for 22 stitches, but he felt the length of his suspension was unwarranted.

"What I did wasn't deliberate," he said. "After seeing the tape, I can say it was more of a defensive move. I haven't had a major penalty in 10 years."

"When you look at someone who deliberately swings at someone and gets an eight-game suspension, it makes you wonder."

O'Connell looked tired after an away game the night before and a brief practice earlier in the day. Gregory quietly played trucks next to his father while teasing the family's black Labrador, Shamus. A log burned in the fireplace.

"We came from a suburban area and Grosse Pointe reminds us of the east coast," he said. "I like being able to walk to the shopping areas, the beauty of the homes and the architecture, and the school system."

O'Connell has gotten involved locally. He wrote a couple of columns last year for The Detroit News. And he and his wife were co-chairpersons for the annual "Evening With The Red Wings" dinner-auction which raised $75,000 for the local Easter Seals chapter.

"Last year I donated $100 for every point I had to the Torch Drive," he said. "I've been blessed with a talent, and I feel it's part of my responsibility to help out wherever I can."

Around town, the O'Connells like to go to Marge's Bar, Tom's Oyster Bar and to Sparky Herbert's.

He said Marge's is well-known for its hockey fans, and Tom's reminds him of the east coast.

When he's not on the ice, O'Connell likes to be on the water. He's on the Park's waiting list for a boat slip for his 18-foot Boston Whaler. He likes boating, fishing, swimming and going waterskiing "if Lake St. Clair isn't too rough."

He's been playing hockey for 26 years now, and O'Connell said he'll be with the sport in some capacity for the next 26.

"I intend to play as long as I can," he said. "If not professionally, in some capacity. I don't want to get a job where I have to travel as much as I do now. I've been on the road for 15 years."

The best player O'Connell said he has ever played with was Ray Bourque, a Boston defenseman.

The best player he's ever played against?

"I'd have to say it was Wayne Gretzky up until recently. Now it's Mario Lemieux. Gretzky and Lemieux are in a class all their own. It would be like I went back to playing Pee Wee."

O'Connell said the Wings have a better chance than 75 percent of the NHL teams of making it to the Stanley Cup playoffs.

"If we stay healthy, we can get to the finals," he said.

Corporate substance abuse is clinic's forte

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

Drugs have moved during the last two decades from the shadowy edges of society to the corporate office and boardroom. Keeping pace with the move has been Eastwood Clinics, now one of the largest providers of drug treatment to corporations in southeastern Michigan.

In 1970, Eastwood was trying to treat teenagers dealing in drugs at Baldock Park and returning Vietnam veterans hooked during their time overseas. They counseled draft resisters and had a free medical clinic for young people.

"It was a typical grassroots organization, treating everything from sex to acne," said the current director, Grosse Pointe John Andrews. "We've grown into the medical mainstream."

The clinic has also grown into 18 locations in metropolitan Detroit. It has developed mental health and chemical dependency treatment services for all three major automobile companies and several banks and utilities. Thirty-five to 40 percent of the clinic's business is now industry-related.

"Back in the '70s, the way of handling an alcohol problem was to fire the employee," Andrews said. Then developed "a healthy self-interest on the part of the employer that it's cheaper to rehabilitate someone than to train a new person."

"For every dollar invested in employee wellness, there is about $5 in return, through less sick time, greater productivity, fewer accidents, less damaged work product."

Alcohol is probably the problem most frequently treated through Eastwood's industrial services, but there are others as well. Andrews said there is an increasing awareness that all sorts of personal problems affect work performance. So clinic professionals are prepared to work with clients on family and child problems as well as drugs and alcohol.

If an office or industry doesn't have an in-house employee assistance program, it can turn to a clinic like Eastwood for evaluations, referrals and counseling.

"In any given workforce, between 8 and 20 percent have problems," Andrews said. "Not everybody seeks help — part of chemical dependency is denial. They think they can handle it — until they've lost their job or their wife is walking out the door or they're sick in the hospital."

Eastwood treated between 6,000 and 7,000 patients last year, which translated into 90,000 out-patient visits and 34,000 days of residential treatment, according to Andrews. The majority of the business is funded by health insurance, with about 14 percent government-funded for indigents and people with limited insurance.

Many are treated in a group. "The group is the most effective approach in the early stages of chemical dependency," Andrews said. "Groups can be very supportive. They also confront and challenge when people are covering up and making excuses."

There really are problems with drug use on assembly lines, but Andrews says the problem is not limited to that. "We see everything from the executive who has too much to drink at lunch to the assembly line worker who snorts coke at his break," he said. "There's a fair amount of drug use at work. Managers sometimes have more problems (facing it) — they're a little more protected and invisible at that level."

More companies are aware of the problem and are training supervisors to recognize the signs and direct their workers to help. Part of the approach has typically meant involving employees in decision-making as a way to reduce stress and make work more meaningful.

"Employee teams are credited to the Japanese, but they adopted it from American theorists," Andrews said. "Involving workers in problem-solving and defining the work is important in jobs that are repetitive. It increases productivity, but also reduces boredom and improves work quality."

At the management level, stress, more than boredom, is of concern. "It's terribly competitive," he said. "Imagine the pressure on an automotive designer to come up with something new all the time. Or the stress of companies folding or companies being acquired."

More of the people under such stress turn to alcohol than to other drugs, but Andrews said Eastwood Clinics see a great many people with cocaine problems.

"What's so terrible about cocaine is that it's so quickly and highly addictive," he said. "We see them much earlier than, say, an alcoholic. We see people who have been using cocaine for six months and they've lost their job, they've lost their family and they have two cents in their pocket."

Cocaine is the drug of choice among many white collar workers. "It gives them the feeling of being in control and able to manage the world. That's why they keep going back to it."

Andrews came to Eastwood Clinics in 1980 from the Detroit Public Health Department. He became executive vice president and chief executive officer in 1986 and president last year.

Eastwood Clinics services include out-patient and residential programs, halfway houses and hospital-based programs. The agency has a professional staff of 250.

Sutherland, the director of health facilities division, has planned and designed military hospitals, outpatient centers and medical office buildings, including the Harper Hospital complex at the Detroit Medical Center. He received his bachelor's degree in architecture from Kansas State University and his master's degree from Texas A & M.

Four real estate agents with Grosse Pointe Real Estate have completed the requirements for the Graduate Realtor Institute designation: Bobbie M. Ligan, Nancy Coles, Beth Provenzano and Stevie Miller.

