Weinle finalist in state science teacher competition

Staff Writer For the second year in a row, Arthur Weinle has been a finalist in the Michigan Science Teacher of the Year competition. The idea that he's been a runner-up twice doesn't bother him at all, since one of the things he likes doing best is helping others to become better teachers.

An earth science teacher, Weinle, 42, began teaching at North during its first full year of operation in 1968, after graduating with bachelor of science degrees in earth science education and mathematics from Ohio State University.

Weinle was one of three finalists at the high school level to be selected for the competition sponsored jointly by the Detroit Free Press and the Michigan Science Teachers Association. The winner of this year's contest was Hancock chemistry teacher Susan Warrington.

One of the reasons he was selected, he said, is for his efforts in helping other teachers get a fresh perspective on teaching. He has been involved in organizing a number of workshops and other programs for teachers.

"It's really a neat thing to be able to help other teachers out," he said. "You can teach the same thing over and over every year and it can get stale. It's nice to be able to meet with other teachers and get new ideas and to be invigorated about teaching.'

He and three other teachers have organized a geological field trip to the Upper Peninsula for teachers this coming June.

Most of the time, field trips are what he calls the show and tell variety. A group of people pack into a bus, go somewhere and look at something. He hopes this trip will allow the teachers to take part in group discussions about how they will present the material gathered on the trip to their students. By collecting samples and taking photos, the teachers can bring their experience to the classroom.

Weinle takes special pride in his efforts in helping other teachers. Since he returned to North in 1973 after two years of post-graduate study at Ohio State University, he has been making slide shows which other teachers can use.

These slide-sets are available for purchase by other teachers around the country. Weinle donates his efforts to the national and Michigan science teachers

Woods ambulance service extended; may request millage increase in Nov.

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Woods residents will continue to receive advanced life support ambulance service until November. The city was granted an extension by the Detroit East Medical Control Board.

The licensing board warned the Woods in January that it nated as an advanced emergency advanced life support ambulance the only city in the area with service past the end of this month at current staffing levels.

The board requires that advanced service is operated with two advanced emergency medical technicians. While the Woods has four personnel on the scene at each run, only one is desigcannot continue to operate its medical technician. The Woods is the advanced service, and it has operated without incident since its inception five years ago.

The extension will allow the city to operate at current staffing levels until November. Until then, the council will study its options and has directed city attorney George Catlin to draft a proposal to be put on the ballot in November asking the residents for an extra half-mill to support the advanced service.

The city needs the extra money - in the amount of $140,000 annually - to comply with the regulations by hiring four additional employees. Residents are already paying a halfmill for advanced service.

Council members unanimously feel the city should remain with advanced service rather than reverting back to basic service.

A resident asked the council to preserve advanced ambulance service and perhaps, in the future, improve it.

"We're talking about a life supporting. life-sustaining system," the resident said. "We in this community have had very good service and I would not like to see it be diminished. Rather I would like to see it go the other way, and look into a full paramedic unit."

Mayor George Freeman said the council would evaluate the system in the time granted by the extension.

If voters approve the extra half-mill, it would mean an aver age increase of approximately $25 per year in taxes.

If voters turn down the millage, the city will have to decide whether to continue the current service by different means of funding or revert to basic ambulfamily abusers she heads. RE-SPOND, Inc., just two years old, works with the courts in Wayne Country to assess, refer and monitor persons who are known physical abusers.

Its offices are in the former Kresge World Headquarters, on Second Avenue near the Masonic Temple. But the assessment of individuals is done at court sites and family service agencies. Then the close tracking begins, following the individual through group therapy and job training and placement.

Catanese, musician, administrator and humanities teacher, is the executive director of RE-SPOND, a unique program to help adults involved in domestic violence. Although most of the individuals in the program are abusers referred by the (Wayne County) Third Judicial Circuit Court, some are people who are seeking help on an individual basis.

Catanese said RESPOND has been true to its name. "We have a fast turnaround," she said.

"We get people started in the program in five to seven days.'

Many social work programs, especially for substance abusers, have a waiting period of from four to six weeks before they begin the help the person in need, she added.

Esquire Theater may be condemned By Peter A. Salinas If the city and the owner are Staff Writer unable to agree on price, the city

The old movie house's days are apparently numbered.

The Park council unanimously passed a resolution Monday night that will eventually result in the city's ownership of the Esquire Theater building on Jefferson. The move followed a closed meeting after the council reconvened in open session. According to city attorney Herold McC. Deason, the city is proceeding with the condemnation process, also known as eminent domain, under the Michigan Uniform Condemnation Act.

The resolution states the theater business is not a permissible use under the city's B-2 general business zoning. Adding that "it is deemed necessary for the public health, safety, convenience, prosperity and general welfare..." of the city's residents to condemn the property.

It further notes that the theater does not fit in with the city's master plan for future land use, which designates the area for office zoning, and in order to further future development under the master plan, it is deemed necessary for the city to acquire the property.

Deason said that though the movie house has been allowed to operate under a grandfather clause, it remains non-conforming under the ordinance.

"Non-conformance and grandfathered are actually identical terms," Deason said.

The condemnation process requires the city to have an appraisal made of the property and make an offer to the owner in writing.

Debra Steiner, who with her husband Mark Steiner, holds an interest in the business, said she was not aware of any move by the city to condemn the building. "We passed all of our city inspections and were relicensed by the city in December," she said. "We also recently received a 99 percent approval by the Michigan Health Department."

Deason said the city is not claiming that the building does or does not meet city building codes, only that the city needs the property to move forward on its master plan and to revitalize the Jefferson corridor area.

"If it is true, there is no reason for the city to condemn the building," Steiner said.

She said the city has been harassing the business because of the number of black patrons who attend the $1 movie showings and charged that the city's move is racially motivated.

February 25, 1988 Grosse Pointe News Lawrence Scripps Wilkinson collects, shares antique toys around the country in 1989 and toys are tomorron

Staff Writer

Lawrence Scripps Wilkinson will never be accused of not sharing his toys.

Wilkinson, 60, grew up in Grosse Pointe during the '30s and '40s. He still lives in Grosse Pointe, but he spends the majority of his time traveling, lecturing and sharing what has been tion of antique toys in the nation.

After more than 25 years of 5,000 toys — Wilkinson still gets enthused over a 2-foot-tall composition replica of Felix the Cat, or a lithographed paper and wood riverboat that was manufactured in 1895, a wind-up bear that turns somersaults, or an oversized wooden shoe designed to teach children how to face and tie.

play with them all," he said, with a smile. "Like most parents, mine gave me toys. I Especially electric trains. (Toys) would take me into another world.'

The Lawrence Scripps Wilkinson Collection of Toys is an affiliate of the Detroit Historical Museum and is currently looking for a permanent home to display the impressive assortment of yesterday's playthings. A storage facility at Fort Wayne Military Museum holds the greatest portion of the collection. Some newer acquisitions - those awaiting attention, restoration, rejuvenation, a little bit of love - are waiting patiently in Wilkinson's office. Others are traveling around the world, part of the 10 or so exhibitions that are always circulating.

"Toys show the social history of America in a romantic way," he said. "For instance: Barbie. Barbie dolls reflect the ideas of teenagers for the last 28 or so years. Barbie changes; Barbie reflects the times. She caught on. There's never been one like Bar-

Wilkinson, great-grandson of James E. Scripps, founder of The Detroit News, went to Grosse Pointe Country Day school, Hotchkiss Preparatory School, then to Yale, where he majored in engineering and minored in music. Soon after graduation, he got a job as a buyer of domestic toys and games for F.A.O. Schwartz in New York City. He eventually became vice president in charge of branch store development.

In 1962, while organizing a collection of antique toys for the store's 100th anniversary, he fell in love with them. "I liked the old toys. I hated to see them sold. In fact, I bought a few." That was the beginning of his collection.

Wilkinson left F.A.O. Schwartz to pursue several other

Public forum scheduled

The Grosse Pointe Public School System will hold a public forum on the issue of an open vs. closed high school campus on Wednesday, March 2, at 7:30 p.m. at the Performing Arts Center, Grosse Pointe North High School.

A 12-member committee will hear arguments for and against changing the current open campus at both high schools to closed campus. The committee is chaired by Robert Welch, director of Secondary Curriculum, and includes Claire Hunt, director of Special Education; John Kastran, principal of North High School; Edward Shine, principal of South High School; two parents; two students; and four teachers.

After listening to the views of parents, students and other community residents, the committee will review the arguments presented at the forum, along with information from both high school staffs and programs from other school districts. A recommendation to the Superintendent of Schools is expected by the end of March 1988.

Welch encourages student groups to prepare organized presentations not to exceed three minutes in length. Individual speakers will also be limited to three minutes.

All parents, students, and other interested members of the community are urged to attend.

ventures — an art gallery in Miami and a jewelry business in Atlanta - but soon found himself devoting more time to his collection. "I now spend 22 hours a day buying toys, writing about manufacturers and companies, giving speeches, arranging exhibitions.

About 10 years ago, he formed a non-profit foundation, which is called the most impressive collection affiliated with the Detroit Historical Museum. "Our first major exhibit was at the Detroit Historical Museum in 1979," he collecting - and more than said. Since then he's shared his toys with hundreds of organizations all over the world.

Most exhibits are organized around a theme, such as a New York exhibit that focused on the development of the toy industry in that city; another one featured American dolls; one was transportation toys; another seasonal toys.

The foundation is looking for a permanent home. "We'd like to open a museum for the public remember playing with them. downtown," Wilkinson said. "We've been offered space in the historical museum, but we must Wilkinson's recent acquisitions is a miniature band wagon that was manufactured around 1870. Like many toys in his collection, it's well-used, well-loved, wellplayed-with. It's made up of lithographed paper on wood representations of horses and wagon, but only one member of the band remains. Wilkinson said he'll have someone reproduce the other band members so the toy is complete.

> Lithography was also used for jigsaw puzzles and board games. The Game of Mail Express and Accommodation, or Interstate Commerce, a recent addition, includes a board with a lithographed map of the United States, all the playing pieces, cards and instructions, and a box with beautifully detailed drawings depicting 19th century mail trains and mail carriers. "The graphics are works of art themselves," he said.

> Wilkinson is currently preparing an exhibition for Michigan's Artrain. Five cars will be filled with antique toys and will travel around the country in 1989 and 1990. One car will be devoted to videos from his film collection depicting antique animated toys. Three cars will serve as display galleries, and one car will have live demonstrations. Wilkinson avoids war toys.

"Guns are represented only in a romantic sense," he said. He includes toy soldiers, cowboys and Indians, battleships, parade soldiers, military bands and such.

modern playthings. "Today's

Granite state winnows field of candidates

id New Hampshire once again pick our nominees for the presidency by voting substantial pluralities for Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts and Vice President George Bush in the Democratic and Republican primaries last week?

It could be that the granite state's tiny sliver of the national voting population, actually less than one-half of 1 percent, gave Dukakis and Bush the momentum that the first state primary often has provided in the past for the two eventual nominees.

Yet the outlook is somewhat different this year. There are several "wild cards" yet to be played. Jesse Jackson, the Democrat, and Pat Robertson, the Republican, are two former preachers who are expected to do well in the Super Tuesday primaries and caucuses on March 8, chiefly in the South.

In addition, Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, not a factor either in Iowa or New Hampshire, may run strong in his native South. And Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, who finished first in Iowa and second in New Hampshire, is staking out a Upinos claim to a strong finish on Super Tuesday as well.

So while both Dukakis and Bush did well in New Hampshire, the races are far from over. In fact, it could be said that this year New Hampshire's major contribution has been to winnow the field of candidates. Former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona and former Gov. Pete duPont of Delaware wisely took themselves out of the race after their meager results were in, following the path of former Secretary of State Alexander Haig who withdrew even before the polls opened. And while former Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado says he's still running, nobody else seems to know or care what he

As for the Dukakis and Bush victories in New Hampshire, it can be argued that their showing reflected their New England backgrounds. Dukakis is next door to New Hampshire in Massachusetts. Bush was born and went to school in Massachusetts, and is the son of the former U.S. senator from Connecticut, Prescott Bush. While now a Texan, the vice president also owns a summer home in Maine.

Yet New Hampshire is hardly a representative state, nor is it the rural idyll of white-steepled churches and well-tilled fields so often seen on picture postcards. Instead, less than 10 percent of the state's acreage is devoted to farming, its federal farm payments are the second lowest among the mainland states, it is one of the most highly industrialized states and it has had one of the lowest unemployment rates in recent years. As for its church steeples, Pat Robertson found few bornagain Christian supporters in New Hampshire and ran a poor fifth in the GOP primary.

In fact, New Hampshire is reputed to drink more beer and distilled spirits per capita than any other state, perhaps because of a state monopoly on liquor sales. The state is proud that it has no sales tax and no income tax. Yet 45 states pay their teachers more on average than New Hampshire does. And the state ranks last in the distribution of food stamps.

