

Man submerged half-hour in lake lives 2 1/2 days

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

A 64-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods man was rescued from Lake St. Clair near Moran Road Saturday morning after he spent more than 30 minutes submerged in his car in 33-degree water.

Donald Wollenzin survived for two and a-half days, but died from cardiac complications at 9:10 p.m. Monday at St. John Hospital.

Dr. Kevin Grady, who attended Wollenzin, said it was extremely unusual for a man of Wollenzin's age to survive submersion for any period of time, and it is probably attributable to the cold water immersion dive reflex.

The diving reflex is triggered by immersion in cold water that slows the heart rate and diverts blood flow to the brain, heart and lungs and serves to conserve oxygen until breathing resumes, delaying potential brain damage.

Grady said this reflex usually occurs in children, because they have a larger surface area relative to the overall body. Children would therefore cool quicker than an adult, who has more body fat to insulate the internal organs from the cold.

"There was obviously a definite benefit from the cooling," Grady said. "In the literature, there have been reports of people being resuscitated after 40 minutes in cold water."

Wollenzin was rescued through the combined efforts of three local police officers, a Farms firefighter, Leon Sehoyan of the Grosse Pointe Marine Rescue Unit and two U.S. Coast Guard rescuers in bone-numbing, 33-degree water and 13-knot winds.

A witness said he spotted Wollenzin's Ford stopped in the eastbound lanes of Lakeshore around 9:30 a.m. The witness reported that Wollenzin was shaking and "appeared to be having a stroke or some kind of seizure."

After the witness drove around the stopped car, Wollenzin's vehicle sped off.

Police reported that Wollenzin continued westbound, drove up over the new six-inch median curb, and straddled the grassy median and the roadway for about 108 feet. The car then went back into the westbound lanes, but then cut over the median curb again for about 162 feet. The vehicle made a sharp left turn, crossed both eastbound lanes, went over a nine-inch curb and flew about 50 feet into Lake St. Clair just east of Moran Road.

Two Farms police officers, a Grosse Pointe public safety officer and a Farms firefighter, who arrived at the scene when the vehicle was about two-thirds submerged, jumped into the frigid waters in an attempt to rescue the vehicle's sole occupant.

The U.S. Coast Guard was also called to the scene. A helicopter responded, and two rescue personnel also jumped into the water to attempt a rescue.

Farms police said the car doors were locked and the man was buckled into his seat. Officers then broke out the windows of the car with a pike pole and attempted to pull the man from the car.

Sehoyan arrived just as the Coast Guard helicopter arrived. He said he swam about 50 to 75 feet to get to the vehicle.

"They (the other rescuers) made it real easy for me," Sehoyan said. "I only had time to get my wetsuit on, and when I got to the car, the door was already open. I wasn't able to get my finger to push the button to release the seatbelt, so I had to rip a hole in the finger of my glove."

An apple for the candidate

It was a case of the early bird catching the candidate Saturday morning as 10-year-old Jeff Wattrick of Grosse Pointe Farms was one of the first Dick Gephardt supporters to greet the Democratic presidential candidate — and the only one to give him an apple — during his visit to Detroit's Eastern Market. Jeff, a University Liggett School fourth-grader who describes himself as a big Gephardt fan, had his mother Rosalie Wattrick, snap his picture with the candidate.

Pointer of Interest

Sheila Murphy Ingwersen

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

One look at Sheila Ingwersen's resume will tell you that this is a woman who doesn't spend many lazy days in front of the television watching Geraldo. Her dance card, folks, is full. Especially these days.

Ingwersen is Michigan Opera Theatre's new director of volunteer activities. She coordinates special events for MOT, directs fundraising activities and oversees the numerous projects organized by the MOT Guild, the MOT's largest source of volunteers. The guild is involved in several activities, including a boutique, the Second Act resale shop and "The Meyers," volunteers who help provide transportation for visiting MOT artists.

The MOT's many volunteers have helped make things run smoothly for the 17-year-old organization which now ranks as the country's ninth-largest opera company. Ingwersen calls the volunteers the "life's blood," of the MOT. That is a role she has played many times herself.

Ingwersen has been a volunteer for most of her life, starting as a hospital candy striper and branching out into areas such as Children's and Bon Secours hospitals, the Detroit Artists Market, the Junior League of Detroit, the National Women's Board and Northwood Institute.

When MOT General Director Dr. David DiChiera approached her last year about assuming the full-time position of director of volunteer activities, Ingwersen jumped at the chance.

"I taught David's daughters in school and I'd known David and his wife Karen for years. He knew that I was pretty involved as a volunteer and asked if I'd think about taking the job. I told him: 'Let's talk.' And here I am," Ingwersen says.

She took over as director of volunteers last October, at the beginning of what has been called Michigan Opera Theatre's most ambitious season. The 1987-88 schedule is the busiest ever, including six full-scale productions, 61 mainstage performances and an appearance by superstar tenor Luciano Pavarotti.

"I've had a busy but delightful time and that's mainly due to the folks at MOT. Everyone's wonderful. It's a terrific place to work ... and to volunteer," she says.

Ingwersen's hundreds of duties on behalf of the MOT have suddenly turned into thousands in preparation for Pavarotti's performance at Joe Louis Arena

School district's top 2 officials air charges at public hearing

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Deputy Superintendent Joseph Spagnoli's contract with the Grosse Pointe schools is under review following charges of impropriety from the superintendent at a special public meeting with the board of education.

Spagnoli, 63, who has worked for the district for more than 25 years, is under fire for writing administrator evaluation summaries for the school board which differed negatively from the evaluations. He met with the board on the matter March 15, represented by attorney John English.

A second meeting was scheduled Monday night, but was postponed. School officials said English was unable to attend the proceeding. The meeting was rescheduled for 5 p.m., March 30 at South High.

Superintendent John Whritner, who recommended that Spagnoli's contract which expires June 30, 1989 not be renewed, gave details for his recommendation at the meeting. The public meeting had been requested by Spagnoli.

Saying that he was blamed for a lack of leadership on the part of Whritner, Spagnoli said, in a prepared statement submitted to the board, that he had been stripped of authority, responsibility and dignity before his colleagues.

"I want the board to believe that I sincerely regret what I have to say," Spagnoli wrote. "But I feel I have been made the scapegoat of a diabolical, carefully planned and orchestrated series of events that can only be described as reprehensible, invidious, despicable and insidious."

Whritner cited three main areas for his recommendation for non-renewal of Spagnoli's contract:

- Spagnoli had prepared summaries of administrator evaluations which contained substantive materials different from those contained in the actual evaluations performed by him. ... (and) the administrators who were evaluated were not informed of the existence of evaluation summaries. ...

- He has failed to recognize the impropriety of his actions and has been uncooperative in the efforts of the superintendent to resolve this matter with administrative staff.

- The performance of his job responsibilities in recent months has been unsatisfactory in that he has inadequately determined his goals for 1987-88 and he has failed to perform certain job responsibilities assigned to him.

Spagnoli countered Whritner's

'I feel I have been made the scapegoat of a diabolical, carefully planned and orchestrated series of events. . .

charges, citing that he had performed his duties willingly and responsibly for more than 25 years in the eight different assignments he had been given.

English, who spoke for his client at the March 15 meeting, said Spagnoli's contract has a provision which could extend the contract until his retirement in 1990. He said he was at a loss as to why this matter became an issue so close to Spagnoli's retirement.

"Why is this happening now unless it is a move to force Spagnoli out?" English asked the board.

Estate sale

Residents can get a last look this week at a Lakeshore mansion. The estate of Dorothy Scherer Higbie, at 201 Lakeshore, will be sold at a public sale on the premises Friday and Saturday, March 25 and 26, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The contents of the home and its architectural parts, including walnut paneling, iron grille work, railings and fencing, iron wall sconces and French doors, will be sold. The 9-1/2 acre parcel will be subdivided into 16 homes by The Blake Co., which is also developing the Ranger-Dodge property on Lakeshore in the City.

Rescue

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation was administered immediately to Wollenzin after he was pulled from the vehicle, Sehoyan said.

Farms Cpl. Otto Glanert, one of the rescuers, was admitted to Bon Secours Hospital later in the day for chest pains. He also received a serious cut on the leg. Farms Sgt. Sam Cardella was taken immediately to St. John Hospital where he was treated for hypothermia and numerous cuts on his arms. Farms firefighter Gary Luzier was taken to St. John where he was treated for hypothermia. City Officer James Fox, the first to leap into the water, was also taken to St. John and treated for hypothermia and multiple cuts.

Farms Police Chief Robert Ferber said that after breaking out the door windows, officers attempted to grab Wollenzin. Because the water was so cold, the rescuers could not feel themselves being cut by the remaining shards of glass.

"These officers had no diving gear — nothing but their uniforms," Ferber said. "Each of them was in the water for between seven to 12 minutes. They did climb on top of the car's roof to take breaks from the cold."

Ferber said all the officers will be recommended for life-saving commendations.

Sehoyan was the only rescuer at the scene with diving equipment. According to Coast Guard officials, the Coast Guard does not use divers in rescue attempts.

Farms police take first step toward public safety

Three Farms police sergeants recently completed two weeks of fire training with Grosse Pointe Park and have been awarded their Firefighting I certificates.

Sgts. Sam Cardella, Ron Wooten and Mark Brecht completed the training under the supervision of the Park's deputy director of public safety, Phillip Costa.

Costa was the fire chief in the Park for 16 years before that city combined its police and fire departments.

Farms Police Chief Robert Ferber said police officers and firefighters have not reached a negotiated contract concerning the merger of the two departments, and therefore, only police command officers, who have agreed contractually to public safety, are beginning their cross-training.

Ferber, along with Lt. Ignatius Backman and Detective Sgt. George Van Tiem, will begin basic fire training on April 18.

"We are sending only a few at a time," said Ferber, who has been designated the city's public safety director. "This training will be followed up with more fire training."

Ferber said he didn't anticipate a command manpower shortage.

12-year old victim in critical condition

A 12-year old Park girl was in critical condition at Children's Hospital of Michigan Monday morning after she was injured on Kercheval west of Devonshire at 3:25 p.m. March 17.

According to Park police reports, a witness said the girl had been walking on the sidewalk and was wearing radio headphones when she turned, darted into the street and ran into a passing car. The driver of the car, also a Park resident, was not ticketed.

The victim was taken to Bon Secours Hospital and later transferred to Children's Hospital.

Topic is head lice

The Health Education Council will host Ellen Champagne, R.N., from Cottage Hospital Monday, March 28, at 1 p.m. at Central Library.

Her topic will be head lice in school-age children. Parents will learn how their children can get head lice, how to treat it and, most importantly, how to prevent head lice from occurring.

Park DDA approves proposals

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park's Downtown Development Authority voted Monday to recommend council acceptance of a $2.5 to $3 million development proposed by Hilberry & Bologna for property on Jefferson Avenue between Nottingham and Westchester.

The DDA also approved a $3.1 million proposal by the Simon Group for a development at Jefferson Avenue and Barrington, the current site of a boarded-up Unocal station.

The Hilberry & Bologna proposal is nearly identical to a proposal by Fred Ruffner that was turned down by the council last fall after Nottingham and Westchester residents opposed zoning changes that would have accompanied the project.

The Hilberry & Bologna project differs from the Ruffner proposal by being a single unit and a one-phase project. The 30,000-square-foot building includes a 7,000-square-foot basement and does not require any zoning changes. The site is currently zoned OS-1 (professional offices) and B-1 (light retail businesses.)

Developers indicated that the project could begin immediately after council's approval.

The Simon Group's proposal for Barrington and Jefferson Avenue consists of a 30,000-square-foot two-story project. The developers indicated that they could begin work in August 1988 and had already had some funding commitments. In the plan, the existing bank would remain as an anchor tenant.

DDA Chairman Mike Maher said the group's decision to recommend these two proposals was based on several considerations: the size of the proposed building, how the building would fit aesthetically into the existing community, the purposes of the building, its adherence to the DDA's master plan for Jefferson Avenue, the proposed beginning date for construction and the provision for adequate parking for the building's use and size.

Proposals that were not recommended by the DDA for the Westchester/Nottingham site were:

- A 25,000-square-foot office building by Velick Properties Inc. One of the drawbacks to this proposal, according to Maher, was the stipulation that the city provide additional parking and that the city do some streetscaping.

- An 11,000-square-foot $1 million general office building with a colonial design.

- A 12,000-square-foot $1 million building by Piku Management Co.

- A $1.8 million 25,000-square-foot building by Geroge Stuckey & Associates.

- A proposal by the Simon Group for a $2.3 million 22,000-square-foot building designed for professional offices.

The alternate proposal for the Barrington Road site was by the Hilberry & Bologna partnership and required a commitment for property on both sides of Jefferson for future development.

The two recommendations will be presented to the Park council at its next regular meeting Monday, March 28.

Bid problems delay park renovations

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Improvements to the Woods Lakefront Park will be delayed slightly while the city rebids the projects, after apparent discrepancies in the bidding were discovered by the council Monday night.

Upon study, the council discovered that bids for the construction of a play area with wood tie walls, a wood trellis sunshelter, concrete walks and slab at the sunshelter and complete lighting and electrical systems were not all bid to the same specifications.

Some companies submitted bids on redwood and others on cedar, according to a letter received from one of the bidders. Redwood, the more expensive wood, was specified.

Also, due to alleged discrepancies on plans given to contractors, the specifications for cement and electrical work were different, effectively changing the project for each company, the letter said.

But it was with the playground equipment that the major discrepancies were discovered.

The lowest bidder and other contractors were not bidding on the same or equal projects, the council discovered. Changes in materials for a slide, and height of the slide caused some bids to be low. Also, certain pieces of equipment, such as a wave slide and rope climber, were not bid on by the two low bidders. More expensive c-spring type of spring animals for the playground were asked for by the city because they rock only back and forth, whereas coil spring animals rock sideways. Some bidders did not bid on the c-spring types, resulting in lower bids.

Mayor Pro Tem Robert Novitke said that although the city would normally give the award to the low bidder, if that meant the city would be "cheapening" the project, it shouldn't award the bid.

City to discontinue spraying elm trees

The city of Grosse Pointe will discontinue spraying public elm trees this season. The council approved the decision at Monday night's meeting and, in addition, voted to repeal an ordinance requiring property owners to spray private elm trees.

The application of a dormant methoxychlor spray on city trees has been part of the city's program for the prevention of Dutch elm disease for the last five years. The decision to discontinue was, in part, due to increased costs.

"The price of spraying has increased nearly 100 percent in the last five years," said Christine Matthew, administrative assistant. "We have $2,400 less in our budget than we need for spraying."

Council members discussed other methods for preventing the spread of Dutch elm disease and maintaining the city's trees — including injection of cacodylic acid, beetle traps, early pruning of diseased trees and planting new trees.

"The city doesn't have a forestry expert and the city can't say (to citizens) that spraying — or injections — or anything is the most effective method of prevention," said Councilman Robert L. Nugent.

The council also agreed to send a letter to citizens explaining the decision to discontinue spraying and encouraging voluntary participation in the spraying program. There was some discussion by the council concerning the provision of incentives for private citizens to have their elm trees injected or sprayed, but no decision was made.

Park cat burglar sentenced

According to Grosse Pointe Park police, Michael Anthony Parks, 29, was sentenced in circuit court last week to two to 15 years in prison for a series of cat-type burglaries in Grosse Pointe several years ago.

Parks was arrested Aug. 24, 1987 by Park officers while in possession of a VCR that was taken from a Lakepointe Road home. He eventually pleaded guilty and was linked to a series of 1986 and 1987 breaking and enterings in Detroit, the Park and several other Grosse Pointe cities.

Park resident comes full circle in party politics

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The Michigan Civil Service Commission: Everyone has heard of it, but what exactly is it and what is its function?

For John F. Dodge Jr., one of two Democrats on the four-member commission, it is the culmination of a lifetime of party politics and a complete circle of civic service.

A Park resident since 1961, Dodge was appointed to an eight-year term by Gov. William Milliken in 1979.

Dodge, who was deputy secretary of state under Gov. G. Mennen Williams and a member of the UAW, counts among his law specialties insurance law, corporate law and labor contracts. He believes these qualifications led to his appointment.

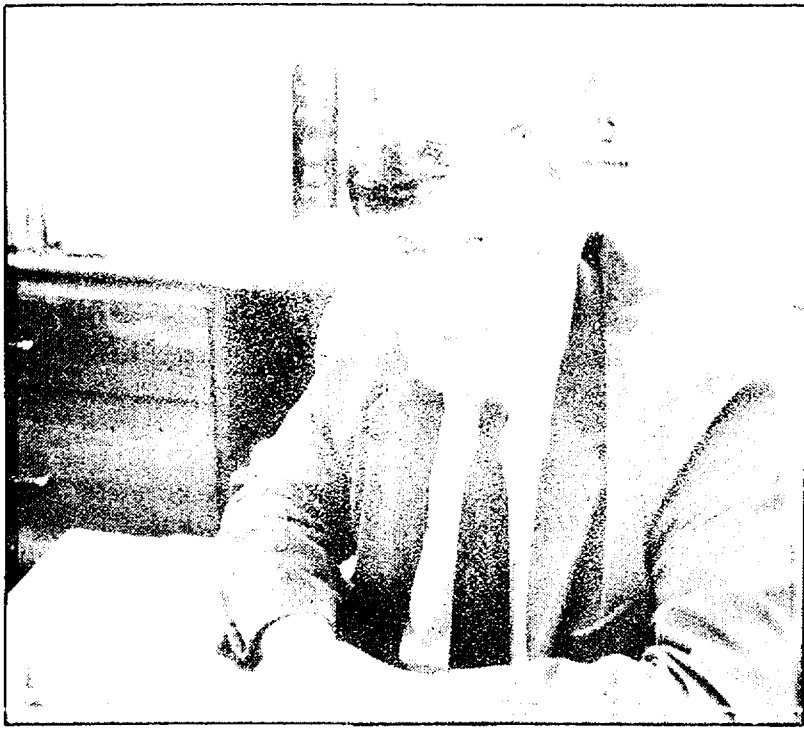

"The Michigan Civil Service Commission is a very unusual organization as civil service organizations go, because it is set in concrete in our constitution. In all other states, it is a creature of the legislature," he said.

Because it is in the state constitution, it is guaranteed and cannot be eliminated by a vote of the legislature.

It was formed in the 1930s when Michigan, and indeed the country, was in a state of political chaos. Every civil servant, from clerks to department heads appointed by elected officials, had job security at the whim of the elected party. Parties would come into power and eliminate the jobs of those who weren't of their party.

"Imagine what it must have been like for a person, with a family, and 15 years of service as a clerk, to have his job in jeopardy when a new party was elected," he said.

Not only were those who were party-affiliated targeted, employees with no expressed preference were also suspect and their jobs jeopardized too, he added.

"There was no protection for civil servants," he said. "You don't get quality political services that way."

A product of liberals and Democrats, the Michigan Civil Service Commission was first tried in the '30s as a product of the legislature, but when the next election changed the majority party, it was eliminated. After that it was incorporated into the Constitution, and reaffirmed in future state votes, he said.

"Our job is to create a professional classified service in Michigan that can serve the people properly and is free from political influence and motivation insofar as that is possible in a free and democratic society," he said.

The commission creates rules for hiring, firing, the firing appeal process and promotions.

Commission rules restrict classified employees from running for or holding office, for collecting political donations or signatures, or otherwise engaging in political activities while at work.

Dodge sees the commission's most recent ruling as the basic need for the Michigan Civil Service Commission.

Information was brought to the commission that a union program in December last year was used for Democratic party training. Although the commission does not know all the facts of incident, it appears that workers were given time off for union business, but instead attended a Democratic party training session.

The commission ruled that "administrative leave or release from work under other conditions for union business is proper — as long as the primary purpose of the meeting is not partisan politics."

Although the state workers union paid for the people to attend, the list of those who attended or didn't attend could potentially be used to label employees as party members or non-members, Dodge said.

"It's like the camel's head in the tent," he said. Once you let one thing go, no matter how small it may seem, pretty soon you have the whole animal. "Political pressure or political favoritism can have serious harmful effects on workers, and on their colleagues, if workers should happen to be ordered, encouraged or just allowed to skip work for politics," the commission stated.

It also noted that leave for union business is a provision of bargained contracts, and stated that when the commission approved current contracts, "union business" did not include partisan political training.

Dodge said he remembers feeling hindered by the commission when he worked for the government, because it did not allow him to identify co-workers by partisan politics. Now he is making and enforcing the very rulings he felt held him back.

Democrats today are questioning rulings much the way Dodge said he did in his day, something that Dodge finds ironic, because it was the Democrats who pushed so hard for the commission in the first place.

Dodge's term ends this year, and he is unsure whether he will ask to be appointed again.

The Michigan Lottery's exciting new instant game, "Cash Explosion," went on sale March 15. The following addresses why it is "the greatest scratch off game yet."

Q: How is Cash Explosion different?

A: This instant game gives players the highest payout and best odds ever offered by the Lottery.

Q: How much more is the payout?

A: Cash Explosion pays back 55 percent to winners, approximately 19% more than the average instant game. Over $15 million in cash prizes is up for grabs.

Q: What are the odds?

A: Including "Free Ticket" prizes, which players seem to enjoy, odds are about ONE IN THREE that a ticket will be among more than 10 million winners. These tickets would form a continuous string across the state from Ohio to Wisconsin.

Q: Do you play this game differently?

A: No. The format is similar to that of previous games. Scratching off a Cash Explosion ticket front reveals six symbols. Three matching amounts win that prize.

Q: How much can I win on a single ticket?