Rodger A. Kershner of Grosse Pointe Park has been appointed assistant general counsel of CMS Energy Corp. He will assume responsibility for the legal affairs of a number of CMS Energy non-utility subsidiaries, including CMS Cogeneration Co. and CMS Midland. Kershner is currently associate general counsel for ANR Pipeline and assistant secretary of American Natural Resources Co. He is a graduate of the Detroit College of Law and Wayne State University, with an undergraduate degree in business administration.

Job-seekers to join video resume program

John Crusoe, director of Placement Services at Wayne State University, is turning the tables on the traditional style of job recruiting.

Instead of relying on corporation representatives to make campus recruiting calls, Crusoe is sending the campus to corporations with a new electronic video twist.

War Memorial campaign nears goal

Barbara Weiss, War Memorial board member and Family Participation Campaign chairperson, said that the 1987-88 campaign is more than two-thirds towards the goal of $232,000.

Donations continue until May 31, and are tax deductible. Stop at the War Memorial front desk

Downsizing, mergers, acquisitions and belt-tightening have caused many corporations to limit the number of campuses they visit in search of college graduates, Crusoe said. "We decided to try an innovative approach to compensate for this void in job recruiting."

His answer is videotapes of three minute interviews of graduate job-seekers. The students being interviewed are asked to prepare three minutes of response to four critical job questions. These tapes, in turn, are sent to employers who aren't visiting the campus, but expressed an interest in WSU graduates.

He estimates that approximately 300 students will participate in this pilot program which he feels may be the first of its kind in the nation.

If it turns out to be successful, he anticipates it growing to 2,000 graduates next year.

To prepare students, Crusoe is asking faculty members to take extra time in coaching them about how to prepare and perform in front of a video camera.

Two Fords named to board

Edsel B. Ford II and William Clay Ford Jr. have been elected to the Board of Directors of Ford Motor Company.

Both are great-grandsons of the late Henry Ford who founded the auto firm in 1903.

The elections increase membership on the company's board to 20.

Edsel B. Ford II, 39, has been general sales manager of Lincoln-Mercury Division since last June. He joined the company in 1974 as a product analyst and later served in several district sales office positions.

From 1978 to 1980, he served as assistant managing director of Ford Australia. He returned to the Ford Division in the United States in 1981 and became advertising manager of the division in 1983. He joined Lincoln-Mercury as general marketing manager in 1985.

He is the only son of the late Henry Ford II. He received a bachelor's degree in business administration from Babson College in Massachusetts and later completed a management development program at the Harvard Business School.

William Clay Ford Jr., 30, is chairman and managing director of Ford Switzerland. He joined the company in 1979 as a product planning analyst, served in a district sales office and became a member of the company's bargaining team for labor negotiations with the UAW in 1982. He next held a Ford Division advertising post and then completed a year's study as an Alfred P. Sloan fellow at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

After holding positions in finance and car product planning, he was named director of commercial vehicle marketing for Ford of Europe in 1986 and was elected to his present post in Ford Switzerland last September.

He is the only son of company Vice Chairman William Clay Ford. He holds a bachelor's degree from Princeton University and a master of science degree in management from M.I.T.

Learn to do it the way it was done

Possibly one of Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village's best kept secrets is its education program. Children and adults can learn old-fashioned skills and crafts in a wide variety of classes planned at the "great American museum that's also great fun." Everything from soap making to reverse painting on glass is taught in the manner of years gone by.

Among the winter season offerings is a class in which students learn to dye their own wool using natural materials such as plants, and even insects, to produce colorful garments. "Wool Dyeing with Natural Materials" meets Saturday, Jan. 30. "Bayberry Candlemaking" will be taught Saturday, Feb. 27, for those who have already learned to make beeswax candles.

If wood is the preferred medium, those wishing to master stenciling techniques will enjoy making a pine "Welcome Friends" sign in the "Stenciled Woods Class," Saturday, Feb. 20.

Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village has found a novel way to celebrate St. Valentine's Day, by looking at "The Love Song Through History." An informal concert of familiar and traditional love songs will be performed on guitar, piano, dulcimer, folk harp and voice, Sunday, Feb. 7.

And if a song stays in your heart, attending one of the "American Contra Dancing" sessions will help you tap it out on your feet. With music by the Ruffwater Stringband and calls by Glen Morningstar, contra dances are held the first Sunday of every month (except summer). Performed at the Lovett Hall Ballroom in Greenfield village, neither a partner nor experience are required.

In addition to its varied courses and workshops, the museum offers unique tours to remote locations. This season, on March 5, a group tour will make a one-day excursion to Grand Rapids' Heritage Hill Historic district for a look at its historic homes and museums.

A nominal fee is charged for each educational activity. For more information, call the Education Department at Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village at 271-1620, ext. 528.

Be a head

The Michigan Thanksgiving Parade is looking for five outstanding citizens of the state to honor by immortalizing them in papier-mache.

It is holding a contest to nominate five state residents whose head and facial features will be cast by old world craftsmen in Viareggio, Italy.

Since 1924, the Michigan Thanksgiving Parade has been building an inventory of papier-mache characters, now numbering more than 400.

Last year, five new heads were added to the collection — former President Gerald R. Ford, heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis, singer actress Diana Ross, actor Tom Selleck and former Governor and Supreme Court Justice G. Mennen Williams.

Nominations should be addressed to: Head Contest, The Parade Company, 1915 W. Fort Street, Detroit, Mich. 48216. Deadline for entering is Feb. 1. Persons entering the contest should also explain why their candidate deserves to be immortalized in papier-mache.

Correction

In last week's article about boat well fees in the Grosse Pointes and surrounding areas, fees for the 35 x 14 foot well sizes at Windmill Pointe Park in Grosse Pointe Park were not stated clearly. All but three of the wells of that size are $540 per year (instead of $600), up from $485 last year.

The three wells, which can accommodate larger boats, are $600.

Community group to teach kids to reduce, reuse, recycle

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

The population of the state of Michigan throws away enough trash to fill the Pontiac Silverdome every day-and-a-half.

If that statistic scares you, you'll be glad to learn that our children have the opportunity to learn to be less wasteful than we are. Educational programs funded by Clean Michigan are available to school classes in selected areas of Wayne County — including Grosse Pointe.

Yesterday, local teachers had their first close-up view of the waste reduction presentation at an in-service by volunteers from Grosse Pointe's Recycling Coalition. The program was intended to help teachers prepare to educate the kids about environmental concerns and the importance of recycling, according to Frances Schonenberg, who got involved in the program through the League of Women Voters.