Furthermore, while its state legislature is one of the largest, if not the largest in the nation, it is also one of the weakest because of the dominance of the town-meeting system in running the state. The legislature is one of the poorest paid in the nation at $100 per member per year, plus

As an island of conservatism in liberal New England, New Hampshire has voted Republican since it went for Tom Dewey over President Truman in 1948 with the single exception of 1964 when it found Sen. Barry Goldwater too extreme for its taste. It voted twice for Ronald Reagan in presidential primaries and in the 1980 and 1984 presidential elections backed the president by margins of more than 2 to 1, a fact that helped Bush, whose candidacy also was supported by the GOP governor, John H. Sununu.

Now, after caucuses in Minnesota and Maine and primaries in South Dakota and South Carolina, the surviving candidates will move on to Super Tuesday and its 20 or more primaries and caucuses, mostly in the South. When March 9 rolls around, the race ought to be down to no more than two candidates in each party and the nominees in one or both might even be predictable.

Our own guesses as to the finalists: Bush and Dole on the GOP side and Dukakis and Gephardt among the Democrats. But don't put any money on those choices.

A tale of two old homes

comparison of two older homes in Grosse Pointe Farms and the dispo-Asition that is being made of them helps explain the problem of historic preservation in all of the Pointes.

One home, on the Higbie estate along Moran Road, will be torn down to make room for a development of 16 homes by The Blake Co. The other, the Provencal-Weir house on Kercheval, has been purchased by the Grosse Pointe Historical Society for preservation and possible use as its future headquarters.

The Higbie house, a 19-room structure, will be torn down because the developers contend it cannot be converted into apartments or condominiums. Nor is Hugo Higbie, who grew up in the house, mourning its destruction, pointing out that it does not meet the criteria for historic preservation: It wasn't designed by a distinguished architect. It's not a distinguished design. And a historic person did not reside there.

But Higbie added that the major reason for not preserving the house is that the 8.5 acres of land it occupies are too valuable. The developer adds that the heating and plumbing systems are antiques and the house itself is not big enough to convert into condominiums.

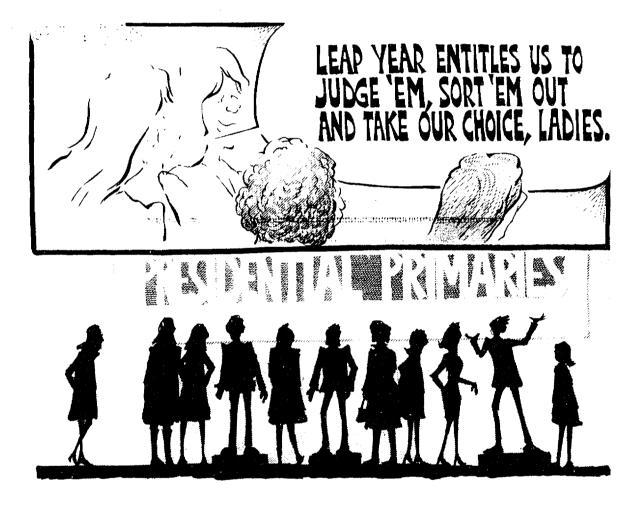

So while it is possible to sympathize with the historic preservation aims of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society, it is also possible to understand the practical views of the family and the developer. Unless good uses can be found for the few remaining old estates in the Pointes, they, too, will fall to the developer's hammer. In fact, even when other uses can be found, the owners can not be deterred from disposing of the property as they wish and especially if an alternative brings in a greater financial return.

The Provencal-Weir home is a different matter, however. Built about 1819, it may be the oldest existing structure in the Pointes. It was originally erected on Lakeshore Drive and now occupies a comparatively modest lot on Kercheval. The attractive clapboard home, which was moved to its present location some time before 1901. is a house with true historic significance, and the historical society should be complimented for acquiring it.

True, many residents would have applauded had it been possible to preserve the Higbie home as an example of the many large residences that once dotted the Pointes. But the value of the property on which the home is located and the inability to find a practical use for the residence sealed its death warrant. Those are the same reasons that many other fine estates have been destroyed to make way for subdivisions elsewhere in the Pointes.

In short, time marches on whether we like it or not.

JOA now up to Meese

ow that the Detroit Free Press has persuaded most of the opponents of the proposed joint operating agreement to withdraw their legal challenges, the issue finally is in the hands of Attorney General Edwin Meese III for decision.

In its highly promoted campaign to win public support for the JOA, the Free Press has even won the backing of five of the six newspaper unions that earlier had formally challenged the JOA. At this writing, only the Newspaper Guild was continuing its opposition, and even in that union, Free Press members were petitioning for a vote

With Mayor Coleman Young withdrawing his opposition and Gov. James Blanchard and other leading political and business figures actively supporting the JOA, the strongest criticism now appears to come from the Justice Department's own anti-trust division and from administrative law Judge Morton Needelman. Both recommended against the JOA.

One question that the Free Press campaign has raised is whether, if the JOA wins approval, the newspaper now has compromised its news and editorial judgment by its efforts to win official and commercial support and will be more favorably inclined in the future toward those who have backed its campaign.

Nobody will know for certain, of course, unless and until the JOA is approved. But it is to the newspaper's credit that after persuading Mayor Young to withdraw his challenge to the JOA, it came out with a strong editorial in opposition to the proposal for a casino gambling operation in Detroit even though the mayor is favorably disposed toward it.

One editorial may not indicate very much with respect to future policies, but for those who hope for a continued strong editorial voice in the Free Press if a JOA is granted, it was encouraging to see the paper stick to its guns on this controversial issue.

Until the board of Knight-Ridder, owners of the Free Press, announced that it would close the paper if a JOA were not approved, many readers and advertisers in the Detroit metropolitan area had thought the paper might continue in existence or perhaps even be sold. But after the board issued its warning, many more readers and advertisers swung their support behind the

Their reasoning is similar to this paper's editorial view: A continuation of the current competition with two big newspapers facing each other daily would be the best scenario for the future but, unfortunately, that is no longer a viable alternative since the Knight-Ridder board has spoken. That means approval of the the JOA with only five-day, somewhat limited competition would be preferable to having only one daily ne vspaper in Detroit.

Now let us hope the attorney general agrees with that opinion.

Presently, there is a tree blocking the view of the driver and a curve in the road. The cars on Lochmoor have to stop while the cars on Morningside can continue. Therefore, it is very hard for the person in the car on Lochmoor to see the other car coming down Morningside. This corner is very unsafe and something has to be done before it is too late for another driver.

Tax is a joke

To the Editor:

I think the "kiddie tax" is a very bad idea. Many kids work very hard for their money, and are only spared the "kiddie tax" if they make under $1,500.

However, if you are skilled enough or work many hours, then you will most likely make over $1,500 and have to pay the full amount of state income tax and will not receive the state tax money back. I don't believe kids should have to pay taxes just because they are hard workers. The state taxes that are withheld can be as much as $100 or more. This new law did not resolve anything. Kids are making more mainly because things cost more. The limit of how much you can make is just a bit low for the 80s, try something more in the range of $3,000 that would be more accurate to help kids out.

This new "kiddie tax" is a

We need a hang-out

To the Editor:

This letter is pertaining to the issue of the current fad, hall parties. I am not going to give my opinion on these parties, but a suggestion of how they can be minimized.

I feel these hall parties would be less prevalent if there were more activities for teens in the Pointes and in the neighboring communities. Currently the only activity in the Pointes is the Woods theater, and you must keep in mind about half of the movies are rated "R," therefore you are asked for I.D. and if you aren't 17, it is most likely that you will not be let in.

Then there is always Eastland mall. The mall has theaters, department stores and many other small shops, but most parents are reluctant to let their children go there at night because of the crimes that have occured at the mall in the past.

Therefore, teens are responsible for finding other activities to keep them busy during their weekends. So here is where the hall parties fit in. With limited activities for us, we must fill in our time with something else.

If there were a place for teens to go, some kind of "hang-out" in the Pointes, I feel the problems with the hall parties would most likely decrease.

Marriage. The only thing I know about it is that you need a license and a blood test. Oh, don't forget someone to get married to.

In four months I will exchange my vows with a young lady I thought I'd never find. (Oh, don't worry, this isn't going to be mushy.) Sandy is a remarkable person. She is strong, caring, loving, and most of all, understanding. And no I'm not saying all this because she constantly asks me when am I going to write something about her.

preparation is difficult. Are the dresses ordered? Where's the reception? What time's the ceremony? Are you wearing black tuxedos? How many flowers do we need? Are you having a band or a DJ? Need a photographer? These are some of the rather simple questions, but the pressure that mounts with each of them is sometimes unbearable. I think I'd rather deal with a free throw shot with the score tied and only one second left on the clock.

It's been fun for me and Sandy to plan our big day. We haven't really argued about anything, but I have been nagging her about getting things in order. She is responsible and has everything under control, but my meticulous ways run rampant when I think things aren't running smoothly. I guess I'm trying too hard and Sandy always reassures me that all the wrinkles will be ironed out.

I've been told that I better get my fill of freedom - now. I was advised to go out with the guys and stay out until the wee hours of the morning, because that will also end when I say "I do." I've been told that staying late at the office won't be the best excuse, and saving that "I tried to call" won't do the trick either.

I've had a long talk with some friends and they told me to live with her first. Some people have told me that I couldn't play softball anymore and that going to the ball games at Tiger Stadium will be out.

I say baloney. I'll take her to games. I'll bring her along when I go to the bar — sometimes. I'll tell her I tried to call and couldn't get through - but I won't tell her where I called from. And of course, I'll do things that she enjoys as well.

You see, that's the kind of relationship we have. We don't ask what our relationship can do for "me", but what "I" can do for our relationship.

Marriage means many things to me, but the one thing that it doesn't mean is the end of things. It's only the beginning. I

I'm looking forward to those cold days wrapped in a blanket - hopefully with Sandy. I guess I'll have to help her clean house, but I don't clean the toilet bowl. I want to walk through the door at the end of a hard day and see her smiling at me. What it boils down to is that I want to start sharing my life with her.

I looked up marriage in a dictionary and found that marriage is "any close or intimate union." I only hope that Sandy is not elected the president of that union -- a co-presidency would be nice.

I want to get married and find out whether or not Sandy calls me and says she's staying late at the office. I want to get married and greet her at the door when she comes home. But most of all I want to get the plans out of the way and begin an even better relationship with her.

Further on in the definition of marriage was, "the state of, or relation between, a man and woman who have become husband and wife." I know I'll be her husband, but I also want to be her friend. North/South student alert

To the Editor:

On Wednesday, March 2, at 7:30 p.m., there will be an open meeting held at Grosse Pointe North concerning open/closed campus. All students who are concerned with their future at North or South should come and express their opinions.

Closing North's and South's campus would be a terrible idea. Students need their lunch time to get away and relax. If both campuses are closed, more problems would arise than disappear. The tardiness problem teachers so often complain about will not be solved. The lunches will be shortened and, due to the long lines in the overcrowded cafeteria, students will not have enough time to finish their lunch.

We students understand your fear as teachers and parents of all the accidents and disruptions. But if we are willing to prove ourselves responsible, aren't you willing to give us a chance?

Jenni Pierce Grosse Pointe Farms

Issue is open

To the Editor:

I am responding to the open/closed campus issue. My opinion is that a closed campus at Grosse Pointe South High School would cause more problems than open campus. In a Tower poll, 85 percent of South students, teachers, and parents said they want to maintain an open campus policy during lunch and that, although North and South are part of the same school district, policies don't have to be identical.

A closed campus would cause more stress for students and give less responsibility for their actions. The school would have to hire more cafeteria supervisors and find more space to put students. The cafeteria is filled already, and only 27 percent of the students eat there. There are not any serious vandalism, litter, or behavior problems. If North has a problem with an open campus then have them solve it, but don't punish a whole other school along with them.

Amy A. Bell Grosse Pointe Farms

Come together

To the Editor:

I am writing you to speak out against Mr. Kastran saying our parents need to be responsible for us all the time. But I say that Mr. Kastran, the school system and the parents need to act together. The school system needs to punish those students by catching them in

The community needs to work together. No one group can be responsible for the kids. If we work together we can solve this problem.

Martin Gulewicz Grosse Pointe Farms

Keep it open

To the Editor:

To the issue of having a closed campus at Grosse Pointe South after there has been an open campus policy for the past 15 years doesn't make a whole lot of sense.

Some of the reasons why a closed campus has been suggested are: Some students have been late for classes, complaints about the behavior of some students, crowded s-lot (senior lot), drug use by a few students, and occasional car accidents.

The open campus is first of all, a part of developing a student's responsibility. In addition, if there is a closed campus, there will be a big overcrowding problem in the cafeteria. Another point is once the students are done eating, where can they go? Not the library that is crowded enough as it is. Or will they roam the hallways where so much noise will be generated that classes in session will be disrupted? Then there is the tardiness problem, but according to the statistics, after-lunch tardiness is the smallest part of the tardiness problem.