A: Player research has shown a preference for instant games with frequent, smaller prizes. To make sure there are a lot of winners in this game, the top prize is $100. More than 23,000 players could win this amount! There also are millions in $10, $5 and $2 prizes.

Q: How can I collect a Cash Explosion prize?

A: All prizes can be collected immediately at any of the nearly 8,000 Michigan Lottery retailers. Just sign and present your winning tickets.

Q: Will proceeds from this game aid schools?

A: As with all Lottery games, net revenues from Cash Explosion are earmarked for the state School Aid Fund to help support K-12 education. The Lottery contribution to the Fund has exceeded $100 million in each of the past two fiscal years. This is the equivalent of about $250 per household that otherwise might have had to come from taxes.

Senate school reform no aid to the Pointes

On first glance, we thought that the state Senate last week had made a good start on legislation to improve the way public schools are financed in Michigan by passing a bill to cut property taxes, raise the state sales tax by two cents and earmark more state money for education.

But after reading objections to the legislation raised by Rep. William R. Bryant Jr. of Grosse Pointe in an interview with Peter Salinas of the Grosse Pointe News, we changed our mind and agreed with Bryant that the plan would be a bad one from the viewpoint of the Grosse Pointe School District.

In fact, Bryant believes that the Senate bill was passed just to start legislative action on school financing reform. Thus, he added, it should not be regarded as a serious attempt to deal with the issues involved.

It is true, however, that with bipartisan support the bill passed 26 to 8, which is more than the two-thirds margin required to put the proposed sales tax increase on the ballot as an amendment to the state Constitution. However, House Democrats, who have not yet acted on the legislation, are expected to make some changes in it.

Opinion

By coincidence, the Senate acted in the same week in which many Grosse Pointers received notices of increases in their property assessments. Current law requires assessment at 50 percent of the market value while the bill passed last week would cut the assessment to 25 percent of the market value for residential and agricultural property and to 35 percent for commercial or industrial property. For homeowners, the proposed revision would mean a 50 percent cut in school property taxes, assuming rates remained at current levels.

Bryant pointed out, however, that while the Grosse Pointes, like other districts, would benefit from a reduction in property taxes, they would be at the state's mercy for the additional revenue needed to replace the property tax losses. And the level at which that support would be provided or even guaranteed would be open to some question.

Senate Majority Leader John Engler, Mount Pleasant Republican, doesn't agree with Bryant's analysis, however. He thinks that under the Senate bill, Grosse Pointe and other affluent districts would be protected constitutionally against any loss in funding. Yet it is true that the state in recent years has often failed to provide the funding promised to education in Michigan. That failure raises questions about any new promises.

As approved, the bill apparently had met one strong objection from Grosse Pointe and other wealthier school districts. It eliminated a proposed new cap on local school district financing, even though that proposal had been strongly recommended in some quarters as one way to equalize educational opportunities in Michigan.

But Bryant pointed out that the 50-mill tax limit now in effect might come into play if the Senate bill and the proposed cuts in property assessments were to become law. In other words, the 50-mill cap, while far above the current 31.7413 millage in the Pointes, could become effective if the Pointes had to double their own millage in order to compensate for the reductions in property assessments.

Nor is Bryant completely convinced that the switch from the property tax to the sales tax for the partial support of education is such a great idea. He pointed out, for example, that the sales tax tends to be a much less reliable producer of revenue in bad times than is the property tax.

In addition, he pointed out, a sharp reduction in residential property taxes would tend to increase property values and subsequent assessments. Finally, major reductions in assessments and property taxes would require revisions in the state's homestead exemption legislation which is highly beneficial to many homeowners.

With the bill moving from the Republican Senate to the Democratic House, the public can expect to see a good many revisions proposed by the governor and his Democratic colleagues. In the process of change that always accompanies such legislation, we hope the legislators will eliminate or revise the provisions that would apparently penalize the Grosse Pointe district by limiting its future freedom to set the taxes it needs to maintain its excellent school program.

As we've said, the Senate bill does offer a property tax cut to be offset by a two-cent sales tax increase and it also provides more school money overall to meet the needs of districts unable to finance an adequate educational program on their own. Such provisions could be a foundation to build on, but surely districts such as Grosse Pointe which can afford higher levies should not be subjected to any caps, whether old or new, that would be more likely to legislate mediocrity than excellence.

Justice for crime victims

In recent years, increasing attention has been paid to providing some assistance to the victims of crime.

In Michigan, the 1985 Crime Victims Rights Act encouraged restitution by those found guilty of stealing, but that aim has been difficult to achieve when the offenders are behind bars. So now the Michigan Legislature is considering HB 4164 to strengthen the 1985 approach.

The proposal was explained last week in a letter to the editor from Gary R. Dettloff, a Grosse Pointe Woods resident who practices law in Warren and chairs the Justice Fellowship Michigan Task Force, a non-profit citizens group supporting restitution and community service.

According to Dettloff, a bipartisan consensus has developed with legislators as politically diverse as Rep. Carolyn Kilpatrick, Detroit Democrat, and Sen. Jack Welborn, Kalamazoo Republican, supporting the punishment of selected offenders in the community.

The legislation would provide state grants to local governments to increase community punishments with boards of local citizens being appointed to oversee the program. But, according to Dettloff, many legislators are afraid of the headlines they would get if they supported HB 4164, presumably because they might be accused of being soft on crime.

Yet a Michigan State prison diversion study found in late 1986 that 300 to 700 state prisoners could be punished safely in the community each year. They would be carefully screened, nonviolent offenders who would work in the community and pay back the victims of their crimes.

Admittedly such a program would work only if properly administered and supervised to make sure that only the nonviolent offenders whose records had been carefully screened were eligible for the community punishment program. But surely local citizens appointed to local boards to oversee the program would have a strong interest in protecting their own communities from offenders who clearly would not qualify.

On the basis of Dettloff's explanation, the proposal appears to be worth at least a trial in Michigan.

Is it Dukakis in Michigan?

If Gov. Michael Dukakis comes home first in the Michigan Democratic caucuses next Saturday, he will become the favorite for the Democratic nomination for president even if he still won't have enough delegates to win on the convention's first ballot.

The Massachusetts governor's chances of winning more delegates than anybody else in Michigan's Democratic caucuses apparently continues to improve, although he is not expected to capture more than about one-third of the delegates. A Detroit News poll last Sunday showed Dukakis slightly ahead of Jesse Jackson in the delegate contest because his support is more evenly distributed around the state than Jackson's is.

The poll seemed to confirm the theory that the Michigan contest is now a two-way race between Dukakis and Jackson with Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt a poor third and with Sens. Albert Gore of Tennessee and Paul Simon of Illinois trailing far behind.

With all four of the white contenders remaining in the race, it appears likely that the white vote will be divided and that Jackson will come in at least second in view of his strong black support in Detroit. That contrasts with four years ago when strong opposition by Mayor Coleman Young reduced his Detroit support.

While Gephardt's protectionist trade policies have won support from many union leaders, the unions themselves are not taking an official stand. In addition, Gephardt's poor showing in the Super Tuesday contests no doubt hurt him in Michigan, and contributed to his low standing in the Michigan poll. He got only 10 percent compared with 33 percent for Dukakis and 31 percent for Jackson.

Mayor Young, who has personally endorsed Dukakis but has freed his own political associates to make their own choice, predicted at the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner Saturday night that after the Michigan caucuses, "We may say adios to Gore and Gephardt, not to mention Simon." He may well be correct.

Young reiterated his belief that Jackson could not be elected, but added that in view of the problems of the Reagan administration, "Maybe anybody can beat" the likely GOP nominee, George Bush. Asked by The Detroit News whether that included Jackson, Young replied, "Almost anybody." That would indicate the mayor is not yet ready to climb aboard the Jackson campaign train.

So far, the Democratic caucuses seem to have aroused little interest in the Republican Grosse Pointes, who were strongly supportive of George Bush in the 1980 presidential primary but split their votes between Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp in the 1988 GOP caucuses. Kemp since has dropped out of the race and Bush is regarded as almost a cinch for the GOP nomination.

While Bush has been widely reported to be the favorite GOP nominee by the Democrats, meaning they think he would be easier to beat than Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, national polls show otherwise. However, in Michigan, according to another Detroit News poll, the voters favor Dukakis over Bush. And he is the only Democrat to lead the vice president in the poll.

Re: Helicopters

To the Editor:

In the past, there has been much controversy over the landing of helicopter aircraft at St. John Hospital on 7 Mile and Mack.

Evidently, residents living north of the hospital have had many complaints of helicopter aircraft landing in the rear of the hospital. To those residents, I ask you to put yourself in the position of the patients who are in fact in those helicopters. Their lives depend on the speed, and capabilities of the choppers. If a few residents can't, put up with the noise of the helicopters a couple times a week, but can put up with the noise of sirens screaming in their ears from various ambulances that travel to the hospital every 10 to 20 minutes, why are they living there?

Yes to casino gambling

To the Editor:

Although Detroiters since 1976 have twice voted in opposition to casinos, casino gambling is again an issue due to the need for economic development on Belle Isle.

The legalization of casinos is hailed as an economic panacea by its proponents, providing jobs and tax revenue, with few public concessions. Casinos would bring in conventions and tourist dollars, stimulating many aspects of the economy.

The opponents criticize various moral issues, for example, increased crime, displacement of Belle Isle park rights, land speculation and various moral issues which would far outweigh its economic benefits. We, in my opinion, need more economic support for the Michigan Legislature to legalize gambling and better utilize Belle Isle.

I feel that additional task force members are needed to examine the issue, prepare factual data to assess whether or not Project Belle Isle will diminish crime, increase employment and enhance small businesses, generating tax dollars to a deficit-which has existed for years.

Certainly the clearest advantage of casino development would be the creation of jobs in the casinos and support the industries.

Belle Isle could, in fact, become aesthetically beautiful. Why not give it a face lift and expand tourists to an evergrowing border-city which unites two countries?

Questions

To the Editor:

I would not presume to comment about the fine points of Superintendent John Whritner's working relationship with Dr. Joseph Spagnoli. As a former board of education member with sustained interest in this school system, I do wish to point out some pertinent "history," some facts which were ignored in the board hearing, and pose some questions about personnel regulations which remain unclear.

1. This community of parents and taxpayers long demanded that analytical evaluations be made regularly of teacher performance.

2. There was insistence upon the development of a sophisticated system for evaluating the highest-paid staff members -- administrators within the schools and in central office.

What to write? What to write?

This is it. My first I Say. I've been wracking my brain for weeks to come up with a timely topic I could give a good treatment to. It had to be a topic I could write about with wit and insight to mark my entrance to the Pointes.

For weeks I've been thinking, worrying, writing down snippets of ideas and getting hints and tips from everyone from relatives to friends to friends of friends. Well, I got a lot of good ideas, but nothing really struck me. You know how that is?

Then I decided to look through the past few weeks of I Says and take some hints from there, but I'm not getting married, I don't have a dog, I'm not a mother, I'm not on jury duty and I don't know enough about Grosse Pointes to contrast them with people from the west side where I grew up. So I threw that idea out.

Someone asked me, "What do you think about? Pinpoint that, then write on it." But I thought and I thought and what I discovered is that I don't think about much. Well, not much that's printable, anyway. And not anything I could write 20 inches of copy on. That scared me. I started wondering what I actually do think about. In college I had my own weekly column in the campus newspaper and I almost never had a problem finding ideas then. And when I was the editor of The Marshall Chronicle, I didn't have too much trouble coming up with three editorials a week on subjects ranging from the arms race to the rat race to the local 10K race.

I Say

So then I had the idea I would write about the fact that as I get older, I seem to be thinking less, but I thought again and realized that was not something I wanted to admit in print for the entire city to read, so I scrapped that idea too.

Someone suggested I just introduce myself to the commu-ity, tell the readers a little about myself and say how swell it is for me to be working here. Well, I think that type of column is as boring to read as it is to write, so that ended up on the ever-growing column idea heap.

Someone suggested I write a column about how I can't come up with a column idea. "Oh, come on," I said. "That won't work. Who'd read it?"

I thought maybe I'd write about my search for an apartment out here and how I think for $700 a month I better not only get heat included, but food and maid service too. But I didn't want to insult anyone.

Then I thought I'd go the way of other great Detroit columnists and simply list things that bother me, but the first thing on that list was columnists who simply list things that bother them, so that idea ended with only one paragraph.

Someone else suggested I write a column about how I can't come up with a column idea. "Yeah," I said. "Someone else suggested that, too, but that's kind of a cop-out."

Then, I thought I would tell everyone the great secret of life that I discovered this past week-end while talking with friends during a four-hour drive to Columbus, Ohio. But the secret — that life goes on and that we must all play the cards we were dealt with the knowledge we have at that moment — was so simple and direct that I thought I must be wrong, so I thought I'd leave "the meaning of life idea" to greater writers than I, like Monty Python.

I thought I'd say how exciting it is that spring is almost here, but by the time this was printed, spring would be four days old, and this would be outdated. Then I realized I don't really like spring too much anyway.

Another writer suggested I just sit down and write what is on my mind at that moment. "Don't think it out, just write it. It always works for me," he said. So I tried it. I got my cup of coffee, sat down at the terminal and typed out everyone.

I thought, and I wrote, then I thought some more, and wrote some more and when I looked up, I had written my column and realized I have six more weeks before my next I Say to come up with a real idea.

Gee, this wasn't too hard after all.

Valiant effort

Everyone in the news office was a little sadder after hearing of the death of Donald Wollenzin.

Mr. Wollenzin was rescued Saturday from the frigid waters of Lake St. Clair, through the combined efforts of four Grosse Pointe officers and a well-known local diver.

Seems everyone in the Pointes knows Leon Sehojan. Monday, when we spoke with him, he was elated upon hearing that Mr. Wollenzin was doing better and had, at least, a chance for survival.

"What greater gift can one human being give another than saving his life," Sehojan said. "I can't tell you how great I feel that the guy has a chance at making it."

We didn't talk with him when we heard of Mr. Wollenzin's death, but we're sure that the loss of the man's life has drained him, and everyone involved with the rescue, emotionally and physically.

Farms Cpl. Otto Glanert, Sgt. Sam Cardella, firefighter Gary Luzier, and Grosse Pointe Officer James Fox jumped into the frigid water in an attempt to rescue the submerged man.

We heard that one of the officers, who has had some health problems, didn't think twice when it came to jumping into the ice-cold water. Upon hearing of his death, he said he would do it again.

These men, though not from the same department, worked together as a team.

Perhaps some people aren't aware of the kind of situations these officers are faced with on a daily basis. It is easy to berate the police department after you get a parking or speeding ticket, but it is hard to jump into cold water without the proper equipment.

Farms to host Easter egg hunt

The Grosse Pointe Farms Parks and Recreation Department will sponsor an Easter egg hunt Saturday, April 2, at 10 a.m. The event is also supported by the Grosse Pointe Farms Boat Club.

The hunt will be held at Pier Park and is open to all Farms children from 2 to 12 years old.

Parents should accompany their children, who should gather at the park at 9:45 a.m. and should be appropriately dressed for the weather.

The event is free and the Easter bunny will give out special gifts to participating children afterward.

The New York Times reported that the French government cautioned the United States and other members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization against requesting excessive delays for the completion of the evacuation of foreign military installations from France. The United States declared it would comply with the French request for withdrawal from bases in France, but added that the suggested French deadline of April 1, 1967 was too soon and might "jeopardize the security interests of all members of the alliance."

Concern over the political crisis in South Vietnam was voiced in Congress as senators spoke of the need to make "reappraisals" and reach "new decisions" if the Saigon government could not solve its problems. As the struggle between the military government and the Buddhist leaders sharpened, most senators, including several who had been critical of administration policy, withheld comment. It appeared they did not want to make President Johnson's burden heavier.

The Southern Leadership Christian Conference, headed by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., called on the Johnson administration to abandon the ruling military junta of South Vietnam and consider withdrawing from the country altogether. Although King had spoken against American involvement in the war before, this was the first time that his organization had taken a formal stand against it.

3. Knowing that accountability to the community is the basis for financial support, boards of education for at least 24 years have pushed for a formalized program for evaluating staff members. I doubt there has been any change in our early expectations that "evaluation" would include not only the quality of job performance, but assistance toward enhanced future performance in the classroom or in operating the schools.

4. It would be doubtful if anyone involved failed to recognize the sensitive nature of an evaluation program, or the courage required of building principals and top administrators to meet their responsibilities in this area. Anyone's personnel file and self-image are of vital importance.

5. Does a superintendent of schools, or the one to whom he might delegate the task, have any rights of privacy in personnel matters communicated to the board of education?

6. How do Dr. Whritner and the board intend to reconcile the expectations of the community for valid job appraisals, with meeting demands of administrative personnel to have negative points purged from their superintendent-to-board evaluation summaries?

7. If the evaluation of administrators is compromised, how can that of classroom teachers be justified?

8. Who asked that the most recent evaluation capsules be prepared? (this superintendent, whose greatest talent may be his truly superb writing and speaking ability, would be aware that no summary keeps the exact flavor of the original document.)

9. Why are/were summaries needed? Are the complete evaluations confidential within the superintendency and not available to board trustees? If so, is this a matter of the Michigan School Code, labor law, administration policy? Or are trustees unable to devote the tremendous amount of time necessary to read the files in entirety?

Some "history", as I recall it:

10. It is generally known that the Grosse Pointe School System, at the urging of board and community, has been a pioneer in the development of evaluation procedures. Other school systems have looked to the local program as a real milestone in upgrading children's education.

11. Despite the usually brief tenure of five superintendents, plus an acting superintendent, Dr. Spagnoli is the one — with a small handful of others — who researched, developed, and gave sustained effort to this evaluation program.

12. As a devoted supporter of this school system, I have dreaded the day Dr. Spagnoli would eventually retire. In whom else could the community have had such confidence, when he was asked to assume the acting superintendency upon the death of his predecessor? Or in taking over at South High School, with one or two days' notice.

13. Much like an assistant principal assigned to student behavior, there is often a "whipping boy" in a chain of command. But is it right and proper to penalize the messenger, when the message is not as glowing as all concerned might wish?

What degree of courage can this community expect from its school and central office leadership in the near future?

Will they avoid any assignment dealing with shortcomings of subordinates, might "rock the boat," or require back-up from their leader?

Higbie House should be preserved

To the Editor:

The 1870s was a period of intriguing social competition, for better and for worse, amongst America's wealthiest families.

For better was the construction of the William K. Vanderbilt House on the then unfashionable Fifth Avenue. It was an architectural gem; the French chateau-like structure, designed by Richard Morris Hunt, beckoned for and successfully attracted many admirers. One admirer was the architect Charles Follen McKim of McKim, Mead and White. Paying the ultimate tribute to his rival's work, McKim stated that "I can sleep better at night knowing it's there."

In more scientific terms, the Vanderbilt House provided external economies to its community. Albeit most families could never enjoy the lifestyles associated with Vanderbilts, they could share the pleasing aesthetic exterior view of the Vanderbilt House. Consequently, families moved to this community, nearby property values rose, and the unfashionable Fifth Avenue became fashionable. Thus the Vanderbilt House, through its beauty, provided economic benefits to the community for which the Vanderbilts received no compensation.

Similarly the Harley Higbie House in Grosse Pointe Farms now provides external economies to its community. Designed by George Mason, who also designed the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island, this Georgian mansion and the surrounding meadows offer a landmark view to individuals bicycling, motoring, and walking up Moran Road to adjacent neighborhoods. This landmark view also results in higher property values in adjacent neighborhoods.

Moreover, the marketing mix that produced the attractive communities of Grosse Pointe stem from the external economies generated by the large lakefront mansions, the surrounding green space, and the lake. Two of these elements are now disappearing, and therefore external economies are also disappearing. This loss is not a positive trend in encouraging the aesthetic desirability of the community and the corresponding high property values of the community on a long-term basis.

In response to current trends, I believe that it's in Grosse Pointe's interest to preserve the original character of the Harley Higbie House and its grounds. Mindful of the objectives of many who are concerned with this property, I'd like to offer two suggestions. First, owners of this property should be granted property tax relief in that the present use of the house and the grounds aids in lifting local real estate values, and the owners deserve compensation in possessing a product which generates these benefits.

Second, in light that the alternative of maintaining this property as a single-family residence is economically unfeasible when compared to other alternatives, the alternatives of transforming the mansion and other structures on the property into condominiums should be analyzed.

For example, one plan might include dividing the mansion into two or three condominiums, dividing the servants' quarters and garage into three condominiums, clustering three to four additional condominiums along Grosse Pointe Boulevard at the rear edge of the property, adding a swimming pool and a tennis court and granting property tax relief to condominium owners.

Tax relief seems reasonable in that the property would fairly well retain its original exterior character and continue to provide external economies to the community. This plan would result in a very appealing multi-family residential development, produce a good return on investment for the developer (the property tax relief would raise condominium prices above those prices found in a similar development which lacks property tax relief), and produce additional tax revenue and high property values for the community.

Redevelopment of old estates into condominiums, combined with an emphasis toward preserving the original character of the mansion and the grounds, is neither a pipedream nor a new idea; rather this alternative has been successfully used in redeveloping Constitution Hill, the former Perry Morgan estate in Princeton, and The Orchard, the former Charles E. Merrill estate in Southampton.

The first example is a 30-room Jacobean mansion and carriage house which is now divided into eight condominiums, and other condominiums are clustered on the grounds.

The Harley Higbie House and the manicured grounds are slated for demolition, and 18 pleasant, yet nondescript homes will be built on the property.

