

Brownell students honored for literary magazine

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

School officials and students were proud when the National Council of Teachers of English gave them a Superior Award for their publication, but the personal letter of congratulations from Gov. James J. Blanchard was the icing on the cake.

Brownell Middle School's Scroll magazine was the only publication not produced by a senior high school to receive the superior rating.

This is the 29th edition of Scroll, a publication of student works of writing and art.

The sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders work together on the year-long project. Last year's eighth-graders, partly responsible for the award-winning edition, are at South High this year.

Students write pieces for the magazine, using the skills learned in their various English classes, then the poems, short stories and essays undergo a blind-judging process. Blind, so that students are not influenced by the name of the author, and so judges are not influenced by the scores of other judges.

Point values are given to each literary work, and then it is determined how many items will go into the magazine. The school budgets about $800 a year for magazine printing costs, but more money is available if the size of the publication needs to be increased by a large number of publishable items.

"It's something the students do, that kids don't normally get to do," said Molly Tannian, 14, an eighth-grader.

Board will not renew Spagnoli's contract

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

By a unanimous vote, the school board voted March 29 not to renew Deputy Superintendent Joseph Spagnoli's $70,600 a year contract, which is up in June 1989.

The move followed a motion by Secretary Carol Marr, seconded by Vice President Vincent LoCicero and accompanied with little public discussion.

Superintendent John Whritner had made a lengthy oral argument March 14 as to why the 63-year-old Spagnoli, a 25-year veteran of the district, should not have his contract renewed.

Spagnoli has been under fire since December 1987, when district administrators realized Spagnoli had written evaluation summaries for the school board. Many of the summaries differed negatively from the evaluations that administrators had signed.

Treasurer Jon B. Gandelot was the only board member to comment on the move. He called Spagnoli a friend and said it was the most agonizing and difficult decision he has had to make in 10 years on the board.

"You need a chain of command to make a management system work," Gandelot said. "You need the respect of sub-workers. Without this the management model breaks down."

He added that the superintendent is the person who makes personnel decisions, and he would side with him in this case.

"I and three others (still on the board) played a major role in bringing John Whritner to Grosse Pointe," Gandelot said. "We felt John Whritner has a caring attitude and would bring stability to this district, that our school system so desperately needed. I hope he will continue to bring stability long into the future. If we don't support him, he won't be able to have the support of the administrators. I feel it is not arbitrary and not capricious. Regrettably I will vote to support the motion."

Following the meeting, Spagnoli's attorney, John E. English, told him his only recourse would now have to come through the courts.

English said that Spagnoli will remain at his position until his contract expires in June 1989. His duties are currently being defined in writing by Whritner.

English said the move to not renew his contract will do little to affect Spagnoli's retirement compensation, though he would receive slightly more money had he worked for an additional year.

English contends that Spagnoli's current contract has a clause that gives Spagnoli the option of working an additional year. The board contends that clause is not valid, since the board has voted not to renew the contract.

Ben Burns

By Pat Paholsky

Ever since he graduated from Michigan State University in 1963 with a bachelor's degree in journalism, Ben Burns has been on a fast track.

He has accumulated an impressive list of credentials in 25 years as a newspaperman, beginning as a reporter for United Press International and, until recently, chief administrative editor of The Detroit News.

In between, he was the night city editor at the Miami Herald, a Congressional fellow, managing editor of the Lansing State Journal, editor of the Colorado Springs Sun, and vice president and publisher of a group of two dailies, three weeklies and a large commercial printing plant in New Jersey.

Now as the new director of the journalism program at Wayne State University, Burns is faced with organizing a department that has been without a head for awhile. He has also undertaken a fundraising drive that he says is "crucially important to the journalism program."

It's a long way from growing up on a dairy farm in the small farming community of Memphis in the southern Thumb and going to school in a one-room schoolhouse.

"It was real neat," he said of the one-room schoolhouse. "It's too bad they don't have them around anymore. They'd pair up first-graders with an eighth-grader and it was a sort of mentoring."

Burns said he planned to be a reporter and an editor and that he always knew he would be involved in writing.

The higher a journalist goes in an organization, however, the more removed he is from writing. "Doing what I'm doing now gets me back to writing," he said.

Burns said he never planned to leave the newspaper business, but when Gannett bought The Detroit News in 1986, it also brought in its own management team.

The Grosse Pointe Shade Tree Council is urging the councils of the five Pointes to combine forces and hire a forester to battle various problems that plague the area's tree population.

"The Shade Tree Council has always felt it would be a wonderful concept if we could treat the urban forest in the area as one big forest," said Jean Rice, a member of the council and a Woods councilwoman.

In a letter sent to the mayors and councils of the five cities, the tree council urged the communities to unite and hire a shared full-time community forester.

A coordinated program throughout the Pointes, treating the urban forest as one large environmental unit, would not only be cost-effective in terms of buying pesticides and plants, but would also allow for more comprehensive treatment of diseases that could devastate the area's tree population.

"Each city has its own methods of dealing with these problems," Rice said, "but the problem doesn't stop at the border. What is one city's problem is going to be another city's problem in a few years."

In the letter, the council said: "We need an Integrated Pest Management system emphasizing close monitoring of pest levels and disease control, incorporating preferred biological controls, and using conventional chemical controls only when absolutely necessary."

Many diseases, such as maple blight, anthracnose, cytospora of evergreens and the pine wood nematode are present in the Pointes' trees in small numbers. Insects, notably the gypsy moth, are also present, however, not in large numbers, and the council would like to keep it that way. The forester would help to that end.

Treatment of diseases and insects by spraying and injecting will soon be subject to closer monitoring, due to more rigid control by the Environmental Protection Agency and newly strengthened state laws. The community forester would be knowledgeable with the regulations and therefore save the cities some headaches about what can be sprayed, when and how much.

A forester would not only make treatment more effective, but would cut down on costs of the treatments as well as the cost of the plants themselves.

The people at Gleaners Food Bank are smiling. The canned food drive netted them 19,500 pounds of food from the Grosse Pointe area alone.

"Practically every mother who has a kid in school filled a bag (that was inserted in the Grosse Pointe News three weeks ago) and that's why it was so successful," said Jack Grifo, Grosse Pointe resident and prime mover behind the community-wide drive. "It was a real joy. I hope to do it again next year and I know we can double and triple this year's figure."

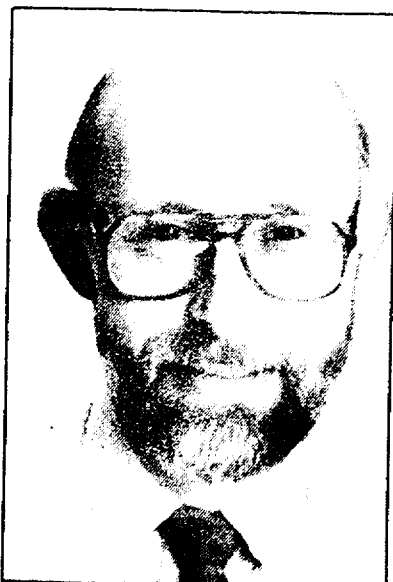

Gene Gonya, Gleaners president, said the organization, which supplies food to some 180 agencies in the area, has received about $1,500 in donations and the money is still coming in.

Gonya described this first effort in Grosse Pointe as "planting seeds. You see a little bit of growth and it's an evolutionary-type thing."

The food drive March 14-25 was sponsored by Gleaners and Henry Ford Hospital in cooperation with the Grosse Pointe News and the Grosse Pointe schools. The effort was also supported by all of the local mayors, St. Paul School and three local Kroger stores.

The Gleaners address is 2131 Beaufait, Detroit, Mich. 48207, and the phone number is 923-3535.

About that time change...

In last week's paper, we warned readers that daylight savings time would take effect last weekend. And then we advised everyone to set their clocks back an hour instead of ahead, as in "Spring forward..."

The good news is we discovered our error, but the bad news is we discovered it after all the papers were printed. You can imagine our embarrassment.

We spent most of Thursday and Friday answering hundreds of calls, acknowledging our error and apologizing. If there's anyone out there, however, who followed our bad advice, please please set your clocks ahead two hours, shrug your shoulders and say: Easy come, easy go.

And when it comes time to change the clocks again, we promise to get it right.

And to The Detroit News for its glowing reference to our error in Sunday's paper, we say congratulations for getting the facts straight and especially for spelling the name of our paper correctly.

Following the year in which Spagnoli filled in as interim superintendent during the 1984-85 school year, the board gave him a lump sum of $5,000 for the additional duties he performed plus the incentive.

An April 4, 1985 letter to Spagnoli from then-President Joan R. Hanpeter said: "The Board of Education agrees that upon the date of your retirement, which date has not yet been determined, you will receive a retirement incentive program in the amount of $400 per month for every month until age 70..."

While Whritner's main charge against Spagnoli was the summaries, which have not been made public, he also said Spagnoli failed to recognize the impropriety of his actions and that his job performance in recent months was unsatisfactory.

Following the meeting, Spagnoli said that the summaries, which had been prepared for the board by then-Superintendent Kenneth Brummel prior to his taking over the duty during the 1984-85 school year, had been prepared the same way.

"I followed the same precedent as my predecessor," Spagnoli said. "If you compare them, I followed the format exactly the same. They were the same in both format and content."

Spagnoli contended in a 33-page written document submitted to the board March 15, that the precedent of preparing evaluation summaries "with considerable literary license" was already present when he started preparing them.

Whritner characterized some of the summaries as "derogatory and demeaning" and said some of the administrators felt they had been slandered.

Interestingly, Spagnoli said that after he had taken over the job and read his own evaluation summary which was written by Brummel, he felt its differed from the actual evaluation.

"I was not upset by that," Spagnoli said. "It was very different from the evaluation, but I did not make an issue out of it."

Without saying definitely that he would pursue the matter in the courts, Spagnoli said he is having a trial lawyer examine the case. English said he did not accept a fee from Spagnoli for his representation before the school board, and said he would not be the attorney who pursued the matter before the courts.

Once again English said that Whritner was planning to leave the school district. He had told the board at the March 15 meeting that Whritner was using Spagnoli as a scapegoat for problems the district had encountered, so he would not be associated with them and so he would be free of criticism in his pursuit of another job.

Whritner again flatly denied the charge. He was adamant that he had not been approached, sought or is being considered for a job anywhere else.

Spagnoli said that he did not feel he was given a fair hearing.

"I gave a 33-page document to the board and they had not one

Grosse Pointe Township approves budget

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Township will spend about $4,000 more during the coming fiscal year than it did last year.

The township board met Tuesday morning, March 22, at the village offices for its annual meeting and approved a $202,000 budget.

Currently the township levies .91 mills, which will generate about $116,000 for the coming year. Collection fees generate about $54,000 in revenue, while interest on investments should bring in about $25,000 for the township during the coming year.

Supervisor Gerald Schroeder, who is also the Shores village president, said assessments were raised about 10.6 percent on residential property in the township.

"This was an across-the-board increase," Schroeder said. "We are considering whether to individually assess residential property during the next year."

Schroeder said individually assessing each property is a costly endeavor, but after a period of across-the-board increases, it is the only way to truly determine the true state equalized value of property.

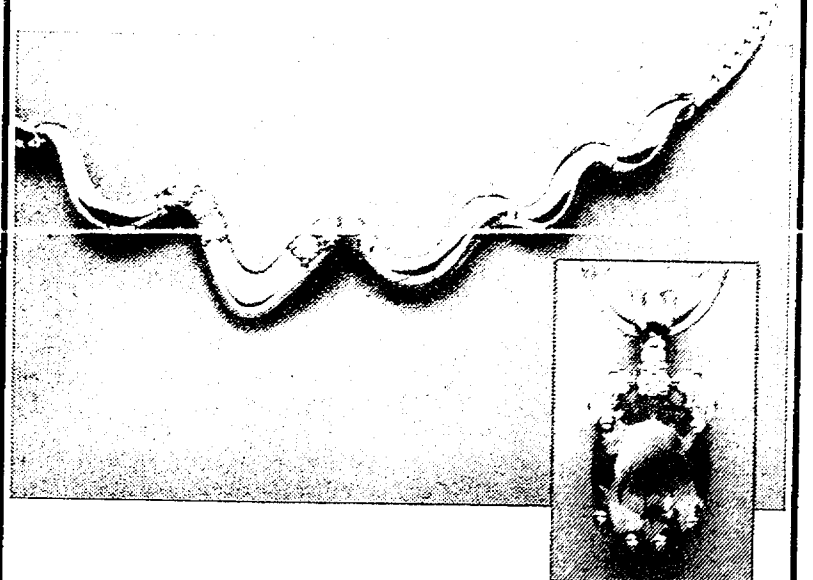

The township set its regular meetings for the third Tuesday of every month at 8 a.m. in the village offices, and designated

National Bank of Detroit, once again, as its depository bank.

The majority of the township's budget will be spent on maintenance of the village building. A large portion of the budget will be used toward roadwork or lighting projects.

Township clerk is James T. Wright, treasurer is George M. Mudie, and trustees are Robert F. Weber and John A. Boll. Township counsel is William Kilbrew.

Crawford: 'It's been fantastic'

Park official talks about his 10 years of serving the city

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

In another two weeks, John Crawford would have marked 10 years as Park city manager.

"I would have been happy to stay in Grosse Pointe Park another 10 years," he said. "I've really enjoyed the community and I'm going to miss the people."

Crawford, who resigned last week under pressure from Mayor Palmer Heenan, spoke about his tenure with pride and wistfulness. In 10 years, there have been many changes in the city, he said, adding "It's been fantastic."

Crawford was recently notified that he has been nominated for an award for program excellence by his peers, the International City Managers Association. Awards will be presented at the group's annual convention in Washington, D.C. this fall.

The nomination is for program excellence in the category of public safety, and Crawford's experience with public safety began in the early '70s when he was city manager of Centerline.

"My council wanted me to do something about rising costs," he said.

Bloomfield Hills had just consolidated its police and fire departments and Crawford spent two days there studying the operation. "I was impressed with the services and morale," he said.

So he put together a public safety operational plan for Centerline just before he left to accept the position of city manager in Grosse Pointe Park. It was reworked by a committee and adopted.

And the city in which he studied the public safety model years ago — Bloomfield Hills — is where Crawford will be headed shortly to serve as city manager. He begins his new job April 18.

Crawford began his professional career with the Macomb County Equalization Department, where he was a certified assessment evaluator. He worked in the field and was promoted to commercial and industrial properties.

In the '60s, he left to become the city assessor for Centerline. After two years, he was promoted to city manager, a position he held for 10 1/2 years. During that period, Crawford said he obtained $13 million in federal funds for Centerline for urban renewal.

Bob Slone, then city manager of Grosse Pointe Park, who was preparing to retire, asked Crawford to apply for the job. "He said there were problems in the Park and they wanted revitalization," Crawford said.

He was offered the job and the day he moved into his house in the Park, he discovered a flyer that had been distributed to Park residents that said: Crawford must go. The flyers were the work of a group known as POP, or Proud of the Park. Crawford said he still has one of the flyers.

Since then, he has served the city in periods of stability and instability. The mayor under whom he began his career with the city — Matt Patterson — remains his favorite.

The problem today, he said, is a factional council "where they want you to serve a faction."

They say, 'You're with me or you're against me,' and it's an unfair position. According to the charter, it's a council/city manager form of government, not a mayor/council form."

Crawford said one of the things in which he takes pride is the stabilization of the northwest sector. "I'm very proud of the home improvement loans. I had a very little old lady come up to me and give me a hug and tell me she was happy to upgrade her house."

"TIFA (tax increment financing) is a real plus for the community and within the next five years, it'll get so much better," Crawford said. "The parks and recreation program — I just feel good about all these programs. They got off the ground and we can see things going."

Crawford said he was able to get half of the property on Jefferson that is part of the Downtown Development Authority plans donated to the city. "There are exciting things happening on Jefferson."

Under his administration, Crawford said the city adopted a new zoning ordinance and recodified all of the ordinances through the Municipal Code Corp. Also the Park adopted a master plan, something it had never had.

"In terms of administration, those are very important to anyone coming in here," he said.

The Park, with a half-million dollar fund balance, is in good condition financially and the city employees and staff are professionals, he said.

"I'm really excited about the activities building at the Park and I'm disappointed I won't be a part of it," he said.

"Conversely I'm excited about Bloomfield Hills. I've always loved that community. You can't find one level lot there."

In comparison, Bloomfield Hills has four square miles compared to Grosse Pointe Park which has two square miles. The population of about 4,000 is only one-third that of the Park's, however. Current City Manager Bob Stadler is retiring after 40 years on the job.

"I'm going to miss the lake, but mostly I'm going to miss the residents," he said. "I really appreciate the community support and all of the letters I've received."

Crawford's peers — the city managers of the other Pointe cities — gave him high praise.

"He's one of the finest managers I have ever met," said Andrew Bremer, Farms city manager. "He is very knowledgeable and very cooperative as far as joint operations and discussions among the Grosse Pointe managers were involved."

Thomas Kressbach, Grosse Pointe city manager, said the Park accomplished a number of things under Crawford's administration.

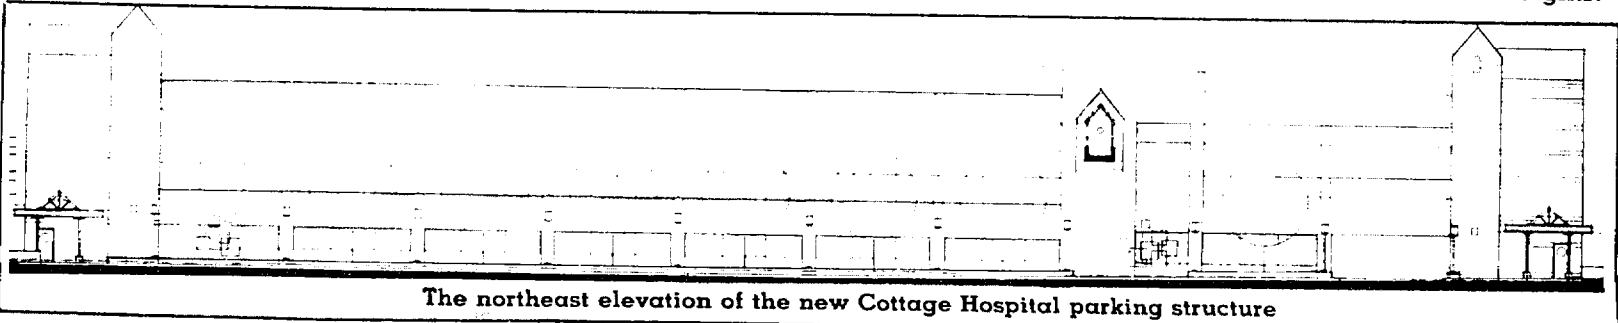

"Their improvements with the Community Block Grant Fund and public safety — those are all tough things and I know how difficult it is. He brought in his own ideas and addressed some of those difficult areas of change."

"I'm sorry to see him leave," Shores Village Manager Michael Kenyon concurred. "He's a good manager and a good friend."