Closing the campus because of the problems caused by a few students is not the answer. Deal with these students. Treat the majority of mature students as the young adults they are.

To the Editor:

On Feb. 4 a letter appeared in your publication from the principal of North High School, Dr. John Kastran, that said he was "filled with fear and trepidation." Wow! I don't think I've been filled with fear and trepidation in a while.

Dr. Kastran also states "hundreds of young students, ages 14 and up gather to party down." Gee whiz, parties happen in Grosse Pointe? That's been going on for at least six years that I know of and probably longer.

Dr. Kastran goes on to say that the serious fights occur at these parties. Golly, fights too. And in Grosse Pointe. To my knowledge there have been at least eight fights within 600 yards of South since school started, and probably many more.

When are parents going to learn? I figure it must have cost at least $400 to produce that little letter. With $400 you could have probably had a hall party of your own. You wouldn't have to sell alcohol and if you planned it right, advertised a bunch, you could have a fun time, while making sure your little kiddies were safe.

Most likely high school parents of today grew up in the 1960s. I'm sure back then they didn't have hall parties because they didn't need them. They could still have house parties. And they, I would bet, did much more serious drugs than al-

Unwarranted concern

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the letter submitted by John Kastran, North High School principal in your Feb. 4 letters section. Dr. Kastran says that "something has to be done," about the few hall parties that have occurred Kastran is mostly concerned about teenagers' lives which is welcome but unwarranted. Grosse Pointe Farms and Grosse Pointe City police both said that no accidents occurred as a result of these parties. Teenagers in Grosse Pointe have showed a great deal of maturity in being responsible and not drinking and driving. Instead of pointing the finger at the parents and kids about drinking, we should invest out time in programs such as Saferides and S.A.D.D.

commended To the Editor:

It's early in the year but the Grosse Pointe North Parents Club nominates John S. Kastran as Grosse Pointe School Administrator of the Year. He characteristically followed his conscience in calling for responsible action from students, parents and the public. We commend

John Kastran and assure

him and Superintendent

Whritner that they have our support in their efforts to ensure that our sons and daughters will survive their teens to realize their full potential.

We would much prefer that the Grosse Pointes be known for its conscientious leaders and not for notorious hall parties. We are ready to do our part in the same way that Dr. Kastran has done

February 25, 1988 Grosse Pointe News From The Capitol Keeping jobs in Michigan is crucial

By William R. Bryant, Jr. State Representative

From 1983 to 1986, an estimated 6,600 jobs were unfortunately created by Michigan businesses in northeast Indiana. One of the reasons Michigan's manufacturing and designing community is continuing to be tempted to move to other states is because of our high cost of product liability insurance. This is just one of the conclusions of a report issued by the House Republican Task Force on Michigan Job Competitiveness.

Only the federal government can completely resolve this problem of variations between states as to product liability law. Michigan, however, in order to be competitive, can and must enact legislation which would limit producers, helping to keep those production jobs in Michigan.

The Republican Task Force report makes six recommendations aimed at alleviating the product liability crisis in Michigan. Adoption of the proposals will not solve the problem completely, but they will make it easier for businesses to stay in Michigan and stay competitive.

First, the legislature should repeal the joint and several liability law. That law permits a court to hold a defendant, who is found to have only a small percentage of the "fault" in question, liable for 100 percent of the plaintiff's damages. Next, a ceiling should be placed on awards for non-economic damages, like so-called statute of repose should be enacted which would prohibit the filing of claims more than a specified time after the date of sale of the product, service or completion of construction.

The report also advocates change in what is called the collateral source rule, to allow evidence of payments made by other sources to be introduced during the trial. This will allow the jury to more accurately calculate actual economic loss. The legislature should also provide for a schedule of contingent fees, to remove the incentive for lawyers to make excessive claims.

Finally, we should strengthen the ability of a manufacturer to defend against a products liabilcosts for Michigan designers and pain and suffering. In addition, a ity suit, in three ways. First, create a presumption that a product is not defective, if it complies with the state of the art standard set by federal and state government. Second, provide for an absolute defense against liability if the injury occurred after a date certain from the time the manufacturer last had contact with the product. And, third, provide for an absolute defense against liability, if the product has been substantially altered by someone other than the manufacturer or an authorized representative of the manufacturer.

These recommendations constitute one step toward giving Michigan a more competitive job climate. They will not be easy to get through the Legislature.

Students know better

To the Editor:

I think that most of the students at Grosse Pointe North are not proud of all the hall parties. I think these hall parties are being blown all out of proportion. I think that if the hall parties are given too much publicity, the students will tend to think that hall parties are in style. The students at Grosse Pointe North know it is wrong to drink, but some students are going to find a way to get around the system and drink.

Dr. Kastran is protective of our school. All the other schools might think that North is a party school, where parties are more important than academics. Dr. Kastran is trying to protect us from being killed in an alcohol-related accident. I just hope that no one regrets drinking when a close friend ends up by getting killed at a party, in an incident similar to what happened last

Issues not addressed

To the Editor:

In regard to Dr. John Kastran's Feb. 4 letter to the editor concerning hall parties, I feel he did not address the real issues which are alcohol consumption and non-super-

Kastran clouded the issues with fear for lives and a misconception that all students lie to their parents about hall parties.

Why has Kastran's letter received so much media attention? Unsupervised drinking parties are not a new problem. Aren't all parties dangerous then? Kastran was successful in infuriating parents, however, for the wrong reasons. Many parents will be more upset that their children lied than that they attended a hall party. Furthermore, Kastran suggests that students will die from these hall parties. This statement is unfounded because students could die after attending any unsupervised drinking party.

By educating parents that alcohol consumption by minors and non-supervision are the real problems, perhaps they will be more capable of battling substance abuse.

FOR THE LAST THREE YEARS, ONE OF CAR AND DRIVER'S 10 BEST. AND OUR PRICE

Since it burst (literally) upon the American scene three years ago, the Saab 9000 Turbo has been picked every year by Car and Driver Magazine as one of its ten best cars.

It's also been constantly mentioned in the same breath as the other great European sports sedans, Cars that cost considerably more. And, in some areas, give you considerably less.

For example, no other European sports sedan combines as much power and room as the 9000 Turbo.

Specifically, 0-60 in 7.7 seconds and up to 56 cubic feet of cargo space. (That's as much room as the Mercedes 560, BMW 735 and Volvo 760 sedans combined.) And that's just the beginning. When you come in and find out everything this remarkable car has, we're sure you'll be just as impressed as the people at Car and Driver. And when you hear how little it costs to buy or lease a Saab 9000, you'll be downright amazed. The most intelligent cars ever built. Converger 1988 to Saah Stansaud America, In.

Shores marina fees increase 10%

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Boaters who dock at the Grosse Pointe Shores marina will be paying 99 cents a square foot for the boat wells, up 10 percent from the 1987 season.

Village Manager Michael Kenyon said new bills went out last week to boat owners and he hasn't heard any complaints so

The move came on the heels of municipal boat well fee increases throughout the Pointes.

"If you compare the increases," Kenyon said, "I think you'll find we're right in the middle of the pack."

While municipal fees have gone up, the increases don't compare to what boaters are paying at private marinas.

"I have one guy who just got a well after several years on the waiting list," Kenyon said. "He will pay $600 for the year here and he paid $1,600 a year for the same size well at a private marina.

Last year the village collected about $78,000 for its marina through boat well fees. The increase will mean about $7,000 of additional revenue for 1988, with revenues hovering around crease came from the village's park and harbor committee, and received unanimous approval from the village council.

"We anticipate doing work in the harbor again this year," Kenyon said.

The village plans on expending about $20,000 over and above the $86,000 in revenue this year. The additional funds will come from surplus in the marina's enterprise fund.

"Basically, the marina is self-supporting," Kenyon said. "We spend no general fund revenue on the upkeep or improvements to the marina.

This year expenditures for the marina will include a $20,000 bond payment; $51,000 for personnel, electrical costs, insurances, new equipment and maintenance; and $37,000 for electrical work to the old harbor.

"We also plan on adding agitators to some wells to allow for winter in-water storage in the municipal marina," Kenyon said.

None of the expenditures will go toward new wells that will be constructed by the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club under an agreement between the club and village made last year, Kenyon said.

Bon Secours launches senior program, 55Plus

By Margie Reins Smith Staff Writer

During the first month, approximately 2,000 members have signed up for Bon Secours Healthcare System's 55Plus.

The new program is being actively marketed for residents 55 and older in the Grosse Pointes, St. Clair Shores, Warren, Harper Woods, Roseville, East Detroit, Centerline and the northeast portion of the city of Detroit.

"55Plus is a service-oriented program which provides convenient pluses to members when they're sick and when they're well," said Peggy Brey, coordinator for the program. Membership

The concept evolved after a study revealed that community residents 55 and older were interested in wellness programs, education about pertinent health care issues and specific topics such as nutrition, fitness, tax preparation and financial plan-

- A quarterly newsletter with updated information about current issues and services, discounts and educational seminars.

'This is designed as a personal program, so that people can be part of a group," Brey said. "We just had our first member use the service when he was admitted to the hospital,' she said. "He's excited about it because he's not a number, but an individual. He had advance registration for his hospital stay. A 55Plus inpatient representative greeted him upon admission. He and his wife get a coupon for a free meal while he's a patient."

Brey said volunteers from Bon Secours are also helping administer the new program.

1642 TO 1987 HIGHER COGNITIVE ACHIEVEMENTS

Since those first independent schools were founded on Manhattan Island (the Collegiate School) and in the City of Boston (Boston Latin), students from independent schools have always outperformed students from the public sector. Of course, that was very easy for the first 200 years since public school didn't arrive on the educational scene until the 1840's and the parochial schools did not come into vogue until the turn of the present century.

Recently, the Secretary of the Interior, William Bennett has acknowledged the "leadership of the independent schools" in the areas of discipline, character development, student interest and academic excellence. His predecessor, Secretary Terrel H. Bell, has often called the independent schools "better and more efficient than the public schools."

One of our key goals at The Grosse Pointe Academy is to enrich the lives of our students. We provide challenging, no nonsense courses of studies aimed at cognitive achievement. Independent schools also add values and character development to their curriculum throughout the school day and beyond the classroom into athletics and extracurricular activities. At The Grosse Pointe Academy, we have been working on and with students for more than 100 years in the areas of responding to a setback, sensitivity towards others, compassion, strength, trust and feeling good about one's self through assisting others. We know the crucial importance of self-discipline, self-control and a strong working set of values. Have you ever thought that a school not addressing character development was sending a signal that character was unimportant? Character is not found in a textbook, it is the sub-text that runs throughout a school day, week or year.

The University of Chicago has become known for its ingenious tee-shirts. My favorite — "U. of Chicago N.C.A.A. Football Champs 1913 to 1916". At the University of Chicago and teaches the noted sociologist, James Coleman. His latest work concludes, in no uncertain terms, that the private schools simply do it better than public schools.

Perhaps Dr. Coleman would endorse a tee-shirt message I've heard about lately:

Board splits on funding for instructional TV study

By Peter A. Salinas Staff Writer

Last week the coordinator of instructional television for the Grosse Pointe schools received some bad news.

The school board split, 3 to 3, on a $5,000 feasibility study for interactive video. There was much discussion on the matter and a recommendation from administrators to pursue the grant, but fears over budget shortfalls and concern of what might happen in Lansing on school financing prompted enough negative votes to disapprove the expendi-

Julie Corbett heads the instructional television division of the district's Instructional Materials Center. She oversees the multi-faceted program which includes the taping of numerous educational and instruction programs for teachers and students, a video library with more than 1,000 instructional video tapes, television production classes for high school students, the M Star project and other endeavors.

Corbett wanted the feasibility study for interactive video and she lobbied the board by sending letters to each member urging the passage of the request.

The study would have determined the feasibility and cost of connecting all of the Grosse Pointe school and administrative buildings electronically through the Grosse Pointe Cable television system or by other method. In theory, if such a network cost, the district would be able to transmit audio, video and electronic data (computer network-

'If we had such a delivery system network in place," Corbett said, "we would be able to tap into the Community Telecommunications Network.'

For most people that wouldn't mean too much, but for Corbett allowing a blind person to see.

Corbett said the telecommunications network is a cooperative effort by seven educational agencies to form a huge network, busy thereby allowing Wayne State mitted electronically to high

Macomb counties, for instance.

The seven agencies participating in the proposed project would be Wayne, Oakland and Macomb county schools systems, the Archdiocese of Detroit, WTVS Channel 56, Wayne State and Detroit public schools.

"If we had our own network in place when this were to come on line, we would be able to tap that opportunity would be like into it immediately," Corbett

> While the study has been disapproved, there is still much to keep Corbett and the ITV staff

M Star provides instructional University classes to be trans-television to all K-12 students attending public or private could be created at a reasonable schools in Wayne, Oakland and schools within Michigan. It provides training for educators in the effective use of instructional television into the curriculum.