"The workshop materials cover solid waste, composting, recycling, landfills and groundwater and include experiments that can be done in the classroom," Schonenberg said.

The state funding is being funneled through Concern Detroit Inc., an organization that has been around since 1972. Concern started as a recycling organization, but its focus broadened after the advent of the bottle bill, said director Terry Gibb. Now they're into consumer and environmental education.

"The two are closely related," Gibb said. "I don't think we are very well-informed consumers — and there's a difference between knowing and doing."

"Overpackaging is something we don't know about, for instance. I'm having a running battle with grocery stores over plastic grocery bags."

"In the short run, they're cheaper for the grocery store, but in the long run, they're expensive, because they don't break down in a landfill and they give off toxic gases when they're burned."

Plastic bags aren't the only household waste that bites back when it's burned. Pesticides, paints and oven cleaners also give off toxic gas. "Hazardous household substances was one of our most popular programs in the Detroit schools last year,"

Gibb said.

This year's grant should help Concern reach more than 7,000 students through school presentations.

"We hope to develop lifetime recycling and reduction habits now, while they're at an impressionable age," Gibb said.

Board member Gail Kaess of Grosse Pointe Farms agreed. "This age is an excellent point to start," she said. Kaess said she became involved with Concern Detroit in the '70s, at about the same time she began serving on SEMCOG's Council on Environmental Strategies.

Other Grosse Pointers on the boards of Concern Detroit include Barbara Lord, Mary Page Hickey, Gail Stroh and Sue Klingbeil.

Schools or community groups who want to schedule a speaker from Concern Detroit may call Gibb at 963-6082.

Nice save

Some Grosse Pointers are already attuned to recycling paper. The newspaper recycling bin at University Liggett School, just opened in October, is logging a lot of use.

The bin has been emptied four times in two months, each time yielding about 11.5 tons of newspapers. A ton of paper equals 17 trees, so Grosse Pointe has saved 780 trees.

The bin (Cook Road at Chalfonte) is open during the day until 6 p.m. six days a week. Papers may be bundled in paper grocery bags or tied with string. To make it really easy to recycle, someone will pick up papers if you can't get there yourself.

Venezuelan teacher offers perspective to local students

Michigan and Venezuela contrast greatly in culture, style and weather, but Irama Varela de Oldenburg, a Venezuelan teacher visiting Grosse Pointe South this semester, is quick to point out the similarities as well as the differences.

"Many students, and even adults, think of South America as only a continent, rather than a collection of countries with individual cultures and histories," de Oldenburg said. "Venezuela has many things in common with the United States — oil, cattle, excellent universities, traffic jams. For example, one of our most persistent problems is illegal immigration."

The Venezuelan is at Grosse Pointe South as a participant in AFS International's Visiting Teacher Program. Any school may apply to host a teacher from China, Thailand, Indonesia, the USSR or some Latin American countries for periods ranging from 10 weeks to 10 months.

Most of the teachers teach English in their home countries and come to improve their English and their understanding of U.S. culture, as well as learn new teaching methods. Schools benefit by an added resource for social studies and language classes, as well as the personal contact with another culture for students and teachers.

American teachers can also participate in this program, and may apply to teach in China for one year, or in other countries during the summer. All participants live in the community with a host family.

In addition to her work at Grosse Pointe South, de Oldenburg has given presentations about Venezuela to students at Grosse Pointe North and the middle schools. She has observed the teaching of language skills to small children in the kindergarten class at Richard School and given talks to community groups.

Mastering the Detroit bus system, she has also taken advantage of the proximity of the Wayne State language laboratory to learn methods of intensive language training, and has volunteered to teach English at the International Institute.

"This semester is an investment in my professional training," de Oldenburg said, "and I look for new material wherever I go. Language teachers often never live with the language they teach, so I try to take advantage of every minute I am here."

She graduated from the Universidad de Zulia in Venezuela with a degree in French and English. She continued her studies in Grenoble, France, earning a master's degree, then returned to Venezuela where she taught French at the university level. She has recently taken a position teaching English and coordinating curriculum in San Fernando de Apure.

While in Grosse Pointe, she is living with Betty Buffa of Kensington Road.

MADD seeks court monitors

Wayne County MADD is scheduling court monitoring classes Tuesday, Feb. 16 and 23 at Channel 56, WDIV, from 9 a.m. to noon both days. Judge Patricia Schneider of Grosse Pointe Woods helped formulate the classes along with Sandi Wolf, MADD administrator and Babbie Lynton, Farms resident and MADD vice president.

Judge Schneider will familiarize prospective court monitors with court procedure, terms, responsibilities of prosecutors, defense attorneys and judges. Students will become aware of some state laws and how to observe and report on proceedings pertaining to drunk driving cases.

A police officer will start the instructions with information on arrest and arraignment procedures. The group will observe a court in session Feb. 23.

MADD is looking for concerned citizens willing to attend the sessions and to commit to observing courtroom proceedings with a view of making both prosecutors and judges aware of MADD's presence.

MADD has trained speakers available to appear in schools, church or civic groups upon request. For any questions regarding registration or speakers, call MADD Wayne County office at 422-6233.

New psychiatric-medical unit to serve unique needs

By Peggy O'Connor Andzeczyk
Feature Editor

A young pregnant woman suffering through a complicated pregnancy sinks into a deep depression. Her physician fears for her health and that of her baby. A geriatric patient undergoing therapy for acute manic-depression develops a heart problem. His physician isn't sure whether to admit him to a medical unit or psychiatric unit.

By mid-February, physicians faced with similar dilemmas will be able to utilize the new, 35-bed Psychiatric-Medical Unit at St. John Hospital. The unit, on the first floor of the hospital near the former emergency area, is designed for patients whose need for inpatient psychiatric care is complicated by medical or surgical problems.

Twenty-two beds in the new unit will be available next month; construction on the remainder of the facility will be completed by July. The unit is designed to treat patients 16 and older in a residential setting which offers both double and single rooms, shared dining and activity rooms, reading, lounge and kitchen areas, and psychiatric facilities (individual therapy rooms, seclusion rooms, occupational group therapy areas) in combination with the staff, equipment and technology found in a traditional medical unit.

The opening of the unit culminates more than a decade of study by St. John Hospital and 10 years of personal input by the unit's psychiatric director, Kenneth Schooff, M.D., chief of psychiatry at St. John.