The northeast elevation of the new Cottage Hospital parking structure

Cottage parking deck construction begins

Earth movers and cement trucks are changing the landscape of Muir Road, near Kercheval, as work begins on the new Cottage Hospital parking deck.

Completion of the project is expected in November.

The deck is designed to meet the requirements placed upon Cottage Hospital by the Farms at the time of its approval. The deck's 177,000 square feet are divided among four levels, allowing space for 522 vehicles.

The construction company on the project is Walbridge Aldinger General Contractors.

Architects for the Cottage Hospital parking deck, Louis G. Redstone Associates, Inc., have given special attention to the design elements of the structure to match the existing hospital exterior and neighboring 131 Kercheval Center.

The brick facade is enhanced with reflective glass and slate-capped stair towers, maintaining the architectural integrity of the area. Brick and concrete paving patterns, pedestrian canopies, landscaping and sculptures are part of the future enhancements planned for the area between the parking deck and the adjacent hospital lobby.

When the deck is completed, a net addition of 403 new spaces will be available to fill the immediate need for parking at the hospital. Also, some leased parking will be available for tenants of 131 Kercheval Center and those Hill merchants displaced by the new facility.

During the construction period, the hospital has hired the services of National Garages to shuttle up to 150 hospital employees to remote parking lots each business day. Cottage employees are parking at three local church parking lots in spaces which the hospital rents on a monthly basis.

The hospital's shuttle service remains open, at no cost, to transport interested Hill business people to off-site municipal parking in the city of Grosse Pointe.

Construction is expected to be completed before the 1988 Christmas holiday.

FLEC gets grant for crisis center

Family Life Education Council (FLEC) has received a $20,000 grant from the Metro Health Foundation to partially fund the Center Point Crisis Center for fiscal year 1988.

The grant supports Center Point's medical clinic and services. The clinic provides testing and treatment for sexually transmitted diseases, pregnancy testing and counseling, and birth control information and counseling.

Center Point, founded in 1971, also offers crisis intervention by telephone or face-to-face counseling, along with educational forums on related medical and mental health issues to the community. Center Point offers an up-to-date referral system for individuals requesting services.

FLEC is in its twenty-second year of service to the Grosse Pointe-Harper Woods and east-side community. FLEC also operates Youth Assistance, an intervention program for troubled and delinquent youth.

FLEC is a non-profit agency receiving no federal, state or United Foundations funds and is dedicated to enhancing the lives of young people and their families in the community.

Metro Health Foundation is a private Detroit grant-making foundation. The foundation makes grants to Michigan organizations for health care and in health-related fields.

Plans for purchase and development of property on Jefferson Avenue between Nottingham and Westchester in Grosse Pointe Park were presented at the March 28 council meeting. Above is the site plan from Hilberry & Bologna for a 30,000-square-foot $2.5 million development. The Hilberry & Bologna plan was the first choice of the Park Downtown Development Authority (DDA).

Below is the DDA's second choice, a proposal by David G. Miles and Beachum & Roeser for two one-story office buildings totaling 11,000 square feet.

Of the six proposals submitted for the property, which now contains two boarded-up buildings — a gas station and a restaurant — DDA Chairman Mike Maher said, "These two plans were the finest proposals. The DDA's recommendation of the Hilberry & Bologna proposal was unanimous."

School board agonized, but did its duty

Prior to last week's decision, we did not take sides in the dispute between Superintendent John Whritner and Joseph Spagnoli, deputy superintendent of schools, but we think the school board took the best action possible when it voted not to renew Spagnoli's contract.

If it had not accepted the superintendent's recommendation to terminate Spagnoli, the board would have been in effect casting a vote of no confidence in the superintendent. Despite Spagnoli's long service to the schools and community, such an action no doubt would have forced the resignation of the superintendent himself. So while the board members agonized over their decision, we think they did their duty, unpleasant as it was, in light of the facts presented to them.

Now that the controversy appears to be ended, except for a possible appeal to the courts, the Grosse Pointe school district ought to be able to get back to its primary function of educating Grosse Pointe children. The decision also should enable the administration and the board to get on with their major tasks of administering the system and planning for the future.

After reading Whritner's report and Spagnoli's statement, both submitted to the board, we believe that it was imperative for the board to act quickly to avoid further dissemination of inflammatory language that damaged relations among administrators and possibly harmed the educational and administrative processes in the Grosse Pointe system.

We refer specifically to Spagnoli's charge that he had been "made the scapegoat of a diabolical, carefully planned and orchestrated series of events that can only be described as reprehensible, invidious, despicable and insidious." His attorney added charges that Spagnoli had been subjected to a "lynch group" and a "gag order."

We refer also to Whritner's reasons for recommending the termination of the deputy superintendent: That his administrators had expressed "a lack of trust" in Spagnoli because of his preparation of negative summaries of evaluations of their performance, that Spagnoli had "failed to recognize the impropriety of his actions" and had been "uncooperative" in the superintendent's efforts to resolve the matter, and that Spagnoli had been "unsatisfactory" in the performance of his job responsibilities and had "failed to perform" certain assigned responsibilities.

Whether Whritner recommended that Spagnoli retire "as the only graceful way to exit" or proposed that he resign, as Spagnoli contends and Whritner denies, the board now has approved the superintendent's recommendation that Spagnoli's contract not be renewed when it expires on June 30, 1989.

That means, however, that unless some compromise is reached, Spagnoli still will serve in the Grosse Pointe schools for another year, and perhaps longer if his expected appeal is successful. If that should happen, the coming year will not be a pleasant one in view of the tensions between the two men.

While it is true that there is room for only one top administrator at a time in any system, it is sad that Spagnoli will end his career in the Grosse Pointe system in this way, for he has worked here for 25 years under six superintendents in a variety of capacities. Some jobs no doubt were, as he said, very difficult and thankless assignments but he did undertake them willingly and responsibly.

In fact, after serving as interim superintendent in 1984-85 prior to the hiring of Whritner, the board awarded Spagnoli a $5,000 bonus in recognition of the job he had done "in assuming many additional responsibilities."

Now that the dispute has been resolved, even if not to everyone's satisfaction, the teachers, administrators, students, school board members and all the rest of us ought to put these controversial matters behind us and try to get back to our regular schedules. And the sooner we can do that, the better for the school system and everyone concerned.

No casinos on Belle Isle?

Two recent developments appear to have strengthened the hands of the critics of the proposal to permit casino gambling in the city of Detroit.

One was the announcement by Patrick Meehan, chief backer of casino gambling on Belle Isle, that putting casinos on the island is politically impossible and that now he will concentrate on a new plan that he has not yet disclosed.

The second development was the continuing increase in the number of churches and church organizations that have joined in opposing casino gambling in Detroit. One of the more recent groups to join the fight was the Michigan Episcopal Diocese which at its annual convention voted overwhelmingly to oppose the casino gambling idea.

A possible third development, as yet unverified, was the recent Detroit News report that strong opposition has been found in Mayor Coleman Young's casino study commission to any proposal for the use of Belle Isle for casino gambling.

The reasoning was, according to the News informants, that it would be wrong to commercialize an island widely used by Detroiters as a picnic and recreational area. The same informants said that the commission felt, however, that it would be wrong to take a public stand on this issue before the issuance of its report, scheduled to be finished by May 15.

Meanwhile, Tom Barrow, head of an anti-casino gambling group called Citizens for Detroit's future, expressed pleasure at the apparent abandonment of Belle Isle as a gambling site. He still hopes to make it clear in an Aug. 2 referendum, called after his group had gathered the necessary number of signatures, that Detroiters don't want such gambling anywhere in the city. Voters have turned down the proposal in two earlier advisory referenda.

Locally, many people have expressed the view that the farther away from the Pointes any casino gambling is permitted, the better. They applaud the reports that Belle Isle is unlikely to become a home for casinos, but they and we would be even happier if that kind of gambling does not come to Michigan at all.

County taxes aid WCCC

Some Grosse Pointe taxpayers no doubt were surprised to read in The Detroit News recently that Wayne County Community College is the only one of the state's 29 public community colleges that does not collect a local property tax.

Those who had looked at their own tax receipts in recent years were the most surprised because they knew the statement was incorrect. One Farms resident said that in support of the community college he had paid $81.39 in 1987 property taxes on a home with an assessed value of $92,490. He naturally wanted an explanation for the statement in The Detroit News.

The Detroit News, in fact, was wrong and confessed its error a few days later, pointing out it should have stated that WCCC receives no taxes that have been approved by local voters, but does levy taxes that were approved by the Legislature without the taxpayers' consent.

That tax amounts to .88 of a mill or 88 cents per $1,000 assessed valuation, and thus accounts for the $81.39 paid by the Farms resident in support of the college. These taxes were imposed after Wayne County taxpayers had rejected a proposed levy in a county referendum when the college was being proposed some years ago.

This error might not be so surprising, but it is the second time that it has been made in about three years. In 1985, The Detroit News in an interview quoted the new college president, Dr. Ronald Temple, as saying that the institution's base of support needed to be broadened and that "somewhere down the road we must go to the public for a tax levy."

Since there was no indication that Dr. Temple understood that funds already were being collected from Wayne County taxpayers, the Grosse Pointe News called attention to the error at that time. The response was that the president had been misunderstood. So three years later he apparently was misunderstood again and the error was repeated.

The reason we're reporting these mistakes at some length is that Dr. Temple in his recent interview with The Detroit News once again was calling for increased support from Wayne County just as he was three years ago. And whether he made the same mistake he did three years ago or whether The Detroit News reporter made the error this time, the fact is that Wayne County taxpayers are not being given the credit they should get for their current support for the college.

Both The Detroit News and the Free Press in recent weeks have carried stories and editorials commending the college for its recent progress under President Temple. They have cited its increased enrollment, the expected early end to its academic probation and a new public opinion survey that shows greater public approval of the once-troubled institution.

That is good news for a college that has been rocked for years by squabbles between previous presidents and the board, allegations of corruption and charges of mismanagement, nepotism and the use of unqualified instructors. If the college is indeed improved and now needs more money, Wayne County taxpayers might even be receptive to an appeal for an increase in funding although proposed property tax increases face an uncertain future everywhere these days.

But surely any such campaign for increased property tax funding ought to start out by giving county taxpayers credit for their generous tax payments in support of the college in the past even though they were required by the Legislature, not by a vote of the people.

Letters

To the Editor:

This is an open letter to the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council and the mayor.

I have a neighbor who owns a cat who gets in my garage, walks all over my clean car and the attached garage door. The cat also has killed several birds in my garden, the only one that has enough nerve to come in the yard and take a bath in my birdbath is a tough and wily blue jay! The cat has also killed several baby squirrels — and I know because I've seen him do it.

Perhaps the airheads in the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council or the mayor can explain why there is no law in the Farms to put a bell on the cat, at least while it is out. It was carefully explained to me (as though I was a moron and not 78 years old) that the cat was a free spirit. Well, so are the birds and the squirrels!

And so am I. In fact, I'm so free, I'm going to send them a bill the next time I have to have my car and garage door washed.

Mrs. C.D. Blessed
Grosse Pointe Farms

Insensitive

To the Editor:

The gentleman who had a seizure on Lakeshore Road, lost control of his car and jumped the high curb into the lake prompts this letter.

Mr. Healy's totally insensitive remark that people intent on killing themselves would not be helped by guardrails.

This observation is unbelievable. As he says, "They will find a way to get in."

Our anger knows no bounds.

If you, Mr. Healy, should have an attack that renders you incapable of controlling your car on Lakeshore Road, would a guardrail save your life or would we assume it was your intent to "find a way in?"

As a supposed safety director, you are a discredit to those you presume to protect.

As 30-year Grosse Pointe residents, we have recently moved to Harper Woods — four doors from the Pointes. We earnestly hope the Grosse Pointes do not reflect your views.

Patricia H. Nelson

Deeply grateful

To the Editor:

1988 marks my 30th year of being a consumer of the services of the Grosse Pointe school system. Since 1958, with the exception of a three-year period, I have had at least one child in this school system.

I am deeply grateful to the many teachers we have encountered along the way. They took my unlettered children and educated them. They enriched their minds and encouraged their personality development. In all these years, in a variety of Grosse Pointe schools, I have never encountered a teacher whom I have not admired.

Next to parents, teachers exert the most significant influence upon the development of a young person. Teachers, no matter how competent and dedicated, do not function in a vacuum. The administrative structure known as a school system creates the essential setting for education. The school system in turn reflects the community spirit.

Those of us who are privileged to send our children to the Grosse Pointe schools have a great deal to be grateful for.

Emanuel Tanay, M.D.
Clinical Professor of Psychiatry

Why are things so difficult?

I'm not one to look for a free ride, but when life tosses me in the middle of a difficult situation, sometimes I panic.

While some things are supposed to be an obstacle, there are other things that shouldn't be so tormenting. I know that life's little ups and downs are what makes each day worthwhile, but I'll never understand why some of the downs are more frequent than the ups.

I'm talking about things that are difficult — for some of us.

When opening a gallon of milk, how many times have you struggled just to get past the plastic seal that enables you to lift off the cap? By the time your peanut butter and jelly sandwich settles, the milk doesn't taste as good. Or when you try to get a little glass of milk, you're discouraged by opening it, so you wait until someone else opens it.

How many times have you tried to open a bag of chips and when you pull at the top to tear the bag open, you wind up in a game like 52 pickup? The chips are on the floor, you're pulling some crumbs out of your hair, but more so, your appetite has gone in the wastebasket with each chip you toss away.

Drinking pop or beer out of an aluminum can is not my first choice, but I've done it. I enjoy a cold refreshing drink, but by the time I get the tab on the can to puncture the lid, it explodes because I shook it too much trying to get into it. The other problem I encounter when trying desperately to open the can is having that tab lodge under my fingernail.

Life wasn't intended to be easy. If it were, you wouldn't stub a toe on the table in the livingroom or drop a can of peas after getting the top off.

Isn't it funny how many of us think that killing a fly is simple? We are armed with this two-foot long weapon and the fly is at our mercy as it rests on the screen of the window. Suddenly, you think you've got a bead on the little varmint, because you have a four-inch square of plastic at the end and the fly is no bigger than your thumbnail.

As you follow it, you try to hunt it down and every so often, you win by either swatting it or letting it out the door or window.

Isn't it difficult to sleep when you know a fly is in the room?

You pull the blanket over your body, but in the middle of a great dream, that fly lands on your nose and wakes you up. It's a constant nuisance that can be cured in one swoop — just get a bigger swatter.

Isn't life tough?

I learned a long time ago that God never gives you anymore than you can handle. I know that sometimes we make matters worse by complaining or moaning about something we can't control. But when we can control something and we become lazy, it now becomes a rough life.

Why is it that after a heavy snow, people insist on brushing off a spot on the windshield just large enough to see out? And when they get to work they complain about how difficult it was to see when driving.

Why is it that toothpaste sticks to the sink and isn't washed away? Why is it that shoes remain in the middle of the room until mom picks them up? And why is it that we find the dirty laundry accumulating quicker than we can empty the washing machine? It doesn't seem right, does it?

Life is not intended to be a piece of cake that we slice and eat. We do what it takes to ensure that life has been good, but when we make it more difficult on ourselves, isn't that destroying the purpose of living?

The jury is not out on me, though. I'm guilty of all the above. I know that I do things that annoy others, but I try not to make them a habit. I even put the toilet seat down after I use it, but the one time I don't, I hear about it from someone.

Why do we bite our tongue when chewing on a juicy steak? Why do things have to be so hot that it burns human flesh. Why can't tires be made to repel nails and not eat them? Why do light-bulbs burn out and it takes an hour just to dismantle the casing around it?

Isn't life rough?

SURE THERE'S
BALL TOURNAMENT!

Yesterday's Headlines

Sept. 29, 1955 —

The New York Times reported that President Eisenhower spent 13 hours out of his oxygen tent and his doctors reported continuing satisfactory progress toward recovery. Evidence continued to accumulate that his doctors were optimistic over his fight for recovery from a coronary thrombosis suffered five days earlier.

The New York Yankees won the first game of the World Series, beating the Dodgers 6-5. The New York Times reported that "it may come to pass that the Dodgers will win their first World Series, but they took one long stride in the wrong direction" in their first game.

The United States, Britain and France were to make another attempt in Geneva to give guarantees that a united Germany would not be a threat to the Soviet bloc. The Western Big Three announced that priority should be given "to the reunification of Germany within the framework of the plan for European security."

Nationalist China warned the United Nations to look with distrust on Communist peace overtures. The foreign minister of the government on Formosa told the General Assembly that "the Soviet peace drive is not, in fact, peaceful in intention; it's a form of war." The address was the most blunt attack on Soviet policy heard at a session of the assembly, during which speaker after speaker had hailed the "Geneva spirit" of conciliation and compromise that followed the meeting of the big four heads of government.

A U.S. assistant secretary of state flew to Cairo for talks with Premier Gamal Nasser on Egypt's plans to buy arms from Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union. His sudden trip indicated a growing concern within the state department over the security of the North Atlantic Alliance along its southern flank.

A complete revision of Democratic national policy was in the making as a consequence of President Eisenhower's illness. The strategy called for a continuous campaign to identify President Eisenhower as a Republican. This program was based on the premise that the president would be a candidate for re-election the next year. The theory was that the identification of the general as a Republican would tend to reduce his political strength to the level of the Republican party.

The head of the South's biggest industry — John C. Whitaker, chairman of the board of the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. — condemned some southern communities for trying to lure plants from the North with promises of cheap labor and tax concessions.

He spoke to 1,000 Northern executives at a conference.

In Grosse Pointe, residents along the entire length of McKinley Road were almost unanimous in their protest of closing McMillan Road so that more land could be obtained to augment the Farms public parking lot facilities.

Some 2,846 Pointe schoolchildren were given their second inoculation with the Salk vaccine. It was a booster shot, which, in conjunction with the first shot given in April, completed the vaccination. It was expected that the vaccine would be on the market for all doctors later in the year.

The Grosse Pointe Torch Drive quota was set at $300,491.

The Punch and Judy Theater was showing Gene Kelly and Frank Sinatra in "Anchors Aweigh." Betty Grable in "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" and Marilyn Monroe in "The Seven Year Itch."

The Grosse Pointe High School football team extended its winning streak to 13 by tying a surprisingly strong Ferndale team 13 to 13.

The Park's street lighting project was scheduled to be completed by 1957. When completed, some 942 new poles and lights were to have been installed since 1954.

Grosse Pointe mothers were reminded by a health commissioner that their elementary school children needed plenty of sleep — between nine and 11 hours each night — to get the most out of their schooling.

Perch are running

Woods building inspector and noted fisherman Earl Wakely Jr. says the perch are biting at the horseshoe and at Amhurstberg in Canada.

Wakely said he angled at both locations Saturday, April 2, and bucketed 60 6- to 8-inch perch. "I heard some 10- and 12-inch perch came out of the horseshoe on Good Friday," Wakely said.

Talk about your good Fridays.