Still, the community should be aware of the external economies associated with this development and compare them with the external economies associated with an alternative that attempts to preserve the original exterior character of the property.

You pays your money and you takes your choice.

June 11, followed by the Opera Ball at the Masonic Temple. She's been busy coordinating things like Opera Ball invitation-addressing parties and Luciano Pavarotti Look-Alike contests. And the bottom line is, after all that effort, she might — just might — be able to sneak a peak at the great Italian tenor sometime during his performance.

"I'll probably be busy running around backstage making sure everything is going right and getting ready for the Opera Ball. I hope I can glean even a tiny bit of his performance. I just want to hear him for three minutes. That's enough. He's just magic, you know?"

Ingwersen jokes that Pavarotti is one of only three men in the world for whom she'd leave her husband Rick Ingwersen. "And I'm not even sure about 'The Pav' anymore, since he changed performance dates on us a couple of times," Ingwersen teases, laughing her trademark throaty chuckle.

"No really, it's all been fun, this Pavarotti thing. I mean, how many times can you go to a luncheon and get 'The Pav' on the horn? Only here," Ingwersen says, referring to last month's MOT luncheon when Pavarotti spoke to the assembly via telephone.

The changes in Pavarotti's schedule and the hundreds of other details that go into a production like this present a challenge for Ingwersen. And she loves it.

"I look forward to things like this. It's a lot of work but it's also a lot of fun. I want to be around people, meeting them and learning from them. And I get a lot of opportunity to do that here."

Ingwersen has spent a major portion of her life traveling around meeting people. She was born in St. Louis but grew up in various parts of the country when the seven Murphy children followed their father, a vice president for Monsanto, on his business transfers.

"I had just finished school back east and decided I'd try Michigan. I stayed here a while as assistant to the head mistress at Bloomfield Country Day School, then I transferred to Cleveland to take the unlikely sounding job of Dean of Girls at what had been up until then an all-boys school," Ingwersen recalls.

She spent what she calls five "idyllic" years at Cleveland's Hawken School as director of counseling and assistant to the head of the upper school. She also taught French and coached field hockey. And married Rick Ingwersen.

The Ingwersens enjoyed a commuter marriage; Rick Ingwersen worked here in Michigan and flew home to Cleveland on weekends. "I still think about the romance of commuting. It was perfect. We'd work all week and then have the wonderful weekends to look forward to. And if Rick had his choice, he'd live on planes because that's where he can get his work done."

"But the constant traveling took its toll on him, so I came back to Michigan without a job."

That didn't last long. One day, while painting the walls of the old, remodeled barn she and Rick lived in out in Oakland county, she was visited by a trustee from Bloomfield Hills Academy/Bloomfield University School. They offered her the school's headmistress job on the spot. She accepted and was back in the education field, where she stayed for five years.

"But there were other things I wanted to do, to try. The school was in a good position and I felt I could leave and do some of those things I'd put off," Ingwersen says. So she left the school, traveled with Rick and by herself, and even wrote: finishing a cookbook for college students and traveling to France for research on a children's book — written in French.

Ingwersen, who now lives in a Grosse Pointe Park carriage house, started to get involved in grassroots volunteering and soon, her name was mentioned whenever a good, dependable volunteer was needed.

"I guess it is sort of like getting on a mailing list. Once an organization gets your name as a viable volunteer and your dedication becomes known, you are in demand. But volunteers as a whole are more in demand now than ever before," she says.

"Women have gone back into the workforce and are raising children later, so there are fewer volunteers to fill the jobs."

Ingwersen says that she sought out organizations which would utilize her considerable experience and talent. Somehow, she and those organizations found one another and she hasn't had many free moments since.

Ingwersen has completed decent training at the Detroit Institute of Arts, has served in a variety of capacities with the Junior League, and is, in fact, preparing to devote her required 25 hours to the League's Designers' Showhouse project this spring... right in the middle of Pavarotti planning. And she still manages to take a cooking class and a course on Rembrandt Saturday mornings at the DIA.

"I can't sleep on Fridays, I'm so excited about that Saturday morning class. That's how I feel about a lot I'm involved in. So it's great to have a husband like Rick who isn't waiting at the door when I come home, asking 'What's for dinner?'. He even laughs when I tell him what we are having for dinner: 'Olives, dear. Would you like black or green?'" Ingwersen jokes.

"Anyway, he understands because he's pretty involved in community activities himself. He knows that I do it because I love it."

"Anything I volunteer for I do for fun. It's important for me to be justly be involved. That's my meat."

Working on making a hand-printed, hand-drawn book from scratch are 5-year-olds Sharletta Martin and Oliver Saner, assisted by St. Ambrose Academy kindergarten teacher Mary Craparotta of Grosse Pointe Shores.

St. Ambrose Read-a-thon more fun than playtime

When St. Ambrose Academy hosted its annual Read-a-thon Day, students came to school wearing casual clothes and they brought sleeping bags to lounge on classroom floors while they explore every aspect of learning to appreciate and read books.

Eighth graders alternated between reading teacher-approved books and reading to pre-schoolers. Videos were shown and first-through fourth-graders worked with books and tapes.

But the highlight of the day for kindergarteners was creating another book — their second.

"They would rather learn to read and write than play," said teacher Mary Craparotta.

St. Ambrose Academy is located at 1091 Alter Road on the Detroit/Grosse Pointe Park border. It offers classes for pre-schoolers through the eighth grade as well as a day care center.

Italian student enjoys U.S.

A year ago, Luca Casertano of Italy applied to become an AFS exchange student.

"When I first arrived last August, I had to work very hard just to understand people speaking English all the time," he said. "My host family, the Fred Schultzes, helped me select classes at Grosse Pointe North, then encouraged me to join the soccer team so I'd get to know kids right away without having to speak so much."

In Italy Casertano attends a classical high school in Rome, where his studies include Greek, Latin and philosophy. He has chosen an academic program at North, but left time to try new things, such as wrestling.

"Entering a new school is hard, but now I have many friends," he said. "I learn from them and they learn from me. When I return to Italy, I will know something of how Americans think and feel, and I will understand my own country better too."

Casertano is in Grosse Pointe under the auspices of AFS International Programs, which sponsors high school exchanges in 52 countries. The Grosse Pointe chapter has been active for almost 20 years.

Exchange students live with a host family for 11 months, participating in family life and attending school. They take part in school activities as well as area-wide AFS activities. Most host families include teenage children, but it is not a requirement.

"Many Grosse Pointe families have an interest in other countries along with the personal flexibility to include another teenager in their household," says Ann Nicholson, AFS representative.

AFS is now interviewing families who have an interest in

On Friday, April 29, Alexandra Blatt, Ryan Farrell, Nelson Mitchell and Dena Wright will travel to the University of Michigan Dearborn campus to share their writing samples with other young authors from the Detroit metropolitan area, and participate in a planned writing experience.

St. Clair writing fair

St. Clare of Montefalco School is presenting a Creative Writing Fair today from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. and Friday, March 25, from 8:30 to 11 a.m.

Children from kindergarten through the eighth grade have been writing stories, books, poetry, articles, letters, reports and newspapers since September. The teachers and children, together, have been exploring new ways to improve writing skills, in school and at home.

Dog training classes to begin

The St. Clair Shores Recreation Department will offer dog training classes beginning Wednesday, March 30, at the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena, 20000 Stephens, 194 and 9 Mile.

There will be beginners obedience, intermediate advanced obedience and the conformation show handling class. Fee for the eight-week, one hour a week, classes are $40.

Student Spotlight

Noel Mandich Rozny

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The following was written by Noel Mandich Rozny, a second-grader at Maire School. She is the daughter of Michael Rozny and Christine Mandich of the City.

The Attic

It was a warm summer morning. The moving van was parked in the street. Sarah finished packing. She said to her room: Goodbye. I will miss you and I will always remember you!

Sarah walked down the stairs, dragging her suitcase behind her. "OK, Mom, I am ready to go," Sarah said.

After they got their things in the moving van, they drove to the new house. It was beautiful!

The next morning, Sarah got up. She could smell bacon and eggs cooking in the kitchen. Yum! thought Sarah as she got dressed. Then she noticed a little envelope on her dresser that said: To Sarah. She opened it and inside she found a piece of paper. She read: Sarah, meet me in the attic after breakfast. P.S. Bring a flashlight with batteries and a pencil and paper.

At breakfast Sarah was in a hurry to get done. She asked one quick question. "Mom, why did you move here?"

"Well, it is closer to your school." "OK," said Sarah. Then she went to her room and got her things and went up to the attic.

"Boo!" shouted something from behind her. Sarah screamed. It was Brian, her brother.

"OK," she said. "What do you want me for?" "Well, I wanted to explore with you." "OK," said Sarah. Then she said, look at this trunk. She said, let's open it. He said, OK. Inside they found a book. What is it? asked Sarah. "It is a . . . diary!!"

They opened it. Inside it said: This diary belongs to Steve B. Tibits. Date started 1820, September 12. Date finished 1825, January 2.

"Wow!" said Brian. "Jeepers!!" said Sarah. "Write it down,"

Noel Mandich Rozny

said Brian.

"OK," said Sarah. On her paper with the pencil, she wrote: Diary in trunk. Then they looked around.

"Hey! Brian, let's go outside," said Sarah.

"Why? Because it is so nice out. Besides I heard it is going to rain tomorrow, so I want us to be able to explore some more tomorrow."

"OK," said Brian.

This space is open to any student in the Grosse Pointe public or private school system from grades 1 through 12.

A step back in time

Laura Aronson stands in front of a painting of a Dixieland band that should look familiar to students. The faces belong to University Liggett teachers.

University Liggett students, teachers and parents celebrated the school's annual family supper Feb. 19 by stepping back a century in Liggettville, a 19th century village created in the lower school.

Parent volunteers under the direction of designer Robert Hawley created the old-time atmosphere.

Hawley, whose most noted achievements include the restoration of Art House, a 20-room Gothic mansion in Detroit, brought everyone's ideas to life.

Details such as a mural of a Dixieland jazz band, painted by art historian Michael Farrell, posed Lower School teachers with musical instruments in a Victorian-style lattice work bandstand.

"I wanted a tribute to the late Henry Ford II, so I remembered his love of New Orleans jazz," said Hawley, who donned black tails dating from the 1890s. The outfit originally belonged to Otto Scherer, whose home on Kirby in Detroit is now the Children's Museum.

Also created were Henrietta's Tea Room and Thorn's Dress Shop which gave visitors a glimpse of an era of candlelit stained glass windows and Victorian gowns. When they were done strolling, visitors headed to the Eagle Tavern for dinner.

Nostalgic chores such as butter-churning and candle-dipping, provided by the Troy Museum, along with an old-fashioned cider press and a printing press, offered hands-on experiences for the students while an amusement park with turn-of-the-century games drew large crowds.

Mary Messina, the program's coordinator, said she was pleased with the evening's events.

She said the remarks of two Upper School students summed up the evening best: "Why didn't they ever have anything like this when we were in the Lower School?"

Bean bag toss has been around for a long time and Andrew Ricci tries his hand at the venerable game.

The Eagle Tavern was a busy place. Patrons included Linda Aronson holding daughter Laura, Dr. David Aronson, Joseph Cobb and Carmen Harlan Cobb.

Art highlights Defer's Back-to-School Night

Artwork of every imaginable medium, size, color and texture lined the halls and covered the walls of Defer Feb. 24 for Back-to-School Night. The student art show filled two floors and featured clay sculptures, needlework pillows, papier mache masks, woven self-portraits and paintings. More than 600 students, parents and teachers attended and each student had at least one piece of artwork on display.

Local officials react to school finance reform bill

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Heralded as a major breakthrough in the effort to develop a new way for Michigan to finance its public education system, local legislators and school officials don't believe the bill passed by the state Senate last week will remain in its current form.

The bill, which would cut school property taxes by 50 percent, raise the state's sales tax by two cents on the dollar and earmark 12 percent of the state's budget for education, passed in the Senate by 26-8 with bipartisan support.

The bill, however, did not receive the support of state Sen. John Kelly.

"The bill was patched together during the last minutes of the session," Kelly said. "During all the revisions, I was able to get an amendment which removed a cap on the number of mills a district could levy to fund itself."

Senate Majority Leader John Engler said he supported the bill, and while he understands it will face changes in the House, he feels the move was significant in that it got the Legislature started in the school finance reform process.

"This bill will not hurt wealthy districts," Engler said. "It is a simple concept. We lower property taxes by 50 percent and raise the sales tax by 50 percent. We also guarantee constitutionally that every dollar that a district loses by the decrease in property taxes will be made up by the state from the increase in the sales tax. This will mean an additional $250-$350 million more for education."

Engler said the bulk of the increase in the sales tax will go toward property tax relief.

The Senate Fiscal Agency estimates that the Senate bill would result in a tax shift from property tax to sales tax, with about $130 million net tax increase by 1990.

Residential property taxes would be reduced by lowering the state equalized value from 50 percent to 25 percent of market value. This would represent about a 30 percent reduction in overall residential property taxes and a 50 percent reduction in school operating taxes.

Commercial and industrial property SEV would be reduced from 50 percent of market value to 35 percent for school operating.

Raising the sales tax by two cents would generate about $1.56 billion in 1990.

Kelly said he was not satisfied that wealthier school districts such as Grosse Pointe would not be affected negatively by the tax shift. He said changes in the plan came so quickly at the end of the session that what was approved was a 180-degree shift from what had been discussed earlier in the day.

Kelly said there was one provision of the plan he agreed with totally — a reworking of the Homestead Property Tax Credit, so that senior citizens would pay almost nothing for school education.

Kelly said he has supported this for several years.

Rep. William Bryant said he did not believe that the Senate plan has any chance of survival in its current form. He, too, said the plan was put together hastily.

"There is no reason to take this as a serious proposal," Bryant said. "It is not a serious attempt to deal with the issues."

Bryant said he is not sure that moving from the stability of a property tax to the instability of a state sales tax to finance education is a wise move.

"Sales tax revenues did not decline during the last recession," Bryant said, "but there is no reason why they can't decline in the next recession."

Bryant said that for affluent school districts, such as Grosse Pointe, the plan puts them in the "untenable position of having to depend on the state for its revenue."

He said that over the years, though the school districts were guaranteed categorical aid for a variety of programs, many districts were denied that aid when the state reached a fiscal crisis and after the crisis had subsided.

Bryant said he and others are pursuing a variety of statutory alternatives in the area of school financing. Raising the sales tax requires a constitutional amendment. This means any plan must receive a vote of two-thirds of the Legislature and a favorable vote by the electorate.

Bryant said he is not convinced voters would agree to a sales tax hike, even with property tax relief, if the bottom line is a tax increase.

Grosse Pointe Education Association President Doris Cook said the Michigan Education Association board, of which she is a member, does see the Senate plan as good news.

She said the MEA views the move as serious attempt to get a proposal, if not in this current form, on the ballot in August.

"We view the 12 percent guarantee of the state's budget for education as very important," Cook said. "We also want at least one full cent of the two-cent increase to go to education."

Cook said that under the current plan, most of the sales tax increase would go toward property tax relief. The MEA and Equal Partners for Education, a broad-based coalition of educators and concerned citizens, are looking for a plan that will improve the inequities between school districts around the state and at the same time add new programs, especially for pre-school students.

"We hope a plan will come out of the House by the end of the month," Cook said, "so we can get it on the August election ballot."

Chris Fenton, director of business affairs for the Grosse Pointe schools, said that without all the details of the Senate's plan, he has mixed feelings on what he had heard.

He said the good news was that the plan allows wealthier districts to raise millage rates without a cap, but noted it does put the district in the position of having to depend on the state for revenue.

Fenton added that the creation of a pool of money to address the inequities of financing around the state is a good idea. SEV per student ranges from a high of about $7,700 in the wealthiest district to a low of about $2,200.

"I would like to see us stay with a property tax," Fenton said. "I think in the short term switching to a sales tax will address some of those inequities, but not in the long term."

Fenton added that while the Grosse Pointe school system was entitled to categorical aid, the district saw reductions. He said there is no reason to assume that the state will absolutely abide by constitutional amendment to make up the what a district would receive in property taxes from the increase in sales tax.

"I think it is still a flawed plan," Fenton said. "With this plan, you still have to go to the voters to increase their taxes. Even with the heavy push from the lobby groups, I don't think people will agree to a 50 percent increase in sales taxes."

Woods crime hotline in operation

A new Crime Information Hotline, operated by the Grosse Pointe Woods Crime Prevention Bureau, is now operating and informing residents about crime in the city.

The hotline is located in the public safety department and consists of a pre-recorded message that will give information on local crime activities, special alerts and crime prevention tips.

Callers can dial 343-2421 to hear the message.

"We will be updating the message regularly," said crime prevention Officer Sally Beghin. "I only know of two other communities in the area — Clinton Township and St. Clair Shores which have similar systems."

The hotline will operate 24 hours a day, seven days a week. It will keep residents informed about criminal activity in a certain area, such as car thefts, break-ins or door-to-door scams.

The first message on the tape dealt with car thefts. Tips included always locking a car; keeping it overnight in a locked garage; using a burglar alarm or installing a kill switch; and never keeping a vehicle registration or anything with the owner's address in the vehicle.

Nursing center to be featured

The St. John-Bon Secours Continuing Care Center, the area's newest nursing and residential housing center for older adults, will be featured on Grosse Pointe Cable TV News during the week of March 28.

The program, on Channel 32, will air daily at 12:30 p.m. and 2:30 a.m., as well as Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Sunday at 7:30 p.m. and Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 5:30 p.m.

Dale Pelton, chief executive officer and administrator of the facility, will be interviewed on the project. A residential care facility offering housing for 100 older adults requiring non-medical supervision and assistance with daily living activities, such as meals, housekeeping, laundry and self-administered medications, is being prepared for an early summer opening.

A nursing center, scheduled for mid-summer opening, for older adults requiring skilled or basic nursing care, will provide 24 hour care a day by registered and licensed practical nurses. This center will offer 150 beds in private and semi-private rooms.

Hill merchants react to parking shortage

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

With construction of the 522-space parking deck on the Hill now under way and the elimination of most leased spaces, parking for customers and those who work there will be a problem. But merchants agree that a little consideration and cooperation will ease the situation.

At last Thursday's Hill Association meeting, President Wayne Wegner said, "We're seeing some problems already and I only think it's going to get worse."

One way to alleviate the situation is for merchants and employees to do everything possible to keep meter spaces free, association members agreed.

Cottage Hospital is shuttling its employees to work from off-site lots. It has worked out an arrangement with Grosse Pointe for Hill employees to park in its lot at Mack and Rivard and be shuttled to work and back. Shuttle times are limited, however, and although it is scheduled to accommodate the most common work schedules, it cannot work for everyone.

But some Hill employees have expressed displeasure at parking off-site and being shuttled to work, saying they would feel stranded all day — that if they wanted to come early or leave late or needed to leave for an emergency, it would be difficult to get to their cars.

Merchants said they hoped that customers who find it difficult to park now would not go elsewhere to do their shopping.

"It's going to be hard," said Sandy Gillespie of Something Special, 85 Kercheval, "but the end result (the parking structure) is great. It's worth the inconvenience."

She said if people will cooperate by carpooling, walking to work if possible when the weather is nice, parking on a side street and walking a little farther, it will open up the meter spaces for Hill shoppers.

Educating shoppers that certain Hill businesses are open later on Thursdays and that on Saturdays school lots are available for parking will ease the situation, she added.

Pat Reynolds of the League Shop, 72 Kercheval, said the situation could be helped by making sure the metered spaces are turned over by increased police enforcement.

"We've just got to make sure the meter spaces stay open, especially those in front of the shops," she said. If people know they will get a ticket, they won't leave their car there all day, she added.

Another business owner is fed up with the parking situation and said something should have been done earlier.

Leon Sehoyan of Coiffures by Leon, 112 Kercheval, said enforcement of parking meters, especially those on Kercheval, should have started a long time ago. That way space would be left open for customers. He added that a meter maid, not a police officer, should be in charge of enforcement.

"The Farms has very dedicated and professional police, and I think we're being short-changed when we have to call them away from a crime detail to have them enforce meters," he said. "The head chef at a good restaurant wouldn't do the dishes. (This) is the same thing."

For merchants and employees on the Hill, Sehoyan said, "Right now I think the answer is Greg Vasse's (vice president of Cottage Hospital) shuttle service. That seems to be a workable solution."

Until the parking deck is built, he said he is sure the merchants will "suffer a great deal," because people are going to shop where they can park.

"We knew it was coming," Pat Reynolds said. "And it's no worse than Christmastime."

When summer comes, the lot at Richard School will be available to ease some parking problems, according to Farms City Clerk Richard Solak.

Woods puts hold on revisions

The Grosse Pointe Woods City Council tabled voting on the proposed court/council revisions until it's determined how much money the city has and where it will come from.

At a special meeting March 14, the council examined two new plans that did not, as previous plans had done, flip the court/council chambers, a savings of some $126,000.

Additions and a new entrance-way, as well as rearranging some offices and counterspace, were designed to make city hall, and especially the courtroom, more user-friendly and convenient for citizens.

The council agreed something had to be done to correct the traffic problem inside the building, which hampers production each Wednesday when the court is in session.

Councilman William Wilson said the situation should be fixed as soon as possible, so residents are not "treated like second-class citizens," because they must park a distance from the entrances and because they are shuffled around when they get inside.

The council also is asking for input from city and court employees before it approves any plans.

The council will discuss financing the project at a later date.

Charges

The board asked few questions of Spagnoli after the March 15 meeting. Board Secretary Carol Marr said she did not feel in a position to ask questions of the deputy superintendent, since the board was provided with Spagnoli's 33-page statement only minutes before the board convened. Other board members agreed.