The purpose of the program is to enhance education through the promotion and use of educational programming, and is used daily in hundreds of classrooms throughout the state.

Corbett assimilates all the information about the hundreds of programs coming from the M Star system, sometimes taping and then disseminating the information to educators throughout the system. Tapes of this educational programming are available at the ITV library located at Barnes School, where Corbett's office is located.

"M Star has programming on science, physics, fitness, study skills, math for all grade levels and for educators," Corbett said. "You name it. We are now just starting to phase-in this programming into the curriculum."

Not only does she make outside instructional programming available to the district, some inhouse productions have been created.

"We videotaped an asbestos awareness program for the custodial staff," Corbett said. "The two-hour presentation was taped, edited and will be made available for future staff."

Some of the educational work Corbett takes on is fun for both her and the students.

Recently, she accepted an award from the Association for Education, Communication and Technology at its International Student Media Festival in New Orleans for one of her students.

Chris Brow, a Grosse Pointe South student, received a special award for a video he produced. Corbett said Brow, a member of the district's Television Production Club, taped a music video on skateboarding titled, "Born to Skate."

"Brow used some very sophisticated production, camera, editing and sound mixing techniques," Corbett said. "And that is why he won.

Corbett said teachers are encouraged to preview all videotapes prior to showing them in

"We ask that teachers preview, look through the curriculum guide and not necessarily play the entire video to the class - just the part that fits the instruction." Corbett said.

The idea is not to stick the kids in front of a television and let it do the work. The video should be an enhancement for the educational process and a springboard of discussion.

"We have a sophisticated staff and student body," Corbett said.
"The teachers will not use the videos if they don't fit in with what they are teaching.'

Corbett noted that educational videotapes offer a whole variety of educational opportunities that wouldn't be available otherwise. She said that some of the things shown on video in areas such as physics simply couldn't be done in the classroom and in biology things on a microscopic level can be shown to an entire class at one time.

It is a cliche, but the instructional television can be a "win-for education.' Corbett said the tapes in the library are available to local parochial schools as well as other private schools.

The Instructional Materials Center, of which ITV is a division, is under the auspices of Central Library. Corbett holds a doctorate in instructional technology from Wayne State University and has taught in the school system for 18 years.

Former resident works to make dream come true

By Ronald J. Bernas Staff Writer

Bill Pace has had his heart set on starting his own television production company for a long time. And that dream is coming true in a big way.

Pace, a 1969 graduate of Grosse Pointe South, worked most of his television career in Detroit. He was executive producer of programming for WDIV-TV, Channel 4, and a producer/director for WXYZ-TV, Channel 7. He was the original producer of "PM Magazine" at WJBK-TV, Channel 2, and created the popular nationally syndicated "Latenight America" program, produced at WTVS-TV, Channel 56.

It was during his tenure at "PM Magazine" that he met and hired Ronnie Clemmer. The two became friends and shared their dream of owning a production company, Pace said.

"We said when we raised the money, we would do it." The two went separate ways for a while, still talking about forming the company, and in 1985, they stepped up their plans by moving to the West Coast.

"We decided that if we were really serious about doing this, that we had better move out there, because that's where you need to be to be in touch with the industry," he said.

They quit their jobs and set out for Hollywood. They found a third partner, Richard Kughn, formed Longbow Productions and were promptly signed by a top agent.

top agent.

But the duo wanted to do something special. Instead of producing the standard television fare of trite situation comedies and formulaic police dramas, he said they wanted to develop films that educate as well as entertain.

"We felt that if we were going to quit our well-paying jobs, we were going to do quality productions," Pace said.

"Our philosophy at Longbow was and is to develop films that viewers can care about emotionally and intellectually," Pace said. "Often that will mean films based on actual events. True life family were arrested and experiences make for excellent charged with the murder of one drama."

Pace said he believes most people want quality shows on television, but for the most part, the networks don't offer enough, and he is glad to be filling that void

"We want to entertain and educate, and we believe people want that, too."

For their first production, Pace and Clemmer looked close to home and came up with a story that fits all their criteria — the Detroit murder trial of Dr. Ossian Sweet.

The precedent-setting trial, which took place in 1925, deals with a number of issues from racism to self-defense. On Sept. 9 of that year, Sweet, a prominent black medical doctor, and his family were arrested and charged with the murder of one member of a white mob determined to drive the Sweets from their home in an all-white neighborhood. The NAACP for the first time funded legal actions by hiring Clarence Darrow to defend the Sweets.

"It's a wonderful story," Pace said. "It has all the elements of great drama."

The series is being written by Joe Oliansky, a screenwriter with mini-series and motion picture credits to his name. There are actors who have expressed interest in the two lead roles, both of whom are "well-respected actors" according to Pace, but he can't reveal their names because they are waiting for the script before agreeing to do the project.

efore agreeing to do the project.

Longbow Productions is hoping to film the project later this summer in the area.

"We're pushing real hard to get it done in Detroit. We have the resources to do it, it's just that we have to overcome the image of just Motown, and show people that we have more than that," he added. The four-hour mini-series is scheduled to be aired in November on CBS during the all-important sweeps period.

Pace said the story of Longbow Productions is itself a success story. "After just a year, we've done what it takes many companies up to five years to do."

He credits luck and persistence for getting them this far this quickly. "We've been lucky," but at the same time we believe in creating your own luck. Each step of the way we've been associated with quality, and that helps. We also have a nose for the right story."

Longbow Productions has not taken a breath after getting the Sweet story off the ground. Other Longbow projects currently in various stages of development include "Montana," an independently financed feature film based on legendary cowboy Ray Hunt; "P.J. and the Dragon," a made-for-television movie based on the true story of a Detroit family whose son was stricken with leukemia, and a mystery-thriller feature. Emma Samms, of "Dynasty" has agreed to play the mother in "P.J. and the Dragon," much to Pace's delight.

"She wants a chance to pull back her hair and let loose, and we're excited she is involved," he

"Our projects deal with emotional subjects and information of value to viewers," Pace explained. "We've found that quality people — actors, directors, writers, investors — are attracted to quality stories, and we know this will result in exciting movies.

"We really feel it's not just a job, it's what we believe in," Pace said.

Members will meet as often as and all meetings will be open to will be submitted to the board of education for consideration.

This is one of several committees formed to examine the needs of the libraries, in light of voter rejection of an $8.6 million expansion package in November.

Each committee will examine numerous specific items and report to the full committee.

Hanson said not all 32 of the committee members were present for the organizational meeting, but noted he felt the group was off to a good start.

"The (school) board is tentatively looking at a June 1990 election date for a library expansion bond issue," Hanson said.

Notice of Hearing Zoning Board of Appeals

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Zoning Board of Appeals will meet in City Hall, 90 Kerby Road, Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan on

at 7:30 p.m. to hear the following:

GPN: 2/25/88

l. The appeal of Mr. & Mrs. Shelden Wardwell, owners of the premises located at 44 Lakecrest Lane, from the denial of the Building Depart ment to issue a building permit for a single story addition to their ex isting dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that:

a. The residence located on the foregoing premises is non-conforming for reason that it is in violation of the front and rear year provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.

b. The proposed addition would further infringe upon the minimum rear yard requirements of forty feet, leaving a rear yard of 14 feet, thereby requiring a variance from the provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance.

2. The appeal of Mr. & Mrs. Allen Godin, owner of the premises to cated at 287 Merriweather, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a building permit for the construction of an addition to the rear of their existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that:

a. The residence located on the foregoing premises is non-conforming for reason that is in violation of the side yard provisions of Article XIII. Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.

b. The proposed addition on the rear would further infringe upon the minimum side yard requirements of 10 feet, leaving a side yard of 7.7 feet thereby requiring a variance from the provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Ordinance.

The Hearings will be public. Interested property-owners or residents of the City are invited to attend. Those wishing to submit written comments may do so to the Office of the City Clerk. A drop-box at the Police Department may be utilized for hand-delivered mail during nonoffice hours said with a laugh.

The problems faced at Mack and Morosa are illustrative of the difficulties in urban beautification everywhere. The islands are small and dry, the earth purches in summer and is baured in dirty snow and sail in winter. The commission had to work with both Wayne County and the city of Detroit, as well as local businesses — especially St. John Hospital, which is engaged in a major expansion project at the intersection.

Ultimately, espinater systems were installed on three of the four islands and evergreen plantings on all four are 90 percent complete. The project was partially funded by businesses and the Farms Foundation — and the commission would welcome additional donations.

Now comes the hardest part.

"Any beautification effort requires maintenance work," and flower boxes adorn towns that hardest part.

Math winners

The Mathematics Department of Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher High School has announced the winners of the Sixth Annual Bishop Gallagher Invitational Mathematics Contest. Seventh- and Eighth-grade students from 18 Catholic grade schools participated in this year's competition. The top three students came from Grosse Pointe's Our Lady Star of the Sea School and Harper Wood's St. Peter School. The student winners all receive partial scholarships to attend Bishop Gallagher High School next fall.

Above are, from left, Sister Kathleen DeSmedt, IHM, principal of Harper Woods St. Peter School; Shalini Srivastava, first place winner from Our Lady Star of the Sea School; David Hauer, second place, from St. Peter School; Karen McGuire, principal of Our Lady Star of the Sea School: Stephanie Fisher, third place. valuable than monetary gain. Enrollment in an independent school ensures that your son or daughter will receive a wealth of academic opportunities, a wealth of security, and a wealth of self-confidence and self-esteem.

How can we be sure these assets will accrue? Because each school listed below shares a dedication to certain fundamental principles, including:

• Emphasis on the student as an individual. Independent schools recognize that a child is special, an individual with unique talents, aptitudes, needs and interests. Our goal is to help children realize their

An investment in a child's education full potential while fostering a sense can produce a type of wealth far more of belonging within the group. Students build upon their own strengths and are encouraged to work to the best of their abilities.

· Academic challenge. Independent schools set the highest educational standards and challenge students to stretch to meet them. We stress a thorough preparation for college as well as opportunities to specialize in the arts, sciences, humanities, foreign languages, computer science and communications.

• A low student/teacher ratio. Your child is never lost in a crowd. A low student/teacher ratio opens up broad avenues of communication between student and teacher, ensuring individualized instruction and counseling at all grade levels. Small classes also allow teachers to recognize problems early and to provide supportive care and understanding when needed. How to choose a school.

Parents are cordially invited to visit individual schools where they can compare programs and absorb the different atmospheres. We're sure that with 20 diverse schools, you'll find one ideally suited to your family's needs. Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

Losses may qualify as tax deductible items feared another claim would cancel. his insurance, reported the loss only on his return. In light of these circumstances, the Tax Court found in favor of the taxpayer and did allow the deducting.

To prevent frivolous claims, the IRS requires proof of the following: the nature of the casualty, ownership of the property, and when the missing or damaged property was discovered. The burden of proof is up to the taxpayer, so any evidence will help. Also, file a police report and include a copy of this report along with a receipt or appraisal for the property's value when the return is mailed.

Accidental loss or disappearance of property may qualify as a casualty loss if it results from an identifiable event that was "sudden, unexpected and unusual in nature." For example, a car door is accidentally slammed on your hand, breaking the setting on your diamond ring. The diamond falls from the ring and is never found. The loss of the diamond is a casualty loss. Damage from termites or moths is not a casualty because it was not sudden but occured over time.

The lower the fair market value (Blue book amount for an auto), or the price paid for the property is the loss realized. The amount is decreased by any reimbursement received from insurance. However, the portion of the loss that is not covered by insurance is deductible. For example, if you have a $500 deductible on your car insurance, the first $500 of an auto collision is a qualified loss.

The new tax law requires a $100 floor be subtracted from each event, with the excess of this amount over 10 percent of adjusted gross income being deductible loss. A person with gross income of $30,000 who has an uninsured stereo worth $3,600 stolen will receive an itemized deduction of $500 ($3,600-$100 floor less: 10 percent x $30,000).

Each casualty and theft claim must be separately filed on a Form 4684 and added to other deductions on Schedule A of your 1040. These forms and instructions can be picked up at any local IRS office listed in the phone book.

organization would want someone with a social work back-

'We have trained social workers who have a particular interest in working with these cases," Catanese said. Along with administrative matters, her major function is fund-raising, she said.

Catanese said she has been in charge of hiring musicians for the pit orchestra at Music Hall since 1973. An accomplished clarinetist, she is a well-liked private instructor for several Grosse Pointe middle school and high school music students.

Her no-nonsense lessons, held in a second-story studio on Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe Park, always run over the allotted time. No one seems to object.

She has the unusual ability to engage taciturn and sullen teenagers in lively Saturday morning conversations as her brood of stray cats wander in and out of the rooms. A perfectionist, her students reward her with blue ribbons at music festivals and concerto nominations with student and community orchestras.

