

Three local teams head to state Odyssey of Mind finals

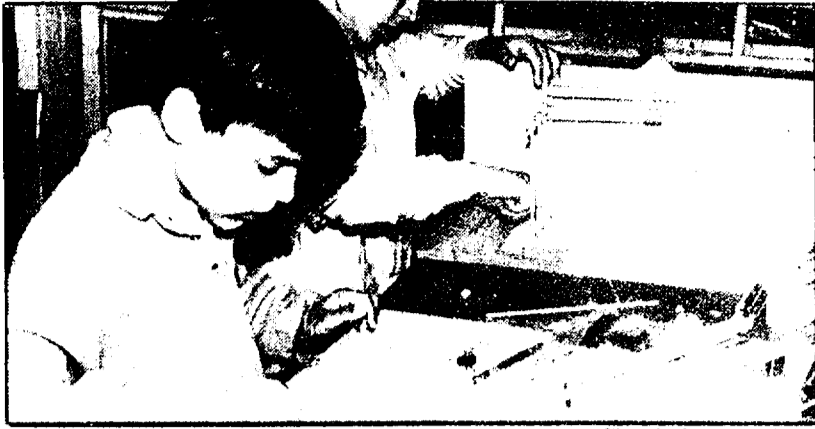

By Peter A. Callias
Staff Writer

Three teams of Grosse Pointe students have been preparing for a journey — an Odyssey of the Mind.

Two teams from Defer Elementary and one from Pierce Middle School will participate in the state finals of the competition April 30 at Central Michigan University.

Students competed in regional competition held in early March at Grosse Pointe North.

Students choose one of six different problems to solve. Each problem includes three specific areas which the students must address.

Justin Miller, foreground, and Robbie Sharrow build a structure for their Odyssey of the Mind project.

One Defer team is competing in the Straddle Structure category. The students must create a balsa wood structure, capable of holding as much weight as possible.

The structure is made of one-eighth inch balsa wood. It must be under a certain weight and put together with glue. The students must do all the work themselves. Team adult sponsors are not allowed to help with any aspect of any project, other than helping to set up practice or work schedules and getting the students from point A to B.

Defer is also sending a team that will compete in Gift of Flight. The team took third place at the regional competition. Gift of Flight members include Greg Sharrow, Aaron Rawson, Beth Callas, Mac Nutter, Cara Spoto, Patrick Worrell and Paul Joiner. The team is coached by Russ and Jane Nutter.

Jane Nutter organized the regional competition at North.

Pierce Middle School is sending a team that will compete in the Comic division, which took a first place at the regional level.

Students create a live sketch using popular comic characters. Pierce team members include Heather Plansker, Jamie Elsil, Adam Rhodes, Peter Spencer, Josh Wood and Mark Deiy. The team is coached by Cheryl Cueny and Linda Rhodes.

The Straddle Structure team defeated its nearest opponent by more than 300 pounds. The balsa wood structure, created by four third-graders, one fourth-grader and two fifth-graders, held 407 pounds.

Robbie Sharrow, 8, a fifth-grader, who will be competing in his third state finals in this category, said over the years his team has developed a very strong structure and an ability to closely follow the rules.

University Liggett plans to consolidate campuses

University Liggett School Board of Trustees agreed Monday night in principle to a plan to consolidate the school's two campuses at its main location on Cook Road. The middle school is currently located on Briarcliff Drive.

Eugene A. Gargaro Jr., president, said the board voted to undertake an intensive financial feasibility study of the project.

"This proposal emerged from a study made by our Long Range Planning Committee which had the assignment of ascertaining the needs of the school as it looked ahead to the 1990s and into the 21st century," Gargaro said. "Their goal was to devise a blueprint that would keep the school on course as a center of educational excellence while recognizing the significant changes that are occurring in the academic, demographic and economic spheres."

The proposal would include construction of a separate classroom facility for the middle school on the Cook Road campus. Students would have access to the art, science, computer and library facilities in place there, which are more advanced than those available on the Briarcliff campus, Gargaro said.

"Access to these facilities is increasingly important in the changing academic environment," he said. "Other factors leading to the proposed move are the value of close interrelationships among the lower, middle and upper school faculties, the clear efficiencies to be gained from a consolidated operation, and the importance of fostering a sense of unity in the entire ULS student body."

The Briarcliff campus, formerly Liggett School, was acquired in the late '60s when Liggett and Grosse Pointe University School merged to become University Liggett School. There are 185 students in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades on the Briarcliff campus. The total ULS student body is 817, Gargaro said.

There will not be any changes this fall, he added. A letter explaining the board's action was sent to all parents and alumni Tuesday. Gargaro said the intensive financial and space use studies would begin immediately.

A specialist in space planning for educational institutions has also been engaged and the school plans to retain land use and architectural firms to make preliminary recommendations.

Possible alternate use or disposition of the Briarcliff property will be considered in the course of finalizing the project.

City approves shared forester

A community forester — shared by the five Grosse Pointes — is a little closer to reality after Monday night's council meeting in the city of Grosse Pointe. The council approved the concept of a shared, full-time community forester, subject to approval by the Park and the Farms.

The Woods and Shores have already approved the hiring of a community forester.

The Grosse Pointe Shade Tree Council has recommended that the five communities combine forces and treat the area as one large urban forest in order to combat tree diseases, control pests and cut costs.

"It's a fabulous concept," said Jean Rice, Woods councilwoman and representative on the Shade Tree Council. "It's very innovative. We have to forget our territorial boundaries, which is hard to do."

According to Dale Krajniak, acting city manager, Grosse Pointe Park will discuss the concept of a community forester at a budget work-session today. The matter may be placed on the agenda for the next council meeting, Monday, April 25.

Grosse Pointe Farms has not made a decision yet.

Pointer of Interest

Grace Adams Harrison

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Grace Harrison loves plants. She pointed to a small clay pot on a side table in her living room. An identification strip in the soil gave its name: Lippia dulcis.

Lippia dulcis' leaves had twined themselves around a miniature stake. Harrison plucked one. "These leaves are sweet," she said. "Here, chew one."

Grace Adams Harrison

"It's a very unusual plant because it produces sugar in its leaves. It's in research," Harrison reached for a publication with an article about similar plants that are being studied as possible sources of non-nutritive sweeteners.

"The plant world is fascinating," she said. "Plants and animals too."

Harrison said her primary interests are the preservation of soil, air and water. A former teacher, she's always been a promoter of education. She's also interested in history and in the preservation of the best of the past. She summed up her philosophy: "Leave everything better than you found it, but enjoy as you go along."

Harrison retired from teaching 19 years ago. But she's not sitting in a rocking chair. She's not one to sit still. She attributes her longevity to an interest in life — genes — and a minimum of worries. "If something worries me, I do something about it. I enjoy. If my day isn't good, it's my own fault."

She's actively involved in dozens of volunteer projects. Most of President Reagan writes to Trombly students

When Lillian Kachadourian's second-grade class heard one of their classmates' mother was going to the White House to perform as Rainbow the Clown, they all wrote letters to be hand-delivered to President Reagan.

The letters — which asked questions in the way only children can — dealt with issues from war to peace and from AIDS to drug trafficking. They were mounted on a scroll and delivered to the Reagans during the White House's annual Easter Egg Roll April 3.

Rainbow, alias Rebecca Santora, received a wooden Easter egg autographed by Reagan.

But on Thursday, April 14, the class received something more important: a letter from President Reagan on embossed White House stationery.

The letter, in part said: "I was happy to receive your scroll of messages, which Kristie Santora and her mother delivered to the White House for you. Knowing of your friendship makes me feel very special. Thank you for your kindness."

Enclosed with the letter were booklets for each student which told the history of the White House.

Kachadourian is planning on having the letter framed for display.

Local groups mount concerted effort for soccer fields

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Drive through Grosse Pointe on any sunny weekend afternoon, and just about every field is occupied.

And if three local organizations get their way, the 1,500 to 1,700 people who play soccer every spring and fall will have two new fields to play on at Barnes School in the Woods.

The problem is that the Grosse Pointe Board of Education, which is on record as not wanting to make any capital expenditures this budget year, may not be able to help out financially.

The Neighborhood Club, its Pointe Girls Soccer Association and the Grosse Pointe Soccer Association have asked the school board to pay half of the cost for developing two fields designated primarily for soccer.

Estimated costs for upgrading the field, which would include correcting drainage problems, upgrading fencing and installing a watering system, are about $60,000 to $65,000.

The groups gave a presentation to the board about developing the Barnes site last year, and again made a presentation March 7. The board turned down the original request, but said it would take the most recent proposal under consideration as it planned the 1988-89 budget.

"We have been told that the request is listed as a priority B item," said Diane Karabetsos, president of the Grosse Pointe Soccer Association. "That means it is not a top priority."

But soccer field proponents are optimistic the money for development can be found.

Ron Dowe, trustee for the soccer association, said that local soccer suffers because of insufficient and inadequate field space.

He said that there are six public fields and only limited access to four private fields, with other recreation programs are competing for the same space.

Karabetsos said that soccer is a growing sport both locally and statewide. To compete with communities such as Troy and Livonia, which have dozens of soccer fields, Grosse Pointe must try to develop soccer fields for both practice and games.

Currently, Grosse Pointe North has a varsity soccer field, South plays at Elworthy and Brownell fields, and other sites include Ford Field in the Shores and a field at Assumption Center.

"The soccer field at North is a multi-use site," said John Bruce, director of the Neighborhood Club. "Both Elworthy and Brownell are not designed as soccer fields and the Assumption Center location is a good field, but not a full-sized field."

The fact is, Bruce said, there are no full-sized fields primarily designated for soccer. "Grosse Pointe is deficient in outdoor sites for all activities."

Bruce said he recognizes that the school board has a difficult situation in determining this year's budget, with so many unknowns facing the district. He added that there is probably no school district in Michigan as dedicated to community activities as the Grosse Pointe schools.

"The school system is trying to be financially responsible," Bruce said, "and no one can criticize that. We do think the need is immediate."

Karabetsos said because of the site's drainage problems, the field is wet or soggy throughout most of the spring and fall — the two times of year the soccer athletes could use it.

She adds that soccer is the only major sport played both in spring and fall, and that the fields would get a lot of use.

Realizing that there are other important programs the district is looking at that may not get funding, Karabetsos raised a point.

"If they were getting a dollar for dollar match to implement those programs," she said, "they would have to think about it."

Though the field would be used primarily for soccer, Karabetsos noted it would be used for other sports, as most of the fields throughout the Pointes are.

"It could also be used for running practice or lacrosse," she noted. "Because it is so wet now, even local residents can't use it to hit a softball around or get a pickup game together. It would be good for everyone to have a nice, drained and groomed area."

Karabetsos said she feels having a quality area in which to play the game will enhance the local soccer programs. To play quality soccer, a quality playfield is needed, she said.

"We need a good field to bring in travel teams and to compete with other areas," she said.

She said that while many of the athletic fields are used primarily for boys sports, such as football and baseball, soccer is a sport in which there is a great deal of interest by both sexes.

"It's a sport for all people," she said — fat, short tall and thin."

Harvey's nets $2,000 for humane society

Maryanne Harvey is pleased with the turnout for her sale to help the Michigan Humane Society. In fact she did so well, she made twice her original goal, and has plans to do it again next year.

Harvey, owner of Harvey's Compleat Traveler at 345 Fisher Road, did not expect the kind of support she got when she planned a sale in which all of the money received from the sale of specially marked merchandise would go to the humane society.

Hundreds of people showed up, some to look at the dog in the window, and others to browse the store for bags, cases and gadgets of all sorts. Some bought humane society items, some bought Harvey's items, and others made donations.

Harvey added that a large number of high school kids came to look at the dogs and added their money to the society's jar.

Two of the three dogs displayed during the three-day sale were adopted. The third, "a beautiful, friendly yellow and black part-Airedale with big yellow eyes," is still waiting, she said.

"I won't feel really successful if this animal doesn't get adopted," she said.

(Those who want to adopt this or any humane society animal can call 872-3400.)

"I cannot say thank you enough to all the people who came in," Harvey said. "We were all birds of a feather, all animal lovers who wanted to help."

She also expressed thanks to the two humane society workers, Patti Roman and Bridget Mecke, both of Grosse Pointe, for working non-stop.

Harvey already is planning next year's sale and warned Grosse Pointe retailers to "watch out. I'm going to ask them to donate items, too."

The more money she raises, the better for the society, she said, because the Michigan Humane Society is supported solely by donations. It is not a state agency, and receives no state or federal funds.

Budget process begins, officials seek no program expansion

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Preliminary recommendations to the Grosse Pointe Board of Education will call for a $50 million budget on a tax rate of 32.6 mills.

Business Affairs Director Chris Fenton said the board will decide later this month on the final figures, but he will recommend a "maintenance or status quo" budget for the first time in his nine years with the district.

Fenton said that as long as he has been here, the district has always increased spending on new programs or capital expenditures, but that he will recommend virtually no improvements for the 1988-89 school year.

Late last year Superintendent John Whritner announced that, to build up its fund equity to a reasonable level, the district would have to cut about $500,000 from the budget.

Fenton said current programs will not be cut, but spending for improvements will be curtailed in order to trim $500,000 from the budget.

If this sounds a little different than what district officials were saying earlier this year — it is.

There will be six fewer teachers overall under Fenton's plan. He said 11 teachers will be cut from the high school staff, but that most of these should come by way of retirement attrition.

Projections for high school enrollment will be about 165 fewer students than in the current school year. This decrease is offset by a projected increase of 113 students at the elementary level. Five teachers will be added to the elementary staff.

"The key part to this recommendation will be that we will make any improvements, other than the text book purchases, until after Jan. 1," Fenton said. "This way we will determine how much money we have."

Eliminating six teachers should save the district about $180,000. To further reduce the $500,000 budget shortfall officials discussed earlier, the district will use about $120,000 from funds the district has as a result of the sale of two parking lots it sold in 1986.

The district has about $500,000 in this reserve fund, which had been earmarked for improvements to the administration building at 389 St. Clair. Fenton had originally recommended that $380,000 of the $500,000 be used to construct a materials storage facility at Barnes School.

That recommendation was withdrawn earlier this week when administration officials decided they could not in good conscience recommend the expenditure in light of their recommendation to forego other program improvements.

Though Fenton is calling this a maintenance budget, the purchase of $133,000 in new text books for the elementary and middle schools will be recommended.

Fenton anticipates that the district will not fund several programs that have been touted recently, such as the guidance and counseling program and strategic planning. Also there will be a freeze on school library computer expansion and no reserve for extra teachers due to any unanticipated increase in enrollment.

Fenton said that the district traditionally keeps a reserve in the event it must hire additional teachers, but will forego that reserve this year in hopes its projections for staffing are accurate.

The $50 million 1988-89 budget represents a 9 percent increase over this year's $45 million budget. This, however, is deceiving since next year's budget includes $1.25 million of borrowed money for window replacement and roofing projects.

"This budget represents about a 6 percent increase without the building and site improvement funds," Fenton said.

The state equalized value of the district increased about 9 percent in the last year, while revenues to the school increased about 7.7 percent.

"The difference is due in part to the Headlee Amendment," Fenton said. "It is also due to the fact that the board decided not to levy its full tax rate last year."

Fenton said the district will be levying the full rate this year, and this is the reason for the larger overall increase in the budget.

"Without the full levy the budget would have increased about 4.5 to 5 percent," Fenton said. "This is still lower than the increase in the SEV. The SEV increase does not automatically translate into the same number of dollars."

He emphasized that this budget assumes that the four-tenths mill increase for the library is approved.

"If it is not passed," he said, "there will be cuts in the library."

Saturday and Sunday hours will likely have to be cut, and there will be cuts in staffing. This is not an idle threat. It's a real-life situation."

Salary increase projections are at 6.2 percent as per the district's contractual obligation. Overall teacher salaries will increase about 5.5 percent due to the staffing cuts from attrition. Administrator, non-instructional personnel, secretarial/clerical, custodial/cafeteria and paraprofessional salary increases are all projected at 5 percent.

Fenton notes that the secretarial and custodial contracts are to be negotiated this year, and the five percent figure is a best guess at this point.

One of the largest increases in expenditures will come from fringe benefits. Blue Cross will increase about 15.8 percent, and life insurance costs about 50 percent. Overall fringe benefit increases will amount to about $300,000 or a total of 14.6 percent over last year.

Fenton noted that for the last three years, the premium on life insurance was low. The insurance company has found that its claims have exceeded its premiums, and that is the reason for the hefty increase this year.

The school board will be meeting on the budget in the next several weeks, prior to holding a public hearing on the issue in early May.

Mansion demolished

Edsel Ford II's Lakeshore Road house was torn down last week, leaving only the basement and a first-floor slab. The contents and architectural fixtures of the 25-room mansion, built in 1913 and once owned by Ford's great-uncle Ernest Kanzler, were auctioned nearly a year ago, to the dismay of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society and other local preservationists.

Patricia Colett, vice president of Historic Preservation, said the society expressed its opposing views last May and are still opposed. "It's certainly unfortunate. We did all we could do. We had no laws."

Ford could not be reached for comment. He plans to erect a new house on the estate.

Rumora new Farms judge

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Matthew R. Rumora, current city prosecutor for the Farms, was appointed to the post of Farms municipal judge Monday night by the city council. He fills the vacancy created when Judge Peter E. O'Rourke submitted his resignation last month, citing time commitments and other personal reasons.

He will begin the position June 1. His term expires in December 1989. It pays $9,000 a year.

"It's unbelievable," Rumora said. "It's kind of overwhelming."

He applied because he said he has enjoyed his two and one-half years as prosecuting attorney, and he has always wanted to be a judge.

"It's the greatest honor a lawyer can receive, in my opinion," he added.

Rumora, 39, graduated from Grosse Pointe High School in 1966, earned a pre-law degree from Michigan State University in 1970 and his juris doctor in 1974 from University of Kentucky.

Rumora has been self-employed in the general practice of law for 14 years and has experience in both criminal and civil cases. He is the city prosecutor, responsible for the prosecution of all traffic and misdemeanor ordinance cases within the city.

Previously, he has been the 36th District Court magistrate, a referee in the Detroit Traffic Court and a circuit court mediator for the Macomb County Circuit Court. He is an arbitrator for the American Arbitration Association.

He was chosen by a committee made up of councilmen Emil Berg and Bruce Rockwell and Mayor Joseph L. Fromm from a field of four or five people who expressed an interest in the post, City Clerk Richard Solak said.

The council appointed a three-member committee to review applications and make a recommendation to the council for someone to fill the post of city prosecuting attorney. That committee consists of John Lizza, Paul Marco and Charlie Kinard.

Board approves French program

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

A new language program, which will include a class of students traveling to France at their own expense, was approved by the school board Monday, April 11.

The program, called the French-American Back-to-Back Class, has been in the works for several months, after a group of highly motivated parents prompted school administration officials to seriously consider the concept.

A French class will come to Grosse Pointe and the local class will travel to France. Students in the class will study French language, culture, songs and other aspects of the culture throughout the year.

Several plans were considered, but school administration official, decided upon the least costly. The class will be held outside of school time, either on a Saturday or after school.

In holding the class this year, the district will avoid having to hire a full-time teacher to keep the class together for the entire year. It will also avoid having to pull students out of one class to meet in another during the regular school day.

Alfreda Frost, director of elementary education, worked closely with parents who asked that the program be started.

It will be costly. Parents will have to pay about $1,200 for the entire year, which will include travel to France.

Board members Jane Nutter and Carol Marr both voiced concern that there would be worthy students who would be unable to afford such a program. Because the parents of the students will be seeking donations and holding fundraisers, both Marr and Nutter encouraged the parents to develop a scholarship for the program.

There will be some cost, though minimal, to the district. The district will pay for a substitute teacher for three weeks when the Back-to-Back teacher travels with the class to France. Also there will be about $1,200 in extra pay for the teacher under the district's contract with teachers for extra pay for extra duty.

About 40 families have expressed interest in the program. At least 24 families said they would participate in the program, as approved by the board. More families said they would have participated if the district would have held the program in one self-contained classroom.

ner activities are related to growing things, but she's happiest when something that involves plants or trees or herbs can be combined with conservation and education. "I like to work quietly, in the back," she said.

She's on the Park's Beautification Commission, she's a master gardener, a life member of the Herb Society of America, a member of the Detroit Garden Center, the Deeplands Garden Club, the League of Women Voters, the Windmill Pointe Questers, the council of the Grosse Pointe Garden Clubs, an honorary life member of the American Association of University Women, chairwoman of the Tapestry Guild at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, and more.

"I'm busy all the time," she said.

Also interested in needlework, Harrison said she crocheted her first marble bag when she was 8 years old. She does needlepoint, pettipoint, crewel, embroidery, quilting, crocheting. "I crocheted two bedspreads waiting for my turn to speak."

On the first Monday of every month, she gets together with the other 15 or so members of the Grosse Pointe Park Beautification Commission. The group is working on Arbor Day activities and supervised the sale of more than 200 pagoda and flowering crab trees and the sale of an additional 100 or so trees to citizens for planting on private property. "This is all part of the Park's reforestation program," she said.

She enthusiastically explained an Arbor Day project for fourth-graders in local schools. "All the children drew pictures of their interpretation of Arbor Day," she said. "We had 100 percent participation. Each child gets a pine seedling to plant. The artwork is on display in the windows of businesses on Jefferson and Mack. The best one is exhibited at City Hall."

She worked on plans and on obtaining funds for the improvement of the border and the entrance to Patterson Park, the planting of flowering crab trees around the pumping station, and she was recently on her hands and knees, planting a border of bulbs, chrysanthemums and herbs around Pierce Middle School.

She often coordinates several of her organizations for projects. For instance, she got funds from the Garden Council to plant flowering dogwood and flowering shrubs and annuals at Patterson Park. The paper recycling project at University Liggett was a joint project with the League of Women Voters, the AAUW, the Garden Council and Grosse Pointe Community Education, she said. "Newspapers can be dropped off at a bin on Liggett's campus weekdays from 8:30 a.m. until 6 p.m."

Harrison was born in Arkansas. She graduated from Columbia University with a degree in foods and nutrition in 1928. She has a master's degree in nutrition. She worked as a nutritionist for the Borden Milk Company in New Jersey, moved to Connecticut, then to Boston, then to Grosse Pointe. She taught school in Grosse Pointe for 20 years, first at Vernier School, then at Parcels and Poupard — grades three through six.

"Wherever I lived, I took courses. I had enough credits for a Ph.D. by the time I retired," she said.

Harrison has always been a gardener. She has more than 100 different herbs in her own garden — scattered in beds with other perennials. "I have very few critters in my garden, because of the herbs. I use no insecticides."

The children on her street are frequent visitors — for cookies as well as gardening advice. "The children on this block will be gardeners. They're learning the names of plants too."

Grace Harrison, chairwoman of the Tapestry Guild at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, works with a group of about 12 women on restoration of tapestries that have been donated to the center. She said it takes three to five years to restore a medium-sized tapestry.

"My philosophy could be summed up by a poem my father liked:

I shall pass through this world but once;

Any good thing therefore that I can do

Or any kindness I can show to any fellow creature

Let me do it now.

Let not defer or neglect it,
For I shall not pass this way again.

Harrison added a bit of advice she often gives to children: "Enjoy plants and trees and be a gardener and you'll never be lonesome."

Break-in solved

Park police, following up on a lead, discovered who committed a Jan. 28 burglary in the city, and recovered most of the property.

Detectives were following up on a report that checks stolen from the Park home in January were being used.

Police found three Detroit juveniles were responsible for the burglary, and will press charges in Wayne County Juvenile Court.

Correction

Last week's article concerning Grosse Pointe Park's Jefferson Avenue development project should have said the bid for removal of the underground fuel tanks was awarded to Parks Installation Co. Its bid of $5,315 was the lowest.

The underground tanks will be removed within a few weeks, according to Jeff Mueller, administrative assistant.

Stage is set for battle on school funding

Now that Gov. James Blanchard has endorsed the proposed two-cent increase in the sales tax, the stage is set for another bruising battle in Lansing over state school funding and property tax relief.

The governor and his Democratic colleagues in the House favor a tax cut to finance school operating costs that would amount to a 44 percent saving for the average homeowner and about 12 percent for business. Senate Republicans, who already have passed their bill, would through reductions in assessments make a 50 percent cut in taxes to finance school operating costs for homeowners and a 35 percent cut for business. Those differences represent one important element in the controversy between the parties.

But there are other differences. The governor still wants to close what he terms tax loopholes that benefit banks and insurance companies and extend the income tax to cover the pay of active military personnel and state lottery winners. But Republicans challenge these and other proposals in the governor's package on the grounds they would simply raise taxes on certain institutions and individuals.

The Democratic plan would raise an additional $500 million in sales tax revenue, after subtracting the property tax cuts, plus another $120 million from closing tax loopholes. That would provide a net increase of about $620 million in revenue that would be available for the public schools as contrasted with the GOP plan to hike revenues an estimated $150 million to $250 million for the same purposes.

Rep. William R. Bryant Jr. of Grosse Pointe feels strongly that any formula for distribution of school aid under the new program should be written into the Constitution so that the people would know just how much would be spent for the schools in the future. Bryant has proposed a specific formula which would provide school funding about equal to the 90th percentile of current spending per pupil, but to date the Democrats have been unwilling to put any formula into the Constitution.

As we read the two proposals, we do not find a new cap on local district spending for public education, although in the case of the Republican Senate bill the current 50-mill cap probably would come into play because of the big cut in property assessments. In the Grosse Pointes, the school board has taken a strong position against any limitation on the right of local districts to vote the millage needed to maintain whatever level of excellence the district desires.

Bryant concedes, however, that under any new state school financing plan, it is unlikely that the Grosse Pointe district would continue to receive state reimbursement for the payments it makes for retirement contributions and Social Security taxes on its employees. That means the district will have to raise more funds through local taxes to balance its budget if some new school financing plan is adopted.