Rent videos, fight child abuse

Marquis Ltd., a Grosse Pointe card and video rental shop, will donate all of its proceeds from video rentals today, April 7, to fight child abuse.

The shop, owned by Mary Marquis, is contributing to Parents Anonymous of Michigan, a self-help group for parents who abuse their children and want to stop.

Marquis said the shop wants to help parents and children have a happy family life. Parents Anonymous Executive Director Barbara Reed said the agency's goal is not only to eliminate child abuse, but to develop the parents' ability to love themselves and their children.

Marquis Ltd. is located at 18472 Mack in the Farms.

Bury winter

Wayne State University jazz program students will join forces with WSU public safety officers and restaurateurs Steve Xantheas and George Blond to jointly bury winter 1988 and income tax stress at the same time on Friday, April 15.

Xantheas and Blond, who own the Circa 1890 Saloon, are brothers, and each year they donated the proceeds for a day to WSU. Last year they decided to bury winter on the day they contributed their receipts.

"We buried that sucker last year and he didn't show up again until November," Xantheas said.

Student musicians will play Dixieland tunes in a New Orleans-style funeral procession through campus at noon. Old Man Winter will be in a casket.

Public Safety Director Dallas Schneider said funds donated would be used for the continuing education of the department's officers.

Mourners and celebrants will find the casket open at the restaurant for deposit of their unused or messed-up 1040 tax forms. No IRS employees have volunteered to lay in the casket with Old Man Winter.

Brownell student advances

Gretchen Hoffmeyer, an eighth-grader at Brownell Middle School, has been named a local winner in the 19th annual America & Me Essay contest sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance Group.

She will receive an award certificate for the achievement and her name will be engraved on a plaque for permanent display in the school.

Gretchen's essay now advances to state level competition, from which the top 10 essays in Michigan will be selected.

Those 10 winners will receive U.S. savings bonds valued from $500 to $1,000.

Finalist judges will include Gov. James J. Blanchard and Lt. Gov. Martha Griffiths.

Sign of the times

Saw a sign pole at McMillan and the exit from the municipal lot in the Farms that sums up the parking situation on the Hill.

There are three signs on the pole. The top sign reads: No Standing School Days 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Beyond This Sign.

The second one says: No Parking or Standing This Side of Sign.

The bottom sign (one of those flame-orange jobs) says: No Thru Traffic 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

And the sign said...

By William R. Bryant Jr.
State Representative

It is that time of year again. The legislature has begun work on the governor's proposed $6.6 billion general fund budget. That, combined with federal and other earmarked revenue sources, constitutes a total proposed budget of $15.5 billion for fiscal year 1989.

The biggest winner in the governor's budget proposal is the Department of Commerce which has a recommended 25.7 percent increase. Most of the funds would come from the Department of Social Services to fund a program to attempt to get recipients of general assistance working in a neighborhood improvement program. The governor, however, seeks to reduce other proven, successful programs of workfare and diversion from welfare to fund his new, untested idea. The rest of the new money for the Commerce Department would go to a national media campaign to get Congress to authorize and to attract to Michigan the Superconducting Super Collider.

Who are the losers? The Department of Public Health is facing a cut of almost $9 million, and the less than 1 percent proposed total increase for state school aid is the lowest since the governor took office. Another loser is the Department of Natural Resources. The governor wants to cut funds for hazardous waste project by $4.9 million. He hopes to make this up by his supposed "Quality of Life" bond proposal. Much of what the bond proposal would do is to replace cuts in environmental programs normally funded in the budget. That ruse must not be allowed to succeed.

The key problems in the governor's budget are that, again, he has purposefully underestimated costs and that his revenue expectations are based on questionable figures. For instance, for this current fiscal year 1988, he overestimated both individual and single business tax revenue. If he has based his FY 1989 figures on that figure, and it appears he has, we will most likely face another deficit in addition to the $100-$166 million deficit we may have this year.

His answers to these problems are temporary, one-time infusions of money from the Budget Stabilization Fund, and by reducing funds going into the pension investment systems.

Our work is cut out for us. The governor wants to look good far more than he wants to do what needs to be done. That's not new, but it seems to worsen every year. He pretends to want new programs, programs that sound good, then he never comes up with solid, workable plans for them or the money to pay for them without stealing from other, more worthy, existing programs, and usually, he doesn't even fight to find ways to do what he has proposed. He just takes credit for proposing something, lets it die in the legislature and blames the legislature for not enacting it.

Program links seniors, learning disabled children

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

The sixth-graders were busily interviewing senior citizens. The seniors pondered the answers to questions like, "During my leisure hours, my favorite activity is..." and "If young people came to me for advice about life, I would say..." and "The most exciting thing that ever happened to me was..."

The sixth-graders labored carefully, penciling in the seniors' answers with their best, neatest handwriting. The senior citizens were clearly enjoying the attention, the reminiscing, the one-on-one social interaction.

The children are in the Harper Woods school system's learning disabled program.

The seniors are from Cottage SeniorCare, a daytime program at Cottage-Belmont Nursing Center for older adults with various forms of dementia.

The interview exercise was one of a series of activities that is part of the first state-funded intergenerational program that links senior citizens with learning disabled children, with benefits for both.

After an hour or so, a plate of blueberry muffins appeared in the center of the table. The children served the seniors, then took muffins for themselves.

"These are such nice youngsters," said Beulah Carpenter, 84, of Grosse Pointe Farms, one of the SeniorCare participants. "They're so cooperative and friendly."

The intergenerational program was the brainchild of Grosse Pointers Kathleen Paddon Clarkson and Kathleen Angell, teachers for learning disabled children at Beacon Elementary School (kindergarten through third grade) and Tyrone Elementary School (fourth through sixth grade) in Harper Woods, and the system's social worker, Elizabeth Parvanno.

Christie DeYoung, director of SeniorCare at Cottage-Belmont Nursing Center, enthusiastically embraced the plan when she heard about it. "This keeps the seniors involved in life," she said.

The adults in SeniorCare need various degrees of assistance due to dementia, stroke, social isolation or other problems. Some have Alzheimer's Disease. "The seniors benefit just from being with children. Even the most severely impaired benefit just from watching. Their mood improves and it improves the rest of the day," said DeYoung.

The children's abilities are

varied, Clarkson said. "They all have average or above-average intelligence, but have specific visual or auditory learning problems. They're mainstreamed in regular classrooms, but receive special help a minimum of one hour a day."

Clarkson said the children benefit from increased self-confidence. They feel special, she said, by being singled out to participate in a special activity.

One of the children, she said, invited her SeniorCare friend to visit her regular classroom and meet the rest of the class.

Clarkson said that the children also meet the challenge of solving problems — both theirs and the seniors' — and, as a bit of a byproduct, "they learn that dementia is not catching."

The intergenerational program began full-steam in January, according to Clarkson, after the Learning Disabled Classrooms of the Harper Woods Public Schools were awarded a $2,500 grant from Michigan's Department of Education, Special Services.

The grant proposal was submitted by Clarkson, Angell and social worker Elizabeth Parravano. According to Clarkson, the grant was awarded because the proposal was for a program that involved several age groups, made use of a less restrictive environment for both age groups and benefited the community. "Plus, it provided a service for the kids, rather than more equipment," she said. She said they are the first to receive state money for a continuing intergenerational program for special education students. The money is used for transportation, craft supplies, videotapes, educational materials and a field trip to Greenfield Village that is coming up in May.

SeniorCare participants meet with Clarkson's elementary school children at Beacon School and with Angell's students at Tyrone School about once a week for an hour, usually at Cottage-Belmont's Nursing Center. They share a planned activity — crafts, learning, games or exercises. Then they have lunch together.

Other activities have included exercising with a parachute, playing darts and making Valentines. The younger children and the SeniorCare participants spent several sessions studying trains, a topic chosen because the seniors could offer insight and information from their own experiences. Together, they made a huge train banner, which is currently on display at the public library.

Clarkson said that the children were prepared before beginning the visits. They were told that the seniors had limited abilities and needed help from them. "They learned that some of the adults would have inappropriate behavior and told how to deal with it," she said. "One 8-year-old was terrified about going to a nursing home," she said. "After the first visit, he couldn't wait to go back."

"It's amazing, the difference between the first few sessions and now," said Clarkson. "The room was quiet at first. There was no interaction. They just sat. Now there's socializing. Chatting. Rapport. The children pick their partners."

"The younger children do lots of hugging and kissing."

Ruth, one of the senior participants, has no verbal skills, she said. Her third-grade partner, Terri, has gotten into the habit of holding Ruth's hand or gently rubbing her back. Ruth clearly appreciated the kind gestures.

"One of our ladies yells at the kids, as if they were her own children. That's part of it," Clarkson said.

SeniorCare participants and students from the learning disabled classrooms in Harper Woods will participate in an intergenerational field trip to Greenfield Village on May 4, using some of the grant money for tickets.

Clarkson said when the money from the grant runs out, they'll evaluate the program, submit their results to the state Special Services Department. They hope to receive permission to continue.

"Even if there's no grant, we'll continue," Clarkson said. "It may not be weekly, however. We'll have fundraisers."

Suzuki method can make a musician out of you

"Children learn what they live." Building upon that axiom, Dr. Shinichi Suzuki created a controversial, yet effective, method of teaching music known simply as the Suzuki method.

Based on repetition and rote, the Suzuki method can take anyone and turn him or her into — if not Itzhak Perlman — someone who is knowledgeable about music, and is able to read music and play an instrument. "A child's aural skills are much more developed than their sight and sound skills," said Laura Larson, who teaches flute with the Suzuki method at the Institute of Music and Dance in Detroit.

"Generally after five years of age, they begin to focus more on sight, so it's best to start them early," she added. Formal training may begin as early as 3 years old, but all ages can benefit from this teaching method. In fact, Larson has students who are in their thirties.

The lessons proceed in small steps, allowing the students to master the material with feeling of success, thereby building confidence and enthusiasm for learning, she said.

Each song in the Suzuki repertoire sequence is used as a building block which develops technique, before going on to the next lesson. Daily listening to recordings of the standardized Suzuki repertoire is also very important in the Suzuki approach. The more students listen, the more they will be able to imitate, just as children learn their native tongue.

The lessons are given both in groups and individual lessons, which fosters an attitude of cooperation, not competition, between students, and helps motivate them when they hear other students play songs they will soon be learning.

Recently, during Children and Hospitals week, Larson's flute students and the violin Suzuki students of Ellen Luby performed for the children in St. John Hospital.

For more information on Suzuki and the Institute of Music and Dance, call 831-2870.

Rice said. "One of the biggest savings would be to purchase plant material at a great savings and to coordinate planting and monitor the planting of the trees," Rice said. The cities could get better prices by buying mass quantities, and by monitoring the plantings, could ensure they are planted correctly, so in a few years it would be a healthy, sturdy plant.

Silver or Various Maples

Rice said many of the trees that have been planted in recent years have died because of improper planting procedures. The forester would monitor the planting to make sure that did not happen.

While the concept of the forester would be for publicly owned trees, he or she, as time permits, would be available for diagnosis and treatment suggestions for privately owned trees, Rice said. The council has not only suggested hiring a forester, but has also chosen one for consideration, the Ann Arbor-based Metropolitan Forestry Consultants.

The 10-year old company has worked for the cities of Dearborn, Ferndale, Huntington Woods, Southfield, Sterling Heights and West Bloomfield Township, among others.

The first duty, if hired, would be to assess each city's program and help the area decide what would be the best treatment. That means some areas would be getting more attention than others, and Rice said she hopes people will be understanding of that.

"We are all going to have to be very altruistic," she said. People must realize the forester will be treating problem areas and it may be a while before he gets to other areas, but all will be done in time, she added.

"It won't be an easy job, because he's going to have five masters," Rice said.

The cost to the five communities for the forester would be $42,890, with each city paying a percentage equal to its footage. The Woods would pay the largest portion — just under 37 percent — which would amount to $15,900. The Park would pay 25 percent, or $10,892; the Farms' portion amounts to $10,721, just under 25 percent; the City would foot 8 percent of the bill, or $3,442, and the Shores, just under 5 percent, or $2,100.

In considering the proposal, the Woods is also considering an in-kind contribution of $6,000 for an office, services and supplies, Rice said. The $6,000 would be subtracted from its portion of the cost.

To date, the only city to accept the proposal is the Shores. All other cities have said they will discuss it at a future meeting, Rice said.

"Budgets are going to be very difficult this year," she conceded, but added she hopes all the cities can find the money somewhere.

If one city does not accept the proposal, it may go down to defeat, Rice said. It is a total community effort, she said, and needs all to help it succeed.

The Grosse Pointe Shade Tree Council was informally established in 1979 by citizens from the Grosse Pointes who were interested in the preservation of the urban forest in the area. In 1981 the organization filed papers with the Michigan Department of Commerce.

The purpose of the council, according to a memo, "is to educate the public at large with respect to comprehensive tree management and to disseminate educational information about urban forestry to local municipal tree councils or commissions, individual property owners and civic organizations in order to preserve the special plant materials that characterize the area." It is a volunteer organization.

Spring is time for new views, new goals

By Marian Trainor
Staff Writer

Winds may blow, temperatures may rise and fall like capricious balloons, a few snow flurries may be mixed in with the rain, but spring is definitely here.

The dirty gray piles of snow are finally gone. Crocuses, those hardy heralds of the glorious blooms to come, are up. There is a softness in the breeze. The surface of the lake, gray and humped with jagged winter ice just a few weeks ago, is churning and stirring under a warmer sun. Soon it will be blue and sparkling and sailboats will be skimming over its azure blue surface. Everything in nature is experiencing a new surge of life.

The older tree is getting ready to leaf and cast its cooling shade over the landscape. Roses are getting ready to bud and old feathered friends are beginning to return and spike the air with chirps and trills.

Nature is not easily defeated. Each year comes alive once again without concessions to age.

We are creatures of nature also, but somehow we let the years diminish our enjoyment of life. How many times we hear older people, who could remain in the mainstream of life, hold back and say, "I'm too old."

In our particular climate, there is some reason for curtailed activity in the winter months. Going places and doing things is not inviting when the winter winds blow and streets and roads are treacherous with ice.

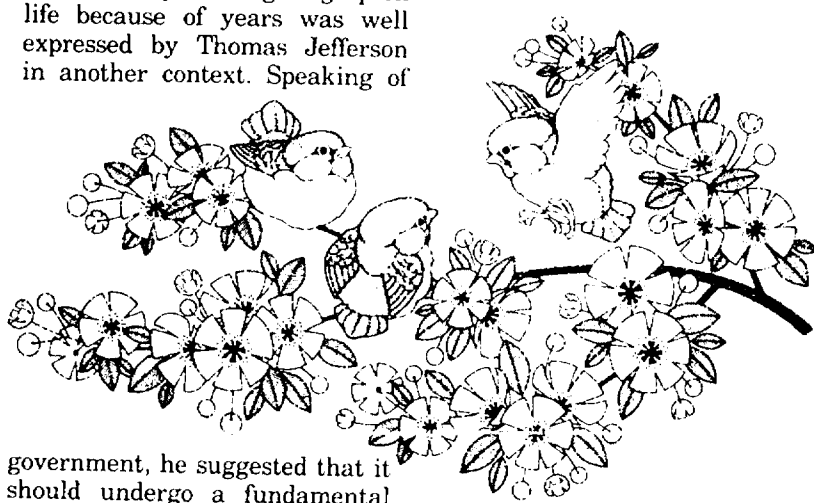

But in the spring when the world of nature is stirring and getting ready for a summer of "business as usual," it is time to break out of the winter doldrums and become part of the rejuvenation that is spring.

The theory of not giving up on life because of years was well expressed by Thomas Jefferson in another context. Speaking of tiful and when one reaches a certain age, it is time to withdraw from society.

This is not true. Looking deeper we are reminded that the people who spin the earth on its axis in world affairs and governments, in business and in the arts, are people well on in years. The magic that makes life enjoyable is not in counting the years, but in the perspective and the willingness to make every day count.

There are many examples of older citizens who have done just that. A stellar example is President Reagan. He is a paradigm of an older person who refuses to let age be a barrier to achievement.

There is another consideration that should serve as an incentive to be more than we have been. Our future is better than those who proceed us. Even counting the deficiencies in the provisions for older citizens, we are better off than many older people in the past.

We have social security, better health care, are living longer and are rapidly gaining recognition as an important segment of society. Proportionately the number of senior citizens is growing. As active citizens, those numbers can work to put quality into the quantity of those years.

We are beginning to see some evidence of what that quality could be for those who are active, lively and resourceful. There is support to achieve this goal of fulfilled later years as active older citizens work to insure better economic security, quality health care, both physical and mental, good transportation, a full range of legal and other professional services, decent housing, protection from crime, and provision or catastrophic illness.

Long life expectancy is a modern achievement. We as a nation are not prepared for the large numbers of older people. There are issues that must be resolved that stem from the needs of all individuals to adjust to the new rhythms of life that come with increased longevity and multi-generational families, retirement, increased leisure, changing health status and the new opportunities and new problems of adaption that accompany a long life.

In establishing policies, we will have to consider the future as well as the present. The persons growing old in the future will probably have different needs from today's older people. It is a complex situation with no easy answer.

New problems, new views, new goals — all appropriate considerations for spring when nature is renewing itself.

Garvin asks each participant to design three original floor plans and make decisions concerning the various elements to be included in each room. In critiquing the work, Garvin will share her secrets of what makes a house a home and show students how to create liveable as well as attractive spaces.

The course is designed for anyone considering interior design as a career as well as those just wishing to learn these techniques for their own enjoyment.

Garvin is a graduate of Wayne State University, founder of the Lawrence Institute of Interior Design in Sarasota, Florida and for many years a private interior design clientele in the metropolitan Detroit area. She is currently design columnist for the Observer & Eccentric newspapers.

Course fee is $250 for 20 sessions. Advance registration is required as enrollment is limited. For further information, call 881-7511.

MTV judges: 'Vive la Difference'

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The Difference, a college band based in Ann Arbor that includes three Grosse Pointers, defeated more than 150 bands from around the country to claim the title of "Best College Band in the Nation," a contest sponsored by Music Television (MTV) and Energizer batteries.

For its efforts, The Difference took home $5,000 in cash, $5,000 donated in their name to the University of Michigan, their alma mater, and an all-expense paid recording session at a professional studio in New York.

The band consists of Grosse Pointers Tina Marcaccio, a 1985 Grosse Pointe North graduate; Ramsey Gouda, a 1983 University Liggett graduate; Marty Heger, a 1983 Grosse Pointe South graduate, and Randy Martin and Tom Campbell. All but Marcaccio have graduated from U of M — she is studying music there.

Heger, who plays the saxophone, guitar and does the vocals, said the judges, who are all members in the music industry, cited the band's uniqueness, its high-energy stage show, and the composition of the music as what made it the best college band in America.

The band describes its music as "one which invites ideas from genres such as classical, fused with jazz, funk, dance and rock 'n' roll." Each of the musicians brings a different background to the band, and when it is combined, it makes for a unique sound.