Her fondness for animals has led her into numerous crusades on behalf of the city's growing population of strays. She has been known to knock on doors to scold neighbors for leaving their animals out-of-doors in cold weather and recently refused to let a student take a homeless kitten because it would have to live in the family's garage.

The musician recently returned professionally to Highland Park where she is teaching a humanities course at the local community college. Catanese was on the Highland Park public schools faculty as a music woman had quit.

ience, Catanese figured the new teacher for many years following her graduation from Ann Arbor. She has lectured in humanities at Wayne State University as well, and impresses listeners with the scope of her knowledge of just about everything.

Along with group-based psychological therapy for its clients, RESPOND provides access to job training and retraining programs through operations like Technical Resources of Detroit. This program, put together by private industry, maintains training sites around Wayne and Macomb counties. Clients are paid as they train, Catanese said, liaisons with Henry Ford Community College and Macomb Community College enable ambitious students to complete degree work.

"Ninety-nine percent of the people we monitor are substance abusers," Catanese said. They come from all walks of life, she continued. It isn't just the downand-out, or uneducated.

"We have professionals in the program who have been with their employers for years," she added, expressing wonder that they have been able to function with their problems for so long.

Catanese said RESPOND will soon initiate corporate programs available to individuals through a company's personnel counseling programs.

The executive director looks forward to working with the incoming artistic director at Music Hall. It's not an easy job, she said. Several years ago a new person reported for work on Monday, she said, and when Catanese looked her up the following Thursday to advise her of the musician hiring schedule the

Company Section February 25, 198 Grosse Pointe New Board of Realtors 9-13B Grosse Pointe New The play's the thing these days at Christ Church

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

ver at Christ Church, a cast of dozens are working feverishly day and night on a literary/theatrical/liturgical effort the size of which might make a Broadway producer sweat . . . and T.S. Eliot proud.

Christ Church will highlight its Lenten season with the presentation of "Murder in the Cathedral," a drama written by T.S. Eliot depicting the assassination of Archbishop Thomas Becket in Canterbury Cathedral in 1170. And, like Eliot's spersed with effective expression by a chorus -"Murder in the Cathedral" will be staged in a cathedral ... or at least the next best thing: the beautiful Gothic setting of Christ Episcopal Church of Grosse Pointe.

Play dates are March 10, 11, 12 and 13; curtain time is 8 p.m. each night except Sunday, March 13, when it is 7 p.m.

The play represents an impartial description of Becket's assassination and dramatizes the politics - both temporal and religious - behind the murder. This magnificent verse-drama is considered to those presenting it for Grosse Pointe play-goers hope that it will be the masterpiece of the season.

"Every Lent we try to have something major to emphasize the importance of the season. Last year, it was our successful look at the writings of C.S. Lewis. We've been wanting to stage a drama and it so happened that T.S. Eliot's 100th birthday is coming up. Eliot was a member of our (the Episcopal) church and to be able to celebrate that and 'Murder' in our church is a wonderful opportunity," said The Rev. Ted Cobden, Rector of Christ Church.

"The next thing for us to do was to get people like Pat Worrell and Marge Guertler to put it together for us."

Co-producers Worrell and Guertler describe themselves as "amateurs with experience." The play is extremely demanding and the logistics of staging such a visual drama can also be a hardship for the most professional theater group. "We just thought we knew how to put all the parts together," Worrell said. "And it's working out that way, although I don't think there's a day I don't wake up with a queasy stomach from worrying about it.'

The role of Thomas Becket will be played by Detroit actor and Actors Equity Association member Paul Hopper. Artistic director and consultant is New Yorker Patricia Norcia, a member of the Yale University faculty. Stage director is Rebecca Haney, a graduate of Oakland University's honors college. Christ Church organist and choirmaster Frederick DeHaven will lead the chorus, comprised of members of the Christ Church Choir of Men and Boys.

"We have a number of technical professionals who have volunteered their time. It would have been an enormous undertaking if we'd had to hire those people. As it is, all of the production people are members of Christ Church and about half the cast are in the parish, too," Guertler said.

Things are going smoothly, the pair admit, thanks in part to the efforts of Norcia, who casted the play and did the preliminary blocking. "We've also spent a great deal of time working with the actors on understanding the play so they aren't just out there mouthing the words," Worrell explained. "I've read it so much I can just about quote it word-for-word."

Those who don't have a copy of Eliot's 1935 work might want to take advantage of Christ Church's "Murder in the Cathedral" lecture series. "Everything is just so packed into the play, we felt that we had to help unpack it for the playgoers. We hope we can do that with the lecture series," Cobden said.

The series will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays, March 1, 8, 15 and 22 in the Christ Church Undercroft. Admission to the lectures is free.

Belief," will be presented by Stephen Tudor, associate professor of English at Wayne State University. It will give a glimpse of Eliot the man and the poet.

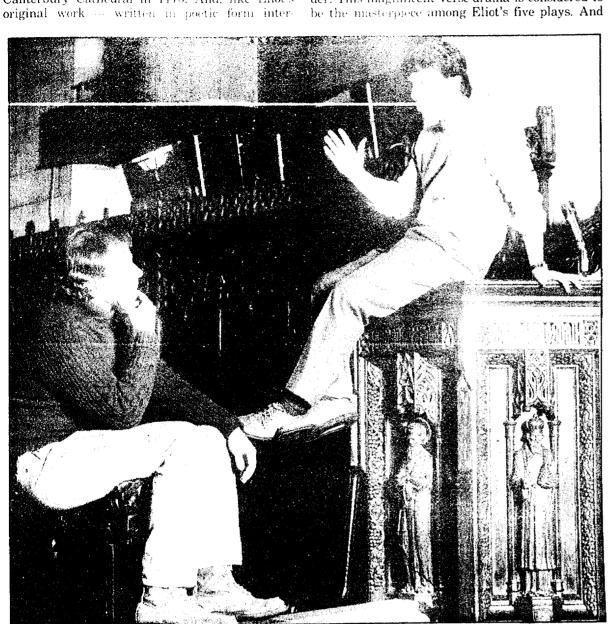

The second lecture, "Thomas Becket: The Man and the Saint," will feature a detailed look at Becket by church historian The Rev. Duane W. H. Arnold, Episcopal Chaplain at Wayne State University. The March 15 lecture concerns "Martyrdom: Uncompromising Witness to Christ," by The Rev. William Weinrich, professor of church history at Concordia Theological Seminary.

"One might wonder why an Episcopal church is looking at martyrdom. But I think that these days, an important question put to the Episcopal and main line churches is where do we stand (on political issues) and how much are we willing to compromise for our faith," Cobden said.

Cobden calls the final installment of the lecture series the "showcase" of the entire effort. "God and Politics: How Intimate Can They Be?" will be the subject of a debate between The Right Rev. H. Coleman McGehee Jr., Bishop of Michigan and The Rev. Dr. Philip E. Hughes, professor emeritus of New Testament Trinity Episcopal School for Ministry, Ambridge, Pa.

"McGehee is a committed political advocate, a person all for the church being involved in political issues. Hughes, who will take the opposing view, is a debater trained in England. We will

A fish dish a day may help keep the doctor away

In a joint study, researchers at 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Sea Grant Program in Boston and Foster-Miller Inc., an independent research firm, found that a can of tuna (6 1/2 oz.) contains as much Omega-3 as three to five fish oil capsules. Omega 3 has been shown to reduce the tendency of blood to clot, cutting down the formation of arterial plaque and lowering blood cholesterol.

Salmon generally has more Omega-3, but species vary. Albacore (white) tuna contains twice as much as light tuna and sardines in oil have more than either, the study said.

Remember, in oil-packed varieties of fish, about one-third of the Omega-3 mixes into the oil, so the oil must also be consumed - doubling the number of calories. The amount of oil must be counted in the fat allowance of 30 percent of the total calorie count.

The following recipes come 1 can (7 3/4 oz.) red salmon, from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

February 25, 1988 Grosse Pointe News Faces É places Orchestra Hall will 'put on the top hat' in March Orchestra Hall will honor Donald M.D. Thurber and the late Henry Ford II at the 1988 Orchestra Hall Ball - the popular "Top Hat Ball" - on Tuesday, March 15, at Orchestra Hall. The Top Hat Ball, a celebration of the music of Irving Berlin, is the seventh annual Orchestra Hall ball. It will take place in the Hall, which will be converted into a ballroom for the evening by placing a speciallydesigned, terraced platform over auditorium seating.

As usual, members of the Detroit Symphony will provide musical entertainment under the direction of Mitch Miller; both Miller and the musicians have donated their services to this fundraising event.

Grosse Pointe's Thurber has been an active supporter of the efforts to first save, then restore Orchestra Hall. Likewise, the late Mr. Ford maintained a keen interest in the revitalization of the historic Concert Hall.

A night for Knights:

Grosse Pointe's Dr. Michael Brennan, president and medical director of the Michigan Cancer Foundation, is among those who will be honored at the annual "Knights of Charity" awards at a gala dinner Saturday, March 5, at 7 p.m. in the Renaissance Ballroom of the Westin Hotel.

Walton A. Lewis, chairman of Lewis & Thompson Agency, Inc., and Madeleine Berman, arts advocate, will also be honored, as will native Detroiters Ron Gaylord and Burt Holiday, the singing-comedy team who will receive the newly-established "Knights of Charity Cultural Achievement" award.

Dr. Brennan has received numerous professional and scientific appointments to cancer and health care groups and was largely responsible for the establishment of the Meyer L. Prentis Comprehensive Cancer Center of Metropolitan Detroit, of which he is director. The author of more than 100 books, articles and professional papers, Brennan held editorial board memberships for the Year Book of Cancer, Cancer Chemotherapy Reports in 1960, and Cancer Research from 1964 to the present and Medical and Pediatric Oncol-

The Pastor's Corner

Indelible life

The Rev. Don Lichtenfelt Pastor, Redeemer United Methodist Church

Bill Reuther was more handsome and talented than anyone had a right to be. Everyone was his friend. Professors seemed to relate to him as a beloved son — students as a big brother.

Bill was older than most students at our small Kentucky college. That was because his college career had been postponed by World War H. As part of a bomber crew he flew many missions and witnessed the devastation wreaked by both sides - on cities and factories in Germany and on other bomber crews — both those who made it back to England and those who didn't.

During this time, Bill made a promise to God that, if he lived through the war, he would become a Christian missionary and export love rather than hate. That's what he was preparing for at college

One weekend, Bill drove home to Nashville, Tenn., to visit his seriously ill mother. As he returned to college, he was driving in a blinding rainstorm, missed a curve and went over a cliff. He was killed on the rocks below.

The entire campus was stunned. Small clusters of students all over the campus somberly discussed why and how this could happen to such a magnificent human being with so much to offer others. There were more questions than answers.

Help in coping came from Bill himself. During the memorial service, someone read from the little vest-pocket New Testament Bill carried. It had been found a few feet from his body. Bill Lad written on the flyleaf: "Remember, what you have at the day of your death will belong to somebody else. But what you are — the service you render, the tithe and offering you bring to God these will be yours forever.'

Bill Reuther is dead, but his life still speaks to me. We don't always have answers, but we can always live by faith.

Lent reminds us of a murdered Jewish carpenter whom some claim is the most potent force in their lives. It may sound too good to be true, but it is too true to be ignored.

Organist Samuel Koontz will play a recital featuring the extended work for organ, Charles Marie Widor's Symphony Number 8, this Sunday, Feb. 28, at 4 p.m. in the sanctuary of Jefferson Avenue Presbyterian Church, 8625 East Jefferson in Detroit. Koontz will perform on the church's historic E.M. Skinner organ.

Tickets are $5, $3 for students and senior citizens and will be available at the door. There is a guarded, fenced parking lot behind the church.

Opening doors

"Open Doors" is the theme of World Day of Prayer, which begins its second century of celebration Friday, March 4, at 1 p.m. St. James Lutheran Church, 170 McMillan Road, will host this year's event at which Rev. Robert A. Rimbo (left) will be the speaker. Co-chairing the event are, left to right, Marge Kamischke and Ruth Kavanagh with assistant committee members Shirley Wilson and Harriet Asmus. Refreshments follow the service in St. James fellowship hall.

World Day of Prayer is a worldwide expression of mutual prayer and Christian unity. Written by both Protestant and Roman Catholic women from Brazil, it reflects the background and concerns of South American women struggling to achieve greater freedom and to elevate the quality of life for themselves and all people.

Church Women United (CWU) has been the official sponsor of World Day of Prayer in the U.S.; it is the ecumenical movement which brings all women of different faiths together into one Christian community of prayer. The World Day of Prayer is an expression of local communities with its leadership found among the laywomen of the church.