Another factor that deserves consideration in the maneuvering over the school funding issue is that local property taxes, unlike state sales taxes, remain deductible on homeowners' federal income tax returns. That has led some legislators to propose cutting the sales tax increase to a single cent and reducing the amount of the property tax cut. Bryant still thinks, however, that any plan that is adopted will retain the two-cent proposal.

The governor wants to get quick legislative approval of the new school funding and tax shift plan by the necessary two-thirds vote in each house so that the sales tax issue can be placed before the voters in the Aug. 2 primary. Putting the issue on the ballot at that time would eliminate any competition with the $800 million bond issue for economic development, recreational purposes and waste cleanup that the House last week voted to put on the November ballot. Bryant preferred dedicating all the funds to toxic waste cleanup because there still are more than 1,000 sites needing cleanup but his substitute bill was defeated.

We think most fair-minded people, including those in the Pointes, would agree to some solution that would provide more state aid for districts which now are unable to finance an adequate level of education. Such a solution would no doubt mean less state aid for districts like our own, but that would appear to be a small price to pay if we in the Grosse Pointes could retain the right to maintain our school property taxes at a level that would finance the educational excellence the local district has traditionally offered.

A tribute to volunteers

Thousands of Grosse Pointers every week make contributions of personal services that enrich the quality of life for the entire community. They are among the millions of volunteers who are being recognized during National Volunteer Week which runs through April 23.

The Grosse Pointe public schools estimate that at least 3,000 people, including students, parents and grandparents, help the schools in various ways. Bon Secours Hospital in an advertisement in the Grosse Pointe News last week paid tribute to the more than 2,000 volunteers and support group members who donate their time and talents to the hospital's health care facilities.

Many Grosse Pointers also contribute time and effort to such organizations as the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library and the Friends of the Detroit Public Library as well as support groups for such institutions as the Detroit Art Institute, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and the Detroit Zoo and such organizations as the Girl Scouts, the Boy Scouts, the Little Leagues, and other youth and recreational groups.

Many hundreds more volunteer their services to assist local theater, music and other artistic organizations. Such national organizations as the American Red Cross also benefit from the work of volunteers. And every year hundreds of local people join in helping the United Foundation achieve its goals in the Torch Drive.

Volunteers seldom get much public recognition. But, according to Marge Nixon, coordinator of volunteers for the public schools, volunteers don't do what they're doing for recognition. They volunteer because they enjoy providing needed advice and services.

Volunteers perform a great variety of services. A friend of ours for years read to the blind on a regular weekly basis. A volunteer who happens to be the assistant state director of the American Association of Retired People is helping arrange the annual AARP convention to be held in Cobo Hall in May. The school volunteers do everything from helping with the latch-key program to acting as room mothers to serving as aides to teachers.

Sometimes it's even dangerous to serve as a volunteer. The Friends of the Detroit Library recently reported that two volunteers were injured during a used book sale. One tripped over a carton of books and suffered a gash on the skull. Another tried to catch a falling bookcase and suffered hand injuries that required seven stitches. Both returned to duty after medical treatment.

That reflects the kind of commitment volunteers give to their jobs and service. That is why we're happy to join in paying tribute to volunteers everywhere for their selfless contributions to worthwhile causes and organizations which couldn't achieve their goals without the aid of volunteers.

Wrong to cut police staffing

After a year during which major crimes rose both in Detroit and the state, it seems highly inappropriate for Detroit to cut back on the strength of its police force in the coming year. Yet that is just what Mayor Coleman Young proposes in his budget for the year beginning July 1. The mayor plans to cut 264 officers from his force through attrition.

The mayor's budget was made public at the same time that a new state police report showed that an 8.8 percent increase in homicides in Michigan helped push the state's overall crime rate slightly higher in 1987. In Detroit, police reported 686 homicides, or the most since the record 714 homicides in 1974.

True, the total of 4,775 officers that would remain after the mayor's proposed cut would be the third highest staffing in this decade, according to Robert Berg, a Young spokesman. But that fact is not much solace either to the police organizations or residents of city neighborhoods.

In fact, it will be the neighborhoods that will take the brunt of the cuts. In the 13th Precinct, for example, the plan calls for a reduction of 52 officers, from 221 to 169, even though it is an area of heavy pedestrian and commercial vehicle traffic around Wayne State University, the Art Institute, the Medical Center, the Historical Museum, the New Center area, Brewster-Douglass housing and the Cass Corridor.

We know that the mayor resents suggestions from the suburbs as to the city's spending priorities, even though many suburban residents have earned the right to criticize because they work in the city and pay the city's income tax, and many other suburbanites surely have the same right because they own property, operate businesses or have other investments in the city.

Yet we're often told that the major concern of both the residents of Detroit and the suburbs surrounding the central city is crime. In fact, white and black flight from Detroit continues and one of the reasons surely is the lack of protection for people and property in Detroit's neighborhoods.

So now there will be even less protection in the neighborhoods. One Detroit woman, the president of the Concerned Citizens of Cass Corridor, described the cutback in police staffing in her area as "awful." Others had even harsher words to describe it.

Once again the mayor is promising a balanced budget. He cites developments that could help restore the city's tax base. And he expects additional federal money as well as the customary state aid that benefits the Art Institute, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and other cultural jewels that the city no longer adequately supports.

But it's a budget that hardly justifies the mayor's optimistic comment that the future of the city looks "the brightest" since he first took office. Instead, the budget makes it clear that it will be difficult for the city just to run in place. That is especially true when the reduction in police staffing is taken into account.

Letters

To the Editor:

On April 11, with my elderly mother, we were in the Grosse Pointe Farms shopping district known as the Hill. Before heading to the Hill we stopped at the bank to cash mother's Social Security check, as well as my paycheck. We pay cash on everything. To my displeasure, when it came time to pay for the merchandise my wallet was missing. Mother and I were very concerned. That money was to be used for groceries and rent. Our only thought was to say a prayer to the Lord for the return of our money.

In an arrangement as we were walking through the front door of our home, a Goodwill was on the telephone. He was a young man by the name of Al Devine. It seems that Al found my wallet in the middle of Kercheval Avenue. As it is finally done, we are in the park is still in my wallet. My first question to Mr. Devine was about the money. He said the money was still intact. Mother and I were delighted. I asked Mr. Devine if it ever crossed his mind to keep the money and he said that my wallet was the third one he found this month, and if he had kept the monies from all the wallets, he would have enough for a well needed vacation; but as Al put it: God will pay me back I sure hope so, because with my fixed income I could not give Mr. Devine any appreciation for returning my wallet.

Mother and I pray regularly for more Al Devines in this world of hatred and dishonesty.

Why desecrate beauty?

To the Editor:

Dr. Douglas A. Sargent, my colleague and friend, in a communication to the Grosse Pointe News, urges erection of a barrier along the lakeshore to prevent people from committing suicide by driving into the lake. "Safety must come before beauty," he says. "While it is a great pleasure, the view from Lakeshore Road would be spoiled for most of us if our enjoyment came at the cost of even one life that ended needlessly."

It seems quixotic to install a barrier to prevent a rare suicide by driving into the lake when there are countless suicides by collision, not to mention the other carnage on the highways.

One's mood is affected by one's environment. Thus, seeing the blight of Detroit one is tempted to turn to drugs or to jump into the river. Grosse Pointe, in comparison, is a sight for sore eyes. Why desecrate its beauty?

Public health is enhanced by beauty. Actually, along the lakefront in Grosse Pointe, there should be a walkway, benches and trees rather than a roadway. For that kind of peace, I go to Cape Town, S. Africa.

Bob meets Flopsy 'n' Lopsy

Bob came through the kitchen at a run, grabbing my hand and dragging me to the dining room window.

"Hurry up," he chortled. "The Easter Bunny's here again!"

Sure enough, out under the cedar trees were two bunnies, a black and white lop ear and a white one. They were nibbling grass and stacking mighty close together.

We watched them for a few minutes. Every time one took a hop, its buddy did too. They were pretty skittish.

Poor little guys. We were going to have to save them.

I called the little girls next door, hoping they hadn't left for school already. If anybody was going to know where the bunnies lived, it would be the girls.

They didn't know. Bob had already gone outside and was trying to entice them with bird seed. Cheryl ran out her back door with her jacket half on, ready to do something to help. Anything.

She startled the white rabbit who ran down the back yards and flushed a neighbor dog. They took off across the road, the dog slavering on the rabbit's ear.

By that time, Bob had caught the lop ear twice (it's hard to make a rabbit stay caught). He put it in the bottom of the garbage can while he sucked blood from his fingers. Rabbit-kill.

Cheryl got on her bike to re-connote. She hadn't gone far when she met the white bunny, cowering and trembling and relieved to be caught. She picked it up, and before she had to figure out how to ride a bike holding a rabbit, a neighbor came by and hid the variant.

So, after a mere half hour, the animal rescue team could not find its latest bait.

Bob is a typical Englishman. He believes in the importance of being stern to children so that they grow up straight, but let an animal cross his path and he melts.

Any animal. Well, almost any animal. He doesn't nurse any friendship for Buddy, the pony, who once knocked him out so cold that his business thought he was dead.

A few years ago, he was gazing out the window at a wintry land scape and saw a chickadee that couldn't fly. Bob went out and said "Dee, dee" to the chickadee, who of course said "Dee, dee" right back. He picked it up and stroked its wing back into alignment and it flew away.

Not all his rescues have been that simple.

Nancy Parmenter

Oy.

We kept the baby overnight. Next morning, of course Mark had to go to work or school or something, so Bob and I got in the car and drove the little guy back to Jewell Road.

But you can't just drop a baby off any old where. We drove up and down watching and listening for a possible parent. Hearing none, we drove up and down again, cheeping out the window. It wasn't with much confidence that we finally picked a spot and put the defenseless thing out.

We had a little more luck with Sam the dog.

Jim brought him home late one evening. "He followed me," he said simply and probably untruthfully.

There's only one flaw with bringing a dog home to our house. We already have a dog and a cat who are very set in their ways. They are, to say the least, not welcoming.

No problem.

Jim said he would tie him outside. Until bedtime, he sat with Sam, petted him, talked to him, and otherwise offered him comfort. Then we all went to bed.

Not Sam.

He began to groan and sigh and wail, answered, of course, by Mac from his post on the living room couch.

We couldn't stand it. We brought him inside, so he and Mac could continue their groaning and growling in comfort. It was a long night.

Next morning, of course Jim had to go to work or school or something, so Bob and I coped.

We tied good old Sam outside while we planned our strategy.

Pretty soon, we saw Cheryl come out her back door and call, "Hi, Sam!"

Wait a minute. How does she know his name?

We invited her over for a quick interview. Seems she knew Sam quite well, as he lived on the next block with a friend of Cheryl's.

Hmmm. We had just finished losing a whole night's sleep out of pity for a lost dog who lived only a few houses away.

We exchanged accusing glances.

And that is the story of how we acquired iron in our spines. Cheryl took Sam home and we have never, from that day to this, befriended another animal. Till now.

Into the Lion's den

Police officers from the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods will be going up against a basketball team made up of seven Detroit Lions in a fundraising basketball game to benefit FLEC (Family Life Education Council).

Officer Mike McCarthy said the line-up for the Lions' team has been announced for the Friday, April 22, game at South High at 7:30 p.m.

Starters will include quarterback, Chuck Long, Jeff Chadwick, Rob Rubick, Carl Bland, Steve Baack, Scott Barrows, Scott Williams and Carl Bernard.

McCarthy said the game promises to be outstanding family entertainment, and other games have proved to be a lot of fun.

Our own Rob Fulton, sports editor, will emcee the event.

More Lions

Members of the Grosse Pointe Woods Lions Club will be out on the streets Friday and Saturday, April 22-23, in observance of White Cane Week.

Henry Lorenz, of the Woods, is in charge of the white cane sale this year. Club members will be located at Vernier and Mack.

Proceeds from the sales will go toward the club's leader dog program.

Mock trial no tribulation

Congratulations are in order for the Grosse Pointe South Mock team that participated in the Michigan High School Mock Trial tournament held Saturday, April 16, at the University of Detroit.

South had the highest point total of any of the 35 schools and was first place winner of the event, according to Alan Saltzman, a professor of law at U of D.

Coach for the South team is Marjorie Dorman. More on this story next week.

Grosse Pointe public safety directors Richard Caretti and Bruce Kennedy both did very well in tournaments this past weekend.

Caretti, noted for his prowess on the racquetball court, won the championship in the Golden Masters Division of the Michigan Racquetball State Championship Tournament held in Davison.

That's Caretti's seventh consecutive state title.

Kennedy, who has won the National Handball Associations Supermasters title several times, got knocked out of the championship this year, but won the consolation tournament held in Grand Rapids, April 14-16.

Action teams report

Members of the 15 action teams working to develop plans as part of the Grosse Pointe schools new Strategic Planning efforts met Thursday and Friday, April 14-15, at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House. Action team representatives reported to members of the school administration. The action plans suggest how to implement long-range goals in a variety of areas in the system.

Society to award 3 historical plaques

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society will award plaques to three historic sites at its annual meeting tonight at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

The bronze plaques feature the historical society's logo, a windmill, and are designed to be mounted in a prominent place near the site. The windmill was erected some time before 1750 at the foot of Lakepointe in what is now Grosse Pointe Park. Early French settlers and native Indians in the area took their grain to the mill until about 1800.

The first site is a clapboard farmhouse at 200 Moross, Grosse Pointe Farms. The house was built around 1892 by the family of the wife of the present owner, Richard Debo. During Prohibition, the home was unknowingly rented to bootleggers. Two subsequent additions to the house are in harmony with its original design.

The second site is a Tudor-style home at 1018 Three Mile Drive, Grosse Pointe Park. It's an English Tudor typical of the '20s that was popular throughout the Pointes. Built by Clarence Day in 1927, the house was originally owned by W.D. McClintock. It features Pewabic-tiled bathrooms, leaded glass windows, and paneling hand-carved by Belgian woodcarvers who lived and worked in the home for two years.

The third site is the Cook schoolhouse at 20276 Mack, Grosse Pointe Woods. Built in 1890, the one-room school was named for Louis and Matilda Cook, and served the children of early Grosse Pointers such as the Brys, Beaufaits, Van-Antwerps and Cooks.

A new tower steeple, the crowning feature of St. James Lutheran Church on McMillan west of Kercheval, was being constructed.

The village of Grosse Pointe Park decided to establish a planning commission to formulate a master plan, including zoning, land use, land purchase, a master street plan, etc. It was to be established under a state act to give it powers and protection not possessed by the previous commission which dissolved after its members resigned because they felt they were getting nowhere. That group acted in an advisory capacity to the village commissioner and had no legal standing.

St. Paul High School received accreditation from the University of Michigan, indicating that the school met standard requirements and also that students who earned a B or better would be accepted by a college without having to take entrance exams.

Six cars parked at Lakeshore and Provençal were hit by a car headed west on Lakeshore whose driver was blinded by a spotlight from another car coming toward it. The parked car belonged to guests who were attending a large debut party at the Roy D. Chapin home.

Three police cars from St.

Clair Shores drove to Woods Municipal Park after receiving reports of a woman screaming in the park. They were joined by scout cars from the Woods and Shores. When the police officers got the gate open, they found that the screams were the dulcet tones of a group of singing Boy Scouts.

The watchman at the Horace Dodge estate reported a 1940 Mercury parked on the lawn and police towed it away. The driver who showed up later explained that he was attending a party at the Little Club and couldn't find a place to park. He was told not to park on the Dodge property again.

Correction

In last week's Pointer of Interest story about Ellen Zaccardelli, the person in the photo with Zaccardelli was incorrectly identified. She was Connie Johnson.

Resident's newest novel set in 1940s Detroit

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Tom Webber, precocious 17-year-old protagonist of T.R. Peters' newest novel, is the type of teenager who — when asked to name the three Bs of composers — replies, with a smart-alecky smirk, "Bizet, Berlioz and Bartok."

Peters once did the same thing in his fourth-grade music class.

Thomas Peters, of Grosse Pointe Farms, has just published his second novel, "Two Weeks in the Forties." Actually, the second novel consists of his first novel and its sequel. The first, "The Education of Tom Webber," takes place during three weeks of protagonist Tom's life in 1943. The sequel takes place during three weeks of Tom's life in 1946.

Even though protagonist and author share the same given name — even though protagonist and author are young, juicy adolescents during the World War II years — even though protagonist and author share a strict Catholic school background, Peters denies that his character is autobiographical.

"Tom Webber is not me," said Peters. "I'm fascinated by him, but I'm not like him."

Peters' first novel was published by a small press in 1977 and first printing of 4,000 copies soon sold out. "I determined that 239 million Americans DIDN'T read it, so I wrote a sequel and published both under the same cover."

Peters said he's always been a writer. He doesn't sit in an ivory tower, however, and hand down cryptic philosophical observations. He's out in the real world writing, teaching, observing and participating in real-life everyday experiences.

"I don't like writers who are detached," he said. "I have deliberately worked to gain more experiences to use in my writing. I taught in Detroit's inner city. I think the experience shows in my books."

Peters has written poetry, film scripts, promotional material for newspapers, plays, speeches, short stories and novels. He's taught high school and college-level English.

He is currently between writing projects. While teaching English part time at Macomb Community College, he's looking for the kernel of an idea for another book.

"Maybe this will turn out to be a trilogy. Maybe not," he said.

Peters is 58. He's been writing since he was 16 years old. He graduated from Hillsdale College and earned a master's degree at Wayne State University. Along the way, he had a few things published in school publications and literary magazines.

"I've had literary ambitions and drive all my life," he said.

Peters wrote a one-act play, "Mensa Meeting," which he produced and directed at the Southfield Hilton last May for an annual meeting of the Mensa Society, a group whose members have IQs in the top two percent of the general population.

Protagonist Tom Webber's adventures in the second novel take place in the 1940s, in a Detroit environment that is familiar to many — Belle Isle, Briggs Stadium, Grosse Pointe, Paradise Valley, the old Gotham Hotel. It also includes some real characters of the era: Father Solanus, Jack Kerouac, Horace Dodge Jr., Charlie Parker.

"One New York agent, who liked the book, said, 'This is the horniest kid ever!'" Peters said. He describes the book as a coming-of-age novel — a Bildungsroman — a story about a young protagonist's education and emergence into adulthood, like "The Catcher in the Rye."

Peters said he spends several years plotting, planning, researching and taking notes about ideas for his novels.

"Then I have to get everything written down on one piece of paper. It HAS be one page." Peters uses fine pen and a huge piece of paper. The final outline of plot and characters, he said, ends up looking like Egyptian hieroglyphics. But it's all in one piece and it's all written down.

The actual writing of the two novels was done quite differently, he said. "The first book was done by a poet writing a long narrative. It took six months to write. It wrote itself." Peters said he took a precocious, intelligent, resourceful, progressive 14-year-old, dropped him into a strict Catholic boys school where everyone tried to restrict him, then stood back to see what the kid would do. "The plot just happened," he said.

Peters said he wrote the second book more deliberately. "The sequel was written by a very calculating and ambitious novelist. I wrote to dramatize important themes. I set a goal to write three pages a day and I stuck to it. It took a year to write; another year to rewrite."

Peters deliberately drew a character with personality traits outlined by psychologist Abraham Maslow. "Tom Webber is an individual who is self-sufficient, independent, self-accepting, progressive, resourceful, motivated and daring — he's a self-actualized individual. He has accurate perceptions; he's detached, has few friends, has a strong ethical sense; he's a non-conformist. His negative traits are vanity, pride and a temperamental nature."

"I wrote every scene to exhibit these characteristics," Peters said. "Here's a kid who's on his own, trying to live a daring, courageous life. He's gifted and full of ideas. He loves living, but people are still trying to tamp down his flame."

Peters said the Great American Novel has already been written. It's "U.S.A." by John Dos Passos.

His favorite writers are Saul Bellow and John Updike. "As a stylist, I think Updike is the most interesting writer today."

For a long time I was hooked on the big three: Hemingway, Faulkner and Michener. My true hero is James Joyce."

A New York agent who read the book before publication advised Peters to do some rewriting. "He said, 'Here this kid is building up for a big moment with his girlfriend for hundreds of pages. When the moment finally arrives — you dismiss it in one paragraph.'"

"I dismissed it in one paragraph on purpose," Peters said. "It didn't need sex details."

The agent told me you can't do it that way in modern literature.

"So," said Peters, "I rewrote the scene into four pages. Actually, I wrote and rewrote and rewrote. Sex is one of the hardest things to write about."

"I've always wanted to be published, but it's a difficult process for two reasons: I'm striving for art, not popular entertainment; and I have no agent, no connections."

"The publishing process is long and arduous. First of all there's two kinds of correspondence writers get from New York publishers: the preprinted refusal to read; and the one-out-of-20 who say send the book."

"I can't evaluate my own work," Peters said. "I need others to read it and legitimize it." When "The Education of Tom Webber" came out in 1977, The Detroit News gave it a favorable review. "I expect good reviews for this one," Peters said. "My stuff is quality and it's local."

Surprisingly, many people don't realize that Michigan Lottery revenues help the state's public schools. The following addresses that issue.

Q: What happens to Lottery revenues?
A: Since 1981, revenues from all Michigan Lottery games have been earmarked for the state School Aid Fund to help support kindergarten-12th grade education.

Q: How much does the Lottery contribute?
A: To date, the Lottery has provided approximately $2.9 billion to the state! In the last fiscal year, the Lottery's contribution exceeded $407 million.

Q: Why haven't my taxes gone down as a result of the Lottery contribution?
A: The annual state budget for support of elementary and secondary education is continually increasing. So, while your taxes may not have decreased, maintaining the same level of education funding without Lottery revenues during the past two years alone would have cost the average Michigan household another $250 more in the form of direct taxes.

Q: Does the Lottery provide this money to the individual schools?
A: No. Lottery revenues are turned over to the Michigan Department of Education for distribution to individual school districts according to terms of the School Aid Formula developed by the legislature. Thus, the Lottery has no control over, or exact knowledge of, how its contribution might figure in allocations to individual school districts.

Q: On what does the Department of Education base its allocation of these dollars?
A: According to the department, allocation of the School Aid Fund is based on local support for education. School districts which have a high local tax base are considered to be "out of formula" and receive a lesser share of funding than districts with lower tax bases. So aid per pupil and per school varies throughout the state.

Q: Who should I contact if I want more information on my school's share of the fund?
A: For more information on your area, you can contact your local school board office or write to the Michigan State Board of Education, 608 W. Allegan, P.O. Box 30008, Lansing, MI 48909.

For submitting the question leading to this column, 50 tickets for the current instant game, "Cash Explosion," have been sent to Dorothy Cull of East Tawas.

Straddle Structure team members include Sharrow, Adam Bramlage, Christoff Heinen, Michele Scarborough, Ann Richard, Justin Miller and Jeff Winokur.

"I like doing this because the last time we had fun," Scarborough, 8, said. "If you win, you can feel proud and you get to go to new places."

Not only must the team design and build the structure, they must develop and act out a non-verbal skit, which culminates in applying weights atop the homemade structure until it collapses.

The students can only spend $25 on the entire project. Items, such as a coat rack which they pick up from someone's home, must be assigned a value comparable to what one would pay for it at a rummage sale.

Sharrow says one of the secrets to building a strong structure is weighing each piece of three-foot-long balsa wood.

"We have some pieces that weigh three grams and some that weigh just under one gram," Sharrow said.

By knowing that some pieces of the wood have a greater density than others, the small builders can choose each piece based on where it would be located in the structure.

Defer students working on a skit for their Odyssey of the Mind project include Michelle Scarborough, at the left, Anne Richard, Christoff Heinen and Adam Bramlage.

Winners at the state level competition will advance to the world contest. Teams from Canada, and this year a team from China, are expected at the world competition to be held later this year near Washington, D.C.

Commerce plans 50th

Commerce High school, classes of January and June 1938, plan a 50th reunion Sunday, May 22. The event will be a brunch at Kingsley Inn, 1475 N. Woodward, Bloomfield Hills.

For reservations, call Virginia Pinto Watkins at 245-1883.

Grace United likes being 'friendly little church'

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

This is the ninth in an occasional series about Grosse Pointe churches.

It's a friendly little church, Adele Sturgeon said, when she talked about Grace United Church of Christ. She even wrote a song about the church and "It's a friendly little church" is part of the chorus.

The compact stone building with a bell tower and bright stained glass windows sits neatly on the corner of Lakepointe and Kercheval, in the Park. Its name has been changed three times. It's sometimes referred to as Grace Church, it's sometimes called U.C.C., but it's been a part of that corner for 64 years.

Sturgeon has been involved in the life of Grace Church since she was born. Her mother was a charter member. Sturgeon is historian and editor of the church newsletter in addition to being actively involved in most of the church's activities.

The Rev. Harvey Reh, pastor for the last two years, said in the '50s, church membership was probably twice what it is today, which still isn't large.

"We currently have 121 members, which represents about 70 families," he said. "Membership is falling."

Both Reh and Sturgeon see a trend, however, of younger families moving into the neighborhood. "I'd like to bring in more young people," Reh said.

Grace Church was once a popular spot for teenage activities.

In 1964, the Neighborhood Club began using church facilities for teenage activities, and at one time teen gatherings were regularly scheduled five days each week, with the highlight being a Saturday night Teen Drop In. The basement of the church was the base for social activities for more than 250 local teenagers and was popularly known as The Cellar.

Grace Church was conceived on Oct. 17, 1924, when a small group of neighbors from St. John's Evangelical Church on Gratiot and Russell, in Detroit, met at a neighbor's home and decided to form a new church closer to their homes. The first members met for a while in a store on Eastlawn, but soon obtained a loan to buy the corner lot on Lakepointe and Kercheval. A tiny white frame chapel was completed in June 1925.