Marcaccio, who is a classically trained pianist, says the music is "a dialect of the musical language of today. We want to communicate, and to reach people with our music."

"Not everyone is going to like our sound, but we want people to react to it," she added.

The band, which has been together for two years, will be sending a number of compositions to the recording studio for the studio to work with, and will be flown to New York by MTV for a two-day recording session. Changes in the music, some of them, are OK with Heger, but if too many are made, the band will revolt, he said.

"It's really important to us to retain our integrity," Heger said.

He is excited about the opportunities winning the contest has provided, but the two-day studio session does not necessarily mean the band will receive a recording contract.

"They didn't come right out and say (we would get a contract)," he said, "but they wouldn't do all that work and spend all that time with us if they thought it was a waste of time."

Marcaccio has a more neutral viewpoint on the band's possibilities.

"I would like to see us go as far as we can," she said. "But we're not really hoping for too much. That way we aren't disappointed and any success we do have will be that much more exciting."

Although the band is important to all of them, Marcaccio said, all have degrees and jobs to fall back on in the off-chance that things don't work out.

Marcaccio said her experience with the band is strange, considering her shy, quiet past.

"If anyone would have told me I was going to be singing in a rock band, I never would have believed them," she said. "But I believe people should never be intimidated by past experiences. I believe anyone can do anything they want to do."

Heger, who graduated with a degree in economics and works at the National Bank of Detroit downtown, credits Ralph Miller, band director in the Pointes, with pushing him along and keeping him interested in music.

Both Marcaccio and Heger agree that if the record contract doesn't work out, they will make it another way. They all believe their music speaks for itself.

Two cars stolen from dealership

Thieves crashed a 1988 Beretta through a 12-foot wood and glass overhead door on the east side of Mike Maher Chevrolet on Jefferson, then drove a 1986 Corvette through the large hole made in the doorway.

Neighbors heard the crash around 2:30 a.m. Saturday, March 26, and Park police arrived at the scene.

The Beretta, extensively damaged by the collision with the door and two signs on the street, was abandoned at Beaconsfield and St. Paul.

Park Director Richard Caretti said he believes two people were involved, but police have leads on one suspect.

The Corvette, partially stripped, was located by Pontiac police while being driven by two women later Saturday. Caretti said Pontiac police learned the female driver was not involved in the theft, but knew who was. Park police are now searching for the man.

Caretti said entry was gained to the dealership by breaking a window. He said he believes the thieves intended to take both cars, but when they saw how much damage was done to the Beretta, abandoned it.

Thousands of dollars of damage was done to the Beretta with about $1,000 damage done to the overhead door, Caretti said. Damage to the Corvette was not known.

Police are continuing the investigation.

Farms forms ordinance committee

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

In an effort to clean house in the Farms city ordinance book, the council recently formed an ordinance committee.

The five-member committee consists of Joseph Butala, John DeHayes Jr., Alan Ledyard, John Hannon and Barbara Weiss, and councilman Greg Berendt, as a non-voting member.

"It's strictly an ad hoc advisory committee," Berendt said. "They will be doing three things: They will look at and review the ordinance book, suggest ordinances which need to be purged and altered, and look at new ordinances which may be needed."

Because it is an advisory committee, it can only make recommendations to the city council, and the council must vote on the recommendations after a public hearing, he added.

Some ordinances have outlived their usefulness and should be purged, Berendt said. The air-raid blackout ordinance and the ordinance which requires butter-milk to be sold only in butter-milk cartons are examples of those, he said.

Some ordinances need to be created, he said, and one ordinance the committee will be looking at drafting will be a minimum maintenance ordinance.

The ordinance will deal with certain actions residents must take to keep their property properly maintained. "It's something that the time has come," he said.

The city already has most of the ordinances on the book, Berendt said, but he said they are hard to find, so the committee would look at ways to bring them together and group them and possible clarify them.

"We want the ordinances to be easy for the city to enforce and easy for the people to understand," he said. "All the minimum maintenance ordinance is trying to do is to give the city the ability to be able to talk to the owner of a property (about proper maintenance procedures)."

He recognizes that the minimum maintenance ordinance will get the most attention, but stresses that it is not the primary impetus for the committee — cleaning up the ordinance book is.

Those on the committee are people who have approached Mayor Joseph Fromm and expressed an interest in the committee, Berendt said. "I think we have a real good mix," he added.

The committee meetings will be open to the public and are scheduled to begin in the near future, he said, and when all the work is done, the committee will be disbanded.

Researchers study effects of whole-body hyperthermia on cancer

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

A new form of treatment is being studied by a medical team at Harper-Grace Hospital that could be a major aid in the treatment of cancer.

From the Greek word for elevated temperatures, hyperthermia is the treatment that dates back to the late 19th century when scientists noticed some sarcoma patients with high fevers occasionally experienced remission, according to Dr. Efstathios Tapazoglou, a Grosse Pointe Park resident and head of the research team.

Doctors then tried treating cancer by introducing bacteria into the body to induce high fevers, but found their patients dying of the infections, instead of the cancer. They stopped that treatment and whole-body hyperthermia research was put on hold until approximately 20 years ago when new strides in cell and radiation biology created new interest in it, he said.

But methods of raising the body temperatures were dangerous and caused more problems than they solved. Those methods included baths in hot wax, "space suits" which circulated hot water between double layers, and hot water blankets. One method took the blood out of the body, circulated it through a machine which warmed it, then put it back into the body.

But those methods required patients to have a general anesthetic and caused many complications.

The machine Tapazoglou uses to raise the temperature of the body — it is one of only two machines like it in the world — works externally, does not require a general anesthetic, is totally painless and has no known side effects, he said.

A patient lays on a padded bed and is hooked up to monitors that measure temperature in various parts of the body as well as breathing and heart rates. The patient is then placed into the machine — all but his head — which houses a semi-circular chamber and electrically heated copper cables. The copper cables slowly heat the body and a light mist is circulated in the chamber, so the body doesn't give off the energy — in the form of heat — it is being given.

The target temperature is 107 degrees Fahrenheit. When that is reached, the patient is removed and wrapped in insulating material to maintain it for up to 1-1/2 hours, Tapazoglou said. The patient is then allowed to return to normal body temperature, and after a night of observation in the hospital is able to be released.

"After they receive the first treatment, they feel better, because when the body is heated, it releases endorphins, therefore they get a feeling of well-being," he said.

It also puts a lot of stress on the heart and lungs, so those who are admitted to the testing program are thoroughly screened. They undergo pulmonary function tests before they are treated. They must also have a form of cancer that cannot be treated effectively with surgery, he said. "The exact mechanism (why hyperthermia works) is not actually known," Tapazoglou said, but it appears that raising the body temperature raises the body's metabolism, thereby modifying cell membranes, making them more ready to accept other cancer treatments, he said.

"By itself, it probably will not have an impact," Tapazoglou said, "but combined with other treatments, it could have a great impact."

Although it is still in the research stage, work with a similar machine at the Wisconsin Clinical Cancer Center has proven to be encouraging, he said.

Combining hyperthermia with known cancer treatments, such as chemotherapy, radiation therapy and immune response modifiers, has been shown to enhance the therapy. Especially encouraging is the enhancement of chemotherapy, he said.

"We are trying to identify drugs and different ways of combining them with hyperthermia," he said.

Cancer medications have been shown to be more effective when given in conjunction with hyperthermia, but testing needs to be done to pinpoint times and dosages for the medications, Tapazoglou said. Certain drugs have been shown, at the Wisconsin center, to be more effective if given within 24 hours of hyperthermia treatment. Tests need to be done to see if other drugs will work better or if they should be given before, during or after a hyperthermia treatment. Research has also shown that certain drugs are not enhanced by hyperthermia, and that is as important as finding the ones which are, he added.

Determining what types of tumors it will work on is also part of the research process. Treatment of some tumors may not be enhanced by hyperthermia, he added, saying that research will prove which will and which will not.

Treatment of cancer of the kidneys with interferon, enhanced by hyperthermia, has shown encouraging results, and tests are now being done on breast cancer patients with heartening results, he added.

"It has great potential," Tapazoglou said. "Everybody (in the medical community) is excited."

At the moment, a lot of questions regarding hyperthermia's future in cancer treatment are being answered by a "nobody knows," and the research which will answer the questions will be a long and arduous process which Tapazoglou says may take upwards of five years.

It is interesting to note, Tapazoglou said, that even Hippocrates knew the effects of heat and its curative properties. Hippocrates said: "If medication can't cure it, the knife can. If the knife can't cure it, heat can. If heat can't cure it, nothing will."

Ageless walk program to begin

After a winter break, the Ageless Walk group is again tying into the shoes and meeting informally outside the main entrance to Cottage Hospital on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings from 8 to 9 a.m.

They enjoy a walk, some talk, and, if they wish, a healthy breakfast. No reservations are required and there is only a nominal charge for the optional breakfast that follows the one to three mile walk.

The distance walked each day is determined by the participants. Beth Ayn Deutsch, director of CHAMP (Cottage Hospital Athletic Medicine Program), coordinates the groups which usually are divided into two sections — those who want a brisk walk and those who prefer to move more leisurely. Athletic medicine personnel accompany the walkers on varying routes through Grosse Pointe Farms and City.

The purpose, according to Deutsch, is to promote good health practices and awareness.

"Walking is one of the safest, lowest impact forms of exercise. It's an activity almost anyone can participate in, at some level, and derive benefit."

The Ageless Walk Program begins from the main entrance to Cottage Hospital on the large parking lot side of the building. Loose, comfortable clothing, appropriate for the day's weather is suggested. Good, supportive walking shoes are recommended. Not sure what makes a good shoe? The CHAMP staff can answer your questions.

A physician's consent form is required for each participant in the program. Call 884-8600, ext. 2170, to request a form, or pick one up at the hospital Information Desk any time, day or night.

"That left a number of editors who were basically not essential to the Gannett game plan and I was one of them," he said. "Rather than sit on the back bench and do things that weren't as challenging and exciting, I decided to look around."

Wayne State, he said, is on an aggressive upward curve. "I think we have a possibility of developing the Wayne State program to top levels."

Ironically, he said, every one of the three full-time instructors who are in the journalism program, he had hired at some point in his newspaper career.

"I could not have picked three people I'd rather work with. The blessing in all this is I'm not starting out with an entrenched faculty that has gone to sleep on the job."

Then there are another 14 to 16 working journalists who teach one or more courses.

Burns is teaching a survey course of the media — Contemporary American Press — which deals with issues, such as ethics, credibility, libel, invasion of privacy and trends in the business. The transition from newsroom to classroom is tough, he said.

"Basically I'm used to making things happen in terms of organization. Suddenly I'm thrust in a classroom in front of 20 to 30 critics. You better be prepared to deliver. They've paid their money."

His wife Beverly, who taught at one time, helps him. "I share with her all the pains and sorrows of teaching. Some days you just bomb and some days the class is out of sync and won't be responsive."

"I haven't done anything outrageously dumb yet," he adds.

His strengths, he says, are a strong sense of commitment to journalism, an ability to get along well with people and a bizarre sense of humor. "I've always told people that all I do well is hire people — people who care passionately and find it fun and exciting."

Burns is opinionated. A journalism teacher who has never worked on a paper is "like having somebody try to teach you to ride a horse who has never seen a horse." The exceptions, he says, are courses such as technical writing or polling and surveying.

"I think there's a trend in journalism schools to add more working professionals."

One of the main reasons he said that he was drawn to Wayne State was its Journalism Institute for Minorities, a program begun in 1985.

"I think it's on the cutting edge of putting the entire journalism program light years ahead," he said. There was a story about it in the Christian Science Monitor, and this summer for the first time, Wayne interns will serve at the Los Angeles Times and New York Times.

"What it does is if we can get the recognition that we are graduating students of high quality, all students benefit."

His views on a possible joint operating agreement between the Free Press and News is upbeat. He believes the JOA will be approved and that both papers will be better than they are now.

"I'm not fearful about the quality," he said.

"My opposition, if you can call it that, is that Knight Ridder should have attempted to come up with a profit. It troubles me that both newspapers are so underpriced."

Burns will begin writing a column on the media for Detroit Monthly. And in his spare time, he plays tennis, but mostly he enjoys going fishing.

He talks about his two sons, Ben, an 8-year-old at Trombly, who won the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club fishing tournament a couple of times before he was 6, and James, 4, who came in fourth in the tournament last year.

Burns, who made the 1958 Detroit Times first team all-state in basketball, fenced at Michigan State and participated in track, baseball and football, coached a basketball team this winter at the Neighborhood Club. Almost every member of the Bobcats, a team of seven boys and two girls ages 7 to 9, scored at least once, he said.

Burns also has two daughters from a previous marriage, Blakely, 20, a junior studying biology at Albion, and Bethany, 19, a freshman studying psychology at Virginia Tech.

Joy Ramberger, 13, said Scroll provides a showcase for the students' literary efforts.

"It's important that the kids get to pick the ones that go in," Ramberger said, adding that the students really feel it is their publication.

Keogh, a Brownell English teacher, said the National Council of Teachers of English, has this program to specifically recognize excellence in student literary work.

"We were the only middle school in Michigan to receive this superior rating," Keogh said. "The rest were all given at the senior high school level."

Don Messing, principal of the 420-student Brownell Middle School said he is especially pleased with the program because it includes a large number of students.

"This is a way we can show students and parents the talent these students have," Messing said. "They get to write whatever they want. A teacher does edit the final product, but it encourages them to try new writing techniques."

Tannian said it also puts the English teachers in the position of having to constantly come up with new ideas.

"Sometimes they run out of new techniques because we've already tried so much," Tannian said.

Fisher said that there are eight students who won awards in a Detroit Free Press writing contest who have literary works in Scroll. Messing said that while featuring the works of the contest winners is good for the school, providing an avenue so that many students can showcase their work is very important.

"The contest is great," Messing said, "but we send in 100 entries and only five or six students are recognized. With Scroll we can show parents and faculty the work of dozens of students. It is a prestige thing for students. They earn the recognition from other students."

Keogh said that the books are passed out to students near the end of the school year.

"When those books go out, it is so quiet that you can hear a pin drop," Keogh said.

China's emergence is series topic

Sherwin Wine, director of the Center For New Thinking, has chosen "China — The Awakening Giant" as the subject of his spring lecture, series, to be held at the War Memorial, Tuesdays, April 12-26.

The series begins with a look at the Cultural Revolution.

The series continues April 19 with a glimpse at China today, its culture and lifestyle. Concluding April 26 will be a discussion about the new Communism; how today's Chinese Communist Party differs from the one Mao created and what conflicts are emerging as the old meets the new.

Tickets are $19 for three-part series; $7.50, single session. The lectures are a presentation of the War Memorial Council of Sponsors. Advance registration advised. For additional information, call 881-7511.

Suspect arrested

A 25-year-old Detroit man was arrested Wednesday, March 30, after he allegedly broke into a house on the 16000 block of Maumee.

The man approached a neighbor who became suspicious and called police. The thief later was spotted driving in the Shores and was arrested a short time later with the assistance of Woods police at Mack near Hollywood.

The following is a poem by Susan Dale. The work, included in the Brownell literary magazine Scroll, also won an Honorable Mention in a Detroit Free Press writing contest.

Dear Abby

My grades are bad,
My mom is mad,
I'm trying to get better.

My boyfriend Shawn
Has moved and gone,
No visits or a letter.

My leg is broken,
I feel like croakin',
I think I must be dying.

I'm waiting 'till
My brother Bill
Has stopped compulsive lying.

What should I do?
Signed, Sobbing Sue.
Please help me, help me, Abby!

Dear Sobbing Sue,
I'm sure it's true
That you are feeling crabby.

I'll help you now,
I'll show you how,
Just follow my advice.

And hit the books
Until it looks
As if your work's precise.

You can't be dying,
Now stop your crying
And make yourself a deal.

When you recover,
Call up your lover,
Just tell him how you feel.

He'll think you're sweet,
That you're a treat,
It's really what to do.

Now as for Bill,
I think I will Leave him up to you.

Please let me know
How everything goes,
Write and tell me first.

I hope that I Helped you try
Get over life at its worst.

Scroll teacher-sponsors Melanie Fisher, left, and Donica Keogh show off a congratulatory letter from Gov. James J. Blanchard and the 1987 copy of Scroll.

City of Grosse Pointe Farms Michigan

NOTICE OF HEARING ZONING BOARD OF APPEALS

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Zoning Board of Appeals will meet in the City Hall at 90 Kerby Road, Grosse Pointe Farms on

at 7:30 p.m. to hear the following:

1. The appeal of Mr. & Mrs. Brad Elvidge, who intend to purchase Lot 13, Memorial Subdivision, for variances from the following provisions of the City's Zoning Ordinance:

a. Both lots 12 & 13 are held in one ownership, are considered a single parcel. According to items 1 & 2 of Section 1516, this parcel cannot be split since it would not meet the lot size requirements of the R-1 District (5,000 sq. ft.). The existing house on lot 12, if lot 13 is split off would have a side yard of 3.40' which does not conform to the minimum 4 ft. requirement for the R-1 Residential District.

b. A front yard setback of 8 ft. is requested for the dwelling on Lot 13 instead of the minimum 20 ft. (Section 402.2).

c. The minimum floor area required or a 1½ story dwelling unit in an R-1 Residential District, per Article XIII, Section 1300, is 1,200 sq. ft., while the dwelling proposed for lot 13 would be 1,080 sq. ft.

2. The appeal of Mr. Thomas Bearse, owner of the premises located at 387 Merriweather, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a building permit for the construction of an addition to the rear of his existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied or reason that:

a. The residence located on the foregoing premises is non-conforming for reason that it is in violation of the side yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.

b. The proposed addition on the rear would also infringe upon the minimum side yard and rear yard requirements of 4' and 30' leaving a side yard of 2.5' and a rear yard of 25', thereby requiring variances from the provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Ordinance.

The Hearings will be public. Interested property-owners or residents of the City are invited to attend. Those wishing to submit written comments may do so to the Office of the City Clerk. A drop-box at the Police Department may be utilized for hand-delivered mail during non-office hours.

Home security system sales increasing at alarming rate

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Remember the expression, "If only these walls could talk?" Well, now they can, and what they say is "lock the door" and "shut the windows."

In the last 20 years, residential home security systems have become more sophisticated and less costly.

A basic home security system will cost between $1,000 and $3,000. This will include sensors on most doors and windows, a smoke and heat detector for fire protection, a back-up battery system in the event of power failure, a panic alarm for medical or other in-home emergencies, and a siren to notify neighbors of trouble at your house.

If the system sends a signal to a central station, a monthly fee of between $11 and $25 is the norm, depending on the type of system installed.

Today, micro-electronics have made a voice synthesizer available to help the homeowner know exactly what is happening with the system. A voice will tell the owner that the garage door is unlocked, which window is open and whether the system is fully activated.

Tom Stong, owner of Grosse Pointe Alarm Co., said that alarm systems have decreased in price as smoke detectors and digital wristwatches have over the years.

"What used to cost $3,000 15 years ago for the average home in Grosse Pointe will cost between $900 and $1,200 today," Stong said.