Since the evaluations first became known to the administrators in late-December 1987, Whritner has met with administrators, and they have met in closed session with the board and also with Spagnoli and a sub-committee of the board.

"As a taxpayer with three children in this school district, I think there is a horrible lack of professionalism and leadership on the part of the superintendent," English said. "This matter has been handled like a public circus. . . . The superintendent has actively engaged in a highly improper manner and (formed) a lynch group."

English added that Whritner issued a gag order to Spagnoli, leaving him no way to respond to the charges and to have no chance to communicate his side of the story to the administration and staff members.

Whritner told the board the practice of writing evaluation summaries began about six years ago when Kenneth Brummel was superintendent.

Board members had requested administrator's evaluations. Brummel, said Whritner, argued it would be cumbersome to provide the entire evaluation document and asked board members if summaries would be sufficient. Board members agreed to the compromise.

"Over that six-year period, it is now obvious that the summaries were done without the knowledge of the administrative staff and that many bear no resemblance to the original evaluations," Whritner told the board. "They were not summaries as Webster defines them, but revised evaluations. Both Dr. Brummel and Dr. Spagnoli followed the similar pattern, although Dr. Spagnoli was not aware of Dr. Brummel's precedent."

Whritner admitted to "personal shortcomings" regarding the summaries. He said he assumed that the summaries were shared with administrators and that they were actually summaries and not revised evaluations.

"I had participated with Dr. Spagnoli in the evaluation process," Whritner told the board. "I had read the evaluations. I, therefore, did not think it necessary to do so with summaries."

Whritner added he believed that board members were making a basic assumption — that the summaries provided to them by Spagnoli were actually summaries and shared with administrators.

In his statement to the board, Spagnoli said it is common knowledge that he did not begin the process of preparing evaluation summaries, and when he came to Central Office from his position as South High principal in 1984, he did not know of the practice of preparing summary evaluations.

He said he prepared the summaries for each of about 32 administrators and has continued to do so throughout his time as deputy superintendent.

Spagnoli said that in reviewing Brummel's evaluation summaries, he learned these contained great discrepancies from the evaluations.

"The practice of brief summary reports of evaluations with considerable literary license is well-established," Spagnoli wrote. "These summaries were never intended to substitute for the formal evaluations."

Whritner said he took over the duty of preparing new summaries and with providing the administrators with copies.

Three spokespersons from the administration met with the board in closed session on Jan. 18.

"Some members of our group believe that their professional futures have been affected by these inaccurate, distorted summaries," said Whritner of the administrators' comments. "Some administrators feel they have been slandered."

Whritner said among his main questions for Spagnoli in the area of evaluations is why was it necessary to be so totally derogatory and demeaning to some administrators and why did Spagnoli provide little or no assistance in resolving the issue?

Among Spagnoli's charges against Whritner, aside from charging him with a lack of leadership, was that Whritner was planning to leave the district. He said, through his attorney, that Whritner did not want to take responsibility for such things as a decrease in the district's Michigan Education Achievement Program (MEAP) scores and was blaming the district's problems on him.

Whritner flatly denied that he was planning to leave the district.

partment at Wayne State University.

He was president of the Michigan Parkinson's Foundation, a private, non-profit organization that provides education and support for the more than one million people nationwide who are stricken with Parkinson's Disease. Because of Dr. Bauer's work with this organization, 21 support groups have been set up in Michigan to serve 600 patients and their families. In addition, the foundation provides seminars, a newsletter, workshops, offices and a library for Parkinson's Disease patients and for professionals.

Dr. Bauer received the foundation's humanitarian award in 1985 for his unselfish dedication on behalf of Parkinson's patients.

Eastern Box honored for packaging excellence

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Whenever you get something — anything — chances are it comes in a box. You open the box, remove the contents and throw the box away.

But did you know that the packaging industry is extremely competitive and that there are worldwide organizations that hold contests and give awards for excellence in packaging?

Eastern Box Co. of Detroit knows. And it has proof — an award from a prestigious organization for one of the best packaging designs in the world last year.

Founded in 1920 by Frederick Wachter, Eastern Box Co. has been in the Wachter family ever since. Its current president is Frederick's son, Frank Wachter, who lives in Grosse Pointe Woods. His son, Robert, who lives in the Farms, is vice president.

In an award ceremony in New York City March 1, Robert Wachter was presented with the Worldstar Award for packaging excellence by the World Packaging Organization in Paris. The award was for the design and manufacture of the Knowledge Software Box, designed for a special type of computer software.

The judging took place in England in November and was in competition with packaging from throughout the world.

"To tell you the truth, I didn't know there was such a competition," Robert Wachter said. "We're real surprised by the award."

In order to qualify for the Worldstar competition, a package must first receive recognition in the country where it was manufactured. The Knowledge Software Box, designed by Robert Wachter from plans by the client, received three awards in May 1987 in the 37th Annual Packaging Competition of the National Paperbox & Packaging Association in Haddonfield, N.J. It won first in the computer products division, an excellence award for Best Surface Design & Execution, and Excellence Award for Superiority of Construction. It also received the President's Award for best packaging.

"What's even more exciting than winning the Worldstar Award is that it won the President's Award," he said. "It was an award given by others in the industry. My peers passed judgment on something I had done. That means a lot."

Wachter took the ideas drawn by the client and modified them to make the designs more economical and easier to build from a production standpoint.

The packaging had to be special, he said, because the product it housed was a new programming tool and was released with great fanfare by the company.

What makes this box special, he said, is that "it is graphically very innovative, it's functional, it displays the product well, it's very easy to get things out, and very rich in appearance."

It is the first national attention Eastern Box Co. has had and the Wachters are understandably pleased, but they see this type of packaging essential if they want to remain competitive.

"At one time, there were eight box plants in Detroit," Frank

Wachter said. "Now we're the only one left."

Eastern Box Co. produces only custom packaging, and turns out everything from corrugated cardboard boxes to their Worldstar Award winner.

There are many different forms of packaging, Robert Wachter said. There are those made by folding up and cutting printed cardboard, much like a toothpaste box. Some are made by bonding printed paper onto a simple cardboard box, such as a candy box. There is also vacuum forming, which consist of plastic holders inside a box to keep the items from moving around. And then there is combination packaging that uses a vacuum-formed piece inside a box.

"It's become a complex field," Robert Wachter said. "And to stay in competition, you had better design something that is economical and saves space."

"You have to offer all types, otherwise we wouldn't be in the swim at all," Frank Wachter added.

Foam and plastic have changed the packaging industry in the past 10 years, and the Wachters are not sure if there will be any more revolutions in the near future. But the changes will be inside the box, not outside.

"It's possible some new materials can be used inside," Frank said, "But the general construction of the rigid box won't change, and that's the feature of the beast."

New liquor law could send drink prices up a shot

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

A new law requiring anyone who sells liquor to carry a minimum of $50,000 in liability insurance may force some smaller stores or bars to close or, at the very least, prompt a price increase.

The 1986 Dramshop Act requires that establishments selling liquor maintain a minimum amount of insurance. The law goes into effect for new licensees as of April 1 and is mandatory for those renewing their license May 1.

Darrell Finken, owner of Sparky Herbert's in the Park and president of Pointes East, an association of 19 local bars and restaurants, said the group opposed the legislation in Lansing during hearings on the matter two years ago.

The law allows liquor licensees to either have the insurance or post $50,000 bond or place the cash in escrow.

The ruling resulted from changes in the 1986 Dramshop law. The new law required Insurance Commissioner Herman Coleman to determine whether liquor liability insurance was "available and affordable" before mandating minimum coverage. He did make that determination this past December.

Robert Bogdan, a senior vice president with Marsh & McLennan, one of the world's largest insurance brokers based in Detroit, tells licensees to shop around before buying liability insurance.

"There are big discrepancies in premiums," Bogdan said. "The licensee should make sure he knows who he is dealing with. The new law is bringing a lot of new players into the market, and some of these companies don't have the financial standing that the larger companies have."

Bogdan likened the liability insurance requirement to no-fault insurance for car drivers.

If a bar caters to a younger clientele with entertainment, video machines and pool tables and doesn't serve restaurant food, the insurance premium is likely to be higher. Just as car insurance for an unmarried 19-year-old male is more costly than for a 40-year-old married man, the cost for some bars is higher. Premiums are also based on gross liquor sales.

"Right now with the law coming into effect, many licensees are receiving unsolicited requests for insurance through the mail," Bogdan said. "They should consult with their attorney or insurance agent prior to purchasing any new insurance."

Bogdan said the problem is that some of the smaller insurance companies may not have the financial security that an older established company might have. Obviously, an insurance company that collects premiums and then isn't around to pay claims isn't worth much to a liquor licensee.

While many bar and store owners, food and beverage association groups and others are opposed to the mandatory insurance law, Alan J. Kaufman, an attorney, said $50,000 of insurance isn't nearly enough.

Kaufman of Kaufman and Payton, a firm with offices in Farmington Hills, Detroit and Grand Rapids, noted for its litigation and handling of liquor liability cases, said that while some businesses may have to close their doors, the public has a right to protection from bar owners or other liquor licensees that are negligent.

During the early 1980s, the practice of carrying a $5,000 bond was discontinued. Many licensees then went without liability insurance because of its high cost.

"The public should be protected," Kaufman said. "The licensee should have the financial wherewithal to pay in the event of a lawsuit. To me, $50,000 is inadequate. It should have been a minimum of $100,000."

Kaufman said the requirement will have a positive effect on litigation in that it won't be the establishment with the "deepest pockets" that pays in the event of a lawsuit. The way the dram shop law is written, it is possible for a litigant to sue every bar or store where an accident victim purchased or consumed alcohol on the day the accident occurred.

Often what happens is that the establishment with the most insurance pays the claim, even though it wasn't the establishment with the most negligence.

"Now it will be the (establishment) responsible which pays for its own negligence," Kaufman heard a price quote on the coverage. The first estimate she had was for $12,000 a year. She later found out that because the majority of her gross sales come from food, the rate would be much less — about $300 a month.

bility insurance on their homeowners insurance.

He said the burden of cost for insurance is then spread throughout the population, rather than a small group of business people. He said while the public has a right to be protection from negligent liquor licensees, the public should also share in protecting itself.

Edward Deeb, president of the Michigan Food and Beverage Association, which represents supermarkets, party stores and grocers throughout the state, took the argument one step further.

Deeb, a Woods resident, argued that the state of Michigan collects about $500 million a year in taxes from the sale of liquor. He said party stores and supermarkets also act as agents for the state in selling lottery tickets.

"The state should pick up part, if not all of the cost, for the insurance," Deeb said. "The state doesn't look at this as though it is an equal partner, and it is."

Rod Brown, president of the Michigan License Beverage Association, which represents bars and restaurants throughout the state, said that bar and restaurant owners can't be responsible for the actions of each individual customer.

In a March 15 press release, Brown said that licensees must have insurance that provides compensation to victims of illegal sales, but customers must accept responsibility for accidents or injuries for which they are at fault.

"We have been concerned that mandatory insurance would be a hardship for many of our members who have been unable to afford the extreme rates of past years," Brown said. "Because of that concern, we set up a limited liquor liability pool."

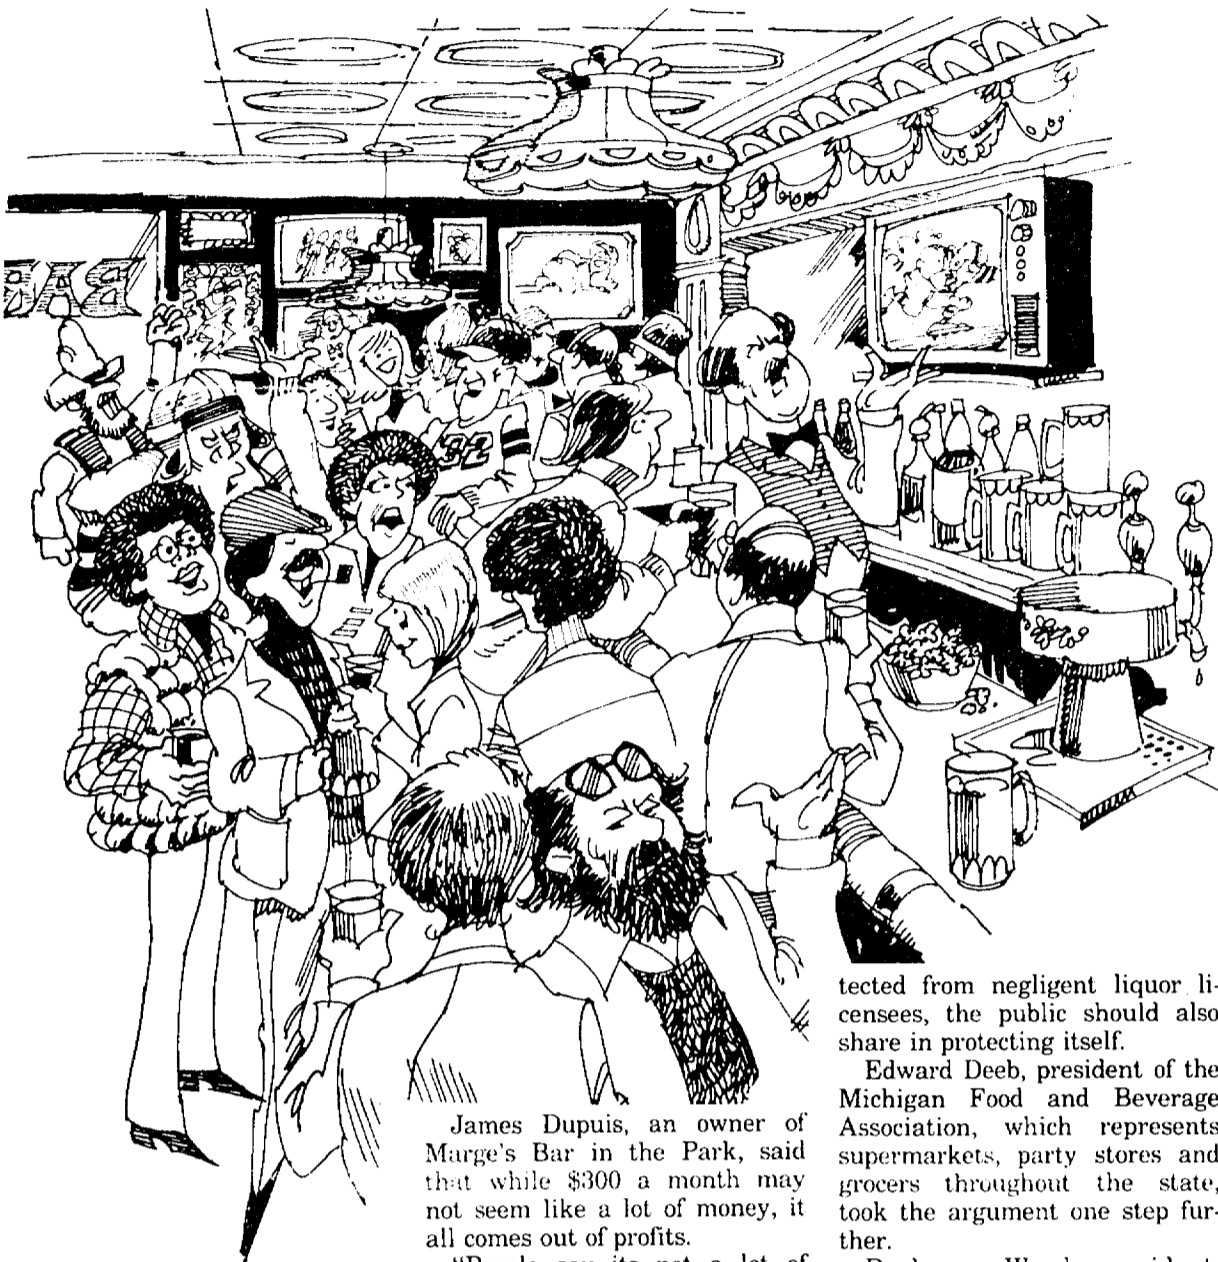

The beverage association pool would offer rates to qualified members which are among the best in the state. While the association notes that being a member does not necessarily guarantee acceptance in the pool, if an establishment has a history of repeated liquor violations, such as serving minors or visibly intoxicated persons, insurance would be more difficult to obtain.

The association said those interested in finding out more about the pool can call toll-free 1-800-292-2896.

Finken said that the cost of drinks at Sparky's might rise 10 to 25 cents.

"That's another thing about this law is that it is inflationary," Finken said. "You hate to raise the price of drinks, but when this comes right off the top like rent, heat and utilities, there is little else you can do."

James Dupuis, owner of Marge's Bar in the Park, said that while $300 a month may not seem like a lot of money, it all comes out of profits.

"People say it's not a lot of money," Dupuis said, "but we're trying to make a living here."

Tony Alfonsi, owner of Little Tony's Lounge in the Woods, said the new law won't affect him as much as it will some other restaurants, bars and stores.

"I already have insurance," Alfonsi said. "I can't afford to be without it, but the rates are out of sight."

Since Alfonsi will not have to get additional insurance, he doesn't anticipate any increase in his food or drink prices.

"There has been a lot of talk of legislation on liquor liability," Alfonsi said. "I am in favor of a cap on litigation. You can't get $1 million worth of insurance any more. I've been shopping for insurance for years. You hate to pay the price for it, but it's something we've got to have."

Finken said the part of the responsibility for alcohol-related accidents belongs to the patron. He said California law requires homeowners to carry liquor liability insurance on their homeowners insurance.

He said the burden of cost for insurance is then spread throughout the population, rather than a small group of business people. He said while the public has a right to be protected from negligent liquor licensees, the public should also share in protecting itself.

Edward Deeb, president of the Michigan Food and Beverage Association, which represents supermarkets, party stores and grocers throughout the state, took the argument one step further.

Deeb, a Woods resident, argued that the state of Michigan collects about $500 million a year in taxes from the sale of liquor. He said party stores and supermarkets also act as agents for the state in selling lottery tickets.

Going for the gold

Pointe chefs place platters in top culinary competitions

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

Soon the whole world will know what Grosse Pointe diners have always believed: the Pointe is cooking with some top-notch chefs.

Two local chefs, Bill Wolf of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club and Chris Malfroid of Sparky Herbert's, are participating in national and international competitions.

Wolf is a member of the 1988 Michigan Culinary Team which will travel to Singapore April 13-16 for the Sixth FHA International Salon Culinare and then to the 1988 World Culinary Art Salon — the Olympics of culinary competition — in Frankfurt, West Germany in October.

Malfroid will participate in the individual cold food category at the 15th annual Hospitality Industry Culinary Art Salon at Oakland Community College this Sunday, March 27. It is one of the midwest's largest culinary events.

The competitions represent different things to the veteran chefs. Malfroid, who trained under Wolf at Sparky Herbert's, is a relative newcomer to culinary competition. For Wolf, the upcoming international events cap a long string of competitive efforts.