As the congregation grew, the name changed, because of denominational mergers, from Grace Evangelical Church to Grace Evangelical and Reformed Church to Grace United Church of Christ.

The Rev. Harvey Reh of Christ.

In 1927, the enlarging congregation purchased an additional portion of land next to the frame chapel. The early '30s were fundraising years, as the group saw the necessity for building a larger church building. On Oct. 11, 1936, the new stone building was dedicated, and the old frame chapel became a base for Sunday School activities. A covered passageway was built to connect the two separate buildings.

By 1951, membership was so large that two Sunday services were necessary. By 1953, the congregation began saving for an addition to the building. The Education and Fellowship Building was completed in 1956 and the little frame chapel was sold for $100.

In spite of its relatively small membership, Grace Church is a strong neighborhood presence, Grace Church's Educational Building, an addition to the stone chapel, was dedicated in 1956.

according to Reh. About 50 percent of its members live nearby, within walking distance. The church is an active member of Kercheval in the Park, a business and professional association that started in 1968. The church actively supports PIFU projects, Crossroads and the Food and Fellowship program at Faith Lutheran Church.

"We try to do one program a month in the community," he said. "Coming up in April is a play, 'Luther,' and in August we're trying to get a TV personality to help with an awareness program for parents and children about drugs and child abuse. We have films, speakers, a fall bake sale, a fair. The building is used by a nursery school for community youngsters."

According to Sturgeon, the senior citizens group, Amazing Grace Seniors, is one of the strong points of the church.

"Many of the seniors are community people," said Reh. "It's an ecumenical group. They meet once a week and take day trips, like tours of other churches. They play cards, have a meal, celebrate birthdays."

Amazing Grace Seniors has about 100 members and usually attracts about 33 participants each week. Six of their members are over age 90.

Grace Church is also proud of its Thrift Shop, which has been operating for more than 20 years. It's open every Tuesday. Profits were more than $7,000 last year from the sale of donated items. The unsold items are given away to needy people.

According to Reh, the church is also unique because of its tape ministry. "We have a video camera, with audio as well as visual," he said. "We tape prominent events: concerts, Sunday services, Balloon Sunday, and so on." Those who are unable to attend services because of illness or age can borrow the VCR tape for viewing at home.

Interlock device gives courts tool to deal with drunk drivers

By Peter A. Sallnas
Staff Writer

A good way to keep a drunk driver off the road is to take away his keys, but technology and the law have come up with the next best thing — take away his car.

Ignition interlock devices have been used by the courts in Michigan for about one year. These devices are actually breathalyzers that check the alcohol level of the driver, and can electronically prevent a vehicle from starting up.

Judges in southeastern Michigan usually allow a convicted drunk driver the use of such a device if he can pay for leasing one, if he has shown that he could be trusted and if he needs his vehicle to get to work to support a family.

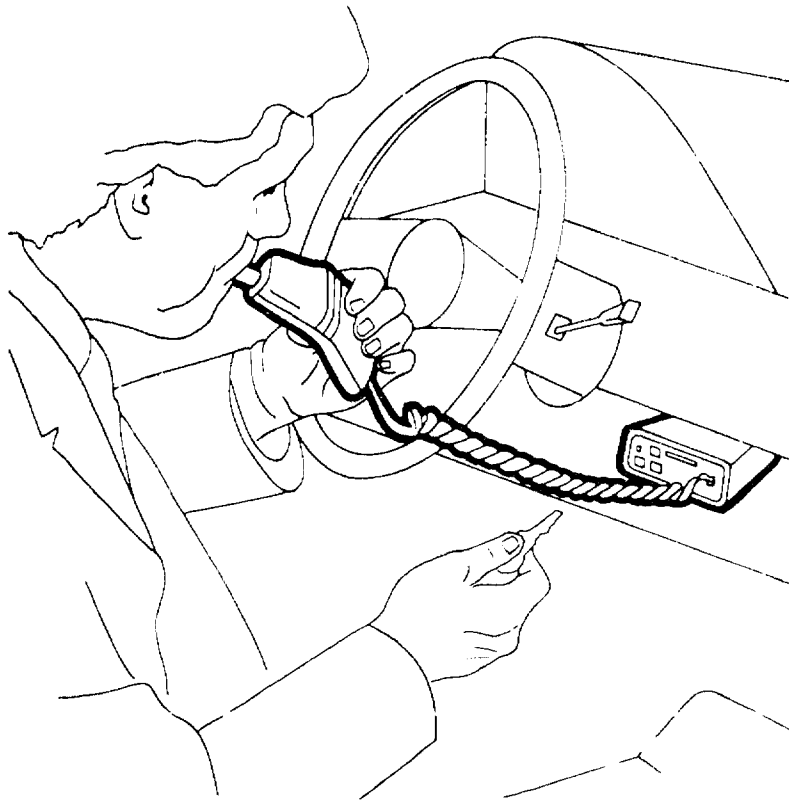

The sophisticated device is currently being supplied by only one Denver, Colo. company, Guardian Interlock Systems, Inc. With offices in Jackson and Livonia, the company is providing Michigan courts with an alternative tool for meting out punishment.

Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Robert J. Colombo Jr., said he ordered three or four defendants to install the device.

Colombo, a City resident, said when he uses the alternative, it is not for a first-time offender.

"I am looking for a good recommendation from an alcohol rehabilitation agency," he said. "It must be someone who presents a good risk."

Colombo said those having their driver's license revoked by the secretary of state or ordered revoked by a district court must come to circuit court to have a restricted license.

"This type of system provides some additional insurance for me so that the driver will not get behind the wheel while drunk," Colombo said.

Denise Creger, probation officer for the 32-A District Court in Harper Woods, said she has one client who has the device on his car now, and another one to have one installed in early May.

"The way in which we are currently using the device is for the third- and fourth-offense drunk driver," she said. "Normally their license would be suspended for one year without restrictions. Now we are offering them the option of a six-month revocation, then one year with the interlock device." Often, though a court has offered a defendant a restricted license, the secretary of state says it wants the defendant's license revoked without restrictions.

"In my opinion, this is something they can offer to the secretary of state to keep their license," Creger said.

Creger, who has examined the system, said there are some built-in safeguards to prevent abusing or tampering with the system.

"The devices can be calibrated to .02 or .05 percent alcohol levels," she said. "We have them set to .02 (.08 is considered impaired and .10 is considered legally intoxicated)." When the device detects a trace of alcohol, it remembers. To prevent drinking from continuing in the car, it will tell the driver to pull over and be tested again. If the driver refuses after 15 minutes or so, the car horn begins to blare and will not stop until the driver has successfully passed the test.

The device does not simply record one breath sample. To make it a little tougher (and harder to perform if intoxicated) a pattern of breaths must be blown into the device. If the pattern isn't followed, the car will not start.

The other way to beat the system is to have someone who hasn't been drinking blow into the device. Columbo said that the pattern isn't always that easy to follow. He had one defendant who had a very difficult time learning the pattern while sober.

In an effort to standardize the calibration of these devices, certify acceptable models and to record the restriction in the secretary of state's computer network, laws had to be passed. These new laws governing the interlock devices took effect April 4.

The law also requires that a label be affixed to each instrument that warns it is a misdemeanor for anyone other than the restricted driver to blow into the mouthpiece. If convicted, the offender faces up to a $5,000 fine and/or six months in jail.

Cost for leasing the devices is about $540 for six months. This must be paid in full by the offender whose only other option is to surrender his or her license.

Creger said Guardian Interlock has developed a program in which it will provide money to a court system once a minimum number of the systems are in use. This money would be used for needy workers, who otherwise could not afford the system, and would lose their jobs because they needed their car for work.

"This way we are not discriminating against the poorer offenders," Creger said.

Local law enforcement officials are supportive of the new device.

"We are all aware of the hazard drunk drivers create on our highways," said Park Public Safety Director Richard Caretti. "Any way we are able to curb the number of drunk drivers on the road, I'm all in favor of."

Caretti said there will always be those who try to beat a system, but if a person killed someone after a friend blew into the machine, the friend could be named in a civil lawsuit were his identity to become known.

"Thinking people would never do something like that," Caretti said. "This is the perfect out for half of the fatal accidents that occur are the result of drunk drivers, and a program like this might help.

Patterson said that it will be good for law enforcement agencies to have the information about the restriction on the LEIN (Law Enforcement Information Network).

Cost for leasing the device is about $540 for six months. This must be paid in full by the offender whose only other option is to surrender his or her license.

"It is critical for us to have that information," Patterson said. "It will help the officer who knows that this guy is not driving the car he is supposed to be or that he has purchased another car."

"Our court would like that information too, probably more than us, in making a determination about punishment for the driver who is in violation of his probation."

The secretary of state office expects that two or three competitive interlock devices will be certified and available this month. However, interlock restricts are already being posted to the offender's driving record where ordered by the court.

Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Kay Tertzag, who has ordered three or four of these interlock devices in the past year, said he hasn't seen enough data to make a determination as to whether these devices are or will be effective.

"I don't have a specific criterion I use," Tertzag said. "I take each case as I see it."

He said that he is an advocate of the system, in that it gives the court another tool in which to combat drunk driving.

To make it a little tougher, a pattern of breaths must be blown into the device. If the pattern isn't followed, the car will not start.

the friend who tried to take away someone's car keys, but was unsuccessful. They may have not been able to get the keys, but they definitely don't have to blow into the device."

Shores Public Safety Director Daniel Healy said he felt this is an excellent idea.

"The main thrust of (alcohol) enforcement is to keep drunk people off the road," Healy said. "It is a step forward in ensuring people don't get on the street if they've been drinking."

Woods Public Safety Director Jack Patterson said that about

Volunteers give thousands of hours to local hospitals

Grosse Pointer Dorothy Davis met Bob Keeshan (Captain Kangaroo) while she was volunteering one day at Bon Secours.

"He was in for surgery. He got bags and bags of mail from kids," she said.

David Aley, 18, of Grosse Pointe Woods, said while he was volunteering at St. John Hospital at the beginning of the year with Bill Power, 17, of Grosse Pointe Farms, they tried to deliver the morning newspaper to an unusual patient.

"The patient was being held for armed robbery," Aley said. "He had two police guards. The police jumped on us and grabbed us. We gave them the newspaper."

Nanette Quinones, of Grosse Pointe Woods, got locked in Cottage Hospital's psychiatric ward while she was volunteering. In retrospect, she said, the incident is amusing.

"We were putting up Christmas decorations and we were really grubby and dirty. The guard wouldn't let me out because he didn't believe I was a volunteer," she said. "I guess I got a little excited. A prominent Grosse Pointe doctor, who I knew very well, came around the corner, and when I asked him to tell the guard who I was, he pretended he didn't know me." She laughed. "For a while."

National Volunteer Week, April 17 through 23, is devoted to honoring the nation's volunteers for their unselfish service to others.

According to the Volunteer Network of Metropolitan Detroit, Inc., more than 1.6 million people in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties serve as volunteers for Michael McQuerry, David Aley and Bill Power deliver flowers to patients at Cottage Hospital, as part of their Wednesday morning volunteer duties. The boys are seniors at University of Detroit High School.

Why does she do it?

"I just feel good," said Davis. "It's nice to get out one day a week to do something that's not for myself. I like the girls I work with."

Davis sorts and delivers patients' mail, escorts incoming patients to their rooms, to labs and X-ray appointments, delivers flowers, and helps transport patients when they are ready for discharge.

She remembers when Bon Secours was small — 120 beds and 40 nuns. Back then, she said, volunteers were allowed to do more. They could feed patients and deliver lab samples.

"I remember once a very elegant man insisted on carrying his own suitcase up to sort of community service is a graduation requirement at U of D. They chose St. John Hospital.

"Everyone asks us why we're not in school," they said, "but we have Wednesday mornings off in order to work here."

The four work together or in pairs — mostly in rehab services, Kuskowski said. They transport patients to audiology, physical therapy and occupational therapy. They deliver flowers. They work in the outpatient surgery section delivering lab reports, X-rays and newspapers. They run errands.

"We're needed most for patient transport. Patients have to be in wheelchairs," said Power. "We also do errands for different departments."

Fisher said he likes the maternity section best. "We like to watch the babies. We make faces at the babies and just watch them until we get kicked out."

They also assist in pediatrics by playing games with the children.

McQuerry said he'd like to become a doctor — a pediatrician or a surgeon. His mother is a nurse at St. John. "I'm learning a lot here. This (volunteer job) was the deciding factor in pushing me toward medicine."

Kuskowski said the four boys are valuable assets to St. John's 400 to 450 pool of volunteers. "They're good kids. Polite. Punctual. Helpful. Well-mannered. It's a good program for them. They learn about hospitals, about human nature, about how to care for people. It's hands-on experience."

"If these boys are an indication of the future generation," she said, "we're in good hands."

more than 800 human service organizations every single week.

Forty-nine percent of these volunteers also hold full-time jobs.

Volunteerism is apparently alive and thriving.

Three hospitals in Grosse Pointe and nearby Detroit benefit from the unpaid assistance of more than 1,300 people — men, women and teenagers. At Bon Secours alone, volunteers put in an estimated 78,000 hours last year, according to Gail King, director of volunteer services.

Grosse Pointe resident Al Yaklin, 79, has been a volunteer at Bon Secours for 11 years. He also remembers the 1930s, when Bon Secours was a small, white frame building, facing Cadieux.

Yaklin started working for the City's fire department in 1931 and he retired as its chief in 1960.

He had a heart attack and a bypass operation in 1977 and spent a few days in Bon Secours during his recovery. He said he decided, while he was there, that he'd like to volunteer his services when he was well enough. Now he works every Thursday afternoon from 1 to 5:30 at the information desk.

"I give directions. I greet people with a smile. Answer questions. Answer phones. I give patients' conditions."

He added, with a smile, "I always give the ladies a compliment. They like that."

At Cottage Hospital, Jeanette Schopbach, of the Farms, is into her 33rd year of volunteering one half-day a week. A former nurse, she enjoys working directly with patients. "In the old days we delivered trays and helped feed patients."

as he goes to X-ray, the lab, and to specific diagnostic areas such as EKG, pulmonary testing, audio and stress tests, and whatever else.

Nanette Quinones has been working as a Cottage Hospital volunteer for 25 years. She grew up in Grosse Pointe. "Cottage was just 'there.' It was a natural place to volunteer," she said.

She has done a bit of everything — she pushed the book cart, moved patients around in wheelchairs, worked on fundraising.

"I like to organize things. I particularly like the challenge of doing something like raising money. I'm a natural beggar."

She said she has held every office in Cottage Hospital's Auxiliary, including president. "But my favorite is what I'm doing today: Ways and Means — raising money."

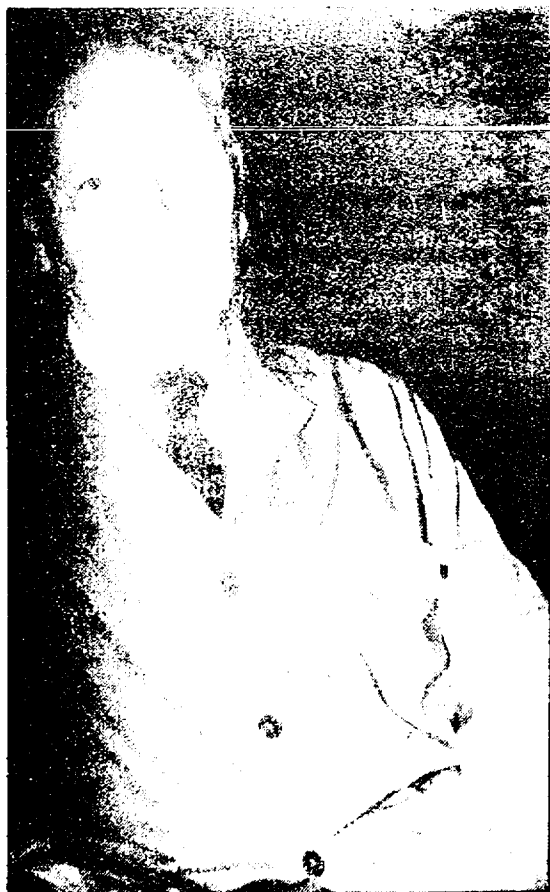

In addition to lending her expertise to fundraising, Quinones works every Thursday morning from 7:15 until noon in the surgical lounge, helping with communication among the patients in surgery, their families and their doctors. She's also involved in the organization and supervision of the redecoration of the surgical lounge, which she said will be completed in June.

Every Wednesday morning, four seniors from University of Detroit High School present themselves — bright-eyed, enthusiastic, and ready to work — before Christine Kuskowski, director of volunteer services at St. John Hospital.

Bill Power and David Aley, along with their classmates Christopher Fisher III, 18, of Grosse Pointe Farms, and Michael McQuerry, 17, of Detroit, said they really look forward to Wednesday mornings. Some Ensemble members of Theatre Grottesco don masks for a scene in "Fortune," scheduled to be performed Friday and Saturday, April 29-30, at University Liggett School.

'Fortune' comes to Grosse Pointe

Theatre Grottesco, the award-winning international theater ensemble, will perform "Fortune," its newest play, at University Liggett School, 1045 Cook Road, Friday and Saturday, April 29-30, at 8 p.m.

"Fortune" is the story of the rise and fall of a small fortune cookie factory, and is created and performed by ensemble members from various countries throughout the world.

Incorporating classic European and modern American styles, "Fortune" is a modern melodrama, highlighting the beauty and comedy, the absurdity and tragedy of everyday life in America. It challenges the "greed is good" mentality of the '80s.

In the beginning, the factory is at work, steady and average, five workers including the boss, working as a family. The cookies never change. The messages are uninspired.

One day a writer seeking a job is hired — a failure who could never write a novel or short story — who becomes the brilliant producer of the single line. The factory's fortunes grow and the old rhythms are broken.

Questions of wealth, distribution and avarice must be confronted. There is mistrust and as the cycle continues, each worker is isolated and stuck in a pattern of uncertainty.

"Fortune" is physical ensemble theater. Without the use of sets, the factory is created over and over again by the actors.

With a few props, they become the factory, the machines.

Lighting designers call it dance. Stylistically it's European melodrama overlaid with commedia dell'arte, Greek tragedy, expressionism, dance theater, performance art and new vaudeville. "Fortune" is an entirely new form of theater for American audiences.

With a theme of "every man for himself," "Fortune" is the first in a series of original Grottesco productions created in America, specifically about America and the new age. "Fortune" is created and performed by ensemble members from Switzerland, England, Scotland, Poland, Spain and the United States, who have toured on both sides of the Iron Curtain and the Atlantic.

Theatre Grottesco was formed in Paris in 1983. In 1985, the company began a search for an American city to base itself — to create plays in the United States, perform locally as well as nationally and internationally and conduct workshops. The group settled in Detroit in November 1987.

Grottesco, in Italian, is a whimsical, humorous word meaning fantastic, ridiculous, absurd, outrageous.

Tickets are $10; $7.50 for senior citizens, students and children under 12. Call 423-6666 to charge tickets by phone or 554-1463 for reservations or information.

'Show Boat' at Macomb Center

Three performances of "Show Boat," compose Jerome Kern's masterpiece Broadway musical known for its hit songs like "Ol' Man River." "Only Make Believe" and "Why Do I Love You," will be presented in May by a touring theater company at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts.

Staged by a road company of 50 professional singers, dancers and musicians, the first show will be at 7 p.m. Sunday, May 1, followed by performances at 8 p.m. on Monday, May 2, and Tuesday, May 3.

When it opened on Broadway in 1927, "Show Boat" was credited with ushering in a dramatic new art form that was to have a profound and lasting effect on the musical stage — the complete integration of plot, music, comedy and dance.

Tickets are $17 for adults and $15.25 for students and senior citizens. They may be obtained at the center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222 Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The center is located on the Center Campus of Macomb Community College at Hall and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

Scouts to serve spaghetti

Boy Scout Troop 1407 will serve its annual spaghetti dinner Sunday, April 24, at St. Margaret's Church gym, 13 Mile and Little Mack, St. Clair Shores, from 1 to 6 p.m.

Admission is $3.50 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens. Children under 5 are free.

Cinema League

The Grosse Pointe Cinema League will meet Monday, April 25, at 8 p.m. at the War Memorial.

Photographer Steve Spilos will present his latest 35mm slides, "Bonjour, Quebec, Bonjour."

Quebec is a walled city with European architecture and many interesting places, including the pilgrimage shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre. Included among the sights are the parks, the board walk along the St. Lawrence River, and the Plains of Abraham, where a famous battle was fought.

The public is invited to attend. There is a charge of $2 for non-members, plus 50 cents for the social hour that follows.

Tickets for the May 16 banquet are now available at the War Memorial office for $12.25.

Spring musical

The Lanterns singing group, directed by Frank Conti, will present a 10th anniversary spring musical Friday and Saturday, April 22-23, at 7:30 p.m. at South Lake High School, 21900 Nine Mile Road in St. Clair Shores.

Maire Fair will have jungle theme

Maire Elementary School's "Jungle Adventure 88," a fundraiser for the school that takes place every three years, will be held Friday and Saturday, April 29 and 30, at the school.

The fundraiser will attempt to raise $25,000 for the renovation of the school library, with the major source of revenue to be generated through an auction.

A silent auction will be held Friday from 7 to 8:30 p.m. and the preview to start at 5 p.m. There will be gift certificates, dinners, decorative accessories for the home, plants, baskets, lamps, wine, toys, jewelry and articles of clothing.

Some of the more interesting items for auction will include a fur coat, two antique rocking chairs, a child's gas powered grand prix car, a Toronto week end with train transportation and family portraits.

One of the unique events of the evening will be AT&T providing free three-minute direct-dial phone calls to anywhere in the world.

Jungle Adventure 88 runs from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, April 30. Pony rides, a critter room with live animals for petting, movies, a clown patrol dispensing free candy and balloon animals are some of the activities planned.

Most games will cost 25 cents. Food and refreshments will be available in the Tarzan Tavern.

Be sure to safari on over to Maire School Friday and Saturday, April 29 and 30, for Jungle Adventure 88. Money raised from an auction and the fair will go toward renovating the school's library. Preparing some of the auction items are, from left, Abby Scott, James Missant and Jed Scott.

300 students prepare for fine arts festival

Three hundred students from nine public elementary schools will participate in the Grosse Pointe school system's annual Fine Arts Festival Saturday, April 23, from 9 a.m. to noon, at Trombly Elementary School, 820 Beaconsfield, Grosse Pointe Park. The theme of this year's festival is "Arts - The Language of Life."

Each student will have the opportunity to participate in two of 20 workshops offered. Choices include Sports Broadcasting, Choreography, Paper Making, Sign Language, Theatre, Dance, Stage Makeup, Portrait Painting, and Computer Drawing. Most of the instructors are Grosse Pointe teachers of fine arts; four are from the Marygrove College Fine Arts Program.

Students will also be treated to performances by the Grosse Pointe North Concert Choir, under the direction of Ben Walker, and by folk artist Nubia Safia Tsekani of the Black Folk Arts Collective. A certificate of participation will be issued to all students in attendance.

The 1988 Fine Arts Festival was organized by James Cooper, principal of Poupard School; Dr. Alfrida Frost, director of elementary curriculum for the Grosse Pointe Public Schools; Paula Miriani, art teacher at Monteith School and Barnard Center; Barbara Dourjalian, chairwoman of the Grosse Pointe Public Schools' Music Department; Sheila Joyce, principal of Trombly School; and Erv Walter, physical education teacher at Ferry and Trombly schools.

Spanish studies

Joshua Montgomery, son of Mike and Rhonda Montgomery of Grosse Pointe, will attend the Concordia

Montgomery

Spanish Language Village for two weeks this summer near Benidji, Minn.

Sponsored by Concordia College, the villages are informal experience-based programs that introduce young people to foreign languages and cultures. There are nine villages - Chinese, Russian, French, German, Spanish, Norwegian, Swedish, Finnish and Danish.

Dedicated to world peace and understanding, the program was begun in 1961.

Student Spotlight

Eric Dillaman, Tim Maun

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

Eric Dillaman and Tim Maun, third graders at Richard School, wrote the following story. They are the sons of John and Kathy Dillaman and Michael and Alice Maun, both of the City.

Al the Alien

It was the dead of night. Tom the astronomer heard a distant explosion. Suddenly a huge shuttle burst through the atmosphere. Tom ran to his telescope. He saw the shuttle crash with a bang. It landed outside the building. He quickly went outside. He found a thing curled up in a ball. What he found was an alien. He freaked! When he came to his senses, it was gone. Tom never knew where it went.

Twenty-five years later the shuttle Atlantis blasted off to Mars. A month later, it came back with Al himself. The Richard School P.A.C.E. program asked NASA for Al to come to their school. They got him. Eric D. and Tim M. asked Mrs. Heitman to have him for their project, and they got him!

That's the story of how Al came to be.

Fantastic Facts

1. Al eats cold gingerus plants, hot boicentalee tubes and golin-koo insects.
2. Al drinks juice from the scalectapee trees and fininnus blood.
3. Al lives in the hollow trunks of the linsapoluss tree.
4. Al gets around by slithering like a slimy snail.
5. When Al senses danger, he metamorphizes into a huge beast. Now the attacker senses danger!
6. Al's color is black with green spots.

Seniors invited to Lansing

This year's Senior Power Day April 27 will bring more than 6,000 people to Lansing once again for the state's largest advocacy gathering of older adults. Issues of concern in areas of housing, health care, employment, transportation and state and federal support for aging programs will be presented to the governor and legislature with emphasis on improving the quality of life for all of Michigan's older adults.

All senior citizens are encouraged to participate. Group advocacy is a viable tool in getting the serious attention that is needed to influence legislation at state and national levels. The Michigan Transportation Package is an example of successful advocacy. The state's lawmakers responded to request that had been a part of the Senior Power Day platform for several years.