While most homeowners might select a more sophisticated system at a higher cost, Stong said 98 percent of his customers buy a basic system — and he's installing 60 to 80 jobs a month.

Regardless of the size of the security system, Stong's company charges $11 a month for central station monitoring.

This monitoring is what costs the alarm company. A room filled with sophisticated equipment and people to man the system is the norm. Operators watch computer screens, and in some cases actually listen to a large number of receivers that monitor the sounds emanating from a house or business.

Richard Hager, sales manager for Audio Century, a Roseville-based alarm company, said much of the company's residential business comes from affluent suburbs such as Grosse Pointe and Bloomfield Hills, while commercial accounts are spread out all over the metropolitan area.

Audio Century has been in business since 1959. The company not only markets and installs security systems, it manufactures the hardware for the systems.

"We sell some very basic systems at about $1,500, but we're installing several $5,000 and $6,000 systems monthly," Hager said.

Audio Century manufactures the audio boxes which listen to, transmit and receive sounds from a business or manufacturing plant to their central office. Hager said the technology for the equipment is now antiquated, and while still effective, new systems are now completely computerized.

Operators monitor a computer screen which informs them of break-ins, alarms and the arming and disarming of the system.

Hager said Audio Century also provides a wireless system, in which phone lines don't play a role. Power and phone lines can be cut. Power can be restored through the use of a back-up rechargeable batteries, but if a phone line is cut, then a system must depend on on-site audible alarms.

"We have a Scan-alert system in which our host computer sends a signal every 30 seconds to the premise," Hager said. "If there is no answer we send the police."

Obviously, this system is more costly to monitor and monthly fees may run about $32.

Photos by Peter A. Salinas

Dave Sokolowski of Donat Alarm, Inc. wires a Woods home with a motion detector. Detectors are often disguised to look like wall switches or outlets for the benefit of the homeowner.

Hager said gross sales for his firm were about $1.8 million in 1987, and have increased about 10 to 15 percent for the last five years.

"About 50 percent of our business is residential and 50 percent commercial," Hager said. "It's a good mix and we like it that way. Installing the larger commercial systems is where the money is. The monthly fees for residential properties usually cover what we have to spend. The profits are in the installation and actual sales."

Gary M. Donat, president of Donat Alarm, Inc., said business is indeed booming.

"In the last 10 years, people have become increasingly aware of the general increases in crime," Donat said. "Statistically, the crimes rates have not really gone up, but the perception is there and people are paying for peace of mind."

Donat's company sells, installs and monitors three major brands of security systems — Westec, Habitec and Silent Night.

Donat's monthly fee for a basic system, which would cost about $1,500 to $1,600 to install, is $22 a month.

Estimating that about one-third of his business comes from the Grosse Pointe area, Donat said his business has gone up about 250 percent in the last six years.

"Our gross sales have risen 30 to 40 percent each year," Donat said.

All three security system companies agree that the majority of the customers come from referrals. Sales people do little in the way of cold calling or high pressure sales.

"We do a lot of executive protection for large corporations," Donat said.

He said many of the large corporations install a security system in the homes of their executives as a matter of course.

"Everyone feels more comfortable that way," Donat said.

One of the drawbacks to security systems are the number of false alarms they can generate.

Donat said much energy has been put into making the systems lightning-proof in recent years. Electrical storms often generate a large number of false alarms. He said the technology is improving, and that new systems are less likely to trip unless there is an actual intrusion.

Park Capt. William Furtaw said that there is no doubt that security systems do thwart burglaries.

Furtaw said a man was arrested last week after he allegedly broke into a house, and an alarm sounded. The man didn't stick around, but went to another nearby street and broke into a house without an alarm system.

He was later caught, because when he fled from the first house, neighbors were able to get a glimpse of him and they reported his description and that of his vehicle to police.

Inventors to meet

The Inventors Association of Metropolitan Detroit will meet Thursday, April 14, from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at Grosse Pointe North, 707 Vernier, in Room 312.

Robert Nolan, a patent attorney with Cullen, Sloman, Cantor, Grauer, Scott and Rutherford, will talk about "The Mechanics of Selling or Licensing Your Invention."

Meetings are open to the public. Everyone is welcome to two free meetings before being asked to pay a $25 annual fee.

For more information, call 772-7888.

Court Messacar

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The following was written by Court Messacar, a third-grader at The Grosse Pointe Academy. He is the son of Hal and Katy Messacar of Grosse Pointe Farms.

Our School is a Dream

I am lucky because Martin Luther King Jr.'s dreams have come true at my school. I am a third-grade student at The Grosse Pointe Academy. The school's goal is to love one another, let all colors and religions attend, and teach the students that they are good people.

Martin Luther King wanted that everywhere people could be equal and love one another. He wanted to do all things peacefully. If you came to my school, you would see a special place. A place where all people are

A Day With Amigo and Thelonious

It was a Tuesday at school and my teacher, Ms. Apkarian, was bringing her pet parrots to our class. When I saw all the kids around a bird cage, I knew they were here. I was so curious and had to see them.

First all the students got away from the cage and Ms. A opened the cage. All the kids were so excited. I wanted Thelonious, the sun conure, to come to my desk. Their colors were so pretty — yellow, green, blue, red and even black. They were in the room and they flew all over the place and landed on kids' heads.

We drew pictures of them and I drew Thelonious because he was the darigest. Amigo was more proud of herself. Amigo is five and Thelonious is three. When it was time to go home, I thought what a good day this was.

This space is open to any student in the Grosse Pointe public or private school system from grades 1 through 12.

Karen Colson, 17, a senior at Grosse Pointe North, has been awarded a scholarship by the International Christian Youth Exchange. She will spend one year in Switzerland beginning in July. She is the daughter of Tom and Jean Colson of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Contestant

Alexis Collins, 17, of Grosse Pointe, will participate in the Miss Michigan Teen USA Pageant April 10 at the Novi Hilton in Novi. Alexis, a student at University Liggett School, plans to become a doctor when she graduates.

Notre Dame plans 10th reunion

Class of 1978, Notre Dame High School, will celebrate a 10-year reunion on June 11 at the Georgian Inn, Roseville.

The committee is searching for

Correction

Due to incorrect information received from the school, there was an error in last week's paper regarding a scholarship awarded to Christina Martin, a senior at Grosse Pointe North. She received a Regent's Scholarship for $1,500 for Eastern Michigan University.

Essay winners

Three students from St. Paul School have been named local winners in the 19th annual America & Me Essay Contest, sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance Group.

The students, who earned the first, second and third place awards for their school, are Andrea Agosta, first; Elizabeth Rondini, second; and Clare Jamieson, third. All three received award certificates for their achievement. As the school's first place winner, Andrea Agosta's name will also be engraved on a plaque for permanent display in the school. Her first place essay now advances to the state level competition, from which the top 10 essays in Michigan will be selected.

Students send message balloons

The Grosse Pointe Academy Lower School celebrated the beginning of spring by filling the sky with a giant cloud of brightly colored balloons March 18.

As part of an annual Weekly Reader Writing Pals Balloon Contest, students from the Academy, as well as other schools nationwide, sent messages attached to balloons asking the finders to write back.

The Weekly Reader offices are awarding $500 to the school with the farthest-traveled air miles card.

Following last year's annual balloon launch, Academy students received a letter from a family in Federalsburg, Md. The letter stated that the balloon was found early one morning when the cows were being fed. It had landed in the walkway from the field and the cows were afraid to come in from the field.

Pierce students learn about stocks

Students and teachers at Pierce Middle School recently learned about investing by participating in a "Stock Game" sponsored by McDonald and Company Securities. The program was presented to the school during a Brown Bag lunch forum.

Under the direction of financial consultant Lynn Miller, participants were to manage imaginary portfolios for three months, buying and selling their stock by turning in "tickets" to the school library each morning.

Winners (students won prizes) were selected at each grade level. Ted Watts was the eighth grade winner, Sarah Garvey won in the seventh grade and Eric Lindauer won for the sixth grade. Teacher winner included Richard Benoit.

Sights of spring

Vernal equinox, schmernal equinox . . . although the calendar said "Spring" back on March 20, people in these parts know that it isn't spring until the Easter Bunny says so.

Last Saturday, the Big Bunny himself and other Seekers of Spring were out in force, joining in a damp, but delightful Easter Egg Hunt at the Farms Pier Park. It was the Farms' first egg hunt, a joint effort of the Parks and Recreation Department and the Farms Boat Club.

The event may not have been the "Official Kick-off" to Spring, but they'll do until the sun comes out and takes care of that job.

Photos and text by Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk

Holding their baskets, the children line up, peering through the fence, waiting for the hunt to start so they could get at those eggs.

Here's what it's all about for sisters Erin Ealba, 6, and Lauren Ealba, 4 — getting a chance to sit on the Easter Bunny's lap and take home some candy.

Swedes await royal visit

Detroit's — and Grosse Pointe's — Swedish community is anxiously awaiting the April 18 visit of King Carl XVI Gustaf and Queen Silvia of Sweden.

The royal couple will arrive at Detroit's Metro Airport on Sunday afternoon, April 17, and spend Monday, April 18, on a whirlwind tour of the area's business, medical, cultural and social sectors. Elmer W. Johnson, chairman of the Detroit New Sweden '88 Committee, said that "The royal visit is the high point of a year-long tribute to the strong tie between the U.S. and Sweden and the contribution to American Society of men and women of Swedish descent. We of Detroit's Swedish community are delighted to be able to host their majesties, particularly since Michigan has the fifth largest Swedish population of any state in the nation.

"Our committee members and many other volunteers are working hard to make their visit here a memorable one."

King Gustaf will address a seminar "SwedenWorks: A Industrial model for Global Competitiveness," at 8 a.m. at the Westin Hotel. Queen Silvia will visit Children's Hospital of Michigan, then join her husband for the Economic Club luncheon at Cobo Hall. Speaker will be Swedish financier Peter Wallenberg.

Then the royal couple will visit the Cranbrook Academy of Art and close out their visit with tors Marvin R. Anderson, Roger Fridholm, Wesley R. Johnson, Arvid Lundell and Mrs. Walter W. Wood, all of Grosse Pointe.

International dance:

The Southfield Civic Center will be the site of the International Folk Dance Festival, sponsored by the International Institute, the City of Southfield and the Detroit News, next Sunday, April 17.

Twelve ethnic dance groups — representing Argentina, Spain, India, Greece, Israel, Lithuania, Mexico, Poland and the Slavic countries — will perform from 4 to 7:30 p.m. An international buffet and wine are included in the $13.50 admission price.

Proceeds from the dance festival will benefit the International Institute, a United Foundation agency which provides human services to the foreign-born and new immigrants, as well as promoting an appreciation of ethnic heritage in the community at large.

Serving as co-chairmen of the festival are Detroit's Rosemary Bannon, Patricia Hill Burnett and Frank Stella and Stephanie Germack and Louis A. "Chip" Weil III of Grosse Pointe.

For more information on the event, call 871-8600.

'Bal Elan':

"Carail" — the home of Linda and Richard Kughn's collection of antique automobiles — was Institute's 40th anniversary.

"Bal Elan" will be held Friday, May 13, in the Riverfront Ballroom of the Westin Hotel. Formal attire ("red" tie, in keeping with the 40th anniversary theme) is suggested for the evening, which will feature cocktails, an elegant dinner and entertainment by Sheri Nichols. All proceeds from the event will benefit eye research at the Institute.

Tickets are $150 and may be obtained by calling 745-9021.

Sue Nine and Wally Preechter are co-chairing the benefit.

MCF planning:

The Michigan Cancer Foundation's Sixth Annual Dinner is set for Friday, May 6, at Detroit's Westin Hotel, and the planning is well under way for the event.

Last month, members of the honorary and planning committees met at the Renaissance Club for a kick-off luncheon. Among those who attended the event were Grosse Pointers Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Agley, Dr. and Mrs. Donald Austin, Dr. and Mrs. Michael J. Brennan, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Germack Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Lamparter, Mrs. William P. Vittoe and Mrs. Lucille Wertz.

Having a ball . . . at the annual International Consular Ball March 4, presented by the World Trade Club of the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, were several Grosse Pointe residents. The event honored members of the Detroit Consular Corps, including Belgian Consul Elizabeth Stevens and Canadian Consul Marc Lemieux, of Grosse Pointe.

Proceeds from the event will go to the International Visitors Council of Grosse Pointe.

Buddy's benefits Capuchins

Instead of manna from heaven it will be pizza from Buddy's when the restaurant chain sponsors the 13th annual Capuchin Soup Kitchen benefit at five of its Detroit-area outlets, from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m., Monday, April 11.

All customer proceeds that day will be donated to support the Soup Kitchen, which serves more than one million meals each year to the city's poor and homeless.

"The Buddy's Capuchin Soup Kitchen Pizzathon has raised more than a million dollars over the years, allowing us to maintain and expand our services to Detroiters in need," said Fr. Lloyd Thiel, Director of the Soup Kitchen.

Meal tickets, which allow patrons to eat all the pizza and salad they can hold, are $8 for adults, $4 for children. They will be sold at the door and are available in advance by calling the Soup Kitchen at 579-1330.

Participating restaurants are located at: 17125 Conant, Detroit; 33105 Plymouth, Livonia; 31646 Northwestern, Farmington; 4370 Highland, Pontiac; 8100 Old 13 Mile Road, Warren.

Bosman works on exhibit at Emery

"Richard Bosman Paintings, Drawings and Prints," will be on exhibition at the Joy Emery Gallery in Grosse Pointe Farms April 14 through May 21. Bosman, son of an Australian mother and Dutch Merchant Marine sea captain, was born in Madras, India in 1944 and traveled extensively as a child. He lived in Holland, Indonesia, Egypt, Australia and England before setting in the United States in 1969.

The introduction of the figure into Bosman's work in the late 1970's signaled a change from the formal to the narrative. Inspired by the work of Joseph Conrad, and by comic strips, magazines and movies, he unleashed in his work a world of action, fear, violence and pain. Bosman's most recent work which is highly narrative, includes turbulent expanses of sea, sometimes an empty boat washed ashore or a floating barrel. Only vestiges of the human presence remain. The stacked canvas panels emphasize the narrative, sometimes indicating passage of time, sometimes the freeze-frame of a film strip. Bosman has described his painting as a journey and perhaps we are invited to participate in the journey with him in order to resolve the mysteries with which he has confronted us.

Gallery hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Thursday until 8 p.m.

Catholic clubs for singles offer alternative approach

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

This Sunday, more than 1,000 single people will get together for an afternoon out. It'll be a special kind of event... although not exactly a mainstream singles activity.

On April 10, Catholic single adults from all over the metro area will gather for a special mass and afterglow party at Shrine of Little Flower Church in Royal Oak. Last year's celebration, "Singles Celebrate Together," drew over 1,000 Catholic singles from singles organizations throughout the metro area. The church seats 3,000 and organizers say they hope to fill the place this year.

Sunday's third annual event will also give those in attendance an opportunity to find out about some of the activities happening for Catholic singles in the community. And, while the term "Catholic singles" might give pause to adults who have had experience with other singles groups, Catholic Singles Clubs Association chairman Tom Fetzer says that it shouldn't.

"We're here to make a difference and to build a sense of community. That's the crux of it for us," he explains. "We're here for people who are looking for something a little more than just the social aspect. But we hope that we're able to offer something for everyone."

The Catholic Singles Clubs Association is the umbrella group for local Catholic clubs in the area. There are officially 12 active Catholic singles clubs in the Archdiocese of Detroit and the leaders of each of those clubs join the Catholic Singles Clubs Association. The group meets quarterly to plan events which might be on too large a scale for the individual clubs to handle.

The Association sponsors quarterly dances, fundraisers, an annual cruise and works with the archdiocese's Family Life Office. Its existence, in fact, is through the Family Life Office.

"Back around 1984-85, there were a lot of singles clubs coming on board. The Family Life Office approached us and asked us to sort of serve as a coordinator for these clubs. We were officially formed in summer of 1986 and have been undergoing a sort of evolution process ever since."

The Catholic singles clubs in the Detroit area are quite active, Fetzer says, including the St. Joan of Arc club in St. Clair Shores and the Eastside Catholic Singles Club.

And while the Catholic clubs may not be for everyone — they are, of course, for Catholics and for those in the 19-35 age range, although the Association is looking to expand its outreach efforts to those singles over 35 — Fetzer says that they offer an alternative for those who seek something beyond entertainment.

"We try to stress to our member clubs that our focus should be on service, socializing and spiritualization. Of course, it's a nice way to get people back to church, too. But basically, we want to offer something of meaning, of substance."

"Any singles club can offer an opportunity to dance or take trips or go to the movies. But it's very difficult to find a complete package, something that gives a single an opportunity to get involved in service functions, etc.

We try to do that," Fetzer adds.

Beyond that, he says, there is the spiritual aspect. "That differs from person to person, naturally. But the way we try to address the spiritual, aside from the masses, is to encourage our clubs to put on retreats and special events. St. Thomas More Church, for example, has a Wednesday night mass just for singles."

"That's the sort of thing that sets us apart."

Catholic singles in the Grosse Pointe area can call the Catholic Singles Clubs Association to find out about Catholic singles clubs near them, or to find out about events in which the entire organization is involved. The Association sponsors a hotline — "55PREVU" (557-7388) — which gives out that information.

Prospective members can also find out about the group's activities by attending this Sunday's mass at Shrine of the Little Flower Church, 12 Mile and Woodward Avenue in Royal Oak. The mass will be celebrated by The Rev. William Cunningham, director of Focus: Hope, which will be a recipient of a future Catholic Singles Clubs Association service project, Fetzer says.

The 3:30 p.m. service will be followed by an afterglow in the grade school gym, where there will be an opportunity to socialize and to find out about the area's Catholic singles organizations and activities.

Religious humanism

By The Rev. John Corrado
Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church

I am a religious humanist, and gladly so. You may be one, too, without knowing it.

Now before you fold up this paper or save it for the birds, please consider some things. No matter what some television evangelists may wish you to believe, religious humanism is neither a disease nor a denomination. It is a way of seeing and practicing your belief, your faith, your religious heritage.

Some preachers seek to sow seeds of dissension by inventing a "religion" of "secular humanism" and blaming that coined religion for advancing all the views they retreat from. They speak in tongues — forked ones.

"Religious" "secular humanism" is an oxymoron; a contradiction in terms. Since "secular" means "having to do with things outside of religion," how can you have a "religion" of "secular humanism?" Besides, has anyone yet seen the First Secular Humanist Church of Detroit, Denver, Dubuque . . . or anywhere else?

Religious humanism is rooted in a tradition which has blessed and nourished us all. It is rooted in the classical humanism which was the guiding force of the Renaissance. To quote from the "Encyclopedia Britannica," humanism is "an attitude of mind attaching prime importance to humanity and human values . . ." Humanism found inspiration in the personal quest of truth and goodness.