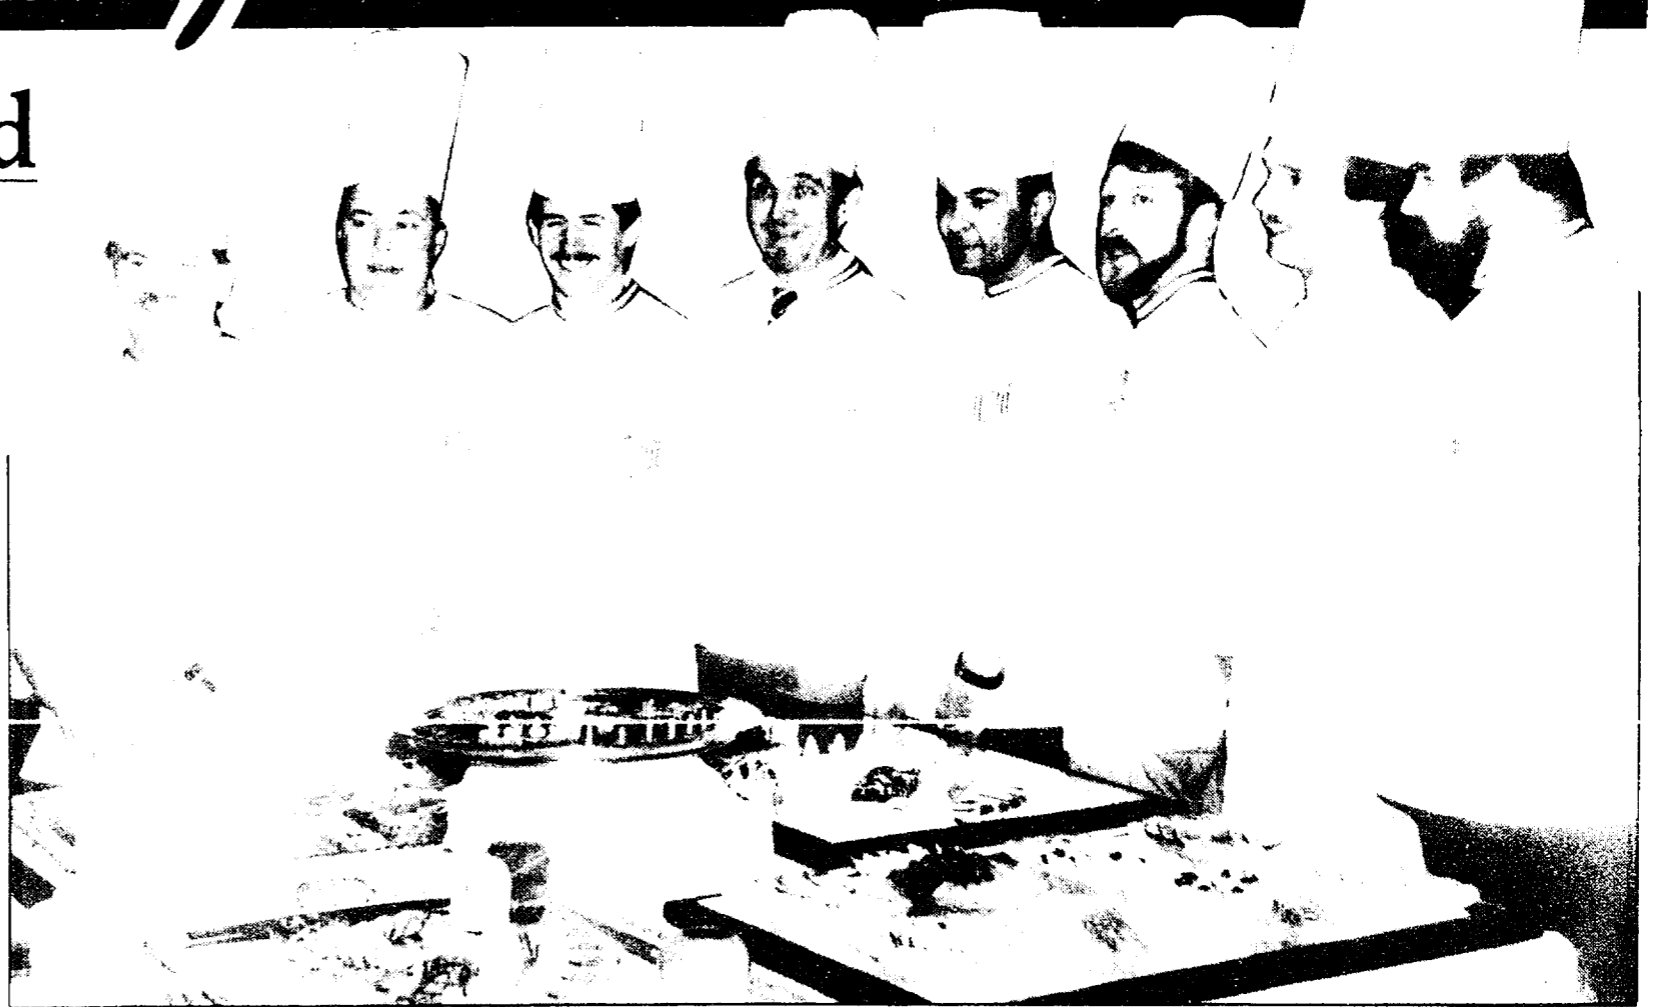

Wolf is a native of Philadelphia who started his culinary career at 14 as a chef's apprentice. He moved to Detroit and worked at several east side restaurants, including the GPYC, the Old Place, the Golden Lion, the Golden Mushroom, Sparky's and Darby's in Utica. He took over as the GPYC's head chef in October 1987.

WOLF ATTEMPTED to win a spot on the United States Culinary Team this year and did well in preliminary competition, taking home two gold medals. He has nine gold medals and two silvers in six years of culinary competition.

"They had the eliminations and I just didn't make the cut. So the four of us who didn't make the team decided to start our own team to compete in the international salon.

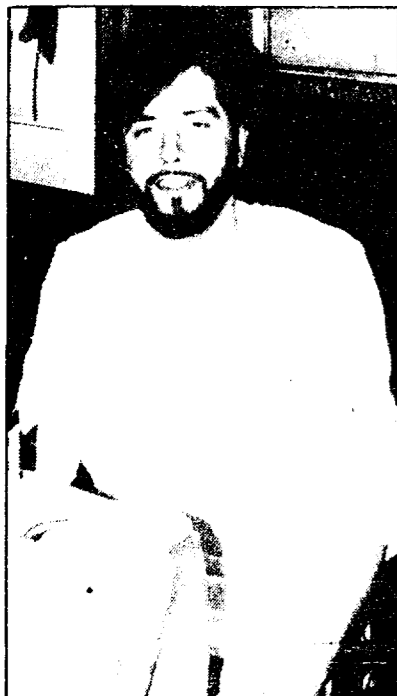

"So far, things are working out pretty well," Wolf says.

It marks the first time Michigan will send an entire team to the 1988 competition. The team's other members are Master Chef Milos Cihelka of the Gold Mushroom, team manager; Kamel Kassem of the Renaissance Club in Detroit, team captain; Mark Kuzma from Troy's Somerset Inn; Gilles Renussen and Michael Green of Grand Rapids' Amway Grand Plaza; Joseph Beato of Detroit's Henry Ford Hospital; and Matthew Naughton of the Lagovita Country Club.

Wolf says he enjoys the team aspect of the competition. "We all have our strengths and we provide support for one another. It's nice to give out one idea and get six back. And when the pressure's on, it's great to have some guys who will kid around and loosen everybody up," Wolf says.

Wolf's speciality is the cold buffet presentation. In culinary competition, food is judged for its creativity, composition, appearance, nutritional value and the skill displayed in preparation. Although all food must be edible, the culinary creations are meant to be viewed and not eaten.

Last week, Grosse Pointers got a sneak peek at what the Michigan team will enter in competition when the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club held a fund-raising reception displaying the work of team members.

While Pan Am will provide air fare for the team members to Frankfurt, the group is about $20,000 short of the $70,000 it needs for the Singapore and Frankfurt competitions. There are still three more fund-raising receptions scheduled this year and Wolf says he doesn't mind participating in them.

"We get a lot of good comments from the public. And how they look at it, whether our display is something that's pleasing to them, is important to us. They are the kind of people we're trying to please," Wolf says.

THE MICHIGAN team has nearly completed its final preparations for the Singapore event, he adds, and is confident of its culinary repertoire.

"This is the fifth time we've gone over our platters just for Singapore. We've been making adjustments and I think we're pretty much where we want to be. "I feel very good about our chances overall. I've been working toward this for 16 years and feel confident about coming away with a gold medal. The way I see it, this is the one challenge left for me. To rank among the greats . . . I think that would be it for me."

Sparky Herbert's Malfroid is at the other end of the competitive spectrum. The Warren native started out as a dishwasher at Villa d'Oro, worked his way up through every kitchen position on the Van Dyke restaurant circuit, wound up at Sparky's in 1982 and took over as head chef two years ago.

His first attempt at culinary competition was less than successful, Malfroid says.

"I entered a salon last year and it was just a horrible failure. I'd worked toward the thing for four months, practicing every day. In the end, it was a matter of having the technique down pat, but missing completely on the timing. It was definitely a learning experience," says the soft-spoken Malfroid.

To repair his ego, Malfroid entered this year's Columbus Food Fair and came home with a special judges' commendation. "It really taught me something, not to mention the fact that it gave me my confidence back." And it gave him the impetus to enter Sunday's competition at Oakland Community College, billed as the third largest U.S. competition for chefs.

MALFROID WILL be competing on an individual basis in the cold food display category. "I'll be doing three platters. That's probably the most work an individual chef can do without going into the need for the team concept," he explains.

Malfroid says he gets many of his ideas for the presentation from his everyday cooking. "I look at what makes a colorful combination, getting ideas from my staff or in magazines or things on shelves. It's all pretty standard stuff... it's up to the chef to make it unique."

Entries are judged on the basis of originality, presentation, creativity and appearance. More than 400 works will be on display in a setting not unlike that of an art gallery, only the medium is food instead of paint and canvas.

"I think I'll do pretty well. I've learned a lot since my first competition. That's what this is all about anyway, learning."

Malfroid says he's not sure whether he'll step up his competitive efforts and follow in the footsteps of his former teacher, Wolf. "I couldn't begin to compete with Bill. This is his bag, competition. He's got the medals and he's got the experience. I'm probably just going to limit myself to two competitions per year and see how I do with those.

"I enjoy the competition. It's a great motivator and that reflects back on my regular work. I'm a better chef, I think, because of it."

Fashion show will benefit Sibley House

The latest designs in lingerie and loungewear for spring 1988 will be modeled during a benefit fashion show and continental breakfast Tuesday, April 12, at 9 a.m. at Jacobson's in the Village.

Tickets for the event, a fundraiser for the Junior League of Detroit's Sibley House Restoration Project, are $10 per person. Reservations may be made by sending a check, payable to the Junior League of Detroit — Sibley House, to Mrs. Roger Hull, 1047 Whittier, Grosse Pointe Park, 48230. Reservations will be accepted through April 8 and tickets will be held at the door.

The Sibley House Restoration is a five-year project of the Junior League of Detroit. The house, located at 976 East Jefferson in Detroit, is the oldest intact frame structure in the city of Detroit and is one of the finest examples of classic Greek Revival-style architecture in the Midwest.

The Junior League's goal for the project is to complete a museum-quality restoration of Sibley House, thereby preserving a part of Detroit's past for future generations. The League has committed $125,000 toward the estimated $500,000 needed to restore the historic treasure.

Additionally, the League has converted the second floor to provide reasonably-priced office space for other non-profit organizations and is marketing the first floor parlour and dining room for conferences, meetings and receptions.

For further information about the fashion show or Sibley House project, call the Junior League of Detroit office at 881-0040, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Oarsmen's Ball returns: Once a staple of Detroit's spring party circuit, the Oarsmen's Ball will return this spring after a 25-year absence. This year's event will be held on Saturday, April 9, at the Detroit Boat Club on Belle Isle. Tickets are $50 per couple — tax deductible — and may be obtained by calling 824-4293.

The Oarsmen's Ball supports rowers from Grosse Pointe schools and the metro-Detroit area. Chairing the event is Roman Lesnau of Bloomfield Hills, who will be assisted by Brian Benz, of Grosse Pointe and John Welchli of Grosse Pointe Farms. Benz represented the United States as a lightweight sculler at last year's Goodwill Games. Welchli won a bronze medal in rowing in the 1956 Olympic Games.

A donation:

"Avec des Pieges a Lumiere," a painting by Detroit native and Grosse Pointe resident James Kristich, has been presented to Orchestra Hall by Grosse Pointe's Mr. and Mrs. R. Alexander Wrigley. The painting, which represents a conductor leading an orchestra, will eventually hang in the Hall's new expanded lobby, which will be completed by fall 1989.

The work was purchased at a benefit for Orchestra Hall last December at Gallerie 454 in Grosse Pointe Park. The benefit was held to encourage the acquisition of art works for the Hall's expanded facilities.

The artist is a graduate of the Center for Creative Studies. He maintains a studio near the campus of Wayne State University.

Orchestra Hall chairman Frank D. Stella accepted the Wrigleys' donation, saying "We are very grateful to the Wrigleys for this very generous gift. They are the leaders in our effort to acquire the best and most appropriate art works which will grace the new lobby and other facilities at Orchestra Hall."

Art contest winner:

Grosse Pointe South High School junior Kristen Verlinden has created the winning design for this year's South High Mothers' Club annual luncheon and fashion show. A student in Barbara Gruenwald's commercial design class, Kristen chose to illustrate this year's theme, "Spring Kaleidoscope," in pen and ink with the use of one flower within a double border.

The luncheon and fashion show will be held Thursday,

April 21, at 11:30 a.m. in the Fries Auditorium of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. The Jane Woodbury Shop will present the fashion show, with styles modeled by South High mothers. Entertainment will be provided by the Jazz Band, Crazy Eights, and the Pointe Singers.

Tickets are $17 per person and may be ordered by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Grosse Pointe South Mothers' Club, 36 Elm Court, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., 48236.

All proceeds benefit the Grosse Pointe South High School students in the form of scholarships and enrichment programs.

Kristen Verlinden has taken a variety of art classes as part of her high school curriculum and plans for a career either in commercial design or in the field of psychology. She enjoys skiing, swimming and boating and works part time after school as a secretary for an insurance agency.

Bow-Wow Ball:

Chefs from metro Detroit's finest restaurants will prepare a strolling supper to benefit the homeless animals of the Michigan Humane Society at the Bow-Wow Ball Saturday, April 9, at Somerset Mall in Troy.

The Michigan Humane Society will host the event and Saks Fifth Avenue will provide a spring preview fashion presentation from the evening wear collection of Victor Costa.

The event, which begins at 7:30 p.m., will include a live auction with auctioneer Ernest DuMouchelle, and dancing to the Bugs Beddow Band. The master of ceremonies for the black tie-optional event is John Kelly.

Marilyn Turner is chairing the event. Tickets are $50 per person, $100 per patron, $150 per sponsor and may be obtained by calling Gina at 872-3400.

Tre Ore service planned for St. Clare April 1

An ecumenical Tre Ore service sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Ministerial Association will be held on Good Friday, April 1, from noon to 3 p.m. at St. Clare of Montefalco Church, Mack at Whittier in Grosse Pointe Park.

Leading the service will be clergy and representatives from Grosse Pointe United Methodist, Grace United Church of Christ, Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, Brethren-Baptist Fellowship, Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian, St. Clare, St. James Lutheran, St. Michael Episcopal and St. Paul Evangelical Lutheran churches.

The three-hour service will be divided into seven 20-minute segments focusing on one of the seven last words of Jesus. Included in each of the segments will be a musical prelude, congregational hymn, scripture, meditation, musical reflection and concluding prayer. Worshipers may attend any or all of the seven segments. Ushers will seat people during the preludes.

Monetary offerings made by worshippers will be given to People in Faith United, which operates many community ministries reaching more than 800 families a week. The ministries include a senior citizen food and friendship program, Crossroads East, personal counseling, emergency aid, food and clothing, a youth program and a soup kitchen.

Holy Week at Christ Church

Holy Week observances at Christ Church Grosse Pointe, 61 Grosse Pointe Boulevard, will be highlighted by a traditional three-hour service at noon Good Friday, April 1, and by three services of the Holy Eucharist on Easter morning, April 3.

The noon to 3 p.m. Good Friday service will feature "Conversations With the Crucified," which will be segmented into six half-hour meditations led by the four clergy of Christ Church. The choir will sing excerpts from the "Stabat Mater," by G.P. Pergolesi.

The public is invited to attend any or all of the meditations. Child care will be provided in the Christian Education Building.

The Easter celebration begins with a 7 a.m. sunrise service with the Holy Eucharist, sermon and music by the choir, organ and brass.

At the principal Eucharistic services at 9:15 and 11:15 a.m., the Rector's sermon will be titled "Glimpsing Eternal Life." The 9:15 service will include the flowering of the cross for the children. The musical setting at the 11:15 a.m. service is composed by Gerre Hancock and will be sung by the Choir of Men and Boys with organ and brass accompaniment. The Pastor's Corner 'Part Two'

By The Rev. Robert A. Rimbo
Pastor, St. James Lutheran Church

I'm ready for Easter. Lent has been so long this year, more than 40 days... like 400. Come, Rising Sun/Son.

Last August I wrote in this corner about my friend Ken. He had brain cancer. He had hope, too. Now I write "Part Two" of that article.

For during this Lent, at the end of February, my friend Ken died. The statistics pain me. Age: 37... Occupation: guidance counselor... three surgical procedures... frustration... therapy... home hospice... mourners: wife, parents, brother, sister, in-laws, grandmother, two young children, me.

What the statistics cannot show is the hope I saw in his face. And what they cannot show is my rage.

Once, maybe more than once, I preached about making friends with one's dying hour. Today I will not say this. I will never say it again. Though I, too, live in hope, I have come to know death as the enemy, the last enemy to be encountered.

It was as the arch-enemy of death that Jesus died so that we might live. Therefore, I repent of having told people to make friends with death. God wants us to value life, to seek God's help, to hold on to hope so that we can endure, faithful to the end. The alternative is to waste ourselves in fear and bitterness and rage.

Look around you, my friend... now. There you will see gentle reminders of your mortality: Wrinkles, make-up, jogging suit, a dried-up leaf on that houseplant, the change in season, the passing year, the empty nest, the grim diagnosis. Look around and you will notice the winter of life closing in on you. Look around you and you, too, will rage against it.

But then, too, note well: The crocus pushing its green through the snow... the gentle reminder that God is still God... that there still is life... hope stirs within.

When my friend died I was called upon to preach at his funeral. Words were inadequate, but none seemed better than those of John Donne. They are words for your hopelessness, too. They are words which aptly express the bittersweet heart of Holy Week and the glory of Easter.

*Death be not proud, though some have called thee
Mighty and dreadful, for, thou art not soe,
For, those whom thou think'st thou dost overthrow,
Die not, poore death, nor yet canst thou kill mee...
One short sleepe past, wee wake eternally,
And death shall be no more; death, thou shalt die.*

In these coming days, Palm Sunday, Maundy Thursday, Good Friday, Holy Saturday, Easter Day, learn again what Donne's words mean. Have your hope restored, renewed, as the cry rises: "Christ is risen... indeed."

Pre-concert luncheon will precede soloists' performance

'Vienna to Broadway' on tap for Grosse Pointe Symphony

The Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Felix Resnick, will present the third concert of its season Sunday, March 27, at 3 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The concert will feature the musical selections of Schubert, Strauss, Lehar, Richard Rodgers, Gershwin, Sondheim, Cole Porter and Jerry Herman. Featured soloists will be Grosse Pointe natives David and Jeanne Heller Ludwig.

The Ludwigs made their singing debut together with the Rackham Symphony Choir in 1984 in a cabaret concert of Rodgers and Hammerstein works. As soloists, they are in demand and have performed major works by Bach, Handel, Brahms, Faure and others. They have also appeared in several Gilbert and Sullivan operettas.

Ludwig holds bachelor's and master's degrees from Indiana University. He has performed with Michigan Opera Theatre and is a member and soloist of the Christ Episcopal Church men's and boy's choir.

Jeanne Heller Ludwig majored in music and German at Albion College. She has enjoyed frequent solo appearances with the Rackham Symphony choir and currently sings with the Detroit Symphony Chorale and the Christ Episcopal Church Chorale.

For the first time, the Grosse Pointe Symphony Society will present a pre-concert luncheon at 1 p.m. March 27 at the War Memorial. Planning the event are chairman Mrs. Michel Skaff and committee members Mrs. William Bundesen, Mrs. George Coury, Mrs. John Nolan, Mrs. Anthony Vermuelen, Mrs. John Young Sr. and Symphony Society president Mrs. John E. Young Jr.

Foundation receives grant

The Hospice Foundation of Southeastern Michigan has received a grant of $25,000 from the McGregor Fund, according to board president Evelyn Liberman. The grant monies will be used to provide operating support for the programs of care at Hospice of Southeastern Michigan.

The Southfield-based hospice program offers home care and inpatient services to terminally ill patients, with emphasis on pain and symptom control and intensive family support services. Hospice presents an alternative to hospital or nursing home care for patients with a prognosis of six months or less to live. It employs no life support technology and seeks to maximize the quality of the remaining months, weeks and days.

Detroit-area merchants are again being presented with a unique opportunity to expose their products to a television audience and perform a public service at the same time. The Channel 56 Auction is seeking donations of merchandise now for the 20th annual fundraiser April 15-23.

"We think merchants will agree that the Channel 56 Auction presents a terrific showcase for their products," says Barbara Ball-McClure, auction manager. "Viewers primed to buy tune in during the course of the auction and the company name is mentioned twice on the air for each product donated. Donating firms also receive tax benefits for merchandise given to the auction."

For information on contributing new merchandise valued at $70 or more to the Channel 56 Auction, call 873-7200, ext. 203.

Items needed include appliances, cameras, sporting goods, household products, automotive accessories, jewelry and office supplies. Certain items will be showcased on special nights of the auction:

Cancer center earns ACR accreditation

The Breast Cancer Detection Center (BCDC), co-sponsored by the Michigan Cancer Foundation and Harper Hospital, has received certification of the American College of Radiology Mammography Accreditation Program.

It is the only breast cancer screening and detection center in Detroit and one of three in the state to receive accreditation.

Mammography is an X-ray examination of the breast which medical experts see as the best means for the early detection of breast cancer. The program is voluntary and is designed to ensure that women receive optimum quality mammographic examinations. Accreditation must be renewed every three years.

Dr. Elizabeth Schmitt, director of the BCDC, said "We're very pleased with the designation. It shows that our personnel are dedicated and qualified and our equipment effective."

The Michigan Cancer Foundation is a Torch Drive/United Way Agency.

19, an exciting array of top-quality clothing;

- Wine Night, April 21, another auction tradition organized by several of the city's top wine merchants;
- Electronics Night, April 22, a new addition to the auction to showcase electronic appliances such as videocassette recorders, televisions, computers, car phones, etc.

The 1987 auction raised

$781,727. The auction accounts for 11 percent of WTVS/Channel

56's total operating budget. The annual fundraiser helps make possible the broadcast of such programs as "Nova," "Sesame Street" and "American Playhouse," as well as local shows including "Detroit Black Journal" and "Autograph with Marilyn MacKay."

Channel 56 also needs volunteers to seek merchandise for the 20th annual fundraiser.

Go-Getters are a most important factor in the success of the Auction," says Ball-McClure. "All a potential Go-Getter needs is enthusiasm and a little volunteer time. WTVS will provide training and materials to help the Go-Getter approach area businesspeople for donations.

To volunteer for the 1988 Channel 56 Auction, call 873-7200, ext. 203.

NBD's new Bi-Weekly Mortgage

- Cuts 9 years off a 30-year loan.*
- Reduces interest costs 35%*
- Builds equity almost twice as fast.*

What does Bi-Weekly mean, exactly? And how does this new mortgage work? Bi-Weekly simply means you make your house payment every other week. Instead of writing out one large check once a month, you pay half every two weeks. So, rather than making 12 big monthly payments a year, you make 26 small ones every two weeks. The two extra payments make the difference, cutting about 9 years off the life of your mortgage.