Activities begin with a public hearing at 8:30 a.m. where seniors can present testimony to those hosting the hearing: the State Commission on Services to the Aging, the Joint Committee on Aging, chairpersons of the Senate and House Senior Citizens Committees and the Michigan Congressional delegation. The hearing also presents an opportunity for individuals to listen and increase their awareness of aging concerns.

Popular consumer advocate Dr. Arthur Flemming will present the keynote address. A consumer fair, special award presentations and the opportunity to observe the Michigan Legislature in session and tour the Capitol are all special events of Senior Power Day.

He was a graduate of Wiley College, in Texas, and the University of Michigan.

He worked for Highland Park Community High School since 1967. He had also worked as a social worker with the Wayne County Bureau of Social Aid, as a mathematics instructor at Prairie View A&M University in Texas, as director of community services for the Grand Rapids Urban League and as dean of students at Dillard University in New Orleans.

Mr. Johnson, an avid bridge player, was past president of the Detroit Bridge Unit and belonged to several bridge clubs.

Also a music lover, he was former minister of music at First Community AME Church in Grand Rapids, former member and soloist at Scott United Methodist Church, and a member and soloist of the Central United Methodist Church. He was past president of the Detroit Muscians Association. He was also a member of the Grand Rapids Civic Theatre Players and was listed in Who's Who in the Midwest in 1965.

His fascination with construction began early — about 14

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

It isn't common that at the tender age of 16 a young man knows what he wants to do with the rest of his life.

But Jeff Black is not common. He has owned businesses of various sorts since he was 15, and his Rembrandt Construction — which he has owned since 1980, one year before he graduated from Grosse Pointe North — is about to move to new and bigger offices. Black, now 25, says business has doubled over the past couple years.

And it all comes through word-of-mouth advertising from satisfied customers, he said.

"We get jobs on our reputation and from people who recommend us to others," he said.

His fascination for construction began at an early age, and he finished a friend's basement when he was just 14.

He had his own lawn service at 15, and he hired older boys — because they could drive — to the jobs. But his real love was building.

His first "big" job was when he was 17. He made $850. "I thought it was gold, I loved it," he said.

While in high school he took an industrial co-op class, which he believes helped form his ideas. He credits co-op teacher Dean Balcirak with helping nurture his hidden talents.

"He was a lot of help," Black said. "He saw a guy with an opportunity to do something good and he pushed." That encouragement, coupled with Black's hard work earned him the Co-op Industrial Student of the Year award.

"Co-op gave me the opportunity to start a business," he said. "At my age most people were learning how to run their own business — I was doing it."

He passed the builder's certification test and became a licensed builder before he graduated from high school.

"That meant more to me than my diploma," he said.

One of his first jobs proved the old adage that what goes around, comes around.

When he did his first big job — a dormer on a house in the neighborhood — the homeowner decided to give Black a break because he was so young. It turns out that the customer opened his own business when he was 14, and he remembered what it was like to get started. The customer's only criterion was that someday, if Black was approached by a young entrepreneur, Black would help him along.

"God works in mysterious ways," he said.

From that lucky start, things really got started for Black.

Word-of-mouth advertising has spread his reputation for quality and now he has a backlog of jobs waiting for his attention. He attended classes at Macomb Community College for two years, but quit because he had too much business to devote time to his classes. He says he's proof that college isn't for everybody.

He is now in partnership in the business with his brother, Earl.

His work has included dormers, additions, saunas, decks and kitchens. They are now doing mini-malls, strip shops, a 48,000-square-foot commercial building, custom homes and other projects.

But one of the most exciting projects the company is involved with is the building of a $400,000 home for the Michigan Builder's Association's Home-A-Rama in Oakland County.

The show gives contractors a forum to show what they can do. All participants are required to put forth a plan for a house which is reviewed by a committee. Then contractors are offered an invitation to buy the land and erect that house. All the houses are built by different contractors and are available for sale. Some 100,000 people are expected to tour the houses when they are open to the public in late June.

"We're really excited about it," Black said. "This is a real opportunity to strut our stuff, so to speak, and we're doing it right."

The three-story house is going to be a total Grosse Pointe project, because the furnishings for the weekend will be provided by D.J. Kennedy of Kennedy and Co., and the landscaping will be done by Burns Landscaping, owned by Grosse Pointe resident Jim Burns.

Black credits three things with his success: God, his dedication and ability to run a business, and the people who were willing to give "this young kid" a chance.

"Without them, we wouldn't have the business we do today," he said. "That's not to say we haven't had our problems," he said, "but you can't please all the people all the time."

"I wouldn't want people to think I got here without a lot of sweat equity, but all the people who helped me along the way deserve part of the credit," he said.

He says that now, since the company has a reputation for building quality construction above code, his age is a negligible factor in whether Rembrandt gets a contract.

"Sure, some people won't hire us because I'm so young, but other people have hired us because I am young, so it evens out," he said.

He has his sights set on moving to his new offices soon, and on completing the showhouse for Home-A-Rama — and he's looking for bigger and better things in the future.

Van Memorial Regatta," June 26; the international tug-of-war across the Detroit River; and the largest fireworks display in North America, among other highlights.

The 30th annual International Freedom Festival is expected to draw approximately three million people to more than 100 events that celebrate the United States Independence Day observance on July 4 and Canada Day, commemorating the creation of the Dominion on July 1, 1867.

Showing off . . .

Brian Killian and Richard Davies of Birmingham put together a Show House room.

... the 1988 Designers' Show House is what the Junior League of Detroit will do beginning Sunday, May 1, when the completely decorated home of Cynthia and Peter Ruffner at 315 Washington Road in Grosse Pointe opens for public tours.

This unique English Renaissance house was built for Detroit News heir Ralph Harmon Booth in 1924 and been maintained over the years for its significant historic value to the Detroit community.

The home's features include: carved stone surrounds from the studio of Count Franco Artemis in Madia, Italy; a 16th century fireplace and mantle in the Great Room from Hamilton Place in Scotland; a William and Mary paneling and fire surround dating to 1695 from Standish Hall in Lancashire, England; marble fireplaces in the guest rooms which were reportedly commissioned from Robert Adam by Lord Wingworth for Wingworth Hall in England; Pewabic tiles from the Horace Dodge estate Rose Terrace.

On this page is evidence that some fast and furious work is being done to transform the house into a decorator's delight for the public tours, which will continue through May 30 daily except Mondays; the house will remain open on Memorial Day. Tickets are $6 and may be obtained in advance by mailing a check and self-addressed envelope to: The Junior League of Detroit, DSH, 32 Lakeshore Road, Grosse Pointe, 48236; from JLD members; or on April 29 and 30 from noon to 5 p.m. in the lobby of the Junior League office (carriage house of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial).

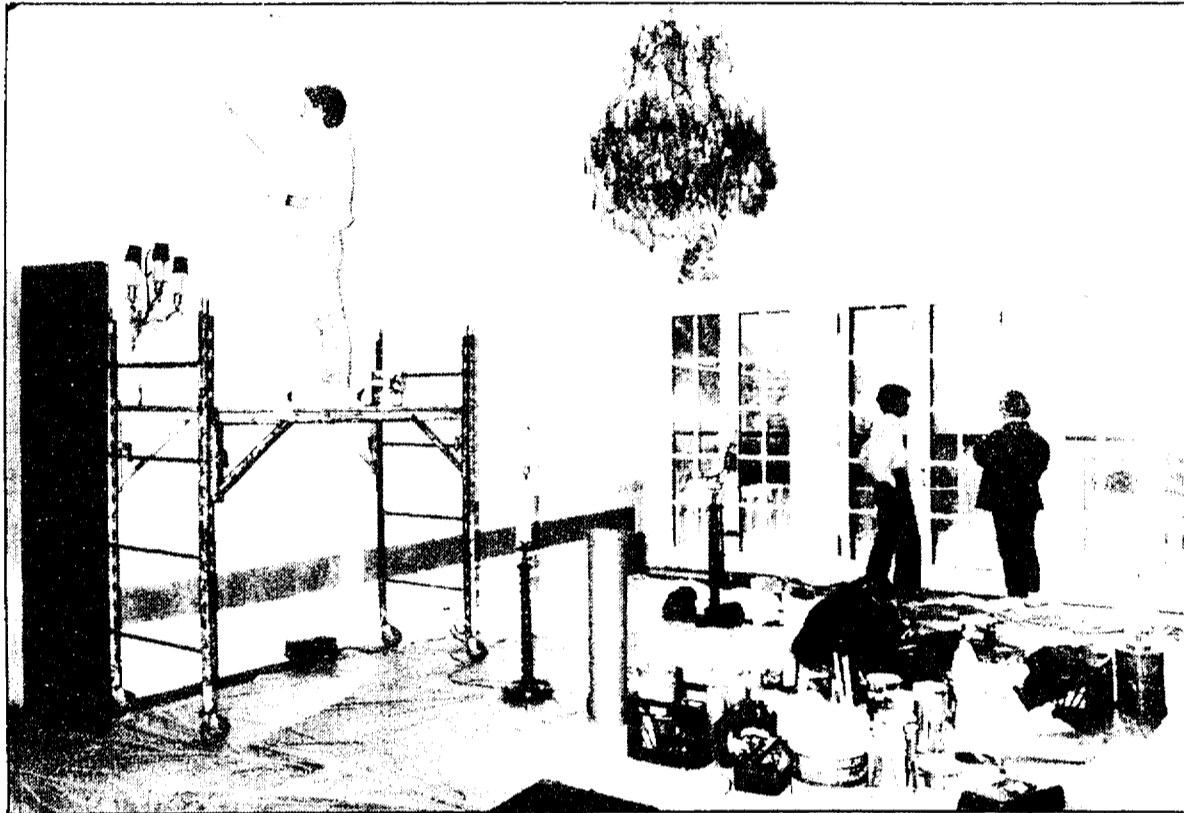

Craig Miller of Fraser and Tim Warnecke of East Detroit help decorate a room fit for a teenage boy in one of the upstairs bedrooms of the Show House.

Show House co-chairman Terri Berschback of Grosse Pointe Park has a bird's-eye view — amid the dust — of the work currently under way at the Show House.

Mike Pawlowske of Southfield mans the paintbrush while Jan Dunn of Grosse Pointe Farms and Pat Gast of Grosse Pointe Woods take care of the detail work in the house's "morning room."

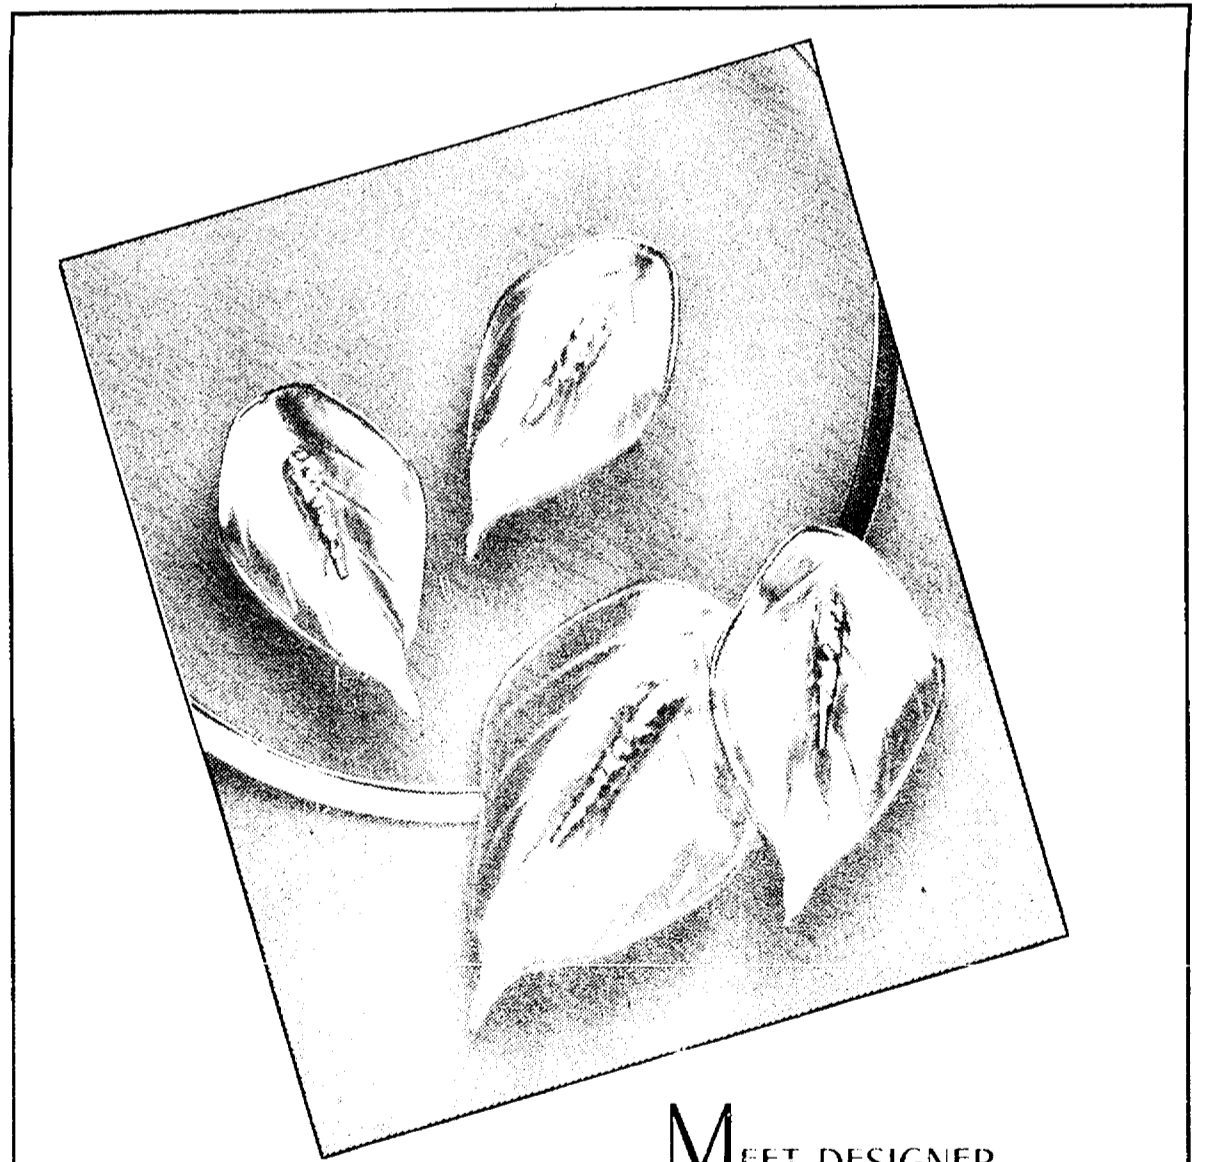

Detroit's Greg White of Mary Fischer Interiors puts the finishing touches — in this case, an unusual painting of a monkey on a swing — on the door in the Show House's hobby room.

Enjoy 'April in Paris' this Sunday

The International Institute of Metropolitan Detroit will be reclaimed by the French empire when the Madame Cadillac Dancers and Musicians take centerstage to celebrate "Printemps A Paris," this Sunday, April 24.

Detroit area "colonials" are invited to go for baroque from 3 to 6 p.m., enjoying French culture and cuisine, circa 1701.

Artistic Director Harriet Berg has choreographed a new set of dances for the group, which is the only performance company in America specializing in the French colonial period. The costumes, music and dances are authentic representations of the time when Detroit was a small outpost of Nouvelle France, under the rule of Louis XIV.

Local Francophiles will get to see another side of Detroit actor Paul Winters when his original composition "Detroit, Mon Amour" is debuted that afternoon. Winters' new song is dedicated to the French streets of Detroit we all love to mispronounce, from Livernois to Beaubien. He will also sing a selection of French all-time standards such as "J'allendrai" and "L'Important C'est La Rose."

In addition, well-known pianist Evelyne Scheyer will be playing a melange of 17th & 18th century French music by Francois Couperin, Jean Baptiste Lully and J. Ph. Rameau, along with music by "modernes" Claude Debussy and Francis Poulenc. A native of the Netherlands, Scheyer has performed throughout the United States and Europe.

All proceeds from "Printemps A Paris" will assist the Madame Cadillac Dancers and Musicians in realizing a special goal — a trip "home" in the summer of 1989. They're planning a Tour de France which will include an appearance at a festival in La Rochelle, France, the exit port for 17th and 18th century French immigrants to the New World.

Tickets for "Printemps A Paris" are $10 per person. The International Institute is located at 111 E. Kirby between John R and Woodward Avenue in Detroit's cultural center.

For further information, call 871-8600.

Britten will speak to 'Connection'

"I believe that in this high-tech age of computers and television, excellence in oral communication is more important than it has ever been," says Kay Britten, singer-guitarist, consultant, playwright, composer, actress and public speaker. Britten will speak to the Women's Connection of Grosse Pointe on April 28 at a private Grosse Pointe club.

Britten is a native of England. She studied music at the Royal College of Music in London, graduating with an L.R.A.M. degree and planning a career in musical theater. She earned a teaching diploma from Honerton College, Cambridge.

After moving to the United States, Britten received praise for her performances in theater and television, including her own television program. In the mid-1970s, she founded a professional theater company and toured the U.S. for eight years. She has written five plays and musicals which have been nationally-produced.

Women's Connection of Grosse Pointe is a women's support and networking group composed of both professional women and those working toward entering the workforce. Anyone is welcome to attend. Reservation deadline for the April 28 meeting is Monday, April 25.

Faith overcomes

By The Rev. Paul Panaretos
Our Lady Star of the Sea Church

The Easter festival prolongs our celebration of Jesus Christ risen from the dead. The resurrection is not the re-creation of his corpse; rather, it is Jesus living an absolutely new and indestructible life. That is what we Christians attest in the creed when we say, "On the third day he rose again."

Believing this is not the same as proving the resurrection. We cannot satisfy the myriad of intellectual questions it poses. Belief that Jesus lives and that we, too, share his indestructible life surpasses our mental grasp. Faith may surpass understanding, but it does not ignore or belittle it.

As we struggle to deepen our faith, we can take heart that the experience of the Risen Lord for the first disciples was fraught with stress. As these scriptural accounts unfold, the disciples exhibit symptoms of stress. The disciples are alarmed; they are frightened; they resist believing one another. They are presented as forlorn and listless.

The scriptures accurately describe the disciples as real people. In the wake of tragedy — which is stress of a most intense and prolonged sort — as well as less intense, short term stress, human persons react in a threefold way. Distressed people suffer alarm, resistance and exhaustion. The result is more than physical. Stress affects the mind and the heart as well.

Alarm is the initial reaction to any force which threatens the equilibrium of a person's life. One's body tenses and one's mind goes into overdrive. These self-protecting responses are instinctive. The body pours chemicals into the bloodstream which induce perspiration and tighten muscles. The mind registers panic.

In the resistance phase, the body repairs the damage caused by the stress. The body attends to itself seeking to restore the chemical balance in tissues and bloodstream. Normal temperature resumes and muscles relax. As it also relaxes, the mind focuses on self and well-being.

The final phase of exhaustion is a plea for rest. Both body and mind have been taxed. First, the cause of stress demanded that the whole person take evasive action. Next, body and mind expended energy in the opposite direction to restore themselves to a balanced state.

In order to deal well with stress, health professionals and lay persons make several suggestions. I highlight three. First, sharing stress helps. Talking things over with others can ease the panic, remind people that they are not alone in coping with difficult situations and provide a different perspective.

The disciples shared their stress about Jesus' death and their

This is the third annual bell choir concert for the Good News Ringers, More Good News Ringers and the Lord's Company of Ringers of First English, under the direction of Foster and Judson. This year, the Grosse Pointe United Methodist Bell Choir, under the direction of Ambrose, will participate, enabling the entire ensemble to perform antiphonal selections. Several compositions will include three choirs ringing at once from the chancel, nave and balcony of the church.

The First English Bell Choirs have recently performed at "Christmas in the Village," in Grosse Pointe, at the Moross House in Detroit and with the Grosse Pointe Chamber Society. The G.P. United Methodist Choir has performed at Christmas in the Village and for the Cottage Hospital Hospice.

own future. The Risen Lord himself allayed their fears. Empowered by the Holy Spirit, they proclaimed their good news to all. The disciples set a standard for us to share our faith with one another. Faith offers a different perspective on living.

A second suggestion is to get involved and be a participant. The resistance that the body and mind need to mend themselves can lead to isolation. Loneliness fosters frustration. When the disciples believed Jesus was alive, their participation in the world transformed it. Modern disciples still do likewise.

Creating an oasis of calm is a third help. Stress cannot be eliminated entirely. However, when getting away is impossible, one can retreat to a serene place in the quiet of the heart. Prayer in various forms was built into the disciples' lives. They inspire us to drink often from the well of the Risen Lord's life-giving waters.

The disciples did not overcome their tragedy on their own. The Spirit of the Risen Lord overcame them and transformed them into active, outspoken and zealous folk. They cooperated with the Holy Spirit in the very human reactions that characterize stress itself. In dealing with their duress, the Risen Lord worked through creation even as He had become part of it.

The grandeur of the resurrection united us with this everliving Jesus. The Easter season reminds us that we are no different than the first disciples — in our struggle to believe as well as inheriting indestructible life. Evangelizing, ministering and praying also strengthen us in the face of adversity. We do overcome!

NBD's new Bi-Weekly Mortgage

- Cuts 9 years off a 30-year loan.*
- Reduces interest costs 35%*
- Builds equity almost twice as fast.*

What does Bi-Weekly mean, exactly? And how does this new mortgage work? Bi-Weekly simply means you make your house payment every other week. Instead of writing out one large check once a month, you pay half every two weeks. So, rather than making 12 big monthly payments a year, you make 26 small ones every two weeks. The two extra payments make the difference, cutting about 9 years off the life of your mortgage.

The last 9 years are free? Right. This mortgage gives you the low payments of a 30-year mortgage, and is fully paid off in just 21 years. In that sense, NBD's new Bi-Weekly combines the best features of 15- and 30-year fixed rate mortgages. Because NBD requires just 10% down, the Bi-Weekly Mortgage is perfect for first-time homeowners.

Suppose I sell my home 7 years from now...will I have more equity in it? Yes. With the NBD Bi-Weekly Mortgage, you build equity in your home almost twice as fast as a conventional 30-year mortgage. So when you sell your home...or if you want to use the equity in it for any purpose...the equity will be nearly double what it would have been otherwise.

And if I keep my home for the full 21 years...how much will I save? About 35%. For many home buyers in this area, that could mean sixty to seventy-five thousand dollars. To find out how much you would save, check the table below.

NBD's new Bi-Weekly Mortgage sounds interesting. But I need more details. Just call or visit one of the NBD Mortgage Company offices listed below. Our home mortgage specialists will get you the information to get started right away.

Real Estate

By THOMAS D. STEEN, G.R.I.
REALTOR

SELL HOME YOURSELF?

I'm sure you've heard it said: "Why should I sell my home through a REALTOR? I can sell it myself and save a lot of money." Right? ... Wrong!

This kind of thinking usually turns out to be financially unwise. The prospects will usually start by mentally deducting the commission and then start negotiating from there. On the average, a homeowner saves little or no money when he sells his own home. In fact, the opposite is often true. A lot of time is wasted showing homes to unqualified curiosity seekers and many possible sales are lost because the owner did not possess the experience to financially structure a viable sale in today's fast-changing money market.

As a private seller you're at a great disadvantage in the intricate areas of financing, negotiating and protecting yourself from all sorts of do-it-yourself pitfalls. You've got a lot invested in your home. It makes sense to list it with a REALTOR. He'll sell it for you - without hitches - for the best price and in the shortest amount of time.

If there is anything I can do to help you in the field of Real Estate, please phone or drop in at ADLHOCH & ASSOCIATES, REALTORS. We are located "In the Village" at 16845 Kercheval. Phone 882-5200. I'm here to help.

Weddings

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Czechowicz Lovett-Czechowicz

Deborah Carole Lovett, daughter of former Warren residents Paula and Jerry Lovett of Lakewood, Ohio, married Robert Mitchell Czechowicz, son of Mrs. Rosemary Czechowicz of Grosse Pointe Park, on Oct. 30, 1987, in the Martha-Mary Chapel at Greenfield Village.

The Rev. Mr. John A. Schable, a Catholic deacon, officiated at the 6 p.m. ceremony, which was followed by reception at Lovett Hall, Greenfield Village.

The bride wore a floor length, fitted gown in a sheath style which featured an illusion neckline and back and a cathedral length train of seed pearl and sequin embroidered lace. A large, flat bow accented the back waist of the gown. The gown's high, beaded collar held five, hanging Austrian crystals. Alencon lace embroidered with seed pearls and sequins formed the gown's bodice and front hemline.

All the beadwork on the bride's gown, including two special beads from a necklace that had belonged to the bride's great-grandmother, was hand-sewn by her mother, Paula Lovett.

A headband of seed pearls held a two-tiered, elbow length veil and a pouf of illusion netting and French netting. The bride carried an arm bouquet of calla lilies and English ivy.

Maid of honor was the bride's sister, Deanna Lovett of Warren. Bridesmaids included a cousin of the bride, Dawn Lovett of Warren; and Gail Cozza of Warren, Denise Pappas of Belleville and Megan Mitchell of Rogers City. The bride's second cousin, Kelly Cairns of Sterling Heights, was a junior bridesmaid.

The attendants wore floor length, sheath-style dresses of teal-colored satin, styled with small trains, elbow length pouf sleeves, jewel necks and open backs. A large, flat bow was tied at the back of each dress. Each attendant wore fresh flowers in her hair and carried a cascade bouquet of white orchids and apricot roses.