The guiding lights of this humanism were not life-denying satanists. There were brilliant and sensitive men. They were scholars and poets. They were Dante, Erasmus, Petrarch and a host of others who believed in reason and learning as well as religion. They were not "secularists." They were Christians. No matter what any angry and confused televangelists may say, humanism and Christianity are not — or at least need not be — in conflict. A Christian can be a religious humanist. So can a Jew or a Hindu or an agnostic or atheist or anyone of any other religious classification.

I am a religious humanist, and gladly so.

I am a religious humanist because I believe that religion must deal with things of human concern, things of this world we share.

I am a religious humanist because I believe in the inherent worth of each human being.

I am a religious humanist because I believe in the possibility of human goodness.

I am a religious humanist because I believe in the free personal quest for truth and goodness.

I am a religious humanist because I believe in the humanities; in learning. I believe in the arts and sciences of humanity as doorways to truth, beauty, meaning and revelation.

Religious humanism draws from wells which are deep and refreshing.

I am a religious humanist, and gladly so!

St. Clare hosts Bible series

A three-session series on the Book of Revelation will be held at St. Clare of Montefalco Church in Grosse Pointe Park beginning April 13.

In "An Orientation to the Book of Revelation," The Rev. John Castellet will explore one of the most complex and least understood books of the Bible, the Book of Revelation. Castellet is a syndicated columnist and has published a variety of books and articles and conducted numerous courses and seminars on Scripture. He is a professor of Sacred Scripture at St. John's Provincial Seminary. He has a master's degree in philosophy and a doctorate in theology from Catholic University in Washington, D.C., and is a licentiate in Sacred Scripture from the Pontifical Biblical Institute in Rome.

All sessions of the series will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in the faculty room in St. Clare School. Cost is $3 per session or $7 for all three.

Special 'leftover' recipes will surprise pickiest eaters

Here are some great recipes to save for use after those special roast meat, pork or fowl dinners — great for extra Easter ham, too! Package some in exact quantities to be defrosted for use at any time. Each recipe is so special that your family and friends will think it was prepared just for them.

Tyrolean Hash Green Noodle Bake with Ham Chicken Hash Chutney Chicken Salad Israeli Bread Salad

The following recipes come from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Tyrolean Hash

Here's the greatest solution to the problem which faces every cook occasionally — what to do with leftovers — this recipe for Herengrostl, or Tyrolean Hash. The recipe appeared in James Beard's column and is delicious.

Any combination of leftover meat can be used in this recipe; measurements don't have to be absolutely accurate, but should be approximate.

- 3 Tblsp. margarine
- 3 cups potatoes, cooked and diced
- 4 small onions, peeled and sliced
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 2 1/2 cups cooked meat
- 2 tsp. chopped marjoram or summer savory
- 2 tsp. caraway seeds

Melt margarine in heavy teflon-lined skillet, add onions and saute until limp and golden. Add potatoes, diced meats, salt, marjoram or savory and caraway seeds.

Cook over moderate heat, stirring occasionally, until crusty on the bottom. This dish is best straight from the skillet and served with tart cole slaw or green salad, a hot, crusty roll and a cold beer. Serves 6.

Calories per serving, about 182. Cholesterol, about 135.

Green Noodle Bake with Ham

- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 2 Tblsp. margarine
- 2 Tblsp. flour
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- 1/4 tsp. dry mustard
- 1 3/4 cup skim milk
- 3/4 lb. (2 cups) cooked ham, cut up
- 2 oz. Swiss cheese (1/2 cup), shredded
- 4 oz. (3 cups) uncooked spinach egg noodles
- 2 Tblsp. grated Parmesan cheese
- Twist of lemon
- Celery leaves

Saute onion in butter in large saucepan until tender. Blend in flour, salt, pepper and mustard. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until smooth and bubbly. Remove from heat.

Stir in milk. Heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Boil and stir 1 minute. Stir in ham and Swiss cheese. Cook and drain noodles following label directions. Alternate layers of noodles and sauce in ungreased 1 1/2 quart casserole, starting with the sauce. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese.

Bake uncovered, in a moderate oven (375°) until bubbly and light brown, about 20 minutes. Garnish with twist of lemon and celery leaves. Makes 6 servings.

Calories per serving, about 291. Cholesterol, about 65 mgs.

Elegant Eating

Chicken Hash

- 2 cups chopped cooked potatoes
- 1 1/2 cups chopped cooked chicken
- 2 Tblsp. margarine
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1/4 cup chopped green pepper
- 1/4 cup evaporated skim milk
- 4 tsp. skim milk
- 1/2 tsp. thyme
- 2 dashes cayenne pepper

Melt margarine in skillet and saute onion and green pepper until soft. Add potatoes, cream, milk and seasonings and chopped chicken. Stir together into a patty and steam, covered, until well heated. Remove cover and turn patty; brown on second side, adding additional margarine if necessary. Cut into portions and serve with catsup or chutney. Serves 4.

Calories per serving, about 285. Cholesterol, about 30 mgs.

Chutney Chicken Salad

- 3/4 cup low-cal mayonnaise
- 1/2 cup chutney, finely diced
- 1/2 cup finely diced celery
- 1/4 cup plumped raisins
- Pinch of white pepper
- 1/2 cup salted peanuts
- 2 cups coarsely diced cooked chicken breast
- 2 bananas, sliced
- 1 large nectarine, unpared

Combine mayonnaise, chutney, celery, raisins, pepper and peanuts until well blended. Toss with chicken. Line four salad plates with endive or lettuce. Spoon salad onto each. Slice bananas diagonally and nectarine into very thin slices. Dip fruit into some lime juice and arrange around the chicken salad. Makes 4 servings.

Israeli Bread Salad

Slices of plain roast beef or smoked turkey are the perfect accompaniment to this unusual salad.

- 1 small loaf French or Italian bread (1/2 pound)
- 1 tsp. finely minced garlic
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- 2 medium cucumbers, peeled
- 3 medium tomatoes (about 1 pound)
- 1/4 cup finely minced parsley

Heat oven to 450°. Quarter bread lengthwise and cut into 1/2-inch chunks. Spread chunks on a baking sheet and bake 10 minutes, until crisp and lightly browned. Mash garlic and salt into smooth paste. Place garlic mixture in screw-top jar, add lemon juice, oil and pepper; cover and refrigerate until needed.

Peel cucumbers and tomatoes and cut into 1/2-inch chunks and place in large salad bowl. Shake dressing vigorously, pour over vegetables and toss gently. Chill mixture in refrigerator several hours. Just before serving, add toasted bread and parsley and toss again. Makes 6 cups.

Calories per serving, about 212. Cholesterol, 0.

Real Estate

By THOMAS D. STEEN, G.R.I. REALTOR

OVER OR UNDER-SPENDING

Some people spend more than they can afford when buying a house. Equally painful is the mistake of buying the cheapest possible house and then suffering through its shortcomings.

I have no intention of stating how much anyone can afford for a house. This is a very personal decision. There are guidelines of monthly averages that lending institutions use for housing expenses. But — like the "height/weight" charts printed on scales — these are only averages.

Don't hold back if you feel you can exceed the guidelines. When you are willing and sufficiently disciplined to economize on other expenses, you can get a better house than the average calls for. A good house may seem costly, but the rewards are well worth it.

Investing in a house that's a little more expensive gives you an excellent inflation hedge while your whole family enjoys a better place to live. And often, the resale opportunity is brighter.

Spring is upon us

This is the time of year when everyone looks to roll down the windows, turn up the volume on the radio, and slip on a pair of sunglasses. And I am no different.

I'm looking forward to spring and all the good things that go with it. The rain I can repel with my umbrella and for every rainy day, there seems to be two days of sunshine.

It's about time we shed the wool coats and scarfs and head for the surf and turf at baseball diamonds, track meets and soccer fields. We have made it through the storm and can now look forward to winter being the furthest thing from our minds.

I'm not going to bore you and tell you that when the ball games start I'll be out of the office watching them. I'm not going to remind you that you'll be stuck in an office as I roam the track and walk the sidelines of the soccer field — in the sunshine, but I will ask you to come along.

It promises to be a great season around town. University Liggett School has a great tennis team to go with a tough girls' soccer team. North and South will have two of the state's top baseball teams and track is also a strong suit of both schools. Getting out to the games is something we should all do. So, when it rains Monday, work hard, for Tuesday brings another day of sunshine and ball games and Friday is always a good day to "call in sick."

Just a reminder:

The 1988 Bayview Yacht Club Port Huron to Mackinac Race is July 16, one week before the Chicago to Mackinac Race.

Don't be caught with your spinnaker loose and your motion sickness pills in the bag you left at home. Get ready now for an exciting year of boating.

On the same lines, Lake St. Clair will be the tested waters for many One-Ton boats as they compete in the Canada's Cup Challenger Elimination Series; vying for a chance to sail in the Canada's Cup races in Toronto on August 20-28.

Many boats from North America will be in attendance and it should create quite a spectacle for everyone.

John Uznis, Ken Meade and Kim McNamara have all assembled their thoughts and joined boat builder Bruce Nelson to erect Challenge '88, a new Nelson/Marek One Ton Yacht that is 40-feet in length.

Sea trials are under way to see how well the sleek boat can move in the water under competition. Bayview Yacht Club issued a challenge to the Royal Canadian Yacht Club to reclaim the Canada's Cup, something Canada has retained for 10 years. The boat was built specifically to compete in the Canada Cup race.

North, South gear for spring

Norsemen look for booming spring season

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

It's that time of year again to follow the action at North. Many athletes have been preparing for a promising spring season, but several question marks remain in everyone's lineup.

But, the one question already answered is, "Yes, they can win."

North's Russell Rice, who will be a top pitcher for Coach Frank Sumner this season, is looking very sharp in practice.

Baseball

An off-season weight lifting program and several returning veterans from last year's 24-9 squad should give Coach Frank Sumner some room to breathe.

Sumner, who said his players hit the weights over the winter and it is paying off, is hoping to cash in on the dividends as the season progresses.

"I feel better now than I did in December," Sumner said about the way the lineup stacks up. "I like the juniors and how they're coming along. The kids worked hard on the weights and that has really helped them."

Defense, which Sumner prides himself on, will be a strong suit for the Norsemen. A solid infield and a heady outfield should make a winning combination.

"Sound, strong defense," he said. "That's what I strive for."

Blue Devils plan to plant winning garden

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

After a highly successful fall season and a mediocre winter, the South Blue Devils are hoping to finish the season with an award-winning spring.

Waters are still untested for most teams because their seasons haven't started yet, but on paper (or in the paper) they all look good.

Baseball

Dan Griesbaum can't remember the last time a state high school baseball team reached the final four in back-to-back seasons, but he wouldn't mind getting the opportunity to refresh his memory.

Last season, the 29-7 Blue Devils ventured to the final four in the state playoffs where they eventually lost to Midland Dow. However, before that they won the Eastern Michigan League title, the district crown and the regional banner. But now the hardest hurdle (trying to repeat it all) remains to be jumped.

"We certainly have a lot of good talent, but whether we do it again or not relies on a lot of factors," said Griesbaum. "I can't recall the last time a team made it that far two years in a row, but I wouldn't mind going back."

Club takes first steps

The City of Grosse Pointe Farms Parks and Recreation Department is in the process of organizing a Grosse Pointe Farms Walking Club.

The "Walking Club" is being organized to fit individual needs as far as times or walks, individual distances and to encourage walking as an enjoyable social event. With the beauty of the Grosse Pointes and particularly Lakeshore Road, the area provides excellent walking areas.

A meeting for interested "Farms" walkers will be held at the Pier Park Recreation Building on Tuesday, April 12 at 7:30 p.m.

The Grosse Pointe Farms Walking Club will be a part of the "Walk Michigan Program," which is a yearly program sponsored by Blue Cross and Blue- Shield of Michigan and the Michigan Recreation and Park Association. The program promotes health and fitness and the enjoyment of Michigan's outdoors. One hundred Michigan communities participated in the 1987 program. Each person who participated in a "Walk Michigan" event received an entry card for a vacation drawing. Each community hosted a local drawing to determine the winner from each community.

University Liggett School looks for booming spring season

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Built on winning, the University Liggett School Knights will try and top off a fine school year when they embark on the spring schedule.

ULS will, again, be strong in tennis and track, but they are also hoping to make people take a second look at lacrosse and baseball.

Tennis

It's getting difficult to feed people the line, "ULS won another tennis championship," but if Coach Bob Wood has his way again, the Knights will celebrate their 19th state title in 23 years.

John Yancey, a Prince All-American who will play at No. 1 singles, will head the cast of returnees from last year's 9-4 team. Among the other accomplishments ULS had last year were: winners of the Forrest Hills Central Invit., ULS Invit. champs and winners of the Midland Dow Invit.

In the past 22 years, ULS has won the state C-D title 18 times and finished second three years. Last season ULS was ranked No. 1 in Class C-D and No. 3 of all schools.

"We have a strong team coming back," said Wood. "But we can't take anything for granted."

Detroit Country Day School, according to Wood, should prove to be ULS' toughest competition.

"On paper it's a 4-3 game either way," said Wood. "If we stay healthy we should be one of the top five teams in the state for any class."

The key spot for ULS will be No. 2 singles. Everything is going to revolve around where Frank Karabetsos is seeded.

"Our major decision will be what to do with Frank," Wood said.

If Karabetsos plays singles, then that would leave Mike Nicolini without a partner at No. 1 doubles. If Karabetsos is placed with Nicolini, then the battle will just begin for No. 1 and 2 doubles. Anthony Abiragi and Doug Wood will team up, but it's yet to be determined whether they'll play No. 1 or 2 doubles — you guessed it, it's based on what happens with Karabetsos.

Sean Byrne and Frederick Thelander will do battle for No. 2 or 3 singles, while Bill Schervish and Ryan Strowger, David Kim and Matt Janke, and Ajay Nautiyal and Peter Sripinyo will fill in at doubles.

ULS will be playing a tough schedule as they face eight top-ranked Class A teams, seven top B teams and three of the top C-D teams.

"After a schedule like that, we should be ready for anything," said Wood.

Girls' lacrosse

With 10 girls back from last season's 12-5 team, Coach Laura Sharpless is hoping to improve, but with the schedule they face, it'll be tough.

"We do a lot of traveling and face a lot of good teams," she said. "It's a short, condensed season and it takes a lot for the girls to continue to play at such a high level of intensity, but because they love the sport, they do it."

Allison Fitzsimons, Meredith Jones, Lesley MacLeod, Cathy Petzold, Holly Waggoner, Susy Georgi, Wendy Ford, Shirley Kim, Dana Warnez and Sarah Stackpole are the athletes back for at least one more year.

"We have some young players, but we are very talented," said Sharpless. "Their stick work is good and a lot of them have a solid foundation."

Sharpless will carry 16 of the 31 girls out for the team and the remainder will make-up the jay-vee squad.

"It's a strenuous game and I'll need at least five subs to go to when we need them," she said. "I know we have the nucleus to be successful."

Boys' lacrosse

Defense will be the bread and butter of the 1988 lacrosse squad.

Coach John Fowler, coming off an 8-6 season a year ago, will mentor a young, but determined team.

"We are a very young team, but our defense is the key," he said. "Our defensemen and goalie (Adam Levinson) are going to be tough."

"We'll be able to stop the ball well and then turn it over to our offense," Fowler added.

Returning for another year of action are, Steve Stoyka, Rob Petz, James Dobrzechowski, Tip Quilter, Adam Levinson, Charlie Roby, James Combs, Armistead Burwell, Bob Scoville and Tom Reynolds.

Newcomers to the squad are Mike Coello, Parcial Lie, John Southall, Eric Sensenbrenner, Jonathon Davis, James Kim, Duncan McMillan, Sam Kahatib and Christophe Schilling.

"We're going to concentrate on learning the clears and the plays," said Fowler. "We have talent at every spot, but we're just going to have to work hard from day one and learn all the facets of the game."

Girls' Track

The girls' track team, under the direction of Cathy Schmidt, is going to a new format. Instead of beating themselves up with multiple meets in a week, they are trying to limit it to one, maybe two, meets a week.

"By having one meet a week, I'm hoping it will let them (the team) improve more with having a few more 'hard workouts,'" said Schmidt. "When you have more than one meet a week, it's difficult to build up stamina and become conditioned when you don't have as many workouts in a week."

Last year's 10-1 team will be headed by All-State high jumper Alexis Collins. Joining her will be Tonya Clawson, Andrea Graham, Laura Rizzo (shot put record holder), Melissa Simon, Elena Hunt, Rae Goolsby, Vara Samudrala, Nita Kulkarni, Jennifer Van De Graaf, Diann Imbricco, Sophia Park, Julia Caputo, and Miriam Mueller.

"We are just going to help each student set and reach the goals they set," said Schmidt. "It's different for different kids, but we just want to help them set personal goals and improve throughout the season."

A year ago, ULS finished second in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference.

Boys' track

The toughest thing for reigning champs to do is repeat, but with the crew Josh Schmidt has coming back, it may be fairly easy.

Although he lost several tracksters to graduation, Schmidt still has quite a following.

"It should be a very competitive year," said Schmidt. "If these kids come along as they should, we'll do well."

Ted Evans, John Noto, Brian Schmidt, Steve Sanchez, Daniel Shante, Mike Barnes, Paul Brigolin, John Dodds, Chris Frederickson, Tony Hill, Mehul Patel, Nishu Sood, Eric Frederickson, Derek Van De Graaf, Lars Knudson, Jim Lam, Jason Robichaud, Ross Roy, Michael Barnes and Steve Grant make up that nucleus Schmidt hopes to work with.

"We're going to win a lot of seconds and thirds (where you pick up a lot of points) and our share of firsts," said Schmidt. "If we can keep people away from injuries and focus on our goals, we should do fine."

"Those are my two major aims," he added.

Girls' soccer

Troy and Bishop Foley. Those are the two teams who blemished ULS' record a year ago as the Knights went 11-2-3.

Being rated No. 5 most of the 1987 season, David Backhurst's team is going to need some luck and talent to surpass that impressive clip, but he feels they have the nucleus to do it.

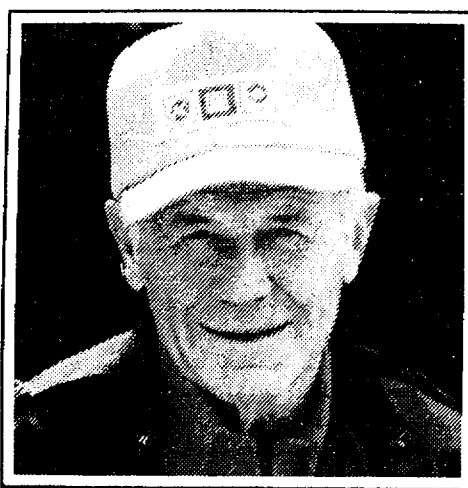

"That's going to be a major undertaking," he said when asked if he could improve on last year's totals.

Lynn Connor, Susie Davis, Kim Owens and Beth Birgbauer are set to go.

"We have a few question marks, but if we can work hard and come together as a team, I feel like we'll be a strong team," said Backhurst. "We'll have to wait and see."