The last 9 years are free? Right. This mortgage gives you the low payments of a 30-year mortgage, and is fully paid off in just 21 years. In that sense, NBD's new Bi-Weekly combines the best features of 15- and 30-year fixed rate mortgages. Because NBD requires just 10% down, the Bi-Weekly Mortgage is perfect for first-time homeowners.

Suppose I sell my home 7 years from now...will I have more equity in it? Yes. With the NBD Bi-Weekly Mortgage, you build equity in your home almost twice as fast as a conventional 30-year mortgage. So when you sell your home...or if you want to use the equity in it for any purpose...the equity will be nearly double what it would have been otherwise.

And if I keep my home for the full 21 years...how much will I save? About 35%. For many home buyers in this area, that could mean sixty to seventy-five thousand dollars. To find out how much you would save, check the table below.

NBD's new Bi-Weekly Mortgage sounds interesting. But I need more details. Just call or visit one of the NBD Mortgage Company offices listed below. Our home mortgage specialists will get you the information to get started right away.

Trim as much fat as possible from ham, plus all those dry dark places that impart a strong flavor. Score top of ham in a diamond pattern and place a whole clove in the center of each diamond.

Mix all other ingredients except fruit juice with a wire whisk. Moisten with 1/2 to 3/4 cup fruit juice and gently pour over ham. Place ham in preheated 450° oven and brown, basting occasionally. When basting sauce starts to thicken, add more fruit juice as needed.

After ham is brown, reduce oven to 300° and continue basting frequently until ham has cooked for about 1 1/2 hours. Remove from oven and let cool at least 10-15 minutes before slicing. Will feed 20-25 easily with leftovers.

Calories, 210 per 3 1/2 ounce serving. Cholesterol, about 70 mgs.

Bourbon Apples

Either as a dessert or a condiment to garnish the ham, these apples are simply delicious. To use as a garnish, cut apples into large wedges.

4 large Granny Smith apples
6 Tbsp. light brown sugar
Juice of 1/2 lemon
1/2 cup good quality bourbon

Peel, core and cut apples into bite-sized chunks. Place in a large skillet. Add remaining ingredients. Cover and slowly simmer until apples are tender; basting occasionally. Makes 4 servings.

Calories, about 165 per serving. Cholesterol, 0.

Spinach, Tomato & Red Onion Salad

4 cups fresh spinach leaves, washed, dried and trimmed of stems
4 small tomatoes, sliced 1/4-inch thick
2 small red onions, sliced in thin rings
3 Tbsp. vegetable oil
1 1/2 tsp. wine vinegar
1 Tbsp. prepared horseradish
Salt and pepper to taste

Arrange spinach leaves on platter. Layer tomato slices, then onion rings. Sprinkle very lightly with salt and pepper. In small bowl, beat oil, vinegar, horseradish and pepper until blended. Pour over vegetables and serve. Makes 4 servings.

Calories, about 137 per serving. Cholesterol, 0.

June's Famous Summer Squash

6 cups summer squash (substitute zucchini if desired)
1 cup carrots, shredded
1/2 cup Velveta cheese
1 onion, finely minced
Salt and white pepper to taste
1 cup sour cream
1 can low-sodium cream of chicken soup
1 box Chicken Stove Top Stuffing
1/2 cup unsalted margarine

Dice squash into 1 1/2 x 2-inch cubes. Cook squash 5 minutes in lightly salted water; drain. Mix carrots, cheese, onion and sour cream together. Toss stuffing mix with melted margarine until well coated. Place 1/2 of stuffing mix in bottom of well-oiled casserole; cover with squash. Spread cream of chicken soup evenly over squash. Top with remaining stuffing mix and sprinkle lightly with paprika. Makes 10-12 servings.

Hoosier Strawberry Shortcake

1 1/2 cups sifted flour
1 Tbsp. sugar
1 1/2 tsp. baking powder
Pinch of salt
1/4 cup unsalted margarine
6 Tbsp. skim milk
2 Tbsp. unsalted margarine, melted
1 qt. fresh strawberries
2 Tbsp. sugar
1 1/2 cups whipped topping

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Cut in the 4 tablespoons of margarine with a pastry blender. Gradually add enough milk to make soft, not sticky, dough. Roll out to 1/2-inch thick on lightly floured board. Cut into two eight-inch circles. Place one on lightly oiled baking sheet. Brush each circle with melted margarine and place one on top of the other.

Bake in preheated 450° oven for 20 minutes. Separate hot layers. Cut berries in half, add sugar to taste and ladle strawberries over bottom layer. Place other layer on top. Top with more berries and a generous mound of whipped topping. Makes six servings.

Calories, about 310 per serving. Cholesterol, a trace.

COMPREHENSIVE® Tax Talk

Question: Have you determined how the provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 will impact your small or closely held corporation?

Answer: The most important provision of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 as it applies to small businesses is the drastic overhaul and reduction of corporate tax rates. The Act collapses the former five bracket structure into three brackets, effective July 1, 1987, as follows:

Rate	Taxable Income
15%	First $50,000
25%	$50,001-75,000
34%	over $75,000

For calendar year 1987 the rate is "blended," 50% at the old rate and 50% at the new rate. To stimulate small business growth, the two lower brackets will be phased out for corporations having taxable incomes over $100,000 by imposition of an additional 5% tax on that amount up to $335,000. Thus, corporations with income in excess of $335,000 will pay an effective tax rate of 34%, the maximum rate for tax years after 1987. Formerly, the maximum corporate tax rate was 46%.

It is important to note, however, that the aforementioned reduction in the overall corporate tax rates may not result in a decreased tax liability. In addition to revising the corporate rate structures, the new law broadens the scope of income subject to tax by eliminating many significant deductions. Additionally, significant credits, such as the investment tax credit, generally are no longer available unless you qualify for one of the transitional rules. The 1986 Act also provides that the total of various business and tax credits and carryovers available in a tax year may offset a maximum of only 75% of taxable income, whereas prior law permitted the offset of 85% of taxable income.

Additionally, the substantial reduction of individual tax rates will influence the type of entity in which small business owners choose to conduct business. For 1987 and subsequent tax years, individual rates will be 28% in 1988 and 38.5% in 1987, down from 50% under prior law. For the first time in many years, individual tax rates will generally be lower than corporate rates. Accordingly owners of closely held corporations should give careful thought to having their C-Corporations elect S-Corporation status. This generally will result in earnings escaping tax at the corporate level and being subject only to lower individual tax rates. A corporation may be eligible for Subchapter S status if (1) it is a domestic corporation, (2) it has 35 or fewer shareholders, (3) all shareholders are individuals (with certain exceptions), (4) it does not own more than 80% or more of an active subsidiary and (5) it does not have more than one class of stock issued and outstanding.

The 1986 Act also contains special provisions and exemptions specifically designed to stimulate the growth of small business. For example, the Act increases the amount of capital expenditures that may be deducted currently, rather than recovered through depreciation, from $5,000 to $10,000. This benefit is phased out for equipment purchases over $200,000. The 1986 Act also simplifies the requirements for use of the LIFO inventory method and the rules for establishment of Employment Stock Option Purchase Plans (ESOPs). Further, the Act exempts small businesses from provisions restricting the use of the cash method of accounting.

Additionally, special exemptions are available for small business from provisions of the 1986 Act which significantly increase the amount of tax due upon sale or liquidation of a business. The new rules would otherwise result in taxation of appreciated corporate assets upon disposition of a business at both the corporate and shareholder levels.

The Act contains numerous other exceptions for small businesses, with varying threshold levels for qualification. However, it also places certain potential burdens on small businesses, such as the new Uniform Cost Capitalization Rules, pursuant to which certain costs pertaining to inventory and self-constructed assets must be capitalized and deducted over a period of years rather than immediately expensed. Moreover, the Act imposes potentially burdensome additional record-keeping requirements for business meal and entertainment deductions, and eliminates the capital gains deduction formerly relied upon heavily by many small, capital-intensive businesses.

If you are uncertain as to the applicability of any provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 to your small business, you should consult your accountant or tax advisor to insure that benefit of any valuable elections are not lost.

(NOTE:) Before you act on the material contained in this article, you should consult your accountant or tax advisor to discuss your individual tax planning needs.)

A dark cloud lingers no longer

Stand up and take a bow. Sit down and pat yourselves on the back, or better yet, lift a glass of pop and say cheers to commemorate freedom.

No longer will the hockey teams at North and South have to worry about a lightning bolt coming down from the dark cloud that was manned by the Grosse Pointe School system.

One year ago, the school board reprimanded both programs for the lack of proper behavior on and off the ice. The board didn't want to hold the reins that would be fixed to the necks of the programs, but to maintain order they decided that keeping a close eye on the game may result in better conduct.

The decision didn't come without risks. One more brawl, problem or mishap and both programs could have been related to the USFL. One more escapade and hockey at the prep level in Grosse Pointe would be just another has been.

It was a good decision. From what I understand, both schools were a bit unruly. Neither program wanted to be ousted from the league, so they had one option and one only — clean it up, or forfeit the right to play.

So, they chose to clean it up. They chose to play. The programs were on thin ice, but neither team played too cautiously. They were under the watchful eye of board members, school members, parents, the community and the media. They chose to pull the plug on their own spotlight and did it with dignity.

Getting jolted time and time again is not easy for a 17-year-old hockey player. They don't mind forechecking, backchecking, slap shots and rough housing, but they had to do it with a little apprehension.

Would the program be around, or would one altercation lead to the demise of the program? These and many more questions were answered last week after the board of education decided to lift the probationary period they put the programs on last June. The probationary period was swiftly sent down after a pair of incidents focused statewide attention on poor behavior by a number of Grosse Pointe hockey fans. The board reacted quickly to try and nip the problem in the bud — and did. The first move was to allow North and South to play against one another, once. If the behavior proved positive, then game two would remain as scheduled. This season, both games went off without a hitch and that's a credit to both schools, the administration, the players, and fans. It's not easy to remain calm during a hockey game, but the Pointes' people solidified the board's feeling that hockey fans in Grosse Pointe are OK.

The board didn't want to be forced into such a decision, but something had to be done. It's a privilege the fans have to attend games, but sometimes the rules are stretched too far. This year, however the rules were bent, but they didn't break. What broke was the period of probation.

The cloud that lingered over the Grosse Pointe hockey fans and players is now a has been. The program is alive and well and the people, players and community can rest easy knowing that everyone involved in the situation has erased the poor memories from the rinks.

This season the fans were not objective, but who wants them to be? If they saw an enemy fall to the ice, they cheered. If the home team beat the goalie they banged some glass now and then, but they didn't shout obscenities or condescending words. They were classy, yet loud. They were clean, yet supportive and now the board recognizes that the fun is clean and the dirt is under the carpet. That's why they decided to give the fans their hockey back. But...

Don't take advantage of the lifted probation and fall back into a slump. Let the board's decision back you and you back the board's decision. It's a two-way street that needs a little more work, but with time the decision to put the programs on probation will be another tale to tell when you go to the rink.

The players knew the conditions and understood that if an altercation occurs, not to back down, but to not let it get out of hand. The fans knew the stipulations as well. If they didn't, they were reminded by the players or administration.

It's nice to know that when push comes to shove, the Grosse Pointes don't shove — they push to give the ice hockey programs top respect.

Hockey teams pass test

After one year under the careful eye of the school board, the hockey programs are now on their own

By Rob Fulton

The ball and chain that has been attached to the hockey programs at North and South this winter can now be detached.

Last week the Grosse Pointe Board of Education voted unanimously to lift a hockey probation they implemented last July after several incidents caused the programs some embarrassment and shame throughout the community.

Intolerable behavior, on and off the ice, provoked the school board to reprimand the programs.

After a pair of incidents during the 1986-87 season, the school board carefully analyzed the poor conduct by both players and fans and decided that placing the programs on probation may be a solution.

The most magnified incident took place at the first North/South meeting in which the fans had to be cleared from the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena after coins were repeatedly tossed on the ice — interrupting the game several times. The school board responded by imposing the probation which called for North and South to play in the first of two scheduled games this season and wait to see what transpired. After proper behavior was displayed, the second game was scheduled and went off without a hitch. As the season progressed, both teams were under careful scrutiny and didn't jump off the wagon once as they performed admirably, on and off the ice.

"The program has been under a microscope all year," said Superintendent John Whritner, who took the proposal of lifting the probation to the school board. "My recommendation to the board was that the probation be removed because the fan and player behavior was more than exemplary."

Last June the school board sent down the probation, so Whritner felt it was the board's responsibility to lift it.

"The board took several recommendations and placed the programs on probation, so it had to be the school board who removed it," he said. "I think it just shows how well the fans and players responded under some pressure."

Whritner apparently felt the probationary lift was warranted, and so does North Athletic Director Thomas Gauerke.

"It was deserved," said Gauerke. "We took some action and made some moves to assure ourselves that we wouldn't have any more problems."

The moves and action North took was a concerted effort to inform the students of the school board's intentions. Gauerke and three others organized a campaign and distributed it to all the kids at the beginning of the school year.

"We left nothing unsaid," Gauerke said. "When we met in the homerooms last fall, we had a very encouraging response from the teachers and the kids."

"We talked about the expectations we had and just informed the kids of the possible ramifications. We talked about standing still during the national anthem to how to react when an opposing player is injured. Our position was to talk about behavior in general. We put together a 20-minute presentation and took about three weeks to inform the whole school."

The reception Gauerke and the "committee" got was positive and that didn't come as a surprise to Gauerke.

"When our kids know the expectations we have of them, they respond in a very positive way," he said. "Having the probation lifted is something the kids and players deserve. They've worked hard to help things work out."

The precedent was set by the fans a year ago with the shenanigans that went on at games, but on the ice the players felt the heat coming down as well.

"The kids knew they were being watched all the time," said South hockey coach Tim Zimmerman. "They knew that one incident could ruin it all, but they didn't want to admit it because it may have changed the way they played."

Zimmerman says he's glad to be rid of the burden of being on probation, but knows that the 5-year-old program will always be scrutinized.

"I think hockey will always be in the spotlight because of the cost," he said. "It's one less burden we have to deal with. The kids are still going to work hard to keep a good program. Now they just don't have to worry about one fan in the stands."

That's all it would have taken. One altercation by a fan or player and both programs could have been iced.

"It put on a lot of added pressure that we don't need," said North hockey coach Mike Manzella. "Obviously we're delighted. The players have always shown good sportsmanship and the fans have been good too."

"We can all be relieved," Manzella added. "Now we can get ready to get back to playing hockey and putting pennants back into the rink."

Jo Lake, who is in her first year as the South athletic director, wasn't around when the board sent down the decision. She was aware of the problem of last season, but this year she was never witness to any problems.

"I've always had confidence that the kids would perform beautifully," she said. "I attended all the home games this year and we never had a problem."

"I feel good for the hockey players to play their sport without a probationary stigma hanging over them," Lake added.

With the help of the "For 'em Club" at South, crowd control was handled impeccably.

"The kids really behaved well, but we got a lot of support from the 'For 'em Club,'" said Lake. "They actively participated in the security of home assignments and put forth a great effort to help out."

Many people came to the aid of the program, but the players and fans had to be the ones to decide the destiny of the hockey program. Whritner feels that not only are the players and fans given an "A" for their efforts, but the grooming the kids got on proper sportsmanship has been carried into other events.

"Everyone has made an effort to assure us that the problems are in the past," said Whritner. "We've also seen the good behavior spill over into other school-related events."

The probation may have shed an atmosphere of apprehension and gloom over the Pointes, but as far as the coaches and administration are concerned, only blue skies are ahead.

"I am extremely proud of the kids," said Gauerke. "The teams and coaches conducted themselves in a positive and disciplined way."

Aggressive hockey is back in town.

Five icers collect All-State honors

Five local hockey players from North, South and University Liggett School have had All-State hockey honors bestowed upon them from two different state polls.

Link Bessert, Bob Poulos and Wayne Houle, all from North, and Steve Stoyka (ULS) were voted to the American Team of the Dodge Michigan High School All-State Hockey Team. South's Bill Huntington collected All-State honors from the Michigan High School Hockey Coaches' Association.

The awards were announced last week.

"It's something I've been striving for since sophomore year when I started playing high school hockey," said Poulos. "It's really an honor to be among some of the state's top players."

While each of them contemplate about the good fortune they have had, Poulos, just like the others, hopes that it's only the beginning.

"I hope it's not over," he said. "I hope something comes through where I can play college hockey."

Wayne Houle, a defenseman on the 15-9-1 Norseman team, is hoping that the recent attention will attract more teams to take a second look.

"Being selected means a lot," said Houle. "I'm very happy about it. I hope it gives me a better chance in pursuing to play for other teams after high school is over."

Huntington, who scored 15 goals and dished out 12 assists for the 11-12 Blue Devils, was taken by surprise when the Coaches' Association handed down the paperwork.

"It's a great honor," he said. "I didn't expect to make it at all."

"It never crossed my mind," he added. "I knew that coach (Tim Zimmerman) nominated me, but I was very surprised when I heard I was selected."

Stoyka, a soft-spoken goaltender for ULS, is pleased with being honored, but isn't too sure on how to handle the glory.

"I guess it's an honor to be considered one of the best senior hockey players in the state," he said. "It really means a lot."

Bessert, who was one of 20 skaters chosen to play for Team Michigan in a nationwide All-Star game March 29-April 3 in Chicago, has been one of the finest skaters in the state for years, but it's the first time he's been selected as an All-Stater.

"This is something I've been looking forward to for a long time," Bessert said. "It's the highest hockey award you can get as a high school player and that says a lot in itself."

The captain of the Blue Devils this season, Huntington began playing ice hockey when he was 13. It wasn't something he was forced to do, but if it wasn't for a friend's brother, hockey may just be another hobby.

"A friend of mine had an older brother in hockey and he started us out," Huntington said. "After thinking about it, my parents thought it may be a good idea, so I got involved. Since then I just kept playing."

Stoyka, who finished his second season between the pipes at ULS, realized a childhood dream when he slipped on the Knights' red and blue jersey.

"As a kid my dream was to play on the ULS varsity hockey team," he said. "When I was young I decided to concentrate on hockey and excel at it."

Goaltending was something Stoyka, well, stumbled upon.

"I have no idea why I decided to be a goalie," he said. "I'm not really a fast skater, so I guess it was my spot."

Houle and Poulos have been skating for five and seven years, respectively and agree that the intensity and fast pace is what keeps them interested.

"Ever since I can remember, I have liked the fast pace," said Poulos, who was a tri-captain this season. "It's just a lot of fun to play hockey."

"I like it because it is a fast sport and very intense," he said. "Playing hockey for a few years has been very satisfying for me."

Bessert, who couldn't recall the first day his ankles bent and his stick held him up, did remember that having skates on may be a more common occurrence than wearing shoes.

"I can't remember not having skates on," he said. "We had a rink in our back yard and we used to play on that when we were little."

"Playing hockey has been something I haven't done without for as long as I can remember," he added.

Crews selected for U.S. Yacht Club Challenge

Ninety-six of the most accomplished sailors in the world of American yachting have been selected by the 12 competing yacht clubs to be crew members in the 1988 U.S. Yacht Club Challenge, which will be sailed in the waters off Newport Beach, Calif. April 6-10.

Designed to determine the best yacht club in the nation by testing the sailing and racing skills of the teams as a whole, the U.S. Yacht Club Challenge is organized and hosted by the Newport Harbor Yacht Club and sponsored by Rolex Watch U.S.A., which has been presenting sponsor of the biennial regatta since its inception in 1984.

While the focus of the event is on teams, rather than individuals, it's difficult to bring together 12 of the country's best yacht clubs without attracting some of the top names in yachting, and this year's field is no exception.

The team from California Yacht Club of Marina del Rey will include two America's Cup veterans — Bill Peterson, sail designer for the victorious Stars and Stripes, and Kimo Worthington, a crew member on the Eagle, one of the top U.S. challengers in the 1987 series.

Bayview Yacht Club of Detroit is sending brothers Bruce and Glen Burton, who have numerous titles to their credit, including the 1986 Etchells World Championship.

These and their fellow crew members will compete in a series of five fleet races sailed on a boat-for-boat basis in Schock 35s. The boats, supplied by the Newport Harbor Yacht Club, will be equalized as closely as possible. The crews have been selected by each of the competing yacht clubs from among their members. In accordance with U.S. Yacht Club Challenge rules, individuals who have skippered a winning boat in the America's Cup, Olympics, Congressional Cup or any other Olympic-class world championship cannot serve as helmsmen, but they may serve in any other crew capacity.

The winning club will have its name and those of the winning crew engraved on the United States Yacht Club Challenge Cup. First-, second- and third-place clubs will receive Rolex Oyster Perpetual Submariner timepieces, and participation awards will also be presented.

The complete crew roster for the Bayview Yacht Club follows:

- Bruce J. Burton (helmsman)
- Michael J. Feldman
- John G. Morman
- Joe Hazebrook
- Klune J. Walsh III
- Glen W. Burton
- John A. Wake
- Michael A. "Grizz" Thompson
- John S. Barbour

Squash finalist

Bill Brucker, of the Farms, will be one of 96 grand finalists from across the country competing for the 1987-88 Insilco National B/C/D Squash Championships at The Merion Cricket Club in Haverford, Penn. on April 15-17.

As winner of the D Division in Michigan's recent playoff, Brucker earned a trip to the Insilco Grand Finals.