The best man was Abraham

Cassis of Corona Del Mar, Calif. Ushers included Lt. Jim Kelly, USCG, of Seal Beach, Calif.; Pete Fraser of Mount Clemens; and Rick Ruffner and Jeff Kirk of Grosse Pointe. The bride's second cousin, Michael Cairns of Sterling Heights, was ring-bearer.

The mother of the bride wore a floor length gown of silver satin, styled with long sleeves and a beaded band near the hemline. Her corsage was a white and pink orchid.

The mother of the bridegroom wore a taupe-colored dress styled with a lace bodice and a matching, long sleeved jacket. Her corsage was a white orchid.

Abraham Cassis and Gail Cozza read scripture at the candlelight ceremony.

The bride holds a bachelor of arts degree in advertising from Michigan State University. She is an assistant media buyer at W.B. Doner & Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

The bridegroom holds a bachelor of science in government from the United States Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., and a master of business administration in marketing from Wayne State University. He is employed as product manager of the "Forget Me Not" card line, American Greetings Corp., Brooklyn, Ohio.

Original instruments: Reviving sounds of music past

By Peggy Langrall
Smithsonian News Service

Rafael Druian, former concert master of the Cleveland Orchestra and owner of the famed "Nightingale" Stradivarius, says of violin playing, "In 40 years I don't think I've explored it completely." An instrument may "speak very easily," but "finding its potential" is another matter, he told a gathering of experts — ranging from violin makers to teachers of philosophy — at a recent Stradivarius symposium in the Smithsonian's Hall of Musical Instruments.

"When I give a concert," Druian said, "if I'm playing a modern instrument, my friends come up to me afterwards and say how well I play. When I'm playing a Strad, they say how well the Strad sounds." The violinist was one of several distinguished speakers at the symposium marking the 250th anniversary of the death of violin-maker Antonio Stradivari. Another was Elia Santoro, of Cremona, Italy, author of the book, "Antonius Stradivarius," (the Latinized version of the master craftsman's name and the one he used to sign all of his instruments).

"Those who think about computers or electronics," Santoro says, "about the robot or other future inventions, will never be able to achieve that which has been created by the imagination, the intelligence and creativity of a pair of artisan hands."

The works of artisan hands are everywhere to be seen in the hall of Musical Instruments, tucked away between exhibits on postal history and ceramics on the third floor of the National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C. Visitors may be surprised to come upon this elegant salon with crystal chandeliers and a polished wood floor, worthy of ballroom, filled with folding gold-painted chairs and rose-colored velvet cushions. They may be even more surprised to find a rehearsal on period instruments in progress, or perhaps a workshop on 18th-century dancing.

On a low stage across the east end of the room, opposite a huge window giving a sweeping view past the Washington Monument, a collection of antique keyboard instruments is displayed. Three beautifully restored harpsichords immediately catch the eye — one of them lavishly decorated with a painted landscape on its open lid. "These instruments summarize the history of keyboard instruments," says Gary Sturm, a stringed instrument specialist and collections manager for the Division of Musical History. "And all displayed are playable." Two galleries flanking the salon hold numerous others — instruments of European origin on one side and those created by American makers on the other.

Italian violins of the 17th and 18th centuries, various horns, bassoons and oboes, as well as 19th-century instruments such as piccolos, flutes and clarinets, grace the glass cases of the European side. There are kettle drums and more keyboard instruments — organs, a piano-forte, Melodeon, harpsichord and spinet, meticulously restored under the supervision of experts in the museum's Division of Conservation.

But what is undoubtedly la piece de resistance is the Dr. Herbert R. Axelrod Stradivarius Quartet. All four of the gracefully ornamented stringed instruments were made in the same period and are famed for their extraordinarily matched sound. Axelrod, a longtime friend and supporter of the Smithsonian, and Jacques Francois, an internationally known New York instrument collector and dealer, took nearly 20 years to find and bring the instruments to the Smithsonian String Quartet, a part of the institution's chamber music residency program, performs classical and early romantic quartet repertoire on these original instruments. Two larger ensembles, the Smithsonian Chamber Players and the Smithsonian Chamber Orchestra, make up the rest of the program, which is built around a core group of musicians in residence. All of the musicians perform on period instruments and use period techniques. The three groups are sponsored by the Resident Associated Program and Friends of Music at the Smithsonian. Their authentic performance programs, thought by some to be as revolutionary as the most controversial contemporary music, attract musicians from the United States and Europe to perform and record with the ensembles.

Not only is the original sound of the music restored, but with respect for the player's virtuosity, listeners get a better understanding of the composer's virtuosity. "What we try to do," says Jean Schroeder, principal guest music director of the Smithsonian Chamber Orchestra, "is to get back to the origin and to feel, to write, to play the way the composer would have recognized. And I maintain, of course, that Bach and Beethoven would not have recognized the way a modern symphony orchestra is playing."

With a collection of more than 2,000 instruments, only about 10 percent of them on view, the Smithsonian ensembles often can match instruments to compositions. For example, they can use one piano for the earlier trios of Beethoven and a later-built piano to match the time of the later trios. "It's a matter of marrying the instruments and the music," says Kenneth Slowik, director of the chamber music programs and a specialist in the viola da gamba and the cellist of the Smithsonian String Quartet.

Sometimes doubling as a "tuning-up room" for the quartet and other ensemble players, the gallery of American-made instruments presents a "penknife approach" to instrumental craftsmanship more than its European counterpart on the other side of the Hall.

A steady stream of collectors, dealers and museum people filters through the Hall of Musical Instruments and its offices. "The objects themselves are the ultimate documents for studying the past," Sturm says. From them, craftsmen can learn details of construction which they, in turn, can pass on. Historians can trace the origins and development of music and instrument technology, musicians perceive the intentions of composers and scholars find a treasure trove of knowledge.

This harpsichord, made in Paris in 1760, was recently restored by Smithsonian conservators.

'Company' is GPT's comedy

A traveling troupe of players is coming to Fries Auditorium to present Grosse Pointe Theatre's next production: "A Company of Wayward Saints." The group of performers who will present this warm, funny comedy are really GPT actors who portray the visiting thespians.

The plot concerns a group of actors stranded along their way home from a performance. They must stage a play — around the scenario of "The History of Man" — to earn their passage home.

Pat Bushey is cast as Harlequin, the manager of the "Wayward Saints" troupe. Perry Calisi is cast as Scapino the Acrobat, with Bill Heimke as Pantalone the Old Man, and John Diebel as Dottore the Learned. Capitano the Warrior and Tristano the Lover will be played by Jack Petz and John McSwain, respectively.

Also cast in "Wayward Saints" are Valerie Schaefer as Isabella the Sweetheart, Arlene Marie Schoenherr as Columbine the Nag and Marge Gesell as Ruffiana the Tart.

"A Company of Wayward Saints" will be performed now through Sunday, April 24 and Tuesday through Saturday, April 26 through 30. All performances will be staged at Fries Auditorium.

'Extravaganza' will benefit kids

The Detroit Chapter of Children's International Summer Villages will sponsor its seventh annual "$10,000 Extravaganza" which includes a dinner of foods and drinks, and a chance on a grand prize of $10,000. The event is Friday, May 20, at 6:30 p.m. at the McGregor Center on the Wayne State University campus.

Casino night at Italian center

A Las Vegas night and bingo will be held at the Italian Cultural Community Center, 28111 Imperial Drive in Warren east of Hoover between 12 Mile and Martin Roads on Saturday, April 23, at 7 p.m. Admission is $3 per person. Call 751-2855 for more information.

Tennis tickles this Yancey

Signed, sealed and delivered may be one way to look at signing a binding National Letter of Intent, but for University Liggett School standout John Yancey, it was big relief.

Yancey, who signed with the University of Kentucky's tennis team last week, will round out his senior year at ULS, but then it's full steam ahead for Bluegrass country this fall.

Yancey, 30-2 as a junior, has set many records on the tennis court and the basketball court, but now he's in the record books for something more lucrative — he was the first ULS student athlete to be awarded a full scholarship to play tennis at the Division I level. Quite an accomplishment for a young man.

Now that he has signed on the dotted line, he is no longer on the free market. After serving his verbal commitment to coach Dennis Emory in February, Yancey was still hounded by collegiate coaches. They wanted him to take another look at their campuses, but Yancey was sure of his choice. Now nobody can contact him. Nobody can hassle him, and the phone calls from recruiters have ceased.

A couple days before Yancey was to sign, I received a phone call from Coach Bob Wood. Wood informed me that history was in the making and I couldn't miss it. I didn't want to miss it, but a rough work day almost caused me to miss Yancey's moment. I could tell something big was going on as I entered the library at ULS. Fifty people covered the tables and walls and had their eyes stuck to the young man whose smile lights up a room and whose All-American demeanor stands far above the rest.

They were congregating to see the guy who touched their lives with genuine concern for their welfare, put drama in basketball and the guy whose personality shows what he's truly made of — class.

Yancey, along with school and newspaper photographers, were awaiting my arrival until he gave Emory his full commitment. Just think, he couldn't sign until I showed up. On the other hand, what would have happened if Paul Revere had been held up on account of a sports editor. Now that I was there, the ink was about to flow. Flash bulbs were set off and Yancey and his mother Anne soaked up the glory that has been genuinely earned.

Girls form a foundation

Through dedication, 12 seniors at South have developed successful track, cross country programs

By Rob Fulton
 Sports Editor

It's no wonder Coach Steve Zaranek has been the most successful coach over the past four years at South. And it's no wonder how and why that's actually happened.

'What this group has meant to South track and cross country over the years cannot be measured.'
South coach Steve Zaranek.

Track and cross country are two of the most grueling sports. In some cases, a high percentage of coaches struggle to keep the athletes interested in the sport for one year, but Zaranek has been fortunate to have 12 girls who have been around the track and cross country route for an average of two to four seasons.

With 12 seniors who have years of experience and plenty of dedication, Zaranek has simply formulated those abilities into a winning chemistry. He feels privileged to have been associated with such a crop of athletes and he's going to get what he can out of them, before they don the cap and gown.

"What this group has meant to South track and cross country over the years cannot be measured," he said. "They have focused integrity, class, devotion, and talent into these programs."

Wendy Berger, Julie Burke, Amy Gentile, Elizabeth Lazarowitz, Megen Smucker, Rebecca Wasinger, Amy Albrecht, Kellie Buchanan, Danielle DeLuca, Dunrie Greiling, Sarah McCabe and Reba Uthappa are the girls Zaranek can thank for his winning percentage, as well as proper leadership.

"They are extraordinary leaders," he said. "These seniors lead not through great talent on the track, but through commitment to their team. Our younger runners have perfect examples to follow."

Over their four years of cross country, they have compiled a 52-1 record, earned four Eastern Michigan titles, two state regional championships, four state final appearances, and 14 invitational championships. On the track, they are currently going for an unprecedented third straight league title and have already hit the top three in the regionals all four years. And to date, they have a 30-3 record. Not to mention numerous school records.

With two hours a day, for five to six days a week, the dozen Devils are found perspiring on the track, lifting weights and trying to become better athletes. Off the track, they have a combined grade point average of 3.7 and are involved in activities such as the school paper, yearbook, student government, drama, music or others. They are not the typical nine to five athletes.

"This senior group represents what high school athletics are all about," said Zaranek. "They know the meaning and importance of commitment to their team, to each other and to themselves."

But, with all the hours spent practicing and competing, studying and being engrossed in extracurricular activities, is there time for being alone?

"They find time to be alone, but I think it's always with somebody on the team," Zaranek said chuckling. "They are just a close, happy group of girls who enjoy working hard together."

Some may say South has cornered the market of the track and cross country world, but the consensus of the girls is that the dynasty will continue as long as nobody tries to impede the family atmosphere.

"We share a lot of emotion," said Julie Burke. "It's important for the runners after us to remember that that is important. You spend so much time together between school and athletics, that getting to know the people you're with really helps."

Although most of the girls share lockerrooms and swap secrets, sometimes the relationships turn into something of a sibling rivalry.

"Most of these people I've known through school and track and it's just stayed that way," said Megen Smucker. "It's nice to have friends that are close, but sometimes we get too close and it's irritating. We all know, however, that the care and concern is genuine."

The girls have developed lifelong bonds and ties that nobody can take from them. But one friendship that needed a second look was that of Uthappa and Burke.

"I'm a very competitive person, and when I heard that a girl named Julie Burke was coming out to be a sprinter, I went around school for three weeks calling her 'Julie Dork,'" said Uthappa. "Then, when I found out what she was all about, we grew very close. I guess you could say we are very good friends now."

At the time, Burke was standing behind Uthappa shaking her head.

"It took a long time for her to call me Burke," said Julie. "Now it's all in the past."

What's in the past is a true foundation built on trust, hard work and talent. Presently, the girls are working on continuing the winning tradition and putting the finishing touches on the cherished memories.

"It's incredible what we have gone through together," said Lazarowitz. "It's not just the talent, but it's hard work. By working together it makes it better for everyone involved. You learn to deal with and work with people socially, academically and athletically."

Life, as well as athletics have humbled the 12 athletes, but they wouldn't have stuck with the programs if it wasn't for Zaranek's perseverance.

"He's given so much to us," said Uthappa. "He is always concerned about us as individuals as well as a team. He's always gone the extra mile."

No pun intended.

Sailing events

The DoubleHanded Sailing Association has announced two sailing events to be held this spring and summer.

On May 14, the St. Clair DoubleHanded Regatta will start at the St. Clair Light and finish at the Belle River, Canada. On July 2, the Huron Challenge Race will be held. The location of that start has been moved from Sarnia, Ontario to Port Sanilac, to encourage spectator participation.

The regatta is a race that will cover 19 miles and will end with a dock party and an awards dinner. Fleets will include PHRF A and B, J.A.M. and Cruising. The entry fee is $20.

For further information call Jim Hazelwood at 882-8981.

The race on July 2 is scheduled to cover 180 nautical miles with a turning buoy west of Goderich, Ontario's outer breakwall. The finish line is outside the harbor of Rogers City. Pre-race activities will be held in Port Sanilac and an awards dinner is set for the Pavillion at Rogers City. That dinner is sponsored by the city's Chamber of Commerce.

Qualifying participants must have previous offshore sailing experience, and liability insurance. Boats are classed according to their PHRF rating. Yachts 25 to 60 feet may make application to sail. Entry fees (including docking fee) are $75 for members (DoubleHanded Sailing Association/Great Lakes SingleHanded Society), and $90 for non-members.

After June 15, a $25 late charge will be assessed.

Contact Ralph Ridge for more information, 671-2338.

Six swimmers represent All Pointes Swim Club

United States Swimming of Michigan, in conjunction with host clubs Michigan Stingray Swim Association and Livonia Spartan Aquatic Club, held its 1988 Girls and Boys State Short Course Swim Championships at Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills.

Representing All Pointes Swim Club were, Suzette Atrasz, Kim Higel, Christine Jamerino, Lauren Kordas, Tony Atrasz and John Gamrat.

In 1980, United States Swimming, Inc. was set up by an act of congress to be the self-governing body for competitive swimming in the United States. US Swimming is divided into 60 local swimming committees, one of which is Michigan Swimming, Inc.

The championship meets attract approximately 500 female and male swimmers from ages 10-18 who have met established time cuts in freestyle, backstroke, breaststroke, butterfly and a combination of each of the four strokes called individual medley. Relay events are also a part of the championships. Approximately 50 clubs competed for the 1988 championships.

The preeminence of age group swimming in Michigan has been on the rise in the last few years. This is best evidenced by the fact that Michigan swimmers, competing with swimmers from several adjoining states in the entral zone of the USA, have won the Zone Championships each of the past two summers. The state meet has often been the forum for swimmers to attain exceptionally fast times and advance to greater competition, including the zone meet, Junior and Senior Nationals, and the Olympic Time Trials.

Christine Jamerino continued to make her mark among the state's best swimmers as she swam her way to an overall "High Point" award for the girls' 10-and-under age group. She had a first place in the 100 freestyle (1:01.69), and 50-yard breaststroke (34.70). She also had second place finishes in the 50 freestyle (28.17), 100 individual medley (1:11.24), and 100 breaststroke (1:16.21). Her day was touched off with a third place in the 200 I.M. (2:34.78).

Teammate Lauren Kordas placed in the same age group with a third in the 100 breaststroke (1:24.34), a fourth in the 50 breaststroke (38.57), and 12th in the 50 butterfly (34.48).

In the 11-12 age group, Kim Higel had an outstanding meet with four fifth place wins: The 100 backstroke (1:07.32), 500 freestyle (5:40.57), 100 butterfly (1:05.93), and the 200 I.M. (2:27.30). Higel also placed seventh in the 200 freestyle (2:09.51), eighth in the 100 I.M. (1:08.66) and 17th in the 100 freestyle (1:00.89).

Suzette Atrasz had a great swim in the 50-yard breaststroke (36.33) and the 100 breaststroke (1:21.54).

In the boys' competition, Tony Atrasz had success for the 10-and-under age group as he hit a first place in the 100 breaststroke (1:20.56) and a second in the 50 breaststroke (37.29).

Backstroke John Gamrat turned in a fine performance in the 11-12 age group with a time of 33.89 in the 50 backstroke.

Mary Ann Michalik is All Pointes' coach.

Catch of the day

Eric Sayenga, right, used an old fishing pole he dug out of an attic to catch a 24" brown trout at the Windmill Pointe Pier last week.

Eric, who attends Defer Elementary with Ben Watt (who caught a walleye on the same day) was "almost pulled in" while wrestling to reel the fish in.

Tim Madar, Watt's uncle, helped Eric catch his first fish, but didn't take any credit.

Sports People

Doubling up on the same hole

Maurice and Agnes L'Heureux of the Shores, both made the golf shot of a lifetime while vacationing in Boca Raton, Fla.

On separate days, Maurice and Agnes aced hole No. 5 at the Boca Del Mar Country Club. Maurice clipped the 140-yard hole first and promptly called his daughter Janet to let her share in the good news. Several days later, Agnes left a message on Janet's answering machine saying that she couldn't let her husband outdo her, so she deposited the ball in one shot as well.

The shot, which earned them a day in the limelight, also saved them from buying a round of drinks for the entire club. After weeks of not paying $5, they finally paid it, and it paid off. If they wouldn't have paid $5, they would have had to buy the members a drink for hitting the hole-in-one.

Saratoga, Eastland sponsor 'Say No to Drugs' program

Detroit Pistons forward Adrian Dantley shoots for kids to "say no to drugs" when he makes a special appearance at Eastland Center on Saturday, April 23.

This sports celebrity event, sponsored by Saratoga Community Hospital and Eastland, is part of "Say No to Drugs" week, April 22-30.

Kids who meet with Dantley sign a promise to "live a drug-

Record holder

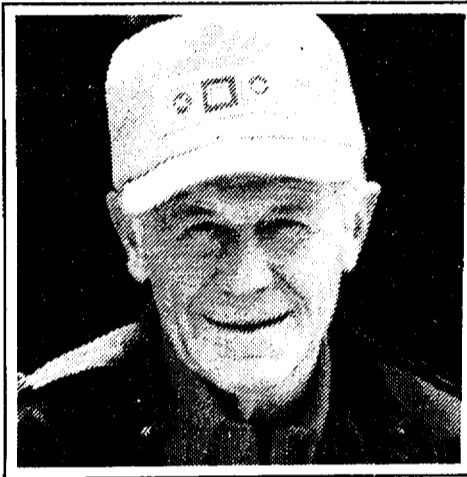

Mary Unti, a former Our Lady Star of the Sea Most Valuable Player, has finished her basketball career at John Carroll University with a new record.

Unti, a four-year starter, pulled down a career total 700 rebounds to set the new school clip. In her senior year, she started all 25 games, averaging 8.1 rebounds and 5.4 points per game. She also paced JCU to a best-ever 19 wins on the year.

Doing well

Sean Bruce, a 1987 graduate of South, is off and running with the Michigan State Spartans' baseball team.

free life" because they know that using drugs will hurt their health, their families, and friends. The "Say No to Drugs" program is an effort to help kids say that they know enough to say no to drugs and will commit themselves to help their friends know what they know.

Dantley will be available at Eastland from 4 to 6 p.m. to sign autographs and have his photo taken with kids.

South to host swim show

On April 28 at 4 and 7:30 p.m., and on April 29 at 7:30 p.m., the Grosse Pointe South Blue Dolphins will present their annual synchronized swim show at the South pool.

This year's show, "Blue Dolphins in Color," will feature synchronized swimming to songs with a color theme.

The Blue Dolphins are led by Theresa Malloy (president), Tracy Beckenhauer (vice president), Andi Bagno (secretary), Ann Ball (treasurer), Sharon Vasher and Bonnie Semple, with special expertise from Ellen Zaccardelli, are coaching this year's squad.

Admission at the door is $2. At the 4 p.m. show on April 28, children under 12, accompanied by an adult, get in for $1.

GPSC race plans

The Grosse Pointe Sail Club (GPSC) will sponsor its annual Tuesday Night Sundown Series during June, July and August. The series is open to seaworthy sailing yachts.

The 1988 races will again be divided into two series: seven races from June 7 through July 19, and six from July 26 through August 30. A separate Sunday afternoon Fall Series is also planned from September 18 through October 9.

Registration forms have been mailed to previous registrants and should be returned by May 20. The Club encourages other interested sailors to request details and registration forms by contacting Race Chairman Dick Feldborg, 343-0524.

It was a proud moment for a mother and a son who seem to have a special relationship. The only embarrassment John may have felt was when his mother planted a big kiss on the side of his forehead. John is headed for Kentucky, and in most cases a mother may be concerned about her child leaving home. That was not evident. Anne Yancey seems very confident that John made the proper selection. Yancey's father John couldn't be with him because he was called away on business, but he was there in spirit. He did contact John via phone, and that delighted the guy who seldom shows any emotion.

Emory was on hand, for the first time in his six year tenure at Kentucky, to witness the signing of a recruit. He was thrilled that Yancey chose the program and looked as if he was reading a crystal ball and seeing that Yancey can truly help his currently ranked No. 7 Wildcats.

The dilemma of selecting a new home is over. Yancey, who in the opinion of many Division I intercollegiate coaches is the "best athlete available" in the country, is signed, sealed and delivered to the doorstep of Dennis Emory and the University of Kentucky.

ULS will miss the sharp-shooting basketball player and the whirlwind forehand tennis shot that has busted more than one tennis ball. Most of all, however, they will miss the glowing smile and the professional demeanor of a young man whose glory has come in droves, yet hasn't affected his better judgment.

In some cases, a superstar athlete may lose touch with his "buddies" and not allow his feet to touch the ground, but Yancey is one person whose feet have never gotten too big for his shoes. He's a talented athlete, but yet he's an extremely well-liked and congenial young man.

As Bob Wood told Emory, "You've got a good one, coach." Well ULS, you also have a good one.

Baseball team dunks South Lake, 6-5

By John Guibord
Special Writer
Dino Vento hurled a three-hitter and Steve Neiman scored on a failed suicide squeeze in the bottom of the eighth inning to give the Norsemen baseball team a 6-5 win over South Lake.

North (4-2, 0-1) received strong pitching from Vento through 6 1/3 innings, but in the seventh, he yielded six walks and a couple hits which allowed the Cavaliers to take a 5-4 edge into the bottom of the seventh.

Looking for another comeback, like they did to beat Bishop Gallagher a week earlier when they scored four times in the seventh to win it, the Norsemen went to Eric Zeno to put out the fire.

Chuck Thomas' solo home run in the bottom of the seventh forced the extra inning and from there Zeno took command.

With runners on second and third and nobody out, Neiman broke for home with Jason DeYonker attempting a bunt. Moments later, Neiman found himself in a run-down and when the ball hit him in the back, he scampered home for the win.

Vento upped his record to 2-0 and struck out 11 batters.

One game earlier, senior right-hander Russell Rice was locked in a pitchers' duel and came out the loser as no offensive support led to a 1-0 win for Brablec.

North lost 9-4 to Romeo Monday in the league opener. Rice smacked a two-run homer and Dan Unger laced two hits.

Girls' track

The girls' varsity track team captured its second win in as many attempts, downing Regina 95-33 last week.

Outstanding performances were turned in by Kristen Gast, Liz Bolden and Shannon Andrewes.

Gast won the 100 hurdles and the 100 dash, and was part of the 400 and 800 winning relay teams. Bolden won the long jump, 400 and 200 dashes, and Andrewes was victorious in the 1600-meter run and the high jump.

North will participate in the Port Huron Northern Husky Relays on April 23 at 9:30 a.m.

The Lady Norsemen bounced back from an opening day loss

(8-0 against L'Anse Creuse North) to beat South Lake (4-3) and Roseville Brablec (12-2) to up their record to 2-1.

Against South Lake, the Norsemen trailed 3-1 in the bottom of the sixth, but Mary Lex's two RBIs knotted the score and set up Angela Domienik's game-winning RBI.

Alicia Lynch led North with two hits and two runs scored. Kerri Kelly knocked in the first Norsemen run with a triple.

Earlier in the week, North clobbered Brablec 12-2. Lex and Kelly combined to pitch a three-hitter. Lucy Barry had three hits and 3 RBI, and Kelly had two hits and 3 RBI.

On a jayvee note: Debi Van Dale pitched 17 innings as the Norsemen won the Chippewa Valley Tournament. Van Dale didn't give up one walk in her stint, and on the year has tossed two, one-hitters and a no-hitter.

Soccer

Coach Guido Regelbrugge was hoping his team could respond to the tough schedule very quickly, and his prayers have been answered as his team has two wins in two tries.

In the opener, North beat Warren Woods-Tower 2-1 on Beth Stevenson's two goals. Drawing assists were Michelle Stema and Christy Mack.

Kerri Werschky stopped a penalty shot to secure the one-goal win.