The psych-med unit is one of only a half-dozen similar facilities in the United States. "The biggest problem physicians have had for years is that there was nowhere to send a psychiatric patient who was physically sick. They were forced to utilize medical facilities, which resulted in undertreating the psychiatric problems," Schooff explained.

St. John Hospital has had a certificate of need for psychiatry for 15 years. "Originally, they were going to rebuild the old nurses quarters as a traditional psychiatric unit. Then there was a study done which recommended that the three area hospitals — St. John, Bon Secours and Cottage — work collaboratively. At that point, St. John decided to go its own way and when the construction of the new building opened up space, we decided to take a look at a psych-med unit," Schooff said.

Schooff, clinical nurse specialist Pat West and another physician toured the country's other sites, asking questions and making observations to submit to the hospital administration. The result was the construction of a unit which closely resembles one in Rhode Island Hospital, which converted its 19-bed inpatient psychiatric unit to a psychiatric-medical unit in 1981 and has served as a model of the successful integration of two services.

The unit will give first priority for admission to those with a combination of psychiatric and medical or surgical problems that would independently require inpatient care. "Take a guy who has been primarily diagnosed as having a psychiatric problem. Then take the same guy and give him a physical abnormality that complicates his psychiatric treatment. That's the kind of patient we will admit," Schooff said.

In order of priority, the unit will also treat this type of patient:

- Those whose problems appear rooted in disease of an organ, requiring diagnostic study of both conditions.
- Those whose need for inpatient psychiatric care is complicated by medical or surgical problems, including side effects of drug therapy.
- Those who are experiencing psychiatric problems in the aftermath of a medical or surgical hospital admission.

• Those whose need for psychiatric care is best met in a specialized inpatient setting.

When the patients are admitted to the unit, they will find a bright, clean atmosphere nearly identical to that of a medical ward. "Our aim is to make it as much like a regular ward as possible," Schooff said. There will be "seclusion rooms," for those patients who are seriously agitated and confused or suicidal. Those rooms will be located behind double-locked doors and are monitored both by television screens and by staff members who check the patient every 15 minutes, as state law requires.

"The rest of the unit is what we like to call 'semi-open.' The rooms are designed to be suicide-proof as much as possible and the unit's outer doors are locked.

We are concerned with the safety and comfort of both our patients and the general hospital population," he added.

Every patient admitted will undergo a screening battery administered by Walter Zetusky, Ph.D., a neuropsychiatrist who will work part-time on the unit. "From there, we will be able to develop a treatment plan," Schooff explained. The treatment plans will be tailored to each patient. Most will include group therapy, occupational therapy, family and individual therapy, work on biofeedback and assertiveness training.

A staff internist will examine patients and work with the other physicians on the medical side of the treatment. Other staff includes psychiatrists expert in therapy and pharmacology, resident internists and family practitioners supervised by senior staff members, nursing staff experienced in medical/surgical care, social workers, occupational therapists, support staff and consulting specialists.

The psych-med unit means extra work for Schooff, but he said he's excited about the prospect of what the unit can mean to the community. "As a tertiary-care center, we really need to offer something like this. There are so many instances where a physician really is puzzled about what to do with a patient who fits our criteria for admission. And now we'll be able to help." St. John's clinical staff is also excited about the new unit, Schooff added.

"Physicians who work with dialysis patients who sometimes have some psychological problems related to the disease, those doctors who treat arthritis with steroids — which can cause episodes of psychosis — they are ready for a unit like this," he said.

"There's nothing like this around, so we're really going to have to market it, let people know we're here. But I think that the need is there and this facility is wonderful. And with the trend in psychiatry back to medicine, this is where it's at. You can't get any more into medicine than in a unit like this."

St. John's Psychiatric-Medical Unit will be open for a special preview open house this Sunday, Jan. 31, from 1 to 4 p.m. The community is invited to tour the ward. For more information, call 343-7000.

A beautiful benefit:

The 1988 Detroit Auto Show Preview Night Jan. 15 was a glittering affair, enjoyed by the hundreds in attendance at the Cobo Hall black-tie party. Best of all, though, was the fact that it benefitted the Boys and Girls Clubs of Southeastern Michigan, the Children's Center, the Easter Seals Society and the child/adolescent programs of the Northeast Guidance Center.

Among those from Grosse Pointe who got a sneak preview of the auto industry's best and brightest for the new year, were Cecil Lepard and his mother, Robin Lepard of Grosse Pointe Farms, and Denise and Dan Deane of Grosse Pointe.

Tasty recipes make diabetic diets easy to swallow

Here are more recipes — by popular demand — for those who must adhere to a diabetic diet. All exchange counts are approximate.

The following recipes come from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

SKILLET BEEF AND MUSHROOMS WITH RICE

- 3/4 lb. very lean ground beef
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1/3 cup green pepper, minced
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 can (4 oz.) mushrooms, drained
- 1 can (16 oz.) tomatoes in juice, chopped
- Water
- 1-1/2 tsp. chili powder
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- Dash red pepper
- 1/2 cup uncooked long grain rice
- 1 pkg. (9 oz.) frozen cut green beans

In a large skillet, brown beef with onion, green pepper and garlic over medium-high heat. Drain off excess fat. Drain juice into cup, add sufficient water to make 3/4 cup. Add mushrooms, tomatoes with juice, mushroom liquid and seasonings. Mix well. Stir in rice. Cover, reduce heat and simmer 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Layer frozen beans over meat mixture. Cover and cook 10 minutes or until beans are crisp tender. Makes 4 servings.

One serving equals 2-1/2 lean meat exchanges, 2 bread exchanges and 1 vegetable exchange. Calories, about 300 per serving.

- 2 Tbsp. lemon juice
- 1/2 tsp. caraway seed
- 1/2 tsp. celery seed
- 6 medium tomatoes

In salad bowl, combine carrots, cabbage and celery; toss. In small bowl, combine mayonnaise, lemon juice, caraway and celery seeds. Add to vegetables and toss to blend well.

Remove tops from tomatoes. Scoop out the pulp and seeds. Stuff with vegetables. Chill. Serve on lettuce leaves garnished with sprigs of watercress. Makes 6 servings.

One serving equals 1-1/2 vegetable exchanges and 3 fat exchanges. Calories, about 175 per serving.

FRUITED CABBAGE SALAD

- 1-1/2 cups shredded crisp cabbage
- 1/2 cup diced crisp celery
- 3 small apples
- 1 small banana, chopped
- 1 Tbsp. mayonnaise
- 1/2 cup honeydew
- 6 medium prunes
- 1/2 cup raisins
- 2 Tbsp. lemon juice
- 2 Tbsp. water

Finely chop the apples, melon and prunes. Thoroughly blend the dressing ingredients — the banana, mayonnaise, lemon juice and water — until of the right consistency, add a few drops of water, if necessary. Toss the salad ingredients and dressing. Makes 6 servings.