Bassoon Quartet at March 4 'Preludes East'

The Women's Association for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra will present the second in a series of mini-musicales: "Preludes East," Friday, March 4, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. A 12:15 p.m. luncheon precedes the program, which begins at 1:30

The Detroit Symphony Bassoon Quartet will be the featured attraction. Heading the group is Robert Williams, a Tuscon, Ariz., native who joined the Detroit Symphony Orchestra as principal bassoonist in 1974. He played with the Winnipeg Symphony for two years. Williams has studied at the University of Arizona, the University of Southern California, Music Academy of the West and at Aspen Music School.

Assistant principal bassoonist Paul Ganson began his professional career with the City of Belfast Orchestra, the Northern Ireland Grand Opera Association and the B.B.C. Northern Ireland Orchestra. He returned to the U.S., playing with the Toledo Symphony and the Dallas Symphony before coming to Detroit, where he is in his 18th season.

The only woman of the quartet, Victoria King, has been a member of the DSO since 1984. She received her Bachelor of Music and Master of Music degrees from the University of Michigan and has taught at the Center for Creative Studies' Institute of Music and Dance since

The fourth member of the group, Lyell Lindsey, studied bassoon with Charles Sirard, Simon Kovar and Eli Carman in

New York, where he attended the Manhattan School of Music. Before joining the Detroit Symphony, he was a member of the Connecticut Symphony, America Chamber Orchestra and the New Orleans and Cincinnati sympho-

CLC Foundation is ready for spring

There's a lot of excitement among members of the Cancer Loan Closet Foundation of Greater Detroit as they anticipate the Spring Style Spectacular and Luncheon scheduled for Wednesday, March 16, at the Detroit Golf Club. The social hour will begin at 11 a.m., followed by luncheon at noon. At 1 p.m. Alvin's of Birmingham will present a showing of spring styles to be modeled by Grosse Pointe members June Hosbein, Ida Mae Massnick, Gerry Rohn, Hassie Secord and Carolyn Steketee and Birmingham/Bloomfield/Orchard Lake members Dorothy Bagley, Lillian Dorsey, Ruth Graham, Betty Henderson and Virginia Wilson. Anne Marie Unti will coordinate the models.

Preparing for the event — the proceeds of which will be used to purchase equipment, supplies and sophisticated equipment employed in the treatment of cancer — are, left to right, Grosse Pointers Jessie Bernard, co-chairman Corliss Marowske, CLC president Ida Mae Massnick, and co-chairman Elizabeth Groehn. Mrs. Bernard, a past president, has served the American Cancer Society and the Michigan Cancer Foundation for 40 years, chairing the Cancer Loan Closet for that time, as well. In 1947, she was asked by Colony Town Club and the American Cancer Society to formulate a play for the CLC and as first in the nation, the CLC Foundation was an outgrowth of that plan.

Members and guests who wish to make reservations for the March 16 event may call Joan Palmer at 852-1449 or 689-2090.

Mrs. Kevin D. Comer Freeman-Comer

Renee Suzette Freeman, daughter of Mayor and Mrs. George S. Freeman of Grosse Pointe Woods, married Kevin Daryl Comer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Comer of Sarasota, Fla., on Jan. 2, 1988, in Concordia Lutheran Church, Sarasota.

Pastor E. Rehwinkle officiated at the 6 p.m. ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Brenton Reef, Sarasota.

The bride wore a full length gown of white satin and Chantilly lace, appliqued with pearls and styled with an eight-foot train, sweetheart neckline and long sleeves accented with appliqued cut-outs. A hat of matching Chantilly lace and pearls held her fingertip length veil. She carried a bouquet of white roses, red poinsettias and holly.

Matron of honor was Lisa Spear of St. Clair Shores. Bridesmaids included the bride's sisterin-law, Nancy Freeman of Lake Orion; Karen Reed of Grosse Pointe Shores; Maryanne Hecht of Sarasota; and Julie Woik of Sarasota.

The attendants wore full length dresses of jade green satin styled with shirred bodices and small, shirred bouffant sleeves. Each wore a hairpiece of red and white poinsettias and carried a fan of red and white poinsettias, holly and white lace.

Best man was the bridegroom's brother, Shane Comer of Sarasota. Ushers included the bride's brothers, Kevin Freeman of Sarasota and Gary Freeman of Lake Orion; and Steve Schmidt and Don Gregory of Sarasota.

The mother of the bride wore a tea length dress of beige silk accented with gold thread inserts and featuring lace sleeves. Her corsage was dusty rose colored roses, white poinsettias and holly tied with lace ribbon.

The bridegroom's mother wore a tea length dress of pink angora with pearl buttons and a white

Just a thought

Got to thinking the other day...

Why is it that University Liggett School's powerful boys' basketball team doesn't face North or South? Could it be that North or South don't want to play a Class C school, or could it be they just don't want to compete against one of the best teams around?

I think it would make for an interesting clash. It's always nice to have the Grosse Pointe schools competing against one another because it makes for good clean fun. I would like to see a match-up between the Knights and either North, South or both.

It wouldn't take much to do. Even if the required 20 contests are filled, then make a friendly scrimmage out of it. I just want to see how a Class C school would match up against a Class A school.

North's girls' varsity volleyball team and the rest of the Macomb Area Conference competes in a league tournament at the end of the season, but South doesn't compete in an all-day tourney with the Eastern Michigan League schools.

It could be that the representation of girls' sports is still on the shelf. Why don't we recognize more female athletes? They are strong, intelligent, confident and quite successful in athletics. They put in as much time in practice preparing for competition as the boys do, so why don't they get as much attention.?

Day after day we can flip the sports pages and fill our mind with endless statistics of guys' basketball, but why don't they report the top 20 teams in girls' basketball, softball, swimming, or whatever else?

Inches of copy are lined throughout newspapers, and a lot of time is spent on the television reporting men's athletics, but why don't they let you know what the No. 1 women's basketball team is doing before the NCAA finals?

Better yet, why don't local television stations report how the collegiate teams and high school girls' teams did over the weekend or on a Friday night? We hear some high school boys' scores, so why not the

Do you even know who is No. 1 in women's basketball or volleyball?

International Olympics. What a spectacle of athletics and hype. I love to watch the Olympics. From the luge to the figure skating, to trying to relive the 1980 hockey gold, I enjoy it all.

When it comes to the Americans competing, I get up close to the television and stare glaringly into the tube. Nobody can disturb me and if someone is talking, I rudely tune them out. It's fun to try and pronounce the names that appear at the bottom of the screen, but when I can't, my interest dies.

I want to start a campaign to localize the winter and summer Olympics.

Instead of running them every four years, let's run them each February and July. Instead of the luge, let's have ice sailing. We could host a hockey tournament at the GPCR and McCann Rink. We could have figure skating on Lake St. Cair and in the summer, we could have a swim-athon. We could have baseball tourneys at local sites. We could have a softball medal and diving competition. We could set up track and field events.

We could have opening ceremonies with respective teams dressed in coordinating uniforms. We could even play music and have the stands filled with fans. We could line the streets with signs and posters. We could dangle team flags from the light posts and could even have the mayors on hand to serve as the Grosse Pointe olympic committee. We could start the torch on Kercheval, route it through the streets and light the large torch at the sight to be determined later.

The possibilities are endless. Any ideas? Let me know.

Why is it that the Norsemen hockey team didn't crack the top 10 in the Class A hockey polls until the final week of the sea-

With a record of 13-7-2 they finally made a big enough impression to be ranked. They've tied Southgate Anderson, beaten South (ranked in the top 10 all season) twice, and have trounced several opponents. They beat Livonia Churchill twice and won the Gabriel Richard Tournament. Before facing Anderson (ranked No. 3) last Saturday, North was only two points out of a first-place tie. Why in the world have they not been ranked sooner?

I think they warranted an earlier ranking, not only because of their record, but because they have proved that they can survive in the tough Metro League.

For William Lewis, the state wrestling tournament is explored territory. But, Dave Van Dale and John Shefferly are rookies to the state tournament.

After becoming the regional champion at 145 pounds last week, Lewis will make his second straight trip to the state meet in Battle Creek Feb. 26-27. Van Dale and Shefferly will lose their rookie status when they escort Lewis to the west side of the Van Dale finished third in the heavyweight slot and Shefferly took fourth at 126 pounds. With the current system, the top four wrestlers from the division make it to the state finals.

"It's such an honor for these four guys to go to the state meet," said Coach Don Maskill. "They have been working hard all year long and its quite an honor for them to represent themselves, their families, the school and community at the states.'

in his semifinal match he hit the century mark in wins.

"Bill is a quality wreslter," said Maskill. "He devotes a lot of time to wrestling and it shows. I don't know of many guys who get 100 wins in a ca-

One week ago, Lewis (37-3) lost on a referee's decision to Dan Caverly of Royal Oak Kimball, placing him second in the districts, but he didn't get mad - he got even. Lewis, the No. 2 seed going in, used a 6-2 overtime win to catapult himself into the driver's seat for the state tourney.

"Bill wanted to stick that guy and he did," said Maskill. "Ever since he lost on the decision, he's been thinking about getting another shot and this time he got it and did the job."

According to Maskill, Lewis started out a bit sluggish, but an early morning jog had plenty to do with it.

"William has a problem cutting weight, so he jogged about 45 minutes before I picked him Not that it wasn't enough for up at 7 a.m.," said Maskill.

was still a pound too heavy, so he jogged about another halfhour.'

The regional championship will give Lewis a No. 1 seed for the tourney, and that puts him in a pretty good spot.

"He's in good shape right now," said Maskill. "He's one of four regional champions, so he won't have to face a No. 1 right away."

According to the Michigan High School Athletic Association (MHSAA) format, Lewis will face a No. 4 seed. The No. 2 seed is matched against the No. 3 seed of each weight division.

Van Dale (35-5) placed third after winning the consolation bracket on a referee's decision after the match ended in a 2-2 deadlock. If he wins his first match, he could face the No. 1 seed in this double-elimination tournament, but it wouldn't be the first time he battled Berkley's Helios Tenaglia.

Of his five losses, Van Dale has been nipped twice by the 6-7 Tenaglia, but it's all or nothing at this point.

"When you get to this level, anything can happen," said Maskill. "To beat one of the top seeds, you've got to really be on. Dave will be in a separate bracket, so he may not face him, but he may not be through with him either."

Being seeded fourth, Shefferly (32-6-1) must tangle with the top 126-pounder, but that shouldn't matter to him.

"John's just got to go out and do what he does best," said Maskill. "He is tough. He has his hands full, but just because you're rated at the top, doesn't mean you can't be knocked off."

After 40 matches, physical fitness should not be a question, but mental strength will be es-

"It's now a matter of being mentally prepared," claims Maskill. "They've got to deal with sleeping in a different bed and wrestling in front of 5,000 fans. It's quite an emotional thing, but I don't think these guys will have any trouble being ready."

During the season, wrestlers look forward to an easier match once in a while, but after districts and regionals, you won't find any more feeder fish in the wrestling aquarium.

"Once you get to this point there are no more weaklings,' said Maskill. "Now there is no more bait out there - it's just the sharks."

Lewis, Van Dale and Shefferly will compete against the state's top crew for 1987-88 at the Stouffer Hotel in Battle Creek, but even if they don't fare well, they don't have to worry about pleasing the coach.

"I am very proud of these guys," he said. "It's just an honor to get to the state meet and whatever happens, happens. To say the least, it's been an exceptional season.'

Bound for Battle Creek!

William Lewis, Dave Van Dale, John Shefferly and Coach Don Maskill will be traveling to Stouffer's in Battle Creek to take part in the Class A State Wrestling Meet on Feb. 26-27. Lewis will be making a second consecutive trip to the finals, while Van Dale and Shefferly make their first trip.

If an athlete of symptoms of common vision consistently misses easy plays or if an athlete squints, plays inconsistently or has difficulty playing under lights, the problem could be the athlete's eyes," said Dr. Edward F. Stein, of the Michigan Optometric Associaton. "But even good athletes who experience none of these symptoms could have undeveloped vision skills keeping them from playing even better than they are.'

Because it's so easy to get used to vision problems or a level of vision performance, athletes may not realize that their eyes need some extra attention. They may assume everyone sees the way they do.

The only way athletes can be sure they are seeing as well as they should is through a thorough eye examination every year. The eye exam should cover eye health, common vision problems and the vision skills needed for sports.

Athletes should discuss their sport with their optometrist so their special vision needs can be considered when interpreting test results and deciding on treatment," said Stein.

Health-conscious people watch that what they eat, exercise, get the proper rest and have annual checkups to keep their bodies in peak condition. Yet the same kind of attention can help keep eyes healthy and performing well, says Stein.

Devils miss out on opportunity

Sports Editor

After league-leader Port Huron was upset by Mount Clemens earlier in the week, the Blue Devils had visions of at least tying for the Eastern Michigan League title, but now it seems distant.