Stevenson scored two more goals in a 2-0 win over Lakeshore. Nancy Schulte got the shutout in the net.

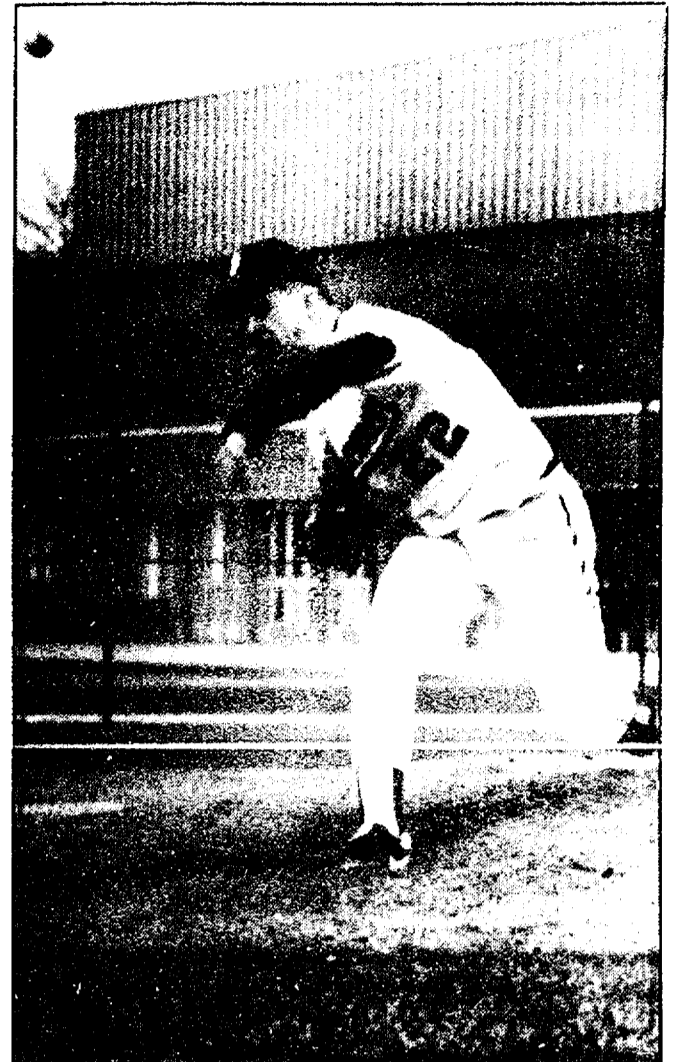

Boys' track

After two contests, the track team is 1-1.

Marc deManigold's first place finishes in the shot put and discus led North to an 88-47 win over Notre Dame. Bob Straske paced his way to a first place in the 800-meter run to help the lopsided victory.

Against Cousino, North was edged 68-60 despite Straske's second straight win in the 800 run.

Steve Clarke was first in the 3200 meter run for the Norsemen.

Track team runs to 3-1, baseballers sweep Harper Woods

South opened its boys' track season with a 72-65 win over Eastern Michigan League foe, East Detroit. Later in the week, the Blue Devils advanced to 3-1 on the young season by beating Bishop Gallagher and Highland Park, but they suffered defeat No. 1 as Dearborn won a quadangular meet on South's track.

East Detroit's Steve Sandles won four events, but South rallied as Dave Asker, Pat Bruce and Tony DeLuca finished first in their events.

Asker set a sophomore record with a shot put toss of 44.9. DeLuca won the 800-meter run in 2:09 and Bruce won the high jump by clearing the bar at 6-feet.

Kerfoot ran a 4:56 to win the 1600 run. Jeff Maccagnone jumped a 9-6 to win the pole-vault competition. South's 3200-meter relay team also finished first.

Taking second places for South were Phil Orton (3200 run), Jamie Nevison (300 hurdles and long jump, 17-51/2) and Scott Schaupter (400 run). Steve Rice was third in the long jump (17-51/4).

In the quad meet, South finished second (41) behind Dearborn (93), and Gallagher (36) was third and Highland Park (15) was last.

Girls' track

The girls opened league play with a 98-30 win over East Detroit. South is now 3-0.

The meet was highlighted by two record-setting performances by Laura DeMercurio and Durnie Greiling. DeMercurio covered the 100-meter high hurdles in 16.8 seconds, and Greiling lofted the shot put, 31-6 feet.

Other outstanding performances were turned in by Sara Liliensiek, Anna Dinverno, Toni Tedesco and Ann Llewellyn.

Sprinters Denise Brown, Julie Burke, Reba Uthappa and Traci Lee combined to take firsts in both the 400 and 800 relays.

South travels to the Port Huron Northern for the Husky Relays on April 23.

Baseball

Marcus Wysocki and Doug Lucas combined wits on the mound to pace South to a doubleheader sweep of Harper Woods, 6-3, 17-2.

Wysocki hurled a two-hitter in the opener, fanned 15 and gave up four walks. Both Harper Woods' hit were home runs.

Wysocki helped his own cause with two hits, including a homer and two RBI. Dale Wilson socked his second home run of the season and Matt Montagne added two hits. Lucas, Mike Paull, Marty Van Almen and Bryan Jones also punched out hits.

In the nightcap, shortened by darkness, Lucas yielded three hits and struck out seven. He also had two hits, including a bases-loaded triple. He drove in five runs.

Jason Whelan's three hits, including a triple, helped him knock in three runs. Jim Johnson had two hits and two RBI. Montagne, Ian Thompson and Bill Leonard each had one hit.

South won its first E.M.L. game Monday, beating Anchor Bay, 8-4.

Coach Dan Griesbaum's team hosts Port Huron in doubleheader action April 23, and then hits the road for a single game at Port Huron Northern on April 25.

Soccer

Katie Kolp booted a hat trick and Kathy Johnson and "Alex" Anglewicz each scored once to pace South to a 5-0 win over Gallagher.

South, who lost Kolp for three weeks to an ankle injury, went on to beat Edsel Ford 1-0 on Casey Steffes' goal, but was upended 4-1 by Bishop Foley.

Tennis team dumps Ann Arbor Huron

After returning from a very successful trip in Ohio, the ULS varsity tennis team opened the Michigan portion of its schedule with a 6-1 victory over Class A No. 4 ranked Ann Arbor Huron.

Individual winners for ULS were John Yancey (No. 1 singles), Frederick Thelander (No. 2), Sean Byrne, (No. 3), Bill Schervish (No. 4), Mike Nicolini and Frank Karabetsos (No. 2 doubles), and Dike Ajiri and Gordie Maitland (No. 3).

On April 16, the Knights finished fourth at the Trenton Invitational behind Brother Rice, Okemos and East Lansing (the No. 1-2-3 ranked teams in Class A).

Thelander, at No. 2 singles, was the only flight winner for ULS. Yancey lost in the No. 1 finals, and all other ULS players competed in the consolation

ULS plays in the ever tough East Grand Rapids Invitational (April 23), and hosts the top ranked team in Class B Cranbrook Kingswood on April 26, and Brother Rice on April 27.

ULS is currently ranked No. 1 in Class C-D.

Track

Under adverse weather conditions, both the girls' and boys' track teams did very well in the season opener.

The boys finished second behind Lutheran East (111 points) with 74 points. The girls won the meet with 124 points; the closest competitor was Lutheran Westland (103).

The Lady Knights had five first places. Laura Rizzo won the

Soccer

The Tuna kickers dropped their first two games to Redford

Thurston (2-1), and Regina (8-0).

Cathy Jarvis scored the only goal in the season opener, and Charlotte Jarvis, Beth McAllister, Heather Carlson and Holly McHugh helped Star in the Regina loss.

Types of nutritional fraud

It's confusing to wander the aisles of a health food store.

Just what is "health food," and should I purchase the "organic" or "natural" bee pollen? None of these terms are legally defined. The Federal Trade Commission prohibits use of these words in food advertisements because of concerns about the ability of consumers to understand the terms in the conflicting and confusing ways.

Natural

Often people think "natural" as pertaining to minimal processing without use of preservatives, additives or other artificial ingredients. Remember, that it is not a legally defined term.

Organic

Though people think "organic" foods are organically grown foods without the use of pesticides, but with the use of animal or human manure as fertilizer, there are many organic foods on the market with pesticide residues, carcinogens and mutagens because of the soil content.

Health foods . . .

Refer to both "natural" and "organic" foods and are not different from regular food in nutrient composition and safety. Often the claimed "health foods" are from regular food chains and thus contain as much pesticide residues.

Be aware. Read your labels. Don't be fooled.

Let's look at some of the other health faddist claims. You've undoubtedly heard that bee pollen is "the only perfect food," a source of youth and health. Bee pollen is collected by bees from flowers as they collect nectar, and there is no supportive evidence to the claims. In fact, bee pollen may increase the risk of allergic effect.

Royal jelly has long been claimed to increase fertility, longevity and "strength." Royal jelly is a milky white substance produced by worker bees and fed to the queen bee. Queen bees start out like all other bees, but thanks to the special diet she grows to twice the size of other bees, lives up to 40 times longer, and lays about 2,000 eggs per day. Actually, royal jelly is high in some B vitamins, especially pantothenic acid, but it has not been shown to possess any recognized preventive, therapeutic or rejuvenating traits by humans. It might, however, "work" if you thought it could!

What about the nutritional composition of various types of weight reduction diets and programs?

Here is a general guideline to assist you in assessing the soundness of a program:

- 1) Is the diet nutritionally balanced and include a variety of foods from the major food groups?
- 2) Does the program require purchase of special foods, special devices, books or special fees?
- 3) Is the program supervised by qualified medical personnel?
- 4) Is the weight loss rapid (more than two or three pounds a week)?
- 5) Does the program make sensational claims, such as "eat all you want," "no will-power," "magic," "spot reduction"?
- 6) Does the program prescribe or promote use of diuretics or appetite suppressants?
- 7) Is the focus on diet alone or on modifying behavior and lifestyle to achieve permanent weight control?

Vanity is not in my vocabulary. I appreciate what I do for the sake of my body, but at times, I wonder what my body did to deserve the harsh treatment I put it through.

In the attempt to further evaluate my collapsing stomach and fitness level, I elected to call Cottage Hospital and ask them about a Body Composition Analysis. You see, that's just one of the free offerings they will have when they lift the curtain on their annual Fun Run & Walk on May 1. Several medical information booths will be at the South High School gym from noon to 3 p.m. on race day and they're geared not only to the participants, but to the public.

In my quest to re-evaluate my physical self, I wanted to find out what this test was all about. So, I participated. My findings were to my liking as I watched the machine do all the work with a few helpful commands from its operator, Mike Singer. In the matter of minutes, I found that I had 18 percent body fat, burned up 1944 calories per day and was in the average percentile for body water.

That's not the point though. I needed to find out what kind of makeup was in my body and this machine told me. I needed to know what kind of direction my physique is headed in and what I can do to either correct it, or continue to aid it — and this machine defined it.

Singer, a physician's assistant in Ann Arbor, hooked up two electrodes to my right ankle and two to my right wrist. In seconds, the computer knew my makeup and a few seconds later, it printed the results. Also, if you are diagnosed as being over or under weight, or deficient in a particular area, you are given some guidelines to follow — after that it's up to you to carry them out for optimal health.

Impedance analyzer, the machine that breaks down body composition into its components, was invented by Dr. Jan Nyboer in the 1930s. The data provided is physiological and is being used in more clinical situations currently.

The electrodes, which send the signals through the body, act as a receptacle and as a sender. The electronic signal, an impressive signal comparable to a radio wave, fills your body as fast as a lightbulb lights when the switch is turned on. The composition of water, muscle mass and fat is instantly picked up. The transmitted signal is looking for body insulators and conductors and is measured in ohms.

"We want to know what the body is made of," said Singer, who works for Associated Medical Services. "We're looking for good and poor conductivity. From there, we have the health care professionals look at the results and assess what needs to be done. It's not just a matter of measuring the beef."

Fluid and tissues in the body act as very good conductors, according to Singer. Those readings will be listed under resistance.

"If a person has enough water, which is vital to the body, and good tissue, the resistance will be higher than the reactance," Singer said. "This way, we can determine where or what needs sufficient examining and a closer look, or even a program to aid the patient."

Singer claims that the test should be performed only when the person is at his or her normal capacity because the electrodes are trying to perceive the fluid alteration.

"People taking the test to analyze their body composition should do it at a normal hydration level," said Singer. "If they are too hot or too cold the reading is still highly accurate, but they should do it while in a normal condition."

Proper hydration, according to Singer, helps to balance nutrition and hydration. If there is any fluctuation or imbalance, the test will disclose that and the proper solution will be detailed for you.

The accuracy of the test, even if done back-to-back, is within 1 percent.

"This is one of the reasons this test is becoming a popular procedure," said Singer.

In other cases, the machine is being utilized by physicians on critically ill patients. The machine and its printer are mobile, therefore if a person is bed ridden, the machine can go to them.

"It operates on its own battery and doesn't need any electricity to function," said Singer. "It's accessible to the majority of patients even if they can't come to the machine."

Once the test is concluded, the results are forwarded to a physician for proper diagnosis. Singer's responsibilities include only administering the test and then recommending the patient get professional care.

The machine has been around for over 50 years, but it's only been approximately nine years that it began being tested for body composition. In its early stages, the machine was used for blood flow type studies, and in the future the technology will continue to adapt to physical needs.

"This machine has come a long way and it will continue to make progress," said Singer. "Applications are being developed right now to concentrate on certain areas of the body and determining the breakdown of particular body parts."

The Body Composition Analysis, the machine that breaks down and analyzes the body's components (water, muscle mass, fat), is one of the health portions available to everyone at the May 1 Fun Run & Walk. For the nominal fee of $5, you can have your body analyzed and receive proper guidance on what needs to be done.

Other information at the Cottage Hospital event, includes stress fractures, pulmonary services, nutritional services, corporate health programs, social work and Hospice.

"I recommend that everyone have this done at least once a year, if not twice," said Singer.

Some not so juicy tidbits

A consumer group, the Center for Science in the Public Interest (CSPI), recently cautioned consumers that when they buy fruit juices they may be getting more water than juice.

The group studied a variety of fruit-juice drinks and discovered over a dozen products that had a juice content of 50 percent or less. Many manufacturers failed to list this information on their labels. To further aggravate the issue, some of the diluted varieties were more expensive than those containing 100 percent fruit juice.

CSPI points out that many consumers are misled by the labels which refer to the diluted products as "ades," "drinks," "blends." And ambiguous terms, such as "pure" or "100 percent natural," confuse the consumer even further. Carefully read the label, or better yet, choose fresh fruits. You will not only be assured of 100 percent natural juice, but you will also benefit from the fiber and the vitamins.

Fat plus sugar — A tempting duo

The "sweet tooth" often gets blamed for the antics the "fat tooth" is responsible for. Although it is true that most sugar calories are accompanied by fat calories, (pastries, chocolate, ice cream), researchers say it is often the fat that makes those foods so appealing. The Mayo Clinic completed some studies on chocolate and discovered the fat (cocoa butter) dissolves quickly and coats the mouth so it is the chocolate flavor we first taste. It appears then that it is fat, more than sugar, that makes sweet foods appetizing.

Unfortunately, fat has other qualities that make it less attractive. It has more than double the calories of sugar; and even worse, when fat is combined with sugar, research with lab animals indicates they can cause a greater weight gain than if they were consumed in separate, equal amounts.

So the next time you have an incurable craving or something sweet, think twice about grabbing for that candy bar. Try a fresh fruit choice, with natural sugars, and see if this doesn't help to cut through that "sweet attack".

Go for the colors!

The compound beta carotene, a form of vitamin A, has been found to neutralize those chemical products called free radicals that destroy the body cells and activate cancerous growth. Oliver Alabaster, M.D., associate professor of medicine at George Washington University and director of the Institute for Disease Prevention, in Washington D.C. indicated further that beta carotene may help the body fight cancer.

This compound is found in bright orange vegetables such as carrots and squash; leafy green vegetables, such as spinach and broccoli; and such fruits as watermelon and papaya. When you eat these healthy foods, you may be getting some added benefits.

Sulfite labeling

Sad experiences have taught us that sulfite preservatives can play havoc with the health of the sulfite-sensitive, even to the point of serious illness or death. Since the height of the controversy, the FDA has banned the use of sulfites to preserve fresh fruit and vegetables (no more sulfite-laden salad bars). But other less obvious action has taken place as well. Government agencies have taken steps to ensure sulfite labeling on a variety of food products.

In January of 1987, the law required that all packaged foods with traceable amounts of sulfites be labeled accordingly. In June of the same year, prescription drugs were included in the labeling law. Then in June of 1987, it was ruled that all meats and poultry products be sulfite-labeled as well. The beginning of 1988 marked the beginning of sulfite labeling on alcoholic beverages.

If you are sulfite-sensitive, you should check the labels and avoid foods that contain any of the sulfite agents: sulfites, sulfur dioxide, sodium sulfite, sodium bisulfite, sodium metabisulfite, potassium metabisulfite, or any other sulfite compound.

Here is a recipe that may help you get your family to eat their veggies! And assure you that this dip, unlike most others, does not contain fats and cholesterol to your family's diets.

Dipper's delight

8 oz. Mori-Nu Tofu
3 Tbsp. lemon juice
1/4 to 1/2 tsp. garlic powder
1/4 c. finely chopped onion, or 2 Tbsp. onion flakes
1/2 tsp. dill weed
1/4 tsp. pepper, if desired
3-4 drops low-sodium soy sauce
1 package frozen spinach, thawed, drained

Place all ingredients, except the spinach in a blender. Blend well. Place mixture in a bowl, add spinach. Mix together. Refrigerate, at least one hour before serving. Serve with carrots, broccoli, strips of green peppers, celery, mushrooms.

Mori-Nu-Tofu is available at your local Diet Center, and anyone is invited to purchase it at the center. It is free of fats and cholesterol and is an excellent source of protein.

Cottage Hospital hosts sports medicine, student trainer class

CHAMP, the Cottage Hospital Athletic Medicine Program, is sponsoring a two-day symposium, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 21-22. The program is designed to prepare students to function as student trainers for their schools and to provide coaches with a better working knowledge of athletic injury care.

The series of lectures and practical lab sessions will begin at 8:30 a.m. and run until 5:30 p.m. — both days. Presenters include, Nathan Gross, M.D., a specialist in physical medicine, Beth Ayn Deutsch, M.Ed., A.T.C., camp director Marti Van Eenennaam, A.T.C., along with Bill Sparks, R.P.T., and Meda Harrison, R.D., an expert in athletic nutrition at Henry Ford Hospital.

Scheduled lectures include such topics as the roles and responsibilities of the athletic trainer, anatomy and injuries of the lower leg, foot and ankle, and soft tissue injuries. Lab sessions cover taping, wrapping, splinting, evaluation of sports injuries, treatment and rehabilitation.

The CHAMP Sports Medicine Symposium and trainer camp will take place at Cottage Hospital's former Nurses' Residence, located at the rear of the hospital parking lot.

Each year, one out of every seven high school athletes suffers a significant sports injury, along with daily bumps and bruises. Often, coaches must assume responsibility for immediate care and treatment of these injuries, deciding whether to send these athletes for medical care, or put them back in the game.

The program will provide coaches with the knowledge they need to make the right decision when assessing injuries.

Students interested in a career in medical or health-related fields will find the Student Trainer Camp can project them into some real-life experience as a student athletic trainer for their schools. Health club personnel also will benefit from this intensive, two-day symposium.

The cost of the two-day symposium is $45. That fee includes lunches, morning and afternoon breaks, a T-shirt, and materials. Space is limited and a deposit of $25 is due by June 10.

For a detailed brochure and registration form, call 884-8600 (ext. 2553), Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Do you have high blood pressure? How do you know whether you do or not?

In many cases, high blood pressure, or hypertension, has no symptoms and the first sign of a problem often is the last. High blood pressure may reveal itself as a stroke, heart attack, or kidney failure.

The only way to protect yourself against the unseen dangers of high blood pressure is to have it checked on a regular basis. Cottage Hospital nurses will take your blood pressure, free of charge, on Tuesday April 26, 5:30 to 7 p.m. The Blood Pressure Screening Clinic is held in the lower level Boardrooms.

No appointment is necessary. Blood pressure screening will also be offered at the Cottage Hospital Fitness Fair held in conjunction with the annual Fun Run & Walk on May 1.

A variety of health information fitness testing is available to race participants and the community in the South gymnasium from noon to 3 p.m.

Truth of story excuses faults in 'Stand and Deliver'

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

The first thing you should know about "Stand and Deliver" is that it's a true story. That knowledge explains — and excuses — many of the things one would otherwise dislike about the picture.

The old platitude about truth being stranger than fiction certainly applies here. A mathematics teacher (Edward James Olmos) goes into one of the worst high schools in East Los Angeles and motivates the students in elementary math to master calculus. The year is capped off when the students take the advanced placement calculus test and get some of the highest scores in California.

That's the kind of thing that normally only happens in the movies, especially in the plethora of underdog-wins films popular with fans of Sylvester Stallone and Ralph Macchio. It would follow, then, that the proceedings in "Deliver" would surely wear thin for people who have seen anything like it in the past five years.

That's not the case. There are a few pat scenes, sure. Viewers may notice some filmic corner-cutting when the class' problem child (Lou Diamond Phillips) is converted to his teacher's way of thinking by little more than some professorial threats and a deal in the school's bookstore. And one may be tempted to look twice at the seemingly limitless learning capacities of students who just a few frames earlier were being called illiterate.

But that's the joy here. Knowing that this is a true story makes this film the screen equivalent of a bouquet of flowers — it reaffirms our faith in the human spirit and its capabilities. We excuse Director Ramon Menendez for patting himself and his lead performer on the back because that's exactly what we want to do by the time the final credits roll.

Before Jaime Escalante (Olmos) arrived at the predominantly Latino-enrolled Garfield High in 1982, the school was in danger of losing its accreditation. Teachers and administrators were stretching already depleted resources even further. And the programs were suffering.

By the end of his first year there, Escalante, called Kimo

(from the Spanish Kimo Sabe — "the man who knows all") had succeeded in training 18 students to pass the advanced placement exam. In 1983, that number increased to 31. In fact, it has increased every year since, most recently to 87 students in 1987. Escalante had problems convincing the authorities in scored higher than they did on the first exam. And Escalante has made believers of the skeptical during each succeeding year.

Olmos, best known as the crusty lieutenant on television's "Miami Vice," does a fine job of capsulizing Escalante's spirit and vigor. It's obvious that he spent as much time researching and developing his character as he did thinning his hair and gaining the 40 pounds necessary to play the part.

"Stand and Deliver" is nothing less than a contemporary fairy tale. It's the story of a man who persuaded an apathetic group of teenagers to sign an academic contract. In its tangible form, the contract was an expression of Escalante's insistence that the students go above and beyond in their study of calculus.

In a more symbolic sense, the contract was an expression of Escalante's love of and care for people who otherwise would not be given a chance to achieve greatness in their lives. That's the kind of story everyone needs to hear.

Edward James Olmos, left, as math teacher Jaime Escalante, demonstrates a practical application of a calculus equation to Lou Diamond Phillips in "Stand and Deliver."

'18 Again!' is showcase for talent old and new

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

In "18 Again!" George Burns as Jack Watson, sings "I Wish I Were Eighteen Again" at a bash given for his 81st birthday. But even as he laments his lost youth, there's a twinkle in his eye because at 81, he's still having a great time.

Proof positive is his girlfriend Madelyn (Anita Morris). When she bends over in her overflowing bodice to sing Happy Birthday to him in a seductive Marilyn Monroe delivery, the candles sizzle.

Actually Burns is 92 but for a forever young person, quibbling over a few years is out of order. At any rate, it is convenient for the storyline for him to be 81 because when the cake is turned around it reads 18, and that is exactly the age he becomes.

Filmakers seem to have a fascination for shuffling minds and bodies around. It happened in "Vice Versa" and "Like Father, Like Son." It's getting to a point where potions and weird artifacts are suspect.

It's not entirely clear how the switch between Jack and his grandson David (Charlie Schlatter) occurs, but it appears that it happens when Jack and David hold hands while being pulled from a car accident.

There is another difference here also. In the other two films, the viewer followed the adventures and misadventures of both victims. Here, though, David lies peacefully in Jack's body while Jack gets to cavort around in David's body. It doesn't appear to be too great a deal for David but the switch turns out fine for Jack.

Unlike his grandfather who whooped it up at 18, David is not having much fun as an 18-year-old. He is browbeaten at the fraternity house. He can't get to first base with the girl of his dreams and no matter how he tries, he can't even come close to his grandfather's track record.

All that changes when Jack takes over. The trouble with this arrangement is the audience sees very little of Burns once he turns his mind over to David. But even a little of Burns is worth a lot. This amazingly spry 92-year-old actor never fails to charm.

The new and improved David with the aid of Burns' voice-over-comments begins to experience all the fun that George had at 18. He even becomes a track star.

Schlatter does well with his dual personality. Most of the time he is himself but with a lot more self-confidence than before the accident. When he moves into his Burns role, he affects the same mannerisms, smokes the older actor's trademark cigars and has the same little grin.

George, as Jack, is still George. He has an endearing and enduring charm, spirit and wit. When asked why he doesn't date women his age, he answers, "I would, but there aren't any around."

While Jack represents youthful old age, his pal Charlie (Red Buttons) is in tune with his own time. He likes to talk over old times and enjoys the company of his peers. He is utterly devoted to Burns as only older people who have shared many times together can be.

Writers Josh Goldstein and Jonathan Prince and director Paul Flaherty present an amiable, witty script that showcases Burns' comic talents. Who could ask for anything more?

'Doubles' about male bonding

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Coming at you faster than a tennis ball flying back and forth over a net are comic situations and witticisms that make "Doubles" at the Birmingham Theatre an uproarious and irreverent comedy.