The winners of the Insilco B/C/D championships are recognized as national amateur champions in their respective divisions by the United States Squash Racquets Association.

Squash team has fine season

The Wimbledon Squash Team won the 1987-88 D-League Season of the Michigan Squash and Racquet Association.

The team, only in its second year, ended its season on top of 12 teams. They beat such perennial powers as the Detroit Athletic Club, the Birmingham Athletic Club and the Jewish Community Center.

Team captain Cam Smith believes good guys can finish first.

"We are just a group of guys from Grosse Pointe that have a lot of fun playing together," he said. "Winning the season is the icing on the cake."

With the depth of the team, it's no wonder they finished at the top.

"The depth of our players is really the key to our successful season," said Bill Brucker, the team's No. 1 seeded player. "Our first three-seeded players could probably play No. 1 on most other teams. Mike Doyle, our No. 2 player, only lost one match during the season."

Mike Yanosek has been the team's most improved player after coming off a knee operation, and Paul Huth has provided consistent play throughout the five-month season. Also, Grosse Pointers Dave Peters, Mike Smith and Brad Bradley provided firepower when substitutes were needed.

"The biggest thanks goes out to Wimbledon Racquet Club for taking the initiative of building up its squash program," said Huth. "The people at Wimbledon have been super in not only helping us, but also setting up intra-club leagues for the recreational players."

The Wimbledon team is now taking part in the postseason state tournament as the No. 1 team in the draw.

Fit Fascinating facts

The University of California, Berkeley Wellness Letter is a solid source of nutrition, fitness and stress management news. The most recent issue stated some fascinating facts:

- Eating eight ounces of potato chips is like adding 12 to 20 teaspoons of vegetable oil (usually hydrogenated) and a teaspoon of salt to an eight-ounce potato — as much fat and sodium as most people should eat in an entire day.

- Wearing a helmet is the single most important safety factor in cycling. Yet less than 2 percent of all school children wear helmets when riding their bicycles.

My son was in the hospital three times as a youngster — each time associated with a fall on the bicycle. Parents, your children won't want to wear a helmet because "the other kids don't." It's up to you to help educate the kids with pertinent information and perhaps a few fun stickers.

In this regard, the "Team Prince Bicycle Safety Guide" is a must have. The pamphlet can be ordered for 35 cents and the bicycle safety kit, which includes a reflective vest and tapes for helmet and bike, is available for $7.49. Order from Prince Bike Safety Offer, P.O. Box 7152, Dept. FC, Cherry Hill, N.J. 08034. Defensive bicycle riding should be learned at an early age.

- March 20 began "National Poison Prevention Week." The bathroom is a poor place to keep medication, not only because it's available to the little ones, but because heat and dampness can speed deterioration. Choose a cool, high and dry place instead, such as a closet shelf. How about a locked closet?

- Boys get more colds than girls, but women get more than men.

- It's surprising to discover that what science knows about coronary artery disease (CAD) comes chiefly from studies of men.

Everyone has heard about the study which reported in the "New England Journal of Medicine" in January, that an aspirin taken every other day can reduce the risk of heart attacks by almost half. The study's 22,000 participants were all male physicians. It is true that more men die from heart attacks, but every year approximately 250,000 women die of CAD, about seven times as many who die of breast cancer. This is a surprising statistic.

There are definite gender-related differences. Women typically get CAD later than men do: the number one killer of men over 39, and women, of over 65.

- Doctors have assumed that women's sex hormones protect them against heart disease. A recent study suggested that postmenopausal women who take estrogen may significantly reduce their mortality rate from heart attacks. However, other studies have failed to confirm these findings. Another gender related difference in this picture is blood triglycerides. High levels in men are indicative of trouble only if cholesterol levels are also high, but in women high triglyceride levels are worrisome even if cholesterol levels are within the normal range. It is not clear why this is so.

The most important gender-related difference is a combination of oral contraceptives and smoking. One study estimates that 55 percent of heart attacks in women under 50 can be attributed to smoking. More women than men die in the first month following a heart attack, and they have a higher rate of recurrence.

With this in mind, I wonder why the 22,000 participants in the aspirin study were all male? There must be a good reason!

Senior citizens take note

Unlimited exercise available to senior citizens

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Getting older doesn't necessarily mean that senior citizens can't be active. In fact, a fitness routine is essential to good health.

According to Mary Beth Lepczyk, a clinical nurse specialist for the department of gerontology at Harper Hospital, senior citizens should remain active without endangering their health.

"The best thing for seniors to do even if you have a chronic health problem," Lepczyk said, "is to get involved in a moderate form of exercise," said Lepczyk. "One of the best forms of moderate exercise is walking."

Becoming fit does not happen overnight and takes plenty of patience to attain certain goals.

"A lot of people don't realize how good walking is for them," said Lepczyk. "And all they have to do is walk 20 minutes a day, four times a week. If you follow that, within a year's time you'll have a high level of fitness."

Lepczyk suggests walking be done in a familiar military style.

"People should walk in a military cadence," she said. "That means walking with the shoulders back, arms swinging at the sides of the body, and the stomach tucked in."

That's right, the stomach tucked in.

"The stomach muscles are the only muscles that support the lower back," Lepczyk said. "If you can strengthen them, then you can prevent problems in the lower back."

While some senior citizens may be able to get out and walk, others are confined to a wheelchair or bed. But, they aren't restricted from exercising.

"Toe pointing," said Lepczyk. "It's a good exercise for people who are bed-ridden or in a wheelchair.

"All it requires is to stretch the leg and point the toes at the wall in front of you and then point them back toward your nose."

Doing this procedure minimizes the walking, but increases circulation to the heart. It also decreases the swelling you may have in the legs, according to Lepczyk.

Another exercise which can be done in the privacy of a bed or wheelchair, is ankle circles.

"Take the ankle and roll it clockwise and then counter clockwise," suggested Lepczyk. "You'll get a twisting motion in the back of your calf and thigh muscles. The best way to do it is three rotations, 10 times a day."

After a large meal, many feel lethargic and think they should walk it off or become active immediately to attack the large amount of food they consumed. But, contrary to popular belief, hitting the couch or picking up the paper is best for the system.

"After eating, it is recommended you wait at least 60 minutes before engaging in any type of exercise," Lepczyk said. "The blood supply is going to the stomach to help digest the food so you can overtax your heart if you ask too much of it."

"It's very dangerous to get up and walk right after a big meal," she added. "It's a strain on your heart because you're requiring it to pump blood to the stomach as well as throughout the body. This is not advised."

Soup is good food, but did you know that it could be a useful companion on your walks?

"Taking along a couple soup cans on a walk can be very beneficial," said Lepczyk. "Put one in each arm and extend and bend the elbows while your walking. This can give some build up in the upper body and help some sagging of muscles."

"They only weigh about one pound, so it's not like it's an excessive amount of weight," she added.

Whether it's a bicycle built for two or not, hop aboard that bicycle if able. Bicycling is an excellent form of exercise, if you remember to keep the stomach tucked in, according to Lepczyk.

"While bicycling, it's important to remember two things," she said. "One is to keep the stomach in and two is to push the heel to the ground. That forces the larger muscle group to exercise more and gives you full extension of the muscles."

Exercising in bed, walking or bicycling doesn't require a lot of energy and seems to be the ideal way for senior citizens to enjoy being active. "These exercises are geared for senior citizens to be fit," Lepczyk said. "They don't need a lot of resources to be active and doing these will help them stay, or become fit, or at least get some movement."

Smart

On the road again No gain, no pain, travel tips

It's that wonderful time of the year again — spring break!

You may be heading off for distant shores for an extended time frame, or merely taking a long-awaited, weekend getaway. Your anticipation may soon be dampened by thoughts of your last vacation, where you once again were overwhelmed by the trip itself, and all your resolutions to eat healthfully went out the window before you got this side of Toledo.

Well, there is good news. Just because you are going on a trip does not mean that you have lost all your rights to a nutritionally smart eating plan. And there lies the key word — plan. If you will plan your foods as wisely as you plan the rest of your vacation, you will return home without those five or 10 pounds of fat you always seem to pick up along the way. (It's amazing that the same phenomenon that happens to our suitcases, happens to us — the clothes that were packed perfectly into the suitcases upon departure no longer fit and must be smashed in, just like we must scrunch our bodies to make the clothes fit.)

By land, sea or air

"To the levee in your Chevy" — and other destinations. What is more American than bundling up the "kiddies," or setting off with your "love" in your car? A holiday by car can be relaxing if you plan ahead of time, or it can turn into a nightmare. It is your choice.

There are a few tips to smooth the way as you zip across America, or maybe just Michigan.

- Take a large thermos of water. Everyone on the trip will benefit nicely by drinking water instead of soda pops, coffee, etc. and it can easily be replenished along the way.

- Pack a small cooler with fresh fruits, cut-up vegetables, cheese slices, and low-sodium crackers for snack foods.

- Even fast-food places can be a nutritionally "smart" stop for meals if you order salads with lean proteins, such as chicken. Avoid the greasy, fried foods; they will only tend to make you feel sluggish and over-tired.

- Do not pack high-sugared foods. Take the advice from someone who has traveled extensively with four children. Some children are not affected in the least, while others end up literally flying off the ceiling of the car. Even if only one of your "darlings" reacts to high-sugared foods, the odds of having a sane trip are stacked against you. The golden rule — "if you don't pack it, or buy it, they can't eat it!"

In the air

- Avoid the normal airline meals, which can be extremely high in calories. By ordering ahead, you can choose a vegetarian meal, seafood, or make a low-calorie selection. Many travelers are unaware that they may order ahead of flight time. The airlines do make a variety of menus, according to individual needs, but you must ask in order that your personal requirements are met.

- Avoid alcoholic beverages. Instead, order a refreshing glass of club soda or ask if they have mineral waters, such as Perrier. You will arrive at your destination, feeling much more fit and in control.

- Carry a few "survival foods" along with you on the plane. This helps to get through any unforeseen delays and alterations in flight schedules along the way.

Suggestions for foods that travel fairly easily — apples, bananas, crackers, granola bars, (low-sugar).

By the beautiful sea (cruising)

- Contrary to the popular myth, a cruise vacation does not have to mean that you gain five or 10 pounds because you were kept captive. Again, you must pack some

"survival foods" along with your cruise clothes. Low-sodium crackers, low-calorie dressings for salads, (available at Diet Center) can be packed in zip-lock style bags and take up little space in your suitcase.

- Cruise lines make available a wide variety of food choices. It is up to you. Check out the fresh fruits and vegetables before you load yourself down with all of the other food choices.

- The cruise vacation always has a multitude of activities available to keep you moving. Instead of lounging, walk the deck, take a swim, play a game of shuffle board or paddle tennis. The list can be endless.

So, no matter how you have chosen to spend your vacation time, these few travel tips may help you avoid countless calories and added pounds along the way.

As Roy Rogers once said, "Happy trails to you!"

CPR class at Cottage

Miracles can and do happen.

According to the American Heart Association of Michigan, each day people across America are performing a death defying act when they learn the skills of CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation).

You too can learn the lifesaving technique of CPR in a three-hour class at Cottage Hospital. The next CPR class will be held on Tuesday, March 29 from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. in the lower level boardrooms.

Persons who successfully complete the course receive certification for one year. There is a $3 fee for the class.

It's time to start walking

If you're looking for an exercise program that provides cardiovascular benefits without the jarring stress to the joints associated with running, try walking.

Specifically, try "Walking For Fitness." The class will be offered at the War Memorial, Tuesdays and Thursdays, March 29-May 5 from 9 to 10 a.m.

Taught by Valerie Pokorny-McHugh of Super Shape, Inc., the class is a great way to get moving after the long winter months. Students start each class with special warm-up techniques, then it's out of the building for an invigorating walk down Lakeshore.

The goal of the class is to cover a distance of three miles in 45 minutes. Proper cool-down exercises will complete each class.

"Walking For Fitness" will meet regardless of rain or shine, so dress for the weather and wear strong, supportive running shoes.

Class fee is $35 for six weeks (12 sessions). For registration information, call the War Memorial at 881-7511, Monday-Saturday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

By learning CPR you become part of a movement in scientific advancement which began to change emergency care in 1960 when researchers in Baltimore made an important discovery. They found that compressing a victim's chest along with rescue breathing helped to sustain life under certain conditions.

CPR can save lives. Approximately 650,000 people will die of heart attack this year. Of these, it is estimated that 350,000 deaths will happen outside of a hospital and usually will occur within the first two hours after the onset of symptoms.

Other causes of sudden death include drowning, suffocation, electrocution, drug overdose and automobile accidents. Many of these deaths can be prevented if the victims get prompt help — if someone trained in CPR provides proper lifesaving measures until trained professionals take over.

Learn to be a lifesaver. Call 884-8600, extension 2390, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Space is limited and registrations are being taken.

What a collection

Christine Jamerino, from all Pointes Swim Club and a student of Monteith Elementary School, won the High-Point trophy at the 1988 Michigan Girls' State Short Course Swimming Championships.

Jamerino proudly accepted the trophy and some roses after capturing the top award with a 1:01.69 in the 100 freestyle.

The 10-and-under champion placed second in the 100 breaststroke (1:16.21), first in the 50 breaststroke (34.70) and second in the 100 individual medley 1:11.24.

Continuing on the road to success, Jamerino placed second in the 50 freestyle (28.17) and third in the 200 individual medley (2:34.78).

It was quite a collection of hardware for Jamerino as she picked up six medals and one plaque.

101 PRAYERS

NOVENA TO ST. JUDE
May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Oh, Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. Workers of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude helper of the hopeless, pray for us.

Say this prayer 9 times a day. By the 8th day your prayer will be answered. It has never been known to fail, never. Publication must be promised. Thanks St. Jude for prayer answered. M.D.S.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen.

Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer three consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day you wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as you favor has been granted. Thank you for favors received. M.A.L.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen.

Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer three consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day you wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as you favor has been granted. Thank you for favors received. M.A.L.

Bruce pursues baseball career at Michigan State

By Terry Ayrault
Special Writer

Sean Bruce, a 1987 South graduate who was known for his basketball talent in high school, is now a collegiate freshman pursuing his second love — baseball.

Bruce, 19, who played three years of varsity basketball at South and was voted All-Eastern Michigan League and team Most Valuable Player in 1987, is now attending Michigan State University on a baseball scholarship.

"This year he looks good," said MSU assistant coach Rob Ellis. "He's got some skills with the bat, he's a fast runner and moves real well. Those skills make him a complete ball player — complete enough to help us this year."

The Spartan second baseman is presently enjoying practice at MSU before the season opens on April 2. Bruce is finding out that the three-hour practices (2:30 to 5:30 p.m.) on synthetic turf are a good opportunity for him to showcase his talents with the bat and the glove.

"I'm doing pretty good," said Bruce. "We have a lot of talent. Most of our starters are returning so I probably won't see much playing time this year. I've got a lot to learn. I'll do whatever they ask of me."

Like most athletes, Bruce has found that college athletics, especially at the Division I level, are more competitive than high school athletics.

"I didn't expect the players to be as good," he said. "You think you're a big gun and then you get here and everyone's good. Nothing can prepare you for this. It's so intimidating at first because you don't know anyone."

The smiling slugger, who hit a triple in the 1987 Michigan High School All-Star Game, expects the Spartans to be highly competitive in the Big Ten Conference this season.

"Actually, we're supposed to have the best talent in the league," said Bruce.

A three-sport athlete at South (he also played soccer), Bruce was recruited for basketball by Wayne State and other Division II schools, but he wanted to play on the Division I level.

"My first love was basketball," he said. But, when MSU came calling, Bruce decided that playing on the diamond at State would be the best choice.

"I felt more a part of this place," he said. "The campus is beautiful and I'm meeting a lot of new people."

Bruce's baseball success has put thoughts of a making a career out of baseball in the back of his mind.

"It's a dream of mine to play pro baseball," said Bruce. "Anyone who plays Division I athletics probably has a dream of taking it to the next highest level."

The pro scouts are not knocking on Bruce's dormitory door yet, but he is approaching college baseball in a steadfast manner.

"I would say, as far as athletics go, the main thing is to have fun," said Bruce. "...Sports make you a well-rounded person. Playing sports teaches you discipline."

It's also important to Bruce to keep a good head about his good fortune.

"My dad always told me you must be more than a good athlete, but also a good person — treat everyone equally," said Bruce.

Sean Bruce

And grade point averages (GPA) are as important as RBI for the former Blue Devil who plans to major in economics. Bruce is finishing his second term and is learning to adjust to his new life. This adjustment includes budgeting his time.

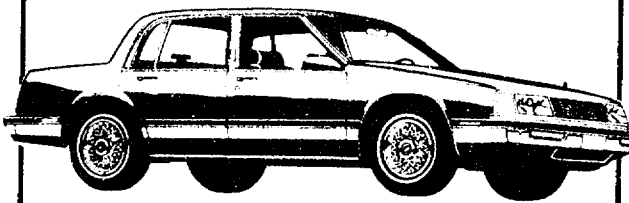

"You must make decisions because it (baseball) takes away the amount of time you have to study," Bruce said. "But we do get tutors and have a study hall. I think I should go to college to get a degree first."

The last term in his first year and the regular season of baseball awaits. On top of all this, Bruce longs for home.

"I was homesick for probably the whole first term," he said.

Baseball players get homesick too.

"The best sedan in the world."

CAR Magazine, November 1986

EVOLUTION OF THE SPECIES

The New Breed Jaguar XJ6

The 1988 Jaguar XJ6. Like its forebears, its sleek form is taut and well-muscled. Yet it faces the wind with still greater aerodynamic efficiency.

True to Jaguar tradition, its new fuel injected six cylinder engine has double overhead cams. However, the added sophistication of 24 valves further enhances power and response. Inside, the new XJ6 artfully blends the classic splendor of supple leather and fine wood, with the most advanced computer-age engineering.

The 1988 Jaguar XJ6. It is totally new, yet it reflects the finest traits of its forebears. It marks the evolution of a legendary species. It's little wonder that upon previewing it in Europe, CAR magazine called it "the best sedan in the world."

Fashion

Grosse Pointe News

Fabulous fashions that flatter the feminine form

Spring is in the air, as stylish women step along in sprightly fashion, in the newest bare fashions, whose very absence of excess fabric makes their presence known.

Short skirts reveal knees already exposed to the winds of winter. And, form-fitting tops—flirty bustiers, and their more subtle sisters, shapely and softly draped jackets and blouses—reflect a renewed flattery of the feminine form, with an emphasis on curves.

There is, of course, a sprinkling of longer skirts, as well—not every woman welcomes the opportunity to display calves, knees and even thighs—but they, too, are feminine, softly flowing and romantic.

The other option to the short skirt—one for which designers are markedly enthusiastic—is the draped trouser, with wide legs, which offers a feeling of classical simplicity meant to appeal to women who are younger in spirit than they are in shape.

Among the short silhouettes, the hem-up, hands-down winners are the full, flirtatious point worn with a fitted, alluringly revealing bustier, and the sleek, narrow skirt, which ideally stops several inches above the knee, and which is complemented best by either a long, straight top or a short, sculpted one, though some designers have succeeded in draping this skirt, and pairing it with a similarly draped jacket or blouse.

The third standout choice is the city short—a kooky alternative to the skirt which can be worn for leisure, but which also can look right in considerably more structured situations.

The key here is the blouse, sweater or jacket that's worn, plus the appropriate accessories—a cleverly arranged scarf, for example, or a striking pin or oversized gold earrings—and, what's absolutely essential, the correct hosiery and shoes. All of these options combine American verve with European chic—a pairing which incorporates the best of both fashion worlds.

With a passing salute to spring's traditional nautical colors of red, white and blue, crisp as ever, and a quick stop at the candy store for the Easter egg-jelly bean pastels, the color story for spring '88 seems to focus on the new, dark, rich neutrals.

These add a note of sophistication to even the most youthful styles—as once-traditional play clothes make a dramatic move in the direction of the boardroom.

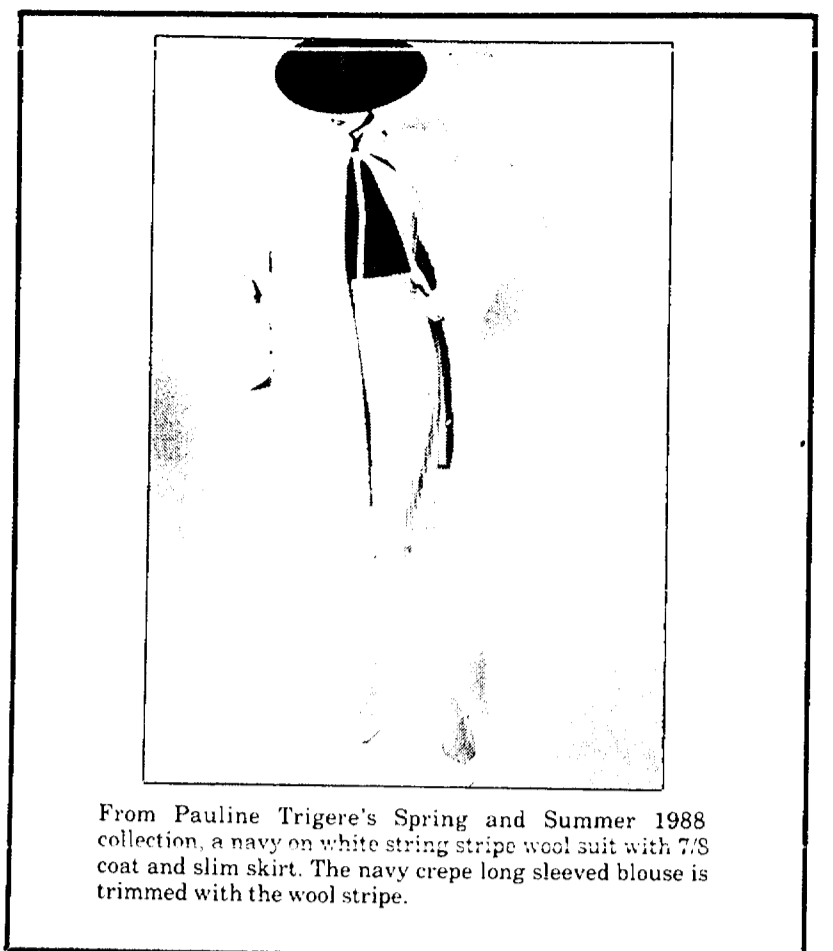

How complete the takeover by short skirts and shorts will be remains to be seen—however, a peek ahead at fall '88 indicates that designers and manufacturers will be dropping hemlines, at least to some extent.