One serving equals 2 fruit, 2/3 "B" vegetable and 1/2 fat exchanges.

PEAR AVOCADO SALAD

- 3 small pears
- 1 small apple
- 2 small oranges
- 1 avocado (4-inches in diameter)
- 1/4 cup orange juice

Peel and chop the pears, apple and oranges. Mix all together. In blender combine peeled chopped avocado and orange juice and blend slowly until it resembles whipped cream. Mound equally atop 6 servings. Serve immediately.

One serving equals 1 fruit exchange and 1-1/3 fat exchange.

TASTY BAKED ONION RINGS

- 1/2 large Spanish onion
- 2 egg whites
- 1/2 cup dry unseasoned very fine bread crumbs
- 3 Tbsp. grated Parmesan

cheese Hungarian paprika

Preheat oven to 450°. Peel onion and with sharp knife cut crosswise into 1/2-inch slices. Separate into rings. In medium-sized bowl beat egg whites until frothy. Transfer to a pie plate. In another pie plate thoroughly mix the bread crumbs and Parmesan cheese. Dip onion rings, one at a time, into egg white, then into crumb mixture, coating each ring evenly on all sides. Place on ungreased baking sheet. Bake 15 minutes, or until rings are light golden brown and crisp. Remove from oven. Sprinkle lightly with paprika, if desired. Serve immediately to 4.

One serving equals 1/2 lean meat exchange, 1/2 bread exchange and 1 vegetable exchange. Calories, about 85 per serving.

A special thank you to the Bon Secours staff

On the occasion of Bon Secours Recognition Day 1988, the Sisters of Bon Secours extend special thanks to the 1,500 employees of the Bon Secours of Michigan Healthcare System.

At our 13 facilities in the eastern Detroit metropolitan area, they are meeting the community's health care needs with the "kindly care" which has been a Bon Secours hallmark since the Sisters arrived in Michigan nearly 80 years ago.

Special recognition goes to Bon Secours of Michigan's two nominees for the 1987 Dedicated Service Award sponsored by the Maryland-based Bon Secours Health System. They are Nancy Fisher, executive secretary at the Hospital, and Trudi Bryan, human resources coordinator at the Bon Secours Nursing Care Center.

Backing up our staff are 560 volunteers who donated more than 78,000 hours of service during 1987.

In addition, many employees take their care beyond the workplace to offer time and energy in a wide range of community organizations and projects.

IRS Advises Employees to Check Tax Withholding

To help employees check their withholding, IRS has developed the "Free Publication 919, Is My Withholding Correct for 1988?" It has worksheets that will help employees estimate both their 1988 tax and their total 1988 withholding and compare the two amounts. The publication is available by using the order blank in the tax return package or by calling 1-800-321-3676.

Federal tax withholding should be checked, according to the IRS, right after each employee receives a pay statement that covers a full pay period in 1988, because the statement shows how much tax their employer is withholding based on the 1988 tax rates.

Employees who find too little tax withheld should file another Form W-4 with their employer to help them avoid owing a significant amount of tax at the end of 1988, plus a penalty.

Generally, the law requires withholding to equal 90 percent of what is owed for 1988.

If too much tax is being withheld, employees may reduce the amount of tax refund by filing another Form W-4 with their employer.

Medical Expenses

Allowable medical deductions include costs of special equipment — such as a motorized wheelchair, hand controls on a car, a special telephone for the deaf — and special items — such as false teeth, artificial limbs, eyeglasses, hearing aids, crutches, and guide dogs for the blind or deaf. More information can be found in the free IRS Publication 502, "Medical and Dental Expenses," available by writing or calling the IRS.

Special Rules Help Divorced, Separated Parents Determine Child Exemption

Divorced or separated parents must use special rules to decide whether they or their former spouse can claim the exemption for their child when they file their tax return. The special rules for divorced or separated parents apply only if:

1. The parents are divorced or legally separated under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance, are separated under a written separation agreement, or lived apart at all times during the last six months of the calendar year, and

2. One or both parents provide more than half the child's total support for the calendar year, and

3. One or both parents have custody of the child for more than half the calendar year.

Although there are some exceptions, the parent who has custody of the child for most of the year is usually treated as the parent who provides more than half the child's support. It does not matter whether the parent with custody has been actually providing more than half of the child's support.

A noncustodial parent may claim the exemption for their child if either (1) The custodial parent signs a written declaration that he or she will not claim the exemption for the child and the noncustodial parent attaches this written declaration to his or her return, or (2) A decree or agreement executed before 1985 provides that the noncustodial parent is entitled to the exemption and he or she provides at least $600 for the child's support during the year, unless the pre-1985 decree or agreement is modified after 1984 to specify that this provision will not apply.

Two Jobs in 1987? Check Social Security Withheld

Those who worked for two or more employers during 1987 and received wages totaling more than $43,800 should check to see if they are entitled to a credit for excess social security tax withheld, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

Social security tax withheld in excess of $3,131.70 can be applied as a credit against income tax only if the individual had more than one employer.

IRS notes that those who file joint returns may not add the social security tax withheld from one spouse's income to the amount withheld from the other spouse to determine the credit. The credit must be figured separately for each spouse.

Workers who had only one employer and had more than $3,131.70 withheld may not claim the excess as a credit against their income tax. The employer should adjust this over-collection, the IRS explains.

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

Architectural Diversity As the great variety of home sizes and styles suggests, growth has continued slowly over many years. It continues even today. Old estates are subdivided for building contemporary homes, making the mansions that still survive (and many do) all the more treasured by their owners and tradition-minded residents. At the same time, the area includes homes of just about every style and size—from townhouses, two-family units and other small homes to gracious English Tudors, colonials, executive mansions, contemporary ranch styles and a variety of modern designs, including condominiums.

This diversity has helped make Grosse Pointe attractive to all who value well-maintained quality which far exceeds its price.

WORKING STUDENTS:

When you fill out your Form W-4, "Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate," remember: If you can be claimed on your parent's or another person's tax return, you generally cannot be exempt from income tax withholding. To get it right, read the instructions that came with your Form W-4.

Grosse Pointe A Unique Community

A Cultural Cornucopia Appreciation of the arts begins at an early age for Grosse Pointe children. The public library, a division of the Grosse Pointe Public School System, offers, at no cost, a variety of children's reading programs at its three locations.