It features a foursome of "muppies," middle-age urban professionals, who meet weekly at the racquet club for tennis. As you might guess, there are no holds barred on the language or discussions that take place in the sanctuary of the locker room.

But it's not offensive. It's integral to the theme that the male needs a place of refuge where he can let go, be himself and even engage in a little horseplay, such as pouring ice cubes down the trunks of a partner or snatching a towel off another just as the girl attendant walks through.

There is more to "Doubles" than gags. The characters come to escape their various problems, but in a way, they bring them with them.

As they discuss, argue and trade insults, aggressions, fears and disappointments are worked off, and they come to know each other and themselves a little better.

Playwright David Witte has a rollicking good time with his four characters. David Groh, who starred as Joe, Valerie Harper's easy-going husband on the TV series "Rhoda," grabs center stage as the belligerent, gruff, always needling Lenny. The rest of the cast more or less revolves around him.

There is Arnie, (Jeff Ware) a skinny, mild-mannered lawyer and Lenny's favorite practical joke target. Arnie is not what you might call every woman's dream man, but he does OK with the married ladies.

George (Steve Pudenz), a stockbroker, aspires to write song lyrics. He has the SEC breathing down his back, but is more threatened by his wife "who is smarter than me."

Guy (Richard Cothell) is a newcomer who arrives to fill in for the usual fourth player. He is not welcomed. He is viewed as a break in the bonding that exists between the usual doubles. It doesn't help when he displays a compulsive need to correct and amend conversations, particularly when he invariably makes his point with examples taken out of National Geographic.

Good for a half-dozen laughs is Chuck (Matthew May), the tennis pro. Young, handsome and impeccably groomed, he struts through the locker room and without looking either way or noticing who's in the room, he inquires in one breath, "Hello, how are you, good to see you!"

Jacques Demers, the head coach of the Detroit Red Wings, signs an autograph for Eric Eshelman at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. Demers was the guest speaker at the Sportsman's Night stag dinner. The dinner was held in addition to the annual fall Wild Game Dinner. Chairman Dr. William Jennings, of the Woods, said the club expects to make it an annual event as well. A portion of the proceeds from Demers' appearance were donated to a charity of Demers' choice.

EVOLUTION OF THE SPECIES

The New Breed Jaguar XJ6

Introducing the 1988 Jaguar XJ6. Like its forebears, its sleek form is taut and well-muscled. Yet it faces the wind with greater aerodynamic efficiency. True to Jaguar tradition, its new aluminum alloy, fuel injected six cylinder engine has double overhead cams. However, the added sophistication of 24 valves further enhances power and high-speed response.

supple leather and fine wood, the new XJ6 adds advanced computer-age technology in everything from its climate control system to its Vehicle Condition Monitor, which continually checks 27 critical functions.

The 1988 Jaguar XJ6. It is totally new, yet it reflects the finest traits of its forebears. It marks the evolution of a legendary species. It's little wonder that upon previewing it in Europe, CAR magazine called it "the best sedan in the world."

The Junior League of Detroit 1988 Designers' Show House

The Junior League of Detroit has chosen an historically significant English Renaissance mansion as the site of its 1988 Designers' Show House.

Located at 315 Washington Road, Grosse Pointe, the house will showcase the talents of many metropolitan Detroit's leading interior designers. The Show House will be open to the public for tours Tuesday through Sunday from May 1 to May 30 (The last day being the only Monday the house will be open).

The house was built in 1924

as the residence of Ralph H. Booth and his family. Current owners, Peter and Cynthia Ruffner, have graciously allowed the Junior League of Detroit to use their home as its seventh biennial Designers' Show House.

The home features paneling in the dining room dating from 1570 that was originally a part of Hamilton Palace in Scotland. The library paneling dates to 1640 and came from Standish Hall in England. The 15,000 square foot house has 18 rooms.

The Junior League of Detroit, soon celebrating its seventy fifth year as a non-profit volunteer organization serving the Detroit metropolitan area, has sponsored show houses since 1976. Proceeds from this fund raising event are returned to the community through League sponsored projects and programs. Current projects include: Alcohol and Drug Community Education, Corporate Community Corps, Hospice Video, Riverfront Artists-In-Residence, Sibley House and The Tutoring T.R.E.E.

Redwood Decks Create Natural Outdoor Rooms

With the sky overhead as a ceiling, nature supplying a spectacular backdrop for walls, and warm, rich, enduring redwood decking providing the flooring and furniture, there isn't a more natural or economical way to add quality living space and extra value to a home. And there is no living space more readily adaptable to beautifully serving a multitude of changing family needs. All in the course of a single day a redwood deck can serve as a breakfast room, and exercise room, a reading room, a sunning room, a game room, a party room, or just a quietly pleasant retreat to get away.

In responding to the demands of the burgeoning deck market Simpson Timber Company in their new TopDeck redwood product line is marketing the most popular redwood decking grades and lumber sizes seasoned, graded for decking use, and conveniently available in lengths to customer specification. For a copy of an 8-page, four color TopDeck brochure describing the product and detailing redwood's outstanding properties and uses for decking and outdoor amenities write to: Redwood TopDeck, Simpson Timber Company, P.O. Easy to grow wildflowers

By FRANCES TENENBAUM

All the world loves wildflowers, yet relatively few gardeners grow them. There is a three-part theory to account for this apparent discrepancy: The almost universal belief that wildflowers are hard to grow; the myth that you cannot grow wildflowers in anything but an exact duplicate of their natural environment; and the fact that there is very little practical literature on how to grow them.

Although I think that theory is valid, I am tempted to reduce it to one somewhat flippant statement: People don't grow wildflowers because they once planted pink lady slippers — and they died.

But all wildflowers aren't pink lady slippers, or other wild orchids, or rare and temperamental plants. Hundreds of beautiful wildflowers are actually very easy to grow.

Wildflowers are one very good way of bringing individuality and a new sense of adventure and excitement into gardening, while at the same time encouraging the preservation and propagation of native plants. More and more varieties of bigger, brighter, sturdier zinnias are fine, but not all of us want only zinnias.

Equally important is the fact that native plants, once established, are far less demanding than most hybrids. Since they are usually perennials or self-sowing biennials, they are also a lot less expensive and far less trouble than the annuals we are accustomed to purchasing each year to use as fillers after the first flush of spring bloom has passed.

Here is a sampling of shade-loving wildflowers which you can easily incorporate into your own garden's flower beds. These shade-loving wildflowers will grow in average garden soil under exactly the same conditions that cultivated shade flowers require: Light or moderate shade with some sun and reasonable moisture.

Like cultivated plants, they won't do well in dense shade, but they will take quite a bit of sun if the soil isn't hot and dry.

Because this is such a desirable, reliable group of wildflowers, all of them are easily available from wildflower dealers everywhere, as well as from many general nurseries.

- Crested Iris (Iris cristata)—A low-growing, mat-forming plant, rarely more than six inches tall, but with large, light lavender-blue flowers.

It blooms in early spring, but the leaves remain all summer, making it a neat, attractive plant for the front border of a shady bed.

Because of its spreading nature, it is also useful as a ground cover or a plant for a shady rock garden.

Iris cristata is easily grown and may be divided at any time, or increased by removing a small piece from the mother plant.

The rhizomes should be planted close to the surface and not mulched heavily.

- Wild Geranium (Crane's-bill) (Geranium maculatum)—A very pretty pinkish-lavender flower with delicate, deeply notched leaves. The wild geranium (no relative of the Pelargonium that we know as the geranium) grows from 12 to 20 inches tall along shady roadsides in late spring.

It is a very easy plant to grow in a variety of shady locations and, if it has any fault, it is that it tends to self-sow rather freely, but no more so than many cultivated plants, and it is easy enough to weed out the seedlings. The flowers will quickly if picked.

- Wild Columbine (Aquilegia)—There are many species of this well-loved native plant, the most commonly sold being the American Columbine, A. canadensis, which has red and yellow flowers with long red spurs.

It grows from two to three feet tall in grassy clumps and self-sows generously.

You can easily increase your collection by waiting for the tiny seedlings to appear and then moving those, rather than digging up the mature plants. It blooms in late spring in most areas.

The biggest difference between easy flowers for shade and easy ones for sun is that some that thrive in sun could actually be too easy if you aren't careful where you use them. In their wild state, they usually grow under somewhat adverse conditions, unfertilized, in competition with other vegetation, and in rather poor, dry land.

If you treat them too well by bringing them into a heavily fertilized, well-watered, sunny flower border, they may repay your kindness by turning rank and weedy and then crowd out your specimen plants.

If you have perfect growing conditions in a sunny border, you'll do better to save that bed for your cultivated plants and look elsewhere on your property for places to use wildflowers.

The great virtue of the following sample of wildflowers is that they will do well in less than ideal conditions, where cultivated plants will suffer.

- Lance Coreopsis (Coreopsis lanceolata)—You may already have this one in your garden, since it is an accepted "cultivated" plant as well as a wild one.

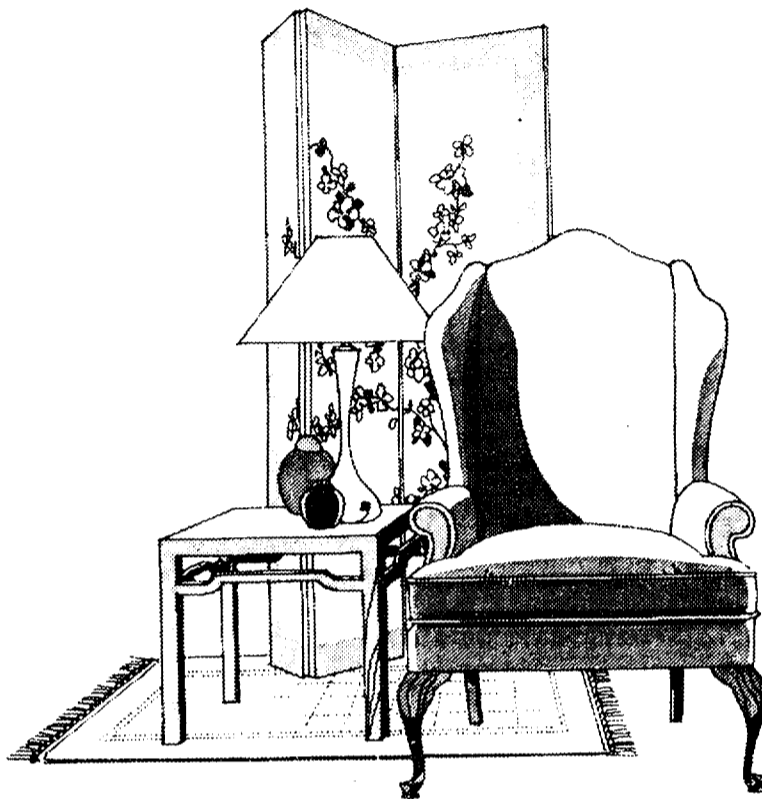

Because it doesn't grow rank and weedy, you can use it in a good sunny border as well as in its native dry, sandy or rocky soil.

It has bright yellow flowers with wide rays and makes a most attractive display throughout the summer.

There are several species of coreopsis, but this one and the similar C. grandiflora, a self-sowing biennial, are the best for dry, sunny areas.

Lance coreopsis is a perennial; it is easy to transplant from the wild, and may be divided in the spring.

MORE AND MORE HOMEOWNERS will be using a mulching mower this year. Mulching mowers such as this Bolens unit save time and return nutrients to the soil.

Mulching mowers regain popularity

For many homeowners, the most difficult part about mowing the lawn is the clippings. What do you do with the clippings?

According to experts at Bolens Corporation, the best answer may also be the easiest. Put them back into the earth with a mulching mower!

That's what independent university studies show. Agronomists point out that mulching results in a generally greener and healthier lawn, because nutrients are returned to the soil.

Mulch particles decompose and are absorbed by the grass root system within 14 days. Mulch allows evaporation at the soil level without adding to thatch buildup.

Mulching mowers, first introduced decades ago, are again popular because many of today's models are ideally suited to meet the demands of today's homeowner.

According to Bolens, a lawn mower designed for mulching must have a deep mowing deck and use a specially engineered multi-pitch blade.

The blade and deck combine to create air suction to hold grass upright and, once cut, to suspend the clippings in the mower chamber while repeatedly chopping them into finer particles.

These small particles are then blown deep into the turf, near the soil level, where they decompose quickly.

A conventional side discharge mower, on the other hand, blows clippings horizontally onto the lawn rather than forcing them down into the turf.

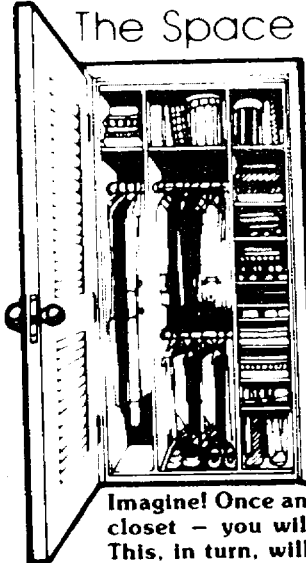

The long clippings lie on the lawn surface in unsightly brown clumps, and this layer of dead clippings can sometimes become thick enough to exclude sunlight and cause yellowing and weakening of the turf.

Homeowners also can bag the clippings, but it generally takes 40 to 50 percent more mowing time to empty the bags and dispose of clippings.

Roofing: Function vs. aesthetics

Even though your old roof may still be watertight, take a close look at it. Have the shingles started to curl, disintegrate, crack, rot, blow off or even harbor fungus?

The fact is that most roofing materials, especially in the Sunbelt, begin to detract from the home's appearance within just a few years of installation.

This deterioration is impossible to avoid with materials such as asphalt, fiber glass, tile and wood. These materials begin to deteriorate the moment that they are installed, taking your roof through a process of becoming unattractive and, eventually, non-functional as well.

For hundreds of years, however, metal has been used on roofs where long life and function are of prime importance. Rustic Shingle aluminum roofing combines the aesthetics of wood shake-shingles with the long-recognized practicality of metal roofing.

Rustic Shingle was engineered in 1959 and has such a successful track record that its manufacturer backs it with a 40-year limited warranty. Coated with Glidden's Ultralast finish, Rustic Shingle achieves the peak of roofing performance.

Rustic Shingle is also energy-efficient. Because aluminum reflects radiant heat, homes are kept naturally cooler in summer and warmer in winter. This makes it particularly popular in the Sunbelt, where it reduces cooling loads by 34 percent and more.

In addition, Rustic Shingle carries a Class A U.L. fire rating. The product's light weight allows it to be installed easily over most existing roofs.

Rather than being a temporary fix, Rustic Shingle is a permanent investment that will protect, beautify and distinguish your home. When applied by a qualified professional, Rustic Shingle will provide unmatched home security and long-term economy.

For free information on Rustic Shingle, write to Dept. M-13, Classic Products, Inc., P.O. Box 701, Piquet, OH 45356.

WHILE MOST ROOFING MATERIALS lose their aesthetic appeal after just a few years, Rustic Shingle maintains its ideal combination of aesthetics and function.

Hardwood floors are durable, beautiful and even easy to care for, experts say

Since ancient times, wood has provided fuel, tools, food and shelter. It has also provided hardwood floors, that in some cases have lasted for literally hundreds of years.

Other floor coverings can't compete with the durability, beauty and character of wood but, if you want them to retain their sensational sheen, it's important to care for them properly.

Here are some basic care and cleaning tips to make your floor care easier, from the experts at Bruce Hardwood Floors, America's largest manufacturer of hardwood floors for over 100 years.

There are a multitude of finishes available on hardwood floors today. Two popular finishes are a factory prefinished baked-in stain and wax finish, and an ultra-violet cured polyurethane finish.

Bruce makes three types of easy-to-use floor care products that are just right for these finishes. Wax finishes should be swept or vacuumed regularly to remove surface dust before the soil gets "walked into" the finish.

To keep the wood grains glowing, it's best to re wax floors only once or twice a year, depending on traffic. Between waxings, buffing with a heavy weight circular buffer will enliven the luster.

Polyurethane finishes require no waxing. To maintain, simply sweep or vacuum up loose dirt.

Cleaning can be accomplished with a light application of a cleaner made for use on polyurethane or wax finished floors, such as Bruce's Clean 'n' Strip.

A clear liquid paste wax and cleaner such as Bruce's Lite 'n' Brite is recommended for all light color wood floors with a wax finish, and a liquid paste wax and cleaner that contains cleaning agents and dark stain pigments such as Bruce's Dark 'n' Rich is recommended for all dark shades of wood floors with a wax finish.

As with any floorcovering material, a few moments of care and a little common sense can go a long way in keeping your new hardwood floor looking its best.

For instance, if your floor abuts exterior doors, put outside door mats at the entrances to keep dirt and moisture from being tracked in.

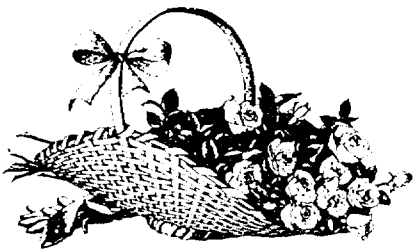

Inside, you may want to add an area rug to further prevent dirt and moisture from being tracked onto your hardwood floor.

Never damp mop a wood floor or apply a water base wax, as the water can dull the finish and permanently damage the floor.

For more hardwood floor care tips and floor care product information, write for a free copy of Bruce's Floor Care Guide: Bruce Hardwood Floors, 16803 Dallas Parkway, Dept. M, Dallas, TX 75248.

Fertilizing for better roses:

The rose has long been a favorite among garden flowers. Nero, the Roman Emperor, is said to have strewn his banquet hall with rose petals, and Sappho, the Greek poetess, was the first to call the rose, "The Queen of Flowers."

Today's roses still top the list of garden favorites, and are sturdier and more free-flowering than ever. When well-tended, they will produce an abundance of flowers, from early summer until frost arrives in the fall.

Most rose growers seem well aware of the need to spray or dust regularly to control insects and diseases; however, few seem to be as well aware of the need for an adequate supply of nutrients.

Roses are heavy feeders, and they must have fertilizer applied at certain critical times, if they are to be vigorous and productive.

A newly planted rose will have lost a great deal of stem and root tissue during the harvesting and planting procedures. For it to become established quickly and replace this tissue, it must be well supplied with nutrients.

An established rose will also benefit from fertilizer application when it is pruned in the spring.

Although its root system will remain undisturbed, the severe pruning most often required to remove winter damaged wood and to shape the plant must be replaced with new growth. This, too, calls for an adequate nutrient supply.

The rose flower may be cut for use in an arrangement or allowed to remain for its effect in the garden. In either case, new growth is forced for the development of the next flower. Once again, this forced growth necessitates fertilizer application.

From the time that a rose has been cut back until it flowers again, some six to eight weeks of time will have gone by.

To ensure continued vigor and a quality flower, it is often necessary to provide another application of fertilizer when the new flower bud first becomes visible.

Dry fertilizers can be used for roses. However, they are difficult to apply with accuracy and slow to take effect. On the other hand, water soluble fertilizers, such as Miracle-Gro for Roses, are already dissolved when applied. This allows quick penetration to the roots, as well as rapid absorption into the plant.

A water soluble fertilizer is easily applied with a watering can in a predetermined amount; therefore, there is no danger from burning if the directions are followed.

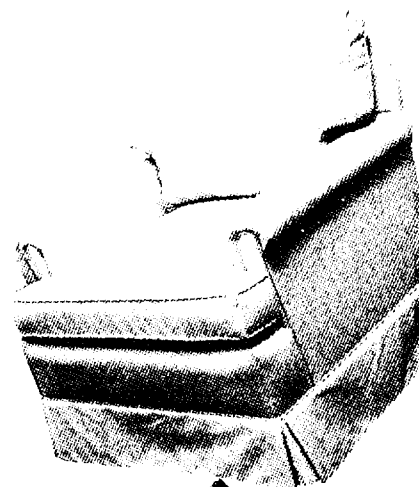

Water soluble fertilizers will not damage the foliage. In fact, foliar application is beneficial—especially so if nutrient deficiencies are evident. Foliar absorption is even quicker than that which takes place through the roots.

For this reason, professional rose growers often mix water soluble fertilizer with spray materials, unless expressly forbidden on the pesticide label.

One word of caution must be given with regard to fertilizing roses. Do not fertilize during the six weeks prior to frost in cold regions. This allows the plant to mature, so that it will be less susceptible to winter injury.

To Better Serve You

With 17 years in business and three separate buildings side-by-side, Valley Home Improvement finally said, "That's enough walking!" With 8,000 past customers coming back for more improvements, Valley felt its time to improve their own property by connecting all three buildings into one beautiful showroom!

Currently under construction on Harper in St. Clair Shores, between 11 and 12 mile roads, is the new modern facility that will house a Kitchen/Bath Center along with custom built Pella windows, employee offices and a warehouse. The owners, Brian and Janice Dunn, decided to stay in the Shores and continue to serve homeowners faced with repairs on homes 10 years or older.

Formerly called "Valley Siding Services," Valley changed their name to include all interior remodeling, including kitchens, baths, additions, and sunrooms along with replacement windows. During the years 1986 and 1987, Valley was awarded the largest dealer awards in the entire state of Michigan by Pella Windows in West Bloomfield. They continue to handle and install more Pella Windows on homes than any other company. All custom built bay and bow windows are built on the premises.

Valley Home Improvement is open from 9 a.m. until 7 p.m., Monday through Friday, with later hours by appointment. They are also open on Saturday from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. for your convenience. For more information, you can reach them by calling them at 775-5190 during business hours.

Fix it now . . . And enjoy it

At some point in time, most all of us will sell our home. Whether we are younger and moving up into bigger, more opulent digs, corporate transferees moving with that next promotion or the veteran home owner, thinking condo or sunbelt, its something most of us eventually will do.

Funny coincidence all of us share though, when it comes to selling our homes and moving, we are all more concerned with the prospective purchaser of our home and how they will find our house than we were for ourselves. Why is that?

We lived for ten years with no storm door, the stuck kitchen window and the front door with no key to the lock. Why? We put up with the fact that we had to tape a sign on the front of the house that said "Doorbell out of order, please knock." But we can't live with the thought that our realtor will have to take prospects through our back door or that the new owner will look out on his new neighborhood through broken windows. Why could we live with these problems yet cringe if everything is not perfect for those wonderful yet faceless mortgage assumers who will soon be parking their snowblowers in our garage where ours used to sit.

In my business, helping people fix and improve their homes, assisting them in readying them for marketing. I have seen this scenario scores of times and have wondered, sometimes aloud, "Why in the world did you wait 18 years to get a key to your front door? Why the heck did you live for almost a decade with a perpetual bruised hip from slamming an illfitting door shut?" I guess that doorbell didn't mean too much until now.

If I could give advice to any home owner, it would be, fix it, enjoy it, use it, you'll probably end up doing it when you move anyway so why not get some benefit yourself.

The "Guru of How-To" solves common household mysteries

The roof isn't leaking, but the upstairs walls and ceilings are damp. New storm windows, designed to keep moisture out, have mist and frost on the inside. In the basement, a suspicious, powdery substance grows on the walls.

Has the house gone haywire? No, says Al Ubell, America's "Guru of How-To."

Ubell, household hints and safety editor for Family Circle magazine and resident expert of the ABC Talkradio network's national call-in program for do-it-yourselfers, hears numerous reports of household mysteries, of maintenance problems which seem to defy logic.

"Most phone calls and letters I receive relate to moisture problems," Ubell says. "Moisture is the home maintenance mystery, because it seeps, leaks, freezes, evaporates—it's a versatile enemy of many surfaces in the home."

Here's Ubell's best advice on how to solve common household mysteries:

• The Case of the Weeping Walls—Moisture on walls and ceilings doesn't always mean a leaky roof. In cool weather, warm moisture vapor inside the house is sucked through wallcoverings.

When it hits the cooler insulation, condensation forms in the wall. This damages insulation and soaks through the wall, damaging wood, plaster and wallcoverings.

UBELL SAYS: "The interior wall paint or wallcovering must provide a vapor barrier to prevent moisture from penetrating. Quality alkyd or oil base paints are adequate barriers, as is vinyl wallpaper."

• The Cracking, Blistering Wood Mystery—Wood surfaces of all types (indoor/outdoor trim, fences, doors, windows, decks) are especially vulnerable to moisture damage, and must be properly protected.

UBELL SAYS: "Most moisture damage to wood is discovered after the fact. To reclaim the surface, all cracking, peeling and rotting must be repaired before applying primer and paint to a clean, smooth, dry surface."

"I recommend a new paint, which I recently tested, called Rust-Oleum Wood Saver™. It has Teflon® and protects wood better than any paint I've tried; water beads up and evaporates without penetrating the wood."

"And, remember, even the pressure-sensitive wood used for decks, which most people think is protected from moisture damage, should have a water repellent paint or stain to protect the investment."

• The Frosty Mist Mystery—Storm windows are among the best energy and money-savers for homeowners. When frost and mist form, even on new storm windows, it doesn't mean that the windows have failed.

UBELL SAYS: "If the windows mist or frost outside or on the insulation pane, that's okay, but if the moisture penetrates to the inside, check for plugged weep holes. Located on the frame, they should drain off condensation when the temperature outside falls below freezing. Also, loose frame screws, poor weatherstripping, old caulking and cracked insulation panes can allow moisture to enter."

• The Perplexing Powder Problem—Seepage in the basement creates a condensation/evaporation cycle which leaves salt and lime deposits on walls. This white powdery substance is called efflorescence.

UBELL SAYS: "First, the powder should be scrubbed away, and a damp-proofing compound applied. If you install a ventilation fan to reduce humidity, remember the rule of thumb: Allow one square foot of vent opening for each 300 square feet of basement area."

• Confusing Corrosion—Metal surfaces, like those in kitchens, bathrooms and basements where increased exposure to moisture exists, will rust.