Sylvia Ristic, an All-State second teamer last year, will help immensely if she can stay away from injuries, according to Backhurst.

Kelly Bailer, Sarah Haggarty, Meghan Brady, Allana Stark, Lexie Lepard, Carrie Carpenter, Sarah Cleek, Stacey Westley and Malin Engstrom round out the team at this point.

MORC's regatta to benefit associations

This year's 23rd annual Lake Huron International Sailing Regatta, sponsored by the Detroit area Midget Ocean Racing Club (M.O.R.C.), will benefit the American and Canadian Diabetes Associations. The 160-mile race from Sarnia, Ontario to Alpena will begin on Saturday morning, July 23, 1988.

Says M.O.R.C. Station 11 Commodore, Scott Turner, "To our knowledge no one has considered racing for a charitable cause in the Great Lakes region, particularly a race with international roots. We're pleased to make our annual long distance race a benefit for the diabetes associations. We want to let the public know that sailors of M.O.R.C. care."

"The club is charting new water. We'll sponsor the first charity regatta in the Midwest. And what makes it so unique is the fact that it has international flavor," Turner added.

Sailors compete in two divisions-M.O.R.C. and Performance Handicap Racing Fleet (P.H.R.F.)

Last year's fleet was composed of 55 boats ranging in size from 20 to 36 feet in length. They were subdivided into six classes.

Funds for the diabetes associations will be generated through entry fees and additional crew contributions. Explains Turner, "I'm hoping we'll also be able to obtain some corporate sponsorship. Although our principle aim is racing, we're going to do our best to raise funds for diabetes research and education. The notion of our regatta benefitting diabetes adds a whole new dimension to the event. Regardless of whether a sailor takes home a flag, we'll all end up winners!"

Diabetes is one of the leading causes of death by disease in the United States. One out of every 20 Americans has diabetes, a chronic metabolic disorder in which the body does not produce or properly use insulin.

Anyone interested in racing in July 23rd's Lake Huron International Regatta should contact Scott Turner at 525-6500 days or 563-2763 evenings.

The Canada's Cup has been sailed on the Great Lakes since 1895 and is a famed yachting tradition that offers competition between the United States and Canada on One Ton yachts rating 30.5 in IOR rule.

The Meade Group, of which Meade is founder, will sponsor the U.S. Yacht Racing Union's One Ton North American Championship (June 4-12) on the waters of Lake St. Clair. Both the One Ton championships and the elimination series will be hosted by Bayview.

Lacrosse is a hot item of late in Grosse Pointe.

South just introduced a lacrosse club and at ULS, it is a sport favored by many. The only thing I can tell you about lacrosse is that it's the oldest sport in America and it probably gets the least amount of attention.

The game was first played by North American Indians. It's a game in which two teams of 10 men, or 12 women, use pouched rackets and try to advance a small ball down the field into the opponent's goal.

Sounds easy doesn't it?

I hope that your days are filled with sunshine and your cooler is packed with goodies to take along. Whether you select sailing, swimming, or being a bleacher creature, may you remember to cheer for the home team as you support the local athletes.

Devils

While it remains to be seen whether or not the Devils will advance, one thing is certain.

"It's going to be awfully hard to improve on anything we did last year," said Griesbaum. "This year we'll look to at least maintain what we did a year ago and possibly improve on it."

Wysocki is the rocket on the mound. He was 10-2 last year with an ERA of 1.62 and was a steady contributor offensively. Lucas, who led the team with a school-record 41 RBI, batted .412 in '87, and Saad is coming off a productive season of 36 RBI and 47 hits.

Paull, who according to Griesbaum is a much improved hitter, the 1987 Bi-County champs with 53 hits, an average of .427 from the plate and three home runs in a leadoff role. Neiman, who will catch, ripped 12 doubles, batted .341 and drove in 35 runs.

Rick Regalado, a left-handed hurler who is coming off a 9-1 season, is hoping to better his performance of 85 strike outs and an ERA of 1.89. Joining him on the slab will be Russell Rice. Rice, a senior, will split time between first and the mound with Regalado. Rice pitched in 11 games a year ago and went 5-2 with an ERA of 2.81. From the plate he swung his way to a .333 average a year ago.

Dino Vento, who has the inside track on playing third base, will be the No. 1 stopper out of the bullpen. He will also see spot starting assignments on the mound. Dan Unger, a senior second baseman who moves well and has a good glove, will step in at second again. He batted .375 a last year and Sumner looks for pretty much the same in '88.

Marty Pochmara, who saw limited duty last year but batted .533, will move into right field. "As you can see, we have six solid guys back from a year ago," said Sumner.

Last year's pitching staff, which compiled an ERA of 3.28 is a year wiser and Sumner looks to improve on the 3.28 runs per game.

"I think we should get lower than that because we have more senior pitching than we did a year ago," he said. "Last year we didn't have a lot of experience on the mound, but this year we have more leadership."

Kevin McCarron, Jason DeYonker, Scott Schorer, Eric Zenow, Scott VanCura and Dan Crociata will be counted on to produce runs as well as man a tough glove on defense.

North will be competing in the newly organized Macomb Area Conference White Division against teams like Romeo, Cousino, Tower and Lake Shore, but Sumner doesn't think he'll see too many new things.

"We can't change anything," he said. "We've played these teams before, so we won't see many new things. We'll just continue to stress our pitching and defense and basically see what it brings us."

North opens the regular season on April 13 at Brablec. Dick Grammatico will be coaching the jayvee squad, while Mike Kras and Bill Babcock man the frosh squad.

Girls' track

One may think that without a few big guns, a .45 wouldn't sur-batted .293 last season with 28 RBI.

"With those four guys in the lineup we will be very strong," said Griesbaum. "Plus we've got plenty of guys who can do the job as well."

Those athletes ready to dress for opening day are Marty Van Almen (3B, OF), Bryan Jones (CF), Matt Montagne (LF) and Nick Saros (RF).

Ian Thompson or Dale Wilson will be filling the designated hit-

"We had a team ERA of 2.11 a year ago and I would hope we can keep it at that level, or drop it," said Griesbaum. "The big question is can those two guys (Franco and Knowles), along with the others, fill the void."

The void that was left was when Scott Tucker and John Joliet graduated — what went with them was a combined record of 13-2.

Griesbaum lost some talent off the mound, but he also lost team speed.

"This year we'll have good team speed, but it won't be like what we had a year ago," he said in reference to Sean Bruce, Dave Arnold and Dan Cimini's 51 combined steals.

"We'll have to make up for it by maybe taking a few more chances and being smart base runners," Griesbaum added.

In his four years previous to this fall, Griesbaum's teams haven't finished any worse than second in the E.M.L. and this year he looks for much of the same.

"First of all, we'd like to win the league and then have a strong outing in the playoffs," he said. "Who knows, maybe we can return to the final four."

Griesbaum will be assisted by Matt Reno and John Hackett. Paul Pellerito will coach the freshman squad and Mike Johnson controls the jayvee team.

Girls' track

On the track this spring, the Lady Blue Devils will be shooting for an unprecedented third straight E.M.L. title.

games, I'll be happy."

With Laura Ferguson, Christine Mack, Beth Stevenson and Nancy Schulte back as "my backbone," Regelbrugge is optimistic that the wins can accumulate.

"This is my backbone," he said. "Obviously others will have to contribute, but they are enthusiastic and eager to win. I hope we have a successful season."

April 11 marks the season opener at Tower.

Tennis

Competing in the American League of the MAC may be difficult, but if preseason selections are any indication, it looks like the Norsemen will love the new league.

"There's been an indication that we're the strongest team, but I don't know that because I don't know that much about the other teams," said Coach Ken Gutow, who returns for his first year since 1980.

"In the league, I think we'll be strong because of the good group of players we've got on the team," he added.

Krashesalek, from California, will step in at No. 1 singles. Pat Hopper and Rohi Krishna slide in at No. 2 and 3 singles, while John Seagram, a "pleasant surprise" freshman, will fill the void at No. 4 singles.

Greg Cooksey and Bob Hatcher will move from No. 3 doubles a year ago, to No. 1 doubles. Paul Anderson and Mike Sharkey, both seniors, will man the No. 2 single's post, and Ben Gaskin and Tony Giunetti will play at No. 3 doubles.

"So far we've put in a lot of practice," said Gutow. "We've played about 100 matches indoors to try and set our team, and I feel very confident that we have a talented lineup."

Nancy Kohler, a North graduate who played at Saginaw Valley, will coach the junior varsity team.

Boys' track

OK distance runners and sprinters, you will seemingly determine the fate of the season.

According to Coach Bob Collins, a successful sprint and distance season could perpetuate the season's tally.

"The key is simple," he said. "Distance people and sprinters will be key. How well they come through for us will determine how well we do as a team."

See NORSEMEN II, page 16C

"I know it's going to be tough to repeat, but I think we're in good shape to do it this year," said Coach Steve Zarenek. "We have a very competitive league, but I think the girls believe they can win a third straight title."

One year ago, South finished 9-1 overall and 7-0 in the league. This year, under the direction of the upperclassmen, Zarenek feels that 9-1 is another possible finish, if not better.

"We have outstanding juniors and seniors on this team," he said. "They'll be providing the leadership in helping, through example, to control the destiny of the younger kids."

Life shouldn't be difficult for the Blue Devils with the crew they have coming back. Toni Tedesco, Elizabeth Kraft, Anne Llewellyn, Anna Dinverno and Wendy Berger will head the powerful distance crew.

"Distance events have always been a traditional strong point at South," Zarenek said, "and this year will be no different."

Hurdler Laura DeMercurio, the owner of the school record in the 100 and 300, is back for her junior year.

Dunnie Greiling and Kellie Buchanan are a tough duo to beat in the shot put and discus, while Sara Liliensier, Vicki Groustra and Sarah McCabe are tough in the high jump.

"I don't think we'll have many problems this year, but we have to stay away from the injuries," said Zarenek. "We really want to be the first team to win three straight league titles."

Softball

King, Bruce and Jones. No it's not a law firm, but it is the 1-2-3 pitching combination that Coach John Bruce has this year when he tries to improve on last year's 13-18 record.

"The good part about fast-pitch softball is that our pitchers are back," said Bruce. "It's always nice to have experience coming back to the mound."

Both Mary King and Erin Bruce are seniors and Darcy Jones is a sophomore hurler. Bruce plans to use each of them throughout the season and expects only top quality.

"We'll probably split the time between the three of them," he said. "We expect them to provide us with a core needed to be successful in fast-pitch softball."

According to Bruce, the defensive core is based on the seniors, and the offensive punch will be delivered by the sophomore class.

"Our seniors are our defensive core," he said. "We are going to get a lot of power from our sophomore athletes though."

Becky Wysocki, who will catch, Laurel Wolfe and Jenny Kalmink are the sophomore hitters. Wolfe and Kalmink will play the infield. Lisa Vantassell and Holly Asmus will co-captain along with Bruce and King. Vantassell will play second and Asmus will rotate between short and outfield.

Other players expected to see some time between the lines are, Amy Hathaway, Liz Murphy, Lori Vantassell and Megan Nelson.

"Our goals are still unsettled, but I would hope we can finish in the top four of the league and play well as a team," Bruce said. "I want everyone to work on pulling in the same direction — and that's winning."

Tennis

Even with half of last season's team gone to graduation, Coach Don Zysk is not to worry.

"We lost half of last year's team, but we have a good, young crop coming in," he said. "I'm looking forward to an exciting season."

singles, and Nick Lorenzini and Jeff Giraldo will fall in at No. 2 and 3.

"All three of those players are very close in talent," said Zysk. "It's definitely our top three lineup."

Craig Kostecke returns to play No. 4 singles, while John Lamb and Ben Bayko will team up at No. 1 doubles.

Bill Huntington and Ray Tumacder are Zysk's No. 2 selection and Mike Disser and Bill Wundram will play No. 3 doubles.

"There may be a few more challenge matches at No. 2 and 3 doubles," Zysk said. "But I'd like to keep it stable."

The Devils won the E.M.L. last year, were regional champions and finished 13th in the state. Can they repeat with a younger team?

"First of all, I want to win the league and then take the region again," Zysk said. "I hope we could cut into the top 10 at the state meet. If we could move from 13th to about seventh, I'd be very happy. That's what we'd like to shoot for."

Boys' track

Coach Tom Wise is looking to improve on last season's 5-5 dual-meet record and with the depth this year, it is quite possible.

"We have a little more depth than we've had in past years and that should make a big difference for us," he said. "We're looking forward to trying to improve on 5-5."

Dave Kerfoot, Jeff Kerfoot, Chris Sherwood, Dave Nicholson, Phil Orton and Paul Heymes will be the supporting cast for a strong distance team. Mark Sonnenberg will be the man to beat in the 3200 and 400 events. Kyle Schomaker is the top hurdler, and new sprinters Durman Ransom and Steve Rice will add a new twist.

In the discus competition, Joe Reynolds will prove tough and high jumper Pat Bruce is looking for a fine season.

Feeling By Deanna Hawthorne

Fit

Is it unhealthy to work hard?

Yes and no. Work — like alcohol — is bad and unhealthy only if it produces poor health results. If what you're doing is causing trauma — to you or someone else — then it's unhealthy. However, if you enjoy the pain and your work is not stepping on anyone's toes but your own, there is little scientific data to prove that you have a problem. If you live and work alone, this is fine!

We've heard a great deal about the "type A personality." That labeling can cause unnecessary anxiety. There are "race horses" and there are "turtles." Stress can take different forms. However, if you are using your job as an excuse to avoid either family or other personal relationships, it's time to take stock of yourself to see if you are using work to block out emotional disorders or to fulfill your own neurotic needs.

See if you fit any of the descriptions outlined in the book Work and Love: The Crucial Balance.

Work addicts are divided into major categories:

- 1) The sexually frustrated or impotent work addict — for whom work provides a chance to flirt in ways that need never face a test of consummation.
- 2) The hostile work addict — who attacks work instead of some person or situation he/she has come to resent.
- 3) The competitive work addict — for whom the work environment is an arena in which to keep score.
- 4) The defensive work addict — who uses work to keep his mind off painful emotion.
- 5) The friendliness work addict — for whom the work environment provides a sense of belonging.
- 6) The guilty addict — whose long hours are a form of self-punishment.
- 7) The obsessive work addict — for whom work satisfies a neurotic need for neatness and order.
- 8) The pre or post-psychotic work addict — who can maintain no sense of self outside the work structure.
- 9) The ashamed work addict — who prefers the image he projects at work to the one he is saddled with at home.

Many successful work addicts have their shortcomings: brusqueness, egocentricity, intolerance and inflexibility — which can wind up costing the workaholic some of the efficiency he/she worships. In fact, many workaholics show:

- Reluctance to delegate authority.
- Compulsive need for things to be perfect.
- Pursuit of things of interest rather than of importance.

Being fit involves all aspects of life. One can be a workaholic in fitness as well as work. Unfortunately, a workaholic often becomes a fitness-holic. If this is your situation, then it's time to assess your fitness quota. If what you are doing is blunting your sensitivities to life's other pleasures, it's time to reassess and moderate. It's simply time to smell the roses.

Don't get caught in the trap of being one of the people who react to life after the bloom on the lily has faded and the scent of the rose has disappeared. If you can't wake up and smell the coffee, herbal tea is a new sensory delight.

Aerobic dancing satisfies urge to join chorus line

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Dancing is a fitness sport? We're not talking about sedate waltzes here. No slow sexy stuff. We're talking aerobic dancing — jogging, kneebends, Charleston kicks, sweeping arms — an hour's worth of energetic hustling and stretching and bending and reaching — a heart pumping, heavy breathing, exhilarating full-body workout.

We're talking Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire or Debbie Allen, Gregory Hines here.

Jacki Sorensen's aerobic dancing is one of several aerobic workouts available in the Grosse Pointe area. Sorensen's, however, claims it is the original marriage of aerobics and choreographed dances. And since Sorensen began, 17 years ago, with six women in a New Jersey church basement, it has become big business.

Aerobic dancing also satisfies hordes of frustrated dancers with a carefully choreographed chorus-line Broadway-show approach to fitness.

The program is designed to promote cardiovascular and muscular fitness, to work all the major muscles of the body, and to be medically safe. Students are taught to monitor heart rates during class, after determining their own target rate for a safe, effective workout. And all the dances are reviewed by a medical staff and tested for 12 weeks before instructors begin teaching them.

Dolly Parton, Michael Jackson; top-40s songs, selections from Broadway shows, pop, country, and oldies. Bouncy up-to-the-minute music. Instructors cue the steps as the music plays.

Joanne Maxon, of Grosse Pointe Woods, has been dancing three or four times a week for 13 years in Sorensen's program. "I love to do it because it keeps me active and it gives me an all-around good feeling, mentally and physically," she said.

Clara Mack, of Grosse Pointe Woods, has been dancing twice a week for nine years in the Sorensen sessions. "It's a way to keep fit. It also gives me a variety — the dances change every 12 weeks so you don't get bored."

Every three months, instructors toss out the old warm-up dance, floor exercises, aerobic routines and cool-down dance and begin teaching a whole new program with a new theme, new music and new choreography. The steps are basically the same and are generally easy to learn, but they're combined in new ways to fit new music. Die-hard Jacki Sorensen devotees return again and again for new sessions.

"It's the joy of moving to music and knowing, underneath, that it's all beneficial. It's good for you," said Carolyn Skaff, a Sorensen dancer for 13 years and an instructor for 10 years.

Skaff said she solidly believes it is the safest, best aerobic dancing program available anywhere. "The choreography fits the music," she said. "Teachers are well-prepared." Certified instructors attend regular workshops not only to practice the new session dances, but to learn fitness information. Instructors are taught the physiology of each move. They know which muscle is being exercised.

Instructors also must be non-smokers, Skaff said. They must have CPR training, pass a 12 minute running-fitness test, and meet strict weight requirements.

Sorensen is Chairman of the Board of Aerobic Dancing, Inc., headquartered in Northridge, Calif. The program is available in all 50 states, Japan and Australia; Sorensen has students in more than 1,500 cities and employs approximately 3,000 instructors, most of whom are former students. Approximately 25,000 aerobic classes a month are teaching the same dances during the same weeks of each session. A student who is traveling can drop in at any class in the country, present a class card, and dance to the same dances he/she has been learning at home.

Skaff pointed out the evolution of Sorensen's workouts during the last 17 years, due to new medical findings about the benefits of certain types of exercise. "For instance, back in the beginning, situps were done with bent knees from the floor to an upright position," she said. "Later, the curl part was found to be the most beneficial for the abdominal muscles. Now we do small curls."

"We show students the proper way to do each step. For instance, jogging with your knees up in front of you is the proper way. Otherwise, you'll throw your balance off and you could get shin splints."

Chris Matter, district manager for Sorensen's programs in Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia and Wisconsin, said that the choreography is tested in a research and development department, staffed by doctors. "Muscle-pacing is worked into the choreography," she said. "For instance, if you did a bicep curl 200 times, it would burn. (In Sorensen's routines) you'll do five bicep curls; then five more later in the song; maybe eight more in another song."