With a 44-43 loss to East Detroit, the Devils moved two games off the pace. South (11-6, 8-3) didn't get many points, but they didn't lack the opportunity to shoot the ball. They put up 68 shots, but hit only 20 for 29 per-

"We had a lot of opportunities early in the game, but we couldn't get the ball to go down," said South coach George Petrouleas. "We had three and sometimes four shots at the basket, but it wouldn't go down."

South led 43-42 with three seconds left, but East Detroit intercepted the inbounds pass and layed it in for the victory.

"It should have never come down to us trying to hold the lead," said Petrouleas. "We should have been in command, but now it's one of those things we've got to forget about."

Another dilemma South put themselves into was a poor free throw shooting night. They were 3 of 11 on the night, but in the fourth quarter they shot a miserable 1 for 8.

"They put us on the line, but we couldn't convert," said Petrouleas. "We had 68 shots from the floor and 11 from the line and somehow we lost. It's a bit frutstrating, obviously, but we've got to come back from it.'

Andy Ament got a few shots to fall as he poured in 17 points to go with 8 rebounds, and Chris Rowan had 10 points and 10

South will play on the road at Port Huron Feb. 26, and then closes the regular season at home against Mount Clemens on March 4.

Volleyball

Just when you thought the Lady Blue Devils might fold, they come fighting for more.

At East Detroit, South got its seventh E.M.L. win against four defeats as they beat the Shamrocks, 15-8, 15-7.

Chris Schulte had 10 kills, Traci Lee had six and Megan Keller smacked four.

At the Ann Arbor News Invitational, South split two games, won once and lost once to take second place in its pool.

In their first match, the Blue Devils "just didn't have it," according to Coach Cindy Sharpe, but battled back to gain some respect. Schulte had 20 kills on the weekend, and Lee had 14. Keller had a dozen and Patty in the Michigan Metro League. The first period ended with South trailing 3-1. Tim Jerome scored for South on a nice feed from Kevin Bourke and Bill Huntington. By the end of period number two, South scored three times. Rodney Goin banged home two, the first assisted by Jim Smith and the second came unassisted. Jerome scored again, from Huntingotn and Bayko, but two Richard goals kept South trailing, 5-4.

Pentecost did "a great job keeping us together."

Huntington tied the score early in the third period on a pass from Jamie Osborne, but with 1:53 remaining the Blue Devils gave up the winning goal.

Yancey, a 1987 All-State tennis player, has verbally committed to play collegiate tennis at the University of Kentucky. Yancey, who won 31 matches as a junior at University Liggett School, made his decision last week, but can't sign a letter of intent until April. A verbal commit ment is not binding until a letter is signed.

"The tennis program really swayed me," said Yancey, who was selected to the Prince All-American team last fall. "I was really headed for North Carolina (home), but I evaluated the programs and I really favored Kentucky's."

Growing up in Morganton, N.C., Yancey grew to love the University of North Carolina, so making a decision against a fond dream to play for the Tar Heels was quite difficult.

"I visited five colleges, but I felt it would always come down to Kentucky and North Carolina," he said, "but something had to be sacrificed.'

What was sacrificed was a

"First, I'd like to see what I can handle at college," he added. "I know it will be difficult to balance the books and tennis, so I don't know if I could handle two sports and the books.'

For Yancey, basketball is not a hobby. He enjoys the game. Therefore, he may not be able to give it up...yet.

"I don't know if I can stay away from it," he said. "I really love to play tennis and basketball and I've been fortunate to have good success.

"Who knows, playing tennis year round may take a toll on me, so I may want to try just basketball," he added.

Last November, Yancey, an All-State basketball player as well, was the consolation winner in the National 18-and-Under Indoors in Dallas. He has been nominated to the McDonald's All-American Team, with the results to be named in the spring, and has drawn rave reviews from ULS tennis coach Bob Wood.

"He's got the potential to be the best tennis player at ULS,' said Wood. "Aaron Krickstein (now a professional player) was a fabulous player here and so is John. He could make it on the

"He's a wonderful young man," said Wood. "He's a talented athlete who has his teammates foremost in his mind on and off the court.'

Yancey's abilities have put him among some of the country's elite, but as far as Wood is concerned, the 6-2 senior's personality rates as an ace.

'What separates John from the others is his concern for his teammates," said Wood. "That puts him in a class by himself."

Kentucky tennis is what Yancev wanted, but he hasn't eliminated basketball. In his two years at ULS, he has made his mark on both courts, and that will give him many fond memories of University Liggett School.

Reducing the incidence of doughnut raids

Are you "not hungry in the morning," or feel you "just don't have time for breakfast?" If so, your breakfast is the typical American style -

Breakfast is the most important meal of the day because it provides the fuel you'll burn off during your lunchtime walk. It energizes you for the whole day, so you'll feel like being active. Eating a sensible breakfast also aids in weight loss.

If you eat breakfast, it is difficult to rationalize eating the candy bar, since you didn't have any breakfast. Eating food for fuel at an early hour is much more sensible than sleeping on it. Rather than converting to fat, you'll burn those calories during the day. Breakfast skippers, on the other hand, cultivate ravenous appetites for the evening meal, overeat at that meal and eventually gain weight.

You should try to consume at least half of your daily calories from complex carbohydrates such as fruits and unprocessed starches like rice. Ounce for ounce, carbohydrates have less than half the calories of fats. One gram of carbohyrates has four calories and one gram of fat has nine. Protein also has four calories per gram. However, most proteins contain fat, such as the oil in peanut butter or the grease in sausage. With this in mind, you can see that many high-protein foods are actually high calorie foods.

If the thought of typical breakfast food leaves you cold, try a non-traditional breakfast. Here are some interesting breakfast choices if you're not tuned in to a cold bowl of cereal.

• A sliced chicken or turkey sandwich with a slice of tomato on whole-grain bread.

 Rice pudding: 3 cups cooked rice, 3 cups milk, 1/2 cup sugar, 2 Tblsp. margarine. Cook over medium heat until thickened for 25-30 minutes, stirring often. Add va-

• A steaming bowl of soup, accompanied by a hearty slice of whole-grain bread. Filling, nutritious and loaded with energy.

• A peanut butter and banana sandwich is good, but don't forget that two Tblsp. of peanut butter contains 190

· A bowl of hot oatmeal (non-instant) with added oat bran is nice, and your children may love an English muffin pizza for breakfast - forget the pepperoni though.

Also, you should forget the bacon and fried eggs. They are loaded with nitrates and fats. Concentrate on those carbohydrates as they get stored in your muscles as glycogen and provide the energy you'll burn during your active day.

Try eating a complex-carbohydrate breakfast for a week and reassess how you are feeling. I'll bet you have more energy and won't overeat when dinner rolls around.

Films Diabetes is rampant

Currently diabetes is the No. 3 cause of death behind cancer and cardiovascular diseases, but could become the No. 1 cause of death

By Rob Fulton Sports Editor

Diabetes is a deadly disease that can't be prevented or cured. It doesn't sneak up on you as some other chronic diseases do and is caused by a metabolic imbalance in the body.

According to George Grunberger, M.D., diabetes is characterized by excessive amounts of sugar, or insufficient amounts of insulin in the blood.

"Diabetes is a disorder of carbohydrates in metabolism where the body doesn't know how to use the sugar," said Grunberger. "Simply put, it's a metabolic disorder that can prove to be very

People who suffer from diabetes are diabetics. They will have excessive discharges of urine and intense thirst and may even notice a gradual loss of weight.

Insulin, a protein hormone that helps the body use sugar and other carbohydrates, is necessary for the body to function accordingly. Without it, the sugar level increases because it is not being funnelled out by the Victims of diabetes fall under one of two categories. Type I diabetics are the type of sufferers dependent on injected insulin betes. shots because they do not have enough body-produced insulin.

"Type I diabetics have to have insulin to survive," said Grunberger. "Insulin-dependent indiwise they die.'

Type II diabetics have enough how to use the insulin. Although 90 percent of all diabetics are the 90 percent don't need mediunder the Type II umbrella, over half of them don't know they are

'Obese people may have enough insulin, but the effectiveness is lowered because of the fatty tissue," said Grunberger. "When there is a larger area to viduals have to take it, other- aid, then the insulin is dispersed throughout the body and 'thins'

> The best way, according to if your are obese, is to diet.

'Obesity is the main reason insulin, but the cells don't know for insulin resistance," said Grunberger. "A great majority of cation and theoretically would never need it if they just dieted. "The trick is to get the insulin to work for the body," he added.

Type II diabetics are not required to obtain an insulin shot, but some are forced to because they decided not to cut back and follow a dietary regimen.

"Having to be dependent on Obesity is the number one an insulin injection is not a solution for obese individuals," said Grunberger. "Many of them are forced to insulin because they don't get on a proper diet. Type I absolutely needs it, but Type II can fight it more."

Obesity gives the body reason enough to resist the insulin and hold the sugar content quite high. Therefore, if you lose weight, the blood sugar will eventually come down.

"By losing weight, you lose the fatty tissue that causes the insulin to work less," said Grunberger. "When you are obese, it causes insulin to work harder because there is more body and less effective insulin."

Dieting is the first step to fight third leading cause of death, but dieting alone will not

"We promote exercise and fitness because it's the way to improve insulin action," said Grunberger. "Together, dieting and exercise are very powerful.

The recommended amount of exercise is 20 minutes every other day at a high intensity level. Grunberger stated that getting the heart rate up to 75 percent of its maximum potential is sufficient enough, but trying to do too much can complicate things.

"Twenty minutes every other day is the way to do things," said Grunberger. "If a person does it more than 20 minutes, or more intense, then they can encounter more complications."

Together, dieting and exercise will work. If you are obese and have been dieting, that's great, but if you do exercise, don't drop the diet plan.

"Exercise can't replace the diet," Grunberger said. "It's difficult enough to burn calories by exercise alone. You get more mileage out of diet and exercise."

Medication is not the first option for Type I diabetics. Grunberger claims that medication should come second, after a concerted effort to diet.

Diabetes is a metabolic imbalance and can cause death, but it also effects other organs as well. Last year alone, over $14.5 billion was spent on treating the disease that is responsible for some cases of blindness, amputation and kidney failure.

"It is a crippling disease that a lot of people are unfamiliar with," said Grunberger. "People just aren't aware of the ramifications and don't realize how deadly it can be.

"It's the third-highest cause of death, but if weren't are careful and don't try to restrict its capacity, then it could very easily take over as the No. 1 cause of death."

Mary Some answers to

common questions

In many ways we don't have the answer for everything. We try to do the best we can, but sometimes the best turns sour on us.

In an attempt to help those who struggle or even those tance, the following question and answer format has been developed to clarify many misconceptions surrounding common nutritional concerns.

The mind's eye

Q: I've been overweight all of my life. I've tried several different diets, but I never seem to succeed. I just don't have the willpower. What can I do to make myself succeed on a weight-loss program?

A: Most important, you must commit to yourself. It is vital to your success that you are dieting because you want to. Then, after selecting a safe and effective diet, turn on the power in your mind. Visualization can be an extremely powerful tool in assisting you in reaching your goal. When you start to "see" yourself as a thin person, you will begin to act that way. If you can see your goal, it will seem attainable.

Start out slowly. Mentally take yourself on a shopping spree. Vividly picture yourself trying a size 10 dress in your favorite color, and looking great! Continue your trip to a relaxing restaurant for a refreshing green salad. Visualize the same scenario every day and soon you'll be living

A sweet tooth

Q: I just got back from the dentist where I found that I have several cavities. I brush regularly, but the dentist says it could be from the foods I'm eating. Does the food we eat directly affect our dental health?

A: Sugary, sweet foods, such as cake, candy, pastry and soda pop, coat your teeth with a sticky, nearly invisible substance called plaque. Naturally occurring oral bacteria uses the sugars in the plaque to form acids that attack the normal surface of your teeth up to 30 minutes after eating. The end result is a cavity!

To prevent gum disease and cavities, eat a well-balanced diet, choosing foods from all four food groups, occasionally eating sweets, but only with your meals.

Replace those sugary, highcalorie desserts and snacks with fresh, natural foods, such as raw fruits and vegetables, nuts, lean meats, hard-boiled eggs or wholewheat crackers. Just think, not only will you be saving your teeth, but your * waistline as well!

Water — nature's beverage

Q: The only time I ever drink water is with my evening meal. A friend of mine informed me it isn't good to drink water with a meal. Is this true?

A: Not at all. It is important to consume adequate liquids, especially water. It will help to soften the food in the stomach and assist in moving food through the digestive system. Water is also important in carrying nutrients, disposing of waste products and regulating body tempera-

Because the body loses approximately 10 glasses of water each day, it is essential to good health that it is replaced. If the body doesn't receive adequate water intake, a poor complexion may result; or the individual may experience a feeling of sluggishness.

Treat water drinking as any habit you would like to acquire. At first, you must make it a conscious effort. One recommendation is to drink water with each meal, then increase your daily intake to eight glasses.