That's good news for those who have opted to remain faithful to their long skirts.

On the other hand, those who have embraced the new-again short skirts can feel confident that these pert, perky and slightly impertinent styles will be flattering youthful figures and attracting attention—if not forever, at least for several seasons to come.

Telegraph a message in black and white. It's a sophisticated jungle out there, and you're dressed for the occasion in Morton Myles' silk shantung zebra suit, a bare top dress mated with a fitted, rhinestone button jacket.

From Pauline Triguere's Spring and Summer 1988 collection, a navy on white string stripe wool suit with 7/8 coat and slim skirt. The navy crepe long sleeved blouse is trimmed with the wool stripe.

Slim black and white dress in collage print silk jacquard, with soft draped neckline - and a matching separate scarf (not shown) from Pauline Triguere's Spring and Summer 1988 collection.

Blooms with a view - Morton Myles' taffeta dresses are bouyantly printed with large, pink, painterly rose blossoms. Left: The short and shapely dress with draped bust and bow-bedecked sleeves. Right: The best-of-both-worlds dress - short in front and long in back, punctuated with two oversized rear view bows.

LAKESIDE
THE CENTER OF ATTENTION

Two faces of spring fashion

SIGNATURE DETAILS such as the luxe reptile belt identify both the daytime and evening outfits above as the work of one designer—in this case, Louis dell'Olio for Anne Klein & Co. For spring '88, dell'Olio has created eminently wearable clothing that still remains on the fashion forefront, by gently altering classic silhouettes. Left, dell'Olio achieves a sarong effect, which is particularly striking in combination with the elaborately patterned, entrancingly sparkly fabric which is used for camisole, skirt and—somewhat varied—for the jacket. Right, slim good looks are the key, with solid color separates that are sleek and sophisticated—long, collarless jacket, and matching blouse and skirt, the latter only just above the knee.

Subtlety is key

THE MONIED LOOK—An almost oriental-looking crocheted sweater, by Donna Karan for spring, 1988, is shown here with a full skirt which is gently draped. Around the waist, a gold coin belt.

Let's talk about skin care systems. Some have good ingredients and some have bad. Check your system for some of the bad:

1. Mineral Oil — A by-product of petroleum, a thinned version of vasoline which inhibits the skin's eliminative metabolism leaving black heads, white heads, and little bumps under the skin. It also acts as a magnet for dirt.

2. Isopropyl Alcohol — A harsh astringent which dissolves oils including sebum and other of the skins natural oils.

3. Beeswax — Clogs pores and has the same effects as mineral oil, and, unfortunately, it builds up with use.

4. Borax — A hydrated sodium borate used as a flux, cleansing agent, and preservative, penetrates skin rapidly and can cause poisoning.

Look instead for some of the good:

1. Aloe Vera — Emollient and moisturizer containing 20 amino acids and carbohydrates.

2. Allantoin — Ability to stimulate the growth of healthy skin.

3. Albumen — Simple proteins.

4. Biotin — (Vitamin H, Vitamin B factor) vital to growth. Needed for healthy circulation and red blood cells.

5. Carotene — Provitamin A promotes healthy skin.

6. Elastin — Elastic protein found in skin layers.

7. Human Placental Protein — A rich source of skin nutrients, amino acids and proteins capable of penetrating skin layers.

8. Jojoba — Aids in stabilizing skin secretions.

9. Paba — Natural mineral in B family. Protects skin by blocking alpha ultra-violet rays.

10. Pathenol — Vitamin B complex.

11. Rnaidna — Found in both the nucleus and cytoplasm of the cell, it is the material that contains directions for the genetic code of the cell.

12. Vitamin A — Preserves skins elasticity and smoothness. Internally, aids in growth and repair of the tissues.

13. Vitamin D — Absorbed through the skin. Thought to have skin healing properties.

14. Vitamin E — Inhibits formation to lipid peroxides which are a major cause of cell aging. Protects fatty tissue from abnormal breakdown.

15. Polysaccharides — Organic molecules found through out the body. Thought to be the ultimate hair & scalp nourishment.

Facials are an excellent way of ridding the skin of dead cells, unwanted oils and build-up. One such facial is by nuskin, a fairly new skin care system.

The facial lift and activator are among the most exciting items in the nuskin line because results can be seen and felt immediately. Within minutes you can look younger.

Heres how:
As you know, the muscles in the face are connected to the skin. The facial lift conditions, builds, tones, and firms the skin and the muscles attached to it. By it's unique pulsating action you can feel the facial actually exercising your face. It's a vital part of any skin care system. Call the professionals at Jauntre Hair Salon to have your own new skin facial — 773-2620.

The Shape of Things to Come

Diamond jewelry has taken a hot new design direction using fancy cut diamonds. The Round or Brilliant cut has traditionally been the most popular shape of the diamond. But, today's contemporary shapes have added a new and exciting dimension to the newest jewelry designs.

The baguette diamond (rectangular shape) is not new; in fact, they were used in very old pieces from another era. However, the new techniques used in channel setting the stones have added a new interest in using this fancy shape to enhance any contemporary design.

The Marquise, Pear, Emerald, Oval, and Heart shape diamonds are also still among the most popular. Recently a new series of fancy diamonds have created an exciting addition to the jewelry industry. The Radiant cut diamond combines the classic elegance of the traditional emerald shape with the fiery brilliance of the round cut. The Trillion cut diamond is a brilliant type cut applied to the triangular shape and the Quadrillion cut diamond is a square shape whose facets create a brilliant star pattern.

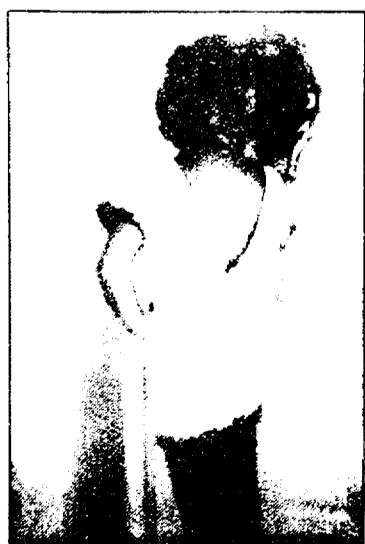

Today we find in men's as well as women's contemporary jewelry new and exciting designs using fancy cut diamonds.

Shown are five wedding rings using the contemporary channel set baguette style mountings set with the Marquise, Trillion, Radiant, Oval, and Pear shaped diamonds from Edmund T. Ahee Jewelers, 20139 Mack Avenue, Grosse Pointe Woods.

Flirtatiously feminine

FLORAL DELIGHT — A small scale pattern of stylized flowers is repeated over the skirt and bodice of this frankly feminine confection by Geoffrey Beene for spring '88. Flirtatious touches include the edging of black lace around the scalloped hem, and the back bow which completes the bodice.

Lustrous cultured pearl jewelry: The perfect enhancement for sophisticated spring styles

Sweeping in with femininely flirtatious forms that range from playful to sophisticated, spring fashion '88 features a multitude of short, swingy skirts, sporty walking shorts "suits," and elegant evening wear in every fabric from taffeta and silk to crinoline and tulle.

The ease of cropped jackets and the soft, supple lines of silk jersey slacks round out the myriad of options for the latest spring looks.

With summer's bared shoulders and bustiers, proper accessories are increasingly important as the means of expressing a personal sense of style.

As appropriate as ever, cultured pearl jewelry is the perfect way to enhance both daytime and evening looks.

The timeless appeal of cultured pearl jewelry is easily apparent but, in many cases, consumers do not understand the intricacies of selecting cultured pearls, which are both high in quality and flattering to individual features and proportions.

Distinguishing between a cultured pearl and an imitation pearl is the first step toward selecting a piece of jewelry that will have lasting beauty and value. Like natural pearls, cultured pearls have a soft inner glow, or lustre, which emanates from deep within the pearl. Imitation pearls have a surface shine but no lustre.

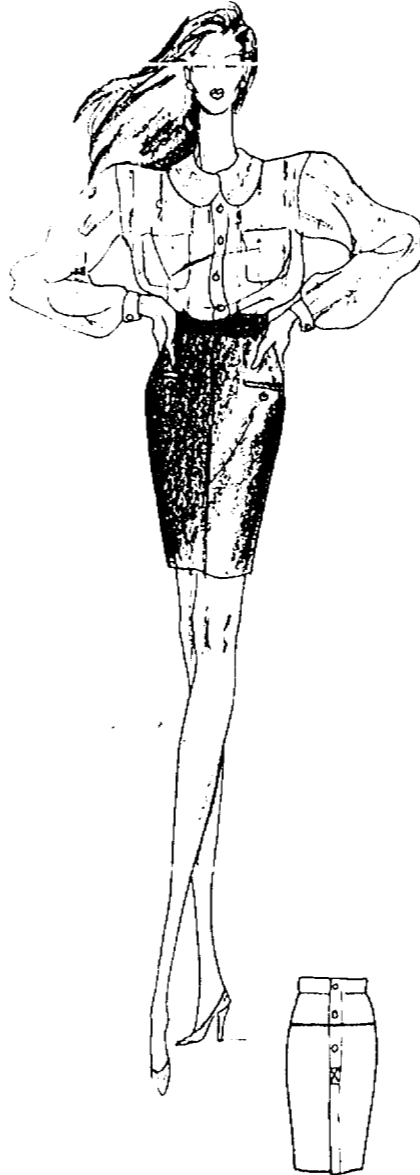

Cultured pearls have a gritty feel when applied to the surface of the tooth, while simulated pearls feel smooth and have a glassy, metallic look. Ultimately, the value of cultured pearls is determined by size, lustre, surface perfection and color.

Although most people think of pearls as being "white," most pearls actually have rose, silver or cream overtones. Cultured pearl necklaces should always be selected based on individual skin color. For fair complexions, pink hued cultured pearls are recommended, while cream colored cultured pearls are most flattering for dark skin tones.

The strapless dresses and shoulder wrap bandeau tops of spring and summer are perfect for displaying cultured pearl necklaces of one or more strands. Available in a variety of lengths, from discreet chokers to the elegantly regal opera length strand, cultured pearl necklaces are all the more versatile when a pretty gemstone clasp is added.

A pair of feminine, cultured mabe pearl earrings, perhaps edged in gold, is the perfect complement to summer's sleeked-back hairstyles and flirtatious fashions.

The cultured pearl is a true chameleon that adapts to any number of looks. Accenting the playful or sultry when combined with one outfit, or looking classically demure and sophisticated when accessorizing another, cultured pearl jewelry combines beauty and versatility for long-lasting value and fashion finesse.

SHORT AND SHAPED MEAN BUSINESS—Smartly outfitted for spring, executive women will look fashionably feminine in this ensemble from Alcott & Andrews. The sheer, printed georgette silk blouse tops a short and slim lightweight wool skirt accented with slit pockets and buttons. Add a cardigan or blazer for a perfectly polished daytime look.

FASHION PEARLS—A sophisticated yet playful mood is created by this strapless taffeta dress with ruffled skirt by Akira. Completing the ensemble is a magnificent 10mm cultured pearl necklace with gold rondelles and a diamond and amethyst center pendant. The earrings are large south sea baroque cultured pearls topped with diamonds. Necklace and earrings courtesy of the Cultured Pearl Association of America.

Aura of romance

SOME ENCHANTED EVENING is evoked by this simply elegant evening suit by Ralph Lauren for spring, 1988. Short—but not too short—narrow skirt is worn with a shapely cropped jacket with modified shawl collar and exaggerated shoulders. The jacket's sleeves are pushed up to just below the elbow; long gloves are worn pushed down as a finishing touch. The only adornment is a pair of gold button earrings, as Lauren proves again that his fashion statement is superbly engineered under-statement.

Sparkly chic

ALL THAT GLITTERS—From Mary Jane Marcasiano, for spring '88, stylish eveningwear which features a very cropped sweater jacket over a strapless minidress with gathered, dropped waist.

PLEASING PLEATS—For spring, 1988, Oleg Cassini flutters the male form with stylishly pleated trousers of comfortable, easy-care "Trevira," for Slacks Fifth Avenue. A shirt with the new, smaller collar, and relaxed cardigan with large-scale plaid, complete the look. Photographed in the courtyard of Maxim's Hotel, Palm Springs, California.

Easy does it!

FASHION IS FUN when it bears the touch of Joan Vass, a master at the art of whimsy. Here, for spring '88, shiny dark pants are topped by a relaxed sweater whose pale ground is speckled with "confetti." Sleeves are pushed up to complete the leisurely mood.

Study finds American men resisting gray-haired stereotype of middle age

According to a recent study of 1,000 middle-aged men (conducted during the development of "Just For Men," the first five-minute, shampoo-in, permanent hair coloring for men), a growing number of American men are challenging the stereotypes of middle age as never before. They view themselves as younger than they actually are, and are adjusting their physical appearance to look as young as they feel.

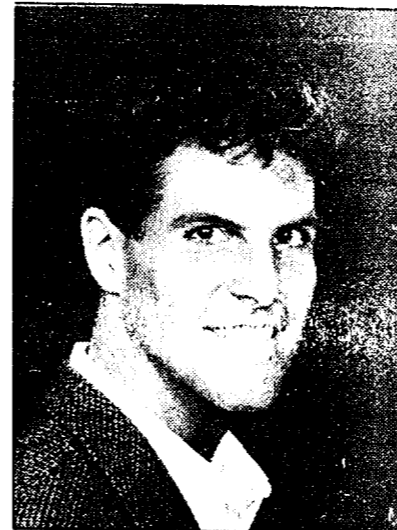

Defying the attitudes of earlier generations, survey respondents emphasized the importance of appearance, staying fit and maintaining a youthful attitude.

An overwhelming 74 percent agreed with the statement, "I feel that my image is important to my success," and more than 76 percent admitted that they were concerned about their looks.

A surprising 43 percent of the survey respondents, aged 40 to 50, answered that they "agree strongly" with the statement "I feel like I'm in my 30s."

Gray hair was of particular concern to many of the men surveyed. Sixty-three percent agreed that "too much gray hair makes a man look old."

Almost half of the respondents—48 percent—endorsed the idea of men coloring their hair to banish gray.

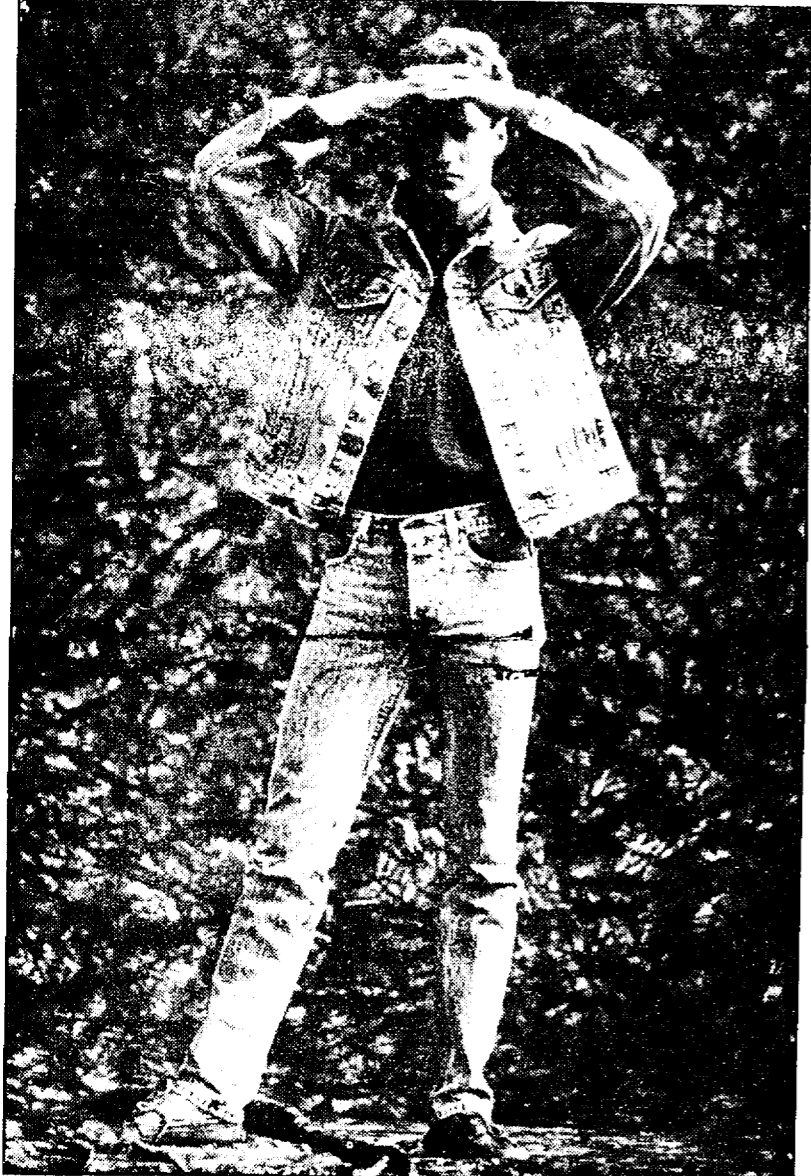

Survey respondents approved of a variety of other actions to improve physical appearance. Seventy-eight percent agreed with the idea of toning up their bodies; 65 percent emphasized the importance of losing weight; and almost seven out of 10 men—69 percent—approved of cosmetic surgery.

According to Dr. Leon Schiffman, a behavioral scientist and expert in age perception at the City University of New York, age can be measured by different standards, including: How old an individual feels; what he does; what his interests are; and how old he looks. The "looks" standard is the only one that is linked necessarily to biological age.

According to anthropologist Dr. Helen Fisher, of the American Museum of Natural History, "With an aging population in this country, everyone wants to look younger than they really are. Eliminating gray hair is one simple way of achieving that objective."

"Once achieved, a youthful appearance can generate greater self-confidence in all areas of a man's life—his relationships with women, his business associations and his opportunities for advancement."

DENIM TREATMENTS "FINISH" FIRST IN FASHION FORECAST—Denim finishes are predicted to remain hot for spring and fall, according to fashion experts. Levi's whitewashed 501 jeans (pictured above) are washed with pumice stones soaked in bleach, producing a soft, even finish, as if the jeans have been brushed lightly with a coat of paint. Other new denim treatments available this spring and fall include "snow washed," "dark washed" and "galactic."

"Don't trip over my boogie board, I meant briefcase." If this has been happening to you, you may need a trip to the tropics or else you're a traveling surfboard salesman. Whichever the case may be you'll need to know what's hot on the beaches in '88. This includes finding that perfect bikini or ultimate sundress to enhance your new tan. Maybe you're going on a boat and you need a light-weight jacket to keep you dry out on the ocean. These are the things that you really can't afford to leave without, especially when you can find all your vacation needs under one roof. Corky's Surf Shop has everything you need to make the waves this vacation including tank tops, tee shirts, shorts, bathing suits and suntan oils. This year look for lots of soft pastel and washed out colors on the beaches and water resistant fabrics like Suplex from Dupont that looks and feels like cotton yet is water resistant like nylon.

Fancifully feminine

ROSE IS A ROSE is a favored motif in Donna Karan's spring '88 collection. Karan adorns waistbands and hatbands with lush satin roses—as luxurious as they are feminine. Here, the shiny satin adornments provide counterpoint to the textured knits of the cami-sole, jacket and skirt, and matching hat.

For spring '88: Bold graphics

If you enjoy wearing active sportswear that will get you noticed, then the new styles for spring, 1988, will grab your attention.

Sweatshirts, t-shirts and tank tops will be emblazoned with bold graphics, with themes tied into sports events and recreational activities.

What consumers want

According to a spokesperson for adidas, the Official Outfitter of the 1988 U.S. Olympic Team, activewear consumers enjoy the "body as a billboard" look.

Graphic details come in all shapes and sizes, including puffy prints, embroidery and sewn-on patches. Crests as design elements are also very popular.

adidas' collection of U.S. Olympic Official Outfitter tops and bottoms features colorful, rugby-style horizontal stripes with a sewn-on emblem bearing the Olympic rings.

A collection of highly stylized adidas art shirts depicts beach activities such as volleyball and sunbathing, plus more adventurous pursuits like hang-gliding and kayaking.

Spring favorites

Cool and comfortable cotton in various treatments is the season's most popular activewear fabrication. The oversized look continues as activewear's most predominant silhouette for the season.

Sail into spring

PERT AND PLAYFUL knitwear is a specialty of Bern Conrad. Here, from his spring '88 collection, are variations on a theme—horizontally striped fitted tee shirts with banded collar and shoulders and with a wide white waistband, are worn with, on the left, a knee-skimming easy skirt, and, on the right, body-hugging pedalpushers. Bare legs and flat sandals complete the look.