For adults, the library programs range from travel films to informative presentations on subjects of current interest. These, too, are free to residents of all the Grosse Pointes.

Another great source of local culture is the beautiful War Memorial Center, the former mansion of the Russell A. Alger family. With its subsequently added ballroom and theater overlooking Lake St. Clair, the center is a community attraction that rivals the many private clubs in the area. Here—open to all residents—are offered art classes and exhibits, lectures, concerts, plays, ballet and social dancing instruction, and children's theater, as well as membership in a long list of special-interest clubs whose focus is either cultural, informative or just plain fun.

A more recent addition to public property is the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House. Designed by architect Albert Kahn and supported by a $15 million endowment, this gracious replica of an English manor house is now open for tours and is used for meetings, fund-raising events and several series of "house" concerts.

It's a great life

Ah, the life a young man who lives in the basement at Mom and Dad's until he moves out. Ah, the life of an aspiring sports editor who can pick and choose any game to attend — free. Ah, the tender, but sometimes difficult life of a young man trying to captivate the essence of an athletic event and relay it to a highly motivated audience.

It's been a great life here at the Grosse Pointe News. Trying to make at least one sporting event a week at the respective schools, and still having time for myself, is difficult, but no less than enjoyable. I've always admired the way sports writers live at the office with a drawer filled with peanuts, a warm pop or cold cup of coffee, a doughnut that could be used for a frisbee and a phone call to check in with the War Department (you know, your wife or fiancée).

People really think that the life of a sports editor must be glamorous and exciting, and you know something — they're right. With all the free passes comes an abundance of food ranging from gourmet to fast food. The only thing I've suffered from is indigestion from eating a hot dog, a bag of popcorn, a slice of pizza and a pop — all in one sitting. It's not my idea of a four-course meal, but...

As I've filtered through the cities on my way to games, I've been able to spot a few watering holes, a couple of slop burger shops and plenty of fine dining. But, my schedule dictates whether I eat on the run, or run from eating. Either way, I try to stomach something.

Trying to juggle

It's complicated to put a pen in one hand, a hot dog in the other, and hold onto a notebook...oh, excuse me, mustard stains don't look good on the tie...anyway, no matter how perplexing balancing food and work may be, I'm still looking for the proper chemistry.

It's the American way to eat until you're content. So, following tradition, I do my share — whether I snack at the office or stuff myself at a fine establishment. Some of my favorite things are popcorn, pizza, sunflower seeds, chocolate milk, M & Ms, crackers, soup, hamburgers with grilled onions, shrimp, chicken, orange roughy, and to wash it down, a cold Stroh's.

Grabbing a bite to eat is fun. I've made a sport out of it. At second base, sits my milk, my green beans stay at first, third base houses my hamburger and the shrimp always slide safely into home. The check? That's left out.

The smallest ambushes on food have been the most satisfying. I don't get the opportunity to venture many national highways, so I decided the little nooks and crannies would suffice. So, to enlighten you I'll tip you off on some of my favorite spots to grab a meal or snack.

The crackers have never been better at Perry's. Little Tony's serves the best burger and the Coffee Pot serves a great bowl of chili. An apple from Hamlin's does the trick and a trip to Buscemi's is guaranteed once a week. An ice cream from the Rainbow and a reuben sandwich from the Wooden Nickel is worth every bite.

Some places offer a healthier menu than others, but my favorite menu is at the gymnasiums. For $1 I get a bag of popcorn and a pop. For another 50 cents they toss in the M & Ms, and better yet they don't require tips. They always know what I want to eat, so saying "the usual" generally gets me started. By the way, has anyone ever paid $2 for a rope of licorice? I would guess they are over-charging me.

I don't eat well, but eating on the run has made me a connoisseur of the menus. Many sports writers will advise you to eat before or after you work, but many times you eat while working and that's why you wear more than you consume. Eating at some of the quick burger shops and pizza joints is not like sitting down to an eight-course meal, but it sure makes those peanuts, the warm pop and doughnut look like a meal fit for a sports editor.

If it wasn't for my job, I would have never been able to balance a notebook, a camera and food at the same time. One thing is for certain — without me the sale of napkins would be low.

Mother-daughter combine for perfect score

The Dubes share more than a gym

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

It's a typical relationship that calls for intimate conversations and a helpful hand, but for Jennifer and Mary Dube, the helpful hand is more than a comforting shoulder to lean on.

Jennifer Dube, a sophomore at North, is a highly-talented athlete on the gymnastics market. Her mother, Mary, is North's coach whose job is made easy by her daughter's ability.

Although the older Dube is tagged with the title of coach, she does recognize that "coach" is only a word.

"I'm not really her coach," said Mary, "but I'm her biggest fan. I learn from her because she's the expert."

At the tender age of 16, Jennifer has already bounced to the top of the charts with the help of many, but primarily on her own motivation.

"My knowledge is adequate enough for high school, but not for the level she competes on," said Mary. "Jennifer is a hard worker who has been taught to hope everyone is good, but push to make sure she is one step better."

Jennifer is more than one step better. She is several strides ahead of the field and proved that as a freshman by finishing third in the state competition. But, her biggest thrill in life came last June in Chicago when she mounted an attack to compete in the Junior Olympics.

Jennifer was shunned by her first gymnastics coach as she made a bid for the Junior Olympics. Her coach offered little support, but that was just enough to push her over the top.

"My coach at the time was not very supportive," said Jennifer. "He never told me I could do it, so I had to build my own confidence. And after I took fourth in the regionals at Chicago, I knew that all my work was beginning to pay off."

All that work started 10 years ago after a weeding out process.

"Each birthday we got her into something new," said Mary, "but she just grew into gymnastics. Everything came very naturally for her and she has had success ever since."

Doing what comes naturally could be Jennifer's trademark, but working 16 hours a week is no picnic, or is it?

"Everything I do is for gymnastics," she said. "Gymnastics is my life. If it was ever taken away from me I wouldn't know what to do."

Dube's dedication to gymnastics has caused her to sacrifice some pizza parties and social functions, but when the opportunity to hit the town comes up, she takes full advantage.

"When I'm with my friends, it's a special time," she said. "I try not to talk gymnastics, but I'm always thinking about it."

While her friends may have spent time socializing, Dube focused more on the challenge of gymnastics.