Matter also pointed out that the warm-up routine in Sorensen's program lasts nearly a half hour. On purpose. "Because that's the most effective and safest way to do a cardiovascular workout," she said. "The routine starts with a flexibility workout, then low cardiovascular routine, then the floorwork, which tones abdominals, then an aerobic booster dance that begins slowly and works up to the level of the aerobic dances. Then we do about seven aerobic dances at a high level. Students monitor their heart rates between each dance. Then we have a 10 minute cool down and some post cool-down stretches — something that is often absent from other aerobic workout routines."

Matter said that Sorensen is a pioneer in dancing for fitness. It has been a popular concept, she said.

"Aerobic dancing was in vogue and there were aerobic classes on every corner, but the copycats are not as sophisticated — or as safe."

According to Sorensen, the term aerobic dancing is a generic term. "What disturbs me," she said in a magazine article, "is that there are classes that call themselves aerobic workouts that are mainly spot exercises. For aerobic conditioning you need at least 20 minutes of elevating your heart rate within your own safe range. Other people lead exercise sessions . . . in unsafe ways . . . and a lot of people don't do research."

"They get a girl who looks great in a body suit. She puts on hot music and does some arm circles and they start an aerobic program. They don't monitor heart rates, or train instructors, or require proper footwear, or teach safe ways to do the exercise," Sorensen added.

Aaaaahhhhhh choo!

Allergies and spring are synonymous

Believe it or not, spring is upon us and with it will come more than flowers and green grass.

According to John M. Lesesne, M.D., of the Farms, 15 to 18 percent of the population has some type of allergy. Lesesne is the chief of dermatology at St. John Hospital.

"People have lost many days from work and school as a result of being afflicted with asthma and allergies," he said. "This has been the greatest cause of chronic illness in the country."

Lesesne holds allergies accountable for the greatest cause of chronic illnesses in the United States, but what is an allergy?

"It's an abnormal reaction to a substance which, in the average individual, would not generally occur," said Lesesne. "It occurs because of a hereditary factor because one inherits the tendency to produce the abnormal antibodies."

Lesesne believes that spring-time allergies occur primarily because of pollination from trees and grass. Pollination is the transformation of pollen from a stamen to the upper tip of the pistil of a flower, generally done by insect life. Also, the blowing of wind and movement of the plants and flowers can create the pollen to filter through the air.

Another allergy that is possible to suffer from is a mold allergy, generally caused by a result of dead vegetation found in haystacks and barns.

"Like pollen, spores of mold are very light and can be carried through the wind for many miles," said Lesesne. So, even if you're walking through city streets you can inhale the spores of mold which may result in an allergy."

Spring allergies generally bring about itchy eyes and throat, along with a drippy nose and in some cases it can trigger an asthmatic condition.

Although one can inherit the abnormal antibodies that can lead to allergies, another way to become allergic is to be exposed to a substance for a long period of time.

"Once the condition starts, it is likely to persist if the person is exposed to the substance for an extended period of time," said Lesesne.

"You can't eliminate it, but you can do things to help the situation," he added. "You can stay in air conditioning both in your car and in the home to aid it."

Once the conditions have been identified, it is important to try and remedy them. The best way to treat the problem is to avoid the environment that may cause the allergy, but injections of medication may also help turn back the hands of allergies.

"Either pills or nasal drops are generally prescribed," said Lesesne.

Injections can be given to build up an immunity to the allergy, but even injections don't prove 100 percent effective. Various types of medications such as antihistamines and decongestants are also available that can control the problem.

Lesesne says it is important to note that no matter how you try to combat the allergic reaction, consulting a physician is vital.

"We have received recent information involving a disturbing increase in the amount of people who have died as a result of being afflicted with asthma," he said. "So far there is no known reason for the increase, but it could be caused by patients relying too much on medication without consulting a physician."

Lesesne stated that if the sufferer avoids the environment that causes them itchy eyes and irritation, then in most cases medication is not the answer.

"It's important to avoid being exposed to the substance you are allergic to," he said. "Medication is not the first answer, but most people have got to consult a physician as soon as they think they may be allergic to something."

Lesesne stated that just because you may sneeze when you are outside, doesn't constitute you have an allergy, but it wouldn't hurt getting some guidance from a trained professional.

"Some people think that just because they have never been allergic to something that they can't now become allergic to a substance," he said. "That is not the case. If you think you may be suffering from some sneezing, a drippy nose, or nasal block, then you could be allergic to something."

Lose pounds, manage stress

Learn to say "no" to high calorie foods and develop good eating habits to last a lifetime.

You are invited to attend one of two free introductory sessions of Weight No More on Monday and Wednesday, April 11 and 13, at Cottage Hospital of Grosse Pointe. The sessions will be held in the Conference Center (first floor) from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

At the introductory sessions, a registered dietician will outline this successful weight-loss program. Those who decide to enroll in the seven-week course lose from two to three pounds per week — the amount of weight loss that can be expected from a nutritionally sound program. But more important, they keep this weight off and continue to lose additional weight when following the good nutrition practices learned in the classes.

Weight No More emphasizes behavior modification — not just a diet, but a complete change in eating habits for some people. They learn how to break poor habits and replace them with healthy nutrition patterns.

Although participants have lost as much as 20 pounds in the seven weeks of classes, long-term maintenance is considered more important than rapid weight loss. The success of each individual, of course, depends on his or her own particular motivation and level of activity.

Whether you need to lose five pounds or 55 pounds, the Weight No More program at Cottage Hospital can help you shed weight and inches without starving or gambling with your physical or mental health. For more information, attend one of the free introductory sessions April 11 or 13. No reservation necessary.

Also at Cottage Hospital, you can learn to manage stress and reduce its harmful effects in the You Can Control Stress workshop.

Classes begin Thursday, April 14, 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., and continue for the next two Thursdays, April 21 and 28. The workshop is held in the Nurses' Residence at the rear of the main parking lot.

Although some stress can be a positive motivating factor in life, over the long term, extreme stress can make a person susceptible to certain diseases. Hypertension, heart disease, stroke, gastric ulcers, and cancer are often called "stress related illnesses."

Signs and symptoms of stress and relaxation techniques are investigated in this three-session workshop. Participants assess their personal levels of stress and learn skills to help them combat stress-inducing behavior. The workshop includes lecture, discussion, and small group sessions.

Enrollment is limited for this workshop. A $25 fee is charged. To enroll in the You Can Control Stress workshop, call 884-8600, extension 2454, Monday through Friday, between 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

Michael J. Fox proves himself in 'Bright Lights, Big City'

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

In "Bright Lights, Big City," Michael J. Fox eschews everything he has ever been on television and at the movies. Indeed, his character in this film is one of the most down-on-his-luck, pathetic individuals to be seen on the screen since Albert Finney played a 100-proof drunkard in "Under the Volcano."

In this picture, Fox plays Jamie Conway, an aspiring New York writer with more problems than he can handle. His mother died 12 months ago, his wife left him six months ago, he's stuck in a job that's taking him nowhere, and he's burying his sorrows in an increasingly frightening drug dependency.

Based on Jay McInerney's critically-acclaimed novel of the same name, "Lights" is a moody, atmospheric glimpse into the heart, soul and mind of a character living on "most of the 'D' words" — drinking, drugs and decadence. To draw viewers into the vortex of Jamie's existence, the film creates a relentless atmosphere of vice, an atmosphere that forces viewers to understand the constraints of Jamie's trap.

Far from the predominantly happy-go-lucky characters we've seen Fox play in his past films, Jamie is on the verge of a breakdown. He's late for work every day; he drinks and drugs his way into a stupor every night. A drone in the Office of Factual Verification at a prestigious literary magazine, Jamie's job leaves no margin for error.

That's the trouble, since his life is one big error. It's no surprise really, when he loses his job. Actually, there are few surprises in Jamie's story, as his road to self-destruction takes the same familiar turns every night. Jamie makes little effort to look for a path to recovery until he goes on a blind date with his friend's cousin. If there is a turning point toward better things, she is it. Viewers never see much of a change, but there are intimations that Jamie is smart enough to find a way out of his quandary.

Adding to the cerebral nature of the proceedings in Jamie's symbiotic bond with a "coma baby" he reads about in the daily tabloids — an unborn fetus in its mother's brain-dead body. This sub-plot parallels Jamie's psychological struggles and adds a surrealistic quality that complements the picture's stylistic aura.

Fox demonstrates an ability here to handle heady roles with the same self-assurance he uses in lighter fare. For the first time he's asked to stretch himself, and he does so with bravura. Beware his cocaine-sniffing scenes though. That's enough to shock even the most liberal Fox fan.

Director James ("The China Syndrome") Bridges gets uniformly good performances out of his supporting cast, most notably Francis Sternhagen as Fox's demanding boss, Tracy Pollan as the girl who offers him hope for his future, and Dianne Wiest, who does a fine turn in her brief flashback scenes as Fox's dying mother.

In recent weeks, we've seen noteworthy examples of how screen adaptations of novels should be done. The film versions of "The Unbearable Lightness of Being," "The Dead," and now "Bright Lights, Big City" are all equal to their literary counterparts. If this keeps up much longer, people may actually start running for movie theaters instead of libraries.

'Me and My Girl' fills stage with music, fun

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

A cook walks up to a man with a steaming pot of soup.

Man: What's that?

Cook: It's bean soup.

Man: I don't care what it's been, what is it now?

If you laughed at that, you will no doubt enjoy the latest fare offered by the Fisher Theatre, "Me and My Girl." In fact, there probably isn't anyone around who wouldn't enjoy this endearing British musical, especially with this cast, and with Tim Curry in the lead.

It is a terrific, fast-paced, witty, low-brow comedy brought to life in full color by an energetic and definitely talented cast.

Filled with wonderful period songs like "Me and My Girl," "Leaning on a Lamppost" and the show-stopping "The Lambeth Walk," "Girl" as done by this group is an irresistible tribute to love, music and England's classes from the "veddy-veddy rich" to the "bleedin' poah."

The story revolves around Bill Snibson (Curry), a young cockney from Lambeth who inherits an earldom, but must give up his past — and his girl Sally — and bring himself up to the quality associated with the family name.

Filled with good cheer and lots of slapstick humor done with excellent timing and finesse by all, to its credit, the show never takes itself seriously. There are talking statues, dancing portraits, and an inspired bit which involves a kick line with everybody from Henry VIII to Richard III.

It's no surprise how the show ends. Everyone learns a little from each other and everyone gets what they want. But in this case, getting there is all the fun.

Curry is terrific as Snibson, a joker with a love of a good joke who will not let his lust for life be suppressed by those with power and money. He is as comfortable with the schtick as if he invented it himself, indeed, he almost reinvents it here. You immediately forget his most famous role — that of the g-stringed transvestite doctor Frank N. Furter in "The Rocky Horror Picture Show."

Connie Kunkle brings Sally to life with almost as much verve, but never takes the spotlight away from Curry. But when she takes center stage and sings "Once You Lose Your Heart," she shows that she is much more than just Bill's sidekick.

Two inspired performances are given by Susan Cella as the lusty Jackie and Walter Charles as the slightly askew family solicitor. Both show off, without showing up.

Originally produced in London in 1937, "Me and My Girl" was mounted in a full-scale stage revival in 1984 by author Noel Gay's son, Richard Armitage. The overwhelming reception led to its opening on Broadway in 1986 and to the national touring company. Its stamina is due to the fact that it is a tribute to life, filled with good clean jokes, and wonderfully upbeat music.

Critic fearlessly picks Academy winners

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

As avid movie fans and glitter aficionados prepare for this year's Academy Award presentations Monday evening (at 9 p.m. on Channel 7 in Detroit), pundits and armchair critics find themselves asking the same questions they do every year:

- To what extent do politics play a role in the nominations? And,

- Why does the show run so long?

The answer to the first question is that politics and petty jealousies obviously play a large role in the nomination process. Witness the absence of Steven Spielberg's name again on the list of best picture nominees. His "Empire of the Sun" was easily one of the year's best offerings, but again, his colleagues have stood him up and let him down. So be it. Politics are, by definition, frustrating. We can accept that.

But what about the length of the show? Unless things change drastically this year — and they won't — the program will run at least three hours; probably closer to three-and-a-half or four hours. Don't fret. After all, this gives you time to catch the 9:30 screening of one of the best picture nominees, and still get home in time to see which one actually wins.

Now, this year's personal picks (as opposed to predictions):

Best Picture

"Fatal Attraction"

"Moonstruck"

"Hope and Glory"

"The Last Emperor"

"Broadcast News"

This is the toughest choice of the lot, but my inclination is to go with "Broadcast News." Director James Brooks touched viewers' hearts with his deeply human characters, and he threw in some brilliant wit besides.

Best Actor:

Michael Douglas, "Wall Street"

William Hurt, "Broadcast News"

Marcello Mastroianni, "Dark Eyes"

Jack Nicholson, "Ironweed"

Robin Williams, "Good Morning Vietnam"

It's a tight race, but my choice is Williams, who, in "Good Morning Vietnam" found a perfect vehicle for his material. Hurt and Nicholson are close runners-up.

Best Actress:

Cher, "Moonstruck"

Glenn Close, "Fatal Attraction"

Holly Hunter, "Broadcast News"

Sally Kirkland, "Anna"

Meryl Streep, "Ironweed"

There's no contest here. The popular choice is also the best choice — Hunter. She provided the best characterization of the year as the manic producer in "Broadcast News."

Other winners: Bernardo Bertolucci, best director for "The Last Emperor"; Albert Brooks, best supporting actor in "Broadcast News"; Olympia Dukakis, best supporting actress in "Moonstruck."

Comedy to benefit teens

Children's Center will sponsor the play "Mornings at Seven," 8:30 p.m., Friday, April 15, at the Detroit Repertory Theatre, 13103 Woodrow Wilson.

The play, a comedy about senior citizens, was a Broadway hit in 1980.

Living Stage to perform at Attic

The Attic Theatre, the Detroit Council of the Arts, Southeast Michigan Art Forum, the Detroit Public Schools and the Detroit Recreation Department will present a special performance of "Images," a play created by the Living Stage Theatre Company from Washington, D.C., on Saturday, April 16 at the Attic Theatre.

The performance will mark the beginning of Living Stage's Detroit residency from April 16-21, funded by the Hasbro Children's Foundation. The residency will consist of special improvisational workshops conducted by Robert Alexander, Living Stage's founder.

Proceeds from the benefit performance will go to support the Children's Center Teen Age Parent Program. The program helps teen parents and their babies.

Tickets are $10 and can be purchased by calling 924-5747.

"Images" is a play about the hopes and struggles of a disabled teenager. While trying to realize his dreams, he confronts the pressures and prejudices of the non-disabled world.

It will be presented free of charge, but by invitation only. Living Stage rarely does a performance that is open to the public, as each of its shows deals with strong social issues, and audiences are specially selected for them beforehand.

Those interested in receiving an invitation to "Images" should call the Attic Theatre at 875-8285. Reservations, assuming availability, will be taken on a first-come, first-served basis.

'Barefoot' next for dinner playhouse

The Great Lakes Dinner Playhouse will present Neil Simon's comedy about the trials of newlyweds, "Barefoot in the Park," opening Friday, April 8, and running until May 21.

In addition, performance patrons will enjoy a buffet dinner, all for one price. Open five days, Wednesdays through Sundays with evening and matinee performances, ticket prices range from $17.95 to $25.95 for evenings and $16.95 for matinees.

The Great Lakes Dinner Playhouse is located at 31 North Walnut, in downtown Mount Clemens, and offers ample lighted parking adjacent to the theater. For reservations or more information, call 463-0340.

A top state shot put candidate will be aboard the track train this year. Marc deManigold, who is headed to Notre Dame on a football scholarship, will be the highlight in the shot put and discus. Ted Stephens and Jim DeYonker will be able to clear the pole vault bar at at least 12 feet and hurdler Hwan Hur will also be top athletes in action.

Bob Straske, an All-State cross-country runner, will go the distance in the half mile and Steve Clarke will run the two mile. Dan MacDougall is a top sprinter.

"We will be in the thick of it for the division championship," said Collins. "If we're not the favorite to win it, we've got to be up there."

"We're stronger in the field, but we're going to have a very solid team."

EVOLUTION OF THE SPECIES

The New Breed Jaguar XJ6

The 1988 Jaguar XJ6. It is totally new. Yet it reflects the most superb qualities of its legendary forebears.

Its new, fuel injected, double overhead cam six cylinder engine has 24 valves for enhanced power and high-speed response. Patented "pendulum" isolation enhances the renowned ride of Jaguar's surefooted fully independent suspension.

Supple leather and polished burl walnut maintain the Jaguar tradition of handcrafted interior luxury. However, the new XJ6 also reflects the most enlightened engineering. For example: The new XJ6 incorporates seven microprocessors to regulate mechanical and driver information systems—including a trip computer and a Vehicle Condition Monitor, which continually checks 27 vehicle functions.

A most advanced species, the new XJ6 is also the most thoroughly proven sedan ever introduced by Jaguar. It is protected by an extensive 3 year/36,000 mile warranty, and Jaguar's new Service-On-Site™ Roadside Assistance Plan. We can provide details on this program and Jaguar's limited warranty. And we invite you to experience the evolution of a legendary species—the new breed Jaguar XJ6.

40 years... Creating the Competition!!

Sports People

What a pair

Chris Tapper and Ann Rice, both Grosse Pointers, swam for the John Carroll University swim teams this winter and did quite well.

Tapper, one of only five freshmen on the team, helped the Blue Streaks take third place in the Presidents' Athletic Conference Championships with a fourth-place dive in the one-meter competition.

Rice, also a freshman, helped her team to a third straight PAC title.

The former South swimmer placed in no fewer than five events at the conference meet.

She swam on the second-place 200-meter freestyle relay, the third-place 200-meter medley relay, and finished fourth in the 500-meter freestyle and 100-meter butterfly. A fifth place in the 100-meter freestyle wrapped up her performance.

All-American

Meg Moisen, a former South track and cross country standout, earned All-American honors by placing first in the 3200 meter relay at the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Moisen, a junior at Villanova, along with five teammates, earned enough team points to give Villanova the runner-up team title behind the University of Texas.

While at South, Moisen earned All-State honors in both cross country and track. She is currently majoring in business management.

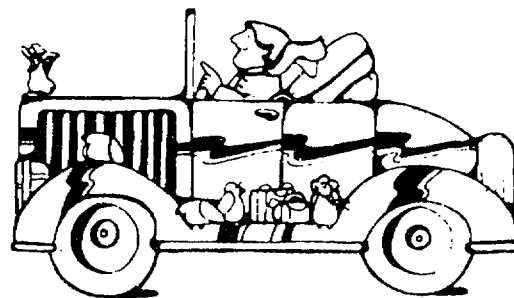

A touch of gold!

Kathleen Koerner, director of Super Shape, Inc., has received the gold certificate from the International Dance-Exercise Association (IDEA).

Koerner was required to pass a national standard examination for fitness industry leaders dealing in many areas of fitness.