UBELL SAYS: "Fight rust as soon as it's visible by thoroughly cleaning the surface and using a rust-resistant coating to protect from moisture. Use a rust remover and a quality moisture-protection paint."

• The Mildew Mystery—Moisture and bacteria in the air can create mildew in poorly ventilated areas such as small rooms, closets and basements. The fungus destroys wallcoverings, ruins clothes and produces an unpleasant odor.

UBELL SAYS: "Exhaust fans reduce the moisture content in enclosed areas, and household disinfectants should be used to fight the bacteria. If you find mildew, clean with bleach and water (five percent bleach concentration). When dry, the surface should be coated with a paint that contains a fungicide."

• The Dubious Drip Mystery—Plumbing in the basement or an upstairs ceiling drips water, but a check for leaks reveals none. The cause is condensation, which forms when warm air hits cold water pipes. These drips damage floors, furniture and ceilings.

UBELL SAYS: "There are a number of insulation products available with which the average do-it-yourselfer easily can wrap the offending pipes. They come in several sizes and weights, depending on your needs, and pressure-sensitive backing keeps them in place. If the pipes are not exposed, regular fiber glass is just as effective."

HOUSEPLANTS HELP FIGHT INDOOR AIR POLLUTION

Want to fight indoor air pollution in your home? According to National Wildlife magazine, thousands of people may be poisoned in their homes each year by toxic substances such as carbon monoxide and nitrogen dioxide.

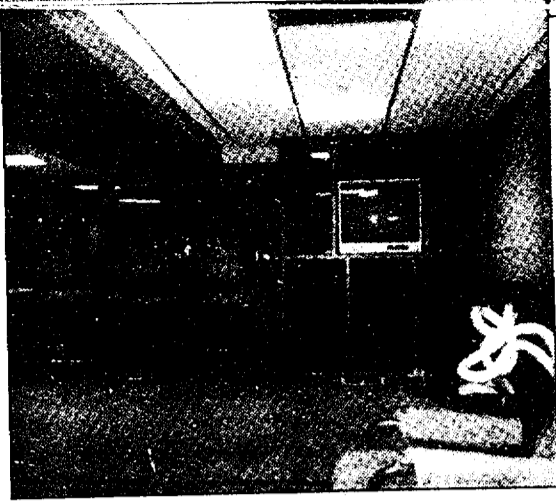

Luckily, houseplants, particularly spider plants, are excellent air cleaners.

So put some greenery in your home and breathe more easily.

TOXIC WASTES AFFECTS COMMUNITIES OF ALL ECONOMIC LEVELS

Just because you live in a wealthy neighborhood, it doesn't mean you are immune from health problems caused by toxic waste.

According to International Wildlife magazine, a study by the Council on Economic Priorities found that middle-income neighborhoods, not the poorest neighborhoods, have the highest levels of toxic waste and related cancer deaths.

Helpful hints on choosing and hanging chandeliers

Chandeliers were originally light fixtures designed to hold a number of candles and were suspended from the ceiling to reduce the hazard of fire.

A chandelier is the crowning jewel of a tastefully designed room. A chandelier is "on" even when it's off.

• Over a dining room table, the bottom of the chandelier should be 30 inches above the table and 12 inches narrower (six inches on each side), so people won't bump their heads upon arising.

• In an average-size dining room, bulb wattage should generally not exceed 200 to 300 watts, and should never exceed that recommended by the manufacturer.

• If a dining room's ceiling height is more than eight feet, raise the chandelier three inches for each additional foot of ceiling height.

• Light from a chandelier should not be the only source of illumination (a mistake often seen in dining rooms). Supplemental light sources may include a choice of recessed downlights in the ceiling, wall sconces and table or floor lamps.

• Styles are available with center downlight on separate switch (helpful for lighting task work over a table).

• The rule-of-thumb for a chandelier's proper size when not hung over a table: It can be in inches what the diagonal of the room is in feet.

• Hundreds of styles are available in crystal, brass, pewter, copper, chrome, wrought iron, silver, wood, ceramics and look-alikes of these materials.

• Consider a design to harmonize with decor, i.e., wrought-iron with Early American, wood-finish with Country, crystal with French Provincial.

• Where possible, position a chandelier where it can be seen from the outside—i.e., through a window.

• A chandelier can be hung above end tables, corner tables and game tables, desks, bars or any piece of furniture that is not a seat.

• Positioning a chandelier off-center above a buffet against the wall will make a small dining room appear larger.

• Hanging a chandelier from a swag, or draped chain, is possible when the power source is inconvenient (hanging from a track is another possibility).

• Always install a dimmer for control of mood and atmosphere.

Don't Move . . . Improve!

Many homeowners who are contemplating major kitchen remodeling or adding a bathroom — the two most important and expensive rooms in the home — have questions as to approximate cost, the percentage of this cost that would be recovered on resale, and what the latest design trends are. This article, compiled by the staff of Customcraft Inc. — a custom remodeling contractor for more than 32 years and builder of award-winning kitchens and bathrooms — and from results of a national survey taken by Remodeling Contractor magazine, is an attempt to enlighten those who are considering either of these major projects.

Major kitchen remodeling

The cost range for an average size kitchen is $10,000 to $30,000. Resale recovery cost is approximately 90%.

Major remodeling includes design planning, new cabinets, new countertops, new appliances, new sink and faucet, new lighting, and new floor covering.

Latest trends: Multi-use open kitchen designs, center islands, more counterspace, angled layouts, more built-ins, dual sinks and appliances, and more sophisticated lighting.

White and almond continue to be the most popular colors, with gray now a strong third choice. Light woodtones, washed white or gray, are also popular.

Countertops are being given extra attention to create elegant and durable work surfaces. Granite and Corian, with its latest array of new colors, are becoming increasingly popular.

More kitchens are being planned and installed by specialists (designers and dealers) than by contractors. You should work with a single designer that you like; two or three designers offering suggestions muddles the overall effort.

Establish your designer's "designability" and look at a number of past projects to ensure that he or she can meet your taste requirements. A showroom is most helpful.

From start to finish — planning, design, delivery of products, and construction — the average major kitchen remodel takes four months, assuming that custom cabinets are involved. The actual construction phase will take approximately four weeks for 95% completion and you must plan for major household disruptions for 50% of this time period.

Adding a bathroom (within the existing structure)

The cost can vary from $6,000 to $13,000 for a 5x7 foot bathroom with sink, tub, toilet, vanity unit, tile tub area, tile floor, tri-view medicine cabinet, etc. Expect to pay up to $35,000 if you want to add a whirlpool tub, separate steam shower, bidet, and a second sink. The "deluxe" bathroom would probably require major wall tear out to create a larger area. Resale recovery of cost is approximately 122%.

Latest trends: Whirlpool tubs, separate showers, steam units, taller vanities, skylites, glass block, heat lamps, etc.

Buy the best quality fixtures you can get. They will last longer and still look good at resale time. Also, stick with major brand-name products to ensure availability of replacement parts.

Buying homeowners insurance? Consider all replacement costs.

Sarah and Mike Connor were thrilled about purchasing their first home. Amid their celebration, however, was some serious thinking about how they would protect their purchase.

For millions of Americans, a home represents the largest single investment they'll ever make. That makes buying adequate insurance coverage an important follow-up step.

When shopping for their insurance, the Connors found that most home insurance policies provide replacement cost coverage for the dwelling.

When insuring their personal property the Connors quickly became acquainted with the two major types of property coverage: Actual cash value (ACV) and replacement cost. The differences between the two coverages are very important.

Simply stated, ACV insurance, when purchased, covers the contents of a home for its original worth less a deduction for depreciation (wear and tear, age, etc.). In other words, a company would pay the cash amount insured property is worth at the time of loss.

For example, if the Connors purchased a sofa for $1,000 five years ago, it might be worth only $500 today because of depreciation. If the sofa were destroyed by fire, $500 (the actual cash value) is what the insurance company would pay under ACV coverage.

However, the Connors probably couldn't buy the same sofa for only $500 today, because inflation may have increased the price to as much as $1,500.

For homeowners, the alternative to ACV is replacement cost insurance. This coverage usually pays the cost of replacing property at today's prices without a deduction for depreciation.

In other words, the Connors might receive $1,500, or an amount necessary to replace the destroyed sofa with a unit of the same type and quality.

To obtain replacement cost coverage for the contents of their home, the Connors should know that insurance companies generally require homeowners to carry an amount of insurance that is at least 80 percent of the full replacement value of the home. This enables homeowners to collect the full replacement cost of any partial loss.

To understand how much insurance they need, the Connors should determine the cost of rebuilding their home from scratch.

This should not be confused with the market value of the home. The market value is the price the home would sell for, and could be more or less than the replacement cost.

For example, if the cost of rebuilding the Connors' home was $100,000, to qualify for replacement cost coverage on its contents, they would have to insure their home for $80,000 (80 percent of $100,000).

Therefore, if a fire should cause $10,000 damage to the kitchen of their home, the Connors would receive $10,000, less their deductible, to cover the necessary repairs.

If the Connors had decided to insure for less than the required 80 percent, they would collect a lesser percentage of the $10,000 loss, depending on how far below the 80 percent level they chose to insure.

Consumers should shop around for the coverage that fits their needs, and periodically check with their insurance company to make sure their home coverage is up-to-date. As rebuilding costs increase, insurance coverage also must rise.

For additional information, consumers are encouraged to call their insurance agents, brokers or company representatives. The Insurance Information Institute offers a free pamphlet titled "Home Insurance Basics." To order, consumers can call, toll free, 1-800-221-4954.

Whirlpool or Spa: Making the right choice

When today's homeowners wish to add a little luxury to their baths, their thoughts frequently turn to whirlpools or spas. They may envision long, private soaks, or perhaps the camaraderie of friends or, maybe, the benefits of soothing hydrotherapy.

Very likely, they view the spa and the whirlpool as one and the same thing. But there are key differences that prospective buyers should be aware of before they make a purchase, according to Kohler Company's Joe Roark, product manager, Spas, and Linda Mayer, senior product manager, Fixtures.

Both spas and whirlpools provide multi-directional whirlpool jet water action, so the homeowner's decision about which product to buy should be based on such considerations as space and portability, as well as how the unit will be used and by whom.

The primary difference between a spa and a whirlpool is that a whirlpool is filled and drained for each bathing use, while a spa heats, filters and recirculates the same, chemically-treated water for a period of two to three months.

Whirlpools are designed for one or two bathers, and can be used for everyday cleansing with soap and shampoo.

Because a whirlpool is a permanent installation, it is built into an enclosure or tiled into a tub surround and it requires installation of water lines, a faucet and a drain, Mayer said.

Mayer also noted that choice of a particular whirlpool model may be dictated by space considerations, especially if the unit is to be installed as part of a remodeling project.

However, she said, "in many cases, a whirlpool can be installed in the space of a standard five-foot bath, so it is possible to upgrade a bathroom without major alterations to room size."

Depending on how the whirlpool is to be used, a prospective buyer needs to consider whether one or two people generally will use it, and whether a unit shaped along body contours would add to personal bathing comfort.

A whirlpool offers the consumer the flexibility of a multi-dimensional bathing product, doubling as a bath and leisure center, Mayer said.

Spas are generally larger than whirlpools and are designed for two or more occupants.

A spa can be a practical alternative to a swimming pool if space is at a premium, Roark said. It is self-contained, with the heater located inside the spa surround. A thermo-insulating cover, placed over the spa when it is not in use, will keep the water warm and clean.

Spas are available in both inground and portable models, but the portable ones are the most popular because they are less expensive to set up and can be ready for use within a relatively short time of delivery, Roark said.

A portable spa can be moved outside or indoors at the users' preference, because it does not require special plumbing.

It is simply a matter of filling the spa with a garden hose, plugging in the heater and enjoying a leisurely soak. Because a spa is designed for relaxation and hydrotherapy, soap and shampoo should not be used in it.

Among the options the prospective spa buyer should consider is an overflow system which prevents water in the spa from overflowing when someone steps into it; other important considerations are the size of the unit and the type of seating preferred.

Roark pointed out that an overflow prevention system saves money because it prevents the loss of heated water from the spa. And, as for seating, if the unit will be used primarily for hydrotherapy, lounge-type seating might be preferable to other seating options.

And what about the so-called "hot tub?"

Strictly speaking, a "hot tub" is a large wooden tub, capable of seating several people. It has a heater to maintain constant water temperature.

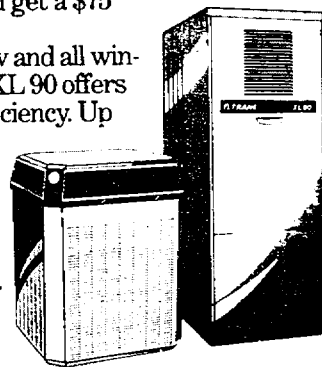

Originally made from halves of California wine casks, the hot tub was a forerunner to today's spas. Relatively few true hot tubs are being manufactured today.

If you are looking for a glamour treatment for your kitchen, it is time to get reacquainted with laminate. Yes, you read it right! Good old laminate, always a favorite for its easy care and durability, is one of the Eighties' great fashion surprises.

Today, you will encounter laminate in so many colors it can be hard to choose: elegant faux granites and marbles; sleek metal and lacquer surfaces; woodgrains so realistic one might fear splinters; patterns ranging from spatters to stripes; and exciting dimensional textures in such designs as leather, slate and linen.

An equally big surprise is the way high pressure decorative laminate is used in today's kitchen. Visit a design-conscious kitchen showroom or leaf through some of those glossy magazines, and you will see laminate adding style to cabinets, range hoods, tables, shelves, desks, lighting canopies, window frames, doors and dinettes as well as to countertops and backsplashes.

Chic countertops

Despite the continuous onslaught of design fads, laminate remains the most popular material for those hardworking countertops, say professional designers.

That is hardly surprising for, with laminate, you not only eliminate tile's pesky grout problems and granite's high cost, you also get fashion options particularly welcome for this conspicuous surface.

No other material, for example, gives you as many color choices, so here is an easy way to give a humdrum kitchen a shot in the arm.

Just picture a hunter green counter in a kitchen with pale oak cabinets. Or how about hot pink or bright yellow for a white kitchen?

Countertop edges, too, have become fashion objects. Sometimes they are nicely rounded or curve upward ever so gently to form what designers call "a no-drip edge." These are especially effective shapes for counters sporting a luxurious faux stone design.

Others incorporate wood trim or form colorful, striped edges, courtesy of a new kind of laminate, which boasts color all the way through.

Since neutral color is the best idea for large kitchen surfaces, paying special attention to countertop edges makes a lot of sense.

In a way, highlighting these edges is similar to accessorizing a basic dress. For example, patriotic red, white and blue-striped edges could be just the zip needed in a white kitchen.

Or consider a combo of mauve, pink and black stripes if your kitchen is one of the fashionable new grays.

Eurostyling

But laminate's biggest new kitchen role is unquestionably in Eurostyled cabinetry. You see these frameless cabinets, with their sleek laminate surfaces, in today's best kitchens, but even they are now under the influence of the laminate industry's color savvy.

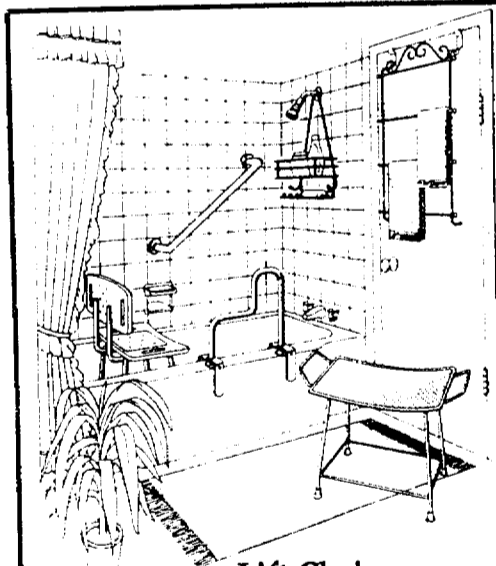

While the first Eurostyle cabinets were almost always white or almond, the new versions may well be pink, gray, peach or even black.

An interesting feature of Eurostyled cabinetry are tambours. Think of the flexible, slatted closure of a roll-top desk, and you have got the basic principle of the tambours.

They are great for appliance "garages," cabinet doors that must slide rather than open outward, and any curved surface. They are also used where textural interest is sought for a soffit or wall.

Local home and building centers stock only the basic laminate colors and finishes, but they should be able to show you small chips of the full lines available from major manufacturers.

The brand names to ask for are Formica, Micarta, Nevamar, Pionite and Wilsonart. Or you might simply contact distributors of these major brands. You will find them in the "laminate" and "cabinetry" categories of your phone book.

A quick quiz tests wood furniture IQ

FOR AN EASY WAY to identify solid hardwood furniture, look for the solid hardwood symbol and hang tags from the Hardwood Manufacturers Association. They identify furniture made in the United States of solid American hardwoods.

Are you a smart furniture shopper? Do you know how to judge quality and value before investing in wood furniture? Test your furniture IQ with this quiz from the Hardwood Manufacturers Association.

- 1) What does "Solid Wood" mean on a furniture tag, label or advertisement?
- 2) What does "all wood" mean?
- 3) Does "oak finish" mean the furniture is oak?
- 4) How can you tell the difference between "solid wood" and "all wood" furniture?
- 5) What are hardwoods?
- 6) What is a dovetail joint?
- 7) What does "steam-bent" mean?
- 8) Hardwood frames are a sign of quality in upholstered furniture. True or False?

A fact-filled booklet for furniture shoppers, called the Solid Guide to Hardwood Furniture, answers these and other questions about quality wood furniture.

To receive your copy, send $1 for postage and handling to Solid Guide, Department M, 930 Penn Avenue, Pittsburgh, PA 15222.

Answers

- 1) "Solid Wood" means that lumber and no other alternative materials are used to make the furniture. Scratch the surface and you'll find more solid wood, making it easy to repair and refinish.
- 2) "All wood" means that several types of forest products were used to make that piece of furniture. An "all wood" entertainment center, for example, might feature a combination of solid wood, wood veneers, plywood or a composite material such as particleboard.

3) Not necessarily. Wood names often are used to describe the color or simulated grain pattern on a piece of furniture. "Oak finish" could refer to the oak-like appearance of an imitation material.

4) In solid wood furniture, the grain flows over the edge in the same direction as the grain on the top. That's because it's one piece of wood. On furniture that isn't solid, the grain on the edge usually is perpendicular to the grain on the top.

For an easy way to identify solid hardwood furniture, look for the solid hardwood symbol and hang tags from the Hardwood Manufacturers Association. They identify furniture made in the United States of solid American hardwoods.

5) Hardwoods are broadleaved trees that lose their foliage, in contrast to evergreens. Some popular furniture hardwoods are oak, ash, maple, cherry, alder, poplar and walnut.

6) The dovetail joint is one of the strongest ways to connect two pieces of wood. It derives its name from the wedge shape resembling a dove's tail.

7) Steam-bending is a process that softens some solid hardwoods enough for them to be curved, often for use in chair backs or beds.

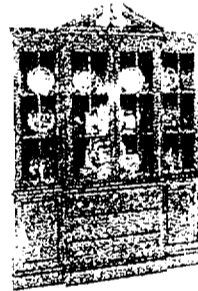

8) True. Properly dried hardwood frames provide strength and sturdiness to a sofa, loveseat or upholstered chair.

ON THE WALL OR IN THE HAND, Chronotherm III Fuel Saver thermostats by Honeywell can be programmed in four simple steps.

Programmable thermostats: Smart choice for summer indoor comfort

Switch to a "smart" programmable thermostat to ensure a cool home for your family this summer.

You'll wake up comfortable on hot summer mornings and step into a cool home after sizzling, sultry days. While you're away from home or asleep, you'll save energy because the temperature can be set up to an energy-saving mode.

Although the concept of set-back on heating is widely used, set-up on cooling is used very infrequently. Setting the thermostat up (e.g., moving the indoor temperature closer to the outdoor temperature), will result in smaller heat gain and lower cooling costs.

In most cities, about 10 percent of cooling energy can be saved by daytime cooling set-up.

Now, programmable thermostats are simple to operate. The new line of Honeywell Chronotherm III Fuel Saver thermostats was human-factor engineered, making them the easiest-to-program thermostats available.

In fact, they operate off a factory-set program or can be re-programmed in four simple steps to suit your schedule. The convenient touch panel allows you to set a different schedule for weekdays, Saturday and Sunday, or each day of the week. You may also program up to four different time periods and four different temperatures in each schedule.

Once programmed, these "smart" thermostats calculate when the air conditioning will go on to have the house at the desired temperature by the time you wake up or come home.

Typically, a unit pays for itself in one year. Models are available for conventional and electric heating and cooling systems, heat pumps and multi-stage systems.

David Michael Johns of Pierson Interiors talks about interior design

David Michael Johns I.D.S., is a man of impeccable taste and style as is evidenced by the interior design work he has done for some of Detroit's most prestigious families. As co-owner of Pierson Interiors of Bloomfield Hills, his list of clients reads like a Detroit's Who's Who, but interior design is not David's only talent. His ability to communicate with his clients and understand their unique needs has helped him rise to the heights as one of the areas most accomplished designers.

"Any designer can create a room that is a monument to the designer — but if it doesn't fit the needs of the client then its a failure," says Johns, whose relationship with his clients is paramount.

"I don't believe there is such a thing as 'only this will work,' there are always options. You can get function combined with gorgeous design whether you are spending $5,000 or $50,000. And it must be worth the money whatever the client is spending. In the end you must satisfy the client."

Johns, who started his interior design career over 15 years ago learned the business from a number of interior design gurus before branching out on his own in 1984, when he started David Michael Johns Interiors in Clinton Township. Four and a half years later his million dollar plus business was bulging at the seams and expansion was imminent. That is when he formed a partnership with the 40 year old Pierson Interiors, then located in Somerset Mall. Together they moved the location to Bloomfield Hills and David brought along his staff of six competent designers.

The timing was perfect for both. Pierson Interiors was ready to expand and wanted a young, contemporary partner. David's credentials were impeccable and they were additionally impressed by his proven business acumen. They joined forces and the result is the exceptional Pierson Interiors, located on Telegraph Road at Long Lake in Bloomfield Hills.

Rich pattern mix helps to make your home "homey"

There was a time—not long ago—when if a home had plaid, print, check and paisley fabrics all living side-by-side, it was considered an eclectic nightmare. Today, such homes are back in style, due to the current popularity of nostalgic interiors.

The American home has often been filled with texture and pattern. Our early heritage was one of patchwork quilts, homespun tablecloths, embroidered samplers and calico curtains.

The Victorian era heralded in layered fabrics of lace, linen, velvet, elaborate florals and paisleys. And traditional interiors featured rich damasks, tapestries and needlepoint. All of these interior looks are being recalled, now that the comfortable "homey" home has returned.

Knowing how to put it all together is where interior designers and homeowners with good color and pattern sense come in. Both are helped by firms that offer coordinated wallcoverings and fabrics.

Greeff's Shelburne Museum Collection has printed, woven and lace fabrics, plus wallcoverings and border—for a total environment.

Being an authentic collection of early American documents, the mix of homespun, quiltweaves and chintzes recreates the rustic appeal of a late 18th century interior.

The colors are the original shades of red, blue, gold and green, which added to the overall warmth of an Early American home.

To complete the "lived-in" look of a comfortable home environment, incorporate extra touches of fabric and color to rooms by adding throw pillows, seat cushions to a dining area or bay window seat, and tablecloths.

A KITCHEN IS MADE "HOMEY" with a rich mix of patterns from Greeff's Shelburne Museum Collection of documentary fabrics and wallcoverings. "Lynette Trellis" and "Lynette Stripe" form the decorative wall treatment, with "Lynette Border" creating a chair rail and ceiling focus. "Lynette" printed fabric adorns the window, while the woven "Rachel Kirk's Coverlet" is used for seat cushions and seat backs on the chairs.

Log Homes Rate High In "Curb Appeal"

Some of today's log homes are designed to fit into most any residential community. This "Twin" model is from Alta Industries.

If you're planning a move now or in the future and you want a home with looks that routinely draw compliments, your search can end happily with a log home.

Great looks are what attract more than half of all people who buy a log home, according to a recent industry survey. An attractive home is just one of the benefits log homeowners find once they're settled, according to Alta Industries, a leading producer of pre-cut log home packages.

Alta, which creates up-to-date Scandinavian-styled homes from smooth northern white pine logs, says, "Our buyers like the feeling of living in a solid wood home versus the traditional wood and plasterboard of standard construction."

The solid walls help to absorb sound, which adds to a tranquil environment. "Many of our buyers tell us living in the home makes them feel like they're on vacation 365 days a year," says Alta president Frank Mann.

Besides creature comforts, the practical benefits that log homes offer have helped boost their popularity, according to Mann. "Maintenance of logs is usually minimal," he says. "The warmth and texture of the wood actually invite people to touch."

Log homes are also energy efficient, according to an independent study conducted by the National Bureau of Standards. It concluded that the thermal mass of solid log walls saves significant amounts of energy compared to traditional home construction. The logs retain the heat and release it later as needed when the room temperature lowers. Alta homes also have a unique, double locking construction to provide a barrier against air infiltration.

For those ready to tackle some or all of the construction themselves, log homes are relatively simple to build, says Mann. Alta's logs, for example, come cut to size, pre-notched and numbered to speed on-site construction. Dealers are available to assist do-it-yourselfers with construction. Most people, however, prefer to have the dealer handle the building.

For a free color brochure of log homes, write to Alta Industries Ltd., Route 30, Box 88, Dept. RSPR, Halcottsville, NY 12438.

tiques," of Grosse Pointe and Harbor Springs. Many of the pieces have been imported directly from Europe and the Scandinavian countries.