Rating your rewards

Q: I believe a reward system would help me with my dieting. But how can I change a lifetime habit of food rewards and discover new alternatives?

A: Rewards are as individual as people themselves. By brainstorming and looking inward, you can decide what is rewarding to you. Make a list of those activities that supply you with satisfaction. Some possibilities might include: visiting a special friend, taking a walk, allowing yourself time for reading or treating yourself to a new outfit. After your rewards are defined, set up Reward yourself for the small victories as well as the major ones. You deserve it! As you begin thinking of alternatives to food, your life will open up to all kinds of new experiences and creative thinking. You will even discover new aspects of your own personal-

The Calcium Question

Q: How much calcium is necessary to guard against osteoporosis and to maintain a healthy body? Is supplementation necessary?

A: Currently, the official RDA for calcium is 800 mg. daily (the U.S. RDA is 1,000 mg.). However, the National Institutes of Health recently recommended increasing the RDA to as much as 1,500 mg. for post-menopausal women who don't receive estrogen.

Ideally, we should obtain calcium from our diets. Food provides additional nutrients that supplements don't. And the body is better able to utilize the calcium from natural sources.

Unfortunately, most Americans' diets fall short of supplying even the current calcium-deficient diets. Thus, supplementation becomes a good idea for the majority of us. If you're choosing a supplement, select those tablets derived from calcium carbonate. This source offers the most dense, safest form of calcium available.

Obesity Is A Disease

Q: Fat is unfair! There is little difference between my eating habits and those of my friends, but it seems everything I eat turns to fat. I've resigned myself to a life of being overweight.

A: Overweight does not indicate a mere lack of self-control, ignorance or poor eating habits. The causes are much more complex than that. According to studies conducted by Dr. Jules Hirsch of Rockefeller University, obesity has a biological basis. Following years of research into the causes and effects of obesity, a National Institutes of Health panel, chaired by Dr. Hirsch, declared obesity a "disease" and a "potential killer." It increases the incidence of blood pressure, diabetes, risk of heart disease and respiratory disorders, arthritis, certain types of cancer and the shortening of one's life span. While there is no cure for obesity, there are effective methods of control.

Weight program offered for teen-agers

American teens are facing a large and difficult problem.

This problem will more than likely continue to affect them as adults, and won't go away if ignored and could end up cutting years from their lives.

The problem is obesity. You may not have noticed, but 22 percent of American teen-agers are obese. That is up from 15 percent just 20 years ago. Obese teens are much more likely than their normal weight peers to become obese adults.

You are probably wondering why this is happening. Could it be that they have inherited this problem from their parents? All the evidence suggests that is not the case.

The research says that they are learning how to be obese. Who teaches our teens how to become obese? Society does. Enticements to eat are found in many places and teens are able to repeatedly observe this.

The solution to this problem is complex. A successful approach requires that teens weed out much of what they have learned about eating and activity. At the same time, they must learn appropriate eating and activity be-

Adult weight-loss programs do not adequately address the special needs of teens. Now there is a new program which does.

The American Institute for Preventive Medicine has just completed development of a new weight-loss program that helps teens through this unlearning and relearning process. It is specifically designed to eliminate and minimize many of the difficulties teens experience with weight control.

The Weight No More for Teens Program helps overweight teens to improve their self-image. Participants learn how to deal with negative comments about their weight. They evaluate our societies' unrealistic pursuit of thinness and put their goals into perspective. Teens will also learn skills for dealing with peer pressure.

This problem can be solved, but it won't be solved by waiting for it to go away. Society, despite the high value it attaches to thinness, teaches teen-agers far more about how to be obese. Weight no More for Teens teaches teen-agers how to lose weight and keep it off - for life.

A low cost research project on this program is being offered at Cottage Hospital. Free information sessions for teens and their parents will be offered at the hospital at 7 p.m. on Feb. 29 and March 2.

For more information, call Elaine Frank, R.D. at the American Institute for Preventive Medicine at 352-7666.

'Cry Freedom' documents violence created by apartheid

By Michael Chapp

Special Writer "Cry Freedom," the longawaited Richard Attenborough film about South African civil rights activist Steven Biko, is unabashedly political in both theme and narration. From the first frame to the last, there is every indication that Attenborough is making a not-so-subtle attempt to document in striking and dramatic terms, what's going on in South Africa.

That's both fitting and proper, since there are few directors who could tackle such a ponderous task with the heart and substance Attenborough does. After all, here's the man who captured political and religious figure shadowed by legend.

If Attenborough likes to champion the cause of controversial figures of history though, he does not do so at the expense of artistic expression. In "Freedom," Attenborough has created a film which examines Biko's beliefs and struggles; he's also created a nail-biting adventure story. Despite the divergent paths the piece takes, thematic focus is never lost.

The picture starts and ends in violence, indicative of the racial November 1975, residents of the Crossroads settlement near rikaaner government. The raid was one of the many against which Biko was determined to fight. Along the way he attracted a significant following. He also made a lot of enemies.

to know and understand Biko better though, the two became close friends. More importantly, Woods had begun to work for Biko's cause; even risking the safety of himself and his family.

The second half of the film documents Woods' attempts to escape South Africa, so that he can write a book exposing the injustices of the government. But Attenborough does not lose sight of his priorities. The tense moments of flight are balanced with flashbacks to Biko's court appearances and personal battles. Priorities are crystal clear in this film, and the statement it makes is resounding.

> "Cry Freedom's" images, both visual and aural, are haunting in their immediacy. As the film ends, names of those who died in captivity between 1962 and 1987 -- along with official government explanations for their deaths are scrolled across the screen. 1962 was the year it became legal in South Africa to put somebody in jail without a trial. 1987 was the year "emergency regulations" took effect, and information was no longer forthcoming from the government.

The future? Attenborough makes his position clear enough: God help us if there are no Steven Bikos on the horizon.

Special Writer

The big news of this exciting adventure film is Sidney Poitier's return to the screen after an absence of 10 years, and that nothing of the grace and power that made him one of the most popular stars of the '60s has been diminished by those years.

His commanding presence and rich baritone voice are still as mesmerizing as they were when he was featured in his Oscarwinning "Lillies of the Field," and the highly rated "The Defiant Ones" and "Heat of the Night."

Nor have the years slowed him down. He performs some of the best stunt work of 1988 in this film.

In it he plays Warren Stanton, an FBI agent in San Francisco assigned to track down a psychotic diamond thief.

The story begins on a high note as Stanton and his men surround the house where the thief is hiding. He escapes holding a woman hostage. Stanton follows him in a wild car chase through the streets of San Francisco but he escapes again leaving behind the hostage whom he has shot in the eye, the trademark which he leaves behind to identify himself.

Determined to get his man, Stanton embarks on a manhunt where the fugitive has left a trail of senseless killings trying to reach the Canadian border. Unable to get past the roadblocks, he joins a hiking group of five men led by Sarah Knox (Kirstie Alley). Part of the suspense is that no one knows who of the five is the killer. His identity has never been revealed.

Sarah is the wife of trail guide Jonathon Knox (Tom Berenger), a surly young man who has little use for city slickers. He is proud of his ability to survive in the wilderness and looks down on the ineptitude of those dependent on the conveniences of urban life.

When Stanton shows up at his cabin asking him to guide him through the mountains, Knox ridicules him, but agrees to do it when he realizes that Sarah's life is in danger. Knox wants to go alone because time is important and he thinks Stanton will slow him down. The two finally come to terms.

Much of the journey is through mountainous territory.

clink to mountain crevices, and swing from cliff to cliff over

While the mission is grim and journey perilous, there is considerable humor in the by-play between Stanton and Knox.

In San Francisco, Stanton is a cool, self-assured cop who knows all the moves. Chasing criminals in the wilderness is a different story. Knox knows how out of character he is and makes the most of it by taking him down the most rugged trails at a pace an Indian scout would admire.

"Shoot to Kill" is an old fashioned adventure tale reminiscent of the Saturday afternoon serials that left audiences gasping for breath at a particularly exciting episode when it was cut off with a "continued next week." The only difference is the audience doesn't have to wait to see the outcome, viewers just sit on edge waiting for another thrilling epi-

This strong, dramatic film has other things going for it besides the enormous talent of Sidney Poitier. Tom Berenger puts spirit and sincerity into his role and Kirstie Alley, equally at home in the wilderness, never flinches in her key role.

Add to this the magnificent background scenery. Spread out on a giant screen, the incredible rugged majesty of the Northwest is a panorama of untouched beauty so real we feel we are there and in some scenes are glad we're not.

The Missing LINC

Linking individuals to Needs in the Community is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to coordinate needs with resources. This is accomplished by placing goods no longer needed by individuals and businesses into the hands of Metropolitan Detroit charitable agencies. Operating since 1971, LINC is proud of the accomplishments it has made and strives to increase its resource base. If you have recycable items, no longer of use to you, Operation LINC knows who can and will use them. Please call LINC at 882-6100 with your donation. KEEP IT MOVING!

Winterize Yourself With Winter Activity

Many Americans tend to think of winter as a time to hibernate. With the onset of cold weather, people often become less active than they are during the warmer months. Without the opportunity to play tennis, water ski, go bicycling or participate in other outdoor activities, people can easily become sedentary. This change in activity level can also lead to poor eating habits — overeating and indulging in high-caloric, high-fat snack foods. This is especially true during the holiday season from October to January, when the number of social activities increases. Family gatherings and religious celebrations often include snacks, big meals and edible gifts. Frequently the results are weight gain and a general sense of feeling unfit The American Heart Association suggests you keep up some form of fitness program and maintain your ideal weight during the winter months. In fact, exercise can be an effective way to control appetite. Do, however, check with a physician before starting a regular exercise program, particularly if your lifestyle has been sedentary During the winter months there are alternatives to the traditional outdoor activities. Many community colleges and local universities offer a variety of exercise and sports classes through adult education or continuing education departments, usually at a very low cost

Often high school gymnasiums are open to the public at no charge evenings and weekends during the winter. YMCAs, YWCAs, boys' clubs, girls' clubs and community centers generally offer a variety of fitness, exercise and sports classes and activities at a range of fees depending on location.

...OR THE

BASEMENT,

Bowling can be an enjoyable indoor activity that helps improve coordination and muscle tone while also helping relieve tension. Bowling instruction is available at most bowling centers at little or no cost. Some bowling centers also offer aerobics and other exercise programs during the day in conjunction with league bowling.

Outside exercises like skating and walking are good choices during the cooler months, as long as appropriate clothing is worn. For indoor walking, shopping malls provide an economical alternative for a brisk walk without the cold weather elements. Remember to wear comfortable shoes. The key word is brisk — no window shopping Some malls have organized informal walking "clubs," which offer incentives from mall merchants and can provide a pleasant social experience.

Remember that good health is a year-round responsibility. Just because it is cold outside doesn't mean sensible habits should be forgotten. Find out where in the community facilities, activities and classes are available and keep up a regular, enjoyable and relaxing fitness program all year.

Metro League title eludes hockey team

By Rob Fulton

Sports Editor Needing a victory to pull within two points of Southgate Anderson, the Norsemen couldn't come any closer than a 5-2 loss at Anderson to settle into second place in the Metro League. North (14-7-1) was overpowered from the drop of the puck as they couldn't get unraveled in a game that coach Mike Manzella called crucial.

"We needed this one if we wanted any chance of at least tying for the league," he said. "But, we didn't play well and they just dominated us."

North trailed 1-0 at the end of one and then 3.1 at the end of two as Ed Barbieri's goal kept them close. David Grundman Star of the Sea netted North's second goal, but it was after Anderson shelled two more goals.

"They (Anderson) drove the puck better, they shot the puck better and they passed the puck better," said Manzella. "We were outplayed."

The loss snapped a five-game winning streak for North, but League crown vanished with a Manzella thinks it may work to his team's advantage.

"Maybe it's good for us beup some pieces if we want to give the state title a run," he said. "I hope we can bounce Tunas with outstanding defenback.

The New Breed Jaguar XJ6

The 1988 Jaguar XJ6. It is totally new. Yet it reflects the most superb qualities of its legendary forebears.

Its new, fuel injected, double overhead cam six cylinder engine has 24 valves for enhanced power and high-speed response. Patented "pendulum" isolation enhances the renowned ride of Jaguar's surefooted fully independent suspension.

Supple leather and polished burl walnut maintain the Jaguar tradition of handcrafted interior luxury. However, the new XI6 also reflects the most enlightened engineering. For example: The new XJ6 incorporates seven microprocessors mation systems—including a trip computer and a Vehicle Condition Monitor, which continually checks 27 vehicle

A most advanced species, the new XJ6 is also the most thoroughly proven sedan ever introduced by Jaguar. It is protected by an extensive 3 year/36,000 mile warranty, and Jaguar's new Service-On-SitesM Roadside Assistance Plan. We can provide details on this program and Jaguar's limited warranty. And we invite you to experience the evolution of a legendary species—the new breed Jaguar XJ6.