"My friends would ask me to do things, but I would just tell them I was going to the gym," she said. "They wouldn't ask many questions. In fact, a lot of my friends didn't even know I was involved in gymnastics until they came to see me. My best friend didn't even know it until two weeks ago."

Gymnastics has been humbling for Dube, and her relationship with her mother has also been a learning experience.

"Gymnastics matures you," said Dube. "You have to cope with so many ups and downs that it's very similar to life."

Dube works out of the Farmington Gymnastics Center under the direction of Dave Kazara and the 45-minute trip three times a week is not a distraction for the 5-foot-3 sophomore.

"I really enjoy being with Dave," said Jennifer. "He's helped me so much and I don't want to be training anywhere else. The ride goes by pretty quickly because I look so forward to getting there."

The ride home may not be quicker, but Dube looks forward to it just as much. Spending time with her mother is frequent, but at home, it takes on a different routine because it's not the coach/athlete relationship.

"I'm closer with my mom than I am with any of my friends," said the gymnast, who competes at the Class 1 level. "We are probably better friends in the gym because we're always thinking about the same things. At home we're good friends who share a lot of the same things, but we go our separate ways most of the time."

Her mother agrees — proudly. "Jennifer is everything a mother would want," said Mary. "Sometimes it's hard to switch hats. It's hard to forget you're a mother when you're coaching, and it's hard to forget you're a coach when you're being a mother."

As difficult as it may be for Mary to flip-flop her hats, some things never change.

"When we're in the gym, we're peers," said Mary. "We work together. At home I still tell her to clean her room and she may mouth off, but that's all part of having a teen-ager."

Mary doesn't claim any accolades for what her daughter has done, and that's the way it's been since day one. She does, however, try to focus on certain aspects that will aid in her daughter's well-being, while down playing her own role.

"I try to help her develop her character and appreciate the talent she's been given," said Mary. "I focus on her character as an athlete and that's when I feel I'm coaching her. I'm really not her coach. She happens to be on a team that I coach."

Outside the realm of the gym or house, golf courses await the mother and daughter. Mary claims Jennifer is teaching her the gymnastics skills, but on the links, turnabout is fair play.

"We like to play golf," said Jennifer. "Mom is a real good golfer and she's teaching me how to play. My whole family plays golf and it's something we all like to share."

Once again, Mary is quite nonchalant about her talents.

"I'm not that good," she said. "I can play pretty well, but it's just fun to be with the family."

For Mary and Jennifer Dube a gymnastics relationship is something extra. With the fun they both have sharing their lives at home, anything outside of that is typically icing on the cake.

"I guess you could say we are very fortunate to share as much as we do," said Mary. "Jennifer is a great gymnast and person, and I'm just her mother who happens to be the coach."

Keeping a watchful eye...

Mary Dube, mother of four, watches her oldest daughter Mary, a sophomore at North, vault the uneven parallel bars. Mary and Jennifer, the state's No. 3 gymnast in the 1986-87 state meet, are the best of friends at home or even at the gymnasium. For 10 years Jennifer has been rolling on mats, boarding balance beams and bars, and her mother would like nothing more than to see her continue on the successful road she has already ventured. Mary is the area's top gymnast and will be shooting to win the 1987-88 All-Around gymnast crown when she takes on the state's best gymnasts on March 19.

Poppin' Popham!

Jason Popham, an 8-year-old wrestler from the Woods, and a third-grade student at Ferry Elementary School, has plenty to be proud about. Popham, a 65-pound grappler for the Roseville Wrestling Club, took first place in the Midget (10-and-under) bracket at the AAU Van Dyke Invitational Open Freestyle Wrestling Tournament held at Hazel Park High School.

Popham, in his second wrestling year, went undefeated against six wrestlers, including three pins; his quickest coming in 55 seconds. As a 7-year-old wrestler, Popham took first place at the 1987 AAU/USA Regional VI National Masters and Open Championship at Eastern Michigan University. He then went on to finish fifth in the Bantam 8-and-under, 60-pound bracket at the 1987 AAU/USA Junior Olympics Grand National Wrestling Championships in Indiana.

When he's not wrestling, Jason participates in hockey, soccer, baseball and swimming.

Rowan paces Devils to 7th win

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

With Chris Caldwell and Andy Ament still hampered by injuries, the Blue Devils find a new hero every night out and this time it was Chris Rowan.

Rowan's 19 points and 10 rebounds sparked South to a 50-46 win over L'Anse Creuse North. It was South's fifth straight win and fourth consecutive in the Eastern Michigan League (as of Jan. 22).

Coach George Petrouleas, whose team is 7-3 overall and 4-0 in the E.M.L., is pleased with what has transpired, but reserved about the upcoming schedule that pits them against No. 2 ranked Port Huron on Jan. 29.

"Under the circumstances I am very pleased with a 4-0 start in the league," said Petrouleas. "But we also have to be very realistic because we have a tough schedule ahead in the coming week."

With Rowan carrying the load, Lance Harding and Fernando Garcia chipped in with strong play off the bench.

"Fernando and Lance did a nice job coming off the bench," said Petrouleas. "They grabbed some big rebounds and that helped. We need all the help we can get."

According to Petrouleas, the Devils didn't perform well as they shot 44 percent from the floor and 50 percent from the free throw stripe, but getting the win was top priority.

"It wasn't a real pretty win, but when you still get the win, it's a sign of a maturing team," said Petrouleas.

Roger Drabant joined the list of casualties with a sprained ankle, and that gives Petrouleas a depleted group that sports only four guys on the bench. With that in mind, he remains quite cautious.

"We are in charge of our own destiny," he said. "If we can get those guys healthy again soon, we'll be okay. Right now we're taking it one day at a time. What else can we do?"

Wrestling

With only three meets left before the league meet, the Blue Devils are looking for rejuvenation after suffering their 11th loss in 12 meets.

At home against East Detroit, South (1-11 and 0-6) was drilled 59-9 as Lou Preston and Barry Brookes were the only victors on the night. Gill Waitkus wrestled his way to a win in an exhibition match.

Tunas go to 2-1 in league

By Joanne Gerstner
Special Writer

It was an up and down week for the Star of the Sea varsity volleyball team.

The Tunas started the week with a loss to Pontiac Catholic, but then rebounded with a win over St. Agatha.

In the loss to Pontiac Catholic, 15-17, 15-6, 13-15, Star was paced by Beth Allor, Buffy Stumb and Karin Kiefer as they combined for 11 kills.

Star then scooted past the Aggies, 15-13, 15-12 as Bridget Sullivan had seven serving aces to pace the winners.

"We were a little sluggish after exams, but we all came together for the win," said player Anne Mitchell.

Star is 2-1 in Catholic League play.

1-2-3-Pin!

North's William Lewis (pinning his opponent) was one of three North champions at the Andover Invitational last weekend. Lewis, who won the 145-pound division, was voted by the coaches as the invitational's Most Outstanding Wrestler.

Joining him in the winners' circle were John Shefferly and Dave Van Dale. Shefferly was the 132-pound champion and Van Dale, who will play football at Western Michigan this fall, won the heavyweight card for his efforts.

Dearborn Fordson narrowly escaped the Norsemen clutches as they recorded the win with 193 points; one-half point more than North.

Tennis tourney

Wimbledon Racquet Club of St. Clair Shores will host the fifth annual Art Van Pro/Am Men's and Women's Doubles Tennis Tournament, Feb. 5-7.

Sixteen male and eight female pros will team up with qualified amateurs (from the Grosse Pointe Area) to compete for the $2,100 in prize money.

The women's first-round is scheduled to begin Feb. 5 at 7 p.m. On Feb. 6, at 6 p.m., the men's first round swings into action. The finals will begin at 1 p.m., Feb. 7.

Admission is $2 a day. Call 774-1300 for further information.

Century 21

The Century 21 Sabres played probably the best hockey game of the season as they rolled past the team from K & D Construction, 7-1.

Century 21 put over 35 shots on goal as Jerry Rajter led the attack with four goals and one assist. Tony Morici had one goal and three assists and single goals were scored by Kevin Roseborough and Gary Lefever.

Hovering around the .500 mark, the Sabres couldn't seem to rise above that clip as they were hammered 6-1 by J & D in a crucial game for second place in the Over-30 League.

Andy Wajda tucked away the only score for the Sabres.

Silver Stick tourney opens play

A finals tournament for the Mite/Novice hockey teams, age seven to nine, will be held at the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena on Jan. 29, 30 and 31.

A team from Grosse Pointe, as well as other area teams, will be competing to win the Silver Stick Championship.

If you need more information, call 882-7914.

South will host Mount Clemens on Feb. 4 in its final home meet of the season. This evening the team travels to Port Huron and to the West Bloomfield Invitational Saturday.

Swimming

With a double-dip win over Mount Clemens (109-42) and Brother Rice (100-72), the Blue Devils moved to No. 2 in the state Class A rankings.

Coach Fred Michalik's team is unbeaten in seven attempts.

At Mount Clemens, J. Jogan took a first in the 200 freestyle and M. Kirchner was first in the 200 individual medley. Ken MacLean bounced his way to a first on the diving board and P. Wilson finished first in the 100 butterfly. A. Smith touched first in the 500 freestyle while T. Stedem and E. Steiner captured first in the 100 free and 100 breaststroke, respectively.

On the road against Brother Rice, Bill Thompson grabbed a double-first as he raced to win the 200 and 100-yard freestyle. Ian Thompson was first in the 100 butterfly and Jogan took first in the 50 free. P. Wilson continued his assault on 100 backstroke opponents as he took first and Stedem was first, again, in the 100 breaststroke.

Volleyball

For the past two years, South has owned the E.M.L., but this year the reign may end.

South got nailed by L'Anse Creuse North in three sets, 11-15, 15-10, 14-16, in what Coach Cindy Sharpe called a very disappointing night.

"I don't know what it is," she said. "The girls have got to start getting into the game emotionally and mentally."

Chris Schulte led South with nine kills and Megan Keller added four kills. Jenny Kalmink drilled four kills and Patty Pentecost was perfect in her setting mode as she handled the ball 67 times.

"We were not communicating at all," said Sharpe. "We were letting balls drop in that should have been played. We just weren't aggressive."

South (5-4, 2-2) travels to Port Huron Jan. 29 and hosts Mount Clemens on Feb. 2. Both matches are played at 4 p.m.

Gymnastics

The Blue Devils are still winless after five meets, with the latest defeat coming to Edsel Ford, 113.05-103.05.

Wendy Hill and Lee Deuben were the two athletes that Coach Jan Mason mentioned. Hill was second on the bars with a 6.6 and Deuben took second on the beam (7.5) and second on the floor (8.05).

South's Chris Rowan (44) goes up with two Lancers in a hoop game last week. Rowan paced the Devils to a 50-46 win with 19 points, and although he missed on this rebound, he yanked down 10.

Soft and safe exercise

Kalosomes, Assumption Cultural Center's popular exercise program, introduces a class designed for overweight women, men and teens.

This is the year to become physically fit. Students will feel completely at ease while burning up calories. Dieting works better when exercise is added, says Barb Otul, director of the program. Boosting the metabolic rate and keeping it working to make bodies trim is one of the goals.

Julie Marx, R.N. instructs, and Davis Sabo, director of cardiac rehabilitation at St. John Hospital, will provide technical support at the program.

Classes are being held on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 6:15 to 7 p.m. Classes are limited and registration appointments are still being accepted. Call 779-6111 for reservations.

A physician's written approval to participate is required at the time of registration.

Assumption Cultural Center is located on Marter Road in the communities of St. Clair Shores and the Woods.

CAR Magazine, November 1986

EVOLUTION OF THE SPECIES

The New Breed Jaguar XJ6

Introducing the 1988 Jaguar XJ6. Like its forebears, its sleek form is taut and well-muscled. Yet it faces the wind with greater aerodynamic efficiency. True to Jaguar tradition, its new aluminum alloy, fuel injected six cylinder engine has double overhead cams. However, the added sophistication of 24 valves further enhances power and high-speed response. To the classic interior splendor of supple leather and fine wood, the new XJ6 adds advanced computer-age technology—in everything from its climate control system to its Vehicle Condition Monitor, which continually checks 27 critical functions. The 1988 Jaguar XJ6. It is totally new, yet it reflects the finest traits of its forebears. It marks the evolution of a legendary species. It's little wonder that upon previewing it in Europe, CAR magazine called it "the best sedan in the world!"

"Fine furniture starts with fine wood, and here at Harden we grow our own."

HARDEN

Our lands in McConnellsville in the heart of New York are blessed with forests where oak and wild cherry trees flourish. These woods are beloved by collectors of fine furniture for their beautiful grain and natural affinity to the craftsman's art. Each piece of oak or cherry used in Harden furniture is carefully selected, sawed in our own mill, and air and kiln dried under our own supervision. Beautiful wood becomes beautiful furniture at Harden, where we start with the best.
